position that it may not endorse the extreme cause which the Canadian government proposes to take, and yet it ought to be very clear that the Imperial government is as deeply concerned in this matter as anybody else, unless Canada is prepared to say that she will enforce her own laws against all the world if need be.

It is, perhaps, wise from a diplomatic view for Canada to take extreme ground, as it may enable us to secure more when the whole question of the fisheries is finally settled by treaty. If this is the object of the government in introducing the legislation in question, it is highly commendable. We should, as a country, assert our rights in the strongest possible way, but what we wish to point out is that since we rely upon the Imperial government to enforce those rights, we must be prepared to listen to a measure at least, to the expressed desire of that government as to how far we should insist upon those rights. All present and prospective difficulty would have been avoided if the Canadian government had heeded the earnest advice of the Imperial government and arranged for a new treaty before the old one expired.

The very successful meeting held by the young men last night for the purpose of organizing a Liberal Club in this city is a subject of congratulation. There never was a time in the history of this country when more necessity existed for the electors arousing themselves to a full sense of their responsibilities. No very deep insight into affairs is needed to make it apparent that we are approaching a critical period. Complications from within and from without will have to be met and the permanence of the Union and possibly even the continuation of British connexion may be involved before a few years have passed. The corrupt and reckless course of the Tory administration is producing the "mischievous" results which were predicted of it, and it is of the utmost importance that all the electors should watch the course of events closely and be prepared at any moment to act. Our young men can have no sympathy with a party which has brought things to this pass, and all over Canada they are organizing with the view of doing what in them lies to bring about a better state of things.

The Fredericton club is intended to afford an opportunity to the young men of this city and the county to meet and discuss matters relating to Canadian politics. The name "Fredericton Club" was adopted in preference to "York County Club," not because of any desire to limit the membership to Fredericton, but because the young men of the city, while desiring that the membership should be as general as possible, did not feel like assuming a right to speak for the whole county. Though no limit was put upon the age of members, the club will be a young men's club. It starts with a disposition that it shall not be controlled by the older men, and there is no disposition on the part of the latter to attempt to control it. The great value of such a club is that it tends to bring out the young men, that is those who have enjoyed their franchise for a short time or whose names have not yet been placed upon the list. Judging from the personnel of last night's meeting, the keenness of the discussions and the harmonious spirit which pervaded it, we feel very sanguine of the success of this club.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The prospects for Gladstone's home rule bill continue to improve. But it is not yet out of the woods. If it passes the second reading it will be dropped until the autumn or perhaps until after New Year's. There appears to be perfect accord between the ministry and the Parliament. The last fulmination against the measure is from the celebrated Surgeon, who thinks that Gladstone means well but is mistaken.

The strikes in the United States were a failure, because public opinion was not with the strikers, who were being manipulated in the interest of the marshals and other blood-suckers. Public opinion is a tremendous power when it is free to express itself. Nothing can resist it.

In the celebrated Frelser murder case a detective attempted to pass a forged check was arrested and imprisoned next to Maxwell, the alleged murderer, in the hope of extorting a confession from him. The detective swore that he would lie in order to accomplish his object. He says Maxwell confessed. Quere—"What is his testimony worth?"

All the countries of the world owned last year's merchant tonnage, including both sale and steam, to the amount of 23,136,579 tons, of which Great Britain owned 11,179,108 tons. Add to this the Canadian and Australian tonnage and it appears that the British flag floats over a great deal more than half the tonnage of the world. Britannia still rules the waves.

President Cleveland is either going to be married or proposed to round a bachelor. He is to wed Miss Folson, or that young lady's mother, or he is not to wed anybody at all. This is the conclusion to which we have arrived after reading what our American exchanges have to say upon this interesting topic.

THE LATE REVENUE.

There is no reason to believe that the President, through Secretary Bayard, will attempt to arrange a treaty between the United States and Great Britain which will effectively settle the questions in dispute, if it is ratified by the senate. The administration expects that by the time the proposed convention is ratified a more friendly feeling will prevail in congress, and that there will be an excellent prospect of its ratification.

The friends of revenue reform and free trade who hoped that some action might be taken on the tariff bill at this session now believe that the strained relations between the United States and Canada will effectively prevent the enactment of any legislation which might open up additional markets for Canadian products. The hope for free lumber and free salt is effectively blighted by the fisheries dispute.

It is understood that at the Cabinet meeting yesterday, which was more protracted than usual, Secretary Bayard outlined the defense which he proposed to have Counsel General Phelan and the counsel employed to assist him pursue in defending the American fishing vessels which have been seized in Canadian waters, and that the proposed instructions, together with all other steps taken by the Secretary of State in the matter, were approved of.

It is understood that under the proposed instruction Messrs Putnam and Riddle, the counsel retained, will proceed to Halifax, N. S., as soon as practicable to confer with Counsel General Phelan. The first duty will be to defend the Adams in the libel suit in the Admiralty Court at Halifax. The defence will be without costs to the owners of the Adams. The suit will be resisted to the end and it results adversely to the Adams our government will insist that Great Britain shall pay for the ship and for expenses, as in the case of the George Washington in 1853.

The preparations for the rigorous defence of the "Adams" do not preclude the expectation entertained at the State Department that Great Britain will interfere to effect the release of the Adams before the suit is finished, perhaps before it begins.

The seizure of the Sisters at Port-Land would probably have been the subject of some discussion at the meeting had acting secretary Fairbairn received any official information before going to the White House.

Our Venues and Theirs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—In the house, to-day, the report of the house committee favoring the adoption of the amendment authorizing the president to issue a proclamation depriving vessels of foreign countries of the privileges denied our vessels in such countries, was finally accepted.

"Sure cure for horse ail, rub the throat with Prof. Fraser's Liniment and feed Prof. Fraser's Cough Powder or clove-oil box."

"Thousands of bottles of Minard's Liniment have been used during the past year by the fishermen and all testify that it is good for everything, and especially for extracting the sores from their hands there is nothing like it; it is a medicine chest in itself."

anybody at all. This is the conclusion to which we have arrived after reading what our American exchanges have to say upon this interesting topic.

THE LATE REVENUE.

There is no reason to believe that the President, through Secretary Bayard, will attempt to arrange a treaty between the United States and Great Britain which will effectively settle the questions in dispute, if it is ratified by the senate. The administration expects that by the time the proposed convention is ratified a more friendly feeling will prevail in congress, and that there will be an excellent prospect of its ratification.

The friends of revenue reform and free trade who hoped that some action might be taken on the tariff bill at this session now believe that the strained relations between the United States and Canada will effectively prevent the enactment of any legislation which might open up additional markets for Canadian products. The hope for free lumber and free salt is effectively blighted by the fisheries dispute.

It is understood that at the Cabinet meeting yesterday, which was more protracted than usual, Secretary Bayard outlined the defense which he proposed to have Counsel General Phelan and the counsel employed to assist him pursue in defending the American fishing vessels which have been seized in Canadian waters, and that the proposed instructions, together with all other steps taken by the Secretary of State in the matter, were approved of.

It is understood that under the proposed instruction Messrs Putnam and Riddle, the counsel retained, will proceed to Halifax, N. S., as soon as practicable to confer with Counsel General Phelan. The first duty will be to defend the Adams in the libel suit in the Admiralty Court at Halifax. The defence will be without costs to the owners of the Adams. The suit will be resisted to the end and it results adversely to the Adams our government will insist that Great Britain shall pay for the ship and for expenses, as in the case of the George Washington in 1853.

The preparations for the rigorous defence of the "Adams" do not preclude the expectation entertained at the State Department that Great Britain will interfere to effect the release of the Adams before the suit is finished, perhaps before it begins.

The seizure of the Sisters at Port-Land would probably have been the subject of some discussion at the meeting had acting secretary Fairbairn received any official information before going to the White House.

GENERAL NEWS.

Before leaving Toronto, however, coupon tickets were sold. At Guilford these coupons were used, and the result was that the provisions and penalties of the Scotch Act. The temperance people of Guilford took the names of the committee and signified their intention of prosecuting them for selling liquor. Consequently, the committee were obliged to leave the town and the provisions and penalties of the Scotch Act.

"Have you discovered her parentage?" asked Sir Guy.

"Lilian Cheesecake, hastily," "Is she of low birth? Lilian, my dear, don't have low tastes; there is nothing on earth, not even a low-bred person, who is so much to be pitied as a person afflicted with low tastes."

"—I am thinking Mrs. Arlington lay the very best sense of the word in a low taste, I cannot say so dilated," says Miss Chesney, rather saucily; whereupon Mrs. Arlington, who knows mischief is brewing and is imbued with a wholesome horror of all disputes between her son and his wife, rises hurriedly and pre-emptively.

"I hope Archie will not miss his train," she says, irrelevantly. "He is always so careless, and I know it is important he should see his solicitor this evening about the transfer of York's farm. Where is he?"

"In the library, I think," responds Lilian. "Dear Archie, how he will miss him! I don't see, auntie?"

This tenderly regretful speech recalls to Mrs. Arlington's intended departure, he having at last, through business, been compelled to leave Cheesecake and the object of his adoration.

"We shall, indeed. But remember, kind sir, that you are to return to us at Christmas very gayly."

"I do remember," says Sir Guy; "but for that, I feel I should give you my hands."

Here Lady Cheesecake lays her hand upon the girl's shoulder, and presses it affectionately.

"Do not reject Guy's counsel, child," she says; "you know he always speaks for your good."

Lilian makes no reply, but gracefully turning her head, she has red lips upon the gentle hand that still rests upon her shoulder.

Then Lady Cheesecake leaves the room and Lilian and her guardian are alone.

"What a lovely, beautiful, delicate creature!" Lilian, who has abandoned the unhappy sock, has now taken in her hands a very valuable Dresden china cup and is apparently examining it with the most profound interest.

"You promise not to go against the Cottage?" asks Sir Guy, at length, the exigency of the case causing him persistence.

"I think not."

"I am glad to hear you persist in this obstinate refusal," angrily.

"For many reasons," with a light laugh. "Shall I tell you one? Did you ever hear of the relief of being forbidden?"

"No," says Sir Guy, with a doubtful expression.

"Well, then, you would say that it was possible, I would tell you what would prevent your ever wishing to know this Mrs. Arlington again? But, as it is, I am your guardian"—determinedly—"I am your guardian, and I shall be bound to be intimate with the Cottage, and in this one matter at least I must be obeyed."

"Must you? we shall see," replies Miss Chesney, with a tantalizing laugh that but for the sweet beauty of her features and the soft, mellow, mellow, mellow, great blue eyes, now ablaze with childish wrath, would have made him almost hate her. "As it is, he is exceeding full of indignation he scarcely seems to control himself."

"I am not sure," she forbids you to see that woman," he says, in a condescending tone.

"And why, pray?"

"I cannot explain: I simply forbid you."

"I am not sure," she says, with a doubtful expression.

"Then I will not be forbidden; so there!" says Miss Chesney, defiantly.

"Lilian, once for all, do not go to the Cottage again," says Guy, very angry. "If you do you will regret it."

"I will not," she says, with a defiant air.

"No; it is a warning. Take it as such if you are wise. If you against my wishes in this matter, I shall refuse to take charge of you any longer."

"I will not," she says, with a defiant air.
