S. M. HOSPITAL ANNUAL FAIR NOW IN FULL SWING

SPECIAL MEETING OF COUNCIL CALLED

Saturday, Oct. 4th The Daily Set for Discussion of Very Important Matter

A special meeting of the Restigouche Municipal Council has been called for Saturday, Oct. 4th., when the matter of the injunction secured to restrain the council, through the Public Lands and Building and the Finance committees, from proceeding with the erection of the proposed court house will be considered.

While Saturday is not the most convenient day upon which to hold such a session, it is hoped that a full attendance of Councilors will be present, as this is a very important matter, and should have the careful consideration of all.

The Graphic, despite the assertions of the backers of the project, holds no brief for any party or section of rate-payers but called attention to the fact of the matter in order that justice might be done the great majority of rate-payers throughout the county.

Our contention, and the contention of the majority of rate-payers who have, is that the present is not an opportune time for the erection of a new court house. If such a building is required it should be calmly discussed at the regular annual session of the Council, when every and all parties would have an opportunity through their Councilors, of stating their views; when the matter of cost of building might be decided, and plans made as to the best means to finance the project.

Contractors tell us that a building erected so late in the fall, and carried on during the winter months adds greatly to the cost of construction, they added cost being from five to ten per cent. of the contract price, according to conditions. If this is true, it would be wise economy to postpone. New tenders could be called for during winter and we have not a doubt but that a considerable sum might be saved.

We also pointed out that the mode of procedure adopted by Coun. Montgomery in introducing this subject at the very close of the session, was not proper one. There was also the fact that some of the Councilors were not present, therefore these sections were unrepresented.

Again we have been assured by at least two Councilors who voted for the resolution that they did not understand that the resolution "delegated such power to these committees. They said that their understanding of the matter was that plans and specifications were to be prepared and submitted to the whole council at the January session. In an opinion this would have been the proper procedure. This is altogether too important a matter to delegate to a committee.

SIXTH ANNUAL FAIR WAS OPENED IN THE SKATING RINK YESTERDAY MORNING

Despite Unfavorable Weather Large Crowds Attended the Opening Ceremony—Exhibits of All Kinds of a High Standard This Year—Booths and Building Beautifully Decorated—Some New Attractions—Outlook Bright for Very Successful Event.

In the midst of a large gathering of the Sixth Annual Fair, held in aid of the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital, was auspiciously opened in the Skating Rink at eleven o'clock yesterday morning. His Honor Judge McKay, who presided, the Rev. W. W. McNair, Chaplain of the Canadian Forces overseas during the world war delivered the opening address and Deputy Mayor J. E. Moore, acting in the absence of His Worship Mayor McKay officially opened the fair with brief but appropriate remarks.

Many Present
Despite the unfavorable condition of the weather, a good number attended the opening ceremony. In addition to the speakers and Mrs. John Collier, President of the Ladies' Hospital Aid, many prominent citizens appeared on the platform.

Splendid Work
In his address, which was necessarily brief, Mr. McNair paid a glowing tribute to the work of the various Ladies' Aid through the Bay of Chaleur County in connection with the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital. He pointed out that the sum of $42,000 has now been raised through the work of these societies. He also said that during the last year they were successful in reducing the former debt of $47,000 on the S. M. Hospital building to $39,000. He spoke of the admirable spirit of personal sacrifice and unselfish activity which has characterized the work of the women and likened their tenacity and courage to that of the Canadian soldiers so admirably displayed during the late war.

Much Comment
The opening of this three day event was attended by much favorable comment. Many patrons here expressed the opinion that the fair this year is better than ever. The general ways and that the final results should exceed those of previous years.

The big skating rink has been beautifully decorated for the occasion and these decorations harmonize most pleasingly and yet make the interior of the spacious building a riot of bright colors. The various booths on the south side of the rink. The general ways and that the final results should exceed those of previous years.

One Feature
The splendid meals served at the fair have always been a feature of this annual event. This year the dining-room should be as popular as ever. This large enclosure is at the right of the entrance and is ample in size to accommodate at least two hundred diners at once. The tables are daintily arranged, their linen snowy white, and are tastefully decorated. The meals, which are served most generously, are hot and appetizing and of splendid quality. The service is also prompt and efficient. The fine dining room, will no doubt be a big factor in making the fair a financial success.

CAR LEAPED OVER A HIGH BRIDGE

Accident Occurred Late at Night—Victims Not Found Until Following Morning

The sordid tragedy of one of the most appalling auto accidents of the season was disclosed early Tuesday morning when some fishermen on crossing a bridge about two miles east of St. George, near Barachois Gaspe County, Que., discovered that an automobile had broken through the railing and found the lifeless bodies of three occupants beneath the car.

The victims of the tragedy are: William Maloney, A. P. Gaudet and an aged woman, Mrs. St. Croix, all of Barachois.

Details of the accident are somewhat meagre but it is known that the party left Gaspe by auto about 6 o'clock on Monday evening. The cause of the accident is more or less a mystery but it is believed that the engine of the car must have stalled on the steep hill after crossing the bridge near St. George and that the vehicle must have somehow got beyond the driver's control and backed down the hill, crashing through the bridge railing and dropping into the gully below.

As near as can be judged the accident occurred about 11 o'clock Monday night. The victims were not found until about five o'clock the following morning when fishermen in passing were attracted by the light from the tail-lamps of the car.

The three victims of the accident were all well known along the Gaspe Coast and much regret has been expressed at their sudden and tragic death. Mr. Maloney, who for some years has been connected with Howard Smith, Lumber Mills, is survived by two sons, one at home and one with the detective force in the City of Montreal; and two daughters, one residing in Quebec City and the other in Vancouver.

Mr. Gaudet, who is well known among business men on the coast was a Fishery Inspector. Besides his widow he leaves nine children to mourn their loss.

NEW BRUNSWICK TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION WAS FORMED HERE LAST THURSDAY

Association Formed Here Last Thursday

New Provincial Organization Put on Working Basis and Program Briefly Outlined—Hon. Dr. Roberts and other Prominent Physicians Spoke at Meeting Here—Considerable Interest Shown—Officers from Various N. B. Towns Appointed.

That the meetings held here last week in an effort to organize for the prevention of tuberculosis throughout the province were very successful is evident from the fact that the New Brunswick Tuberculosis Association has been definitely established. That this work was done in a decisive manner is equally apparent. Only two business meetings were held, the afternoon meeting being a public gathering arranged for the purpose of arousing public interest in the province-wide fight against tuberculosis. At these two meetings the work of organization went forward without a hitch and the new association got on a working basis.

The Morning Meeting
Those present at the meeting were Dr. L. G. Pimault, President of the new association, Hon. Dr. W. F. Roberts, Minister of Public Health, Dr. Collins, Superintendent of River Glade Sanatorium, Dr. Ferris, Superintendent of St. John County Hospital, Dr. Melvin, Dr. Desmond, Miss McKeljohn, Director of Public Health Nurses, Miss Barbour, Treasurer of the Association and H. M. Armstrong, the secretary.

On Wednesday, Oct. 1st the local firm of Ferguson and Wallace celebrated their fifth anniversary of business activity together in Campbellton. This firm, which handles Men's and Boys furnishings exclusively, began business in the Moore's Building on Main Street, 1919. Two years ago their trade had grown to such proportions that they found it necessary to secure larger and more modern quarters. The fine up to date store which they occupy was accordingly built during the summer of 1922 and since that time their improved facilities to give service and value to their customers appears to have added much to the success of their business. This however, is not surprising for in few small towns anywhere can there be found a more up to date store, furnishing store than that of this small firm. They are celebrating their fifth anniversary in business with a Birthday Sale.

RIFLE CLUB WAS FORMED FRIDAY

A. H. English Chosen Captain—84 Members Enrolled—Military Men Coming to Complete Arrangements

At a well attended meeting held in the Town Hall on Friday night a local rifle club, to be known as the Restigouche Rifle Association in connection with the Militia Units of the town, was formed. A few of the promoters of the club made a drive for members last week. That there efforts were very successful is apparent from the fact that, to date, eighty-four names have been secured. At Friday's meeting the club got off to a good start. Provincial Officers were elected, Mr. A. H. English being chosen as Club Captain.

A prospective site for a suitable rifle range at Tide Head—where a distance of about 900 yards can be secured—is now under consideration. Colonel Anderson, O. C. Military District No. 7, and Colonel Sparkling, Chief of Staff are expected here within the next few days to complete arrangements.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK—OCT. 5 TO 11

Seventy-Five Percent of All Fires are Caused by Carelessness

By Royal Proclamation, His Excellency, the Governor General of Canada, has designated October 5th to 11th as Fire Prevention Week. During that week, lessons on fire prevention subjects will be given in the schools, public meetings will be held in many of the larger cities, towns and villages, and the owners and occupants of property everywhere throughout Canada will be counselled to give special attention to the removal of fire hazards from their premises.

Fire waste is one of the most serious economic problems confronting Canada at the present time. The public in general is vitally affected by the tremendous losses annually incurred by fire and the enormous expenditures rendered necessary to adequately provide life and property from its ravages.

There is an old saying that "fire is a good servant, but a bad master." Five cooks on five boats out home, winter, make steam to drive our engines and serve as in a thousand ways. But it is also fire that burns our houses, stores and factories, destroys our forestland every year costs many people their lives. Fire cannot be trusted. It is as flame to small but what it may be a disastrous conflagration if care is not taken to prevent its danger.

Evening Classes
Those desirous of taking advantage of the evening classes in Vocational Training may register on Saturday Oct. 4th, or Monday, October 6th, from 7.30 to 9 p. m. in the Grammar School or call J. R. Vallis, Director of Vocational Training—Phone 387.

Amusements
A large space has been set aside for games and amusements. Bowling Alleys have been provided and several other games have been arranged for. Archery is this year an added attraction.

HELD CONFERENCE HERE MONDAY

Many Delegates from Outside Congregations Attended—Dr. Colin Young Gave Address

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here was the scene of a large gathering on Monday evening when a Home Mission Conference was held by the Miramichi Presbytery. The conference was well attended, many delegates from outlying districts being present. Among these were representatives of Missionary Societies of one kind and another from the congregations of Bathurst, New Mills, Dalhousie, Tide Head, New Richmond, New Carlisle and other places.

The Rev. Vincent Forbes of Tide Head preached the conference sermon. A very able address was also given by Mrs. J. H. A. Anderson of Chatham, President of the Presbytery of the Women's Missionary Society.

A probable feature of the evening was a most instructive and interesting address dealing with the Home Mission situation by the Rev. Dr. Colin Young, Superintendent of Non-Anglo-Saxon Work of the Presbytery in Canada.

The purpose of Monday evening's conference was to review the work of the Home Mission Field and to discuss the budget in relation to this work. Dr. Young's address, dealing with conditions in this department of the church's activities, was particularly valuable at such a conference. With a wealth of information gained through close association with this work the speaker made his address most instructive and emphasized the great need of more workers and more funds which exists in many new districts in the west, and particularly in the province of British Columbia. It was pointed out that while records gave proof that people are contributing more now than they formerly did to the work of the church, the greatly increased cost of the work has in many places necessitated a serious retrenchment. Dr. Young, in the course of his address pointed out that out of the several presbyterial divisions of the church throughout Canada, the Presbytery of Miramichi was one of the few to raise the percentage of last year's budget allotted to them.

EARTHQUAKE FELT HERE TUESDAY

Citizens Awakened About Five O'Clock—Quake General But No Damage Done

Campbellton citizens were awakened at 4.55 a.m. Tuesday by a slight earthquake. Many were alarmed and got out of bed. So far as we have heard no great amount of damage resulted but at Dalhousie the Post Office was slightly damaged, and at Riverview a few chimneys were cracked. The earthquake was felt here. About three years ago a shock very similar was felt here. It was general over Eastern Canada and the New England States.

BALKY SIXTEEN

The age of great wisdom is 16. Then you know everything about everything. Never again will you know so much and be so sure about people and their concerns. Never, though you live to be 100 and growing wiser by the day, will your mind be so serene and so free from doubt. At 16 you KNOW.

The grayheads may try to put in a question, insinuate a doubt, may even try to move on to a disconcerting surprise. Once the shock of the young person's sudden insight is passed, the shock of the young person's sudden insight is passed, the shock of the young person's sudden insight is passed.

For there are children who do not seem to have the experiencing type of mind. To learn from the experience of another is quite out of the question. They may see another child, who has neglected his work day after day, lose his class standing, lose his chance for education, lose his fun and his happiness, but beyond a passing interest in the drama of the situation it contains nothing for them.

They seem to be equally closed against personal experience. They disobey and lose a privilege in consequence. Sorrow fills a brief hour and they are on their way again, singing. They neglect their lessons and lose promotion and save for the uncomfortable hour they put in explaining to the family, they seemingly take no further thought of the matter. If they mention it at all it is to say that the teacher "is about the limit."

Of course, everybody knows this 16-year-old child who squats and refuses to budge another step forward, and everybody wants to know what's to be done with him—wants a cure to apply like a plaster—and guaranteed to work in the good old-fashioned way. There isn't any such cure. You cannot generalize about children because while they fall into two groups—the successful and the unsuccessful, according to society's verdict—they live one and one and they grow that way. And Society has been known to be very wrong.

But one thing I think I know about children: not one of them, not even the most perverse, is to be cast out and labelled unfit. There is a way out for each, else he would never have been born, and it is for us to find that way and help him toward it. And we who learn must be as humble as they who learn. Pride of knowledge belongs to 16, too.

AN OPPORTUNITY

The possibility that some definite steps may be taken within the next years to develop the hardwood resources of the north shore and interest capital in the manufacture of furniture here is something that should arouse the interest of all. It is a well known fact that through this part of the country there are large quantities of fine hardwood. Until a few years ago this lumber has been used for little except fuel. In this way much fine hardwood which would have been valuable in the manufacture of certain kinds of furniture has been consigned to the furnace. It has of course, served a purpose. Fuel is a necessity and those who make the supplying of hardwood their business have doubtless secured an income commensurate with their labor, but the country at large has not received anything like a fighting monetary return from this annual consumption of a valuable natural resource.

The development of the hardwood surplus of Restigouche County and other parts of the north shore holds opportunities for profitable enterprise. That Campbellton should become the centre of such prospective development is also fitting and it would obviously be to the towns best interest to heartily support in every way possible any measure in this connection which gave reasonable promise of success. Campbellton is crowded with stores—crowded to such an extent that the annual revenue which would accrue from a few means a very unsatisfactory margin when divided among the crowd. Herein, no doubt, lies the chief reason why prices in some lines are not always as attractive as they might be.

But in the matter of small industries there are unmistakable opportunities—opportunities for those with capital to invest and opportunities for the towns as a whole. Through the successful promotion of small industries, such as the one referred to, Campbellton may be ushered into a new period of growth of this kind or it may remain, for all time, its present status, that of a small town. This is a matter which should not only be discussed but which is worthy of energetic effort.

LET'S WORK TOGETHER

If this editorial were headed "co-operation" the reader might glance at the heading and pass it on, because "co-operation" is an overworked word. But community co-operation cannot be overdone. Without it we might as well like the Arab—fold our tents and silently steal away, so far as getting things done for Campbellton. Co-operation has built nations and kept governments going. No battle was ever won without it. No home could hold families together without it. No store or business institution thrives in its absence. No church can expect to grow without it. The question is, why can we not apply this principle of working together for the general welfare and civic advancement of Campbellton? The answer is, we CAN.

Campbellton has had many things to be proud of in the past. Let us forget the regrettable things and build upon a solid foundation for the future. We must certainly have worked together in the past or we would not have any town now. Our churches, schools, civic and other organizations are living monuments to the fact that we and those who came before us knew the mighty potency of co-operation.

What we want now is more of it. Let us not say the time is not ripe. The time always is right to do good, to boost, to work in harmony—to co-operate. Let this be our civic salvation.

THE TOURIST BUSINESS

Canada is enjoying a good season in the tourist business. It has been estimated that this industry now represents an annual financial turnover approaching $150,000,000. "But the fact remains," says the Financial Post, "that Canadians are not making the best of their opportunities by any means. Those who have studied the trade possibilities are convinced that it would be easily possible to increase the proportions of the business to $300,000,000 a year by selling Canada's tourist attractions to the world—and particularly the United States—namely, by advertising national, provincial, municipal and otherwise and by making advantage of the opportunities of selling goods service and accommodation to the tourists. And what other industry presents anything like the possibilities for satisfactory profits in relation to the costs involved and the consumption of our raw materials?"

NOTE AND COMMENT

The excuse that one didn't get up in time to have breakfast before Sunday School began is out of order for members of the Highland Men's Bible Class of the Highland Presbyterian Church at Pittsburg, for breakfast is served in the church basement prior to the opening of the class meeting, and eggs being on the menu. The Sunday morning breakfasts are to be continued as a means of stimulating Sunday School attendance.

Martin Misewitz, arrested at Yonkers for stealing 50 cents worth of tomatoes from a neighbor's garden, offered to put up property worth $50,000 as bail. Judge Boote informed him that $500 would be sufficient.

THE CANADIAN DOLLAR

Malden, (Mass.) News.—Yesterday the Canadian dollar actually commanded a premium of one sixty-fourth of a cent. We hope the Canadians insisted upon the premium. If there has been anything atrociously unfair during all these years of juggling with foreign exchange it has been our refusal to accept the Canadian dollar at par. Most of the time during the war Canadians could get 95 cents in our money for their dollar. Then the peg at that figure was removed by our altruistic international bankers and in February 1920 all the Canadians could get for their dollar when they crossed the border was 84 cents. No two countries in the world are more friendly than Canada and United States.

Between them is the longest boundary line in the world and not a soldier guards it. The few customs and immigration officers on duty chew off the same plug of tobacco at various points. The American visiting countries where the exchange is low finds the prices advanced enough to make his expenses about equal to what they were never up to such a game. Every one who crossed the Canadian border while the Canadian dollar was low actually saved every cent of the difference. The whole thing was decidedly unfair to a friendly place. If we were in the Canadian's place, we should insist upon that one sixty-fourth of a cent premium as long as the premium lasts. Out attitude towards Canadian money was certainly conducive to retaliation.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

The revived interest being taken in Canada in the question of old age is a pleasing sign of the times. Pensions. The country is not in good a position as to money to finance pensions. Yet the operation of old age pensions would remedy so many conditions which are a reproach to a civilized people, that the inauguration of this form of relief should not be put off indefinitely.

Sir Richard Cartwright once declared that it would be a slur on Canada and its opportunities to establish old age pensions. The public is coming to entertain a different view. The Canadian premier has made the gratifying announcement that during the legislative recess the co-operation of the provinces will be sought with a view to the ultimate establishment of a pensions system.

The provinces have plenty of financial problems of their own. But they should sympathetically approach the joint consideration of the question of providing for aged and indigent citizens.—Toronto Star.

THE REAL PAYMASTER

Forests are jobs. Trees mean trade. Logs are the very material of lumber or paper, but of pay checks. It is an incidental match-wood. The forest gives us telegraph poles. It is a very important matter that the forest gives us 120,000 workmen, supporting a half million trees as an inseparable bond.

We Canadians set 6,000 forest fires a year and nine-tenths of them through human recklessness, but those beacon lights of prodigality mean nothing if they do not tell us of the mischievous mischief-maker. Gloom that we have put the torch to the livelihood of thousands of men; we our children and our grandchildren have signed an unbreakable note to pay. Let it be laid down as an ugly and undisturbable fact that in the present situation with forest demand jammed hard against dwindling forest supply, every forest fire must be paid for. Every mile of Spruce or Pine or Fir given to the annual bonfire will have to be bought back by the next generation in higher costs of lumber and paper, in forfeited industries, in dwindling public revenues, and a sacrifice of population.—By Robson Black, Manager Canadian Forestry Association.

THE STRONG SILENT MAN

Mr. Winston Churchill says that too often the strong silent man is silent only because he does not know what to say, and is reputed strong only because he has remained silent." Mr. Churchill is dogmatic, and a master of the sweeping statement. Like some epigrams this particular sweeping statement in less than half truth. A man may be silent because he does not know what to say, but he does not earn a reputation for strength by this alone. Speak that I may know thee, is cryptic but frequently leads us to the formation of quite wrong judgment on the characters and qualities of men. It is not so much on a man's silence or on his speech that we base, if we are wise, our estimate of his power and capacity, but on his acts. Those who say least, and have some natural difficulty in expressing themselves easily and glibly, who frequently achieve most. Mr. Churchill will remember Lord Kitchener, who was a good, if not perfect, type of the strong silent man. Speech which is the French philosopher said, is used so often to hide our thoughts—to conceal rather than to reveal the real man, should be pondered carefully. It is much more dangerous and deceptive as a guide to human qualities than silence.

Orchestra Leaders Heed Advice To "Go West"

ABE LYMAN

Be sure you look in your heart—Just stop and think before you part

Kings of Jazz, from Whiteman to Lyman, Have All Journeyed California-wards to Win Their Laurels

Though dance orchestras had not come into their own in the days of Horace Greeley, that gentleman's "Go West" advice has, in fact, been followed by all those conductors now riding on the crest of popularity's waves.

Whiteman, who started California-wards from Denver before he was twenty-one, to the idol of Hollywood, Abe Lyman, all the orchestra leaders who figure in the day's news have made their fame in the Golden West generally going West to do it.

Mr. Lyman, who has a psychological bent, deduces that this is because the romance and abandon of the West encourage daring.

"Out there, everybody is a pioneer," he pointed out while on a brief visit East. "If you remember it was only a few years ago that the rest of the United States, and in fact most of the world, was copying dances from San Francisco's Barbary Coast."

"They copy everything we do. Many of the orchestra leaders of the East are held down by traditions and convention. Out there one dares take radical measures with harmony and counterpoint."

In this way I believe we are able to get nearer to what the novelty loving public wants."

Mr. Lyman has found what the public wants anyway, for, "Before You Go," his unique song, a fox-trot ballad in the vernacular, has "taken fire" and is being danced to, North, South, East and West.

PREPARING THE SURPLUS COCKERELS FOR THE MARKET

(Experimental Farms Note) Repeated experiments conducted by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms, both at Ottawa and at the branch Farms throughout Canada, have demonstrated the fact that it is far more profitable to fatten cockerels before putting them on the market, than to sell them direct from range. The additional profit obtained thereby, is due not only to the increase in the weight, but more particularly to the improved quality of the flesh, which always commands a higher price.

Crates fattening involves a little more time and trouble than does fattening in pens or yards, but has proven to be the more satisfactory and gives greater returns. An experiment conducted at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1921, showed that the average profit (over cost of feed) realized on birds fattened in crates was almost fifty per cent greater than those fattened in yards.

No birds showing signs of constitutional weakness should be put in the fattening crates, as they will be unable to endure the confinement and forced feeding. Cockerels of the general purpose breeds fatten best in crates when they weigh from four to five pounds. Before being placed in the crates they should be thoroughly treated for lice, and if necessary sary treated again during the fattening period.

Experiments have also shown that a home-mixed fattening mash gives equally good results as a commercial mash and produces a cheaper gain.

Such a mash may well be composed of equal parts by weight, of cornmeal, feed flour, and middlings, or equal parts of feed flour, cornmeal, barley meal and buckwheat meal. In fact a mixture of almost any finely ground grain will prove satisfactory. The mash should be mixed with buttermilk, but if this is not possible, skim-milk may be used, and 5 to 10 per cent tankage added to the mash ingredients. The mixture should be about the consistency of porridge so that it can be poured from a pail. It is preferable to mix one feed ahead, so that it will be a little sour when fed. As a general rule, two feeds per day are sufficient, and no more should be given than the birds can clear up in twenty minutes. All surplus food should be removed after each feeding and the troughs kept thoroughly clean.

More detailed information on this subject, including a complete description of fattening crates, is contained in Exhibition Circular No. 70, "Crates Feeding," which can be obtained about the consistency of porridge so that it can be poured from a pail. Best Woman to Had Great Change After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Barns, Ontario.—"After my girls were born I was a wreck. My nerves were too feeble for work and I simply could not stand or walk without pain. I suffered with fainting spells until I was no longer any good for my household duties and had to leave to my bed. The doctor said I should have an operation but I was not in a condition at that time. My neighbors said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' I am a doctor's wife. So I was advised to try it. I was able to take a few bottles for a while as I was not so much at that time. My baby is 17 months old now and I have not had an operation, thanks to your compound. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to a few people I know and have told them that it has done me. I have had a great change. I am a different woman these last few months and I certainly would not be without a bottle of your medicine in the house. You can see this letter in your own hands. I should be only too glad for those suffering as I have to know what it has done for me. Mrs. Rosamund G. MacGillivray, R. R. No. 2, Barns, Ontario. A recent course of women's care of the Vegetable Compound report 98 out of 100 received beneficial results. This is a remarkable proof of its merit. C

CHAPTER XVII
It seemed to Dominey that he had never seen anything more pathetic than that eager glance, half of hope, half of apprehension, flashed upon him from the strange, tired eyes of the woman who was standing before the log fire in a little recess of the main hall. By her side stood a pleasant, friendly-looking person in the uniform of a nurse, a hand or two behind a maid carrying a jewel case. Rosamund, who had thrown back her veil, had been standing with her foot upon the fender. Her whole expression changed as Dominey came hastily towards her with outstretched hands.

"My dear child," he exclaimed, "welcome home!"

"Welcome!" she repeated, with a little glad catch in her throat. "You mean it?"

With a self-control of which he gave no sign, he touched the lips which were raised so eagerly to his as tenderly and reverently as though this were some strange child committed to his care.

"Of course I mean it," he answered heartily. "But what possessed you to come without giving us notice? How was this, nurse?"

"Her ladyship has had no sleep for two nights," the latter replied. "She has been so much better that we dreaded the thought of relapse, so Mrs. Coulson, our matron, thought it best to let her have her own way about coming home. Instead of telegraphing to you, unfortunately, we telegraphed to Doctor Harrison, and I believe he is away."

"Is it very wrong of me?" Rosamund asked, clinging to Dominey's arm. "I had a sudden feeling that I must get back here. I wanted to see you again. Everyone has been so sweet and kind at Falmouth, expecially Nurse Alice here, but they were quite the same thing. You are not angry? These people who are staying here will not mind?"

"Of course not," he assured her cheerfully. "They will be your guests. Tomorrow you must make friends with them all."

"There was a very beautiful woman," she said timidly, "with red hair, who passed by just now. She looked very angry. That was not because I have come?"

"Why should it be?" he answered. "You have a right here—a better right than any one."

She drew a long sigh of contentment.

"Oh, but this is wonderful!" she cried. "And you, dear—I shall call you Everard, mayn't I?—you looked just as I hoped you might. Will you take me upstairs, please? Nurse you can follow us with her arm and even loitered on the way, but her steps grew lighter as they approached her own apartment. Finally, as they reached the corridor, she broke away from him and tripped on with a gaiety almost of a child to the door of her room. Then came a little cry of disappointment as she flung open the door. Several maids there, busy with a refractory fire and rearranging the covers from the furniture, but the room was half full of smoke and entirely unprepared.

"Oh, how miserable!" she exclaimed. "Everard, what shall I do?"

He threw open the door of his own apartment. A bright fire was burning in the grate, the room was warm and comfortable. She threw herself with a little cry of delight into a huge Chesterfield drawn up to the edge of the hearth.

"I can stay here, Everard, can't I, until you come up to bed?" she pleaded. "And then you can sit here and talk to me, and tell me who is here and all about the people. You have no idea how much better I am. All my music has come back to me, and they say that I play bridge ever so well. I shall love to help you entertain."

The maid was slowly unfastening her mistress's boots. Rosamund held up her foot for him to feel.

"How cold I am!" she complained. "Please read it. I am going to have some supper up here with nurse. Will one of you maids please go down and see about it? What a lot of nice new things! You have Everard!" she added, looking around. "And that picture of me from the drawing-room, on the table!" she cried, her eyes suddenly soft with joy. "You dear thing! What made you bring that up?"

"I wanted to have it here," he told her.

"I'm not so nice as that now," she sighed, a little wistfully.

"Do not believe it," he answered. "You have not changed in the least. You will be better-looking still when you have been here for a few months. She looked at him almost shyly—tenderly, yet with that gleam of aloofness in her eyes.

"I think," she murmured, "I shall be just what you want me to be. I think you could make just what you want. Be very kind to me please."

She begged, stretching her arms out to him. "I suppose it is because I have been ill so long, but I feel so helpless and I love your strength and I want you to take care of me. Your own hands are quite cold," she added anxiously. "You look pale, too. You're not ill, Everard?"

"I am very well," he assured her, struggling to keep his voice steady. "Forgive me now, won't you, if I hurry away. There are guests here—rather important guests. Tomorrow you must come and see them all."

"And help me?"

"Dominey made his escape and went reeling down the corridor. At the top of the great quadrangular landing he stopped and stood with half-closed eyes for several moments. From down stairs he could hear the sound of pleasantly raised voices, the music of a piano in the distance, the click of billiard balls. He waited until he had regained his self-possession. Then, as he was on the point of descending, he saw Seaman mounting the stairs. At a gesture he waited for him, waited until he came, and taking him by the arm, led him to a great seat in a dark corner. Seaman had lost his usual blitheness. The good-humoured smile played no longer about his lips.

"Where is Lady Dominey?" he asked.

"In my room, waiting until her own is prepared. Seaman's manner was unusually grave.

"My friend," he said, "you know very well that when we walk in the great paths of life I am unscrupulous. In those other hours, alas! I have a weakness—I love women."

"Well?" Dominey muttered.

"I will admit," the other continued, "that you are placed in a delicate and trying position. Lady Dominey seems disposed to offer to you the affection which, notwithstanding her troubles together, she doubtless felt for her husband. I risk your anger, my friend, but I warn you to be very careful how you encourage her."

A light flashed in Dominey's eyes. For the moment angry words seemed to tremble upon his lips. Seaman's manner, however, was very gentle. He courted no offence.

"If you were to take advantage of your position," he said, "I would shrug my shoulders and stand on one side, but this mad Englishman's wife, or rather his widow, has been mentally ill. She is tender-hearted. I watched her as she passed through the hall with you just now. She turns to you for love as a flower to the sun after a long spell of cold, wet weather. Von Ragsbush, you are a man of honour."

You must find means to deal with this situation, however difficult it may become.

Dominey had recovered from his first wave of weakness. His companion's words excited no sentiment of anger. He was conscious of regarding him with a greater feeling of kindness than ever before.

"My friend," he said, "you have shown me that you are conscious of one dilemma in which I find myself placed, and which I must confess is exercising me to the utmost. Let men advise you of another. The Princess of Elderstrom has brought me an autograph letter from the Kaiser, commanding me to marry her."

"The situation," Seaman declared grimly, "but for its serious side, would provide all the elements for a Palais Royal farce. For the present, however, you have but one choice. I have said the words which were thumping against the walls of my heart."

Their descent was opportune. Some of the local guests were preparing to make their departure, and Dominey was in time to receive their adieux. They all left messages for Lady Dominey, spoke of a speedy visit to her, and expressed themselves as delighted to hear of her return and recovery. As the last car rolled away, Caroline took her host's arm and led him to a chimney seat by the huge log fire in the inner hall.

"My dear Everard," she said, "you really are a terrible person."

"Exactly why?" he demanded.

"Your devotion to my sex," she continued, "is flattering but far too catholic. Your return to England appears to have done what we understood to be impossible—restored your wife's reason. A fiery-headed Hungarian Princess has pursued you down here, and has now gone to her room in a tantrum because you left her side for a few minutes to welcome your wife. And there remains our own sentimental little flirtation, a broken and, alas, a discarded thing! There is no doubt, however, Everard, that you are a bad lot."

"You are distressing me terribly," Dominey confessed, "but all the same, after a somewhat agitated evening I must admit that I find it pleasant to talk with some one who is not winking the lightnings. May I have a whisky and soda?"

"Bring me one, too, please," Caroline begged. "I fear that it will severely impair the note which I had intended to strike in our conversation, but I am thirsty. And a handful of those Turkish cigarettes, too. You can devote yourself to me with a perfectly clear conscience. Your most distinguished guest has found a taste after his own heart. He has got Henry in the corner of the billiard-room and is trying to convince him of what I really believe himself—that Germany's intentions towards England are of a particularly dovish nature. Your Right Honourable guest has gone to bed, and Edith Pelham is playing billiards with Mr. Magnan. Every one is happy. You can devote yourself to soothing my vanity, to say nothing of my broken heart."

"Always gibing at me," Dominey grumbled.

"Not always," she answered quietly, raising her eyes for a moment. "There was a time, Everard, before that terrible blizzard when I said you saved a Dunstrat—when I didn't gibe."

"When, on the contrary, you were sweetness itself," he reflected. She sighed reminiscently.

"That was a wonderful month," she murmured. "I think it was then for the first time that I saw traces of something in you which I suppose accounts for your being what you are to-day."

"You think that I have changed then?"

"She looked him in the eyes. "Sometimes find it difficult to believe," she admitted, "that you are the same man."

Of Interest to Women

When Fall Winds Whistle in the Garden

When Fall comes how greedily we gather the very last bit of every crop for it gives us a comfortable feeling of plenty and protection against the severe season ahead of us. One housekeeper pulled her string beans, vines and all, and put them in the cellar just before a light frost, and picked beans indoors until the yield was used up and the vines wilted. The green tomatoes are always left in the hope that they will ripen, not that we always need them, but we like to see them complete their growth. Of course the green tomatoes can be sliced in salted water and then fried, or made into a late pickle or even sweet pickled if we have not enough of such things on hand.

If there has been an early frost the vegetables must be used right away, before they spoil, so suppose we begin by preparing the pumpkin that we had tucked under a bunch of corn stalks to protect. It may be ripped out that won't hurt it if we use it right away, and an old-fashioned pie is sure to be appreciated.

REAL PUMPKIN PIE

Cut the pumpkin into quarters, scrape out seeds and soft centre pulp.

then pare and cut into small chunks. Put into a kettle with about a pint of water, just to keep it from burning, and cook gently until it is soft and tender. Then mash it until smooth and free from lumps. Strain to taste, add two teaspoonsful of salt, a half cupful of butter and a cupful and a half of molasses, a teaspoonful of cloves, same one cinnamon and the same of ginger, then set aside to cool. When ready to make the pie, allow two to three cupsful of pumpkin to each pie and three eggs. Then add a little more sugar and ginger and molasses or milk if the pumpkin seems too thick. Make a good, short crust and line the deep pie plates, finishing the edge with floured lines of the fork. Bake well in moderate oven.

CORN FRITTERS

The last ears of corn are apt to be a bit tough, but if carefully prepared will make quite acceptable fritters. With a sharp knife slice the kernels from the ears, being careful not to cut deep enough to get the points of the husks. Then scrape down the cobs with the back of the knife to extract the milk. Put the corn into a saucepan with a cupful of milk and cook gently until the corn is tender, then add a generous lump of butter, a quarter cupful of sugar, pepper and salt, then set aside. Make a batter of one cupful of flour, one and a half teaspoonsful of baking powder, two level teaspoonsful of corn starch, three tablespoonsful of sugar, a beaten egg yolk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, the beaten white of the egg and a quarter of a cupful of milk. Beat until all is blended, then strain the corn and fold it in. Fry by large spoonfuls in hot fat. Drain and serve as a vegetable dish.

Tempting Ways to Serve Breakfast Fruit

Breakfast fruits have become a necessity on the modern table and great pains are taken in their selection and preparation. Stewed prunes or old fashioned baked apples without seasoning won't go any more, for there are many other things that are more fascinating.

There are a number of ways to fix the citrus fruits attractively, serving them in their own skins. The grapefruit halved, the centre removed and seeds taken out and the flesh cut from the skin is the usual way of serving, dusted with sugar and set on cracked ice, in glass or saucer. Again it may be halved and the pulp removed entirely from the white skin, it is then sweetened by the addition of a tablespoonful of grated pineapple, or the same amount of grapefruit jam or marmalade. The fruit is then served in a half skin or a cocktail glass.

Oranges, if large, may be halved and served on cracked ice and are then eaten with an orange spoon. Again they may be pared and sliced, the seeds and centre being cut out. Or they are separated into segments and served with a little mound of powdered sugar in the centre to dip them in. They may be sliced with bananas, or pineapple, or with diced apple that has been allowed to marinate in lemon juice to keep it white, then dusted with sugar.

Stuffed baked apples are nice also. After washing and coring the apples wipe them inside and out with soft butter and dust with sugar, then arrange them on the baking tin. Chop a quarter cupful of seeded raisins the same as dates, one pared and cored apple chopped, sugar and a half teaspoonful of mixed spices. Fill the apples with the stuffing, put a little water in the pan and bake as usual. These apples may also be served with cream.

Late peaches may be peeled and cut in tiny quarters and served in half a canteloupe dusted with sugar. Again they may be cut up and sweetened and moulded in raspberry gelatine made the same as the lemon for the bananas. A quick jelly made of rhubarb is appreciated, moulded and served with cream. Sometimes bananas are sliced to harden in the jelly. The rhubarb is stewed in a little water, strained, sweetened to taste, the gelatine powder dissolved in cold water is added and when melted together it may be strained into the individual moulds.

Large prunes after stewing may have the stones removed and the prunes may then be stuffed with the same filling that was suggested for the baked apples. Fresh dates are nice stoned and sliced with bananas and eaten with cream or a little lemon juice and sugar.

OUR WINTER

"What sort of a winter are we going to have?" the average family man is asking anxiously, mindful of shoes, clothes and other necessities. Nature is said to be the best weather prophet, and if this holds true the outlook for Mr. Average Householder is said to be good, for a long hard winter lies before us. Note the following signs, and prepare accordingly:

Run on with cold winds, animals in unusually heavy coats have gathered their winter supply of food early and stored it far below the surface of the ground; crows have filled out and are ripe early; corn husks are extremely thick; nuts and acorns are plentiful and are being stored unusually early by squirrels, chipmunks, jays and woodpeckers; wild geese have big bones and heavy feathers; women—lovely but irrational woman—is wearing her waist lower and has discarded the heavy furs she has been wearing all summer.

So there is no joy in the average home for weather-wise folk; all agree that the prospects are for a "real, old fashioned winter."

A Hint of the Art of Coloring In Your Home

Color tones are valued by the interior decorator and are placed where they will do the most good as high spots in the decorative scheme of a room.

In the dining-room the side table, rellied with a lace runner, may have a pair of tall amber colored glass candlesticks with lemon colored candles in them, while the large yellow glass plate in the centre is filled with rose-shaded yellow pears with one or two oranges to brighten the color shading. Against a brown vasescoting or paper the effect of his arrangement is most attractive.

In a large, dark inside room a curtain of gold cloth draped at either side of corner book shelves compelled the eye as surely as a ray of sunshine would have done. It lighted the whole room without in the least detracting from the other decorations. It is in knowing just where to put a color tone to get its full value that counts in decoration.

An oddfellow at one end of a dark hall was a large iridescent glass on a console table which was covered with a Venetian embroidered linen scarf.

In the dish were delicate pink and yellow shell flowers glowing with soft light. The flowers are wired by a new method which lights the stems and blossoms as well. While rather expensive, they are very pretty when put in the right place. They also make charming shades for sidelights in a room when the right colors are used.

Complete dishes or bowls of colorful glassware are very charming for holding flowers or fruits. Glass or rubber fruit may be used, the latter being particularly natural in appearance, and excellent color effects can be accomplished.

The charmingly natural flowers made of wool shavings are guaranteed to keep their color and life-like appearance for months and are therefore, being used for decorations.

Instead of the perishable flowers. These flowers may be used in profusion and by altering their arrangement frequently the color tone is retained indefinitely where the real flowers would fade and die in a few hours.

A little thought and attention to color schemes is all that is required to obtain a perfect harmony in decoration that will prove a "thing of beauty and a joy forever."

20,000 MILES UNDER THE SEA

(Boston Herald)
Again in fiction rivalled by fact. As boys we read with wide eyes Jules Verne's thriller, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," now we read in the prosaic records of the daily press the account of the return to her home port of a British submarine after a cruise of eight months which took her some 20,000 miles. A league is more than a mile but the K 26 is a more wonderful mechanism than was the craft described by the French story writer.

The crew of the submarine K 26, the largest and most completely equipped submarine in commission in the British navy, started in the ordinary course of duty for the Mediterranean on last Jan. 2. While at sea orders were sent her to proceed onward to the east, and so the vessel passed through the Red Sea and half around Asia to Singapore, which was the limit of her voyage. The Daily Telegraph says that every man on board came back "fit and sound," in spite of the cramped accommodations available for a large crew who must live, work, rest and play—within a hull that much of the time was under water. And the boat itself came back in good condition, a testimonial of the skill expended in her construction and navigation.

Jules Verne did not invent his underwater wonder with no hints from the inventors of his time. Submarine experiments had begun long before he wrote his novel, and only a few years previous Charles Brun had built in France what is called the first mechanically propelled submarine. Often we say nowadays that the romance of the present will be the ordinary fact of the future, and the very near future is no exception in regarding the sea with imagination. The Verne tale was a sensational half-century ago, but they are commonplace enough now. We wonder if some time we are to have huge passenger liners to carry us across the oceans in the quiet depths rather than on the stormy surfaces of the seven seas.

In Beautiful England

A Brief Account of our Pleasant Experiences with The Canadian Weekly Newspaper Party on our Trip abroad
By H. B. ANSLOW

London, June 23—Here we are in the metropolis of the world. We came into London so quickly that we can scarcely realize that we are here. Our drive from Victoria station to the Cecil hotel, even on this Sunday evening was an interesting one, although very few people were about.

But I am ahead of my story. On the rail across the channel from Dieppe to New Haven, many of our party were laid low by sea sickness, but those of us who were better sailors enjoyed the sail very much. But once nearing the dock, all speedily recovered, and were ready to disembark.

New Haven is a quaint little city on the south coast of England. Here after showing our passports, and attending to hand baggage inspection we boarded our first train on English soil, and were soon on our way towards London. The country to our eyes was beautiful. The most cottages with hedgerows about them, and the more pretentious country homes with stone walls around them spoke of prosperity. The farms were prosperous looking and the crops looked exceptionally good.

Our special train made good time and we were in London at about 7.30. One feature in connection with railways in England which struck us forcibly was that instead of curving about the landscape to escape hills, they invariably tunneled through and on this our first journey in the old land, seemed to be continually running into tunnels of various lengths.

When nearing London we passed very large dairy farms and market gardens. This was Sunday, and, in deep contrast to France, where men and women were working in the fields as on a week day, there was no work being done, in fact we saw many people wending their way to evening service.

We were met at Victoria Station by several English newspaper men, and escorted to our check-rooms, which were in waiting, and conveyed to our respective hotels, The Cecil and The Russell. We were fortunate enough to be assigned to The Cecil, which seemed to be the headquarters for Canadians in London.

We were conducted to our room, (where we found our trunks from which we had been separated for over a week was on the sixth floor), overlooking the Embankment and Thames. The distance we could see the parliament buildings, while nearer at hand were Waterloo and other a military band played on the Embankment, and thousands of people gathered for these band concerts.

After a refreshing wash and a change of dress we went down to our first English dinner, which certainly was enjoyed. To be waited upon by an obliging and courteous waiter who understood and spoke our language, and even anticipated our every wish to have good English food placed before us was a pleasure, and we all did full justice to it. The management provided a dining room exclusively for our party and after dinner we had a look about this beautiful hotel and marveled at its size and luxurious accommodations. We were told that there were two thousand guests and it was certainly a busy place.

The lounges, smoking rooms, reading rooms were the acme of comfort. In many of these rooms there were head sets attached to a central radio and there one could enjoy a radio concert seated in a luxurious easy chair. Besides this every member was given a yellow card pass which was honored for passage on bus lines and underground trains, and it was not long until every conductor on the main travelled routes could recognize us by our maple leaf pins.

At eleven o'clock, dressed in the conventional morning garb of typical Londoners, our party assembled at the Parliament buildings, where we were officially greeted by Sir Harry Britain, Sir William Bull, M. P. Mr. Valetine Knaf and many other distinguished men, who showed us through the historic halls of the father of parliament, Sir William Bull, who guided the party in which we were included, is the historian of the Houses of Parliament, so he was able to enlighten us on the most interesting episodes. While we were inspecting Westminster Hall, where the early Parliaments were held, and which is having the old beams of its roof renewed, he interested us greatly, first by telling us that original oak beams placed there nine hundred years ago, are being replaced by oak from the same forest, cut from trees which were saplings in William the Conqueror's time, and then by making the impressive suggestion that Westminster Hall should be used as the meeting place of the first Parliament of the Empire.

Our first public luncheon in England was at the Prince's Restaurant Piccadilly on the invitation of Lord Reddill, the proprietor of "News of the World" which, by the way, has the largest circulation, about three millions, of any weekly newspaper in the world. The council of the Empire Press Union, and many others who are interested in the various newspapers of London.

At this luncheon, which was attended by the High Commissioner for Canada, Hon. Peter Larkin, we first became acquainted with that distinctly British functionary known as the hostmaster, who, before each toast or speech, delivered in ringing tones the admonition: "My lords, ladies, and gentlemen pray silence for your host, or for whoever might be about to speak. The toastmaster on this occasion was a distinguished looking man in civilian clothes who, many of us thought, must be a person of great consequence. It was not till a gentleman at our table informed us that this was his profession and we learned the difference. At other functions of the kind the toastmaster was usually clothed in uniform, but he was always dignified, and always the possessor of a voice which must have made many of the speakers envy him.

At this luncheon we heard some very fine after dinner addresses by Lord Riddell and others.

Our next engagement was a most energetic one. We were invited to the State Apartments of Kensington Palace for a reception given under the auspices of the society of women Journalists. A detailed account of this reception was given in The Graphic some weeks ago.

For the evening, the Lord Mayor of London had issued a limited number of invitations to a picturesque reception known as a Wembley Pageant. While we were honored with invitations, we were so tired with the strenuous day's social functions that we decided that we, with some friends, would endeavor to see London from the top of a bus, and consequently for an hour or two we travelled London streets in various directions only reading our newspapers.

But this was not the last function of the day. When we returned to the hotel we were informed that twenty-five men were expected to pay a midnight visit to the world's greatest newspaper, "The London Times" so we hastily called a taxi and drove up to Fleet street.

Here we were directed to the historic board room of The Times, where we were hospitably received, and were shown how a big London paper is put to press. In this respect it is much the same as our metropolitan papers, the only difference being perhaps a larger battery of presses to give despatch to the large editors turned out. By the time we were through with our visit and back to our hotel it was nearly two o'clock and as our program showed the next day to be another busy one we lost no time in retiring.

Dr. Collins
The public meeting held Thursday afternoon in the Opera House was largely attended. All the prominent physicians of Restigouche County as well as other prominent citizens were on the platform, and stirring addresses were given by the President, (Dr. Pinaut), Dr. Collins from Riverview San., Dr. Ferris, St. John, Co. Hospital and Hon. Dr. Roberts, Minister of Public Health for the province.

THE PRESIDENT
The Meeting was presided over by Dr. Pinaut, who, in his opening remarks welcomed the speakers and stated that this day would be a memorable one in the history of our Province in that was declared in earnest on one of man's most dreaded enemies—Tuberculosis. He gave a brief outline showing the ravages of Tuberculosis on the human race and of what could be done with organized effort. In introducing each of the speakers he explained his particular work in the fight.

DE COLLINS
Dr. Collins, Minister of Public Health for the province, gave a lecture on the ravages of Tuberculosis and the danger to humanity as well as a plea that have been taken in both the past and present in combating this disease.

DE FERRIS
Dr. Ferris gave a very cheering address as to what had been done in the disposal of the meeting.

At the conclusion of Dr. Roberts' speech, Dr. Pinaut took the opportunity of thanking Mr. McNutt for rendering solos between the addresses.

Also Mr. A. Christie, manager of the Opera House who was kind enough to place the Opera House at the disposal of the meeting.

Lessening the death rate but told the audience that a deplorable state of affairs still existed due to the ignorance of the proper care and segregation of patients with Tuberculosis.

The three most necessary conditions for treatment should be COMPLETE REST, CLEANLINESS, and WHOLESALE FOOD, and PLENTY of GOOD FRESH AIR. He impressed upon the meeting the danger of older people with Tuberculosis coming in contact with the babies and younger people and stated that these contact cases should be isolated from contact with the young.

HON. DR. ROBERTS
Hon. Dr. Roberts opened his remarks by stating that Dr. Pinaut had well said that this date was an historical one for the Province in the organization of the N. B. Tuberculosis Society. Some of the most prominent citizens had helped organize this society, the aim of which was to establish Tuberculosis Clinics in certain cities and towns throughout the Province and to have a Travelling Diagnostician to visit these centres at least once a month. Also a campaign of education would be carried out.

Dr. Roberts outlined the work that has been done by the Dept. of Public Health since it was established. He gave statistics showing how the death rate had been wonderfully reduced during that time but insisted that much remained to be done to educate the public as to the need of looking after their own welfare as well as the little children.

The Public Health Service is divided into three branches, 1st, PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING, SOCIAL HYGIENE and TUBERCULOSIS and he felt that when the time arrives when all these branches will be running smoothly the Province of N. B. will have gone a very long way toward the elimination of some of the worst diseases to which the human race had become heir. It remained only for a vigorous campaign of education and the Govt. would do all in its power to assist. Dr. Roberts spoke of his efforts in securing funds from the Rockefeller Foundation and felt that the Province was well equipped to meet the situation.

At the conclusion of Dr. Roberts' speech, Dr. Pinaut took the opportunity of thanking Mr. McNutt for rendering solos between the addresses.

Also Mr. A. Christie, manager of the Opera House who was kind enough to place the Opera House at the disposal of the meeting.
