prosperous, genial, young man. His easy temper was very seldom ruflled, indeed a less contented man than he could have found little to grumble at in his smooth and golden path. But just now he looked hot and irritated, and he spoke angrily.

"What on earth is all this about, Smithers? Why on earth will you travel third when I pay for yoar second-class ticket? You are so infernally economical that you deserve to be locked up!" Then catching sight of Helen's figure from behind the policeman, whither she had withdrawn on his approach he went on with charitable interest and some condescension. "If that is the person who fancies Smithers has got her purse, I can assure her that she's mistaken. Smithers don't rob me so I am sure he would not rob her. But if she can't get home without a ticket, I hope she will allow me to provide her with any money she may want."

This onen handed generosity, this con-

may want."

This open handed generosity, this convenient suggestion should surely have been received with gratitude and thanks, but exaspecated, robbed, proud Helen chose to be offended. With the mine of an affronted princess she pushed her way past the police man and answered this overbearing gentle man with extraordinary dignity and coldman with extractionary heast.

"I did not think that your man had stolen my things. I knew that he had not. And I want nothing but to be allowed to leave the carriage. Would you kinkly let me pass?"

CHAPTER III.

"Whose humble means watch not His haughty spirit."

Shakespeare.

His haughty splitt."

Slakespeare.

Miss Mitford's voice, face and manner were so unexpected as to be a little starting. But the young man instantly stood aside and raised his hat with an ingratiating smile. He smiled, not because he found her manner amusing, but because it was his habit to smile where women were concerned. They were always so very gracious to him that he had never yet found occasion to frown in their company. He half offered his hand to help her alight from the carriage, but he was just a moment too late, she was already on the platform.

She found that the train to Noelcombe was behigh dits time; it would not be in for half an hour. During the earlier part of that interval, Smithers, who was now exonerated from suspicion, and Helen, formed the nucleus of a group consisting of several officials, the policeman and Smithers' master, who, to that young person's annoyance, and entered with officious interests into the discussion concerning her loss. He was a young man of some energy, and energy to those who live idle lives is a superfluous possession, of which they are glad to find opportunity to rid themselves. Besides which Miss Mitford was an unusually pretty girl and in distress. So he took the investigation of the affair into his own hands, directed every measure which was adopted for the recovery of the property, asked a hundred questions and showed some talent for the detective trade.

The cross-examination to which she was compelled to submit was not the least unpleasant part of the unfortunate day. At length, the subject, exhaustive as it proved, was brought to an abrupt conclusion by the arrival of the Plymouth Zulu. Helen withdrew to the ladies' waiting room where she sat, sulking, in the stilling heat of that crowded room. She was cross, hot, tired, but she was glad to decape from her fundence of the previsitent gaze and searching crowded room. She was cross, not, tareu, but she was glad to escape from her undesirable notoriety and still more glad to be quiet of the persistent gaze and searching interrogations of that complacent son of the low-horn, purse-proud Sir Adolphus Jones,

There were such a fot of men in the other carriage that they smoked me out."

She made some inarticulate sound which suggested her indifference to his movements. A rile of illustrated papers lay, where had placed them, beside her on the seat He pointed at them and asked whether she had home reading.

e pointed at them and asked whether she did been reading.

"It is too hot to read," she said.

"Perhaps you are one of the people who in ever read in a train?"

"I read sometimes."

"It makes your head ache, perhaps?"

"Yes, it does."

"Does it make your head ache to look at

Does it make your head ache to look at

"No"—a moment's pause; "but talking makes my head ache."
"I'm so sorry; that is particularly unfortunate, for I have a question or two which I really must ask you. You see, I ought to have a full description of your watch and purse, a minute account of your feliow-travellers—every particular, in fact, of the circumstances to sond up to head-quarters as soon as possible. I am sorry to trouble you, but I want it down in black and white; it would not do to trust to my memory in any important business."

He drew out a book—it might have been a note-book—and pencil from his breast pocket, and began in a business-like way to question Helen, and write down her answers. She was impressed by his manner and set at ease by this explanation of his intrusion.
"Your name?"
"Helen Mitford."
"You came from Meriton, you said—

You came from Meriton, you said-rted about 2.30? How far do you live from the station?"

"Two miles."
He entered this important item carefully.
"Meriton is a pretty village," he remarked. "I have often passed through it on my way to Dromore."
Helen started and looked at him.
"You know Dromore?" he pursued.
"Yes."
"The Chilterns are awfully nice people."

"The Chilterns are awfully nice people."
Lady Chiltern was Helen's cotsin and most intimate friend; but she had grown frigid again, for what had the Chilterns to do with the notebook, or the theft?
"Would you kindly describe your fellow-travellers?" he proceeded, with solemnity, his pencil poised in the air and his dark eyes watching her expressive face.
"A thin, middle-aged man—I thought he was a dissenting minister—sat next to me. There was a woman—a smart woman with feathers and dirty hands—opposite to me. The other people were men; I hardly locked at them. I could not recognize either of them."

of them."
"Poor men!" murmured the gentleman, writing in his book.

This superfluity of the dislogue was a

"Miss Mitford, you went off in such a hurry; you had gone in a moment, before I knew where you were. Please get in as quick as you can, the horse won't stand." He leaned over the splash-board and offered her his hand to help her into the cart. "Thank you, but 'I'm going to walk to Noelcombe," she answered, moving on as she spoke. He caught sight of her face; there was animosity in every line of it. "You can't walk," he said, "it would kill you. It's five miles—more—and an awful road—hills the whole way—hills like a switchback."

awith toat—as the wine way a switchback."

She did not argue, but she walked on faster: he kept the cart by her side.

"I assure you that you can't walk," he said, a little irritated and very much surprised. "You don't understand, I am not exaggerating—it is five miles if it is a step You don't know what that distance in this part of the country means. You must get in—indeed, you must; you are tired out already."

The old residents of Noelcombe and its neighborhood—among whose number Sir Adolphus was not—conservative to the backbone, regarded those horizontal rows of remunerative houses, and that enormous mansion, flanked by acres of glass, and oversmart alike in color and design, in the middle distance, with distinct disfavor.

"The Prince of Wales' Bebts.

"The exact financial position of the Prince of Wales," says Labouchere, editor of the 'London Truth, in an article on "English Royalty," which hecontributes to the October Forum, "is not known. There have been rumors that he is greatly in debt; but I question their correctness. When the Prince came of age he became possessed of the accumulations realized during his minority from the Duchy of Cornwall. A portion of them was expended in the purchase of the Sandringham estate, and the remainder became his. With this nest-egg, with an income of 210,000 per annum, one of £10,000 for his wife, a separate provision for his children, and with Marlborough House kept up for him at the public cost, there seems to be no reason with the control of the control with Mariborough House kept up for him the public cost, there seems to be up reason why his expenditure should outrun homens. The Prussian Government has make a report upon its buildings struck by lightning between 1877 and 1886. There were 53,502 buildings used for official purposes in Prussia. Cook of Cook's Tours.

The phrase "Cook's tours" is familiar in every quarter of the globe. Thomas Cook was born in Derbyshire in 1808. When ten years of age he was employed in a garden at a penny a day, and his widowed mother was so poor that the pittance was an important consideration to her. Afterwards he became a wood-turner. In 1841 a temperance gathering was to be held at Loughborough, a town eleven miles from Leicester, and Mr. Cook conceived the idea of running a cheap excursion to it from Leicester. The excursion proved a success, and many who heard of it afterwards employed Mr. Cook to plan and manage other excursions of a like nature. In course of time he concluded that it would be more profitable to work for himself than far others; and he entered into the business which has now grown to such vast proportons.

variability, impressed and stamped by unintelligent force. Variety prevails everywhere. Take the rates of axial roation. The sun revolves in about 25 days, 8 hours; the moon requires a month to turn; the earth occupies 24 hours; 324 hours; Mara, 244 hours; Jupiter, less than 10 hours; Saturn, 10½ hours. We are sure that there is reason in all this, and, as Sir Isasc Newton said, it is "the work of an intelligent and most powerful Being." Uranus, and possibly Neptune, rotate from east to west, unlike all other planets, their moons revolving in the same retrograde direction. The sky is more various and complicated than even the wisest astronomers thought; it is like "a casket of variously colored stones." Then, how far soever the spirit flies, finally stopping at the centre of centres, the centre of creation, the capital of the universe, whence are the laws which govern and upbold all worlds. Who shall describe that throne of might—that palace of splendor—that inner abode of Deity! What line shall measure, what space contain, what time can reckon, the roll, the circle, the vast procession of millions of clustered suns and systems revolving round the presence chamber of the Almighty! What painter could picture, what poet describe, what heart conceive the beautiful grandeur of that source whence flow infinite and eternal streams of goodness! When with the telescope we contemplate the magnitude and numberlessness of worlds, and with the microscope discover life extending beyond life, surpassing all imagination, we confess that herein God is glorified. The incalculable multiplication of worlds, and the necessities of a rule that is infinite, hinder not the tashioning of a moth's wing, so that it possesses a very firmament of beauty. Eternity and space contain endless surprises and possibilities; we know not what we shall be. The Christian rejoices to know that "God has a plan for every man"—that the provision for a soul's salvation is infinite, is connected with worlds and times, transactions and interests, surpassin

We are supposed to be a peaceful nation," writes Col. Theodore A. Dodge, the well-known authority on military subjects, in the October Forum, "but we have our fair share of strife, foreign and domestic. Since the revolution there have been wars with England and with Mexico, with Tripoli and with Algiers; broils with Paraguay and Corea, and a gigantic civil war; rumors of war with France, England, Spain and Italy. There have been the John Brown raid, the Barnburner and Fenian raids to Canada, many incursions across the Mexican border, and the filibustering expeditions to Cuba and Nicaragua. We have had the Whiskey and Shays rebellions; the election, draft, railroad, reconstruction and sundry serious city riots; we have had well on to two hundred deadly Indian fights and many awful massacres We have lost more men in active war since 1776 than any nation of Europe. This is a startling record for a peaceful people."

The naturalist can easily locate their residence and ascertain their mental qualifications by studying the boys and girls who parade the city avenues and haunt the parks at night all nights of the year. The ancient and, honorable custom which kept all children in the house after nightfall has fallen into disuse through the numerical norease of the fool parent. The fatal characteristic of this creature is its blind confidence in the virtue, good luck and wisdom of its progeny. Other parents may be their boys and girls to lives of sin and their boys and girls to lives of sin and shame, but the fool parent is positive no sin or shame can touch its offspring. Therefore these unfortunate children haunt the streets and parks until midnight, consorting, of course innocently enough at the start, with the devil's innumerable agents, finally to be seized body and soul and delivered to destruction. Steel caskets for the bodies of those who die suddenly on shipboard are being carried on many of the transatlantic liners. The remains are placed in them and hermetically sealed. The heartless practice of throwing the remains overboard is considered worse than barbarous, especially when a vessel is within a few miles of land. Bodies, when weighted, only sink a few feet below the surface of the water, where they are soon attacked by the fish and sharks, and reappear on the surface of the water within 48 hours. The body of the wife of a rich New Yorker, thrown overboard from a Vera Cruz steamer a few months ago, drifted ashore on the coast of Mexico and was seen for weeks afterward, until robbed and sunk by bandits for the finger-rings. The inquiry in the affairs of Hirchfeld & Wolff realizes the worst anticipations. The firm has been in business for sixty-four years and had as its chief Herr Wolff, who occupied several other positions of trust. He was a prominent society man, who had lived a life of ostentations wealth, his household expenses running to 400,000 marks a year. He did little in the speculation line until recent years, when his private extravagances at the gambling table led to his embarrassment. He tried to recoup his losses through dealing on the Paris and Berlin bourses. As a matter of fact the firm had been insolvent since 1883. For a number of years he has been living by selling and pawning securities of depositors, working in connection with banker Jos. Leipziger. It is asserted that Wolff, with all the facts being known to Leipziger, floated fraudulent drafts through Leipziger and pawned securities of depositors amounting in value to 3,500,000 marks. Leipziger finally went to the wall and his failure has tended to the downfall of Hirshfeld & Wolff.

For the first few hours the patient is affected with a mild fever, the tongue then becomes inflamed and assumes huge proportions; the organ then turns very black in color, decomposition sets in, and in paroxysms of the most intense sufferings death ensues. Physicians say the disease is known to them, as it is described in medical books, and that its home is in Asia, where among the natives it is as fatal as cholera. They call it Asiatic black tongue, and confess their utter inability to combail its dearly work. Later news from the affected districts says news cases are reported beginning with the same symptoms.

Secretary Blaine has heard nothing from Valparaiso, and is awaiting with manifest anxiety official confirmation or denial of the report from Chili. Secretary Tracy has heard nothing. He received a despatch of from Capt. Schley yesterday morning dated Friday night, but it contained no suspicion of impending trouble.

The United States steamship Baltimore, Capt. Schley commanding, has been in Chilian waters for some time, and has attracted considerable attention from the fact that her commander has been at the head of naval affairs for the Government of the United States during the eventful period of the Chilian revolution. The attack upon his sailors ashore, however, by a Chilian mob and the complications arising therefrom have made the Baltimore an object of great interest, and have drawn towards Commander Schley the attention of the civilized world.

The hum and din of the busy workmen on the war vessels Minantonimah and Atlantic disturbed the Sunday stillness. Workmen have been busily engaged day and night for the past week in preparing vessels for speedy service at sea. The unusual bustle and activity at the navy yard is not due to a false report of the sinking of the Baltimore, but it is conceded that the strained relations between this country and Chili have caused the Government much anxiety to get all its war vessels ready for any possible contingency."

They characterize Mr. O'Brien's statements as artful, dishonest misrepresentation, a shameless breach of confidence and a wanton outrage on the memory of the dead leader. The burden of the statement is ton outrage on the memory of the dead leader. The burden of the statement is that OBrien has given an incomplete and colored account of the negotiations at Boulogne, at the same time suppressing his own copy of the proceedings, which would show that he and his friends proposed to obtain the withdrawal of the denunciation of Mr. Parnell by the Catholic bishops and to give Parnell the right to veto any Home Rule Bill proposed by the Liberals. The latter condition, it is evident, they say o'Brien omitted in his revelations from fear of the Gladstonians, and while publicly canting morality he was privately willing to spit upon it. The Parnellites did consent to Mr. Parnell's retirement, because they knew it would have been a sham retirement. They challenge O'Brien to publish Parnell's letter renouncing these conditions. The making public of this letter is most important to the Irish people. They also have accused Dillon and O'Brien with suppressing various letters which had passed between Parnellites and Gladstone and Morley, the Liberal leaders, and Archbishop Croke and Bishop Walsh. They utterly deny that the Parnellites considered the Liberal assurances satisfactory. They also allege that Mr. O'Brien was not satisfied with the promises of Liberals, and in support of their statement challenge him to publish a letter which they say he wrote to Morley, begging him to amend his assurances, and Morley's reply, in which he refused to alter a single comma. A London cable says: On Tuesday evening the Rev. Frederick Harford, said to be a minor canon of Westminster, saw the police helping a hysterical woman into a cab in front of a saloon. Harford, who appeared to be in a somewhat excited condition, protested against the leniency of the police in not arresting the woman, and said that she was drunk instead of being hysterical and ought to be in custody. The police paid no attention to the canon at first, only telling him to go away and mind his own business. This made the reverend gentleman more effusive, and the police at last were obliged to arrest him. They filed a charge of drunkenness against him. The appearance of a canon of Westminster in the Police Court, even though only a minor canon, created a sensation. Harford was dressed in the most correct garb. He denied that he was drunk but admitted that he had been dining. The evidence of his disorderly conduct was overwhelming, and the Magiseen dining. The evidence of his disorderly onduct was overwhelming, and the Magis trate after severely censuring him, impose a fine of £4, which the canon at once pro

SKULL CRACKING CONVENTION. A Hundred and Fifty Persons Hurt in

A Hundred and Fifty Persons Mart in a Melce at Waterford.

A Dublin cable cays: Mr. Dillon left the convention hall at Waterford on his way to the railway station guarded by police and 100 priests. A mob followed, and kept up a continuous attack until Mr. Dillon obtained shelter in the station. A number of skulls were cracked. Thirty delegates while crossing a toll bridge were thrown to the ground and trampled upon, many being badly hurt and bleeding profusely when rescued by the police. Several thousand Parmellites held the approaches to the convention hall, and everywhere struck down opponents. The whole quay, a mile in length, was the scene of savage fighting. Many persons were taken to the hospital. It is estimated that 150 persons were seriously, and many others dangerously, injured during the fighting there to-day.

Dublin, Nov. S.—Mr. John Dillon, speaking at Templemore, Tipperary County, to-day, said that Irishmen the whole world over are burning with pride and gratitude that the people of Cork had performed their duty so nobly. He appealed to the Parnellites, and that Mr. Redmond had received fully 1,000 Conservatives' votes.

There is more jubilation in the National Liberal Club to-night over the Cork result than I ever saw over any of the numerous successful English bye-elections since 1886.

It is said that both John and William Redmond have tickets for Australia and will leave very soon. Their original tickets were for October, but John was persuaded to stand for Cork on the understanding that he would remain if elected, so both exchanged for a month later. They both have wealthy Australian wives, and John will practice at the Sydney bar. It would have been better for him if he had gone a while ago, because the Irish in Australia will find it difficult to forgive him for this abortive attempt to destroy his country's hopes.

Narrow Escape of a Score of People From Among the Debris.

An Akron, O., despatch says: Two yesterday afternoon, and it is feared several persons are buried in the ruins. One of the buildings was of brick, three stories high, occupied by the bakery and confectionery establishment of S. B. Lafferty. About twenty people were in the dining-room in the rear portion of the bakery. These heard the cracking of the walls and rushed out of the back door, all being saved. The block occupied by Herrick & Sons was owned by Henry Clark, of Hartford, Conn. The one occupied by Lafferty was owned by the estate of Dr. E. W. Howard. The loss on the former is $25,000; on the latter $15,000. Herrick & Sons' loss is $20,000; Lafferty's loss about $4,000. The rear walls of both blocks stood intact, and the wreckage there did not fall to the first floor, as in the front, thus giving the occupants a chance to escape, and it was, as it seems, a miracle that a score of lives were not lost. The wall between the two blocks has been gradually undermined in the last

SLAUGHTER OF MINERS. Courteen Men Killed By An Explosion of Gas in a Shaft.

A Nanticoke, Pa., despatch says: The usual Sunday quiet was disturbed about 4.30 o'clock this afternoon by the annouement that a terrible explosion of gas had occurred in No. 1 shaft of the Susquehanna ment that a terible explosion of gas and occurred in No. I shaft of the Susquelanna Coal Company, by which a number of men had been killed and others terribly injured. Only a short time elapsed before the news spread throughout the town, and a large crowd gathered at the scene, including relatives and friends of the miners' employed in the mine, and while they waited for news from the shaft the scene was heartrending in the extreme. It was soon learned, however, that owing to the fact that this was Sunday there were only fourteen men at work in the mine. Of this number six were instantly killed, and some others so badly burned and injured that they cannot survive.

Salting Canadian Thistles Salting Canadian Thisties.

A farmer who tried for ten years to exterminate the Canada thistles on his farm by cutting them with a scythe in August found that they increased steadily all the time. He then concluded to try salting stock on them, especially sheep. In one patch of half an aere, where the thistles were very thick, he sowed the salt thinly; on others dropped a pinch, beginning as soon in May as the plants appeared. They were eater neadily, the sheep gnawing into the ground. As fast as fresh shoots sprang up they were salted, and so on through the summer. In one year enough could not be found in 100 acres to salt the sheep on.

A Prenken Laborer Shoots His Employer and Family.

A Port Jervis, Pa., despatch says: A fearful tragedy was enacted at the home of G. E. David, an aged resident of Green township, Pike county, Pa., on Thursday last. A young farm laborer named Simon Field entered the premises of David, armed with a shot gun. As David opened the door Field discharged the contents of the gun full in his face, blowing out both eyes and literally denuding his face of flesh. David will probably die. Field then shot the wife of the injured man in the face, but her wound is not fatal. The assassin then fled down the road, and meeting a son of Mr. David shot at him, inflicting a slight wound. Field lives in Droher township, Wayne county, Pa. He was arrested on Saturday, and ishow in the county jail at Milford. When questioned as to the motive which prompted the deed, he claimed to have no recollection of what had happened. He had been drinking heavily for some days.

Roumania's Pretty Custom.

A pretty custom, similar to that observed in England, Scotland and the United States on St. Valentine's day, the 14th of February, is in 'vogue in Roumania on the lat of March, says Youth's Companion. This is the day indicated in the State and Church calendar as the official date for the beginning of spring. The masculine portion of the population is not favored, as with valeritines in this country, but the daughter, friend, sweetheart or bride may be quite sure of receiving her token of affectionate remembrance our that day. These little gifts are called martisoires and are made of bronze, silver or some cheaper material, in the shape of hearts, stars and medallions. These little amulets bear the date March 1, accompanied by that of the year, and any motto or inscription which may occur to the giver as appropriate. The recipient of the martisoire wear it, held by a small chain, on her arm, or hung around her neck, until in her walks abroad she sees a rose in bloom or hears the song of the nightingale. Then she takes it off and hangs it on the next green bush to which she comes, as an offering to Mother Nature, for whom Roumanians have a great love. Whether these little medals are allowed to hang on the bushes and swing in the breezes all summer, or whether after a certain time they are stealthily gathered by a martisoire collector, to be melted for allowed to inade on the business and swing in the breezes all summer, or whether after a certain time they are stealthily gathered by, a martisoire collector, to be melted for another season's use, is not stated by the great German paper which tells of this pretty, if rather sentimental custom.— Washington Hatchet.

A third of an inch gives us a full size in length of shoe; a sixth furnishes the intermediate point between two sizes, the saving of which is desirable; if practicable; a small fraction of breadth goes a good way in securing comfort, and in girth of ball or instep an infinitesimal part of an inch is sometimes an ell of freedom; a quarter of an inch is a good deal of letting-down or elevating at the heel, and the difference of a sixteenth is readily perceptible at the sole. For these reasons, sudden and extreme changes in size or weight of shoes are injudicious.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Their mode of packing tomatoes, though effective is very simple. They use light yet strong wicker baskets which hold from 20 to 30 pounds each. The bottoms, sides and ends of these baskets are covered with large sheets of paper, and then the fruits are put carefully in until the baskets are nearly full to the rim. One or two sheets of strong paper are then placed over the top and laced firmly with twine, and the basket is ready for shipment.

The Azores and Canary Islands also send large lots to London. From the north of France also come considerable quantities, which are nicely packed with fancy-colored paper shavings. This manner of packing helps to attract buyers to the lots and enhances their value.

For one or two seasons quantities have come from the United States, where the tomato is more extensively grown than in any other country in the world. The distance however, is against this trade, as the fruit is of a very perishable nature.—

Lord Stanley Criticised.

London Truth: Lord Stanley of Preston will resign his appointment as Governor-General of Canada next spring. It cannot be assorted that Lord Stanley has been a success in Canada, and his apparent levity in startingoff on a salmon fishing expedition just at the height of the recent parliamentary crisis has created a very unfavorable impression throughout the Dominion. Lord Stanley, moreover, has committed the fatal error of identifying hir. self with a political party in Canada; and, having lost any small powers of useful ness which he may originally have possessed, the sooner he returns home the better. There must be none of the usual jobbery and favoritism in appointing his successor, for a really strong man of irrs-class capacity in now urgently required in Canada. It will not do for Lord Salisbury to send out some hide-bound Tory peer for whom a lucrative and dignified place is needed. Canada has not been governed by a resolute and able Statesman since the days of the late Lord Eighn; but I fear that Lord Salisbury is not likely to find another such Governor-General among his awkward squad of place-butting peers.

Boston Sunday Herald: From these few points, taken almost at random out of the commissoners' report, it will be seen that our Canadian neighbor has started out in an earnest effort to solve the great problem of the day, and to solve it on the basis of the best thought of its most persistent students. It would be easy to say with some scientificmen that the reform of criminals is impossible, because nature has foreordained them to crime by their imperfect moral endowment. But Gen. Booth, in his 'Darkest England'—and in other records indorsed by high authority in England, of the Salvation-Army's work—proves that kindness and religion have achieved a wonderful influence upon persons who may fairly have been regarded as hopelessly depraved. It has often succeeded in making of these proselytes most efficient sids in ameliorating the condition of their class. To accomplish anything in philanthropy we must certainly nything in philanthropy we must certainly be hopeful, and to try to eradicate all the be hopeful, and to try to cradicate all the evils of the world seems not more chimerical than the idea of Dr. R. M. Bucke, medical superintendent of the Ontario Insane Asylum, whose plan to restrict crime is by "preventing crimifials from perpetuating their degraded race."

Colors of Funnels.

The funnels of different steamships are characteristically painted to enable geople of modest nautical knowledge to distinguish them. A Cunarder has brilliant red funnels, with broad black bands around the top. The Havre line is the same, but has two narrow black bands in addition. North German Lloyd vessels have stacks of a lovely unbaked biscuit ware tint, very/daintly and summery to look at, and the distinguishing mark of the White Star line in yellow with a black band. The Guion and Inman lines both have black funnels, the former banded with red and the latter with white.
