WOLFVILLE, N. S., JAN. 7, 1916.

Editorial Brevities.

The German Chancellor's recent declaration in the Reichstag that the food supply is ample is Great Britain's justification for refusing the American Red Cross request for safe conduct of shipments of condensed milk for the babies of Germany. The movement is regarded as a German-American effort to circumvent the blockade.

Horace Fletcher, the food expert, who has just returned to the United States from Brussels, stated that Belgium is in dire straits as far as food and clothing are concerned. Many of her people are suffering, especially children, who are crying for food. Mr. Fletcher is a member of the New York branch of the Belgian Relief Commission and an important member on account of his theories and practices in dietetics. The call for aid cannot be made too strong, says Mr. Fletcher. "One morning," said he, "while in Brussels, I saw a load of coke passing. It was followed by three boys, who were picking up minute bits, which fell from the cart. I went home with these boys and found that their thrift was due to real suffering. Not only was there no fuel in their houses, but no money with which to buy it and their clothing, which had not been renewed for a year and a half, was worn thin. 'Conditions like these are practically universal.' According to Mr. Fletcher there are millions of Belgians destitute of food and clothing, all of which must be supplied through the relief organizations. It is to meet the conditions that Mr. Fletcher describes that the Belgian Relief Committee, of Montreal, is endeavoring to have Canadians give from their bountiful harvest of wheat this year. A bag of flour is a mere atom in the immense wheat crop and yet that atom will keep one Belgian family alive a month.

Several Infectious Diseases Prevalent.

(Issued by the Department of Public Health, Nova Scotia.)

A variety of infectious conditions are very prevalent in several parts of our province just now, notably diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, influenza and pneumonia. Previous bulletins have discussed most of these diseases from the standpoint of prevention. It is felt, however, that the present situation is so serious as to warrant another reference to the means to be adopted to limit the spread of these afflictions.

It will be noted that all five of these diseases involve more particularly the organs of respiration. The infectious element is given off, not so much in the breath as in the spray ejected from the mouth and nostrils in the acts of coughing and sneezing and in the discharges from the throat and nose. It is, consequently, most important that the nose and mouth of a patient suffering from any of these conditions be carefully covered with gauze or old linen while coughing or sneezing, that the discharges from throat and nostrils be received on similar material, and that bits of cloth so soiled be promptly burned or placed in a strong disinfectant solution.

One is so apt to become infected where one is brought into contact with a large number of people. Every crowd is likely to contain someone who is just developing or is just recovering from one or other of these diseases—or who is a 'carrier.' If the crowd is gathered in a hot, stuffy room or other enclosed place, the liability to infection is increased, especially if one must pass from such a place into the cold outdoor air without being suitably wrapped.

Unnecessary exposure to infection by association with anyone likely to transmit any of these diseases should, of course, be avoided. Crowds, especially indoor crowds, should be avoided. Proper ventilation of house, places of business, and all places where people assemble, should be insisted on. Over heating of such a place should not be permitted.

Those who suffer from any illness, involving the respiratory system should realize that carelessness on their part may lead to a widespread and possibly very fatal epidemic. A physician should be consulted, in order that a proper diagnosis may be made. The greatest difficulty in the control of these conditions is the fact that many people continue to go about mingling with others although actually suffering from an infectious disease, the real nature of which is not recognized because a doctor has not been consulted. If you won't consult a doctor for your own sake, do it for the sake of others!

Anything which tends to reduce one's general health renders one especially liable to infection. Hence at such a time as this one should be particularly careful to avoid any cause for ill health. Excesses of any kind, and the abuse of the body in any way, should be rigidly abstained from. As young children are not only more susceptible to infection but more liable to succumb than adults, it follows that especial care should be taken to avoid the exposure of young children to infectious disease. Should anyone be unfortunate enough to develop any of these diseases, it should be the aim of those caring for him to provide him with plenty of air. He should occupy a large, well lighted and well ventilated room. Lack of sufficient air space is a serious hindrance to recovery from infections involving the organs of respiration. It should not be forgotten that all diseases of an infectious nature should be reported to the Medical Health Officer and the Local Board of Health both by the householder in whose house such a disease develops and by the physician in attendance. Failure to comply with this requirement constitutes not only a violation of the law, punishable by fine, but must be regarded also as unpardonable neglect of a simple precautionary measure, intended as a safeguard to the community, which may result most disastrously.

Wells a Mile Deep

The deepest well now in the world is in Silesia. It is a diamond-drill hole in a coal field, and goes down 7,350 feet. But according to the United States Geological Survey there is a well in that country that may go even deeper. It is about fifteen miles west of Pittsburgh, and is being sunk to the media sandstone—a bed that elsewhere contains oil and gas—and is now 7,174 feet deep. In the upper part of the well, the workmen struck gas and oil, and between the depths of 6,830 and 7,100 feet they found rocks that bore rock salt and salt water. At Derrick City, in Pennsylvania, there is a well 5,820 feet deep, which is probably the second-deepest in the United States. Another deep well is on Slaughter Creek, in West Virginia. It is 5,595 feet deep. It penetrates a sandstone at 5,030 to 5,050 feet, and from that depth to the bottom, a distance of 245 feet, it goes through limestone near West Elizabeth, in Pennsylvania. There is another well 5,575 feet deep, which penetrates a black shale. Another deep well, which is being drilled at Gaiter, in Pennsylvania, has already reached a depth of 5,300 feet. Drillers of deep wells in this country use the most improved and efficient machinery; but in China there is a most remarkable well that reaches a depth of 3,600 feet, which was drilled for petroleum with such crude appliances as a cable made of twisted strands of rattan.

Civic Improvement League for Canada

At a conference held at Ottawa on the 19th November last, under the joint chairmanship of Sir John Willson (Toronto) and the Hon. J. J. Guerin (Montreal), a resolution was passed to the effect that a Civic Improvement League be formed for Canada.

It was decided to hold a conference for the purpose of launching the League and deciding upon its constitution. This conference will be held at Ottawa, on Thursday, January 20th, following the annual meeting of the Commission of Conservation, which will be held on January 18 and 19. This conference will be addressed by prominent public men and important matters relating to civic development and future municipal development in Canada will be discussed. In view of the present and probable after-effects of the war on Canadian municipal life, and on social conditions generally, there are many questions on which it is important to have an interchange of views between representatives of all provinces in the Dominion. These questions affect rural municipalities, as well as cities and towns, and will naturally include those which relate to the apportionment of responsibility between provincial governments and local authorities in regard to such matters as public health, town planning, immigration, unemployment and the expenditure of public funds.

Arrangements are being made to secure for those attending the conference transportation at reduced rates.

Chain Letters.

Hortonville, N. S. Jan. 17, 1916.
DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly publish the enclosed letter which I recently received from Scotland. I have made inquiries but have not learned of any chain letters for Belgian Refugee work being received in this neighborhood. It is possible that some have found their way to other parts of the county, so I comply with the request of the writer who is unknown to me. Thanking you for space,
Yours very truly,
M. F. PATTERSON.

COPY OF LETTER.

Aberdour House, Aberdour, 1915.
Dec. 1915.
DEAR MADAM.—Lady Betty wants me to assure you that this chain letter way of collecting money for the Belgian Orphans is no fraud. Hundreds of letters have arrived from Canada and from the States containing ten cents and some more. In this way we have collected £40, which eventually will be sent to the Belgian Refugee Association for the benefit of their orphans.

Lady Betty ignores who originally started this circular letter, but, anyway, they arrive still in large numbers, and, as I say, many containing dollars. If you think it advisable will you be kind enough to let your friends and acquaintances know about this? A little later, Lady Betty will publish a letter in the Canadian papers acknowledging the receipt of all this money. Yours truly,
E. KAMELBY.

GRAY MARE WILL PROVE THE BETTER HORSE In modern merchandizing the "dark horse" is the article that is not advertised, depending on the "something just as good" argument. It is safer to depend on the "gray mare" that is well advertised. It means that its makers have faith in their product and are not afraid to stake their reputation on its quality. 'God holds the key of all unknown,

'Not if it Were My Boy.'

The late Horace Mann, the eminent educator, delivered an address at the opening of some reformatory institution for boys, during which he remarked that if only one boy was saved from rum it would pay for all the cost and care and labor of establishing such an institution as that. After the exercises Mr. Mann was asked:

"Did you not feel that a little when you said that all that expense and labor would be repaid if it only saved one boy?"

"Not if it was my boy," was the solemn and convincing reply.

Ah! there is a wonderful value about 'my boy.' Other boys may be rude and rough; other boys may seem to require more pains and labor than they will repay; other boys may be left to drift unguided for the ruin that is so near at hand; but 'my boy'—it were worth the toil of a lifetime and the lavish wealth of the world to save him from temporal and eternal ruin. We would go the world around to save him from peril, and would bless every hand that was stretched out to give him help or welcome. And yet every poor, wandering, homeless, outcast man is one whom some fond mother called 'my boy.' Every lost woman, sunken in the depths of sin, was somebody's daughter in her days of childish innocence. Today some body's son is a hungry outcast pressed to the very verge of crime and sin. Today somebody's daughter is a weary helpless wanderer, driven by necessity to the paths that lead to death. Shall we shrink from labor, shall we hesitate at cost when the work before us is the salvation of a soul? Not if it is 'my boy,' not if we have the love of him who gave His life to save the lost.

TYPEWRITER BUREAU NEEDS LITTLE MONEY

Young Lady With Fifty Dollars Makes Good—Pleasant and Instructive Work

I always had a wish to possess a little business of my own, but my capital was insufficient to commence anything that required a big and costly stock, writes an ambitious young lady. One day, however, I hit upon a brilliant idea, and I promptly carried it out. In short, I started a typewriter bureau. Of course, it's not a new idea, but by the employment of up-to-date business principles I achieved a great success.

At first I had definitely decided to embark on the venture there were several matters which presented themselves to my mind deserving of serious consideration. In the first place, it occurred to me that if I conducted the business from my private home it would at once assume an amateurish effect. So I looked about for a suitable office. There were plenty of offices to be let; but the rents! Eventually, however, I managed to secure a room on the top floor of a building for $125 a week.

Well, having arranged about the office, I was then faced with the problem of letting the public know that I was there. I commenced by having a card printed, and, after placing it in a frame, I hung it in the doorway. This idea was a most valuable one to secure custom from people who visited other offices in the building.

I next inserted small "prepaid" advertisements in the papers. I took a series of announcements to save my time and get the little reductions given for such. I also advertised in my local theatre programme. I had some notepaper and envelopes printed, and bought a quantity of typewriter paper, duplicating paper, and sundry office items. The necessary furniture—a couple of tables, a chest, a few chairs, and the like—I "borrowed" from home. On the day that I commenced business I drafted a pointed circular letter stating my method of business and the attention given to accuracy, etc. This I duplicated and despatched to the most likely addresses in the town. I also prepared a neat scale of charges to give or send to inquirers.

Hard Going at First
At first things were very slow, and at the end of the first week I must confess a little spark of doubt had arisen in my mind. But I determined to stick to my guns. After that first discouraging fortnight things looked up considerably, and not only did I secure most of the commissions from local business firms, but also from all parts of the country.

The remuneration left me a nice margin of profit but I always said that it was worth it because I took great care with every job, whether it was small or large. I charged 25 cents a thousand words for all general work, 35 cents for plays and legal work, and 5 cents per folio of seventy-two words for poetry.

Profit on the Side
In addition to these sources of revenue, though, I held an agency for various things—stationery, typewriter supplies, insurance, and so on—which not only helped considerably to swell the exchequer but also enabled me to buy my own stuff at reduced charges. Soon after I started I commenced to teach pupils, and while they were receiving a sound training they also were able to do for me most useful work. Especially was this so in the direction of "running off" duplicator copies.

My initial outlay was well within fifty dollars, but this amount could be greatly reduced if one possesses a typewriter and duplicator. I did not, so these items cost me, second-hand, about thirty dollars. Advertising is a most essential factor, at any rate, until an extensive clientele is worked up; but, on account of the fact that commissions are seldom for very heavy amounts, it is unwise to go beyond the "prepaid" columns, which, moreover, replies should be carefully watched, and those journals which are not paying should be left alone for a time. And it is worthy of notice that the office should always have a smart appearance, for it is an established fact that the observant customer learns much from "outward appearances."

TURKS HALF-HEARTED

Rulers Plundering, Capital Starving and Recruits Dying, For Germany

A. Robert Mounster, literary editor of "Judge," New York, who has just returned from Constantinople, writes as follows: In more ways than one Constantinople showed itself the capital of a country that is fighting without any heart for necessary reforms and for a nation capable of which the Turks have nothing in common. Business is bad, food is dearer, and bread is scarce. No shopkeeper dare violate the police order that all flags should be hung out in celebration of a great victory. What was the victory? Ten thousand British soldiers had been killed—so the official report said. The poorer classes of people hearing of victory after victory argue simply, but effectively, "If our brothers are victorious, why don't our husbands, our sons come back to us? Why are there so many wounded? Why don't we have all the bread we want?"

Young Turk leaders who are responsible for the present state of affairs can talk for hours about the benefits that their country has derived and the glorious future that will be hers through their sacrifices. Besides, I have yet to hear of any influential member of the present regime who has not been lining his pockets well for gold for many days in Constantinople or for rainy days to come in Asia Minor. Whatever happens they do not intend to lose material things, the offices they have held. The disappearance of public money is so well known that rarely is a Turk to be seen putting anything into the "For the National Defence" cans, which are shoved under one's nose in the street or street cars, in restaurants, in public gardens, everywhere but in the home. Nor is the Turkish public any longer contributing freely to the funds of the Red Crescent.

The recruit in the raw comes from the interior of Asia Minor or from far-off Arabia in his picturesque garments, puts on a uniform and the peculiar helmet that has replaced the fez, receives an uncertain amount of military training, and goes when needed to the front, usually by a transport ship carrying also ammunition and rifles that have been made by German workmen in the Turkish capital, or shipped across Rumania and Bulgaria as "planes," "agricultural machinery," and the like.

Racing and Canada's War

The statement that racing is necessary for the improvement of the breed of horses is one of the most normal circumstances. Advanced now a reason why the tracks should not close during the war, it is a pretence that deceives nobody. How could the breed of horse be affected one way or the other by the cancelling of a season's or two season's racing fixtures?

Not much more respectable as an argument is the plea that we need racing and other sports and amusements so that the public may be beguiled from the gloom and sorrow caused by the war. It ought to be nobody's duty at the present time to cause the public to take a more cheerful or optimistic view of the situation. On the contrary, the duty is for us to be rather more than less impressed by the terrible nature of the struggle in which this country is engaged, and with the necessity for making greater efforts and harder sacrifices to ensure ultimate victory. If racing has the effect of distracting the attention of thousands of young Canadians from a contemplation of their own duties and responsibilities in this struggle, nothing further need be said against it.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

No Dum-dum Bullets

The United States is the only nation now remaining outside the operation of the declaration barring the use of dum-dum bullets. These bullets are not used, however, in the United States army. Great Britain, having at first refused to sign the convention, and reserving the right to use dum-dum bullets "only against uncivilized peoples," acceded to the declaration at the Second Hague Conference, in 1907. Dum-dum bullets were used in Egypt in 1896, but not in the Boer War. Great Britain, under whose authority they were first manufactured at the Dum-dum Arsenal in Bengal, India, urged the right to use them in warfare with "uncivilized peoples" because ordinary lead-shot bullets did not secure "sufficient stopping power" in fighting with fanatic tribes.

Ancient History of Kilts

The Scottish kilt, as an article of dress, dates back to historic times, and was originally, as far as can be figured out, merely a plaid blanket, worn about the shoulders, with one end gathered about the loins in cold weather. The mountaineers of the Balkans wear the kilt, and students say that the soldiers of the Assyrian kings wore a costume very closely akin to the kilt of Scotland.

Keeping Resolutions.

To make a resolution and keep it is hard. But to make one and break it is demoralizing. It is easier to keep a resolution if it is made a few days before putting into effect. Every nerve of the body seems to brace itself for the abstinence. To break off an objectionable habit without any preparation is a mistake. Denial may be easy for a few hours' but the grip almost invariably returns.

A Weak Heart.

When the heart is weak or irregular, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood-forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

Children love individual possessions, and often a plant of flowers will add greatly to the appearance of the child's corner and at the same time will be a source of pride.

The object of pain seems to be to give warning that something is wrong in the human system. For this reason, when you have a headache, for instance, you should honestly seek for the cause.

Headache is not a disease in itself, but rather a symptom. If you find other indications that the nervous system is exhausted—if you are restless, nervous, sleepless and irritable—you may rightly suppose that to be the cause of the headache.

The headache warns you that with neglect of the nervous system you later expect nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia, or some form of paralysis. Wisdom suggests the use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to build up the system, and thereby remove the cause of the headache, as well as prevent more serious troubles.

The use of headache powders is not only a dangerous practice, but the shock to the system of drugs which are so powerful and poisonous as to immediately stop pain is most harmful. The relief is merely temporary, and with this danger signal removed the disease which caused the headache continues to develop until results are serious. The natural is, when you have headaches or pain of any kind look for the cause and remove it.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is not intended as a mere relief for headache. It cures by supplying the ingredients from which nature rebuilds and revitalizes the wasted nerve cells. Some patience is required for this reconstructive process, but the results are wonderfully satisfying, because they are both thorough and lasting.

If you would be freed from headaches, as was the writer of the letter quoted above, get Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test. Working, as it does, hand in hand with Nature, it can no more fail than can other of Nature's laws.

Every child needs some corner to call his own. No matter how young he may be, no matter how restricted the home space, he should have some refuge from adult interference. Few city houses and apartment houses are built so that a whole room can be turned over to a child for his exclusive use.
It is often possible however, to give the child a corner in the living-room or one of the sleeping rooms to which to keep his toys and where he may play undisturbed.
The result of such a scheme is that, instead of the toys being scattered all over the house, they are assembled in one spot, and the mother's work is lessened.
Low shelves, arranged like built-in bookcases, and an excellent storage place for playthings; it is imperative that the toys be arranged in an orderly manner so the child can find a particular toy he wishes without disturbing the rest.
By tacking a strip of oiled paper the color of the paper along the wall it is possible to protect the paper from finger marks, and at the same time to offer a place for the child to pin his drawings or the pictures that appeal to his taste.
Rutgers—Our war is terrible. I know of a soldier who commanded a regiment of 1,000 privates and lost half of them in one battle. Mexican—That's nothing compared with our war. I knew of one private who was commanded by 1,000 generals and lost 750 of them in one battle.—Puck.
