After the hour for receiving nominations had expired, Mr. Wm. Campbell was voted to the chair, and a number of addresses were given by the candidates and others.

Mr. M. G. Cameron was the first called upon, and thanked the electors for the privilege accorded him of saying a few words on the occasion. For some years past he had represented the ratepayers at the town and county board, and in both capacities had tried to forget party leanings, and be governed solely by the best interests of the town. He had done all that he could to forward the good of the town, and he had been less successful than he would have wished it was not because he wasn't willing to work for the best. It was a source of gratification to him to know that he had made no enemies during his term of office, and that in leaving town he left with the goodwill of every one whose friendship was worth having. He hoped the electors would do their duty to the town in the coming municipal election, and vote for the best man in every case, and by so doing advance its material interests. He concluded by thanking them all for past favors to him, and after wishing them the compliments of the season, and expressing a strong hope for the future of the town, he bade the electors a formal goodbye.

Mayor Seager explained his position, and said he was not a candidate for reelection. He defended the course of the council during the past year, and gave an extensive financial statement in connection with the waterworks and electric light schemes.

Mr. C. Crabb said all knew the "ins" and "outs" of the working of the council during the past year, and he would not go into particulars. He had been mayor before and had also been in the first council of the town, and was not lacking in municipal experience. In his first year the Northern gravel road question was settled, and the harbor of refuge was got. If elected he would do his duty to the town, as he had done in the past, and no man could do more. His whole interest was located in the town, and his boys were away now learning trades, with the intent of starting manufacturing in town after they had acquired a knowledge of the business. Factories were wanted, not summer resorts, as was advocated by some. He did not approve of the action of the council during the past year, in many respects, and thought there had not been any too much economy practiced. He was opposed to bringing in American machinery, and paying duties upon it, when a superior article could be got in Canada.

Mr. R. Radcliffe said two years ago he was a candidate but was not successful, some said for one reason and some for another, but he believed because he didn't get enough votes. Last year he was again nominated, but took the ground that it was not wise to "swap horses crossing a stream," and ran and was elected as a councillor. The waterworks and electric light were now practically completed, although he claimed no credit for the schemes and would accept no responsibility, but he believed every member of the council worked with the idea of doing the best possible work for the outlay. The council had been accused of engaging an incompetent engineer, but that gentleman's work on other points was well spoken of. He (R.) was not an expert, and had always gone by the engineer's opinion, and were amateurs in all callings, and were a dangerous class. They had been giving opinions in connection with the schemes and proved that a little knowledge was a dangerous thing, and he was willing to be judged by his past record.

Mr. Butler was not seeking the office for the sake of the salary, nor was he, like the old Scotchman, seeking the position for "what he could pick up," (loud laughter), but was in the field in response to a largely signed requisition asking for his services in the interest of the town. He did not come to the meeting to find fault with the past administration, although notwithstanding the favorable showing of the mayor, there were many opportunities of doing so. The council deserved no particular praise on the ground of economy, for keeping the expenditure inside the estimate. The estimate was large enough for the undertaking, (Hear, hear.) That mistake had been made in many instances nobody could deny, and these should be rectified as soon as possible. He could not offer manufacturers to the town to be run by his sons, as he was a bachelor, but if elected he might take a notion to get married, and it might happen that during the official term the town would have to present the mayors with a silver cradle, as had been the occasion in other places of doing so. (Loud and prolonged laughter and applause.) The electors had no doubt been looking well into the public affairs, and it was not necessary for him to go into particulars, as there were so many other speakers to address the meeting, but if he was elected, as he believed he would be, the town would get the benefit of what time and ability he could devote to its interests. He left himself in the hands of the electors.

Mr. Johnston said—I stand here to say that opposition has been brought against me. Why? I have served in the past, and if I have made errors, they have not been intentional. When opposition was talked of, I, Fred W. Johnston, went to Mr. Proudfoot, and asked him why he opposed me? I, Fred W. Johnston said to him, there are only three reasons upon which you can oppose me—ambition, politics, and a belief that you would make a better representative than I. If you are ambitious there is the deputy-revee, and I, Fred W. Johnston, will let you have it and stand by you, if you allow me to be elected by acclamation; if you oppose me on the grounds of politics, it is not of my seeking; and if for the other reason it will be for the people to say. Proudfoot said that he was going to propose me, in any event and so the matter rested. Mr. Johnston then defended his action in the past of arranging with the deputy-reeve that both should be elected by acclamation, and claimed that such a course was in the best interests of the town. Then he turned his attention to "Observations" a correspondent in a Clinton paper, for attacking his municipal career. He next told of his influence at the county council board, with the Government, with the C. P. R., and in other quarters, disparaging the services of his confere at the county council, and endeavored to make the electors believe that he should have the position for life. A claim of $2,277 had just been made by the Government against the town for not keeping up the docks when the tolls were taken off, and who would be able to use the most influence with the Government to have the claim set aside, said he, "I, Fred W. Johnston or William Proudfoot for you know your kind kissing goes by favor." He was proud of the town, had lived here from his youth, and intended to die here, and if again elected, would do everything in his power to make it progress.

Mr. Proudfoot, in reply, said it was true he had been approached by Mr. Johnston, and the proposal made that the offices of reeve and deputy should be taken by them to avoid a contest. Mr. Johnston thought he had the town in his pocket and could do as he pleased with public positions, but the public had a right to be consulted on the matter. (Hear, hear.) When he had been approached by Mr. Johnston and asked to run for deputy-reeve, he had inquired of that gentleman how long did he intend to hold the reeve, but got no definite answer. (Loud laughter.) There were a number of reasons why Mr. Fred W. Johnston should not be re-elected. His usefulness was gone. Of late years he had not been active in the public interest as he was formerly. He had been in the county council now for about eleven years, and had reached the wardenship, which was the highest county office, and his dropping into the position of reeve was retrogression. Mr. Johnston, although a member of the striking committee of the town council, always took good care to put himself on the committee that had little or nothing to do. He could be found on the cemetery committee, that had given no report during the whole year, and the harbor committee that met only once or twice in the same term. (Loud applause.) He had also been on the court of revision that only sat three or four times altogether. He, as reeve, had never brought in any motion towards the welfare of the town during the past year either in town or county council, (hear, hear,) and was never noted for anything except an anxiety to adjourn the meeting. (Laughter.) Another reason why Mr. Fred W. Johnston should not be elected was his action in regard to the location of the post office. The inspector of sites had come to town, and Mr. Johnston got hold of him, to the exclusion of every one else, until he left town. Why, the clerk of the council on this point was constrained to say that, "Even William Campbell didn't know of the inspector's appearance in town until after he had gone away." (Loud laughter and applause.) Mr. Johnston had stated that the Government did not feel inclined to give more than $1,000 for the site, regardless of the fact that in smaller towns than Goderich they had paid a much larger sum.

Mr. Johnston—I did not say so, I—Mr. Proudfoot—You did say so, and I can prove it.

Mr. Johnston—relapsed into quietness. Mr. Proudfoot stated that Mr. Johnston had trifled in his position as reeve of the town, and said when a man had once trifled as had been done by Mr. Johnston he should never be allowed to do so again. (Loud applause.) So far as his statement about his work on the waterworks was concerned, Mr. Johnston had no ground for making it. The only time he had any connection with it was when Mayor Seager was off on his holidays, and then his principal work was in putting off matters until the mayor's return. At every meeting of the committee when anything that required work came up, his plea always was, "O, wait until Seager comes back, and let him attend to it." (Applause and laughter.) Mr. Johnston's talk about what he could do towards bringing in the C. P. R. was all claptrap. He had done nothing up to date, and would never be able to do anything more on his own account. What had he done during the past year? Nothing. (Hear, hear.) As to his having influence with the Government, it was a well-known fact that he did not count at all in any of their calculations. (Laughter.) A contract had been let by the Government and a deputation had gone to Ottawa, and the result was that the contract was not cancelled, and no public works were gone on with. The public buildings site was purchased and the contract let, and Mr. Johnston had had a say about the matter, although he was neither a contractor nor a mechanic, and the question was whether Mr. Johnston had been looking after the town interests or his own. (Hear, hear.) The poorhouse was another subject and Mr. Johnston's influence when that question was up? He neither moved nor seconded the motion. (Applause.) Mr. Proudfoot, continuing, said that as this time was nearly up, he would not do the meeting much longer. He had shown some of the reasons why Mr. Johnston should be opposed, and there would not permit him to take up. He believed the municipal salvation of the town did not depend upon the election to the reeve, but of Mr. Fred W. Johnston, and he hoped the electors would see it in that light next Monday. He (Mr. P.) had been on the Harbor and Relief Committee, and had given his best attention to everything relating to his department. It was the duty of the public to attend the meetings and suggest improvements to the councillors, and it was the duty of the council to bow to public opinion. We wanted more railway facilities, more manufactories, and another line of steamers. So far as the harbor was concerned, the Government had again imposed them, and were asking us to pay $2,277 for alleged repairs to the dock. When the tolls were taken off the understanding was that the commercial docks should be kept in repair by the town, but now the Government was making a charge for the keeping up of the entire wharves.

Mr. Johnston—The Government have not re-imposed the tolls.

Mr. Proudfoot read the letter from the Department as follows:

OTTAWA, Dec. 21st, 1888.

SIR,—Referring to your letter of the 18th of May last, in reference to the levying of tolls and dues on the wharf and commercial docks in Goderich harbor, I have to inform you that by order in council of the 23rd inst. it has been decided to re-impose the tolls and dues from and after the 1st of January next, unless the amount which has already been expended during the five years, ended the 1st of May last by the Department of Public Works in keeping the wharf and docks in good and sufficient repair be repaid, by the town council to the Government and an engagement entered into for the carrying out of the repairs in future, I am advised by the Department of Public Works that the sum expended in repairs as above stated, amounts to $2,277.04, and I have to request that you will be good enough to inform me as soon as possible as to the whether this amount will be repaid by the Town Council, and also whether they will enter into an engagement to carry out the repairs in future.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
Wm. Smith,
Deputy Minister of Marine.

Fred W. Johnston, Esq., Reeve and chairman of the Harbor committee, Goderich.

Continuing Mr. Proudfoot thanked the ratepayers for their support of him last year, and believed that the result of the vote on Monday next would go to show that Mr. Fred W. Johnston's usefulness was past.

Mr. Robt. McLean went to accept the nomination as a candidate for the deputy reeve, and would, if elected, endeavor to serve the electors faithfully. He had been on some of the principal committees of the council last year, and had done his duty. He had also worked in the agricultural interests, and for the past twenty years had endeavored to promote the prosperity of the town.

Mr. Campbell at this stage stated that in a recent visit to Toronto he had interviewed Mr. VanHorne and had been told that the engineers would shortly go over the line between Goderich and Goderich.

Mr. Butler asked for the items of harbor claims in detail. The whole thing looked fishy, and had the appearance of being sprung on the electors for municipal effect. (Sensation.)

Mayor Seager said that the Government had not spent one cent on the harbor docks.

Mr. Johnston—I received the letter addressed to me personally, but did not know the object—

Mr. Butler—The whole thing has the appearance of being a put up job. (Applause.)

On a call being made for Mr. A. Smith, one of the candidates for the deputy reeve, the chairman read the following letter:

Goderich, Dec. 31st.

SIR,—Not feeling well tonight I thought I could not attend the meeting, I wish to say to the electors that if nominated for the deputy-revee for the town of Goderich for the ensuing year; I will consent to act and if elected I will do my best to further the interests of the town generally. It has been said by a few that I am not progressive because I opposed the waterworks when the vote was taken, I did so for several reasons. First we were not ready; we had not a proper plan laid out how or where to secure the water, and experimenting is expensive, as has been proven; further we had no proper drainage system to go in connection with the waterworks system. As you are well aware our present system is not sufficient, and must be improved upon, no matter what the cost may be. Another reason I had for opposing it was that we expected the C. P. R. to be built to our town and I was anxious that every effort should be put forth to secure that end, and have the waterworks in abeyance for the present. But the ratepayers thought differently and it was carried by an overwhelming majority. I want to say that I did not oppose the electric light or the agricultural ground building. You have these now, and the waterworks also. There is a great deal yet to be done. The pipes have to be extended to other parts beyond the present plan. The people of the present circuit have to pay, and they have a right to have a share of the benefits derived from the water system. If elected I shall use my endeavours not only to carry out the present system, but to extend it, and to further any other enterprise that I can see is for the welfare and prosperity of the town. My interest is in and close to the town, and the prosperity of the town would be my prosperity. Without saying anything further I will close by wishing you all a Happy New Year.

Yours truly,
ABRAHAM SMITH.

Mr. Colborne was again a candidate for councillor for St. Patrick's ward. He had for some time past been chairman of the finance committee, and in that position as well as in his other connections at the council board had worked conscientiously and faithfully according to his judgment. A great deal of work had fallen upon the council during the past year, and on no occasion had he shirked his share of it. If again elected he promised to faithfully perform the duties pertaining to the office.

Mr. Humber had for several years represented St. David's ward, and had done his share of the work involved to the best of his ability. The work in connection with the public improvements schemes was not yet completed, and owing to the retirement of the chairman of the waterworks committee it was necessary to have some of the old members re-elected to work with the new blood which would probably be placed on that committee. If the work was properly completed we would derive a revenue from both schemes. He had been asked to run as deputy-reeve, but had refused to do so in deference to other more aspiring members. He favored the encouragement of gristing mills, cannery factories and other industries which would tend to promote the town's growth and welfare. If again elected he would spare no effort to work for the general good.

Mr. R. P. Wilkinson extended the compliments of the season to the electors in the first part of his speech. He was a young man, but if elected would put forth his best efforts to advance the interests of the town. He would not go into a detailed criticism of the work of last year's council, as the hour was late, but hoped the electors would give him their votes and influence on Monday next.

Mr. Robt. Thompson thanked the electors for what they had done for him on the occasions when he was previously elected to the council. He agreed with Mr. Proudfoot about the location of the post-office, and the means resorted to in locating it. The lot was not worth the money, and the location was not in the interest of the town. He would not take the site for a gift on which to locate his blacksmith shop. (Loud laughter.) If elected he would work solely for the interest of the town and not for selfish motives.

Messrs. Yates and McGillicuddy, with the consent of their mover's and seconders, withdrew their names from the nomination paper.

After a vote thanks to the chairman the proceedings were brought to a close.

REMINISCENSES.

Fifty Years Ago in the Town of Goderich.

Changing the Subject—Travelling Under Adverse Circumstances—From St. Clair to Toronto in a Rough Wagon—"Little Ben's" Brother.

No. 12.

To the Editor of THE SIGNAL.

DEAR SIR,—I hope I have already said enough, and I am certain the subject—the waterworks—is of sufficient importance to enforce the most serious consideration upon every lover of our good town—"the fairest in the Dominion"—and to arouse the most apathetic amongst us to say something about it. I shall, therefore, for a time return to the stories of fifty years ago. But I must first be excused for once more expressing my utter astonishment at the apathy and indifference with which so many of our leading men look upon the extraordinary condition of the town's affairs at the present moment, and I can only say that it is something that I really cannot understand, and which I cannot explain, pleading that their social or official positions preclude them from taking an active part in our local affairs, while their mere appearance at public meetings generally would draw out crowds of other classes, and thereby secure a thorough expression of public opinion on all questions of vital importance to the welfare of the community in which they and their families reside and make their living.

There is no doubt whatever, sir, that your Orillia friend is perfectly correct in saying that it was not the mother and sisters of the Hon. E. Blake that I met in Adelaide, but more likely his grandmother and two young friends; there were three of them, however, and I now perfectly remember the clergyman named Blake, and the man in charge of the express horses. My only excuse for the mistakes, is simply that the cramping of my fingers towards the end of the long years which you and I must have made me for the moment forget the lapses of time, and the fact that the Hon. Edward Blake could have been only a child at the time of the rebellion. On my arrival, however, with a half-drowned looking horse and other myself the ladies looked somewhat pityingly at me under the impression that I was an unfortunate backwoodsman in some dire tribulation, but when I put my passport into their hands they fairly laughed outright to find that I was Captain Kydd of the first Harours aboard on special service! That I should join in the laugh at my own expense was unavoidable, although I fear it had been rather faintly, for I was in a pretty sad plight after my ride through the confounded swamp heretofore described. However, after a rest of an hour or two, a good wash, a thorough rubbing down, and part-taking of the very best fare the house could produce, I took leave of the hair halter and started with their best wishes for my welfare—for the next station, Mrs. Westlake's Hotel, where I laid up for a day notwithstanding my anxiety to get hold of some money. And here, although out of its place I shall give Mr. Hendman a first practical joke on Charlie Prior who was still agent for the Canada Company. I have heretofore stated that there was considered to be a day's march between the companies, but here Hyndman, either believing that the state of the roads would keep Prior back for another day, or perhaps unwilling to leave so good quarters (for she was lavish in her kindness to all of us) delayed moving forward until he in some way found out that Prior was close upon him and in revenge for having to move told Mrs. Westlake, in confidence, of course, to be watchful of Capt. Prior for he was dangerous amongst women when no men were present; so when poor Prior entered the hotel dressed in blanket coat red sash, and sugar-loaf cap and tassels, and in his usual blustering manner ordered the servant girls to bring him this, that and the other thing all at once, to his amazement in marched Mrs. Westlake with a large pistol in her hand, and at once converted the bully into the most civil and polite gentleman imaginable! But to give Prior his due, however, he had with him his tyranny some good points about him, for he had just two days before that sent back his man and horses so that he might share equally with his men in the hardships of the villainous roads, &c. through which they had to struggle. I shall here also give an episode of the battle of the "Wind Mill" below Prescott at which our friend Mr. Charles Girvin of Wawanosh was present and took part in a large body of the "Patriots" or rebels under a General Van Sholter, an exiled Polish marshal, having got possession of the Mill fought bravely in its defence but was taken and afterwards banged with several of his supporters; but in the attack on the mill a Lieut. Johnston was shot and his body was immediately attacked by a horde of pigs, and although his comrades shot several of the brutes they could not be kept off, and the corpse was placed on an apple tree until the fight was over. So the present generation may believe that the pig nuisance was not confined to Goderich alone in the early days of Canada. Having got a good day's rest, I started early on a ride where I arrived at night, and put up my horse in hope that I might get some way on my return journey the same day, I went direct to Col. Askin, the commandant, with my despatches which he read carefully, shrugged his shoulders, acknowledged our necessities, but could do nothing for us as he neither had entered his office, nor credit. At last he entered his office, and as he stopped a considerable time I was in hopes that something was to be done for me, and so there was, but certainly not in the way that I expected, for when he returned he handed me a packet addressed to Captain James Strachan, Military Secretary, Government House, Toronto, accompanied with an order to an express agent in town to forward me at once by the line of express wagons which had just been established.

I remonstrated all I could, spoke of what I had suffered on my way from the St. Clair, pointed to my dirty clothes which I could not then replace, even in London, I begged of him to get some one else, but all to no purpose, for I must go myself as I could best explain how matters were with our men on the frontier, and as to my clothes, I would see few better all along the line, which was really the fact, but I can yet remember that I almost cried, my vanity was so hurt at the idea of appearing before a live Governor with "Blackhawk's" mistletoe oil cap on (for on my return to Walpole Island I found that he had mine), but as there was no help for it I started in a common farm wagon with loose boards resting on the sides for seats just as our farmers return to their homes after selling a load of grain, and there the pace was an ordinary walk, for there was no trot in the whole journey. The wagon under such circumstances was really no improvement on the barebacked horse, but I arrived in Woodstock about midnight, and got into a large room of the hotel crowded with people, some in dresses intended to look military, but at least two-thirds of them were just as Col. Askin had said, not one whit better than my own, but all talking of war to the knife in some shape or other. While at supper in a corner with my driver I was attracted by the sound of a voice and an occasional laugh both of which I could almost have sworn that I had left on Walpole Island two days before, so after supper I passed through the crowd, until, again heard the voice from a rather stout little man to whom I introduced myself and asked if his name was Wilson, he burst into a laugh, and cried, Oh yes! I'm little Ben's brother Matt! He was on his way to London with a despatch from Bradford for Col. Askin, we spent a pleasant hour together, and then to bed for which we were both fully prepared. It was three days more before I arrived late at night in Toronto, having passed through Brantford, Hamilton, &c., and roosting at night just wherever it pleased my John for the time to take me.

How to make Home Happy. Learn to govern yourselves, and be gentle and patient. Guard your tongue, especially in seasons of ill-health, by prayer and trouble, and soften them by prayer and a sense of your own shortcomings and errors. Remember that valuable as is the gift of speech, silence is often more valuable. Never resort to a sharp or angry word. It is in the second word makes the quarrel. Learn to speak in a gentle tone of voice. Learn to say kind pleasant things whenever opportunity offers. Study the character of each, and sympathize with all in their troubles, however small. Do not neglect little things if they can affect the comfort of others in the smallest degree. Avoid moods and pettish fits of sulks. Learn to deny yourself, and prefer others. Beware of meddling, and never charge a bad motive if a good one is conceivable.

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 6.

Text of the Lesson Mark 1: 1-11—Commentary Verses 6-9—Golden Text, Mark 1: 2—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Twenty five years ago, writes a correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle, I made a night-own-cas in the following manner: I took a piece of muslin and shaped it in the form of a large oval.

The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. We shall now be privileged for six months to study again the earthly life, or rather the unearthly life on this earth, of our Lord Jesus Christ.

John the Baptist, the forerunner of Jesus Christ, was a man of great power and authority. He was the first to announce the coming of the Messiah.

Boucault's new dramatic school teaches the pupils how to walk. If it can teach them how to walk from Oklahoma to New York without getting either tired or hungry, it will not have been opened in vain.

A Boston boy was telling his father one day of a school-mate's attempt to sing. "And time," said the ten-year-old, in deep disgust, "why, he didn't keep any better time than a cow when a dog is running after it."

How a Bude taught Cold. A slim young man in the height of fashion was violently sneezing in a street car, when a companion remarked, "Aw, Charles, dear boy, how'd you catch that dreadful cold?" "Aw, dear fellow, left my case in the lower hall today, and in sucking the ivory handle, so a dreadful cold, it chilled me almost to death."

THE EDITOR'S TABLE

A Word or Two About New Publications That Have Come to Hand. A DICTIONARY OF AMERICAN POLITICS.

During the past few weeks we have received a large number of handsome Christmas editions and amongst them: The Montreal Star, The Toronto Globe, The London Free Press, The Woodstock Sentinel-Review, The Napane Express, The Brantford Expositor.

That one fact alone ought to condemn Mr Johnston in the eyes of all right thinking men, no matter what attempt is made by him to draw a herring across the scent.

Now that the post office has been located, the townspeople will in all likelihood have to abide by it, but the manner in which the job was put through by Mr Johnston entitles him to nothing but contempt at the hands of the electors.

THE SIGNAL does not care two straws where the post office is located, but believes it should be located by fair means, and not by trickery on the part of a public servant.

THE present electric light system is giving general satisfaction, and yet it was strenuously opposed by Mr Johnston, and a much higher priced system obtained his support. Why?

NUTS TO CRACK.

How did it come that Mr F. W. Johnston, whose chief anxiety to get into the county council is to erect a poor-house, should have moved on seconded the resolution to strike a committee to further the interests of the scheme last year?

How much of the $1,000 paid by the Government for the West-Street post office site was given to the owner of the property by Mr Johnston?

Why did the Government at Ottawa not reply to the letter sent on May 18th, 1888, by Mr Johnston, as chairman of the harbor committee until Dec. 21st, 1888?

Did Mr Johnston connive to have the harbor docks saddled with a bogus claim of $2,277.04, so that if he were elected reeve, and the demand was found to be illegal, he would claim that his influence had caused the Government to withdraw it?

How much did Mr Johnston receive from the Government for examining the titles of the other sites that were offered for the post office location, and was not that sum sufficient for his valuable services?

If Mr Johnston is anxious to live and die in Goderich why has he been seeking for years to obtain a Government appointment elsewhere—one time being an applicant for a position at L'Original and at another time, looking as far away as New Westminster, B. C. for a fat billet?

If Mr Johnston is so anxious to give his time and talents to the town, why is he now straining every nerve to have himself shelled in the post office?

If the petition for the appointment of Mr F. W. Johnston to the postmaster-ship, which has been sent to Ottawa successful—and the signatures of the Court House officials, and other prominent residents ought to carry weight in his favor—why does he want to saddle the electors with the expense and turmoil of another election in the event of his again being elected reeve?

EVERY elector who does not endorse the manner in which the post office location deal was made should vote for Mr Proudfoot. To vote for Mr Johnston makes you an accessory after the fact, and to abstain from voting is compounding the deal.

An attempt is being made to show that Mr A. Smith is not in favor of progression. The fact that Mr Smith has invested more money in endeavoring to further the prosperity of the town than any dozen of his traducers is a full answer to the contemptible statement made against him.

We are sorry to have to state that Mr. Nathaniel Whyard of this village, and father of Mr. Jas. Whyard, our telegraph operator and general merchant and manufacturer of tin, hardware, stoves, implements, etc., is very ill. As he is well advanced in years and therefore feeble, his illness may terminate in his departure of this life. We hope, however, he may be spared to live a longer term of life.

From another correspondent.

"Time rolls on, and changes come. To beauty our neighbor's home."

Such we know to have been the case, when, on Wednesday, 26th Dec., one of those events in which conspirators as well as invited guests, manifest the deepest interest and happiness, occurred. The early morning train of Wednesday found one of our genial citizens, Mr. Kiri, bound for Brussels for the purpose of relieving that vicinity of one of her fairest daughters, Miss Emma Anderson. A number of guests from Dungannon, Sealath, Brussels and vicinity, attended the ceremony, which was presided over by Rev. W. P. Campbell, of Dungannon, assisted by Rev. M. Swan, of Brussels. The bride was supported by Miss Aikin, of Grey, while the groom was manfully supported by Mr. Alton Anderson, brother of the bride. After the ceremony, which was at 1 p.m., some good advice was given to the newly wedded pair, and then all partook of a dinner most suitable to the occasion. The numerous and valuable presents show the esteem in which the bride is held in all the places represented.

DUNLOP.

From our own correspondent. The close of the year 1898 was marked by two large dancing parties in our burgh, one at Lansdowne farm on Friday night, where thirty-two dancers kept the floor with energy and zeal, to lively music; and the other where the advent of New Year was ushered in at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher by entertaining a number of our young folks and other friends. The last moments of the festal year was crowned by a leap year dance, and we think eight young fellows may yet see for breach of—

Both parties will ever be red-lettered in the memories of all who tripped the light fantastic toe at them.

Thos. Jewell, formerly a resident here, and now of St. Thomas, Dak., is home here on a stay of several months, the guest of his brother William, and will also visit among other relatives in the eastern part of this township. He speaks well of the part of the country he has located in.

The school meeting called by D. Lawton, according to instructions from the township council, to receive nominations for three trustees, was held in the temperance hall, Leeburn, on Wednesday, Dec. 26. Those who acted as the building committee were duly elected as trustees as follows: J. O. Stuart, three years, Robert Quaid two years, John Horton one year. The burden on them as a building committee has been ably performed. The entire cost of the school-house, including price of lot, fencing, amounted to $711.90. The accounts were audited by Mr. S. P. Williams for ratepayers, and Mr. John G. Clutton for building committee, and their report was satisfactory to the committee.

S. P. Williams was elected auditor for the current year.

Miss Kate Macdonald is visiting friends in Clinton.

The tea-meeting in Hackett's church on Christmas evening was a success, although the weather and roads were not good. Mr. E. W. Richards, as usual, delighted the audience with his recitations.

Short addresses were delivered by Messrs. E. A. Mackenzie and Wm. Gardner, and the speech of the evening was given by Rev. H. Irvine, of the Nile, on the "Business principles of Religion," the church choir sang well. Proceeds about $35.

A DEPARTURE IN AGRICULTURE.

A Leading Wisconsin Dairyman Opposed to Binding Grain.

Mr. Hiram Smith, one of Wisconsin's leading dairymen, has put himself on record as being opposed to the general practice of binding grain. This is a unique and startling departure from the generally accepted notions of agriculture.

With a view to finding out what farmers in other states think of this idea the editor of The Rural New Yorker has sent the main points claimed by Mr. Smith to a number of correspondents.

Numbered with replies received is one from T. B. Terry, Ohio, who comments somewhat in this wise on the points Mr. Smith makes in favor of his practice. Mr. Smith says:

"It takes three horses on a self binder to cut the same grain two horses will cut with a self rake reaper. A loss of one-third of the power of the binder is lost. No one can dispute the truth of this as a general rule. The binding apparatus undoubtedly uses up fully one-third of the power necessary to run a binder."

"Four reapers takes three times as long to dry or as fast as the binder," says Mr. Smith. Mr. Terry replies: "Taking this point by itself, I can fully agree with you. Wisconsin farmers regard oats and rye. About barley I know nothing."

Mr. Smith says: "I have double the time to unload barrels by hand in the barn than it does to unload loose grain with a horse fork." Mr. Terry: "Although what Mr. Smith says on this point is true, there are some other points in the same connection to be thought of by other farmers, such as this matter of loose grain taking more storage room. To Mr. Smith it probably makes no difference how much room is taken, as he has several large silos and puts his grain in them, thus making use of the room for two purposes in a year. This is excellent management, but many farmers have not got so far along. The last sentence perhaps tells the story—Mr. Smith is away ahead of most of us, and what is the best for him may not be the best for the rest of us for some time yet."

Mr. Smith: "There is no gain in threshing in a large way." Mr. Terry: "By this Mr. Terry remarks that in his own experience he has never been able to get along nearly as fast as on loose grain."

Another reply is from Professor G. E. Morrow, of Illinois, who makes the following statements:

"In answer to the question concerning the advisability of continuing the practice of binding grain, I may say I believe the advantages of the practice much more than counterbalance the disadvantages of this region. A self binding reaping machine costs more and requires more power than does an ordinary reaper or a moving machine. The cost of binding twice is considerable. In cutting grain not yet ripened or when damp, or when there are many weeds mixed with it, there may be some trouble in having the sheaves dry out thoroughly in the center. On the other hand, a self binder will cause less waste of grain than when the grain is threshed without binding by any system, with which I am acquainted, thus saving fully equaling the cost of the threshing."

"In practice we have not found any serious trouble in having the sheaves thoroughly dry. In case of rainy weather I would prefer having the grain in sheaves of well bound than in unbound sheaves or in piles as raked together. The sheaves are more easily loaded on wagons and put in stack or barn. In threshing the bound sheaf is decidedly preferable. We have recently threshed about 1,200 bushels of oats with the self binder. I gave some persons a trial in the work and noticed the amount of grain which an occasional unbound sheaf of the inferior scattering gave. I certainly prefer the bound sheaves, especially if the oats are to be run through a feed cutting machine."

"Almost all persons are presumptively in favor of binding grain, and I know of no branch of farm work concerning which I would have less hope of inducing farmers generally to change their practice than this."

Fastest on the Farm.

Student has a little material value at the best, but would even be hurtful if spread in the land before it had been exposed to the weather or become decomposed. Its best use is for stable bedding, although inferior for this purpose to straw, but nevertheless quite extensively used. After undergoing fermentation and heating with horse manure, it is greatly improved, but the manure will never be good as that which straw, inferior hay and leaves have been used. Where fallen leaves are abundant and there is a convenient place near the stables for storing them, it is quite a good plan to gather them up and use them for bedding in the stable. Although compared with their bulk there is not a large amount of substance in them, whatever there is makes a very superior fertilizer.

One Way of Preserving Eggs.

The following process for preserving eggs is given in a English exchange: On removing the eggs from the nest they are coated with butter in which 2 or 3 per cent of salicylic acid has been dissolved, and then they are placed individually in a box filled with fine and absolutely dry sawdust. Care must be taken that the eggs do not touch each other, and that they are completely enveloped in sawdust, and should these precautions be strictly observed they will keep fresh for several months, possibly for more than a year.

An Experience With Bartlett Pears.

Mr. J. J. Thomas reports that an orchard of Bartlett pears, in which the trees were sprayed with Paris green, shows scarcely a defective specimen of fruit, while on another tree, forty rods distant, which was not treated with the poison, nearly every pear is disfigured by the codling worm in the core, and by the curculio on the surface. The Bartlett pear, from its earliness and texture, is particularly liable to attacks of the curculio.

Items Worthy of Notice.

A number of well known agriculturists replied in The Rural New Yorker recently to the query, "Fall or spring plowing for corn?" All advocated the spring plowing of sandy soil and clover sod. A difference of opinion prevailed as to when to plow clay soil and timothy sod, but spring plowing was generally preferred.

Sulphate of iron is reported as the most popular of all remedies in France against mildew.

Remove the seeds when feeding pumpkins to cows. They do harm by acting as a strong diuretic.

A Vermont beekeeper says that a solution of soda and water is among the best of remedies to apply wherever the bee or wasp has inserted its venom through the sting.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

Selections of Good Ideas from Many Sources.

Learning makes a man fit company for himself. To rule oneself is in reality the greatest triumph.

Labour is the law; he who rejects it will find ennui his torment. Pursuit, not possession, is to us the greatest source of enjoyment.

All birds that fly have round their legs the bread of the infinite. Live as long as you may, the first twenty years is the longest half of your life.

We lose the peace of years when we hunt after the rapture of moments. Learning is a disgrace to us when it degenerates into pedantry.

The soul aids the body, and at certain moments raises it. It is only the bird which bears up its cage.

Nothing is small, in fact; and one who is subject to the profound and penetrating influence of nature knows this.

Blessed be the hand that prepares a pleasure for a child, for there is no saying when and where it may bloom forth.

Poverty in youth, when it succeeds, has this magnificent property about it, that it turns the whole will towards effort, and the whole soul towards aspiration.

The busier you are the less mischief you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

Faustidiousness is only another name for egotism; and all men who know not where to look for truth save in the narrow well of self will find their own image at the bottom, and mistake that for what they are seeking.

What precipitates one idleness and pleasure! Do you know that to do nothing is a melancholy resolution; to live in idleness on the poverty of society; to be useless, that is to be say, pernicious? This leads straight to the depth of wretchedness.

Learn from the earliest days to insure your principles against the perils of ridicule; you can no more exercise your reason if you live in the constant dread of laughter, than you can enjoy your life if you are in the constant terror of death.

The safest conservatism, which never moves lest it fall, labor, it is the dry rot in the church, and my heart goes out to the man who has never tolerated it in his calculations. Safe conservatism would have left the Apostles in Palestine.

Broken Down.

"After suffering with dyspepsia, kidney disease, loss of appetite and pain in the head until discouraged, I heard of B. B. B., took two bottles and am now happy to say I feel as well as ever." Mrs Rufus E. Marry, New Albany, N.S.

The Bad Habit of Veiling the Face.

There is one freak of fashion deserving of suppression, although it has come into considerable favor. That is the revival of thick and ample veils. These are not only made to cover the face, but they are swathed across the back of the head and around the neck in an inartistic manner. Besides, they suggest that the wearer has a face that will not stand bright daylight exposure. A bit of anecdote is appropriate. A certain favorite actress is forty years old and over. She makes up fairly for "girlish roles on the stage, and her famous prattle of maturity" enables her to enact the frivolous girl admirably. But at close sight in the cold light of day she shows her age. A friend met her in Broadway, and her face was enveloped with a veil in the new style.

"Well, dear," said the possibly jealous actress, "what makes you hide yourself behind a veil in that manner?" "O, that is after the manner of She, the miraculous heroine of Rider Haggard's story."

"And do you impersonate She before her second exposure to the pillar of fire," said the placid but vicious questioner. "or afterward?"

Something like that question is always raised by a thick veil. Is the concealed face young and beautiful, like that of the wondrously preserved She, or too old for the sightlines, like that creature's countenance after the wrinkles of a thousand years had suddenly appeared?—New York Letter.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully, Dr. T. A. SLOCUM, 37 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

A story is told of an old clergyman who had the most unbounded faith in Watts' hymn book. He was fond of saying that he could never open to any page without finding an appropriate hymn. A mischievous son thought it would be a good joke to test his father's faith. So he took an old song and pasted it on one of the pages of the book, over a hymn so nicely that it could not be detected. At church on Sabbath morning the minister happened to open on that very page and commenced to read, "Old Grimes is Dead." There was a sensation in the audience. He looked at the choir and they looked at him, but such was his faith in Watts' hymn book that he undertook it again, commencing with the same line. There was another sensation in the audience. Looking at it again, and then at the choir, said he: "Brethren, it is here in the regular order in Watts' hymn book and we will sing it anyhow."

TEMPERANCE WORK.

Items from All Over Concerning the Cause.

Let us suppress the systematic agency for the temptation and ruin of men. Shielded behind the ramparts of law and custom, the traffic is proof against all these weapons which we have found effectual in other directions. The strong arm of the law alone can reach it. We must stop this authorized trade in destructive drinks.

One of the first literary men in the United States said to a temperance lecturer, "There is one thing which I wish you to do everywhere; entreat every mother never to give a drop of strong drink to a child. I have had to look for my life all my days to keep from giving a drunkard, because I was fed with spirits when a child. I thus acquired an appetite for it. My brother, poor fellow, died a drunkard."

A young man was recently found in the Mersey, drowned. On a paper in his vest pocket was written: "A wasted life. Do not ask anything about me; drink was the cause. Let me die; let me rest." Within a week the coroner of Liverpool received over 200 letters from fathers and mothers all over England asking for a description of that young man. How suggestive is this fact! What a story it tells of homes desolated by strong drink!

A young man in A'manasco County, North Carolina, who had been on a drunken debauch for some days, went home and turned his horse in his father's corral. His father remonstrated with him, and told him to get the horse and feed him at the barn. The young man became incensed, went into the house, procured his shot-gun, and shot his father through the heart, killing him instantly. No wonder so many people are wanting to drive the grapes out of the land!

He had been in the habit of playing truant from school, and he had been moderately lucky in getting out of the scrape. But he was caught one day and brought before the teacher.

Mr. Bright used to be fond of salmon-fishing in the Highlands. One evening he and his party were returning to their inn, after a day of poor sport to all except himself—and he had a brace of fine salmon. By the roadside, on a heap of stones, they passed a wretched-looking man weeping, with his hands on his face, and all in rags. In answer to Mr. Bright's inquiry, he told a piteous tale of starvation at home, of a sick child and five hungry children. The Tribune out his hand in his pocket, but unobscuredly had no change. "Never mind, take that," he said, offering a salmon. "It will at least make a good dinner for you once." The sequel was as follows.—After washing his hands Mr. Bright was coming down to dinner when a girl happened to be crossing to the larder with a fine fish. "That is my salmon," said Mr. Bright. "I know him, for he was hooked on the outside. Where did you get it?" "Oh, from Sandy," said the simple Scotch lassie, and he is in the tap-room." Mr. Bright, looking rather grim and stern, forced his way into the tap-room, where his lachrymose friend sat with a number of cronies taking his "nip," and in full glow recounting his adventure. Nor was he a bit abashed at the stern face of the People's Tribune, but had begun a long explanatory statement, when the glance of scorn which had electrified Parliaments and audiences swept over him. Without a word Mr. Bright returned to his place. Afterward he was not so lavish with his fish.

A SEND OFF TO GODERICH.—The following associated press despatch appeared in the dailies on Tuesday last: GODERICH, Ont., Jan. 1.—The lighting of the town of Goderich by electricity is now a positive fact, and yesterday the contractors of the electric manufacturing company completed their contract with the town, and the new year was ushered in with a blaze of fifty electric lights.

Amid the ringing of bells and the firing of guns the county town of Huron tonight is a blaze of light, illuminating the town and surrounding country for miles, owing to its high elevation. Visitors from Detroit, Chicago and elsewhere were delighted with the steadiness and uniformity of the light, and claim that it surpasses any other light in existence. The waterworks system is fast approaching completion and will be finally tested in a few days, when it is expected Goderich will be supplied with a supply of pure water suitable for all purposes drawn from a depth of nearly 250 feet below the level of the town by a series of artesian wells.

With the prospective completion of the Canadian Pacific railway system to this port, Goderich has now taken a step upward, and her citizens are hopeful of a prosperous future.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Martin of Detroit, well-known former residents of Goderich, accompanied by two of their children were in town for a few days this week, visiting relatives and acquaintances. They received a warm welcome from one and all.

The Masonic banquet on Thursday evening last week was largely attended, and was an unqualified success. We regret that pressure of business, owing to the holiday rush, hindered the attendance from being present in response to the invitation kindly forwarded us by the society.

The presentation of the cantata "Christmas Gifts," two evenings last week was not patronized so largely as it deserved to be. Prof. Cooke went to much trouble and expense to place the piece before the public, and merited better patronage than he received.

Mrs. Currie, who has been on a two months' visit here, will accompany him back.

A sermon to the scholars will be preached by the pastor Sunday morning, and to parents and teachers in the evening. On Monday evening, at 7:30, Mr. Sallows' dissolving views will be presented, and will include a number of interesting local views prepared especially for this entertainment. An interesting feature of the evening will be the singing by the scholars, with the music thrown upon 144 square feet of canvass. We predict a well-filled church next Monday night, as the admission has been placed at the small sum of 15 cents.

High School Entrance Examinations. The examinations for this Inspectorate were held at Goderich, Exeter and Duncannon on Dec. 18th, 20th and 21st, 1888. The papers set for this examination were very fair. They required a good general knowledge and no difficulty in passing. The maximum number of marks was 725, number necessary to pass 367.

Many of those who failed had from 40 to 100 marks deducted from the work done on account of careless writing, mistakes in spelling and want of neatness in putting down their work. The examiners hope that in future the teachers will give special attention to these important things—writing, spelling and neatness. We have no true education when these are wanting. The following have been provisionally passed by the local examiners.
