CHAPTER III.

Gaunt's self-restraint seemed to fall him at this point, and he broke in with scarcely repressed passion: "I discovered that the woman I had married was an adventuress—a woman who—"

"Pardon!" said Morgan Thorpe, softly, sweetly. "Remember I am her brother, and spare me! Do not let us indulge in recriminations; it is childish, useless. Let us say that you discovered that there was such incompatibility of temper that you found it impossible to live with her. Shall we put it in that way?"

Lord Gaunt made no response, and the soft and musical voice went on.

"One day you left your wife, your bride—my dear fellow, how could you be so heartless?—with the intimation that you did not intend to return. She was heart-broken, desolate! Not even the addendum to your letter which informed her that a liberal allowance would be made to her while she refrained from molesting you, consoled her. Alas, she loved you!"

Lord Gaunt moved slightly, and a grim smile played upon his lips for a moment, to be followed by the set sternness which had dominated his expression hitherto.

"She loved you. She charged me with the task of following and finding you, I, as her devoted brother, accepted that task. My dear Barnard, these Turkish cigarettes of yours are dry—very dry."

Lord Gaunt went to the sideboard and got out a spirit-case and a siphon, and placed them on the table.

"Will you not join me?" asked Thorpe. "No! Well, I am doing all the talking, and talking is thirsty work."

He stepped the beverage with slow, exasperating slowness, and Gaunt watched him with a fierce, burning impatience. The man's presence—his voice, were an absolute torture.

"I commenced my search," said Morgan Thorpe. "I try, first, the south of France. It is the winter, you will remember; but nowhere do I find a handsome man by the name of Barnard—you are devilish good-looking, you know, Barnard!—a hundred pardons, Lord Gaunt—and then I come to

"I Wonder Would It Help Me?"

THIS question has been so answered by many thousands of women who have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Sleeplessness, irritability, nervousness, gloomy forebodings of the future, depression and discouragement—these are some of the symptoms which tell of exhausted nerves.

In order to avoid nervous prostration or some form of paralysis it is well to get the building up process established at once by use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

London. As well look for a needle in a bundle of hay as look for a man in this place. I like London; I love it, excepting when I am on the hunt for a man. Then it is a beastly maze. At last, one day, to be particular—we must speak by the card, as Hamlet says—what a lot of Hamlets I have seen—I happen actually to see you—you yourself—going into this very house."

He laughed softly and blew the smoke from his cigarette in a series of rings, and watched them with lazy interest and amusement as they floated to the ceiling.

"I rang the bell and knocked, as directed, and inquired for 'Mr. Barnard.' No one knew the name. Then I watched again, and inquired again, and described you. And 'I found that, instead of a plain, common 'Mr. Barnard,' my sister—my dearly beloved sister, for whom I would lay down my life, had married no less a personage than my Lord Gaunt!"

Gaunt took up a cigar from the mantel-shelf and lighted it; but after a moment he threw it among the ferns in the grate, and resumed his old attitude.

Morgan Thorpe turned on his side into a more comfortable position.

"Yes; I found that my dear sister had married no less a personage than Lord Gaunt—Baron of the United Kingdom, Earl Gaunt of Ireland, Viscount Bascardine of Scotland, Lord-Lieutenant of Downshire."

Gaunt moved his hand spasmodically; but the soft, musical voice went on with the even flow of a river.

"With residences in Devonshire and Scotland, a house in Park Lane and an Italian palace on the banks of the Arno."

Gaunt turned from the fern-filled fire-place, and strode across the room, then came back to his old place and attitude; and Morgan Thorpe still watched him as the cat watches the mouse when it ventures a despairing run.

"This was the man who had married my sister, and heartlessly abandoned her. Lord Gaunt, baron, Scotch earl, lord-lieutenant. In a word, a nobleman of the highest rank, and worth—shall we say a million of money?"

Gaunt took up a cigar again, and lighted it with the stolidism of desperation.

"Well," he said, grimly, "having made your discovery, what do you propose to do?"

Morgan Thorpe leaned back and closed his eyes.

"An eminently practical question," he murmured. "It is the question I have been asking myself ever since I have been here, my dear Barnard—pardon. Lord Gaunt! Two courses are open to me, as a famous statesman might say. I might go to my sister—the mourning bride, so to speak—and acquaint her with my discovery."

Whereupon she would, of course, hasten to England and claim her husband. Ah, my dear Barnard—pardon, Gaunt—you have no conception of the extent of the love our dear Laura bears for you. She would claim her husband and insist upon taking her place in the world of rank and fashion which, as you know, she would adorn so conspicuously. He smiled up mockingly at the white, strained face. "And I have a very strong conviction that she would make things hum, as our constans on the other side say."

He closed his eyes and smiled as if at some mental picture. "The other course, as the famous statesman would say, which presented itself to me, was one of caution and—reserve. Nothing is more disagreeable than to live with a person who is completely uncongenial, and I felt that I should be doing you a signal service if I were to conceal your identity and whereabouts from our dear Laura. In other words, my friend, I felt that I should be proving the warm affection I cherish for you if I were to say nothing about my discovery."

Gaunt raised his head.

"You would betray her trust in you?" he said.

Morgan Thorpe smiled and shrugged his shoulders—shrugged them so hard that he displaced the cushions and had to rearrange them before replying.

"As to that, what is confidence and what is betraying it? Ethical questions both, my dear Gaunt."

Gaunt strode across the room again.

"Where is she?" he asked, hoarsely.

"At Vevey," replied Morgan Thorpe. "A most charming place, but dull—devilish dull. She is there amusing herself as best she can, and awaiting the result of my search. I have only to wire: 'Found him. Come to London; the Metropole,' and she will be here in less than thirty-six hours."

Gaunt sunk into a chair, then stood up again, as if reluctant to show any sign of weariness.

"On the other hand," continued Morgan Thorpe, "I have only to write: 'Can not find him; believe he has left the country,' and she will remain at that God-forsaken hole—or go to Paris."

Gaunt looked at him steadily.

"If she came, she would not find me here," he said. "I shall start for Africa in a few hours' time."

Morgan Thorpe shrugged his shoulders and laughed softly.

"My dear Lord Gaunt, she would not care whether she found you or not, whether you were here or bakins on Africa's burning sands. She would be quite happy setting up her claim to be my Lady Gaunt, Baroness of Gaunt, Countess of Gaunt of Ireland, or Viscountess Bascardine of Scotland. That would be quite enough amusement for her."

Gaunt went to a book-case and started at a line of books without seeing them. Then he came back to the fireplace.

"You mean to blackmail me," he said, with an awful calmness. "How much do you want? Say as quickly and shortly as you can—for my temper is rough and I can scarcely hold myself in hand."

"My dear—Barnard!" jeered the other.

Lord Gaunt sprung across the room and seized him by the throat, and the soft, mocking laughter ceased with grotesque suddenness.

"How much, you devil?" he said between his teeth. "You and she have me in your power; I know it. Name your price!"

Then, ashamed of himself, he flung the man from him and strode away, his own face working, his lips livid, as if it had been himself who had been half choked.

Morgan Thorpe, struggling for breath, felt his throat tenderly.

"What—what a savage you are!" he said, huskily. "No wonder my poor sister—"

"Say no more!" broke in Gaunt, with an ominous gesture. "Nothing will induce me to acknowledge your sister as my wife, and you know it. Name your price—the price of your silence!"

Morgan Thorpe stood up, and with rather a shaky hand took a fresh drink.

"You mean my price for concealing your identity?" he said.

"For holding your tongue—yes," he said.

"Well," drawled Thorpe, "suppose we say a couple of thousand pounds?"

Gaunt looked at him with loathing eyes for a moment; then he went to his writing-table, unlocked a drawer, and took out a check-book. He filled in the check, laid it on the table, and pointed to it.

"That is for a thousand pounds," he said. "I will pay you that every year so long as I am unmolested by—"

"By your wife, Lady Gaunt," said Morgan Thorpe. "I agree. Leave the matter to me, my dear Barnard—tush! how the old name clings! I'll undertake to keep her quiet. Now, shall we dine together—"

"For God's sake, go!" he said, very quietly, with the quietude of a man goaded almost beyond the point of endurance. "Go before I do you any harm!"

Morgan Thorpe looked at the white face with its veins standing out, at the stalwart, muscular figure with the strength of a Hercules, and laughed.

"My dear fellow, I only wanted to be friendly. But if you will not—Well! So long!"

He put his hat on with careful precision, adjusted his neck-tie in the Venetian mirror beside the door, and then held out his hand.

Gaunt looked at the hand, then raised his smoldering eyes to the mocking blue one, and something in the lambent fire of the eyes of the man he had been torturing, prompted Morgan Thorpe to make his exit without an attempt at another turn of the rack.

"So long, dear boy!" he murmured, and passed out.

Princess Mary was partially responsible for a hoax played upon a number of visitors to a bazaar recently in aid of the funds of Crathie Church. Outside the booth was a notice, "Swimming Match Within. Admission, 3d." Princess Mary stationed herself at the entrance to the booth and collected the threepences. The "swimming match" was an ordinary wooden vesta blown hither and thither in a tub of water by Captain Ramsay and the Rev. John Straton. The exit from the booth led into another in charge of Prince George who also demanded threepence for his entertainment. This consisted of the visitors being allowed to sit on a chair belonging to the Queen which played a tune when sat upon.

PRINCE AT BERMU DA.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Oct. 1. The Prince of Wales, homebound from Australia on the battle cruiser Renown, arrived here to-day from Antigua for three days visit. He was given an enthusiastic welcome. During his stay the Prince will take part in the concluding ceremonies of Bermuda's Tercentary which is linked with the Jamestown, Va., Tercentary and those of the sailing of the Pilgrims for America. The celebration in honor of the Prince, who is concluding his long tour of the British Empire and the United States, took on an international aspect with his presence here for the occasion of Rear Admiral Charles P. Hughes on board the United States battleship Kansas, and that of a representative of the Bahamas, Harcourt Malcolm, speaker of the Bahamian House of Assembly. Virtually everyone of Bermuda's 20,000 inhabitants was astir early to-day. Early this morning the Renown, bearing the Prince and his party arrived off the northern end of the island, accompanied by the cruiser Calcutta. At light anchor nearby, were the Kansas dressed in holiday attire, the British cruiser Calliope and the survey ship Mutine, both likewise decked for the occasion. As the Renown dropped anchor the Kansas boomed forth a salvo of twenty-one guns and her crew fired the rails. Immediately the Renown was boarded by the Bermudian Governor, Sir Jas. Wildlocks and Rear Admiral Allan A. Everett commanding the North American and West Indies Station, who formally welcomed the Prince to the island. The party then boarded the Calcutta, which is of suitable draft to permit navigating the shallow Channels and proceeded to Hamilton, the colony's capital fifteen miles away. On the trip the royal salute was fired from the Calcutta as she passed the ancient capital of St. George's, and the Prince was likewise honored with a royal salute from the batteries ashore.

STRIKE POSTPONED.

LONDON, Oct. 1. The coal strike notices, which were effective to-morrow, have been postponed for another fortnight, it was announced this afternoon. This action resulted from a conference between Premier Lloyd George and representatives of the miners and owners.

WRANGLER CUTS UP SOVIETS.

PARIS, Oct. 1. Forces of General Wrangel have annihilated a group of Russian Soviet troops in the region of Alexandrovsk, according to an official statement of Thursday in fighting in South Russia, received here to-day. Several armoured trains and large quantities of war material and rolling stock were captured by Wrangel forces, the statement says.

WILL VISIT WABANA.

MONTREAL, Oct. 1. President R. M. Wolvin, of the Dominion Steel Corporation, left tonight for the East on an inspection trip, which will include visits to the Sydney Steel plant, the Cape Breton coal district, and the Company's ore mines at Wabana. Mr. Wolvin's connection with the resumption of export trade in iron ore, which during the period of the war and since the armistice was reduced to negligible proportions. The President stated that it was hoped that the advent of 1921 would see a profitable trade in ore again, established in new overseas connections formed through the British Empire, the steel corporation being an important factor in the market for ore.

CANADA'S NAVY.

OTTAWA, Oct. 1. Canada's Navy, consisting of the cruiser Aurora and destroyers Patriot and Patricia, will be commissioned on November 1st and will leave England for Canada shortly after that date. Capt. H. G. H. Adams will command the Aurora. The two destroyers are to be under the command of Lieutenants C. F. Beard and C. C.

was shot and the head constable gravely wounded and another constable less seriously wounded. Unconfirmed reports say several houses have been burned in reprisal for the attack.

ANOTHER APPEAL.

LONDON, Oct. 1. Mary MacSweeney to-day sent letters to the Archbishops of Westminster and Canterbury, in which she expressed the belief that her brother, Mayor MasSweeney, was being "supernaturally sustained in his struggle," and asked them to use their influence to secure his release.

PONZI IN JAIL.

BOSTON, Oct. 1. The Federal Grand Jury to-day indicted Charles Ponzi, promoter of the scheme by which millions of dollars were obtained from investors on promises to pay 50 per cent. profits, for using the mail in a scheme to defraud. The indictments, of which there were two of forty-three counts each, were the longest held here in years. Ponzi is now a Federal prisoner at East Cambridge jail and is under indictment also by State courts for larceny.

LOOKING HOPEFUL.

LONDON, Oct. 1. The general belief prevails to-night that a strike of the coal miners will be avoided as a result of a decision taken to-day to call for a re-ballot of the miners on the question of ceasing work. A re-ballot is expected to result in an acceptance by the men of an offer by the owners of an advance in wages of two shillings a shift when the output of coal reaches 248,000,000 tons a year. This was the rate of the output for the first three months of the present year.

The Kane expects to reach Riga to-morrow morning, the message said. The United States torpedo boat destroyer Brooks sent a wireless dispatch to the Kane offering assistance, but the Kane replied, "Thanks, need no assistance."

THE "BLACK AND TANS."

DUBLIN, Oct. 1. Confirmation has been received here that reprisals followed the shooting from ambush yesterday of District Inspector Brady, near Tubbercurry, County Sligo, who was killed, and of two constables who were wounded. Brady, when an officer at the front in the late war, was chosen by Field Marshal Haig to carry dispatches to Windsor Castle to the King. After the shooting four lorries containing "Black and Tans" entered Tubbercurry, fired their rifles, threw bombs and set fire to houses destroying six important business buildings and two creameries. Inspector Brady was the son of the widely known former member of parliament, J. P. Brady, and had a noble war record.

A Gruesome Story.

A gruesome story of love and crime has just been brought to light at Hornu, near Mons, in Belgium, where three persons are to be brought to trial. Just a fortnight before the Armistice, a miner named Noel Samain, considerably over 60 years of age, was observed by a neighbor digging a hole in his garden at dead of night. From his window the neighbor called out to Samain, asking what he was doing, to which Samain replied that he was going to bury some brass, which the Germans were at that time requisitioning. Satisfied with this explanation, the neighbor retired to bed. Next morning, as subsequent inquiry has just revealed, Samain called on the father of his wife and asked whether he knew where she was. On the father replying in the negative, Samain said he supposed she had gone off with some German soldier, adding that she had taken some 3000 francs of his money. His "supposition" seemed feasible, for Samain's wife was not seen again. Her disappearance was the cause of much comment, for she had the reputation of being a virtuous, hard working woman, whereas her husband was known to be on intimate terms with a 17-year-old girl named Lucia Gregoire. One day Samain, who, as before, continued to live in the same house as his son, aged 40, announced that his wife had written home stating that she was in Germany.

All these strange circumstances created such a stir that at length the authorities started an inquiry, which, however, had to be held up owing to events following upon the Armistice. Then, in the spring of last year, Samain, his son, and the girl Gregoire left the country, stating that they were going to Canada. Meanwhile the inquiry had led to the questioning of the neighbor who had watched Samain digging in the garden at dead of night. Guided by this man, the police searched the garden, and excavated the ground at the spot indicated by the neighbor. There the remains of Samain's wife were discovered, death having evidently been caused by strangulation, with a linen cloth, which was still tightly bound about her neck. On this accumulation of evidence, a warrant was issued against the trio on a charge of being implicated in the wife's death.—Ex.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about 25% Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Marking the Doom of High Prices.

Kearney says:

I care not for those who clamor that I can't do it. I have done it. To-day brings the proof. I have dared to take the situation by the forelock, marching back to '14 with big American manufacturers. Whether prices will lower sufficiently to make my scheme come true—whether the drop will be permanent—these are the risks I take. I am depending upon my gains in English Exchange to see me through. I am sharing that exchange with you. I am the first to do it. Let those follow who will. Kearney is first.

MILAN, Oct. 1.
Leaders of the Confederation of Labor strongly denounce Maximalists and Anarchists, who have been fomenting disorder to prevent workmen from enjoying the advantages gained on the strike settlement.

SERIES OF POLISH VICTORIES.
WARSAW, Oct. 1.
Defeat of the Russians on the Polish Northern front seems virtually complete. Soviet troops are reported fleeing eastward in disorder in an effort to avoid being surrounded by the closely pursuing Poles. A Polish victory eliminates any chance of Trotsky launching his meditated fall offensive, experts say. Advice state that one Russian division murdered all Commissioners who urged resistance before surrendering to Poles. The commander of the third Bolshevik army committed suicide when he realized his command was completely smashed.

POLISH MILITARY SUCCESSES.
RIGA, Oct. 1.
Military news from Russian, Polish, and Lithuanian fighting fronts is entirely overshadowing the Peace Conferences. Messages received by Polish delegation from the Grodno-Lida sector say that virtually all of the fourth Bolshevik army has been captured in an encircling movement by the Poles, and all the staff was taken, except the commanding Gen. and Chief of Staff. Prisoners to the number of 26,650 were made, while 425 machine guns, 166 light field guns and 26 heavy field guns were captured. Thursday's reports showed the Poles had advanced northward from Lida and recorded the occupation of Baranvitch and announced that the capture of Vilna as expected at any moment.

GRIFFITHS ACCUSES GOVERNMENT.
DUBLIN, Oct. 1.
Sensational charges that the government itself was responsible for the reprisals in Ireland, and that a certain number of Sinn Fein leaders were marked for assassination, were made to-day by Arthur Griffiths, founder of the Sinn Fein organization, who said he was first on the list of intended victims. Mr. Griffiths, to support his statements, exhibited to the group of British, United States and Continental newspapermen, to whom he made a long statement preferring the charges, alleged official documents secured by Sinn Fein agents. Among these papers was an official permit, alleged to have been signed by General Sir Neville Mac-

This attack was led by Prince Joachim, a cousin of former Emperor William.

"The tie that earth has broken
And severed two years ago,
Fond memories of you my darling
Will eternal peace bestow;
You suffered much, you murmured not,
We watched you day by day,
Until at last with broken hearts
We saw you pass away.
Softly at night, the stars are shining
On a lonely, silent grave,
Where thou lie my dearest Phoebe
Whom we loved but could not save;
But your chair stands alone and empty
In the home you loved so well,
And how much we miss you darling
Only God alone can tell.
You died in life's fair summer,
God knoweth what is best;
May the Sacred Heart of Jesus
Grant your soul eternal rest."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A LETTER FROM FIFTY TO TWENTY.

RUTH CAMERON

Age may have one side, but assuredly you have the other. There is nothing more certain than that both are right—except, perhaps, that both are wrong. Let them agree to differ; for who knows but what agreeing to differ may be a form of agreement rather than a form of difference.

Some days ago I told you about a letter that a little friend says she is going to write. It is to be addressed to herself at 50 and put away to be opened then,—if ever.

The Process Reversed.

Another letter friend writes to say that she thinks this a jolly idea since it is so hard for middle age to get youth's viewpoint, but she does wish the process could be reversed and that oneself at 50 could write a letter to oneself at 20.

It would be a wonderful help, wouldn't it?

That is, if youth would believe itself any more than it will believe other messages from the land of brown-upness.

What would the self of 50 write to the self of 20, I wonder?

Well, one thing would be a warning that mother and father aren't quite so hopeless conservatives as they appear to be; that, strange as it may seem, they were right about some things, after all.

Another would be along the same line—a warning to be more appreciative and thoughtful.

"Now I Know How Mother Felt."

I do not know how many times I have said to myself as the years flew by, "Now I know how mother felt about this or that. Why wasn't I more considerate, why wasn't I more careful?"

One absurd little instance is this. I never open anything packed in excess without remembering how often used to beg, "Oh, please take down cellar before you open it, it is so hard to get it off the carpet." And how we used to say, "Oh, we can't get it around," and then in our eagerness to get at the contents, scatter just enough of that maddening stuff about to spoil the looks of a clean room.

Another example of the way the years have made things plain to me, is my realization of what mother meant by saying habits of disorder made as much work and as many steps as the work of running the house itself. I used to think that couldn't be true. I know better now.

Do You Know What "Wit's End" Means?

Again mother used, to frequently complain about the eternal weariness of thinking what to have to eat. That didn't seem like so terrible a task to me so long as she had someone to prepare and cook it for her. I used to think it queer when mother said, "I'm at my wit's end to know what to have for dessert to-morrow." I know what "wit's end" means now.

These are just little examples to instance how, as I pass through the years from 20 to 50 (I refuse firmly to say how far on the journey I have gone), I am collecting warnings and illuminations which "50" might well write in that letter to "20" if it could. Yours, of course, are somewhat different, but I fancy they follow similar lines.

Of course "20" might not heed the letter any more than "50" would heed the letter from "20." Youth and age must always differ in its point of view, as Stevenson says. But at least youth has more excuse—for whereas age has known and has forgotten, youth has never known. That is why I have less sympathy for an unsympathetic older person than I have for a headstrong younger person.

Vice-Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, who is crossing the Atlantic on his way to his new post as Governor-General of New Zealand, shortly will pass through the Panama Canal. The hero of Jutland became partial to American automobiles during his visit to the United States last winter, and he is taking a widely known American car with him to the other side of the world. Viscount Jellicoe has written a second war book, which probably will appear soon in an American edition. It is entitled "The Crisis at the Admiralty in 1917," and deals with events in which he himself was the storm centre.

The World's Coal Supply

In view of Germany's reluctant undertaking to deliver 2,800,000 tons of coal monthly, it is interesting to consider just how the chief coal-producing countries compare in Europe. The following are approximate figures:

Great Britain, 5,400 square miles; France, 984 square miles; Belgium, 510 square miles; making a total for the Allies of 6,894 square miles. Prussia, 960 square miles; Westphalia, 380 square miles; Bohemia, 400 square miles; Saxony, 30 square miles; making a total for Germany of 1,770 square miles. Spain, 200 square miles; Russia, 100 square miles.

An estimated quantity of the actual coal in tons gives Belgium, 36,000,000,000 tons; France, 59,000,000,000; Germany, 79,000,000,000; Great Britain, 190,000,000,000 tons.

The United States, with an area of 2,900,000 square miles of coal fields, must hold the amazing total of 4,000,000,000,000 tons.

Even though we were, before the war, raising more than four times the quantity of coal that is raised in any other country, we have still a sufficient quantity to meet our demands for another hundred years.

THE MORTGAGE.

WIT-MACON

I had a mortgage, years ago, on my pretentious home; and Worry, and its brother Woe, were camped upon my dome. I couldn't keep a smile on straight but oftentimes I wept: I tasted Mortgage when I ate, and dreamed it when I slept. It spoiled for me the Sabbath day, when I sat in my pew; the choir, in singing, seemed to say, "When mortgages are due." It cast its shadow on my door, and like a raven croaked; it took the zest from every chore, and spoiled the weed I smoked. They took away my House of Pride, by means of writ and sitch; and since then it's been occupied by one who's idly rich. And he is welcome to it all, stone steps and tufted floor, he's welcome to the stately hall and varnished ceiling door. I have a cabin of my own in which I chirp all day, and do not owe a single bone to any human jay. No mortgage flaps against the pane when winds are blowing keen; no mortgage makes me pause again when I'd buy gasoline. Oh, better in a culvert dwell, and owe no man a red, than vainly try to be a swell, with mortgage overhead.

FELLOWSHIP.

The earth is warmed by the kindly sun. But lives are warmed by the deeds of men. And their words of praise when our best we've done. And the parting wish that we'll meet again. The clouds may blanket the sky with gray. And the earth grow chill as the rain descends. But he shall keep smiling along his way. Whose heart is warmed by the love of friends.

It's the glad "hello" and the handclasp true. The smile of joy on a friendly face. That means contentment for me and you. And makes of the earth a happy place.

It isn't the gold that we strive to earn. Nor the fame we struggle so long to win. For these are glories we'd quickly spurn. If ever a kind heart took us in.

The poorest man on this earth is he Who has bartered his friendships for selfish gain. Who has sought advantage by trickery. And seeks for a welcoming smile in vain.

For the earth is warmed by the kindly sun. But lives are warmed by a higher plan. And he shall be glad when his work is done. Who has kept the faith with his fellow man.

Time to Abolish Tag Days.

Tag days have long since lost their novelty, but none of their irritation. Permission to have a tag day is a license to beg on the street. Tag days have been overworked to such an extent that they have ceased to have any significance. That very considerable sums of money have been collected in this way for worthy objects does not affect the argument that it is a pernicious system of raising funds. During the war almost anything was excusable in providing revenue for patriotic schemes. Now that the war is over it is time to cut out wartime expedients. — Toronto Telegram.

Departed Greatness.

Although Germany hasn't had much experience as a republic, there is already a national query as to what shall be done with the ex-Presidents. Nookie is urging a suitable pension, but as the value of the German coinage is changing rapidly it is hard to establish a standard. President Ebert's salary sounds impressive enough, but at the rate the German mark is held in exchange his pay means about $1,500 a year. He hasn't saved anything up, and his old job as harness maker is gone, and so when he stops Presiding they may have to take him out to the poor farm or pasture him in some quiet place where they have a pinochle game every afternoon. It seems funny that a country that hardly knows what to do with its ex-Kaisers should also be concerned with the welfare of its retired Presidents.—Los Angeles Times.

The Tragedy of the West Coast.

The people of Burnt Islands were quick to resent the utterances of the Acting Premier and prompt in repudiating his arrogance and self-esteem. The quality of lingual pabulum served out to them in his message was taken at its face value only, and the opening sentences of their answer were clear cut and concise, showing the Minister of Marine and Fisheries his exact value in the eyes of the voters. "Now," says the beginning of the Burnt Islands reply, "since your message shows utter ignorance of this coast, its people and conditions, we shall proceed to enlighten you." Straight talk this, and of a quality not usually received by the Fisheries Minister. There is nothing involved in the phraseology of the answer of James Caines, George Leamon, and Matthew Smurage, but in straight-from-the-shoulder expressions they show the honorable minister that a fair valuation has been set upon his knowledge of West Coast conditions generally, and accordingly they proceed to enlighten him. The spirit of the people of Burnt Islands could not be broken by Mr. Coaker, neither could their sturdy independence be undermined or their aroused feelings cajoled by flattery or subdued by flappodoodle. The arguments set forth in the final message were unanswerable and the statement of facts incontrovertible. The blandishments and rely-on-me advice of the Minister of Fisheries were not acceptable to the men of Burnt Islands, and in unmistakable language they told him so. The regulations hit them hard, how hard their first message tells. "Cut off from the means of existence." That sentence in itself is pregnant with meaning and proves conclusively that the boasted Fish Regulations, that were to accomplish so much good for the fishermen, had the very opposite effect. "Your regulations," continues the memorial, "have completely crippled our industry and thrown us on our backs." Is further testimony needed of the injustice of these same regulations?

Proceeding with their enlightenment and education of the Acting Premier, the men of Burnt Islands throw back his allegations and insinuations in these words:

"In the first place we have no wire pullers or politicians, so far as we are aware, within miles of us. Further we are not talking, and will not talk politics, personalities or what you are pleased to call claptrap, and we respectfully insist that you refrain from getting down to these things."

The dodge was seen through at once. Its transparency was obvious and Burnt Islands had no hesitation in showing that it could not be bluffed. Get down to facts, said the message; avoid politics, personalities and claptrap and talk business. We want to know just where we stand and we refuse to discuss side issues with you. Explain the benefit of your regulations and tell us, who have suffered by them, how we are going to pull through the winter that is ahead. But no response was forthcoming. Burnt Islands verbiage was displeasing, and as the Acting Premier could not explain beyond the stereotyped rely-on-me advice, he made no reply whatever to the message of August 27, or at least none that has been published. Referring further to local conditions, the reply goes on to say:

"Firms carrying us through must have all they can do to finance our industry when they are untrammelled and unrestricted. What then must be their condition when HELD UP, GAGGED and BLED by rules called Fishery Regulations? To our minds (and we are no politicians or wirepullers) they are unable to help themselves . . . and from present indications we shall be unable to get the financial assistance we formerly received. We are unable to finance ourselves, so what are we to do? We grow no vegetables, we raise no cattle in this vicinity. NOW is the time to consider these things, not during the winter when in force of circumstances through actual starvation. We submit that your administration will have to investigate and find out if they are responsible for hastening and aggravating these conditions, and whether guilty (as it appears to us they are) or not guilty, the burden of finding some way out of the difficulty devolves upon them. NOW WE WANT YOU TO GET BUSY and suggest something . . . We won't talk politics or personalities, and we wish to show you that there can be some intelligence, even among fishermen."

Surely that closing sentence contains a dart, winged with the purest sarcasm, such sarcasm as even the person to whom it is addressed could not have failed to discover. Burnt Islands have put it squarely up to the Minister. The people of that place have produced testimony that is absolutely unchallengeable regarding the iniquity of the Fish Regulations, and they have not been afraid to express their sentiments in words. There are other places suffering equally with Burnt Islands. Their story has yet to be told.

Discrimination.

News comes from Catalina this week that the cull is much more favorable down North the past week, and that the fishermen at Port Union are averaging $10.00 a quintal for their fish, and that the cull is not much different from last year, merely throwing out broken West India. If this be so, why not apply the same favorable system to the fishermen who sell their fish in St. John's?

The cull here yet is in strict accord with the Rules and Regulations prescribed by law and there are four qualities made, so that in some places they average only $6.50. This looks like discrimination in favor of the Northern fishermen who sell at Port Union.

It is a strange state of affairs that one set of people are compelled to conform to the regulations, while others appear to be able to do as they please.

It is something that requires investigation, and all should be put on the same footing as far as the regulations are concerned. If the Union Export Co. can buy on the tallow System it is manifestly unfair and unjust not alone to the merchant but more particularly to the fisherman to insist on four grades being made here.—Trade Review.

Wedding Bells.

On the 29th of September, at Powerscourt, by the Rev. Father Kelly, Mr. William Bogran, of Toronto, to Mrs. Anastacia Richards, daughter of John and Mary Ann Porter, of Long Pond. The bride was attended by Mrs. John Richards as bridesmaid and Mr. Edward Bogran aided supported the groom. The bride was attired in saxe blue silk, with black picture hat, while the bridesmaid wore a neat costume of navy blue serge with hat to match. After the ceremony the wedding party, about 50 in number, repaired to the home of the groom's parents, where a sumptuous repast was served, after which dancing was indulged in and kept up until the wee sma' hours. Mr. and Mrs. William Bogran are spending their honeymoon in the city, after which they will return to Toronto, their future home.

No Man's Land at the Battery.

The fisherman of the Battery, who was ordered by the Court to dismantle a house which he is erecting there, finds himself in bad straits. He has a family of small children and has to leave his present home at the end of the month, because he was unable to pay the increased rent asked by the landlord. With help from friends he proceeded to erect a shelter and had the building framed up and floors in when the Municipal Council stepped in. A peremptory order to demolish the building was issued by the Court; the man refusing to draw a nail, the aid of the police was asked for. This place known as the Battery, has always been a source of dispute. It is supposed to be Imperial property, and is properly dubbed "the land between heaven and earth," as neither the Government nor the Council appear to have anything but prohibitory powers over it.

A Handsome Vessel.

LATEST ADDITION TO OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

Yesterday we had the pleasure of being shown through schooner Isabel Moore, lying at the wharf of Messrs. Harris & Elliott, with salt and general cargo on board for Cook's Harbour, laden by Messrs. J. and F. Moore. Named after the daughter of the junior partner of the firm, the Isabel Moore is a gem of marine architecture. Her lines are those of a clipper and give promise of fast sailing. Tern rigged the sails are much more easily handled than would be those of a fore and after of the same size, and the heavier sails being furled from the deck, the crew naturally do not have to go aloft in heavy weather. Built according to, if not exceeding Lloyd's requirements, the vessel's construction is extra strong, her main timbers being iron strapped with 11 heavy angles on each side. Every deck beam is supported by a standard, the foot of which is let into the keelson. The under hatch coverings are protected by circular iron rods, which obviate splintering when unloading heavy cargo with tackles. On deck the Isabel Moore presents a yacht like appearance, the sweep of the planks being very graceful. As a sea boat there is no doubt but that she possesses excellent qualities. The crew quarters in the fore-cabin are very roomy, the floor space being as large as an ordinary room in any house. Here also is the home of the cook, the galley, which is well finished and comfortable though not large, contains the Captain's state room and the mates berth. Opening off the stowage is a well fitted lavatory, and other quarters are provided for the table fittings and furnishings. Built to the order of her owners by the Nova Scotia Shipbuilding Company of Liverpool, Nova Scotia, at which port she is registered, the Isabel Moore is one of the crack ships of Newfoundland's ever growing Mercantile Marine.

St. Michael's Academy.

St. Michael's Academy at St. George's, conducted by the Sisters of Mercy, is an educational institution of high standard. It does not advertise very extensively, but none the less the results of its work are most gratifying to those who have the educational advancement of the youth of the country at heart. We learn that one of its pupils, Miss Melissa Butt, recently secured the award of a Silver Medal from the Sloan Duployan Shorthand Society for accuracy, while Diplomas were granted to several other pupils. Miss Hartigan, Flossie Butt, Davis, Pine, and Coady. A recent Art Exhibition held by the pupils proved a gratifying success. Magnificent displays of painting and needlework, illuminating and other handicraft delighted the eye of the art lover, and surprised even those who are aware of the high standard of excellence attained in the Academy. The Sisters are to be congratulated on the high standing attained by the pupils in connection with the C.H.E. and Trinity College examinations. The Academy is situated on a very commanding site at St. George's, overlooking the vast sweep of the Bay. The health giving breezes, pure atmosphere and other elements of the scenery of the coast ensure that sound minds are developed within sound bodies. Parents from all parts of the country are sending their children to St. George's, realizing that their physical and mental well being will be looked after by the good Sisters of Mercy, and there is yet room for fresh pupils.—Western Star, Sept. 22.

Run Over by Motor.

LAD HAS PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.

Yesterday at dinner hour, while going from school on his bicycle, Harry, son of Mr. H. Y. Mott, was run over by a motor car but fortunately escaped with but little injury. The lad crossed a vacant field for exit to his home on Barnes' Road through a gap in the fence. As he neared the fence he saw an automobile coming up the road and seeing that he could not stop the bike, or cross safely in front of the car, decided to turn sharply and escape by running along with it.

Mr. Gus Stafford, who was driving the car slowly, did not see the bike until it was almost on him, but applied the brakes as quickly as possible. In some way not easily accounted for the car collided with the bike, which upset, and passed completely over both boy and bike. Mr. Stafford carried the lad to his house where Dr. Cowperthwaite was called in attendance. Only a bruise below the right knee and a severe shaking up was all the injury sustained. The bike was badly smashed. We understand that no blame attaches to Mr. Stafford for the accident, which was quite unavoidable.

A Special Statement to those Customers who may ask the reason for this Drastic Price Reduction Sale.

This is another wedge—a sharp wedge—that we are driving into the high cost of living, with the hope that it will help to ease the burden now borne by all classes.

We read in the newspapers, from time to time, that the prices of certain commodities are coming down with a rush in other countries, but it doesn't seem to affect conditions here in Newfoundland one little bit. How long will we have to wait for people to stop talking about the high cost of living and DO something to bring it down?

We have felt for some time that something had to be done—somebody had to act. The only way to begin was to begin. So we have been plugging away at it with Special Sales from week to week and here we are with another smashing drive. Readymade Clothing this time. Take advantage of it. Get the clothes you need at less than you can buy elsewhere.

If a Testator

Although seeing the benefits to be derived from a Trust Company's administration, hesitates about cancelling any appointment he may have already made, the Montreal Trust Company can be named to act with the Executor or Executors already appointed. In this way the Trust Company co-operates with the Testator's appointees in the administration of the Estate. This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Few women have the necessary business training to enable them to carry on the administration of an Estate, but with the co-operation of the Montreal Trust Company the Testator's wife can be appointed with full assurance that the Estate will be well looked after.

Honesty of Purpose.

Confidence is what is needed in business life to-day. The essential requirement for Newfoundland was to establish in the minds of the buyers of Newfoundland produce a feeling that everything possible was being done to give them a prime article of food put up under hygienic circumstances, well cured, and of the class that they require, and that when they bargain for a cargo of No. 1 or No. 2 or whatever particular grade of fish is needed, that grade will be shipped them.

The Standardization Rules and Regulations were formulated with this end in view, and in so far as they work in that direction will be commended by fishermen and exporters alike.

Outright sales would then have come as a natural sequence next year and would automatically have regulated shipments, prices, etc., and precluded congestion of the market.

"The powers that be," however, saw fit to inaugurate Rules and Regulations to control, not alone inspection and cull of fish and outright sales, but also restrict shipments, and endeavor to regulate the prices in the foreign markets.

Against some of these restrictions and regulations, the trade, almost as a solid unit, objected, with the result that the Government agreed to the appointment of an Advisory Board consisting of exporters, who, with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries would make rules and regulations in this direction, and the present laws in force are the outcome of their deliberations.

Whether they are wise or unwise, is a matter of considerable difference of opinion. But they have been accepted by the majority of the trade, and as such are the laws governing the disposal of fish for this year, and it is the bounden duty of every one of us, particularly the newspapers, to endeavor to make the best of conditions as they are and to help in every way possible the trade of the country during these troublesome times.

To this end there must also be perfect confidence between the officials chosen, (and more particularly the Minister of Marine and Fisheries), and the rest of the exporters. The exporters, in some cases against their own better judgment, agreed to accept these rules and regulations, and are striving to abide by them in every good faith; but if the rumors and stories brought from Catalina the past week are true, then the Union Fish Company, of which the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is Managing Director, is not carrying out the rules in the same spirit which the other fish dealers are observing; but is buying fish on the same tallow system that was in vogue last year.

Whether this be true or not, we are unable to say; but this we do say that rumors of this sort do much to destroy that good faith and confidence which are as necessary among the exporters themselves as it is between the buyers in the foreign markets and local men.

Square dealing on the part of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is an absolute necessity at the present time and the canard should be cleared up at once if not foundation.

Mr. Coaker's dual position as Minister of Marine and Fisheries and as head of the Union Companies, places him in a delicate situation and makes it incumbent on him to so guide his actions that no faintest suspicion of his integrity of purpose can be entertained.—Trade Review.

Elks Hold Session.

Lodge No. 1 Newfoundland Elks held a grand session in Empire Hall last night. A number of the brethren from Bell Island lodge attended, being motored from the Cove by car owners of the St. John's Lodge. A representative class was initiated and the meeting continued until after midnight. Judging from the attendance, Newfoundland Elksdom promises to outstrip all and every organization of its kind in Newfoundland. The present membership embraces all shades of politics, creeds and classes, and the grand ideal for which Elksdom stands will be a pasture from which the whole community may feed from. It is an institution that supplies all the requirements that make good citizenship, and its rapid growth speaks unmistakably of how St. John's appreciates the introduction of the order into the Dominion. Within the very near future, the formation of a grand Lodge will take place, and following its creation Lodges will be formed in all parts of the country at centres at which it will be convenient for members to meet.

ST. JOHN'S

Trinity Past and Present.

(By REV. CANON LOCKYER.)

Just as we had finished that section of our historical observation excursion from Ryan's premises to Freshwater, duties called us to Nova Scotia for a month. We will now begin where we then left off and proceed slowly along the shore from Freshwater to Skirwink. This in my boyhood days was known as the North side, and in Rev. John Godden's days was changed to Trinity East.

As we look around the mouth of Freshwater Brook, there come to our memory two of the old residents, George Bellows and William Denny, who fifty years ago were owners of property, and moulders of character in that state of life to which God had called them, and who have long since passed to their eternal rest. The houses which they occupied (with one exception) have been removed; the daily train passing through the settlement, and observing passengers never fail to notice the picturesque quietness of the now deserted hill sides.

Old George Bellows was a well known and a highly respected character. He was quaint in speech, a humorist beyond the ordinary, and an enthusiast of the first water. He always maintained that to cure a cold one must "boil your blood," and that could be done by taking a bowl of rum, to be followed by a bowl of rum; then going to bed and staying there so long as one could stand weight and effects of half a dozen blankets and quilts—and blankets and quilts in those days. His optimism kept him from worrying about the wind, for he maintained that when his schooner was ready to leave port, the wind at once shifted to port. Consequently he always sailed up-and-down. Though Mr. Bellows long passed to his rest, a wing-and-wing sail before the wind is still known in Trinity East as "Bellows's time."

The old house of William Ivamy is still standing, lonely, deserted, and weather beaten on the north side of the brook—the house that fifty years ago was the home of father and mother, and two daughters, Martha and Sarah, who, because of their gentle manners, and refinement of character, were beloved and respected by all who knew them. The Baileys, the Evellys, the Millers and the Hogarths still constitute a group of neighbours there, with Robert Miller of 87 winters as the representative of the past generation.

The next group of neighbours is made up of the Fowlows, the Lates, the Watts, the Browns, the Mills, and the Bannisters—with Reginald Mills keeping watch over them all from his house on the highest level, and as the oldest man (88) in their midst, setting them a good example in the way they should go.

This section of Trinity East loomed large in the earliest history of Trinity. A large fishing establishment was conducted there by a French firm, and could the many remains of sunken wharves in and around Brown's Cove tell us their story, there would be much of the deepest interest to record—much that unfortunately, is now lost forever.

On an old chart of 1760, by Capt. Cook, now in possession of Mr. Martin Lawlor, this part of Trinity East is marked as "The town of Trinity." Whether this was in any respect an official act, or to what extent it indicated the plans of the people of those days we know not. It is evident, however, that when those men (to whom were entrusted the location of the greater premises of Lester, Garland, and Slade) made their decisions, they were, by a sound judgment, influenced to select those more protected, and less hilly places, such as the western side of the harbor offered. Thus the tide of permanent business, and all that is usually bound up with it, set in this direction, and what is known to-day as Trinity, became the place of residence of the magistrate, and the customs officer. Here the Court House and the Jail were built. Here the commerce of the seven seas was discharged and offered for sale. Here the products of the waters of Trinity Bay were deposited, and then shipped to foreign ports. Here the Parish Church and the church-yard were provided. Here, in short, the hub of our smaller universe was planted, and it all became in name and reality—"The town of Trinity."

This, however, was to Trinity East more of a sentimental than a practical loss, for it went on steadily increasing in a population in whose veins coursed the best blood of the sea-board towns of England, which fitted them and their descendants to become such successful and intelligent fishermen, that without them no town or village in the country could continue to exist.

Whilst Garland once owned a great deal of the land at Trinity East, that in Brown's Cove (where the present ferry wharf is) was largely owned by one John Dewey from Devonshire. He had several children—all daughters, and in due time they became the wives of the Browns and the Lates, two of the oldest names there, and Dewey's lands, as a matter of course, passed into the possession of those men whose descendants still own them. Brown's Cove was a dockyard for the building of a class of schooners that were highly creditable to the builders.

Passing on, and around Fifield's Point (marked on the old chart of 1760 as the Calf's Nose) we come in to Peas Cove, so named because of the abundance of the peas plant along its shores in the early settlement days. Here the familiar names of Fowlow, Janes, Jones, Fifield, Evelyn, Peckham, Cook and others, take us back in thought to Devon and Dorset, whilst those of Lawlor and Connolly are redolent of Waterford in the Emerald Isle.

This Cove has always been the trying place of a fine fleet of Labrador and coasting schooners, which, commanded by their owners, have contributed millions of dollars towards the sum total of the country's harvest of the sea. This fleet, owing to various reasons, is being reduced in number every year, and he would be a wise man, indeed who to-day could forecast its strength and condition twenty years hence. Amongst the men at Trinity East, there have always been a goodly number of first class cooperers. They, however, because of the changes, have been considerably reduced in numbers.

The people there, with a few exceptions, are members of the Church of England, whilst all are known as regular church goers. Years ago it was a part of the Mission of Trinity and all came to Trinity for church privileges. Then a large church was built on "the half-way hill" to provide for the spiritual needs of Trinity East and Port Rexton. Then again later, as the old church became too small for the ever increasing congregation, two churches were built and the old church was removed. Strangers viewing Trinity East from Trinity find it hard to understand why it has two churches, and why they are so near together. They are, however, further apart than they look, and the one on the hill is the church of Port Rexton, on the other side of the hill.

They are beautifully equipped buildings with stained glass East and West windows, which once did duty in an historic Church in England, and which probably, in themselves originally cost, at least, half as much as the buildings they now adorn. The members of the Roman Catholic Church, and the Methodists still come over to Trinity for public worship. There are two elementary schools there (Church of England and Roman Catholic) and a High School (Church of England) for Trinity East and Port Rexton. The rectory is an old but a fairly comfortable building. Rev. Hugh Blackall, M.A., is the rector. The churches, schools and rectory are in good repairs, and have a creditable appearance.

Trinity East offers several natural inducements to tourists who wish to spend a short holiday off the beaten track. It is, however, almost an unknown place to the travelling public, because of the absence of hotel accommodation. This is now being provided for to a limited extent by Mr. and Mrs. House, and already several persons have taken advantage of it, and they speak highly of the home like surroundings, and will come again. A motor ferry runs between Trinity East and Trinity every hour.

It has suffered, in common with other places of late years, by the going away of its young people, who, after making homes in some part of Canada, induce the old people to follow them. Mr. Richard Jones, wife and child leave next month for Montreal, preceded by their three daughters and son a few years ago. Several of its younger women are creditably filling positions in the shops and hotel at Trinity. It gave eighteen men to fight the battle for Empire in the late war, and five of them laid down their lives. Dr. Fitzgerald has been at Trinity East for several years, and his private residence and surgery is the finest building in the district.

On our way out of Peas Cove on the East side, we pass the hull of an old schooner, dismantled and dismantled on the shore. This schooner was the pride of the fleet a few years ago, but to-day it serves only to illustrate the story of its gradual decay, and "more's the pity!"

Dr. Fitzgerald and wife, of St. Jacques, are visiting their son, the Doctor, at Trinity East.

A Celtic cross of good proportions and workmanship has just been placed in front of Christ Church, bearing the names of the sailors and soldiers of Port Rexton who laid down their lives in the Great War.

A beautifully executed brass tablet has been placed on the wall of St. Andrew's Church, in loving memory of Richard Fowlow, who served and died at Gallipoli.

Russia's Future.

Whatever trials and convulsions the future may hold in store for the unhappy Russian people before they once more attain to the dignity of ordered nationhood, we believe that the tragic figures of the late Tsar and Tsaritsa will steadily grow in public esteem and will beckon their people on to a recovery of self-respect and of self-control. Before that goal is reached, many a terrible reckoning may have to be paid; for when a nation awakens to a sense of the degradation into which it has fallen, albeit by its own fault as much as through the evil designs of others, its penitence is rarely limited to a contrite confession of its own shortcomings. All Europe, indeed the whole world, is interested in the recovery of Russia, for until there be again a Russia there can be no true peace in Europe or in Asia.—London Times.

Save the surface and you save all Paint & Varnish

It's Better to PAINT than REPAIR

THE purpose of paint is twofold—it should beautify of course; but, also, it must fully protect the surface to which it is applied. The high cost of repair-work has made us all fully realize the extravagance of letting a building "run down" for lack of a coat of paint.

It is equally important to understand the extravagance involved in the use of poor paint, and to know that there's one paint which leads all others in the matter of economy:

B-H PAINT
"English" 70% Pure White Lead (Equivalent to 82)
30% Pure White Zinc
100% Pure Paint

No other paint can match it in covering capacity—no other brand can equal its record of permanence. Affording real protection over a long period, it has removed the false notion that a house must be repainted every year. If you use this point of extreme durability your house is protected for years.

Mme. Catherine Breshkowskaya, famous as the "Little Grandmother of the Russian Revolution," is dangerously ill. The announcement was made by Dr. Edward S. Egbert of Philadelphia, who took a cartload of American relief supplies to her for use, but found the aged patriot unable to participate in the fête which marked the arrival of the much needed charity.

The death is announced of Dr. Rutherford Harris at Eastbourne, England. It is as the man who engineered the Jameson raid that Dr. Harris will be chiefly remembered. Born in 1856, son of a former Judge of the Supreme Court of Madras, he went to South Africa in 1882, and established a medical practice at Kimberley. There he met Cecil Rhodes, who made him his confidential secretary. He was an important witness before the Parliamentary Select Committee on the raid in London, and the disclosures there made as to his part in the affair practically finished his career in South Africa. Settling down in England, he was elected Unionist member for Monmouth district in 1900, but was unseated on a petition under the Corrupt Practices Act. He was elected for Dulwich in 1903, but resigned three years later on going abroad.

Blundering Bolsheviks.

It is difficult to imagine by what mental process the perpetrators of the Wall Street disaster came to the conclusion that they could advance the Soviet or any other campaign in America by bomb methods. Perhaps no better explanation could be given than that they were Bolsheviks. They have shown once more that they have no conception of the temper and ambitions of the great body of the people of Canada and the United States.

The plot was a clumsy affair in all respects, but the probably unexpected destruction of clues by the very force of the explosion itself, the wholesale slaying of pedestrians, the majority of whom were clerks and messengers, caused a feeling of horrors throughout the country which should prove an effective boomerang to these responsible—or to their ambitions if they should be so fortunate as to escape the direct consequence of the dastardly act.

If there has been a lesson in this catastrophe it has been that efforts to slay leaders in business and destroy financial institutions which are the development of generations of sound constructive, economic progress only react upon the heads of the majority.

As it was, many people going about their daily affairs were hurried into eternity. Had the plotters even succeeded in temporarily wrecking the financial machinery of America the same people, the general public, would have suffered in the end.

In view of this evidence that the Reds are active in America and that there is a real menace in Soviet propaganda as has so often been emphasized in THE FINANCIAL POST and as is recently emphasized by Sir Auckland Geddes, Premier Meighen, Premier Lloyd George and others in positions of large public responsibility, the strong stand of organized labor in Canada at the Windsor congress has been received with a note of relief. Under the able leadership of Tom Moore, the labor chiefs are evidently determined to put up a strong fight against the Red propaganda in Canada. Unfortunately it would seem quite possible that such a fight will be necessary.—Financial Post.

Grand Concert.

In Aid of Mercy Convent School.

The Grand Concert in aid of the Convent of Mercy School at the residence of Mrs. Harris, Carpasian Road, on Monday night last calls for more than passing notice. Rarely has it been my pleasure to have been present at such a delightful entertainment. Mrs. Baxter excelled herself in the arrangement of the programme which was replete with the choicest selection of operatic and other musical gems excellently rendered by the city's leading artists. Mrs. F. J. King charmed her hearers with three beautiful songs; Mrs. C. Cahill and Misses Ryan, Mitchell, Shea and Devine each treated the audience to several most charming selections, the applause showing how keen was the appreciation of all present. The outstanding feature of the performance was the admirable violin solo of Mrs. (Dr.) Murphy. This lady won enthusiastic applause, many enjoying her playing for the first time. She is a violinist of rare ability and is a very welcome addition to St. John's musical talent. Miss Mary Keegan, who contributed two stirring recitations, was "Dark Rosaleen" personified. Messrs. Arthur Williams and F. Ruggies were heard to splendid advantage and were repeatedly encored. Recitations by Mr. Harold Brown and Mr. P. Halley were greatly enjoyed, the former giving selections from Dr. Drummond's ever popular "Habitant" poems—his elocution and "Habitant" dialect being faultless. The writer can only express the hope that he may be privileged at some future date to enjoy a repetition of such excellent music as that rendered at Monday night's concert. It was a splendid success in every way.—Auditor.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. Your druggist gladly will give you the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" because genuine Aspirin now is made by Americans and owned by an American Company.

There is not a cent's worth of German interest in Aspirin, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

During the war, acid imitations were sold as Aspirin in pill boxes and various other containers. But now you can get genuine Aspirin, plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross." Aspirin proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages.

Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid.

M. Georges Leygues, the new French Premier, has long been a prominent figure in France as author, deputy, cabinet minister, art connoisseur and man of the world. A famous phrase of his, "I want to do good," made his name known throughout the length and breadth of the French Republic in 1909. He was then serving as Minister of Public Instruction. M. Chauchard died and left him twelve million francs. But that was not all. To Madame Ley-

M. Chauchard bequeathed one million francs, and a further sum of a million francs was to be paid to each of their two daughters. An interviewer at the time put the following question to M. Leygues: "May I be so indiscreet as to ask what you intend to do with your great fortune?"

And quietly, simply, the new millionaire replied: "I shall try to do good."

It was an utterance M. Leygues has never ceased to deplore. All over France—to the remotest hamlet—it went. Across the seas, it travelled to the French colonies. And wherever it penetrated, people got excited, and cried—"He wants to do good. Let him, then, begin by doing good to ME."

M. Leygues was inundated by thousands of letters, postcards and telegrams, while deputations innumerable waited upon him, all asking him "to do good." Fishermen asked for boats, peasants for cows, blanchisseuses and modistes for wedding-positions, inventors for laboratories, waiters for cafes, journalists for newspapers, actors for theatres.

However, as you want to do good, send me five million francs before 7 o'clock to-night, and I will immediately exterminate our sinister enemies, the Germans. you that by 9 o'clock, every one of them will have ceased to exist."

The experience was a most harrowing one for M. Leygues, but it served to put his name on every tongue throughout France. A few years ago he was offered the post of French Ambassador at Rome, but he declined to accept. He served under Premier Clemenceau as Minister of Marine, but was not included in M. Millerand's Cabinet.—Ex.

Men Agree on This Point!

RIGHT here is where men are in agreement—that there is nothing like the Gillette Safety Razor for quick, comfortable, clean shaving. Yes, 20,000,000 men agree on this!

No Stropping and No Honing saves time and trouble, but what is of greater importance, every Gillette shave is with the keenest of edges—such edges as only scientific factory-sharpening can assure.

Go and ask any dealer displaying Gillette signs to show you his variety of Gillette Safety Razors—Standard Sets, Pocket Editions, and the new "Big Fellow"!

You, too, are going to find that the Gillette is the one real shaving service—that is why it is the universal razor.

Clarence Miller, 16, Washington county, is probably the only boy in the United States who is paid $1 a day for going to school. The board of education, which must furnish transportation to all students living more than two miles from a school-house, found it cheaper to pay Clarence the cash than to furnish him a conveyance.
