The World Over.

The inhabitants of Glebehall intend celebrating Coronation Day, (the 28th inst.) instead of the Queen's Birthday, which they allowed to pass without notice.

On Friday last, a three year old son of Mr. Henry Monroe, of Ingersoll, was kicked in the head by a horse which was running at large. The little fellow died on Sunday.

A day or two ago some boys who were fishing in the Thames, at London, Ont., discovered the body of a female infant tied in a bag lying near the water's edge. No trace of the mother has been discovered.

In a divorce case in Indiana, the woman, who was the plaintiff, being the owner of a farm, and the man possessed of nothing, the defendant's attorney asked for alimony for the husband. He didn't get it.

COMPARISON OF THE SEXES. — "Women are said to have stronger attachments than men. It is not so. A man is often attached to an old hat; but did you ever hear of a woman having an attachment for an old bonnet?" Echo answers, "Never!"

On Tuesday evening, as Mr. Curtis, a cooper, was proceeding to his home on Park Street, Hamilton, a swallow flying in the air shot with full force into his eye, the beak of the bird puncturing the ball. A physician who examined the injury thought that the sight could be preserved.

A TRUE BALSAM.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is truly a balsam. It contains the balsamic principle of the Wild Cherry, the balsamic properties of tar and of pine. Its ingredients are all balsamic. Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, and Consumption speedily disappear under its balsamic influence.

On Saturday last, Mr. Edward Armstrong, of the 5th line, Taralgar, having fallen asleep, was thrown from his wagon, and alighting on his head, received some bruises on that important part of the body, spraining his neck slightly on one side, and injuring his hands. He was seen by some person in an insensible condition, and carried home.

The Waterloo County Poor House was opened on Tuesday last, and the people of the County Town indulged in a dinner—a big dinner we mean, not one of the ordinary dinners at home—in the basement. There was something to take after dinner, and toasts and speeches, too, and all the other accessories of a "good time." "Here's to you," Waterloo.

A Chicago reporter who attended a spring opening of a fashionable millinery, says of it: "A cabbage leaf trimmed with three red peppers and a dried cherry sells for $35. It is called a 'jockey' has one great advantage—can be eaten as a salad when the season changes.—One composed of three sights and a bit of pink-colored fog, was considered cheap at $55.

Mr. Langdon has got the most handsome vehicle for carrying goods to customers that there is in town. Indeed, it seems far too genteel for such a purpose. It has the advantage of being able to announce its arrival, as it is furnished with a clear toned bell which is fastened to the centre of the front axle. Hereafter we shall scarcely be able to tell whether we should look out for the cars or the wagon when the bell rings.

WHAT TOMACCO DID.—The other day what a tomacco John Mack was at work at a circular saw in Garner's mill St. Mary's, he had a narrow escape thro' the agency of a plug of tobacco which he had in an inside vest pocket, from a violent and shocking death. It working at the saw, he partially lost his balance, and to regain it again naturally bent back, throwing out his breast, which came in contact with the saw. In the twinkling of an eye, the sharp-toothed machine tore his vest into rags, and ripped the plug of tobacco into fine cut, but left the man shocked and frightened, yet uninjured. The plug of tobacco saved him from being cut in two, by giving him a moment to escape out of the fatal orbit of the saw.

A MAN WHO COULDN'T LIVE ON A MILLION A YEAR.—The walls of Paris are at this moment covered with bills announcing the sale of the picture gallery belonging to Count Kouchelleff Besborok. It is said to be the last remnant left—and it belongs to creditors—of the magnificent estate of which he entered into possession just nine years ago. It then was valued at $11,250,000 in gold. He travelled through the East and southern and western Europe in great state. There was no whim he refused to gratify. He chartered a steamship to convey him from one point to another. He had special railway trains to convey his party. He gave princely entertainments, was lavish of presents. He had a numerous retinue. It was his sister who married Mr. Douglas Home, the medium. It was he who carried Alex. Dumas to Russia. Nine years ago he was master of $600,000 annual income. It was not enough for him. He could not live on less than $1,200,000 a year—his expenses several years ago were said to have exceeded this amount of money and now nothing remains of all that wealth but debt.

An Interesting Day in Galt.

LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF KNOX CHURCH.

From our correspondent. The announcement that the corner-stone of the new church now being erected for the congregation of Knox Church, Galt, would be laid on Friday, attracted a large number of people from the surrounding country, who, from an early hour in the morning continued to pour into the town, all dressed in their best, and patiently waiting for the hour when the ceremonies would commence. Not a few from Puellinch and other remote townships were also present. The weather was most auspicious throughout the day, and no doubt encouraged many to come out who otherwise would not have done so.

The new church, which is already 8 or 9 feet above the ground, stands on a most eligible site in an open space on the north side of the river, and not far from the bridge which crosses the river at the foot of Main street, and leads to an open square beyond. The building is of large dimensions, being 136 feet extreme length, 72 feet in breadth, and 50 feet from the basement floor to the church ceiling, the church proper having a height of 32 feet by 100 feet in length, and will accommodate 1,350 people. The structure is of stone, the doors and windows being of white Galt or Guelph stone, and the rest of the walls of blue stone. The windows are Gothic in design, and will have lead sashes, with diamond lights of enameled glass. There are heavy buttresses and two side windows, a small tower are continued up, terminating with pointed roofs. The mason work is what is known as broken courses, tape pointed. The front entrance faces the town, and is reached by a flight of stone steps, from which stairs on either side lead to the galleries, and another set of stairs to the choir.

On Tuesday evening, as Mr. Curtis, a cooper, was proceeding to his home on Park Street, Hamilton, a swallow flying in the air shot with full force into his eye, the beak of the bird puncturing the ball. A physician who examined the injury thought that the sight could be preserved.

Anglican Synod.

After prayers the Synod resumed its sittings, and shortly after proceeded to the discussion of the new constitution. The first two clauses were adopted, the second having been somewhat altered. After recess the patronage of rectories was discussed. The question was whether the patronage should be exclusively under the control of the Bishops, or whether the laity should have a voice in the management. Judge Boswell moved a resolution to the effect that a Committee should be appointed to consider the resolutions already submitted, and report at the present session. The motion was lost.

Mr. Boddy said, before the discussion proceeded, he wished to call attention to a statement attributed to Mr. Carry, viz: "That the Bishop stood to them in the place of the Lord Jesus Christ." He utterly repudiated the statement in every sense of the term and asked an explanation.

Mr. Carry quoted Polycarp, as justifying his statement, so far as this world was concerned. The authority referred to, he said, as well as the other fathers of the Church, urged the people to look upon the Bishops as fathers in God, and he was content to have it known that he subscribed to this doctrine.

Dr. Wilson thought that they should have an immediate retraction of these words, such rank Popery. As Englishmen, they had a high idea of their Bishop but could not recognize him in any such aspect as he had been placed before them by Mr. Carry.

Mr. Gamble agreed with Dr. Wilson, and thought Mr. Carry should at once withdraw the statement he had made yesterday. Dr. Bovell said there was a sense in which the Bishop stood to them in the place of the Great Head of the Church. He knew Mr. Carry did not hold the views attributed to him. (A voice—he said them and does not deny to do it.) Mr. Carry excitedly, I disclaim to do it. Dr. Bovell hoped the Synod would not ask Mr. Carry to do anything so humiliating as to withdraw his words.

The Bishop regretted when he heard the statement made yesterday, but he thought at the time that the Synod would understand them in their proper sense. The subject here dropped. Rev. Mr. Waddell was desirous of having the question of the patronage of the rectories disposed of. He held that the Church was elastic, and if it was to be

Despatches to the Evening Mercury

GREAT BRITAIN

LONDON, June 18.—The excitement over the debate in the House of Lords on the Irish Church Bill increases. The benches, lobbies and galleries of the House were crowded again to-night.

Earl Russell was the first speaker. He said many illustrious statesmen, animated by feelings of justice and generosity for Ireland, had endeavoured to settle the Church question; but their efforts were made in vain. The fact that a small proportion of the people of Ireland belonged to the Church, establishes the justice, as well as necessity, of dealing with the question. The creation of the Irish Church in the beginning was a wise thing, but the result of three centuries made an alteration necessary. The Act of Union was too solemn a compact to be interfered with save in a great crisis; but now a great crisis was at hand. He reviewed the former promises of concession which Mr. Pitt, if he had the opportunity, would have accomplished. He also traced the history of the abolition of prebend in Scotland. She had been oppressed by penal laws and disabilities, notwithstanding promises of relief. He believed that concurrent endowment was preferable to the present measure, but the Catholics refused to accept it. He held that the Tories were responsible for the present state of Ireland. They had rejected the policy of Pitt, Canning, and Peel, and now, as alternative, they proposed to accept Pitt's policy. But he regretted to say that it was now too late; they had no choice now but to re-establish and dis-endow. Disendowment need not be total. He was inclined to the generous course which Mr. Bright originally advocated—especially as the Catholics and Presbyterians were to be compensated from the Church revenues. He wished to do the best he could for Ireland, but not to endanger the churches of England and Scotland. Admitting this course to be necessary for Ireland, we must not give a stimulus to those desiring to dis-establish all the Churches. He desired of the Tories to accept the verdict of the constituencies to which they had appealed, and said the result of that appeal must be regarded as the deliberate verdict of the nation on the question.

He desired them to remember the action of the House of Lords in 1832, and implore their Lordships to act in accordance with the spirit of the Constitution, and accept the decision of the nation as final and binding.

The Duke of Abercorn viewed the bill as the production of a man eager for personal and party triumph rather than for the good of his country. The result would be the alienation of Protestants, introduction of discord, and failure to conciliate the Catholics.

The Duke of Argyll argued that dis-establishment and endowment could not be separated. He admitted that the question was forced into consideration hastily, and not by protracted agitation but by logical result of political freedom. He thought the measure was an attack on the rights of property, and disliked indiscriminate disendowment. But the ecclesiastical system in Ireland which endorses Protestantism, and the establishment of the Roman Catholic Church, was a source of national weakness.

Mr. Denison proceeded to enlarge upon his views, amidst some confusion. Mr. Darling continuing to gesticulate in the most violent and excited manner. The Rev. Mr. Darling leaped upon the platform, and gesticulated in a most excited manner. He said this person—he would not call him gentleman. (Loud cries of "order" and great uproar.) After quiet had been restored, the speaker went on to say that Mr. Denison had no right to make personal and congregational charges against him, unless he meant to complain of him to his Bishop. (Loud cries of "order" and "question.")

Mr. Darling—I am determined to speak. I am a member of this Synod. I will be allowed to speak or I will leave this Synod, and leave it forever. I say it was out of order to attack me in this cowardly way. (Cries of chair, chair, he did not refer to you personally.)

Mr. Denison—I decline to say to whom I referred. Mr. Darling—(amid great uproar)—Mr. Denison was in Trinity Church on Sunday week. I saw him there. But I can tell him Trinity Church has more services—larger congregations—larger collections.—(Loud uproar.)

Mr. Baldwin—Mr. Darling has no right to impute motives, and then get up and make a speech in support of his imputations. Rev. Mr. Darling—He was in Trinity Church; it was Trinity Church he referred to; but he had not the courage to own it (great uproar); he hadn't the courage to own it. (Continued uproar, in the midst of which he resumed his seat.)

Dr. Bovell counselled harmony and a vote was not pressed. The Synod rose about 11 p.m.

Dominion Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. OTTAWA, June 18th.

Further estimates for the year ending 30th June 1870, and 30th June 1870, were brought down and referred to Committees on Supply. The items under the head of Militia Salaries were concurred in.

Mr. Sturton asked when it was proposed the volunteers should be called out for drill this year? Sir G. E. Cartier said there would be no general order issued fixing one time. The Adjutant-General would fix the time for the respective battalions as they found to be most convenient.

Mr. Sturton was afraid that by this arrangement an inconvenient season might in some cases chosen. Several Bills were read a third time, and an Act incorporating the Royal Canadian Bank, by extending, if necessary, the time for the resumption of specie payment, and also to authorize the amalgamation of the said Bank with any other Bank or banks, and for other purposes.

The next item taken up was the consideration of the amendments made in Committee of the Whole to Hon John Sandfield Macdonald's Bill for the more speedy trial, in certain cases, of persons charged with Felonies and Misdemeanors in the Province of Ontario.

The Bill was passed with some amendments. The House went into Committee on the supplementary estimates, and passed several items. A number of bills were read a second time and the House adjourned.

A RARE OCCURRENCE.—A mare belonging to Mr. Isaac Masters, Councillor of Wilmot, aged twenty-three years, brought a pair of twin colts. They are uncommon smart and playful.

The idea that portions of revenues of church should be devoted to education, but as the nation was unable to agree to their use in that way there was no course to adopt other than that specified in the Bill which had been fully endorsed by the country. He exhorted the House to give their calm consideration, irrespective of party feelings, and believed all would unite in the desire to settle the question on a fair impartial basis.

Lord Cairns said the subject had been completely exhausted, together with charges against the Church. She proclaimed christianity and truth to all willing to receive them, so her mission was not a failure. With regard to assistance she had given in execution of penal laws, he said the Church ought not now to be blamed for failing to be before her age a hundred and fifty years. Years ago the union of Church and State was the only security for religious freedom and independence of thought. It could not be severed without shaking Protestantism of the country to its foundations.

London, 5 a.m., June 19th.—Debate in the House of Lords to-night creates intense excitement. There is a determination to force a division. Best calculations reckon on passage of Bill at second reading by 12 to 22 of a majority. The general belief is, however, that the Lords will strip the Bill of its dispendent features and leave disestablishment only. This is likely to be more embarrassing to the ministry than the direct rejection of the Bill. At three o'clock the House divided amidst great excitement, the division resulting as follows: For second reading 179 against 146; majority for Bill 33. Rumors are received here of attempt to drive Bright from the Cabinet. The result was hailed with great cheering in the House, which was taken up by spectators in the galleries and lobbies, and an immense crowd of people on the street.

Guelph Evening Mercury

SATURDAY EVE, JUNE 19, 1869.

PASSAGE OF THE IRISH CHURCH BILL.

The agony is over; the will of the majority of the nation has been respected, and the Irish Church Bill has, on its second reading in the House of Lords, been carried by a vote of 179 to 146—a majority of 33. The most sanguine friends of the measure could scarcely have predicted such a result, particularly when we were informed a few days ago that there was likely to be a far heavier majority on the other side. Their Lordships have evinced most excellent taste and discretion; they have accepted the inevitable with a grace, worthy of their illustrious birth, and saved themselves a considerable amount of humiliation. For the time for great reforms does arrive, and when there is palpable evidence of this, it is exceedingly praiseworthy to "stand firm under." One of the questions which was seized upon as grounds for agitation in Ireland has been settled, we should think, satisfactorily to the complainants. May we indulge the hope that they will appreciate the magnanimity of the spirit which has obtained justice for them, boast not that their own hands have wrought them this, and endeavor in a quiet and constitutional manner to procure an amelioration of the only other grievance they have mentioned?

THE SPANISH REGENCY.

The Bourbon dynasty, long declining, at length reached the point known as dissolution. In 1492, when Ferdinand and Isabella by their marriage united Castile and Arragon, the Kingdom attained the utmost limits of its glory, but the seeds of dissension sown during the reign of the famous personages mentioned formed elements of decay, which have worked slowly but surely until eventually Isabella was driven from the throne. Not even the administration of the magnanimous Charles V, or the conquering arms of his predecessor, could neutralize the fell effects of incipient internal discord. Nevertheless, the Spaniards submitted long and patiently to be trampled beneath tyrant heels, and in 1808 they did bestir themselves a little, it was because Joseph Buonaparte, or rather his conquering brother, added to a two-fold tyranny an act of deception which must have roused the indignation of the most servile nation on earth. Southey some place or other bespecters with praise the Spaniards of that day for casting off their necks the treacherous yoke, and calling on England. He calls them heroic, but how much better is the present generation entitled to the eulogium! Revolution is the natural sequence of a long continuance of oppression, and it is seldom that the conduct of the oppressed bears the stamp of moderation. The late outbreak in Spain has been a singular and praiseworthy exception. The whole thing was managed with a promptness, a regularity, an avoidance of useless bloodshed, which speaks volumes in praise of the abilities of the leading spirits of the movement, and of the power of restraining their passions possessed and practiced by the people. Every revolution brings its hero or heroes to the surface.—America had her Washington, England had her Cromwell, France had her Napoleon, and Spain has her Serrano and her Prim. To the honor of the last two let it be said, that if they do own—as such heroes generally do—a talent for intrigue, they have not exercised it, but acted like men with whom their country's good took precedence of all personal considerations. They have their reward, and history will point to them as the renovators of Spain, and let us hope as the men who set her once more on the highway to prosperity.

By a heavy majority the Cortes has decided on the establishment of a Regency under Serrano. Being unable to agree in the choice of a King, they did the next best thing, and instead of rushing headlong into republicanism, preserved a form approximating closely to the orderly monarchy. Enemies of such an institution may taunt them with nurturing the old-time idea of the Right Divine of Kings; they have done so, but we can't see the grounds for the allegation. Certain it is, that they displayed more than ordinary caution and wisdom in not setting up a form of government which would be in no respect suitable for Spain or the Spaniards.—The men who have guided them since the expulsion of the last of the Bourbons will no doubt still direct wisely the affairs of the State, until a person more fitting than any of the progeny of Henry of Navarre shall be found for King—one, on the choice of whom the people can better agree than on any of the candidates that have yet been proposed. The new constitution will give the fullest religious tolerance, the right of free political discussion, the concession of broad franchise rights, the education of the people, and the independence of the judiciary.—What more could revolution accomplish; what nobler results could it have achieved?

SUMNER vs. BUTLER.—It is stated that Gen. Butler differs from those who think the British Government censurable for its early recognition of Southern belligerency. He says that Mr. Lincoln's previous proclamation blockading the ports, and a Supreme Court decision, delivered eleven days before the Queen's proclamation, ruling in a certain case that the blockade was belligerent and not pacific, cut us off from legal ground of complaint. He quotes and approves a remark of Chief Justice Chase, that "We could not stand five minutes before any court in Europe upon the legal positions of Sumner's speech." Thus it appears that lawyers as well as doctors, for a wonder, sometimes "disagree."

EXTENSION OF BANK CHARTERS.—The following Bank Charters are extended under Mr. Rose's Bill:—Quebec Bank, City Bank of Montreal, Banque du Peuple, Bank of Toronto, Commercial Bank of Canada, Ontario Bank, Bank of Brantford, Canadian Bank of Commerce, Royal Bank of Canada, Banque Nationale, Bank of Nova Scotia.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the Queen's birthday, a little boy, son of Mr. Wm. Pringle, who lives near the Great Western Station was kicked on the head by a horse which was running at large, and died on Thursday last from his injuries.

A new and cheap edition of Chamber's Miscellany is for sale at Thornton's. The work contains a fund of very interesting and very useful knowledge.

O'NEIL'S SALE.—Our readers will remember that the sale of Mr. O'Neil's furniture commences on Monday at ten o'clock. We hope there will be a large attendance and brisk bidding.

The census of the County of Waterloo shows that six Quakers, twelve Jews and thirty infidels have their homes within its limits. Of the last mentioned nineteen reside in Galt, and eleven in Hespeler. The total population of the county is 35,614.

SERVICES TO-MORROW.—We are requested to state that Mr. McVicar will preach in Rev. Mr. Torrance's church to-morrow, in the forenoon, and Rev. Mr. Moffat will preach in the evening. Mr. Moffat will preach in Chalmers' church in the morning, and Rev. Mr. Wardrop in the evening. Mr. Wardrop will preach in Duff's church, Pushtin, in the afternoon, and Mr. McVicar in the evening.

DEATH OF MR. HENRY J. RAYMOND.—The cable announces the sudden death, in London, on the morning of the 17th inst., of Mr. Henry J. Raymond, editor of the New York Times. Mr. Raymond was one of the ablest journalists of the United States, and added to his writing abilities the qualifications of a first-class orator. All who remember his speech at the Dickens' banquet in New York will admit that his talents as a speaker were of the first order. He began newspaper life on the staff of the Tribune, to which he came a young man fresh from college, and although in a few years he became a rival of Greeley, still the old man in his recollections of a Busy Life had the magnanimity to bear witness to his ability and energy. In politics Mr. Raymond was a Republican, but of a much more moderate stripe than the journal in the office of which he graduated. The Times has lately been almost singular in its denunciations of war between England and the States, and it has always been an exponent of the moderate views which must have subsisted between the ultra-Republicans and the ultra-Democrats.

CHAPTER XXXIII.
AMONG PIRATES.
When the sun rose they looked in all directions in search of a sail;

Good heaven! William, ejaculated Robert.
The Phantom ship, as I am alive!

What ship is she? asked Ben, eyeing her keenly.
My eye, he added, if that ain't the craft that passed us last night in the gale.

In course I saw her. And for that part so did every one in the Petrel. She was close enough, wasn't she? If it hadn't been so dark between the flashes, and the hurricane such a terror, I'd a said she was the flying Dutchman—she came upon us so ghost-like.

Do you know the vessel? asked the youth.
Never seed her in all my life, replied the boatswain, after he had scanned her narrowly for the space of a minute.

What sort of a ship would you take her to be? asked William again.
Why, sir, to tell the truth, I'm a sort of unwilling to answer that. She doesn't show a flag for one thing, and she didn't last night neither. Then, she's a confoundedly rakish craft, and the black hull looks bad. But far worse nor that, I didn't like the looks of the men in her as I saw them through the light-house last night.

In a word, she's a pirate, answered William in a grave tone.
The Lord send she's something better nor that, remarked Ben. But I do have my thoughts of her, and they run that way.

And I believe your thoughts are perfectly right. I and my friends have had a tussle with her captain and crew before. We knew them again in a moment as they sailed past us in the storm.

Was it in these same seas, sir? asked Ben, seriously.
It was not on sea at all, it was on land! returned William, and for with he gave Ben a brief history of the attack on the waggon in the Californian ravine.

Well, sir, observed Ben, as he slowly turned the quid in his cheek, it's the first time I ever heard of a sea pirate being a land pirate at the same time, but he must have had his ship in a creek in the coast, and taken to her after you and the redskins made him ashore. Pirate or no pirate, however, they sight us and mean to take us up, that's certain; and they'll not like us any better for what happened afore.

Perhaps when they recognize us they will sail on and leave us to our fate, said Robert.
And mayhap, sir, that would be better than the fate they'll give us if they do take us in tow, said Ben, shaking his head forebodingly. Here he comes, and he is going to haul us.

The strange vessel was now less than a quarter of a mile distant, and they could see the men in her, crowding the side and gazing with evident curiosity. They swarmed on the deck and in the rigging in great numbers, there being far more of them than a vessel of the size required if engaged in a peaceful and lawful occupation. They observed now that she carried guns, though her portholes were closed, and that the ferocious looking crew had pistols and cutlasses in their belts.

The Captain was in the rigging, with his trumpet in his hand, and presently he raised it to his lips, and there came in hoarse tones over the now silent sea—
Boat a-hey!

Ay, ay, responded Ben, with the true boatswain's rattle.
Why don't you come alongside?

We may as well do it at once, seeing that we cannot better ourselves, said William, in a low tone.

The others acquiesced, and the ship having borne up, they ran in under her lee, conscious that as they approached they were watched with much curiosity by the savage faces that were gazing down on them from the deck, as well as by the Captain himself from his place in the rigging.

Suddenly they observed a commotion among them, as if a discovery had been made, and gleaming eyes were cast down with eager questioning looks, while rapid words, spoken in various languages betokened recognition and excitement consequent thereon.

A gruff voice directed them to make the boat fast and come up the side, and to enable them to do this latter a rope-ladder was lowered down to them.

William was the first to ascend, and as he stepped on deck he was confronted with the scowling looks of many ferocious and angry faces, among whom he recognised the countenance of Jim Meredithson. The Captain's tall form he observed standing some distance aft, with his arms folded across his breast, and observing him attentively. But he did not move from his place till William's three companions appeared on deck, and were surrounded by the swarthy, ill-favoured faces of his men. Then he made his way through the group, and stepped with a grim countenance stood before them, eyeing William particularly with a glance of vengeful significance.

ERYSIPELAS OR ST. ANTHONY'S FIRE.

It is a spreading inflammation, characterized by a redness of the skin, accompanied by a sensation of heat and itching, and more or less a constitutional derangement with swelling of the subcutaneous cellular tissues. Every part of the body is liable to erysipelas inflammation, but it most frequently appears on the face, legs and feet. Females are more subject to it than males. After a short time small vesicles, similar to those produced by blisters, present themselves. They are filled with a thin watery fluid, and are a great source of annoyance until destroyed. Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor is a never-failing remedy. For sale by E. Harvey & Co., Guelph.

Pope Pius the Ninth, feeling profoundly the whispered evil and crushing burdens imposed upon the nations of Christendom by their gigantic armaments, intends, it is announced, to lay before the approaching Ecumenical Council, at Rome, a proposal for the general adoption of international arbitration in lieu of war.

PERRY DAVIS & SON, Proprietors, d.w.3m Montreal.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.
The necessity of a due proportion of iron in the blood is well known to all medical men; when it becomes reduced from any cause whatever, the whole system suffers, the weakest point being first attacked, and a feeling of languor, lassitude and "all-goneness" pervades the system. Stimulants only afford temporary relief, and have the same effect as giving a tired horse the whip instead of oats. The true remedy is to supply the blood with the necessary quantity of iron. This can be done by using the

a proteptic solution of the protoxide of iron, which is so prepared that it assimilates at once with the blood, giving strength, vigor and new life to the whole system.
To take medicine to cure diseases occasioned by a deficiency of iron in the blood, without restoring to the system, is like trying to repair a building when the foundation is gone.
An eminent divine says: "I have been using the Peruvian Syrup for some time past—it gives me new vigour, buoyancy of spirits, elasticity of muscle."
Famphlets containing certificates of cures, and recommendations from some of the most eminent physicians, clergymen and others, will be sent free to any address.
The genuine has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass. Sold by all druggists.
