NEW TOWN COUNCIL ORGANIZES

First Session Held Last Thursday Evening in Town Hall.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

New Bye-law Proposed.—Board of Health Report Held Over.—A Short Session.

The first session of the newly elected Town Council was held on Thursday evening, 18th instant, in the Town Hall. The entire board, consisting of Mayor S. W. Miller, and Aldermen John R. Allison, W. Herbert Belyea, John Clarke, Thos. A. Clarke, James M. Falconer, Charles J. Morrissey, Leslie B. McMurdo and John Russell were present.

The minutes of last session were read and approved.

Mayor Miller said in part: Gentlemen of the Council:

Allow me first to congratulate you all on the confidence reposed in you by the rate-payers of the town, in electing you to the Council Board, and trust that you, each and all, will enter upon your duties in the same spirit of seriousness as I do in a desire to promote the town's interest, by lessening expenses if at all possible, and increasing revenue, and trust that each and every committee will exert themselves in the utmost along these lines.

There are, as you are all aware, great chances for improvement in our town affairs, which will necessitate a lot of work, and one of the committees which I feel have a lot of work on hand to be done, is the Bye-Law Committee, as it is my earnest desire and intention that before our term of office expires the town shall have a complete set of bye-laws compiled in book form, as to my mind it is a serious drawback and a reflection on the town, that this question of bye-laws has been deferred and neglected to this late date.

It will be a pleasure to me during our term of office to assist in and all committees to facilitate and further the duties incumbent upon them in their different departments, and in fact it is my desire that I assist them in their efforts to render good service to the public in general.

Now that the time has gone by for speech-making and as the time has arrived for each and every one of us to get down to practical work, I will defer making any further remarks at the present but in conclusion again invite the hearty co-operation of the council to work in harmony in our efforts to serve the public.

Town Clerk Lindon reported the results of the civic election on the 16th, adding that the Mayor and Aldermen had filed the necessary qualifications.

Aldermen Belyea, John Clark and Morrissey were appointed a nominating committee. After retiring a while this committee reported, and except in one instance their recommendations were accepted. The standing committees for ensuing year will be:—

Finance—Ald. Belyea, Morrissey, T. A. Clarke.

Public Works—Ald. McMurdo, Allison, John Clark.

Police and Appointment to Office Committee—Ald. T. A. Clarke, J. M. Falconer, J. R. Allison.

SPEAKS ON FISHERY MATTERS.

Mr. W. S. Loggie, M. P. Advocates in Parliament the Cause of the Maritime Fishermen.

TO ASSIST SHIPMENT.

Hon. Mr. Templeman Explains the Special Fishery Transportation Estimate.

In the House of Commons on April 5th, the fisheries law was under discussion. Mr. Ames complained that on the Gaspé coast the meshes of the nets were too small, and that the law was flagrantly violated.

Mr. J. J. Hughes—What should be the legal size?

Mr. Loggie. I would like to say, for the information of the hon. gentleman, that the true legal size of the mesh for salmon is 5 inches, and that the mesh used is for 6 1-8 to 7 inches, that is, for the Gulf of St. Lawrence salmon. For the large salmon that go up the Restigouche river the size of the mesh used is 7 inches: that is for a salmon of from 20 to 25 lbs. A mesh of from 6 1-4 to 6 3-4 inches is used for a 10-pound salmon.

The law does not provide that nets along the sea-coast shall be raised over Sunday, it is an impossibility.

In the afternoon the sea breeze that comes up makes it impossible to bring them on shore. On the Miramichi river the nets are put up on pickets from Saturday night till Monday morning or after midnight on Sunday.

Mr. Ganong.—It will be interesting to know if the same law applies on the north shore to herring.

On the south shore of New Brunswick we have to allow the herring to have Sunday as well as the working man. Perhaps the gentleman from the northern part of New Brunswick will tell us whether they have a different law on the north shore in regard to herring nets from what we have in the county of Charlotte. We would like to hear from the hon. member for Northumberland (Mr. Loggie).

Mr. Loggie.—I would like to say for the information of the hon. gentleman that herring are not caught to any great extent on the Miramichi river. What herring fishing is done is on the sea-coast, and I understand that there is no law with regard to it. Ordinary gill nets are used, and there is nothing in the way of pound nets such as are used in the Bay of Fundy.

There is no law fixing any particular time for catching herring. In the spring there is what is known as the spring run, when immense quantities are caught mostly used for lobster bait. Then there are no herring of any consequence until the fall, and they are taken entirely by gill nets, and not by traps as in the Bay of Fundy.

Hon. Mr. Templeman explained the estimates of $25,000 for the encouragement of better transportation and conservation of fresh fish from the points of capture and shipment to the larger cities. This is a new plan to assist the ship-

CLAIMS RECOGNIZED.

W. S. Loggie M. P. Has Been Working in Men's Interests For Some Time.

A letter received from W. S. Loggie, M. P. Ottawa, agrees the cheering information that while the Department of Justice does not admit that the men injured in the Beaver Brook wreck have any legal right to receive compensation for damages received and the hardships that have arisen out of the injuries received at that wreck, the department has decided to meet the men and endeavor to come to a settlement with them.

Mr. Alward, Assistant Law clerk of the Department of Railways and Canals is expected to be in Moncton shortly and will go fully into the matter. He will also see the injured parties or their representatives, and endeavor to come to a satisfactory settlement.

provinces and Lake ports to Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, etc.

Mr. Loggie.—May I be permitted to say a word? I think one reason why this encouragement is proposed, is that at the present time, the express rates from Boston, Portland and New York to Montreal and Toronto are very much less than from the maritime provinces; and as the product is perishable and must be carried by express, our fish cannot be placed on the Ontario market in competition with fish from Boston and New York.

Mr. Huggart. Oh dear! that is worse still.

Mr. Loggie.—I understand it, the money will probably be used under some arrangement with the express companies, so that the fish from the east can be placed on the markets of Ontario, and Quebec, which cannot be done at the present time.

Mr. Bennett. But we have fish in Ontario too.

Mr. Loggie.—But you want variety. You have not the salt sea salmon we have been talking about, or the fresh water lobster. If you want these and other salt water fish at reasonable prices, and brought from Nova Scotia coast instead of from the Maine coast, this will help to do it. As a matter of fact, the express rates from Halifax to Toronto, are excessive they represent figures 2 cents per pound. It is impossible to lay the goods down in any other way than by express. If this project can be carried into effect it will benefit the whole Dominion, especially the eastern portion. But both consumers and producers will be benefited.

WHO SHE WAS

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused it to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estee, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 25th, 1829, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.

In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the harvest-fields and outside vegetable foods of all kinds, so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies expressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured and it became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a great of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkhams sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until today Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not all she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equalled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With woman assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

MOTHER'S SNUGGERY.

It Should Be a Place For Comfort, Rest and Comfort.

Every woman should, if possible, have a place in her home where she can be absolutely alone for a part of the day at least. Preferably this apartment should not be invaded by other members of the family at any time save by the special invitation of its owner. The home mother especially needs a place where she can rest or read, secure from interruption. The living room does not suffice. Like the nursery, it is the common gathering place of the family and is rarely vacant. Here of course the mother likes to be at certain times with her husband and her children, but every woman needs a short time, perhaps only ten minutes a day, on a comfortable lounge, with all her special treasures around her, when she can think quietly or divert her mind from the routine of being the mainstay of the establishment.

It is better to have a separate room for this snugger. The bedroom will suffice, but a small room next to it is more comfortable, particularly as in modern houses there is little or no space for a couch or even a window seat in the sleeping apartment by the time the necessary bed and bureau are placed in it.

Now is the best place for daytime naps. It should be kept fresh for night in order to rest its occupants properly, nor is it really comfortable for a lounging place. No, a couch, with plenty of soft pillows, with a quarter of an hour daily devoted to its luxuries, is responsible for more quiet nerves and headache cures than its owner always appreciates.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE SMALL BOY.

Keep Him Busy and Turn Part of His Energy to Account.

There is no power quite like the energy of a small boy, says the Mothers' Magazine. In spite of all the jokes at the expense of the slow messenger boy no other human being can run errands with the astonishing celerity with which the average small boy accomplishes the feat. A man isn't in it when it comes to covering the ground. Any possessor of a husband and a son knows which one he would send if he were in a hurry for carpet tacks. It is a good thing to turn part of this energy to account, and it is foolish to expect a boy with nothing to do to be quiet. He is a much happier boy with a lot of interesting things to do. If the something be useful it benefits the mother at the same time. A little of the boy's superabundant energy applied to the lawn mower will keep the grass cut. A little more expended on the old boards and boxes in the cellar will supply the hungry fire of furnaces with kindling. A boy that has piled wood for an hour after school is willing usually to stop wriggling long enough to eat his supper, and he will be hungry enough besides to leave all conversation to his elders.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Dyspepsia should eat breakfast before often. It is said by some to be almost a cure for dyspepsia.

When a cut will not heal, saturate a piece of absorbent cotton with coal oil and bind on.

Hot milk baths are recommended for eczema on the hands. Let the milk scald, not boil, and apply generously as hot as can be borne, letting it dry on.

For sudden attacks of rheumatism, pains in the joints, etc., a liniment made of mustard and water will often prove an effective temporary remedy.

A strong solution of salt and warm water applied to bandages will be found useful for sprains and bruises when nothing better is at hand.

For a nervous headache a flannel cloth dipped in hot water and placed first on the temples and then on the back of the head at the base of the brain is sure to give relief.

When Moving.

If especially fine pictures are to be moved they should be either carried in the hands of the owner or put into wooden frames, the latter screwed to the back so that the edges and front will not be scratched or marred. Looking glasses to prevent any damage should never be covered, for all movers and assistants are more careful when they see a mirror exposed than when it is carefully wrapped and covered and marked with a label of glass, etc. Pieces of burlap or old comforters thrown over furniture to make sure the surfaces and edges will not be scratched are all the protection necessary in a short moving trip, though if desired a dainty gold chair may be covered first with tissue paper, then with excelsior or heavy wrapping paper, the latter bound on with twine to make sure it will not be rubbed or marred in handling.

The Ideal Hostess.

It is in small details that a hostess makes her mark, and it is hardly possible to overdo the provision of extra comforts. When the guest is an elderly person or somewhat of an invalid a spirit lamp and small saucer will probably prove invaluable during the night. A tin of biscuits represents also a kindly forethought, while the housemaid should always be instructed to inquire of each guest if any other small matters are required, a hot water bottle at night and extra blankets making all the difference. A card giving the times of the postal deliveries and departures should always be placed in a photograph frame on the writing table or hung on a prominent spot on the wall, the times of meals being likewise included. A railroad time table should also be in evidence.

DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The proposed legislation through the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is of the utmost importance, and it is receiving a great deal of attention, not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the leading doctors and druggists. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class remedies welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very serious throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. Two leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analyzed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed no other medicine but Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that will "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restorer of all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recognize this fact.

"At the age of 25 my lungs were in a terrible state. I had a gripe the year before; it settled on my lungs and I lost steadily growing years. I got down so low I was in bed for six weeks. I had consulted the best doctors and they could do nothing more for me. Then I started to use Psychine. I took the medicine for more than a year. It certainly did wonders for me. I am now as strong as I was before my sickness."

W. E. H. Morphet, Ont.

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is the greatest of tonics, building up the system, increasing the appetite, purifying the blood, aids digestion, and acts directly upon the throat and lungs, giving tone and vigor to the entire system. ### JANEVILLE

Janeville, April 15th.—During the last three weeks we have had some very bad snow storms, but the weather has turned soft and the snow is disappearing very fast.

The mails have been very irregular for the past two weeks, the train being unable to make her regular trips on account of the snow-storms; but the train is clear again and we hope to have better mail service.

Mr. Spurgeon Scott and Mr. Johnnie Ward returned home this week after spending the winter in N. H.

Mr. Charles Jennings is home from C'ton where he spent the winter.

A. J. W. McKenzie spent a few days of this week in Restigouche County.

Vapo-Cresolene

Established 1879

Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Cough, Grip, Asthma, Diphtheria

Cresolene is a boon to Asthmatics

Does it not seem more effective to breathe in a remedy to cure disease of the breathing organs than to take the remedy into the stomach?

It cures because the air rendered strongly antiseptic is carried over the diseased surface with every breath, giving prolonged and constant treatment. It is invaluable to mothers with small children.

Those of a consumptive tendency find it invaluable relief from coughs or influenza conditions of the throat.

Sold by druggists. Send postal for booklet. L. J. BENTLEY, Mfg. Co., Montreal, Canada.

BABY'S HAIR.

How to Make It Curl When It Is Inclined to Be Straight.

Straight hair is certainly not becoming to small children, however pretty the color may be, and mamma and nurse may be excused if they resort to fair means as to induce a natural curl in babyhood.

It has often been noticed that where a little care has been taken to foster an inclination toward wavy hair in earliest youth this has resulted in a becoming growth in later years, and by means of brushing and washing the head in the correct fashion much may be done to encourage a tendency to curl when the child is young.

A baby's hair should always be brushed upward instead of downward, and as each lock is treated it should be given a little twist with the finger, this operation having a particularly good and lasting effect when the hair is damp. Persevered in daily, this will be found to work wonders, even in cases where the natural growth was perfectly straight, although it must be noted that for the first week or two before the hair has become accustomed to the upward trend the effect is hardly pleasing.

One of the best shampoos for a child's hair, especially when long and thick, consists of a well beaten egg made into a froth with hot water and rubbed into the roots of the hair. Borax and ammonia, especially the latter, should be sparingly used, ammonia in particular being "inclined to damage the color and shimmer of fair hair, while it frequently causes it to become brittle and split at the ends.

THE ATHLETIC LIFE.

Fewer Fainting Women One of Its Good Results.

Athletics and a more sane system of living have put an end to fainting fit women. That is the opinion of an eminent physician who as a young man used to visit a score of "fainting ladies," as he laughingly puts it, each day.

"Not many years ago it was the fashion for a woman to scream and drop down into a dead faint at the least provocation," said the doctor recently. "But now women are ashamed to faint. It is too kittenish. All women want to appear strong even if they are naturally weak. And as a sex they are considerably more robust and more fascinating than they were a few years back."

"The reason for it is that women go in for more outdoor life and recreation than did their mothers of their grandmothers. They may partake of more highly seasoned food and eat more than is good for them at times, but they lead a more athletic life and for that reason do not have to faint, legitimately or otherwise, no matter what the shock may be. We are going to have a stronger race in consequence. For every woman who faints over a sudden shock there are scores who are satisfied to scream and let it go at that. Fainting women are exceptions these days."—New York Press.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Braid the hair every night into four or five strands, and it will make the hair appear softer and thicker as well as naturally wavy.

Remember that facial eruptions are caused usually by autoinfection; so keep the digestive organs active, bathe daily and drink plenty of water.

To develop the neck bathe it with warm water, then rub with olive oil, using a rotary motion. In the morning use cold water and rub with alcohol.

Rub cocoa butter or mutton tallow into your nails every night and gently press the adherent skin away from the roots. The hangnails will soon disappear.

The constant use of toilet pumice with a lather of toilet soap will keep the growth of superfluous hair invisible, but it will not permanently remove it.

Breathing exercises, vocal culture, callisthenics and cold salt water sponge baths will develop a full, high chest. They must be practiced with regularity, however, to be of benefit.

Wall Sanitation.

Disease germs lurk in cracks and crannies of walls, and even fumigation does not always reach them unless the old coverings are thoroughly scraped from the walls. Yet many people from economy or carelessness do have one paper pasted over another, regardless of the fact that even though there has been no contagious disease in a long period of exposure. The papers themselves, particularly those of a cheaper grade, are excellent harbors for germs or may exhale poisons owing to the dyes used in their coloring. The idea of putting a clean paper on top of its dusty predecessor is like putting a clean rock over a soiled one. Such a method of dressing would disgust the heart of a cleanly woman, and why should she not treat her house as she would herself?

Scorched Linens.

It is a fact that when linens are badly scorched the spot can be removed if treated in the following manner: Extract the pieces from two peeled onions and rub into an agate or granite vessel. Add to it half an ounce of white castile soap cut into small pieces and two ounces of fuller's earth. Mix them together and then stir in a cup of vinegar. Rub the vessel over the fire and let the contents thoroughly boil. When the mixture has become cool spread it over the scorched linen and let it dry upon a cloth. When well dried wash out thoroughly.

Safest Medicine for Women's Complaints

Women certainly do neglect themselves. They work too hard—over-tax their strength—and then wonder why they suffer with diseases peculiar to their sex.

Most cases of female trouble start when the bowels become inactive—the kidneys strained—and the skin not cared for. Poisons, which should leave the system by these organs, are taken up by the blood and inflame the delicate female organs.

Fruit-a-tives

remove the CAUSE of these diseases. "Fruit-a-tives" sweeten the stomach—make the bowels move regularly every day—strengthen the kidneys—improve the action of the skin—and thus purify the blood.

"Fruit-a-tives" take away those distressing headaches, backaches and bearing-down pains, and make women well and strong. "Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices, intensified, with tonics and antiseptics added, etc. A box—6 for $2.00. All druggists—or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Just two kinds of soap—the genuine made from the very finest vegetable oils and flower perfumes—and the imitations made from chemical perfumes and chemically bleached animal fats, to resemble, as much as possible in appearance, the genuine.

"Baby's Own" Soap

Absolutely no expense is spared to make "Baby's Own" as good a soap as can be made, yet it costs you no more than the inferior imitation.

ESTABLISHED 1867.
HARRY HARVEY STUART, Editor and Manager
Newcastle, N. B., April 24th, 1907.

OUR OPPORTUNITY.

The promoters of the proposed new industry for Newcastle will return shortly to endeavor to make final arrangements for establishing a foundry and machine shop plant in this town. About $100,000 stock will be offered the citizens in small shares, giving the much desired opportunity to all who have ready money which they would invest in an industry that promises returns of at least eight per cent. per annum. Such enterprises in Amherst and elsewhere pay a high dividend, even on watered stock, and there is no reason why an industry of that nature should not prove a success here. If it comes, steady work will be guaranteed to many men who now have employment only part of the year. And it will by attracting other lines of business, tend to rapidly increase our working population—the main dependence of our country.

CLAIMS RECOGNIZED.

We are glad that at last the claims of the widow of the man killed in the Beaver Brook collision in February and those of the workmen injured in the same accident have been recognized by the Dominion government, which is now preparing to grant full compensation. This will be most welcome news to the families that were so long crippled by the enforced inactivity of their bread-winners.

Mr. W. S. Loggie, M. P., has, without ceasing, determinedly advocated the men's cause; and it is largely through his efforts that the government, while not admitting any legal liability in the matter, has decided to make amends by a special grant.

THE NEW LABOR LAW.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux's new Labor Law, that forbids strikes and lockouts until after investigation has been made by government commissioners, is being thoroughly tested. The recent strike of Nova Scotia miners was called off immediately on the strikers being informed that their action was illegal; but the British Columbia miners have quit work and have apparently settled down for a trial of strength with the government as well as with the capitalists, into whose hands they claim the government is playing. The issue of such a contest is not doubtful. The mine-owners having the law on their side, and the organized workers as yet to change the law, the strike must fail, as nearly all strikes have failed in the past.

The new Law, however, is driving the labor unions into politics. Forbidden to strike, they are slowly but surely awakening to the folly of purely industrial strikes, and are beginning to see that, in order to succeed, they must unite at the ballot box as well.

PERMISSION TO SELL.

In the equity court on Friday afternoon Judge Barker on motion of Mr. C. H. Allen, granted an order to Mr. George Watt and Miss Jane Mitchell of Newcastle to sell certain lots of land at Newcastle belonging to Blanche Gertrude Mitchell, a lunatic. The proceeds of the sale are to be devoted to the support of the said Blanche Gertrude Mitchell at the provincial hospital.

AN INTERESTING DEBATE.

The Orangemen of Hopewell Cape N. B., recently held a most lively and interesting debate in their lodge room on the question of Public Ownership of all public utilities such as railways, etc. The cause of Public Ownership was championed by Bro. John I. Smith, leader of the Albert County Socialist group, and, after an argument continuing through two successive meetings, won the decision.

MRS. W. J. MILLER.

The death of Mrs. William John Miller took place in Chatham on Monday, 22nd inst. Deceased lady was 82 years of age. Her late husband, formerly one of Newcastle's most prominent citizens, died last fall. Mrs. Miller's body will be brought to Newcastle from Chatham on to-morrow's accommodation train, funeral will take place on the arrival of the latter, and interment will be in St. James Cemetery.

LYNCH VS. RICHARDS.

The case of Timothy Lynch vs. Richards Co. has come to an end. The Chief Justice and Judges Barker and McLeod upheld the verdict of $657.64 secured by Mr. Lynch at the last sitting of the York Circuit court, while Judges Huntington and Landry went so far as to ask that it be increased to $1100. The action was brought to recover tolls alleged to be due for driving the defendant's lumber on the Southwest Miramichi during the seasons of 1904 and 1905.

SCOTT ACT CASES.

Mr. Wilbur H. MacLean of the Royal Hotel was charged on Thursday with selling liquor. After hearing several witnesses the case was postponed till Wednesday. The Miramichi Hotel paid two fines last week. In the police court Monday, Mr. William MacCrae of the Royal, was charged by Scott Act Inspector John H. Ashford with illegally selling liquor between April 1 and 19. After examination of Wm. McKernin, who swore that defendant sold him liquor between those dates, court adjourned till Thursday.

(New York Herald.)

With millions at his command, a partner with Charles M. Schwab in some of the greatest mines of the West and known as "The Nevada Man" because he is credited with doing more than any other to make the state containing Goldfield, Bullfrog and Tonopah famous, John McKane, to satisfy the cravings of his higher nature, has turned now to the composing of anthems.

When John McKane, fresh from his training in a bank in his native town of Dunfermline, Scotland, which, by the way, is also that of Andrew Carnegie, went to New Brunswick, in 1884, to enter the service of the Royal Bank of Canada it was not with the slightest idea that he would ever become a mining king. There he toiled as a banker for a decade, till the fame of Rossland's mines was bruited abroad. Then McKane was stirred. The New Brunswick town was too dull for him. He "yearned toward the sky line where the strange roads go down," and, taking Horace Greeley's advice, as he phrases it, "hit the trail."

In 1896 there was a boom in Rossland and into that boom McKane plunged. He made many a strike and in many a claim money, but not "big money." Then he went into politics—was a candidate once for the legislative house of British Columbia and once ran for membership in the parliament of the Dominion of Canada at Ottawa. On both occasions he was beaten, but beaten only by a narrow margin and after a hard fight. Of one of these instances he tells a story that well illustrates the customs of the mining camps of the west.

"It was when I was making the race in the district of Yale-Cariboo," says he. "My opponent for the franchises of the miners was a lawyer named Gallagher, who was known far and wide by the sobriquet of 'Big Bill.' He was six feet four, that's why.

"There is nothing small about Yale-Cariboo. The constituency stretches from near the northern boundary line of the United States far northward into the uttermost parts of British Columbia—hundreds of miles. After I had campaigned the more settled parts of this tract there was still one polling place I had not visited, the 'Hundred and Fifty Mile House.' Neither had Gallagher. Then we decided to go together. Peary may have got farther north than that place, but I doubt it.

"However after days of travelling through the mountains we arrived; the free independent electors were gathered in the biggest saloon in the place, and the opening having fallen to me, I started to deliver my address. I hadn't twenty words out when a big miner stood up and motioned to me to stop, turned around and said:

"Boys, we don't know McKane and we don't know Big Bill Gallagher and we don't care about the election. Let's cut out the talk, settle it by a game of draw and the forty-five votes in the camp goes to the winner of the first jackpot."

"Well, that was popular. It took the meeting was adjourned right there, and had not Big Bill Gallagher got the first jackpot and the forty-five votes he would never have won his seat in parliament and I would probably have never seen Nevada."

McKane admits that when he's not reading or fighting he's thinking, and when the boom days of Rossland began to flatten out and the stocks of his holdings there began to fall he thought and thought to some purpose. It was then that the scientific papers first began to tell a somewhat incredulous world of the probable riches hidden under the sands of the Nevada desert and to the hidden poesy in the man's nature the call of the lonely wastes of desert sand was to the full as strong as the lure of gold to his more practical side. Combined they proved irresistible, and leaving Rossland McKane "struck out" for Nevada.

A QUICK TRIP.

Mr. Everett V. Miller, late of Newcastle, along with two friends left Tonopah, Nevada, at 8:30 a. m. on the morning of the 13th inst., and made the trip to Los Angeles, 520 miles distant, in an automobile in twenty-two hours and forty minutes actual running time.

stress in Nevada McKane had obtained sufficient ground to work on but found himself lacking in capital and decided to come to New York to procure the funds needed to develop the properties he had acquired. Charles M. Schwab was at that time looking toward the west. McKane sought him out and after some negotiation the steel capitalist accompanied the miner to the desert land to see for himself. Through snow and rain and sleet they pushed their way into Tonopah, where McKane held the Tonopah Extension mine. Mr. Schwab looked about him, was soon convinced, and the partnership then entered into, in 1903, endures to-day. How many millions Mr. Schwab has made from the trip taken on McKane's advice he only knows.

With the advent of Schwab into the affairs of Nevada started the dream of capital necessary for the mining development of the state, and the result was soon seen in more stable values of the properties and the steady stream of gold they produced. Then McKane's fortune was on a firm basis and a brief vacation was taken from alkali dust and the meagre comforts of the camps by "the Nevada man." For a holiday he went far into the north woods of Canada, sunk the man of action in the dreamer and communed with Nature in her wildest mood.

While there to him came the news of the death of Sir Henry Irving, whom of all actors he had most admired. Steeped in the melancholy woods, with the poems of Burns and of Shakespeare set to music in the murmuring of the pines and passing thus in cadence through his brain, the parting words of the actor-knight stamped themselves upon his brain. "Through night to light. Into Thy hands, O Lord; into Thy hands," as they were uttered as the curtain fell, on that last performance of "A Becket" at Bradford. And the sighing of the wind in the lonely forest took up the refrain "Into Thy hands," and there in the solitude John McKane's first anthem was born, and to-day it is being published in New York.

Into Thy hands
When sinks my earthly sun and time shall be no more
May my reward be Thy "Well done" upon the farther shore;
Into Thy hands O Lord, I commend my spirit,
Trusting in Thy precious word and for Thy dear Son's merit:
Into Thy hands, O Lord; into Thy hands.

Don't Condemn Yourself to Bright's Disease

TAKE GIN PILLS NOW

Bright's Disease claims its thousands yearly solely because people won't heed nature's warnings. Pain in the back and constant headaches mean Kidney Trouble. Swollen hands and ankles, and pain in the joints, mean Kidney Trouble. Frequent desire to urinate—urine hot and scalding—mean Kidney Trouble. Neglecting sick kidneys means Bright's Disease.

If you know your kidneys are affected—or if you suspect they are affected—then the help they need—GIN PILLS. Taking GIN PILLS regularly soothes the irritated, inflamed membranes—gives to the kidneys new strength—corrects every kidney and bladder trouble.

Remember, May 15, 1937. I needed the simple box of GIN PILLS and was greatly benefited by them. My kidneys were in such bad condition I could not sit or sleep without great pain. In fact, they pained me nearly all the time. I have taken three boxes, working all the time at heavy work on the railroad and did not lose a day.

And they are sold on a positive guarantee that they will cure you or money refunded. Put them to the test with the understanding that you must be cured or you get your money back. So sure are we that GIN PILLS are just what you need in your own case, that we will send you a free sample to try. Write, mentioning this paper, to the Bole Drug Co., Winnipeg.

An Antique

By MARTHA MCCULLOCH-WILLIAMS

Copyright, 1936, by P. C. Macmillan

"Did you ever? That bonnet was old fashioned when Noah went into the ark," Miss Althea Evans said, nodding toward the new girl in the choir.

Isabella Strange, her chum and rival in Eastwood society, giggled and answered loud enough for the new girl to hear: "You are shockingly ignorant, Leathy. Don't you know there are people who take pride in their antiques?"

Involuntarily, it seemed, the new girl put her hand up to the plume which drooped to touch masses of bright waving hair. The plume was not dragged; nothing, indeed, about the hat showed a touch of wear. But it was at least three seasons behind the style, also very becoming to the wearer. She was slim and tall, with sherry wine eyes and a creamy, rose tinted complexion. In the lips the roses burned to clear scarlet, and there was an adorable dimple lurking at one side. Dark brows, delicately arched, gave an accent to the face, an accent repeated by the gold ligaments of the abundant brown hair. Thus nature explained the situation. A girl who looked that way could afford to be old fashioned, and two other girls, enormously stylish, but with no looks to boast, could not help but be ill natured.

Benson, the choir leader, a thin man, perpetually scowling, but wholly through near sight, wheeled stiffly upon Althea and said: "The solo? Have you practiced it as you promised? Let's try it first thing."

Althea turned her back to him. "Pig! Does he think I mean to waste my singing?" she whispered loudly to Isabella. Over her shoulder she added languidly: "Mr. Benson, I'll sing my solo Sunday after next. Some—some friends of mine," significant emphasis on the friends, "are coming specially to hear me. Until then you must make out with—the rest."

"As you will, Miss Evans," Benson said, a flush creeping up to his sallow cheek. "But you promised. I—depended on the promise. And it is much to me that the music shall be even."

"I dare say, but I shan't sing except when I feel like it," Althea said, with a touch of insolence.

Her father was head of the vestry, and she thought she knew Benson dared not resent anything she might do.

It took her breath to have him say firmly: "In that case you are quite useless. Music, a great gift, a great blessing, does not come without work. If you will not work unsparringly you will hinder rather than help. You shan't work—for your own sake. You have voice, oh, yes, but it needs heart in it. Unless you grow to love the work you will never get the heart. Your singing will be—what you say—dumb—like a street piano that one may play with a crank."

"Really, this—this is beyond endurance," Althea began.

Isabella laughed low and unpleasantly and put her hand over Althea's lips. Then she called to the choir master, who had moved a little way off: "Why don't you try Miss Archer?" nodding toward the new girl. "I'm sure she looks musical—she may be an artist."

Miss Archer smiled daintily, saying: "Oh, thank you. I should like to sing. I love it and have been silent ever since I came—the walls are so thin at Mrs. Wray's, and I should so hate to disturb any one."

"You! What will you care for?" Benson asked, seating himself at the small organ. The girl bent her head softly, saying: "Something old and simple. Something my mother sang, please. Say 'Rock of Ages' or 'Coronation'."

"I'm going. I hate all that old rubbish," Althea said, marching toward the door.

Isabella followed her, but paused, her hand on the knob, to say with a giggle, as though speaking to some one still in the room: "You'd better put up a sign outside, 'Antiques to Be Seen and Heard Here'." Then she ran down the steps laughing loudly, and as she overtook Althea caught her arm, shook her gayly and said: "I think we have settled Miss Archer. If she has any sense at all she won't come again—after this."

Whether or no Miss Archer had sense she certainly had a voice. She also—and this was the crown of poor Benson's joy—knew mighty well how to use it. She was withal modest and biddable, giving herself no airs whatever, albeit two Sundays of her solos had sufficed to crowd the church. She kept much to herself and, although frank and friendly enough, put by social opportunities as they came.

Mrs. Judge Gray called the very first Sunday afternoon, a thing she had never been known to do before. She asked Miss Archer to tea; also to dinner next week. But Miss Archer shook her head. She was in Eastwood for rest and must not let herself be beguiled. Besides, she had a charming room, and the woods round about were so enchanting she hated to stay out of them. She was very grateful, but Mrs. Gray must excuse her.

It was the same with all the rest. Young or old found her, if they found her at all, the soul of graciousness, but elusive. She rode out every morning and drove every afternoon, always alone except for a staid liveried groom. The one thing vulnerable about her was her clothes. Exquisite in choice, make, fit and material, they were all so very far from being in fashion. There fore they bred theories. Nobody really knew more of Miss Archer than that she had come to the Wray house with unimpeachable credentials from two of last season's star boarders. So there was some excuse for the romances woven about her. The favorite one was that she had been either suddenly bereft of fortune or that she had inherited a wardrobe and thriftily chose to wear it out unchanged. The fine st made rather against that, so much so that the bereft heiress notion was most generally accepted. But Miss Archer could certainly not have lost all her money. She was liberal to a fault in her expenditures and reckless in the matter of tips to her waiters—indeed, to small boys generally, whether or no they had rendered her a service.

Althea's special friends were delayed; therefore she in turn delayed her return to the choir. She had no doubt whatever that Benson would take her, notwithstanding she admitted that she and Isabella had been foolish. "But how could we dream things would turn out so?" Althea asked of Isabella, who in turn queried:

"Who would have thought Benson could do without you? And does he think he can keep on doing without you when they have the service of thanks?"

"Of course he can't," Althea said, almost tearfully, "because the thanks are mostly for Cousin Rob, and everybody knows he won't care for anything except to hear me sing."

Cousin Rob was, understood, a lieutenant in the navy, for whose escape from typhoon and other perils Althea felt called upon to give special thanks. There were other Eastwood men, but they had not been mentioned in dispatches for cool and reckless bravery. Moreover, they had not been promoted. So, although they were included in the roster, it was well understood that Lieutenant Robert Starling was the beginning and the end of things.

Althea thrilled to think of herself singing to him, with the multitude hanging breathlessly upon her voice, there in the church, all bedight with flags and oaken boughs. Flowers were held out of place for these hearts of oak. She knew she should do her best. She must, with such inspiration.

So it was a thunderbolt to have Benson say grimly:

"There is no place for you, I am sorry to say. Besides, Miss Archer sings, oh, much, much better! Her notes are gold, where yours are scarcely silver. Tommy Bell has the only voice here does not make this and the penny. He shall sing with her in the special opening anthem. I have myself arranged it. You might be in a choir later on, but you do not know enough. You would try to drown the rest with your big notes. There is the difference. Put Miss Archer in chorus, and Althea would sing exactly in key."

"You are an old bear!" said Althea, and ran home to tell her mother. Before it came to telling her plan was all upset, and by no less a person than Miss Archer, who came swiftly to her and said a lot, but not in many words. The result was when the service of thanks came on there were several surprises, but, if truth must be told, some severe disappointments. For Althea sang the solo and in the anthem, and Miss Archer was no more than a chorister. She subdued her voice admirably and kept in the background as much as she might, yet her name ran all about from lip to lip, so it was not perhaps through occult divination that Lieutenant Robert Starling waited outside the choir loft stair, with at least fifty of his enthusiastic townsmen hanging behind, to see the reason of his letting her.

Verily, they had their reward, for the lieutenant caught both Miss Archer's hands and wrung them as though he would never let go. He spoke to her familiarly, almost entreatingly, and went away with her without a by your leave. When they were safe in the Wray House he said, masterfully, "Now, darling, tell me what is behind this masquerade?"

"Oh, nothing much," Miss Elinor Archer Weasley, actress and gentlewoman, said, with a little laugh. "I wanted to rest, and people wouldn't let me alone, so I determined to play Princess Charming again for just my life. All the costumes were perfectly fresh and perfectly beautiful if the public didn't like them nor me in them, so I've had the play—the play that failed five years ago—on again all summer. You can't think how interesting it's been, and it has helped me—oh, such a lot! Without it I never could have seen just what your people were."

"As if that mattered, as if anything mattered, except that we love each other," Lieutenant Starling said. "You do love me, Nora, darling?"

"I ought not to. It will break the town's heart to have you marry me," Elinor responded. "But I'm mightily afraid that I do."

The Dawn of Conscience.

The development of conscience has been interestingly traced in the career of a dead mouse who for many years was quite uneducated. He thought in pictures and had mental words for only the fewest things. He had no sense of right and wrong. Being often hungry, he stole food—that is to say, he found and took it; not then knowing that it was an offense to do so. Small sums of money he made his own in the same way, and again he saw no wrong. But one day he took from a butcher's counter a piece of money which turned out to be gold. He went into a shop to buy sweets with it, but when he realized the value of the coin he matched it up and ran away. He was horrified, not at the theft, but the extent of it. In the end he buried the piece and from that time stole no more. The shock had quickened conscience into life, and he needed little "converting" when kindly instructors at last took him in hand.—St. James' Gazette.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

OSCILLATING CANDLE.

It Works Like the Walking Beam of a Watt Engine.

The little motor represented herewith operates not by steam nor by electricity nor by compressed air. It possesses no boiler, no cylinder, no piston and consists simply of a stearin candle. Let the reader take a candle and perform the experiment for himself. Insert in the center of the candle and at right angles with it the heads of two pins previously heated. These pins will constitute the axis of the motor and are to be placed upon the edge of two wineglasses. If the two ends of the candles are lighted they will burn, and a drop of stearin will fall into one of the plates placed beneath in order to receive it. The equilibrium of the scale beam will be broken, and the other end of the candle will descend, causing

THE CANDLE IN OPERATION.

ing the end that has just lost the first drop of stearin to rise. This oscillatory motion will cause several drops to fall from the end that has just descended and which in its turn becomes the lighter and will, therefore rise, and the other descends, and the oscillatory motion, slight at first, will take on a greater and greater amplitude, the candle, slightly inclined upon the horizon at first, finally taking a nearly vertical position. There is nothing more interesting than to watch this oscillatory motion, which does not cease unless one blows out the two flames or the two candles are entirely consumed—that is to say, at the end of half an hour. If now it is desired to utilize the motion of the candle while it is in operation it may be connected by a thin wire with small figures cut out of cardboard and jointed, to which it will give a to and fro motion. It may be considered as the walking beam of a Watt engine, and to each extremity may be connected a small piston moving in a vertical cylinder. Finally and more simply there may be fixed to the axis by means of pins, which will keep it at a distance in order to prevent the contact of the flames, a strip of light cardboard, representing a plank, to the extremities of which may be glued two figures that will play a seesaw and thus render the experiment still more attractive to the young.

A Pocket Notebook.

It is not the usual custom of young people to take notes, but as they grow older and their interest in the affairs of life widens they will discover that a number of matters will come to their attention and will slip away again unless there is something to help the memory. While the suggestion may not be of use to many of you, for the benefit of the few who like to be systematic the habit of carrying a little notebook with an alphabetical index is strongly recommended. In this put down at least a brief note regarding what you wish to remember, in each case entering it under the letter beginning the most prominent name or word connected with it. If you cannot put down the exact item you wish to remember at least note where you found it. The amount of time saved by this habit as you grow older will enable you to read a large number of excellent books, for to seek in vain a bit of information is not only extremely irritating, but exceedingly wasteful of time. Particularly in reading will a little notebook prove a great help. It is better to choose a tiny book, so that it will never be in the way.—St. Nicholas.

Pick a Name For Yourself.

One of the customs practiced by our Puritan forefathers was that of inflicting ludicrous and terrifying names upon their children. One Puritan daniel who asked her baptismal name answered, "Through-Much-Tribulation-We-Enter-the-Kingdom-of-Heaven, but for short they call me Tribby." Another unfortunate maiden bore the name The-Gift-of-God-Stringer. A sickly boy was christened Faint-Not-Hewitt. Another labored under Fight-the-Good-Fight-of-Faith-White. A little girl who had a propensity for crying was at the age of eight christened Weep-Not-Billing. There also were Thunder Goldsmith, The-Work-of-God Farmer, Search-the-Scriptures Morton, Be-Courteous Cole and, worst of all, Kill-Sin Pimple.

A Sleeping Bird.

If you have a pet bird look at it closely when it is asleep and you will see that it does not, as is generally believed, tuck its head under its wing. You have heard all your life that a bird sleeps in that way, but it does not. It turns its head and lays it on the soft and yielding feathers of its back, which sometimes entirely hide it.

The Wise Man.

There is a man in our town who is so wondrous wise He knows he cannot sing at all. And so he never tries.

He also knows he has no wit Like many funny folks, And so he never bothers us By getting off his jokes.

And when he has no word to say He's wise enough, though young, To sit about while others talk And hold his little tongue.

OUR BOYS OFF FOR THE WEST.

Two of Our Townsmen Receive a Hearty Send-off From Their Friends.

Messrs. P. J. Danahy and Neil Flemming left Tuesday night on No. 33 for the west. The band serenaded them at the depot and played several appropriate tunes. Both Messrs. Danahy and Flemming have been well known citizens of our town. Although not native born, they have resided here for some years. Mr. Danahy having run a very successful barber business on Castle street, and Neil Flemming in the capacity of clerk, in the drug store of the late lamented Frank R. Dalton, and also with the present owner, Mr. W. L. Durick. The best wishes of the town are extended to these gentlemen for future success and prosperity.

When the express pulled out from the depot cheers were given for the departing boys and also the very efficient band.

On Tuesday evening after the tea hour Mr. Flemming was waited on by the guests of his boarding house, at Mrs. Allingham's and presented with a valuable umbrella with gold mounted handle, in token of the high esteem in which Neil was held by them all.

Following is the address:—

DEAR MR. FLEMING:—

On the eve of your departure from among us to a neighbouring land over which the "Union Jack" has never flown, we feel it our duty to remember our fond days spent together under the hospitality of a lady, such as our present hostess.

You are going out into a world full of wickedness but our earnest prayer is that Providence may daily guide you into the paths of health, wealth, and prosperity. We wish you to accept this small token, as an appreciation of the esteem you have held among us. We earnestly desire that this gift will be of service to you and that should trouble befall you, you shall think of the many days, we hope happy ones, that you have spent during your sojourn with us.

Our best wishes go with you and we sincerely hope that you may draw around you in your new home many attached and loving friends.

We wish you bon voyage, on behalf of:

The Rejuvenation of Chilton Forester

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay
Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

Olivia Forester descended from her auto and looked about her helplessly.
As far as she could see the road stretched away dusty and desolate. It was the hazy season. Farmers were busy with their crops and passersby were few. Olivia's car stood half in and half out of the wayside ditch, and it was beyond her power to move it.
There was nothing to be done but wait.
If deliverance in any guise approached she could readily signal it, for she stood on the crest of a hill.

Below her the countryside lay like a green map. The clear air mocked distance and brought things wonderfully near—the cluster of houses that formed Oakdale village, beyond these the gray gables of her own home and still farther away the shining roof of Willoughby manor.

It was at the latter that she looked with the most interest, for the Forester-Willoughby feud, beginning about a land line, had continued for two generations. The elder Willoughby had died, but Broughton Willoughby had returned from college and the manor was reopened.

The villagers, who took a lively interest in the two families, declared him to be a fine, sensible young man, nor was Olivia a whit less popular. People liked to wait for her smile and nod as she galloped past. Recently her motor had taken the place of her horse, a course of which her father heartily disapproved, for he hated modern innovations.

His role of hostile neighbor was only one of many idiosyncrasies. Trains filled him with a horror unexplainable.
It was his boast that he had never ridden in a sleeper. He loathed the business of a city life and clung tenaciously to his New England homestead, whose inaccessibility rendered it doubly dear to him. Olivia often teased him by saying she was sure he would like to keep her at home beside a spinning wheel.

"Anything," he cried, "would be better than what you have chosen! With such a hideous, snoring thing as that how can you expect to come to anything but grief? And, though Murray, the groom, is an excellent what do you call it—chauffeur, you insist in going about the country alone. You are a modern, Olivia, and I wash my hands of you!"

Yet now, as Olivia was experiencing her first breakdown, she recalled her father's words with a twinge of apprehension, and it was a relief to hear another machine approaching, a relief which turned to consternation when she saw its occupant. Young Willoughby coolly ignored the embarrassment of the situation.

"I beg your pardon," he said pleasantly, "but can I be of some assistance?"

"Thank you," answered Olivia confusedly. "It won't move either way, and I can't find out what's the matter with it." Nor could Willoughby when, after twenty minutes' work, he managed to get it from the ditch.

"There doesn't seem to be any help in sight," he observed cheerfully after looking up and down the road. "Will you let me take your motor in tow?"

Olivia hesitated. But what had a family feud to do with a breakdown?
"If you will be so good," she murmured, and, gathering her dress about her, she stepped into her own car.

She leaned back with a sigh of relief.
At least she would not have to talk to him. Then the absurdity of the affair struck her. She realized how she would look whirling through the village streets as if taken captive by Willoughby. Instantly her pride was up in arms. At the edge of the village she called to him, and he slowed down immediately.

"I think," said Olivia, "I would rather you left me here. I'm sure some farmer's team will be passing and take me the rest of the way, and I'm most grateful to you for the assistance you have given me."

"It was the greatest pleasure," said Willoughby, and, raising his cap, was gone.

But Olivia was sure that the farmer's team which came to her aid a few moments afterward was of his sending,
and, though she told herself it was the unfortunate of her life that made the afternoon's occurrence seem of so much importance, yet she took pleasure in mentally recalling each incident. Indeed, so much did Willoughby occupy her thoughts that she was scarcely surprised when a few days later, scudding home against a wind that presaged a storm, a turn in the road brought Willoughby into view. He was on his knees in the middle of the road, apparently investigating his gasoline tank.

"The sparkler doesn't connect," he said in answer to her question and quickly accepted her offer of assistance. They started homeward in complete reversal of the parts they had played before. Now it was Olivia's motor that went gallantly ahead, while Willoughby and his car trailed in the rear. They were still some twenty miles from Oakdale, the wind was steadily rising, and a few great drops of rain began to fall.

"Now," thought Olivia as they sped forward, "I have canceled the debt.
We are square. There need be no further exchange of courtesies. But what as this crossed her mind her car came to a sudden jarring stop. "But she and Willoughby alighted. "The aspiration pipe," he said, "is not trying to keep a note of mirth from his voice. "I'll have to have another attack."

at my machine. Perhaps by this time its changed its mind. There, you see!"
and his car began puffing with an alacrity which might have awakened Olivia's suspicions, but she had no chance to analyze her emotions.

"It's a good thing my machine is covered," he went on, "for we are going to have a bit of a storm." He snatched up his dust colored coat and held it out for her. "I'm sorry it's so cumbersome," he said, smiling, "though at least it's a protection."

Olivia was lost in the folds of it, and the wind whipped her veil out banner-like and she stepped into Willoughby's car. The storm had broken on them, and the rain drove blindingly in their faces. Trees, fields and road seemed blotted out. The rain was still coming down in torrents as the two machines spurred up the gravel driveway under the Foresters' porte cochere, and Willoughby opened the door for Olivia as if it was an everyday occurrence, though none of his family had set foot within the Forester grounds in a lifetime.

Olivia, disheveled and breathless, stood dripping in the hall, while her father in a passion of resentment listened to the story of her afternoon's adventure. And in the house across the way young Willoughby mused with an unlighted pipe between his lips. "What would she have thought," he murmured,
"if she had known that the breakdown of my bull dog motor was nothing but a ruse from start to finish? But all's fair in love and motoring."

But the barriers of the feud were down, and between Olivia and Willoughby acquaintance deepened into intimacy. They took long rides through the country, the two machines whirling along side by side. "I've never had a chauffeur," said Olivia on one of these occasions.

"But you should," Willoughby whimsically protested. "I know of some one who's longing for the place."

"Why, what?" began Olivia and then stopped. The look in Willoughby's eyes was not one of banter.

"I'm not worthy of it," he went on,
"but still I dare to ask. And if you'll say 'yes' I'll do my best to steer straight and well and guard you to the end of the journey. Will you trust me, Olivia?"

"Always," she answered, and from the autumn slope of the hill down which they rode it seemed as if the whole world lay golden before them.

But their dream was destined to end with startling abruptness when Willoughby wrote to her father, for it gave the old gentleman a grim satisfaction to refuse all terms of conciliation. He checked the feud because it belonged to the old order of things, and for him custom was not easily uprooted.
To Olivia's many entreaties he made the same obstinate answer. But there was in her a spark of the same unquenchable fire that burned in him, and his determination fanned its embers to a blaze as she went quietly on with her preparations—preparations of which no one knew save Willoughby and Mr. MacWurter, the village justice, who had known Olivia since childhood.

"This is romantically old fashioned enough to suit even your father," declared Willoughby as they sped through the moonlit night on their way to the 8:15 train.

Olivia's answer was a clutch on his arm. "Listen!" she cried. "We're being followed! It's father—in my machine—with Murray, the groom."

Willoughby's chauffeur put on full speed, and the waiting MacWurter was caught up with cyclonic rapidity. The car was still plunging forward at a terrific rate as he jolted out the words of the hurried ceremony. It was a race for love, and the auto won—barely won; they had not reached the village station before the other machine came alongside.

For the first time in many years old Chilton Forester had been completely taken out of himself. The long stretch of road, white in the moonlight, the crisp air of night rushing past him, had filled him with a tremendous exaltation. He half forgot the lovers in the keenness of this new sensation. His blood felt like wine in his veins. The trory that of his face had taken on a glow. His eyes sparkled. To Olivia's startled gaze he looked strangely young. Of the torrent of denunciation that the runaway pair had expected there was none.

"You young fools," said Chilton Forester pleasantly, "you young fools!"
And then, leaning toward his son-in-law, he inquired with passionate interest, "What is the make of your machine?"

Thus ended the Forester feud.

Pat as a Lion.

"No," said the lion tamer to Patsy Flannigan; "you can't have a job to look after the animals, but our pet lion died last week, and we've kept the skin, so I'll give you £2 a week to dress up as a lion," says London Tit-Bits.

"Two pounds!" echoed Flannigan.
"Good gracious, is there so much gold in the world? Right, sort."

So Patsy dressed up as the lion and laid down in the cage. The menagerie doors were opened, and the performance commenced. "Ladies and gentlemen," said the keeper, "to show the wonderful docility of these animals,
we will now place the lion in the cage
with the tiger."

"Man, are ye mad?" said Patsy.
"Think of me wife and children!"

"Get in," said the keeper, "or I'll run this pitchfork through you."

Patsy thought he might as well die
one way as another, so he crawled into the cage, and when he saw the animal's big, ferocious eyes fixed on him he uttered a doleful wail and commenced to pray in Irish. The tiger walked over to him. "What's the matter wid' ye?" said he. "Shure, man, ye needn't be afraid. O'm Irish meself."

Nervous Prostration

IT IS WORRY THAT KILLS, NOT WORK

Work without worry usually tends to prolong life. On the other hand, worry, with or without work, is fatal, because it uses up what the Doctors call the "Leitchin," a phosphorized fat which is the chief constituent of the brain and nervous system—a waste which, if not stayed in time, means complete nervous wreck. The evident moral is "don't worry"—advice easy to give,
and in these days of stress and strain practically impossible to take. The alternative is: find some way of replacing the wasted Leitchin—the phosphorized fat. This absolutely essential element will be found in its most perfect, palatable and assimilable form in

AFTER WINTER.

A little bit of blowing,
A little bit of snow,
A little bit of growing,
And crocuses will show.
On every twig that's lonely
A new green leaf will spring,
On every patient tree top
A thrush will stop and sing.

LEFT OVER $100,000

The will of the late Hon. A. G. Blair has been admitted to probate at Ottawa. It is understood that the estate, a considerable part of which is in life insurance, is worth more than $100,000.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

The steamship Lewisport chartered by F. E. Neale of Chatham for two trips, sailed from Liverpool on the 17th. She is due at Chatham on May 1st.

SETTLING CLAIMS.

Mr. E. H. Allen, claims agent of the I. C. R., is settling some right of way claims along the Gibson branch. Owing to the records being of an imperfect nature the work is taking some time.

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

Two thousand men are expected to work during the coming summer in completing the International Railway. Work will be begun at point where it stopped last fall, and also on the Madawaska end.

LUMBER MILL BURNED.

The shingle mill of the Prescott Lumber Company, situated at New Mills, was destroyed by fire with all its contents Thursday night. The mill was running at night and the fire took place while the men were at dinner. The mill was a new one and replaced the old mill which was burned in February last. There was no insurance. The company will rebuild immediately.

PRESENTED WITH ADDRESS.

Miss Ella Gray, who left Chatham on Friday, spent a few days in Newcastle, previous to her departure this week, for Boston, where she will enter the Massachusetts General Hospital, was on the 17th presented with an address, by Rev. J. M. MacLean, Honorary president, and Laura M. Morrison, president, on behalf of St. John's Christian Endeavor Society of Chatham.

CHATHAM'S WAY.

Two Newcastle hotels were ostentatiously raided the other day by two policemen, and seizures of liquors made. We attend to this business more quietly and methodically in Chatham. Our Scott Act Inspector notifies each dealer, once every two or three months, that it is up to him to pay $50, and it is paid.—Chatham World.

TEARING DOWN FENCE.

In the Supreme Court last week, the case of King vs. O'Brien, justice of the peace for Gloucester Co. ex parte Leroy, was settled. In this case defendant had been convicted for tearing down a fence and the application was to quash conviction. The court was of the opinion that the conviction should be quashed, chiefly on the ground that as the title to land came in question, the magistrate had no jurisdiction.

DOYLE AND CAMERON

RE-INSTATED.

I. C. R. Conductor John F. Doyle and Locomotive Engineer Harry C. Cameron, who have been under suspension for several months on account of the Beaver Brook disaster, have both been re-instated. Mr. R. Barry Smith, I. C. R. legal investigator, who conducted the inquiry at Campbellton, made a lengthy and exhaustive report of the case from the evidence adduced, and gave it as his legal opinion that the conductor and engineer were not guilty of any wrong doing or neglect of duty, and recommended their re-instatement. Deputy Minister Butler, to whom the report was forwarded, sustained Mr. Smith's decision by ordering the re-instatement of both the suspended employees. Mr. Cameron will run on specials east and west, and Conductor Doyle will resume his old position on the northern.

TAKING STOCK.

Mr. M. Mitchell of the I. C. R. is at present taking stock on the Northern division.

MANY FISH.

MUSICAL EVENT.

The famous Boston Sextette is coming to Chatham, under Y. M. C. A. auspices, about the 24th of May. About one hundred tickets, at fifty cents each, have already been sold in Newcastle.

A. O. H. DANCE.

The Nelson Hibernians gave a very successful dance in their hall on Wednesday evening. Among the guests were a number of Newcastle and Chatham people. Bohan's orchestra supplied the music. Supper was served at midnight.

NEW SAW MILL.

Mr. James A. Rundle, who lately returned from Pennsylvania where he ordered machinery, is building a band-saw mill on Bartibogue Island. The shallow water between the upper end and the mainland will be crossed by a bridge for the convenience of the millmen, and a wharf will be built nearby.

BASKET BALL

AT CHATHAM.

Thursday night, in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, Chatham, there was a basket ball contest, between the Old Reds and Old Blues. The line-up was as follows:—Old Reds—Forwards, Loggie, McLean; defence, McNaughton, Mercereau; centre, Watling. Old Blues—Forwards, Benson, Luke; defence, Walls, McMillan; centre, Matthews. The former won, 9 to 2. Dr. W. Stuart Loggie was referee; H. Pout, times; and Alex. Watling, scorer.

SCOTT ACT APPEAL.

In the Supreme Court at Fredericton, Friday, the case of the King vs. Justices Patrick Hennessy and John Clark of Newcastle ex parte H. H. Fallon, making application to quash a conviction under the C. T. A. made in the County of Northumberland on the ground that though the case was tried before two magistrates the information was laid only before one, was dismissed. The court was of a unanimous opinion that the appeal should be discharged and the conviction stand, as under the statute the information might be laid before one magistrate.
