Narrow Escape of Robert Howard of 570 Horton Street.

Removing Curbing From Well and Sides Fell In, Burying Him for Nearly Two Hours.

Robert Howard, a man about 30 years old, was buried by the caving in of a well about 11:30 this morning, and although underground for 11/2 hours, escaped serious injury. Howard was employed as a teamster by Geo. Rendell, the coal dealer, and this morning was sent by the latter to his former residence at the southeast corner of York and William streets to take the brick curbing out of an unused well. Howard was working at the bottom of the well, when the loosened earth caved in, crushing him between the wall of the well and a ladder by which he had descended. S. R. May, who was with Howard at the time, gave the alarm, and willing hands undertook the task of freeing the imprisoned man, which was accomplished about 1 o'clock. Howard was taken at once to his home, at 570 Horton street, where Dr. English attended him. It was found that no bones were broken, his injuries consisting of severe bruises and a strained shoulder. Dr. English says the sufferer will be around in a few days. Howard is married and has two children.

THE DOMINION'S CUSTOMS REVENUE.

An Increase of $81,000 for the Fiscar Year.

Ottawa, July 3 .- The actual amount received at the accountant's office, Ottawa, as customs revenue for June last was $2,340,201, an increase of $148,463 over the same month of last year, when the receipts were $2,191,737.

For the fiscal year ending June 50, the revenue was $81,236 in excess of the preceding twelve months. The figures are: 1901, $28,990,254; 1900, $28,909,-018. The receipts from customs duties at outlying points, which will probably amount to $100,000, have yet to be received. When these are in hand they will make the aggregate increase of revenue for the year $200,000. This is an excellent showing, more especially when it is remembered that there was an 8 per cent decrease in the duties on British goods last year, as compared with the year previous. The customs revenue has increased by about $9,000,000 since 1896. In that year the customs receipts were $20,219,-037, in 1897, $19,891,996, in 1898, $22,157 - 788, in 1899, $25,734,228, in 1900, $28,-909,018, and 1901, $28,990,254.

WHY BO I DO THIS?

Simply because I have been in this business twenty years, have made a success of it, have cured fifty thousand people with electricity and know what it will do and how to apply it. It's a plain business proposition with me. I have the goods and know that they will do what I say in nine cases out of ten. I take the chances on all cases, and the one I lose on doesn't hurt me, as my business is increased a hundred per cent. by thus protecting my patients against possible failure.

When you put your money into an Electric Belt you want to know what assurance you have that it will cure you. If the belt and the man selling it to you are right they can protect you as I do. Interesting Interview With Mr. David Glass, of Rossland.

Was in China During the Boxer Revolt-Saw Funeral of King Humbert of Italy.

The Victoria, B. C., news contains the following regarding Mr. David were great. Glass, of Ressland, who was formerly mayor of London, and who is still well known in the city:

P. R. to Vancouver,

where he arrived on Monday. During his travels abroad Mr. Glass was a close observer, and with regard to the state of affairs in China, particularly, has taken a deep interest. The solution of the Chinese prob-lem, he believes, lies in the reinstatement of the rightful heir upon the throne, and the maintenance of a protectorate by the powers.

The present government is so defective, he says, that there are no means of centralizing the strength of the nation for good or evil. Under the administrative power it is simply out of the question for any treaty made at Pekin to be enforced. NO TREATY has ever been carried out on the part of China, and no such treaty ever will be carried out. The great powers know this, or should know it. Their first duty should be to ignore the empress dowager, as all parties in China regard her as a usurper. They should seek out and replace the rightful heir on the throne and surround him by a protectorate council at Pekin, and then under the laws and customs of China, promulgate a simple form of constitution, partly on the lines of

FOUND.

Windsor, July 2.-After six days, Lake St. Clair on Sunday gave up the body of Charles Malone, who was drowned last Monday night while trying to make his way to shore from an over turned boat in the lake. The body was found about two miles and a half from shore, opposite Renaud line road, and taken to Malone's parents' home Malone with three others went out sailing, Monday afternoon. Early in the evening the boat capsized, and the three others managed to cling to it. Malone, however, secured a cask, and, they say, told them he would swim ashore and get a rowboat to rescue them. He disappeared in the gloom, and in a short time the lake became rough. The three men on the boat managed to get to shore after about five hours' battling with the When a search was made for Malone next day he could not be found. The cause of Malone's death will be thoroughly looked into.

GOLD IN GOSFIELD. There is now no question of the valuable gold find in Gosfield. After considerable hard work and many discouragements, Messrs. Adams and Chevalier have got their last test hole down to 143 feet, and are now several feet into a beautiful gold quartz rock. Indications were good all the way down, but the gold now found in the quartz is a beautiful sample. It has been shown to experts, who declare it to be the finest grade of gold-produc-ing rock they have ever seen. Detroit experts say we do not realize what we have got. The school trustees had not very things they did was to record their disapproval of Trustee Boyle's motion, that where vacancies occur on the staff, they shall be filled by the apmale teacher. It was not that they thought that the principle of the thing tal revenue was $65,254 03. was wrong, but judged as a matter of expense they considered it an unwise move. Another view that helped to down the motion was that if a male teacher had a lower grade it would be unfair to place him, during the principal's absence, above higher grade women teachers. The extra expense was estimated at $100 a school. Only four of the trustees-English, Gillean and Evans-voted to have a kindergarden opened at the new Chesley avenue school, which will be ready for use on Sept. 1. The chairman said that the people in that locality were expecting one, and that a full attendance of children was assured. The thought of the expense of fitting and maintaining the kindergarten killed the proposal, at least for this year.

Trustee Boyle's inquiry as to whether No. 2 committee had examined the sanitary condition of the school closets brought the reply that the committee had not reported to the board, but will be asked to do so.

Trustee Gillean told the board that a citizen had offered to buy flags for all the schools if the board would provide the poles. The board appreciated the offer, but its funds would not permit of its acceptance. Secretary Ellwood, of the board of water commissioners, asked the board to have the water supply at the schools shut off during the holidays making this observation, Mr. Glass rewhere it was possible. Every month of the year ending June 30, without exception, saw a larger much to do at their regular meeting London postoffice than that of the amount of business transacted at the corresponding months last year.

The record for the gross postal revenue was held hitherto by the jubilee year, 1897-98, when the special issue of stamps and old rates brought the total pointment of men until each school of to $70,015 76. bank totaled $106,547.

Hark! All ye nations to the strain Which proudly from our country swells; 'Tis from a people which ye deign To think in barren region dwells; But, hark! and ye the truth shall know—Our country does not sleep in snow!

What though the alien poet's pen Tells only of our winter's gloom, And, erring, pictures icy fen Where is a plain in richest bloom? He yet shall gild his idle lays With colors worthier of praise.

'Tis true our country cannot speak
Of Spartan deed or Roman war,
But still, from eastern mountain peak
To where the western rises far,
Each hill has heard the warrior's tread,
Each plain has drunk from streams of red.

The chronicler upon his scroll
Today can pen of wealth and art,
For steady as the waters roll
Our works and products seek their mart.
The husbandry of peace and thrift Is to a people bounteous gift,

Think not that ages steal away
And leave our country fragile still;
Her morn, though now perchance your day,
Must noontide eminence fulfill;
For sons she hath, whose growing fame
Shall give their land an honor'd name.

Through early years a heavy cloud Hung o'er the fair Dominion's brow; The tumult of contention loud Made patriots to treachery bow: Then justice smiled upon the dead.

From out the throes of civil strife Came freedom, virtue, unity;
An infant nation sprang to life,
Whose strength is now in liberty;
Yea! who on liberty has thought,
But knows how dearly it is bought?

But, ah! we never must forget, Those men—some silent in the grave— Who live in memory, stronger yet, Through services that once they gave; Who drew the laws that still unite Our countrymen in kindred rite.

To them let Honor's elegy
Upon the book of Time be writ,
That tides of swift posterity
Be futile in defacing it;
For every man who serves his land, Though subject, has a kingly hand.

They sleep, but ever deep and low.

The trample of a mighty mass
Is heard, as seasons come and go,
As years arrive and slowly pass;
'Tis of their fellows, now content,
Beneath the flag that factions rent.

And, as the cycle of the year

Gives birth to July's sunny day,
That time when first with pride and fear
Our country did its name display,
We hear with every cannon's sound,—
"Confederation" echoes round.

Our flags unfurled to every breeze
Are telling, with a glad acclaim,
That from the ocean to the seas
Undimmed is shining Union's flame;
E'en though the busy tongues of creed
Would smoulder it, if word were deed.

Majestic stands on hill and plain Majestic stands on hill and plain
The stately spreading maple tree,
And murmurs to the happy main
Of national fraternity;
While civic splendor plays the part
Of patriot, in every heart.

Have we no bards to strike the lyre
As masterly as they of old?
Have we no themes to kindle fire
In foreign bosoms t'ward us cold?
It must be that each hill and dale
Shall yet, like Scotia, breathe a tale!

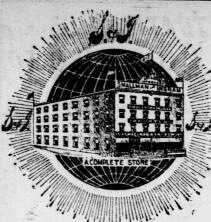

But, hark, ye nations! E'en today
Loud with the turmult and the throng,
A myriad voices seem to say
What on the ear will echo long—
"Throughout this great Dominion wide Confederation is our pride."

Chicago, July 2.-While attempting to recover an umbrella and purse be-longing to a young woman who was a stranger to him, William J. Harris was shot and fatally wounded last night by Michaelo Varlos, a Greek. As his victim fell to the floor, Varlos dropped his revolver and fled. The affray occurred in an ice cream parlor in which Varlos was a waiter. Half an hour before the shooting Varlos had quarreled with a woman and her escort who had enter-ed the place. A fight followed between the men, during which Varlos was struck over the head with an umbrella between Essex and Tilbury, West by the woman. She then ran out the door, leaving the umbrella and her purse behind. Just outside the door she met Harris, who inquired the cause of her excite-ment. She told him, and he offered to return and secure the umbrella and purse. Entering the store he demanded the return of the woman's property. march, Shedden, Iona, Dutton, West

Like a flash of lightning, sudden and startling, disease strikes down many a man. Yet there have been warnings upon warnings, unheeded. Food has lain like a heavy weight in the stomach after eating. There have been belchings, bitter risings in the mouth, nervousness, sleeplessness and growing irritability. Instead of listening to these warnings, recourse has been had to some of the nerve numbing palliatives that cover but never cure disease. Many serious diseases begin in a diseased condition of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. For such diseases there is one medicine which rarely fails to effect a complete cure. In looking over one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum Books, I found my case described exactly. I wrote to you and made a statement. You sent me a descriptive list of questions, also some hygienic rules. I carried those out as best I could, but thought myself incurable as I suffered so much with pain under my ribs and an empty feeling in my stomach. After some hesitation, owing to my prejudices against patent medicines, I decided to try a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Diagovery and 'Pellets.' ICE CREAM PARLOR Engine and Cars Topple Into the River-

He calculated wrong, and before he could get out of the way the through freight from the west rushed in, the two trains colliding with an awful crash, the engine and seven cars of the one train toppling over into the creek. The cars then took fire, which also spread to the bridge. The alarm was rung, and the Bowmanville fire brigade with their steamer quickly responded, and after hard work succeeded in extinguishing the flames. Fortunately no lives were lost. Both crews jumped, but A. Mc of Bowmanville, who was Jorley. making his first trip as fireman on th fast freight, broke his ankle in the jump. The track was blocked for some hours. Several of the cars destroyed were refrigerator cars, loaded with lard and beef.

BIT BY KISSING BUG

Windsor Man's Life Was in Danger for a Time.

Windsor, July 2.-Gordon Kemp, a Windsor young man, was bitten on the upper lip Sunday by a kissing bug or spider, and for a time it was thought that the bite would result fatally. Dr. J. O. Reaume, who is attending young Kemp, has succeeded in reducing the swelling, and has extracted the poison from the wound.

Kemp was working in his father's livery stable on Pitt street west, when he was bitten. He noticed a moth or large fly float in through the open door, but paid no attenton to it until he was apprised of its close proximity to his face by a stinging pain in the upper lip. He brushed the insect off and went on with his work for a few minutes, but the pain spread rapidly and he was soon suffering great agony. His face was soon swollen out of all shape and he was removed to his home, where ne was attended by Dr. Reaume. At first the doctor was unable to stop the swelling or relieve the pain, but after some hours' work he succeeded, and his patient is now on the road to recovery, although his face is still badly swol-

Now, I wish to speak upon the subject of reciprocity, which the world is being brought to believe in slowly but surely. I believe that our present friendly relations may be even more securely cemented, and I wish you to convey to the governor-general of Canada from me the hope that he will aid us in that cementation, as I might call it. You can see for yourself how kindly Buffalonians feel toward you, and I assure you we feel most highly honored by your visit. It is true, as you say, that the Canadians came with muskets, but I think you will have to admit that we captured the muskets.' In reply to the mayor's remarks, Dr. Borden said: "Your Honor, we called to express to you our appreciation of the splendid and truly American hospitality extended to us yesterday, and to tell you how much we enjoyed ourselves. Toronto, July 2.—An incident which causes considerable comment is reported to have occurred at the Buffalo exposition last week. It appears that the director of ethnological building took it upon himself to lower a festion of 24 British flags which were being placed over Ontario's archaeological exhibit, and when asked to replace them refused to comply with the request. He gave no satisfactory reason for his unwise act, and could only say that someone had objected to the presence of the English ensigns. An official in charge of the display called on Director Buchanan, but he was not acquainted with the details of the affair, and could do nothing in the matter.

The labor party know Col. Leys has been their staunch friend whenever opportunity offered, and they, too, desire no opposition.

Mr. Darch, as the candidate of the Socialists, claimed that the Ross Government had not been a friend to the workers, but had been a friend only to "those who worked the workers." That may sound all right, but surely Mr. Darch was joking or laughing in his sleeve. We do not think he was serious. He cannot have considered the many ways in which the Ross Government have been the friends of all classes in the Province of Ontario. He who runs may read much of the good they have done, and he who stops to consider it will conclude that they have done the very best they could, and that no government could have done more.

Great Britain's Lesson.

Perhaps the adage, "There is never so great a loss but there is some small never better exemplified connection with the recent Boer-British war. Many lessons are to be had from that great event. Great Britain's freedom from active engageon the battlefield for a number of years, together with her former successes, have tended to breed in her a spirit of confidence such as is expressed in the famous lines of Shakespeare, "Come the three corners of the world in arms and we will shock them." The Britisher has come to see, what is not in the least unwholesome, namely, that other nations are capable of as great things as she, and that if the surremacy of Britain, whether commercial or military, is to be maintained, he must bestir himself. He must no longer attempt to trade on his name, but on his qualities. events of the past two or three years have put him in a reflective mood, and when a Briton begins to think in earnest, the effort will not be in vain.

Among other things the greatness of the British Empire has been largely due to the fact that the United Kingdom has been animated from time to time by a spirit of self-criticism. She has for the most part been continually on her guard. We do not maintain that the incentive to self-criticism has been in all cases national in extent; perhaps in no case has the British nation as a whole turned the searchlight of criticism on her own vitals. That has been left to a few men to do; to the leaders in thought and action, to her statesmen, poets and philosophers, but the work has been well

The nation is, in a sense, "the individual writ large," and as in the case of the individual, stagnation and decay begin the moment it has athas taught us the importance of a trained soldiery; that military splendor has been to a large extent shorn of its radiance and deprived of its terror by modern contrivance and invention matched with skill in the use of arms. The awakening has been unpleasant, but it is hoped that the benefit to be derived from the lesson will be proportionate to the cost.

A Hard Problem to Settle.

'At a dinner of the Harvard Alumni, Mr. Edward H. Warren touched upon a rather difficult problem. He was called upon to speak as one of the younger alumni of the university. He said young men came to Harvard to be trained, and they spent years in that training; then they met the world, and when that happens he knows it is the experience of many a young man that he is all fears lest it shall turn out after all that he does not work. He asked the question whether the education he received at Harvard fitted him or enabled him to do his work enough better to compensate him for every year he had spent there.

In his belief the college courses were too long. A young man's training does not cease when he receives his last degree. His work is constanty training him for harder work, and t seemed to him that the question was 'When is it wise to have the training of the university cease and the training of actual life begin?" That being the question, he believed that the courses were too long, and that the majority of young men arrived at the practice of their professions at a period of life unnaturally late. He thought there was need of self-reliance. Men who would strike out whatever the difficulties, men who have caliber enough to deliberately prefer being discouraged when they feel weak, to being dissatisfied when they feel strong. He thought the Harvard training was good to make that sort of a man. The size of the University, the diverse characters of the students. and the plan of study, all tend to force a man to know himself, to think for himself, and to rely upon himself. Harvard was and would be, he said, a great power for the Republic so long as she sent out men whom she had trained to rely upon themselves, not in the conceit of any imagined powers, but in the calm courage that ecognizes their strength and their weaknesses, and then proceeds.

Walt Whitman's Status. For years there has been in London considerable interest in Walt Whitman. This is to be accounted for partly by the fact that his able and enthusiastic champion and literary executor, Dr. R. M. Bucke, resides in this neighborhood. Those who take any interest in literary matters know of the fierce controversies that raged about Walt Whitman's poetry. The opposing sides have usually gone to extremes; one side sneering at his "barbaric yawp," the other side adding adjective to adjective in piling up paeans of praise. A recent estimate by the London (England) Guardian strikes us as giving a fair and reasonable view. It is in connection with a review of a recent Ameri can book, Mr. Barrett Wendell's "Literary History of America." The London Guardian says:

"Perhaps the chief defect of Mr. Wendell's volume is his scanty recognition of Walt Whitman. We have no space here to discuss at all fully the question of Whitman's poetic greatness. But what puzzles his English admirers, even those most conscious of his weak points, is that American criticism seems so often unaware that, with all his faults, he is the one great original force which American literature has produced. We may place Longfellow, Whittier, and the rest, high or low, as we please; in any case the one thing certain about them is that they belong to the old literary stock of Europe. Their way of looking at things has, in each case, plenty of English parallels. The thing we notice about Whitman is that his way of looking at things is entirely new. It is, no doubt, above all, his own; but we shall also believe, in spite of Mr. Wendell, that it is also American. And here, perhaps, Englishmen are better judges than any American, especially a Harvard professor, can be. We are outside America and can read its larger characteristics more plainly than those who are inside and can see only what happens to be nearest to themselves. * * * *

"We think that there are three things about Whitman which ought to be plain to every open-minded lover of literature. He is, first of all, the man of the largest and deepest poetic vision produced by America. And his way of looking at things is a new way; that is the second point of importance. And the third is that this way of looking at things is one which could only have come to a citizen of the United States. "Now, to all these points, many Americans, and among them Mr. Wendell, are entirely or partially blind. Whitman has plenty of faults, of course; above all that of thinking that everything of every sort that came into his head was worth saying, and that any words would do to say it in. But his faults are on the surface; no one can miss them, least of all a professor of English. And it is a poor and narrow conception of what the English language and English poetry can be and can do that allows Whitman's verbal eccentricities and vulgarities to hide the central facts about now they call him Lord Strathcona. The him, which are that he has written a few poems which are among the noblest of the century, and that in his whole poetic attitude he is the greatest original force that has uttered itself in verse since the death of Wordsworth. He is the seer of the new world, the discoverer of poetry where even Wordsworth could not discover it, in the seething, sordid life of great modern cities, where the rest of us can only see incredible ugliness and meanness. He is, above all, the spokesman of the brave individualism, the erect tiring energy and equal liberty, which war writer. The other member of the are the noblest possessions of the United States."

Mr. C. P. Lucas, C.B., the author of the well-known "Historical Geography of the British Colonies," has just completed the first part of a new History of Canada (New France). Mr. Lucas' connection with the Colonial Office in London enables him to write with exceptional authority, and his immediately by the Oxford University Press, is already assured of a widespread welcome.

David Mills, is in England as a member of the Conference respecting any reconstitution and enlargement of the judicial committee of the Privy Council. He has received hospitable attentions from Lord Strathcona, Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Aberdeen, the Lord Chancellor, Lord Lansdowne, Hon. Edward Blake, the Colonial Club and many other persons and institutions. Mrs. Mills has also been the recipient of much attention from ladies prominent in the society of the great social world on the other side of the Atlantic.

The article in the July number of the North American Review by Sir Walter Besant, whose death occurred a few weeks ago, has a pathetic interest. It is among the very latest of his writings, and it contains evidence an attitude of respectful skepticism that, when he wrote it, he was consciously shadowed by the anticipation of the approaching end. The bells whose joyous peals ushered in the twentieth century, he wrote, "rang for the boys and the young men. For those whom the newcomer found graybearded and stricken with years, the bells were as the rolling of muffled drums; for them the bells proclaimed a funeral, rather than a coronation." In discussing "The Burden of the Twentieth Century," Sir Walter occupies the English point of view, and the purpose of his article is to show in what fields of English life the nineteenth century left the work of reform incomplete. In politics, the House of Commons, which formerly represented but a very limited caste, now represents all the people, but it remains for the people to be taught the duty of exercising their rights, while by the establishment of a truly national system of education intellectual careers must be thrown open to all, poor and rich alike, who are capable of them. In every departmentin customs and manners, in sports, in the treatment of criminals, in legal administration, in the care of the poor -much progress has been accomplished, but much also remains to be done. Of medicine, Sir Walter says:

"Here, indeed, we hand ove illustrious beginnings. We have introduced sanitary reforms into our towns, our streets, and our houses; we have cleansed and purified our hospitals; we have sent women backwith honor-to their old work of nursing, but nursing trained and scientific; we have learned how to see the very inside of a living man; we have discovered how, without giving him pain, o cut open any part of him, and to operate upon him for almost any length of time. The last discovery is everything admirable and worthy of praise and thanksgiving. But it is commonly spoken of as the end, whereas it is only the beginning. operation is rainless-that is true; but, after the operation, where is then our anaesthetic? When the wounds have to be dressed-that is, daily-where is our anaesthetic? the hospitals, it is ready to hand and it is freely used; in the houses and in nursing homes, it cannot be used without setting in motion a whole machinery of doctors called in for the purpose. 'Give us,' we say to our sucessors, 'an anaesthetic which can be easily and readily applied in the long hours and days of pain that follow the operation, as well as in the agony intolerable of the operation itself. will the bed of sickness lose its terrors and the soul, if it has to leave the body, will not be torn out of it with throes of suffering, but will gently pass away in painless coma."

Fate.

Some fifty or sixty years since there stood in a picturesque corner of Forayshire, Scotland, a little parish schoolhouse in which the callans of the counclump of scrub trees, nestled the Free church, from the pulpit of which Rev. Alex McWatt weekly exhorted his flock to beware of the world's frivolities; unnecessary advice, ,one would say, since Forayshire half a century ago knew no more exciting diversion than a bit of kirkyard gossip. One bright day in the spring three sturdy lads emerged from the schoolhouse and began a solemn march towards the outskirts of the village. Without uttering a word they passed swiftdown a lane, climbed the stile where terminated, and entered a meadow. Halting by common consent in a secluded, shady corner, two of the lads care fully divested themselves of their jackets and began to pummel one another with ferocious energy. The third lay on the soft turf and enjoyed the sanguinary conflict as only a boy can. The delighted spectator was Donald Smith, combatants were Archibald Forbes, afterwards the father of war correspondents, and Robert Maconachie, now Grand Trunk watchman at the Gordon street crossing in Guelph, Ont. Dame Fortune is a fickle jade. Here were three boys who started life on an equal footing; each received a sound thrashing with the same "birk" for his participation in the meadow affair. But time dug a great gulf between them. While Donald Smith was tramping over league-wide wastes of frozen snow in the employ of the Hudson's Bay Company, Archibald Forbes, as a private in the Royal Dragoons, was laying the foundaand self-reliant hopefulness, of the un- tion of his fame as a traveler and a trio was of a less adventurous temperament. He did not court fame, and fame passed him by. It did not fall to his lot to equip a regiment for South African service. His plain duty was to guard a dangerous railway crossing in a Canadian town; and, after all, to do one's duty, to be faithful to one's trust, is the great essential Lord Strathcona has never forgotten his old schoolmate, and every Christmas sends him a generous check. It is a somewhat remarkable coincidence that book, which will be published almost Andrew Carnegie, whom Mr. Maconachie met in after years, also remembers him each year with a present and a friendly letter.

Sand. [Events.]

"The English," according to Science pour Tous, "have adopted quite an original plan. In many houses, on the table by the side of the pepper-box and the salt-box is placed a sand-box-a little receptacle filled with very fine sand, as fine as flour, which is sprinkled over all the food. A medical journal has advised dyspeptics to adopt this remedy; the sand, mingling with the alimentary mass, renders it less compact and makes digestion more easy. This has become the fashion, and since the English have begun to eat sand it is certain that French snobs who imitate their neighbors across the channel like monkeys will soon be devouring. Besides, gravel for digestive purposes has been in use by ostriches for a long time. Readers of this English news received by way of France would do well to preserve

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN WRITES HOME.

Relatives Get Letter After Holding Memorial Service.

William J. C. Brown, Thought To Be Dead in Africa, Informs Relatives of W. J. Caleb Brown's Death.

A sad congregation assembled two weeks ago Sunday, at the church at Kirkton. A memorial service was being held for W. J. C. Brown, a popular young man, who had lived near there with his father, Mr. Samuel Brown, until he went to South Africa to fight in the war with the Boers. A day or so before, his father received a telegram telling of his boy's death on May 28, and because of the sympathy for him and kindly thoughts for the young soldier, his neighbors decided to hold the memorial service. The whole countryside attended it and Rev. Mr. Ball preached a stirringly patriotic sermon. Everything possible was done to honor the young soldier's

Now the people around Kirkton know that the man they mourned is not dead. His father got a letter from him Dominion Day. This in itself would not prove that he is alive, because in several instances letters have come to Canada that were posted before the writers died in Afbut the circumstances of this rica. case are peculiar.

he went with his cousin, also W. J. C. Brown, but called Caleb, while he was William. Caleb's home was in Manitoba, and as his father objected to him going to the war, he came down to Kirkton and went as William's brother. When the telegram announcing the latter's death was received at Kirkton, it was noticed that it mentioned Caleb's army list number, not William's, but little was thought of this and the memorial service was

The letter received Monday settles the matter, however, because in it William J. C. Brown tells of the death of W. J. Caleb Brown.

BAYLEY'S BOER LEADER BELLICOSE BELGIANS!

Rictous Scenes Enacted in the Chamber of Representatives.

British Liberals Likely to Ask Rosebery to Lead Them.

Campbell-Bannerman Expected to Re-Kurds Plunder and Kill Armenians.

Brussels, July 3 .- There was a riotous scene between the Socialists and Ministerialists in the chamber of representatives yesterday. It was provoked by a Socialist interpellation over the recent speech of the general in reported to have exhorted his men, in for the sick. case of a riot to fire on the mob. M. Poiulle, a Socialist, promised, in case of a riot occurring, to kill the general in question. "Liar" and "assassin" were among the epithets hurled at the Ministerialists. The house ultimately aproved the government's position in the matter. RUMORED BETROTHALS. London, July 3 .- Society is greatly interested in the rumored impending engagement of Winston Churchill to his second cousin, Lady Helen Stewart, only daughter of the Marquis of Londonderry, a wealthy mine owner. Lady Helen is a fine-looking girl, with a great talent for acting. There is much interest in the reported engagement of Mrs. Langtry's daughter Jeanne to the Hon. Ivor Guest, M. P., Lord Wimborne's eldest son. Lady Wimborne is one the late Randolph Churchill's sisters, and a granddame. Her husband is a millionaire Welsh coal and iron mine owner.

ARMENIANS MURDERED. Constantinople, July 3.-Reports rom Mush, in Kurdistan, say that the Kurds are plundering villages, and have killed 14 Armenians, in consequence of the belief that the latter murdered a Kurdish notable who was sheriff of Aghan. Belgrade, July 3.—Albanian and Turkish troops are again pillaging and outraging the Servian villages of Sandjak and Novi Bazar, under the pretext that they are searching for concealed arms.

ARREST OF EARL RUSSELL. London, July 3.—Earl Russell appeared at the bar of the House Lords yesterday. He was formally taken into custody on the charge of bigamy by the Black Rod, General Sir Michael Biddulph. When asked if he Russell requested that the trial had any application to make, postponed beyond July 18, in order to enable him to prepare his defense. The earl was released on bail. The proceedings were private.

At an adjourned meeting of the creditors of Sir Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, against whom a receiving order was made May 21, it transpired that his brother, William L. Ashmead Bartlett Burdet Coutts, had proposed to provide the funds to pay a composition of 7s 6d in the pound. The accounts filed show the bankrupt's debts to be £83,214 and assets £27,485.

THE LIBERAL LEADERSHIP. London, July 8 .- The crisis in the ed an acute stage. This fact was publicly admitted and deplored by Sir ity is already in possession of the

Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the leader of the party, in a speech in South-ampton last night. Although the rumampton last night. Although the rum-ors that Sir Henry Campbell-Banner-man has already resigned the leader-ship of the party are premature, a meeting of the party has been sudden-ly convened for next Tuesday, when it is expected he will virtually offer is resignation. The imperialist section of the Liberal party, headed by Herbert H. Asquith, formerly Liberal home secretary, has been doing its utmost to enlist Lord Rosebery on its side, but up to the present time the latter has next Friday. Should he be willing to resume the leadership and support Mr. Asquith, it is probable the latter would become the party leader in the House of Commons. It was understood that Mr. Asquith would long ago have been selected as leader of the Liberal party had he been possessed of ample means. This financial difficulty would be surmounted by the resumption of leadership by Lord Rosebery.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's speech, which imputed motives of perspeech, which imputed motives of personal jealousy and antipathy to the imperialist Liberals, seemed calculated to increase rather than to allay the dissentions. The Daily Chronicle, however, which represents the Asquith section, predicts that the forthcoming meeting will adopt a vote of confid-ence in Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and declares that the Liberals government, and may be used for the must agree to differ on the subject purpose of settlement. The bride was given away by her father. The bridesmaids were Alice Morton and Caroline Drayton, and the maid of honor was Olivia Cutting. Baron Von Hoffman, a cousin of the bridegroom, was the best man. After the wedding ceremony a reception was held at house of Joseph H. Choate, the United States ambassador, which was lent for the occasion. There was an extraordinary profusion of flowers.

Ven-His Second Cousin-Murderous ter had had 100 men under him, and he had secretly persuaded them surrender. Everything had been arranged, but one of the men informed Gen. Badenhorst recently sent a man with a white command of the service guard, who is flag to our camp asking for medicine

Venter states that Dewet and Steyn were last heard of from Parys, but although as a rule every commandant is informed of Dewet's whereabouts weekly, nothing has been heard of him during the past fortnight.

THE INVADERS. Cape Town, July 2.-The Boer invaders of Cape Colony, after passing between Yellow Woods and Fort Beaufort, separated, one commando proceeding to Blinkwater, where it looted the Winterberg Hotel. It is now hovering about the vicinity of Pietretief, collecting horses and foraging generally.

KRUGER'S TURTLE DOVES. The Hague, July 2.—Herr Wessels, one of the Boer delegates to Europe, and America, told your correspondent today that former President Kruger of the Transvaal had been abandoned Herr Wessels says: "Mr. Kruger is too old to plead the cause of the South African Republics effectively. We are awaiting the arrival of Boers with more recent kiowedge of affairs at the seat of war." Mr. Kruger last evening declared: "I am still certain that God may lead my turtle doves to victory." SHIRK FIGHTING.

Pretoria, July 3 .- The different British columns in the Transvaal continue their work of clearing the country of food-stuffs, cattle and inhabitnats. Everywhere the Boers retire as the British troops advance, and the chief anxiety of the enemy seems to be to shirk fighting. In the Eastern Transvaal Louis Botha is falling back before a movement of our troops. Commandants Beyers and Uys are reported to have joined forces. To the north of Pretoria small parties of Boers continue to hover around the British outposts. They hide during the day and creep out under cover of darkness, when they attempt to steal small lots of sheep and cattle The other day a few Boers succeeded in getting off with a number of mules from the sewage farm. Much the same state of things prevails at our camps at Warmbaths and Pienaars River. Small Boer patrols are occasionally seen, but they show no disposition to fight. Many Boers who surrender at these camps are literally in rags. MILITARY SETTLEMENT.

London, England, July 2.-The report of the commission appointed by Mr. Chamberlain to inquire into the possibility of settlement in South Africa of soldiers who wish to remain there after the war, has been issued. "We are of opinion," the commissioners say, "that bona-fide soldiers should be encouraged to establish themselves upon farms in both colonies; that these farms should be so far grouped together as to avoid the danger of isolation; the number holdings should be limited only by the number of approved applicants; and that the size of the holdings should vary from 160 to 5,000 acres, according to circumstances. ### YANKEE IS PASSING AW AY.

Native-Born New Englanders Now See The Public Minority There.

[From the Springfield Republican.] That the native population of New England is not maintaining its numerical strength is pretty well known. Hence the facts brought out in the vital statistics of Connecticut for last year that the native population is fast being overwhelmed by the element of immediate foreign extraction, will surprise no one. It appears that in all sections of the state the deaths among the native population exceed the births from native parentage, while the burden of providing a natural increase in the population rests wholly upon people of foreign birth.

This is true of the country as well as the urban districts. In forty-one back towns, peopled largely by natives, the deaths exceeded the births last year by 240. In the cities of New Haven, Hartford, Meriden, Waterborn parents number 3,393, while the deaths of native-born numbered 4,227; among the foreign-born births were 4,227 and deaths only 1,867-there possibly being an error in the duplication of the figures 4,227, but in any event, for the whole state the native births nubered 8,229 and deaths 10,388, and the foreign births 8,219 and deaths only 3,678. From such facts it is easy to figure out the early displacement of the older native element by a population of immediate or very recent foreign origin. The Massachusetts vital statistics reveal the same population tenden cies.

There are some countervailing considerations to be taken into account when studying such statistics as the above. The foreign-born element possesses a much larger proportion of persons of child-bearing age than the native-born, for immigration draws chiefly from the youth of other countries and the adult of low ages. Hence also the death rate among the foreignborn is favored above the nativeborn by the absence of normal proportion of people of advanced age. Furthermore, as the death rate large among young children and as the number of children born here of foreign-born parents is relatively You may pay a higher price, but don't flattet yourself that you can buy better bea than Blue Ribbon large, and as the deaths of such childare made the fact remains that the population of New England, of more than one generation of American nativity, seems to be losing ground. This may arise-doubtless does arise -from the emigration of the Yankee youth toward the west, and in making account of this the old New England family is unquestionably proving to be at least barely self-perpetuating, but on New England soil this Yankee element is slowly but surely being engulfed by other people who are comparative strangers to the region.

"But I knew you would win her," she added with an arch glance at the beaming lover, "for those letters, which used to come over the sea to her always brought a look to her face which only love for the writer could have produced."

"Ha! ha!" exultantly chuckled Madame Marton, when, a little later, her sanction and congratulations were solicited, "you will be 'My Lady Shirley,' by right of a real title, now, and Ivyhurst will have a wise and gracious mistress at last."

"Certainly, my darling; I have had it on my mind to do so and talk them over with you for some time," he replied, and, going to his safe, he brought them and spread them out before her.

They spent a long time discussing them, and Neil finally remarked:
"Everything is complete and just to my mind; the only thing needed now is a suitable site to build upon."

"And that is the very thing that brought me here just now," Shirley said, as she slipped her hand confidingly, into his. "How would Madame Marton's estate answer?—and could not the mansion be utilized in some way in connection with the hospital?"

Nell opened his eyes at this proposition. "Madame Marton's estate?—your property, Shirley!" he exclaimed.

"Why not?" she asked, smiling. "Ivyourst is my home; I want no other. Ah, Neil, let me share in this noble work with you," she pleaded. "I have talked it over with madame, and she is both delighted and touched that her old home should be 'hought worthy to be devoted to so grand a cause. "Well, well,' she cried, when I proposed it, "if any good thing can rise out of the ashes of Felice Marton's wasted life, I shall bless God and die content."

"Of all places in the world, it is what I should have selected under any other circumstances," said Neil, with a touch of deep feeling in his voice; "the site is just suited to r plans, and the mansion itself would be most valuable addition; but—"

"Let there be no but in the matter, dear," said Shirley gently. "Let it be madame's and my tithe for the good of the Master's poor."

A year later a beautiful and commodious structure arose from the midst of the magnificent lawn which had always been the pride of Madame Marton's heart; and the day that it was dedicated to the cause for which it had been erected, the little son and heir of lyyhurst was christened in the handsome chapel adjoining it, and named "Clifton Marton." in memory of those who, next to her husband, had been the dearest to Shirley's loving heart.

had been the dearest to Shirley's loving heart.

Three months later there were a hundred patients in the airy and spacious wards. "God's poor." gathered out of the "byways and hedges," to whom our noble young surgeon and his faithful corps of a sistants devoted themselves with a tireless compassion and skill which only at enthusiastic love for their grand profession could imbue them with. Shirley, also, was often seen, like an angel of mercy, among these poor and friendless creatures; while Madame Marton seemed, at last, to have found her vocation, and the few remaining years of her life were filled with peace and joy through the delight of ministering to the "poor." the "maimed," the "halt," and the "blind."

Shortly after the hospital had begun to the "poor," the "maimed," the "halt," and the "blind."

Shortly after the hospital had begun to receive its patients, a poor creature who had been fatally injured in a railway accident was brought to its doors.

John Hubbard was the name which the man moaned out between his groans to the surgeon attending him; and, upon learning of the case, Shirley felt sure that he must be the person who had so wronged her after her mother's death.

She went to see him and found her surmise to be correct; while she also learned that he had been going from bad to worse ever since the night of her flight from his home. His son had died of delirium tremens three months later, and his daughter Helen, who would not desert her wicked father, much as she despised the life he led, had suffered poverty and degradation with him, and was then living in a miserable tenement in New York City.

Shirley immediately sent for her to come to her dying parent; but she did not reach St. Sauveur until after his death and burial, the letter having been delayed on its way to her.

She manifested deep gratitude toward Shirley and her husband for their kindness to her wretched father, and then our fair Lady of Ivyhurst learned what she had long suspected, that Helen had aided her in her escape from her brother's persecutions, on that never-to-beforgotten night when she had almost insanely sacrificed her own life. She had opened the outer door for her, and the moment she was outside, she had closed and locked it, then braced herself against it to prevent any one following her. The struggle that ensued had given Shirley time to get out of the way but poor Helen had suffered a terrible beating for her agency in the matter.

The sad-hearted girl seemed to long to rise above the life she had always been obliged to lead, and begged Shirley to intercede with Lord Wallace to grant her permission to enter the hospital to be trained as a nurse.

The request was readily conceded, and, enthusiastically entering upon her work, she eventually became a noble and useful woman in the profession she had chosen.

Lord Wallace and his charming wife were not unmindful of the social duties which their position demanded, although they would never allow themselves to be hampered by them.

They were often sought by the brilliant circles of Montreal and Quebec and regarded as great acquisitions whenever

They occasionally met the Montcalms and Loverings, who, however, were no longer anxious to "preserve the distinctions," as Madame Marton once prophesied, as far as Shirley was concerned; but they realized that they were preserved and honored by the beautiful Lady of Ivyhurst in a way to win the admiration of every one who knew her.

Lurline was Miss Lovering still, and likely to remain so, much to her mother's disgust over the unappreciativeness of mankind in general.

Those recall the conversation that once occurred between Neil and Shirley upon this very subject; and surely as we occurred between Neil and Shirley upon this very subject; and surely, as we think of the loving husband and wife, who were truly "one in heart and soul," not only in all that pertained to their domestic relations, but also in their philanthropic work in the interests of suffering humanity, we can but feel that theirs was in reality an ideal union and an ideal home, and thus bid a loving farewell to our sweet and gracious Lady Shirley, who was in deed and in truth "A Royal Queen of Hearts." irley, who was in deed a Royal Queen of Hearts."

THINKS LEAGUE UNNECESSARY.

Mayor Rumball Only Half Favors Howland's Scheme.

Considers That the Present Municipal Association Would Do if Given Strong Support.

The proposal emanating from Mayor Howland, of Toronto, to form a municipal union for the defense of common rights and the rights of the citizens against the encroachments of great corporations, is received semi-enthusiastically by Mayor Rumball, who favors its aims, but considers the union unnecessary in view of the existence of a healthy municipal association at

'No doubt," he says, "municipalities are not careful enough of their own a cold climate, selects heavy, carbon-interests. Such a union is all right, accous foods, tallow, bacon and such; interests. Such a union is all right, and could doubtless do good work; but what's the use of having two associations for the same purpose? The one that met here in London has the same object, among others. Would it not be ture, and particularly in hot weather wiser for all the municipalities in Or-should avoid much butter, meat, or rather than form another?" In a symposium recently published In the Toronto News, Mayor Vair, of one or two slices of entire wheat Jalt, speaks to the same effect, saying bread and some Grape-Nuts and that as the aims and objects of the cream.

proposed league are identical with those of the present association, he could see food in no use of the two, if the municipalities would make use of the present organization. Whether this (the identity of aim) is so or not, in the opinion of Mayor Slater, of Niagara Falls, there cannot be too much energy and atten-tion given to this subject, "in order to defeat what is today the curse of Canada, as well as other countries."

FOOD AND WEATHER

Temperature Increased or Reduced by Food.

The old army ration for the tropics has been very sharply criticised for the reason that it consists of articles of food that any person even slightly knows is not adapted to the needs of the human system in hot weather. Nature shows forth in the selection of food by inhabitants of various countries; for instance, the Esquimaux in while the Hindoo and inhabitants of hot countries turn to the cereals for sustenance. We should follow this hint of natario that are not now active members any of that class of food. Perhaps a of it to take a greater interest in it, little meat once a day is not amiss, even in hot weather, but the breakfast and luncheon should be made of fruit, bread and some Grape-Nuts and Grape-Nuts are mentioned because they furnish the ideal cereal food in a most palatable and delicious form, in addition to which, they are ready cooked, and require no attention whatever from the cook. A person can pass through weather that may be intensely hot, in a comfortable manner, if the food be properly selected, and the above suggestions can be put into practice with in its technical and other principles. most excellent results.
