O'SHEA WAS NO ANGEL

Well-Informed Correspondent Makes This Plain Enough.

In the brief obituaries of the late Capt. William Henry O'Shea, who has just died in well deserved obscurity at Brighton, I find, writes the Marquis de Fontenay, no mention made of the fact that he was a count by the grace of the Vatican, while his elder brother was a duke of the kingdom of Spain, having acquired that title, which always carries with it the grandeur, by marrying a Spanish lady, the only child of a duke.

Nor is sufficient stress laid upon the discreditable role which Capt. O'Shea, who had served for a time in the Eighteenth Hussars, played in the wrecking of Irish home rule. It is ridiculous to speak of him as an injured husband, or as having had his life ruined by Charles Stewart Parnell. He owed everything to the latter, and the relations between his wife and the great Irish leader were a matter of the most public notoriety for fully six years before he brought his suit for divorce against her in 1890. During the greater part of those six years he was enabled to cut a figure in politics, was received by the Ministers of the day and treated by them with affected cordiality solely on account of his influence with Parnell, everybody being aware of the nature and origin of that influence. The Ministers, of course, had their own opinion about the captain. But they found it useful to keep in touch with the man through whom they could deal with the Irish leader, and in that way get the Irish party to come to terms with the Government on any given subject. The Irish members of Parliament, although loyal to Parnell, were thoroughly aware of the situation, and not one of them would shake hands with O'Shea, while in 1888, at the time of the Galway election, Parnell's devoted lieutenant, Biggar, telegraphed to his chief: "The O'Sheas will be the ruin of you."

It was only when Capt. O'Shea found that the Government could not and would not reward such services as he had rendered, by office or by a title, and when he realized that his wife could no longer bear the sight of him—he had long before squandered the handsome fortune which she had brought to him on her marriage—when he found that Parnell had no longer the means to assist him pecuniarily, that he instituted that suit for divorce which may be said to have killed Gladstone's home rule bill. It would have paid the Irish, paid their friends and sympathizers, to have bought the continuance of the silence of the captain. Perhaps it was that which he was looking when he first inaugurated the proceedings against Parnell. But no one seems to have realized this at the time. The divorce court proceedings placed on official record the intimacy between Parnell and his Egeria in a manner that the statesmen in power could no longer affect to close their eyes thereto. They were forced to recognize the relations with Parnell at the moment when the success of home rule seemed assured, and with his withdrawal into private life Ireland's only chance of self-government in a hundred years was lost, thanks to Capt. O'Shea.

England Flouts Crinolines. The fashionable dressmakers of London who have houses in Paris have decided there is no indication of a revival of the crinoline at present, even though in Paris some dubiousness is expressed about the future.

"Yes, full skirts, even very full skirts, by all means," she said, "and perhaps just a very little silk wire and stiffening to make the folds hang out gracefully, but not the crinoline."

"Even if ultra smart people in Paris should wear the crinoline, English women are not very likely to follow suit. For the thing they would have too much good sense, and, for another, they are too fond of outdoor sports."

Redfern's, in London, expressed the view that the crinoline, whether it be revived or not, could never again become general.

Perhaps the most significant statement was made by a modiste much patronized by royalty. The Queen's taste, she pointed out, has always been the direction of simplicity and grace. She would probably be the last person to wear a crinoline.

This fact, in fact, would be more than sufficient to render unsuccessful any attempt to make the crinoline popular. Judicial Tantrums. After a career of nearly thirty years as Recorder of Dublin, Sir Frederick Faulkner is about to retire at the age of seventy-four. Sir Frederick is noted throughout Ireland as one of the most upright judges upon the bench, and he is not slow to uncoil the vials of his wrath when anything in the handling of a case evokes his displeasure. In his earlier days he was constantly in hot water, but it was found that his bark was worse than his bite, and after a while the counsel practicing in his court learned to receive with stolidity his outbursts by singling the unfortunate attorney to be the recipient of some marked compliment.

The retirement of Sir Frederick will remove from the Irish bench one of its most picturesque figures, but his memory will live in the legal fraternity through the good stories told of his outbursts and apologies. State Control of Liquor. A bill to create a State monopoly of the liquor trade in Germany will come before the States of the island—the local Parliament. The bill empowers the States to take over the retail liquor business on January 1, 1908, and to install the present proprietors as managers, with instructions not to encourage the sale of drink. The bill provides that no drink shall be sold to minors under the age of sixteen, that no musical attractions be allowed, and that all the bars be open to the view of passersby. Compensation is recommended to the present licenseholders. The profits of the monopoly it is proposed to devote to the relief of taxation.

To Make a Bride

Many a woman would make a beautiful bride but she is deterred from entering the married state because of ill-health.

$500 REWARD FOR WOMEN WHO CANNOT BE CURED.

The proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States, for any case of Leucorrhoea, Female Weakness, Profluvium, or Falling of the Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

If women would study the laws of health and use a little more common sense there would not be such a large number to-day suffering with the ill peculiar to our sex," writes Mrs. Sallie Martin (President Mutual Social Science Club), of 36 South Halsted Street, Chicago, Ill. "When medicine is needed if they would take the 'Favorite Prescription,' they would have a chance to get well. I used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription three years ago and it cured me of female weakness of several years standing, so I know what I am talking about when I praise it and always know what the result will be where it is used."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used with "Favorite Prescription" whenever a laxative is required.

CURLS THAT LAST.

A Method That Gives Results That Defy Climatic Conditions.

Here is one woman's secret method of curling her hair so that it remains fluffy and wavy in spite of any climate. Even humidity or salt air, it is claimed, does not affect hair so treated.

The method consists in the use of a simple egg yolk and the doing up of the hair in a peculiar manner before rolling it around the kid rollers.

The white of one egg is stirred slightly, but not beaten or separated in any way. This liquid is then diluted with a little water, preferably rose water, although soft water of any sort may be used, with a few drops of any favorite perfume, to give the hair a delicate odor. One-third as much water as white of an egg are the proportions given, and this should be kept in a small, wide mouthed jar upon ice, if possible, where it will keep for a week or until it is all used. When not in use the kid rollers should be kept in a sachet, rather strongly scented.

At night the hair that is to be waved is parted from the back hair and the latter rolled up out of the way. Moistened a comb repeatedly and draw it through the hair to be curled until it is thoroughly damp, then divide the hair into strands, and before winding each strand around the rollers, roll it round and round tightly, then roll it round and round the roller. It is the first twisting before wrapping it around the roller that makes the peculiar fluffiness that is so much desired. The wrapping it around the kid roller makes it wave, and the egg wash causes it to retain the fluffiness.

The curl given by this method is most natural, and if the fluffiness is not desired a plain wave is made by merely wrapping the hair about the kid roller as usual, omitting the twisting described above. This sort of wave will last for two or three weeks.

International Bible Lesson for To-morrow.

The Message of the Risen Christ.—Read chapters 1st to 8th.

Golden Text—"I am He that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore."

Note, John was in the spirit on the Lord's day, and not on the seventh day, when honored with this revelation. The number 7 is the symbol of completeness. In the condition—of the remembrance of these 7 churches we have a description of the churches of that day, our day and all time as well, and if we really desire it God will soon show us our position as a church, or as an individual Christian, on the spiritual map.

The golden lamp-stand in the Tabernacle and Temple had 7 branches; although the Church of Jesus Christ is one, yet it apparently is many united of one, or one in many, and no one lamp or church or Christian can shed forth all the light there is in "Christ the Light of the World."

Our Lord reveals Himself here as the High Priest—of whom Aaron was but the type—about to trim and re-fill His 7 churches as Aaron did in type—see Ex. 30, 7.

Now, lamps, churches or men are useless for lighting the sinful darkness of this world unless they have the oil—the Holy Spirit. As the High Priest's duty every morning was to enter the holy place and trim the lamps of gold, so Jesus gives John, the apostle of love, the spiritual gift to give us a picture of our Great High Priest, accomplishing His priestly office amongst His churches. The 7 stars in His right hand—the 7 churches—show the spiritual leaders appointed of God to each church.

As churches and men we should continually pray for His gracious trimming and replenishing presence. Let us remember that when He trims us it is not to extinguish—there was no extinguisher in the Tabernacle—but to fit us with fuel—the Holy Spirit, that our likeness to Him and our efficiency in His service for our fellow-men may be increased.

TWO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN WHO ESCAPED SPRING CATARRH BY TAKING PE-RU-NA.

Spring Fever is Spring Catarrh—Nothing Robs One of Strength Like Spring Catarrh.

MISS ESTELLE CAMPBELL.

Miss Estelle Campbell, 140 N. High street, Nashville, Tenn., writes: "Peruna helped me when almost everything else failed. I was run down from overwork, as I had not been able to take a vacation for three years and naturally my nerves were all unstrung and I was greatly in need of rest and a tonic. I went away for two months, but did not seem to get my strength back, although I was taking a prescription which the doctor gave me before I went away. "At the request of my relatives, with whom I was visiting, I began to use Peruna, and you cannot realize how glad I was when within a week I found I was feeling so much better. Inside of a month I was feeling splendidly, ready and able to take up my work again."—Estelle Campbell.

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain, and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question.

We have on file thousands of letters which testify to the curative and preventive value of Peruna in cases of nervous depression and run down conditions of the system. We quote a typical case:

Mr. Frank Williams, 5855 34th street, New York City, member First Presbyterian Church and Captain Capitol Golf Club, writes: "Last spring I suffered with malaria and a run down condition which seemed very difficult to overcome.

"I tried several different tonics but did not seem to get much better until I began using Peruna. My recovery was slow, but I was improving and I was glad to continue using it.

"At the end of two months my health was restored and I looked and felt much better than I had for years. Your remedy is well worthy of a recommendation and I am pleased to give it mine."—Frank Williams.

Peruna never fails to prevent spring catarrh or nervous prostration, if taken in time.

Pe-ru-na is the Finest Tonic For a Weary Woman.

Miss B. Inez Silvera, 189 W. 136th street, New York City, Grand Recorder Daughters of American Independence, writes: "Five years of work, without a vacation, wore out my nervous system. I lost my appetite and felt weak and exhausted nearly all the time. "Peruna restored me to perfect health in five weeks. It is the finest tonic for a weary woman that I know of. I gladly endorse it."—B. Inez Silvera.

Peruna is the most prompt and permanent cure for all cases of nervous prostration caused by systemic catarrh known to the medical profession.

MISS B. INEZ SILVERA.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature. All correspondence held strictly confidential.

MR. MCGOIR REPLIES

"There are just a few things that I would like to say in connection with that letter published by Ald. Austin in The Planet," said A. B. McGoir, M. P. P., to the Planet this morning. "His objection to attacking me is too noticeable to necessitate one being drawn into a newspaper controversy, but I feel called upon to say a few words in my own defence against Ald. Austin's charges. 'In the first place Ald. Austin accuses me of playing to the galleries in connection with the recent labor trouble when, in an interview with The Planet, I spoke in the interests of the laboring men who were working for the electric railway. I might tell him that when the bill for an electric railway between Chatham and London came before the Legislature I spoke in favor of having the hiring of men on the construction of the road governed by the alien labor law, and when I spoke there were no laboring men in the galleries. I spoke in favor of the Chatham papers to advertise the fact that I was supporting home labor. Phil H. Bowyer, M. P. P., and Hon. Mr. Hendry, chairman of the same committee, were also of the same opinion as myself, and as a result of our fight that clause was inserted in the bill. The promoters of the road were right there and opposed the clause. Two other clauses which were not favorable to the interests of the Kent people were also struck out."

"Mr. Austin accused me of not working when I was in the Council for a clause in the Chatham, Wal-laceburg & Lake Erie Railway Co's agreement with the city that they should not employ alien labor. That was not necessary because the alien labor law covers that point. That was talked of at the time and explained in this way. If Mr. Austin looks up the Council proceedings he will see resolution after resolution where I have asked for local labor to be hired in all local improvement works. Another thing, this deputa-tion was sent to me by Ald. Austin himself and that is why I gave my interview that Ald. Austin complains of. I will always extend the same courtesy to a deputation of working men as I would to a deputation of capitalists."

"If those Dages are from Michigan, as stated in The Planet, I feel sure they can be made to get out, under the clauses in the alien labor law, and I feel satisfied that if these aliens were peddling pins and needles and dry goods through the country without a license instead of working for the railway company, Ald. Austin would make a far bigger kick than the laboring men are making now. Should they remain during the construction of the road, it is to be hoped that they will leave the country just as soon as the road is completed as they are not the class of people we need to assist in making this the best city in the province."

SPRINTER ARCHIE

The Methodist Church in Dover held their picnic Thursday at Baldon. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Clark and Neale and Arch. McGoir, M. P. P. The Chatham Township Colored Band was in attendance.

AN ABUSED DOG

A man named Harvey Wilson, living on Park St., has a dog which causes much annoyance to the people of that neighborhood. Wilson keeps his dog tied with a long chain to a corner of the house, and the dog, having a strong, and untiring pair of lungs, causes many a sleepless night for the weary residents of Park street.

Complaint was made to Humane Officer James McGregor yesterday, and, upon investigation, he found the dog as described, all tangled up in the chain, with no water and evidently suffering from wounds caused by the chain. Mr. McGregor gave the man a warning and untied the dog. Wilson is a colored man who does considerable fishing in the creek and river.

We warrant our ready mixed Exterior Paints to be absolutely pure. They are unsurpassed for durability, uniformity of shade and covering properties. Price per gallon $1.40. Drew & McCallum, King St. West.

A glove isn't much good unless it is on hand when it's wanted.

The man who attempts to rest on his laurels is soon forgotten.

A CORRECTION

In last night's issue of The Planet under caption "Dog at Large," Rev. T. Jesse Henderson, pastor of the First Baptist church, was the gentleman brought into police court by Mrs. White concerning his dog, and not Rev. T. H. Henderson, pastor of A. M. E. church, as before mentioned. The Planet regrets that such a mistake should be made.

PRESENCE OF MIND

Harry Church, of Briscoe's repair shop, was the victim of a painful accident yesterday morning. The shaft on the gasoline engine broke, a piece of it striking him on the head, rendering him unconscious.

Much more damage would have occurred had it not been for the presence of mind of Rev. Briscoe, who dashed through the whirling belt and stopped the engine with great risk to himself. The bravery of the act will be appreciated when it is learned that the intrepid Rev. Briscoe, who is employed in the same room, suddenly recollected that his life insurance had expired and taking to his heels, covered the first hundred yards in ten seconds flat. Several stitches were taken in the wounded man's head.

REASON NO 39 WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is put up in sealed packages.

These packages protect the flavor of the tea and protect you in weight and guarantee of quality.

No article of food is so easily tainted as tea—it absorbs the flavor of everything it comes in contact with. Place an orange beside some tea for an hour, and then taste or smell the tea—orange too.

Very few tea bins are tight enough to prevent tea from absorbing the odors of fruit, vegetables, cheese, etc., etc., usually mixed together in a grocery—and the ordinary tea chest is very little protection.

The Red Rose Tea sealed package preserves all the original flavor and freshness of the tea—open a package and smell its fresh fragrant aroma.

Packages of Red Rose Tea are always full weight and uniform in quality.

QUEEN'S CHOICE

By CAMPBELL MACLEOD

Copyright, 1905, by D. C. MacLeod

The jester bowed low before the throne. The king extended a much jeweled hand. The jester bent over it reverently and slyly bit it. The queen laughed behind her fan and beckoned the clown to her side. He sank on the steps at her feet.

"This is my throne for tonight," he announced, gayly jingling his bells. "I shall surrender it to no one. For one night I shall speak only the plain, unvarnished truth, your majesty."

"One who would speak the truth, Sir Cap and Bells," replied the queen slyly, "must needs have some previous experience."

"Ha, ha!" chuckled the king, beaming at the vision at his side. "Well said, my lady. Previous experience, Sir Fool!"

Age jangled in the voice of the king; youth bubbled in the laughter of the jester. The queen unconsciously leaned on the arm next to the clown and closed her eyes for a moment to rest them from the bewildering sight before her. To be queen of one of the most splendid Mardi Gras balls is something to turn a girl's heart. But this one, to judge by her weary eyes, in spite of the magnificence surrounding her and in face of the king's open devotion—was bored. And the evening was only beginning.

The jester at her feet played with his bells and hummed "If Ever I Cease to Love" in time with the musicians far overhead. As he sang he watched the face of the queen. Suddenly she turned to him.

"Sir Fool," she said gently, "that air goes not with that get-up. Save your voice for 'Tell Me, Pretty Maiden.'"

"Would she listen if I told her, think you?" he whispered eagerly. "There has never been one so pretty maiden for me, your majesty."

"A maid is but a maid," the queen returned slowly, "and a man but a man, and love is but a love."

"Everything," the jester interrupted seriously. "Love is all."

The king called the second time, then had to touch the arm of the queen before she heard him. Two strange princes stood waiting to be presented. Behind them came a train of Cupids, Lohengrins and monks, each bearing a tray of compliments. The queen's eyes were big and suddenly bright. The king sat with his fat hand on his heart and listened to her handying repartee with each in turn. The jester's bells were silent. He was attentively studying the queen's pink nails on the hand resting on the vase of magnificent roses near the throne.

"You should have been a queen," the king announced ponderously as the last troubadour moved off.

"You were born a queen," the jester whispered eagerly.

"This splendor shall always be yours," the king continued in business tones. "Everything shall be yours that money can buy. But you were fitted for a real throne."

"Kind hearts are more than coronets," the jester sang softly to the air of "Under the Bamboo Tree." And the truest throne is a throbbing heart, lady." The queen frowned at him impatiently and turned to the king, who was presenting two foreign generals, ablaze with decorations. No, she was not dancing, she told them. The king couldn't dance, and it flattered him that she was so well content on the throne beside him. The incident was full of significance. He had wealth, social position, everything but her, and now it seemed that his patience was to be rewarded at last. What woman could hold out in such a fight? The queen sighed and brought him back to earth. He turned eagerly to her. She was looking far away. Her thoughts, even to a casual observer, were far removed from this crowded ballroom.

"You sighed, your majesty," he begged humbly. "You share my throne. Let me share your trouble, whatever it is."

The queen laughed merrily. The jester touched his bells.

"Margot!" he whispered eagerly. "Margot!"

The queen ignored the appeal. A merry crowd of troubadours were approaching, and she paid for their compliments with a fire of smiles and pretty speeches.

"If you would marry me," resumed the old king suddenly when the crowd departed with backward bows and obeisance and they were alone save for the jester, whom he did not see, "you shall be queen in a palace as beautiful as even you could desire."

"Margot!" entreated the jester. "Love is everything!" The queen frowned at him impatiently.

"Marry me," pleaded the old king hoarsely. "You are not one who can stand poverty. Your mansion shall be a palace; your jewels shall rival a queen's."

"Marry me," whispered the jester, catching hold of the hand behind the rose. "Today I bought a house, Margot. True, there are but four rooms in it, but no place could be half so dear. You could transform it into a home, Margot. I have no jewels but those of my love to give you, Margot, but you know that is true."

"You shall cruise in a yacht on summer seas," continued the deaf old king, "and all Paris and London shall rave of your beauty and your splendor."

"We could slip off together to the park," whispered the jester, "to listen to the band on Sunday evenings. Don't you remember what you told me under those moss draped trees that night? The queen toyed with her fan and sighed. "I love you! I love you! I love you!" chanted the jester passionately.

"As my wife," resumed the king, "you will always be the queen of scenes like this." The eyes of the queen swept the house before her—her upon tier of beautiful women in gorgeous gowns and jewels, men whose admiration and preference counted for a great deal, and above all else, the atmosphere of wealth and culture and beauty. Could she afford to reject it all?

"I am old," the king continued sadly. "All that is left in life for me is you. Surely for the few years remaining—could you not share them with me? Think, gently—what it would mean to you—afterward. I ask no love!"

"I am young," the jester whispered eagerly. "I love you. Things are beginning to change for the better with me. Can you afford to sell yourself, Margot, for gold? What are the king's millions to my love, Margot?"

Into the eyes of the queen a great light suddenly leaped, but she sighed again when she looked at the king. One by one the maskers were straggling up to say good night. Far overhead the musicians were playing again "If Ever I Cease to Love," the carnival air. The king bent wearily toward her. "Shall I come for my answer tomorrow?" he asked patiently. Then, with fresh ardor, "You will not walk the wild's way weeping when the coachman bids you ride, your majesty?" he questioned pleadingly.

"My love," the jester's lips touched her hand—"if you choose the palace, who will keep my home?" The queen suddenly caught the clown's fingers with a thrilling grasp. Quick as thought he slipped a ring on the third finger of her left hand.

The king and queen had risen to depart.

"I shall come for my answer at 4 tomorrow," he reminded.

"Why—why not take it tonight?" the queen asked slyly. "I can never marry you, your majesty, because I am to wed another."

"To wed another?" the king faltered pitifully. "To wed—another?"

"This is he, your majesty," the queen replied, turning to the jester.

"Think!" the king pleaded. "Think!"

"The queen has thought," the jester announced in many tones. And he knelt and kissed the cold hand of the king.

A Cheerful View.

When Ozias Ransome of Pottersville saw the bill rendered by the physician who had ministered to his ills for three days in New York he puckered his lips and gave a shrill whistle.

"My stars, Oz, you aren't going to give that man any such sum of money as that, now, are you?" demanded his wife, with much spirit. "You know it's extortion—you know!" But, to her amazement, Mr. Ransome placed his hands in his pockets and tipped back the hotel chair in a position that indicated peace of mind.

"Now, see here, Rudory," he said tranquilly, "I didn't sense it at first, but when you consider that in Pottersville I'd have had to be sick most six months to run up a bill of that size we've got something to be thankful for that I was took with that spell here 'stead of at home."

Mrs. Ransome pressed her hand to her forehead.

"But—supposing you had only been sick those three days at home, and"—she began with a bewildered air, finding small comfort in her husband's reasoning—"why, then?"

"We've no need to suppose," said Mr. Ransome, with cheerful firmness. "We've got to take the decrees of Providence just as they come. You dwell the thought of my being saved six months in bed right in the heat of summer."

Much More Powerful.

Professor Smith was once lecturing on natural philosophy, and in the course of his experiments he introduced a most powerful magnet, with which he attracted a block of iron from a distance of two feet.

"Can any of you conceive a greater attractive power?" demanded the lecturer, with an air of triumph.

"I can," answered a voice from the audience.

"Not a natural terrestrial object?"

"Yes, indeed."

The lecturer, somewhat puzzled, challenged the man who had spoken to name the article.

Then up rose old Johnny Sowerby. "Said he," "I will give you facts, professor, and you can judge for yourself."

When I was a young man there was a little piece of natural magnet done up in a neat cotton dress as was called Betsy Maria. She could draw me four teen miles on Sunday over plowed land no matter what wind or weather there was. There was no resistin' her. That magnet o' yours is pretty good, but it won't draw so far as Betsy Maria!"

A Russian Custom.

"That man," said the photographer, "owes me $20 for a dozen cabinets. I wish I dared to treat him as he would be treated in Russia."

"In Russia if you don't pay your photographer's bill he hangs your picture in his window upside down. Every Russian photographer's window has five or six of those reversed pictures in it, and there is always a little crowd of people outside craning their necks and saying:

"Oh, that is Vasil Popoffsky. Won't he be ashamed! And look at Anna Olinisky. You'd think she'd be able to pay! Is that Santa Gogol there? It certainly is. What a pity!"

"Russian photographers, thanks to this unique method of theirs, have few unpaid bills. If only their method was in use here!"—Chicago Chronicle.

When That Biting Pain Tells of Kidney Disease

Fruit-a-tives are the first step in the cure. In fact, Fruit-a-tives will cure ordinary Kidney Troubles without assistance. They do this by cleaning and regulating the whole system.

"Fruit-a-tives" stir up the liver—cure Biliousness—make the bowels move regularly every day. That rids the system of poisons that affect the Kidneys.

Then Fruit-a-tives correct digestion—prevent acidity of the stomach—insure food being completely digested. It is by their cleansing, purifying, curative powers on the other organs that Fruit-a-tives have such a healing, soothing effect on sick kidneys.

"I have been troubled lately with my back and kidneys and have received great benefit from taking Fruit-a-tives. I am getting along so well that I intend to continue with Fruit-a-tives until I am cured. I recommend them to my friends."

SOUTH HUXTON.

We noticed an article in last week's issue of the Merion Mirror, giving the enterprising merchants of that place a great amount of credit for their push in getting down the cement walk across the cemetery, which was a work worthy of much praise to its promoters. Doubtless the writer was not a subscriber to the fund, or in looking over the list he would have noticed that some of the enterprising farmers in that vicinity had given twice as much towards this work as any one of those enterprising merchants, and he might have acknowledged the subscription of our friend from Glenora, which was more than that of any one of those enterprising merchants, and this petition of his that was so largely signed by his enterprising merchants was only imaginary, as such petition never existed, as the grant was secured from the Council by Marshall, Powell and Foxton.

DROWNED IN POSTHOLE

Nineteen Months' Old Babe Found in One Quite Dead

Baby Wanders Away and is Discovered Head Foremost in Old Greenhouse Posthole Filled With Water — An Inquest Was Deemed Unnecessary — Woman Drowns Herself at Ottawa Through Jealousy.

Toronto, June 10.—By tumbling into an old post hole full of water Samuel Bates, a nineteen months' old toddler, was drowned on Thursday evening. The little fellow was a son of W. Bates of Gordon street.

Near to the home of the Bates family is the site of an old greenhouse which has recently been torn down. About it were several post holes where the posts have been taken out. All of these were partially filled with water from the recent heavy rainfall.

Little Samuel, who could just barely walk, had been seen playing about the yard of the house for some time, and his mother inside little dreamed that anything amiss had happened to her child. When his baby prattle was missed it was then that a search was made for the whereabouts of the child.

Face foremost in one of these post-holes, which contained a few inches of water and a thick layer of mud, the little body of the boy was found. He was quite dead. An inquest was deemed unnecessary.

Buried Under-Tons of Sand.

Toronto, June 10.—Buried beneath tons of sand for nearly an hour yesterday afternoon, Albert Hayward, the eleven-year-old son of John Hayward of Todmorden, may not recover from his experience. The lad was playing on the sand heaps at Pape's avenue and was buried when the top of it crumbled in, burying him and several playmates beneath its weight.

A Wales Man Killed.

Corwall, June 10.—William Dillabough is dead at Wales, as the result of an accident. While drawing a load of wood, his horses took fright. Dillabough was thrown and dragged a considerable distance over broken stones, the wagon also passing over his body.

Victim of Level Crossing.

Tilsonburg, June 10.—Edward Johnson, colored, aged 45 years, whilst driving across the Tilsonburg and Pacific Railway at Ostrander crossing, was caught by the fast mail train, which leaves Tilsonburg at 5:15 p. m. and seriously injured. His horse was killed.

Dragged By a Chain.

Port Arthur, June 10.—A young man named Lestian had both legs broken yesterday afternoon on the Pigeon River Lumber Co's mill. He was engaged in clearing away short pieces of slabs from a chain-way when his clothes were taken hold of by the chain and he was dragged for a distance before he was extricated.

Fell Through Hole in Bridge.

Peterboro, June 10.—Margaret Loels, the five-year-old granddaughter of Thomas Inian, fell through the Otonabee River Thursday night when crossing the old Dickson Co. bridge. The child ran ahead of her parents, a plank was missing from the bridge, and she fell into the water. She was drowned before aid could reach her, the current being very swift.

Hamilton Responsible.

Hamilton, June 10.—The coroner's jury that investigated the death of John Smith, the G. T. R. yard foreman, who was fatally injured last Monday by a passing passenger train, has returned a verdict that the City of Hamilton is wholly responsible for the accident. The evidence showed that there was a hole in the bridge, and the car and the unfortunate foreman had to go into that space to give the signals to the engineer.

Passenger Coaches Upset.

Stratford, June 10.—Thursday morning the G. T. R. passenger train, which leaves Stratford at 8:45, was derailed about two miles from Shakespeare by the breaking of a tender truck. The baggage car and two passenger coaches were upset, but no one was seriously hurt except Conductor Alex. Ross, whose head was badly cut.

One Body Recovered.

Plymouth, England, June 10.—Thirteen bodies are still entombed in submarine boat "A. 8," divers who worked all day long only recovering one body.

Drowned Himself at Ottawa.

Ottawa, June 10.—A few nights ago a woman's hat and satchel and a note signed M. V. G. were found on the bridge at the Chaudiere Falls. The note announced her intention of committing suicide owing to jealousy, gossip and an absent husband. At first it was thought that the note was that of Buckingham, identified the satchel and the handwriting as that of his wife. In addition she left her husband a lengthy letter. She was operated on for spinal abscess recently, and it is thought she was discouraged and probably mentally weak.

Despondency Led to Suicide.

Toronto, June 10.—William Ford Thursday evening took a fatal dose of laudanum at the home of his sister, 33 Wellington avenue. Since his arrival in the city three weeks ago he has been very despondent and threatened several times to kill himself. It was about 8:30 he took laudanum, and he died at one o'clock yesterday morning. He was 25 years of age and came from Concord, Ont.

By the Morphine Route.

Toronto, June 10.—By taking an overdose of morphine Frank Ferguson, aged 24, of 208 John street, ended his life yesterday afternoon. The young man had been addicted to the use of the drug for some time past. During the last few months he has been in poor health.

"Over the Falls I Go."

Buffalo, N. Y., June 10.—Harvey Yerkes, a paperhanger, who was under $500 bonds on a charge of kidnapping the 16-year-old daughter of Frank Everett of Fort Erie, Ont., went to Niagara Falls yesterday and sent the following note to a friend here:

"Enough of this for me. Over the falls I go."

Yerkes had been brooding over trouble. His friends were unable to locate him last night.

BUSY SESSION OF COUNTY COUNCIL

Much Business Transacted at the Meeting of Kent's Parliament

Many Matters of Public Interest Dealt With—Commissioners All Present

FRIDAY AFTERNOON.

The Council resumed at half past three o'clock after visiting the different county institutions.

A deputation from the Fruit Growers Association was heard. Mr. Longmore addressed the Council and asked for a grant for the Fruit, Flower and Honey Show, which will be held in Toronto.

The report of the committee on Petitions and Legislation was read and adopted. They recommended in favor of detaching part of the town of Bothwell and annexing it to the Township of Zone. Also of petitioning the Government re the speed of automobiles and the law regulating the recompense given to farmers for sheep killed by dogs.

Warden Yeater and Councillors French, Ross, Chinnick, Campbell, Hornal and Stewart were appointed a committee to arrange with the city re the leasing of the city's portion of Harrison street.

The Council in revising the list of county constables and deciding whom they would recommend for positions as constables, were at a loss to know how many of the persons already on the list had qualified as constables.

Mr. Ross asked if the High Constable had a list of all qualified county constables.

Major Coogan—The Crown Attorney has the list of all constables. These constables never report to me and there are many that I even would not know if I saw them.

Mr. Ross—Many men have got the forms to be filled out entitling them to the position, and they have never been sworn in. I think every constable should be sworn in before he is allowed to set foot on the whole thing should be revised.

The matter is in the hands of a committee.

Moved by Messrs. Ross and Chinnick, that the Road and Bridge committee have the bridge on the town line between Raleigh and Tilbury, scraped and painted. Referred to Road and Bridge committee.

In reference to the county constables H. D. Smith, Crown Attorney, said that there is lots of money for good constables, but there are constables appointed now who strut around and wear badges and get into the fair for nothing, and that is the only time they are constables.

John Grant, for the committee on Education, made his report. He recommended the inspector of Public schools meet the W. Wallaceburg Board re their communication to the County Council. That no action be taken re the Lindsay High school account.

That the reports of the High School Inspector be printed. That the Wardens and Clerk sign the petition of the County of Lambton re the High School Act, and that the Leamington High school accounts be paid. The report was carried.

The Harrison Hall committee reported an arrangement with the city whereby the city will pay one-third of the expense of the new sanitary arrangements in Harrison Hall. Report adopted.

Mr. Huggart for the Property committee tendered his report as follows: That an architect prepare plans for certain improvements to the Regatta Office. That the new jailer's residence has been thoroughly renovated and cleaned, as also was the Court House and jail and jail grounds. Several accounts for the Regatta Office had been paid. The report was adopted.

A by-law granting $5,000 to assist the Township of Tilbury East in building a bridge over Jeannette's Creek was introduced by Mr. Ross and read the first time.

The Council then adjourned for the afternoon.

Before the session yesterday afternoon the members of the County Council visited and inspected the County Jail and House of Refuge.

At both places they reported themselves as much pleased with the condition of affairs and complimented both Governor Davidson and Manager Ripley.

Mr. French drew the attention of the Planet to the fact that he did not record his vote in the resolution re Jeannette on Thursday. "I deemed it best not to do so," he said, "because I am an East Kent man and it appeared to me to be really a West Kent matter." Mr. French accordingly did not vote for the resolution as had been recorded in the papers.

GUELPH HORSE SHOW.

Pepper & Co. A. Yeager and Hon. Adam Beck were the Principal Winners.

Guelph, June 10.—The second day of the Guelph Horse Show passed off most successfully. The attendance numbered nearly 4,000 people, and included many from outside points. Three excursions were in the city from Centre Wellington, West Middlesex and Stratford, and the majority of the excursionists took advantage of the opportunity and attended the show. The different events were closely contested, and Pepper & Co. A. Yeager and Hon. Adam Beck were the principal prize winners. From a social point of view it was a brilliant function, and the ladies contributed largely to its success. Dr. McKinnon of Coningsby won the silver cup for the champion draught horse.

DISTRICT DOINGS TILBURY

June 9.—At a meeting of the Village Council last night a resolution was passed adopting the street committee's report recommending the submission of a by-law to the electors next month to raise the sum of $3,100 for the purpose of extending the water main on Yonge, Cayley, Stewart and Prospect streets, and the putting in of five additional fire hydrants. As about 20 additional water services are already assured there is no doubt about the investment being a profitable one for the village, and it should receive the sanction of the ratepayers. A resolution was also passed for submission to D. A. Gordon, M. P., asking for a dock on the River Thames near the mouth of Baptiste Creek.

There are excellent prospects for to-day's races.

A couple of trick bicyclists drew a large crowd on Queen street last evening to witness their performances, which were excellent, and a large collection was taken as a result.

For Every Woman According to Her Needs

A BRIDAL CHEST

The wedding petticoat

There's nothing as nice as a cedar chest

The last stitches for luck

THE June bride and her bevy of girl friends have been storing up quantities of the loveliest sort of things—and the eminently practical things as well—in the chest she's so proud of.

This chest itself is the subject of much anxious consideration. There's nothing so nice as one of cedar, for winter clothes can be packed away in it without the deadly fear of moths. But cedar is an expensive wood, and so out of the reach of most of us.

Carved chests (for cedar chests are usually left plain, for some occult reason) are the next popular kind, and the degree of carving depends both upon purse and taste. Grotesque faces peer out at you from dull wooden surfaces, or heads of heraldic beasts stand out in bold relief from the centre of a group of heavily carved swirling lines, or perhaps the most conventional arrangement of fruit and blossoms covers the whole chest in elaborate detail.

But these elaborate carvings catch the dust, and it's almost impossible to get it out of the many crevices. And the dulled finished woods are made with stripes that are stiffened at the time of opening, at the lid stays up instead of falling upon your devoted head as you open it. And for some bit that is just of your maid. Some of them have mental blinges, and others the kind of thing that seem to sink into the wood until they're invisible.

Only about half of them lock; but when they do, the lock is usually the centre of the ornament—often made into an ornament itself. But kinds (and sizes, too) are legion.

Often, when a girl's room is small, she chooses her chest to fit into a deep window, where it will be out of the way, yet definitely in view as an all-important object. But then only the smaller things of her trousseau can go into it—only the smaller bits of lingerie, the conferees and smaller personal, or linen, things, and trousseau gifts. And she usually likes to have the chest reveal fascinating piles of lace and ribbon when the lid is raised.

Box couches have done duty for many a bride-to-be instead of the regulation chest. But, although they're mighty useful and satisfactory, they're none of the pretty German sentiment that lingers about the bridal chest proper. In Germany, indeed, where the idea comes from, the trousseau chest is a most definite part of every girl's property, being given to her at an early age, and slowly filled until her trousseau assumes alarming proportions from a care-taker's point of view; but she is assured of enough linen and such things to last a lifetime. Her chest is necessarily large.

Have some kind of chest—if you and the only man in the world have to construct it yourselves of plain white wood, covered with cretonne on which the roses bloom as they will in the month you've chosen for your wedding day. If you do make it, line it inside as well as out, and put in the bottom one of those big flat bureau sachets, with your favorite perfume scenting it delicately.

By the way, a most satisfactory sachet is got by laying a cake of French soap in your chest—it seems to have just enough perfume to give that floating, intangible breath to everything near.

If you like the English lavender flowers, fill a lavender-colored bag with them and drop it in—the fragrance seems to go by hereditary right with sheets and linens, but is perhaps a little too strong for mere personal things.

The things to go in your chest are like illuminated texts—each has had sewed (if you're fortunate enough to be able to sew on your own bits of prettiness) into it all sorts of happy thoughts. Perhaps this is a gift from your best friend; perhaps your mother made that bit herself; perhaps the prettiest of your lace stocks you made while that same only man roared along to you; perhaps the results of many a merry sewing-bee (in the shape of the daintiest of corset covers and chemises) are there in piles.

Your wedding petticoat—the prettiest you could buy or make—is there, a lingerie petticoat, most probably, with lace inset everywhere and thousands of tiny, even loveliness, set stitches embellishing it. Let it be as beautiful as you can afford it, but don't let it be overtrimmed. An exquisite one made by a recent bride, had the prettiest flounce imaginable made up of shaped bits, joined by rows of lace almost as wide as the bits themselves.

Embroidery wears better than lace, as all the world knows, although brides are apt to forget, in the excitement of choosing just pretty things; and the fine little blind embroideries are next best to the handwork that every woman loves.

Such beautiful—though absolutely simple—things come already made, for the girl who isn't friends with her needle. Chemises and corset covers, with every stitch and the tiny plain scallop done by hand, yet which come for a song—if you bring out the right note. They're pretty enough to use as foundations, and to add the lace insertion and edging to yourself.

And, by the way, that bride made herself a corset cover of shaped bits and lace to match the petticoat.

Don't economize on your corset! If there's ever a time when you want every good line you have emphasized and every bad line deftly concealed, it's when a whole churchful of people is staring at you, exclaiming softly to each other how pale you look—or how rosy—and, most of all, how your dress sets. The prettiest corsets imaginable come to join the ranks of your trousseau, made of the daintiest of French belottes and brocaded stuffs, with little flowers flung at haphazard all over them, in just satiny figures of white, or the tiniest of pink roses—June flowers again.

Your stockings—the silk pairs, at least—are in that chest. If their number is few, they're plain and as fine as you can get them, although raw silk wears so much better. Your prettiest slippers are there, too, and among them is sure to be a pair of bronze, or the newer kind, exactly the bronze shade of some leather. Keep a few stitches on your wedding dress to do on the great day itself. If it's only to baste a running in. They say it brings good luck, and no bride's averse to helping along omens at so momentous a time.

By way of simplifying the constant showing off of your trousseau to the friends who come day after day, set an afternoon just before your invitations are sent out and invite all the near friends to come to see your things together—a sort of trousseau party. It's not half the trouble the constant showing off of that chestful of things is to do for each guest by herself.

And you want to do everything the easiest way, so as not to be a fagged-out bride.

THE PRACTICAL LINENS

WHEN they're intended for that new little home, even work on the practical linens becomes fascinating, and each 'stitch, stitch,' that the poor little seamstress of poet fame sang so dolorously, is taken with a joyous hum as accompaniment.

Cup towels are hemmed with more of a pleasant feeling than mere patience, and the tiny stitches taken with greater care than like stitches are apt to be again.

As to tablecloths and napkins, there's something wrong with the woman who doesn't revel in fine damasks and beautiful table linen, and doesn't set her stitches with conscious pride not only while she's working on her trousseau, but as long as she has a table to sew on, and get her fingers on the right linen.

If you've a choice between fine linens and enough linens, choose the latter. You must have enough to keep the table always dainty, and a few fine ones won't do that. But manage, somehow, to eke out one best one. In spite of Mme. Recamier's famous habit of living as if she were always before a court and so learning perfect carriage and manners, most of us like to set our tables a little better when we hold court, as we might term our times of entertaining.

Match your tablecloths with napkins whenever you can; and, if possible, embroider them. If you can't embroider yourself, there are women who do beautiful work and do it for an almost nominal sum, when you consider the actual amount of labor necessarily expended.

If you get lunch napkins—the kind with fringes—whip each napkin around close to the linen, something like a crude sort of hemstitching. It won't show, but will tell wonderfully in the wear. It can be easily done by holding the fringes down over your fingers—if you leave it loose, the work is almost impossible to accomplish.

For the heavy butchers' linen and hemstitching inch hems around squares of it made lunch napkin size. If you embroider initials in the corners,

Even the practical times become fascinating

A PERSONAL GIFT FROM MAID OF HONOR

THE little personal gift that the maid of honor nearly always gives to the bride just a little while before the wedding—not her wedding gift itself, but usually something that she has made herself—should be a characteristic gift, for it ought to be one of the bride's pleasantest memories.

An original present that will be given to a June bride by her best girl is her wedding slippers, embroidered and plete by laying the front of the design on a fold of the paper, then turning the paper over and reversing the pattern. Trace it off onto the white satin and embroider it in a frame, or in rings, so that the embroidery is sure to be perfectly flat. Don't pad it anywhere, but embroider leaves and the odd little blossoms solid, setting pearl beads (if you can get tiny ones) in the centre of the flowers and where the small round dots show on the pattern. Use a thin, on each side and each loop is embroidered.

Of course, don't attempt to cut the slipper out of the satin—stamp the design on the straight piece, being careful to have the slipper point the way of the weave, never across it. It will take three-eighths of a yard of the satin to make the pair, if it is wide enough to lay the two on side by side. But don't set them too close together—the design is only made to the seam, not including it. And be sure that it matches the white of the bride's gown; if it's of satin, try to get it off the same piece.

And have the slippers carefully made up, over a last that you know is right. The best way to do this is to take the bride-to-be into your confidence and have her try on slippers, using as a model the one that is most comfortable. For her slippers, like everything else she wears, must be absolutely comfortable.

The exact size of half the design

An original present from the maid of honor beaded by the giver. The finished slipper and half the design are illustrated. The pattern is the exact size of half a No. 4 slipper, but can be enlarged or reduced by adding on or taking off one of the set little figures at the back, which are easily detached.

Draw the pattern off, make it com-twisted silk for the work, and be sure it matches the white of the silk perfectly—nothing's so inharmonious as two ill-matched whites.

If you can't get small enough pearl beads, use the crystal kind with the silver lining—they make a very pretty glint among the embroidery.

The little bow in front has four loops ly, too, although perhaps the best of all, from the standpoint of wearing, is the solid embroidery worked with soft-finish cotton.

Towels you've never enough of, so, no matter how many you've allowed, get more! Have your best towels embroidered, of course, with a single big initial, in preference to your monogram; but have, besides, bath towels (those Turkish toweling ones) and the little hand

AN OUT-OF-DOORS WEDDING

THE prettiest setting of all for a June wedding is out of doors.

That is, of course, if you can reconcile your feelings to the absence of church fittings, and the solemnity of a church wedding—for some people feel that a marriage is hardly a marriage unless it is consummated in church.

A wedding which was solemnized a couple of years ago was the prettiest outdoor wedding this part of the country has yet seen.

The bride (there were two of them, sisters) were mighty original girls about everything, so at something unusual was looked for when it became noted about that there was to be a double wedding. When the invitations came out the unexpected—which was expected—happened. The invitations quoted no hour, but said "at sunset."

Of course, half the people invited prophesied rain; the other half said that even the weather would respect such daring. And the weather did.

The day was glorious, warm and mellow—just the comfortable sort of weather that makes you look your best. The flowers were sweet-smelling—quantities of them—and the wedding took place in a great circular spot (roped off with white ribbons) on the lawn.

Everybody was out in her best bib and tucker, and the whole effect was delightful, something like a lawn party, but a dozen times more interesting, because of the romance in it.

EARTH'S LITTLE THINGS

REVEAL THE POWER OF GOD'S LOVE AND CARE OF CREATION.

THE ANT AS MAN'S TEACHER

"Consider Her Ways and Be Wise," said King Solomon, "Noted Throughout the Ages For His Wisdom—Object Lesson From the Insect World, Showing the Importance of Little Things."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick D. C. Tereah, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 4.—In his sermon the preacher, drawing an object lesson from the insect world, shows the importance of the ant in the industry and the folly of those who belittle or undervalue it. The text is Proverbs vi, 6, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise."

It was a hot, sultry afternoon in summer on the famous Chautauqua ground of New York when Bishop John H. Vincent, of New York, called the evangelist. In walked the founder of the Chautauqua movement in this country. He said, "Chapman, I want you to go and hear a lecture this afternoon." "What on?" "It is given by a college professor. The lecture is entitled 'My friends the Gila Monster, the Horned Owl, the Opossum and the Rat.'"

"At first," said Dr. Chapman, "I was a big meeting for to-night for which I must rest and prepare. You must let me off this once." "No, Dr. Chapman, I will not let you off. You must come. There is a great treat in store for you." So, under the pleading demands of Bishop Vincent, he went.

"At first," said Dr. Chapman, "I was a big meeting for to-night for which I must rest and prepare. You must let me off this once." "No, Dr. Chapman, I will not let you off. You must come. There is a great treat in store for you." So, under the pleading demands of Bishop Vincent, he went.

The little things of earth reveal the power of God's love and care, as well as the greater things. King Solomon would introduce to us one of his little friends. He would have us use an ant hill for a pulpit. He would have for the preacher of the morning one of the ordinary, commonplace, large mandible, many jointed, long antennae, six legged insects that we can see in almost every country. "Go to the ant," would tell us that the ant's intelligence, foresight, her persevering energy, her many social affinities, her mortal hatred, her sensitiveness to smell and color, her architectural genius with which she constructs the palace in which are to be deposited the precious eggs, her slaves and nurses who serve her in peace, her military captains who marshal her great armies in war, her care for the cocoons in which the grubs are developed into the perfect insects, as the caterpillar unfolds the transparent life of a butterfly, offer unlimited fields for gospel illustration. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise."

Busy, busy, busy. "Busy as an ant" is an old proverb. Whether she is caring for her eggs or finding the grubs, whether she belongs to a foraging party or is going forth upon a war of conquest to capture the eggs of another hive, whether she intends to develop into future slaves, whether she is migrating from one part of the country to another or is building the walls and the hallways, squaring the chambers, laying the foundations or arching the dome of a new house, the ant is always busy. She works during the day, she works while she sleeps. Her ambition is not to find out how little she can do but how much she can do. She keeps on working. To do something is the very breath of her existence.

This proverb is axiomatic. You go out for a summer stroll and one of your ant children calls: "Oh, mother, come and look. See these little black things. What are they?" "Ants, my dear," you say. Then you stop over that hive and watch them. They are moving, always moving. Some are busy house cleaning. If you could enter the chamber of an ant mound, you would find that each room and connecting hallway are absolutely clean. Every particle of dust which once choked those galleries has been carried out, piece by piece, and deposited afar off, where it will not obstruct the openings of the ant hill. Some of these ants are house cleaners. Some are going after food. Some are caring for the grubs. But they are all working—the ants are always working. Their working hours are simply unlimited. Sir John Lubbock, the famous naturalist, reported that he once watched a single ant who worked without intermission or relaxation from 6 o'clock in the morning until nearly 10 o'clock at night. For sixteen hours that ant continued diligently at her task. You cannot dream of a lot of ants getting together, as do some men to-day, whose chief aim seems to be to find out how little work they can do in life and what is the maximum of pay they can force out of their employers for a minimum of labor. Oh, ho. That is not the ant's way. No sooner does the sunlight crawl over the eastern hills than the ant hives become busy. The different ants say: "Hurry up now. We have so much work to do and such a little time in which to do it. Be busy, be busy!" The human foot may have often crushed an ant in the pathway, but I doubt if it ever killed an ant taking an afternoon nap. When an ant is slain in the country road she is always hurrying somewhere or trying to get back to her hive after she has accomplished the purpose of her journey. She is working. She is continually working. She is always working.

Idleness has no place in God's economy. Life is work; life means a continual struggle for physical as well as moral and spiritual existence. God would not send the snows of winter, the drafts of summers, the winds, the frosts and the hunger unless he meant man to work; God would not have made helplessness mean a parent to work; God would not send sickness and helpless old age unless he desired all people to work during the strength of their youth. "If any would not work, neither shall he eat," is the Pauline injunction against sloth. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard. Consider her ways and be wise." All happiness and health, mental, moral, spiritual and financial progress depend upon persevering toil. The sooner our growing boys and girls realize that they must work for a livelihood the better it will be for them and the better it will be for us who are caring for them during the years of their development.

Unrelenting toil, an essential for human life is the first lesson the ant hill teaches us to-day. By the ability to make the right use of toil, to conserve energy so that the maximum of results are produced from the minimum of labor, to perform work so thoroughly and intelligently that it is not useless and has to be done over, is the second teaching of my text. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise," does not allude any more to the ceaseless activity of the ant than it does to her marvelous foresight, with which she plans out her work and accomplishes her results.

The ant uses her brain as well as her mandibles or legs. She uses her eyes to see where she is going as well as her feet to walk. Study the ant as an architect or a builder. Some of us have stood in awe before the architectural wonders of the cathedrals and the palaces of the east. We have seen walls and columns and domes and minarets and spires that were "frozen music in stone." We have climbed the heights of Milan cathedral, whose towers and walls are people with almost as great numbers of apostles and saints and martyrs and priests carved in solid stone as there are worshippers who ever gather up one time before its sacred shrines. We have seen St. Peter's of Rome connected with the wonderful Vatican and St. Mark's, more poetic than the Venetian canal. We have seen the marvelous conceptions of a Christopher Wren and the wonderful structure at Cologne, only a few years ago dedicated after having consumed centuries in building. These tremendous buildings have lifted themselves up even as did the temple of King Solomon. Why? Every beam, every stone, had its appointed place. Each part was a small unit, fitted into a great unified whole. But as I stand to-day before Westminster Abbey or a St. Paul of London I emphatically assert that these structures compared to the strength and intelligence of the builders are not as wonderful as an ordinary, everyday, commonplace ant hive we may see in the country road.

To build the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York city blasting powder had to be used. The foundations had to be excavated out of solid rock. True. But the ants—then build their hives by excavating the solid rock. The walls of Canterbury cathedral must be absolutely straight. True. But no mason's plumb line ever erected straighter walls than the walls of an ant hill's chambers. The rooms of the Vatican must be arranged in orderly fashion. All the chambers of an ant hill open into long corridors. Each room has its connecting hallway. A well regulated cathedral must have its proper system of drainage. The ant hive is so built that it will shed all water. No rainstorm can deluge its ceiling. No fire can burn in the chimney. No bank can destroy its foundations. The ancient Romans always built their cities upon the hillsides for protection. The ants build their hives on high places where storm and water cannot submerge them.

The ant's wisdom should be emulated as much as her activity. The Arabian held the ant's wisdom in such respect that after the death of a man child they would place one of these insects in the baby's hand which they made the earnest prayer, "O God, may the boy turn out as clever and as wise as the ant." Like the ant, the man who does not work with intelligent thought is a useless and a dangerous worker. Fire and steam are alike potent, but the harm caused by imprudence is greater than the good that is done by harnessing steam. Willingness to labor will not weave together a carpet unless intelligence has manufactured a loom and a shuttle. The intelligence of the ant is a startlingly significant. It is as worthy of imitation as is her persevering energy. Snowshoes are useless in Florida. Calico dresses are an absurdity in the Arctic. A ship's keel laid in the center of the western prairies had better be split up into kindlings. A telescope is utterly useless except for the power of the brain which adapts the lens to the astronomer's eye. He who is wise, intelligent and wise architect, after the manner of the ant, will find great co-operative social organizations. In a factory the workers are organized. In a family the members are organized. Because of this perfect fitting of the great leather bands move round and the spindles fly, the elevators lift and the walking beams rise and fall, the hammers strike, the wheels revolve on the ground and the wood is cut, and the shoe and the ax and the saw and the chair and the stove are offered for sale by the city merchantmen. Because of this same arrangement, the man under man's cogs into the gears of other men a great multitude of human beings become a united creature of life called an army. Read the words of the prophet: "For I also am a man under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one, 'Go!' and he goeth, and to another, 'Come!' and he cometh, and to my servant, 'Do this,' and he doeth it." Thus the ant, the man and men as well as wheels may be set under authority, we find that ants are also set under authority.

Every industrious human life that is successful, always operates with other lives. Every ideal human organization on a large scale must be a perfect human ant. Everywhere human talent should be specialized. What special niche are you going to fill in the great human bee hive? When I go and closely examine the wonderful mosaic floors and walls and ceilings of the Alhambra, of the old Spanish Moors I do not find these individual stones and tiles and mosaics. Many of them are only common pebbles that we might sweep with our feet in the street gutter. But when these common pebbles, as individuals, are put together and fitted side by side in contrast with other stones they form the beautiful mosaics of the Alhambra, which are one of the marvels of this century. The ant teaches us more than lessons of activity and wisdom and co-operation. Some men may be active and worldly wise and yet have a heart as dead to all kindness and love as is a stone. The ant is essentially a spiritual as well as a temporal teacher. She teaches man the laws of love and mercy and gentleness. She teaches these spiritual lessons more powerfully, I believe, than any insect or reptile found in the studies of the biologists. Some years ago, to prove whether ants knew each other and cared for their own, a naturalist took two bottles and covered their mouths with muslin. In one of these bottles he placed two strange ants. In the second he placed two friendly ants. Then the naturalist placed these two bottles in front of the entrance of an anthill. At once the ants swarmed forth by the hundreds. With their mandibles they tried to break through the muslin covering of the strange ants and destroy them, but for their friends they had not a stroke nor a blow.

Not only will ants refuse to attack one of the members of their own hive, but if they find one of their own kind wounded or in trouble or hindered or crippled, then will the ants of some species, though perhaps not of all, tenderly care for that sick alien ant, as though it were one of their own. Do. Cripple an ant in a country road, and her sisters will find her and tenderly carry her back to the hive and protect her there until she dies. They will care for her as tenderly as physicians do for the sick child. They will never leave her, nor let her hunger nor freeze with the cold if they can help her. O man, is one of the missions of your life to look after the help and the maimed and the blind and the helpless? When a stream of gold began to flow through your counting room; when you got beyond the awful struggle for daily bread; when you had more than two garments in your wardrobe, did you get down upon your knees and say, "O God, I thank thee that thou hast given me much. I thank thee that I can now give to others in the same name. Now I can be eyes for the blind and clothing for the naked and food for the hungry and shelter for the homeless. Did you, do you make that prayer? Like the ant, are you trying to protect your people from outside dangers? Like the ant, are you trying to help the helpless and care for those who are mentally, physically and spiritually doomed, unless you come to their rescue?

The thoughtful love of the ant for her sisters was beautifully illustrated by an incident in the life of the noted sage of Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin. One day he discovered a number of ants feasting in a molasses pail. He drove them out and suspended the pail in midair from a hook in the centre of the ceiling. Much to his surprise, after Franklin had been reading for awhile, he saw an overlooked ant which had been hidden in the pail crawl out and up to the ceiling, across the ceiling to the side wall, down the side wall and disappear. A short time afterward the philosopher saw that same ant leading a retinue of others, who were up to the ceiling, across the ceiling to the side wall, down the side wall and disappear. A short time afterward the philosopher saw that same ant leading a retinue of others, who were up to the ceiling, across the ceiling to the side wall, down the side wall and disappear.

But I cannot close without one simple paragraph, to state that this sermon of all sermons should teach its lesson to wives and mothers and sisters and daughters as no other sermon I have ever preached. Have you not noticed how I have always used the feminine gender in speaking of the ant? "She does this," "she does that," "she does the other thing." The reason I speak thus is because the naturalist tells us that the little black ant we see in the roadway belongs to the feminine gender. Yes, the hard workers of the ant hills are always females. No sooner is the nuptial journey taken than the male ant disappears. So, when I come to the house of God, to the place where the Christian workers I find inevitably that the wives and the mothers and the sisters and the daughters are the leaders there in Christian work. As the mother rocks the cradle, so the child developed by God. It is the sister's Christian life that leads the brother to Christ. It is the way in which a wife lives that decides the way the husband lives. O woman, with the ant hill in your pulpit, I ask you will you not go to work for Christ? Will you not, here and now, consecrate your prayers and your lives for the salvation of your fathers and brothers and sisters and sons to God? Our powerful presence of this morning is a priestess—the ant. Will you not plead with your loved ones to bow at Christ's altar, which is the child of an ant hill? O God, give us one generation of women for Christ, and then we shall have a whole world saved for Christ!

Richard Quirk Doctor for a Dozen Years and Thought his Case Incurable—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Fortune Harbor, Nfld., June 5.—(Special.) Scores of people with kidney ailments from Backache to Bright's Disease. Among the most remarkable cures is that of Mr. Richard Quirk, and he gives the story of it to the public as follows: "I suffered for over twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney Disease, and at intervals was totally unable to work. After ten or twelve years of doctors' treatment, I had made up my mind that my complaint was incurable. Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills tempted me to try them. I did so with little hope, but to my great surprise I had not taken more than half a box before I felt relief, and after the use of seven or eight boxes, I was fully cured and a new man."

"Yes, Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my Lumbago and Kidney Disease, and the best of it is I have stayed cured."

SOME USEFUL HINTS.

Matters That Are of Interest to the Genuine Automobileist.

One of the first things required of the genuine automobileist is that he must know anything about it. And the second is like unto the first, which is that a man should disregard his neighbors as much as he loves himself. These things being understood in the beginning, your standing among the fraternity is assured. Here are in addition a few minor matters that need attention: When you start out to be sure that your mixture is correct. Even about five gallons of 76 gasoline into your car fuel tank will add to this a couple of highballs for yourself. You will be surprised how much better the machine will run. Upon the extreme care and minutiae with which you examine your auto before starting out will depend the almost absolute certainty of breaking down. Don't miss anything, therefore, from the steering apparatus to the spark plug. One of the greatest things about automobileing is the way it trains the senses. By practice you will get so that you can pass through the most beautiful scenery without being aware of it, thus acquiring that superb concentration necessary. And you will soon be able to detect any unusual smell and locate it at once.

Be sure to buy the most complete set of tools known. Even before starting out take from them the one tool you will most certainly need and leave it carefully behind you. After awhile this will become second nature, so that you won't even have to think about it. Remember that to keep your auto in the best condition you must lubricate it constantly. To do this successfully use, say, one-half as much cylinder oil on the machinery as you use on yourself. By and by you can tell by the way you feel whether everything is in good running shape or not. Do not be discouraged if your carburetor gives out, your batteries lay down on you, your connecting rod refuses to connect or you are confronted by a missing link in your chain. You are, of course, able to support yourself in luxury and discomfort, or you wouldn't have a motor car anyway, so remember that for a man who has more money than you has had the same things happen to him. Always carry with you the King James version of the Bible. For your purpose it is far better than the revised version. The expressions are more terse. And finally when you have anything happen to you keep it secret from the presence of your enemies. But when you lie, lie openly, just as if you believed it yourself.—Life.

Prince Won't Take Gifts. If the natives of India were puzzled in the recent great disaster to the King's own brother, the Duke of Connaught, yielding precedence to Viceroy Curzon, their idea of what is due to Royal blood are likely to be further upset when the Prince of Wales visits India.

It is stated that the Prince will never take precedence over Viceroy Curzon. He will hold a few durbars, but on these occasions the Viceroy will not be present. Another announcement in connection with the Prince's visit which does not meet with the approval of the native rulers is that rajahs will not be allowed to make him presents. The reason for this is doubtless the fact that the rajahs on such occasions compete most jealously as to who shall make the most magnificent gift, for which the poor taxpayers suffer accordingly.

It is estimated this sum was wasted last year by people trying to find a cure for catarrh. Foolish for sufferers to experiment when it's so well known that "Catarrhazone" is the only remedy that cures permanently. "I was so bad that ordinary medicine didn't even relieve; but Catarrhazone cured perfectly." No chance of disappointment with Catarrhazone—it's certain, as death to cure your Catarrh—just try it.
