WITH THE SOLDIERS

84TH TO MOVE.
The announcement was made by Brig-General Logie G. O. C. the Toronto district yesterday, that provision has been made for the accommodating of 24,000 of the troops in the district, for a limited period, probably until June 1st, before which time it is expected final plans will have been made for the disposition of all troops in the district for the summer. The 24,000 troops will be the senior units of the district, and half of them will go to Niagara, while the other 12,000 will remain in Toronto for the limited period mentioned. While nothing has been said as to the accommodation of the latter force after June 1st, it is probable that they will then go into camp at Long Branch Rifle Ranges, which should be ready by that time. The men to be sent to Niagara will likely be the senior troops, who will thus be able to carry on the more advanced battalion training, while the later formed units can continue their training, most of which does not require extensive drill areas, on their present parade grounds. In connection with the plan, Brig-General Logie will probably bring the 84th Battalion to Toronto for a while.

As the new plans will necessitate the retention of the present quarters occupied by the troops, Brig-General Logie is asking the Exhibition and Toronto School Boards, and the Mayor for the use of the buildings now occupied until the date named, namely, June 1st.

ENGINEERS GO TO NIAGARA.
Preparation of the Niagara Camp for the troops, who are to occupy it, began yesterday, when a small detachment of men from the Engineers went to Niagara and these will be followed on Wednesday by the remainder of the working party who will number about 14 in all. As a considerable amount of permanent work was done last year, the main part of the work to be done immediately will be in connection with the roads through the camp, which will require crowning to permit the heavy motor lorries to use them. Some of the drain pipes put in last year were removed with the Fall and these together with the water pipes will have to be replaced, while the tent floors and other temporary structures will be prepared in position for the troops. From ten to eleven battalions can be cared for without further preparations than those outlined, and this number is about that announced by General Logie as the force that is to be sent to Niagara. The engineers will have completed their work within one month, when the troops can be moved into camp if it is thought advisable, though last year the majority of them did not go until later. The value of the work of under-drainage, which was done in some of the wettest parts of the camp last year, is showing itself now, these places already being quite dry enough to use.

NO MORE ARTILLERY COURSES.
An announcement which will be a disappointment to a considerable number of officers of artillery militia batteries, has been received from the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston, to the effect that after May 13th, no further courses for the training of artillery officers and non-commissioned officers will be held in the present course, which started in March, will be completed by about May 1st, and those present at it will be the last to qualify until the considerable number now awaiting appointments have been absorbed.

USE SUPERNUMERARY OFFICERS.
In order to make provision for the very large number of young supernumerary officers who have qualified, but are still without posts, Brig-General Logie has asked for the necessary authority to form a company of officers to train in something of the same manner as the various university companies, except that their training would be of an advanced order. These would be of an advanced order. These would be of an advanced order. These would be of an advanced order.

Emergency Corps Now at Burford

The organization was formed at once with Mrs. A. D. Muir as president.

The Gainsville Women's Institute held a splendid meeting at the home of Mrs. Carmody on Tuesday, April 4th. The president, Mrs. Rose, in the chair. The meeting opened by singing. "While the days are going by." The secretary then gave the report of the last meeting. The roll call was responded to by each one paying 25c, which is to be used for patriotic purposes. The following programme was much enjoyed: Paper, "Eggs and their symbolism," Mrs. J. Hastings; paper, "The British Isles," Mrs. F. Sumner; duet, Mrs. Wilson and Miss Norrie; Mrs. Cutcliffe and Mrs. Hurley addressed the meeting in the interest of the emergency corps, which was of much interest to all. all will be required to live at the school instead of attending daily as has been permitted at previous courses. The present attendance is only about two-fifths of the number at the last course, and the new regulation requiring the probationers to live in the school is expected to show important results in the final examinations. Later a considerable percentage of the officers in attendance at the courses have failed in their examinations, thus causing unnecessary expense to the Government, and labor to the examiners who were required to mark the papers. It is anticipated that hereafter only persons who are sincerely anxious to fit themselves for service will be willing to submit to the restrictions of the school and regulations governing the school, and the result will be a great increase in efficiency. The probationers at the present course are wearing the special uniform with red tunic provided them, and officers in attendance have been required to remove all badges of their rank.

The next bombing course at the Old Fort will commence to-day, and will last for five days. To N.C.O.'s and 18 men from each of the 123rd, 126th, 124th and 169th Battalions will be in attendance at the course.

A course in signalling will begin at Exhibition Camp on April 17th with approximately two M.C.O.'s or men present from most of the battalions from the 14th to the 228th.

NOTES OF THE 125TH.

Some Americans Object to Canada Opening Their Correspondence.

Washington, April 11.—Several protests have been made to the post office department recently by postal authorities at offices along the Canadian border that American letters have been opened in the Dominion and passed upon by a censor. No action has been taken, and it was understood to-day to be the feeling of authorities here that mail in Canada is subject to such regulations as the Canadian Government may make.

Production and Thrift

CANADA from her abundance can help supply the Empire's needs, and this must be a comforting thought for those upon whom the heavy burden of directing the Empire's affairs has been laid. Gain or no gain the course before the farmers of Canada is as clear as it was last year—they must produce abundantly in order to meet the demands of the world's supply of which must be particularly affected in this vast struggle. Stress and strain may yet be in store for us all before this tragic conflict is over, but not one of us doubts the issue, and Canadians will do their duty in the highest sense of that great word.—HON. MARTIN BURRELL, Minister of Agriculture.

We must feed ourselves, feed our soldiers, and help feed the Allies. The need is greater in 1916 than it was in 1915. The difficulties are greater, the task is heavier, the need is more urgent, the call to patriotism is louder—therefore be thrifty and produce to the limit.

FLIT HITHER AND YON INTENT ON MURDER

In the everyday hum-drum of things one frequently hears the assertion made that some individual "is without a speck of ambition." Such assertions are made in an uncharitable spirit, with the attempt to convey the impression that the trouble is in the men all make-up of the victims.

Such an attitude is as erroneous as it is mean; for Mother Nature never made any such arrangements. Ninety-nine times out of one hundred wherein a man is seemingly without ambition, or is inefficient, it is simply a case of physical ailment.

And in this connection it is safe to say that catarrhal affection of the mucous membranes (usually first affecting the nose and throat, and eventually extending to the stomach and the whole digestive tract) is directly responsible for that languid, good-for-nothing feeling.

Particularly at this time of the year the very atmosphere is literally impregnated with the germs of catarrh, that flit hither and yon, intent on murder, and a run-down, debilitated constitution falls an easy victim.

Chas. F. Kerr, of Mary street, says: "Plantain has given me riddance of a frightful case of catarrh and stomach trouble."

Brantford's very best citizens are praising Plantain, and each day are reporting remarkable results received from this remarkable medicine.

The Plantain expert, Mr. T. S. Jackson, who is direct from the laboratory where Plantain is made, is now at Boies' drug store, explaining the merits of this famous preparation.

The Verdun struggle has passed its fiftieth day, and still there is not the slightest abatement in the violent intensity of the operations there.

The British official report with reference to the St. Eloi operations is that the crater which remained in the hands of the Hunns has been retaken.

The news from Mesopotamia is not satisfactory in tone, and the relief of the besieged troops at Kut-el-Amara still looks quite like a long job ahead.

Tariff Reform in Great Britain.

One of the very many and far-reaching results of the present war is to be found in the heart-searching which is now going on in the Old Land with reference to tariff reform.

The lesson already learned from existing hostilities is that Cobdenism is more than likely to be discarded. An Imperial federation of trade interests with preferential treatment within the Empire, and very likely with the other Allies as against Germany, now looms up as something more than a probability when the fighting has ceased and so many readjustments are sure to ensue.

PRESENTATION TO SOLDIER.

A pleasing event took place after the evening service of the Wesley Methodist Church, when the choir presented the popular member, Driver A. McEnnet, 54th Battery with a fountain pen. The choir regrettably very much losing him, but were proud of his noble response to his country's call.

MUSICAL EVENING.

On Monday night the young people of the Park Baptist church spent a busy and happy time with Red Cross work. During the evening a musical programme was given by the young men in which solos by Mr. B. Buck, Mr. Cecil Disher and Mr. Davis, were greatly enjoyed. Miss Dorothy Baird assisted with instrumental selections. When the work was finished, refreshments were served by the young men, for which a hearty vote of thanks was passed by the ladies.

POLICE COURT.

The upshot of yesterday afternoon's fracas, when Fred and Harry Watson assaulted P. C. Mains, took place in the police court this morning, when the two brothers were arraigned upon a number of charges. For being intoxicated while billed, Harry Watson was fined $10 and $2.95 costs or one month in jail. The charge of assault on Ezra McRae was dismissed, but for assaulting a policeman Fred Watson was given the choice of a $25 fine or three months in jail and Harry that of $50 fine or six months in jail. Two cases of supplying liquor to Indians on the Reserve were dealt with, Chas. Davis, himself an Indian, receiving the option of three months in jail or a $100 fine and costs, while the charge against John Vince was dismissed. One drunk was fined $3. Stephen Farrell charged with conversion of a set of harness was remanded for a week.

FACTORY MEN APPOINTED.

Owing to the fact that the various factories and shops throughout the city had donated so generously to the Patriotic Fund, it has long been deemed advisable that a number of delegates be appointed from the factories to become members of the executive committee of the Brant Patriotic fund and War Relief Association. In accordance with this, representatives from all the larger factories and shops of the city, met last evening in the public library. The matter in hand was explained at considerable length and to the satisfaction of all by Messrs. J. H. Spence and H. T. Watt, both of whom are actively connected with the Patriotic Fund. Six delegates were then appointed as follows: J. H. Spence, W. T. Collyer, J. E. Wedlake, Alex. Waldron, Harry Bond, Peter Noble. The first two named were appointed chairman and secretary respectively of their group. To this committee will be given the charge of looking after the interests of the factories relative to the fund.

RECRUITING TO-NIGHT.

A recruiting meeting will be held in the K. of P. Hall this evening, under the joint auspices of the C.M.B.A. and the Catholic Foresters. The meeting, which is on behalf of the 215th Battalion, will be addressed by Col. Cockshutt and Sergt.-Major Eccles, a returned soldier, now of the 215th. Father Padden will occupy the chair.

LADY SPEAKERS

The meeting scheduled for the Brant Theatre next Sunday evening promises to be unique. Lady speakers have been arranged for, and among these will be Mrs. A. M. Huestes, President of the Toronto local council of women.

INTERESTING LECTURE.

The Y. P. C. of Zion church along with their friends enjoyed a real treat last evening when they listened to Mr. W. D. Hobson of Woodstock lecture on "The Song Birds of Ontario." The lantern slides and Mr. Hobson's interpretation of the songs of the birds added to the interest. He also made comparisons between bird life and human life. Vocal solos by Mr. W. Carpenter were much appreciated. At the close Mr. E. L. Cockshutt tendered a hearty vote of thanks and Mr. B. A. Caspell seconded it, after which all joined in singing the National Anthem. Mr. Geo. Scott, chairman of the Educational Department of Zion church, occupied the chair during the evening.

ALEXANDRA Y.P.S.

The regular meeting of the Alexandra Y.P.S. was held last evening in the School Room. The meeting was in charge of Miss Doris Cooper and was well attended. Mr. Alvin McNally gave a very interesting and appealing address on the topic, "What our Denomination Expects from the Young People." A short period of discussion on the subject followed the address, after which the meeting was closed with prayer.

AT SYDENHAM STREET.

There was a large attendance at the evangelistic service in Sydenham St. church last evening. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Smythe, spoke on "Is There a Second Chance?" He discussed the question in a thoughtful and intelligent way, stating there was none. If there was those who rejected salvation in this world, would not be all likely to accept it given another chance, under similar conditions. Besides, he contended, heaven began on earth, and those who did not make preparation here for the place beyond certainly would be much out of place there. The services continue all this week.

WILL CONSIDER THE PETITION

Manufacturers Committee to Meet on the Agitation Against Preserving Co.

A permit having been issued to the Waddell Preserving Co. Ltd. to erect their factory building, the question arises as to how far they can proceed with it, seeing a petition against having such a factory, is in the hands of the Manufacturers' committee of the City Council. This committee, Ald. Mellen the chairman, states, will meet this week if possible, and will try to report to the Council on Monday night, what action it recommends regarding the petition, also regarding the company's application for a ten-year's fixed assessment.

In some quarters, the opinion is expressed that the council cannot prohibit the building of a factory, nor stop the manufacture of any particular line of wares unless the actual manufacturing results in the institution becomes what is known in law, as a nuisance. Then the courts by injunction, can prohibit any further manufacturing until the nuisance is abated.

FIREMAN RESIGNS

Fireman Ed. Montgomery, who joined the central fire department some two months ago, has tendered his resignation to Chief Lewis.

JUVENILE COURT

An administration of the juvenile court was held this morning before his Honor Judge Hardy.

ST. ANDREW'S GUILD.

A very interesting meeting of the Guild was held last evening. The topic was "Our Deaconess Work" and a very instructive paper was given by Miss E. Hamilton, showing the self-sacrificing lives of the Deaconesses. Rev. J. W. Gordon, also spoke a few words on the same topic. The Gazette was read by Mr. A. Sedgewick. Arrangements were completed for the visit of the Guild to Paris next Monday evening, to meet with the Paris Y. P. C. in a social way.

C.M.R. GET FIVE RECRUITS

Fine Success Result of First Day's Work for Mounted Men.

Success is greeting the efforts of the Canadian Mounted Rifles to obtain recruits. Since the opening of the office here yesterday, no less than 8 applications for enlistment have been received by Capt. Secord. Of this number three applicants failed to pass the medical test, but five men signed up. One of them is a son of Mr. Alex. Brandon, of the Brandon Shoe Co. The new men are: James Lamont Brandon, 17 Dufferin Avenue. E. R. J. Cusden, 216 Chatham St. C. O. Dingman, 187 George St. John Becker, Simcoe, Ont. William Barber, Galt, Ont.

It is the intention of the officers in charge of the work to send mounted men through the outlying parts of the county to seek recruits. As it is cavalrymen who are desired, men who are accustomed to horses, it is believed that these will be found more easily in the county districts than in the city.

AN EVENT CERTAINLY WORTH WHILE

IMMENSE SALE OF HOUSEHOLD NECESSITIES!

YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO MISS THIS

Here It Is --- "The Great Event" --- Commences Wednesday Morning

THE REASON WHY

We have enormous stocks in reserve and know that at the prices these are selling at, they are cheap, really GRAND VALUES.

We could, of course go through the entire stock and mark it up 20 to 25 per cent., and still be selling you as cheap as the average merchant, but that is not the policy of this store. We have decided on this Great Sale in order to convince you that we are here to serve you with goods at lower prices than they can be bought elsewhere.

It is impossible to deny the fact that materials are advancing to a prohibitive price, and considering these prices and their values, you will see by comparing with other stores they are GREAT BARGAINS.

This is one time when a Bargain is a Bargain, because everything offered on this page is of the staple line and absolutely necessary in every household.

A chance to replenish your linen chest and make a dollar do the work of two!

Rain Prevents the Game With Dodgers
Jersey City, April 11.—Neal Ball persists in holding out. President McCaffery sent for him yesterday and he came down from his home in Bridgeport, Conn., for a conference. Last night he left for his home without signing a Toronto contract and with the avowed intention of remaining out of the game. The Bridgeport club is holding the managerial job open for him.
JOIN THE LEAFS OR QUIT
Ball will not be released by Toronto. He has the choice of joining the Leafs or spending the season in idleness, not a bright prospect for a frugal player like the veteran infielder. No solution of the pitching and third base problem is in sight to-day. Since the arrival here of President McCaffery he and Arthur Irwin and Manager Birmingham have been working the telegraph wires in all directions. Their efforts may or may not bear fruit in the course of a day or two.
REDS WILL NOT GET JOHNSON
Los Angeles, April 11.—George (Chief) Johnson, who was claimed as the property of the Cincinnati club by McCaffery and Arthur Irwin and Manager Birmingham, President of the Reds, will remain a member of the Vernon pitching staff, it was announced to-day, the question of ownership having been settled.

Owen Sound Stages Final Hockey Game
Owen Sound, April 11.—What will possibly be the last hockey match of the 1916 season was played here last night between the Berlin Union Jacks and the Owen Sound Greys. The weather had been fairly cold for some days back and the ice had been preserved and kept in fair condition, but the warm weather yesterday made it very soft, and real fast hockey was impossible.
However the game was a fair exhibition of hockey, and the spirit of clean sport prevailed with the players and as a result only three penalties were registered, but some of the spectators got rough and Masters of the Berlin team was severely hurt. The Greys had the better of the play throughout the entire game, and took five goals to their opponents two. The first period was very evenly matched, and no goals were registered. In the second the Greys got two goals in the Jacks one. In the third the Greys added three more to Berlin's one.
Green starred for the locals, and Masters and Brown for the visitors. The work of Childs and Young in the goals was the feature of the game, and both men saved the score from being much larger than it was. The game was a patriotic one, and the proceeds devoted to the Grey Conv. Recruiting League.

Speaker Leaves to Join Cleveland
Boston, April 11.—Tris Speaker, sensational center fielder of the champion Red Sox, left Boston at 11:15 last night for Cleveland, his career with the Red Sox ended.
"I am satisfied, but sorry," said Speaker, after a conference with President Lannin of the Red Sox yesterday. Both emerged from the conference room smiling, and apparently both very well pleased. Speaker denied that he had said he wanted a share of the $30,000 which the Cleveland club is to pay for him. He said he did not ask for a dollar of this money.
It was reported from Cleveland that Speaker wanted a two-years' contract at $12,500 a year, and $5,000 of the purchase price.
Sporting Gossip.
Universal sympathy was expressed on all sides yesterday when it became known that Alister M. MacKenzie, one of the greatest paddlers that ever sat in a canoe, had been killed in action. "Mac" while a member of the Toronto Canoe Club cleaned up the Dominion Day regatta single blade championship on his first attempt at racing, and then with Elliott for a partner, won five titles in the Canadian championship a number of years. He also won the Bailey Life Member-ship of the Toronto Canoe Club, in addition to many other sundry prizes at different regattas. In other branches of athletics he was just as proficient, and while attending S. P. S. at Varsity held the Intercollegiate wrestling. He had an exceedingly powerful physique, and on account of his unassuming manner was popular wherever he competed.
Memories of such great athletes as Alister MacKenzie, Geo. Richardson, Ross Binkley, Jeff Taylor, Allan Davison and others make Canadians feel like answering the Olympic president's message of no games until after the war with the declaration that

Not a New Belgium After the War, But the Old One Restored
Premier Asquith Replies to the German Chancellor's Address—Poland, He Says, Knows Well the "Free Evolution" Which Comes Under German Rule.
London, April 11.—On the occasion of a Government reception to visiting French senators and deputies at Lancaster House last night Premier Asquith took the opportunity to reply to the speech recently delivered by the Reichs-Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg. Those present included Earl Kitchener, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Sir Edward Grey, Austen Lewis Harcourt, Viscount Bryce, J. Balfour and Lord Robert Cecil.
The Premier, in proposing the toast, "Our Guests be greeted to von Bethmann-Hollweg's claim to readiness on the part of Germany to negotiate peace, and said: "The German Chancellor wants us to assume the attitude of a defeated to a victorious adversary, but we are not defeated; we are not going to be defeated. Reiterating that the allies were one prepared for peace on the terms of his declaration of November, 1914, Mr. Asquith proceeded:
"The Chancellor first misquotes my language, then proceeds to distort its obvious meaning and intention. Great Britain and France entered the war not to strangle Germany or wipe her off the map of Europe; not to destroy her or mutilate her national life; certainly not to interfere with, to use the Chancellor's language, 'the free exercise of her peaceful endeavors.'
THE ALLIES' INTENTION.
"As a result of the war we intend to establish the principle that international problems must be handled by free negotiation on equal terms between free peoples, and that settlement shall no longer be hampered or swayed by the overmastering dictation of a Government controlled by a military caste. That is what I mean by the destruction of the military domination of Prussia—nothing more, but nothing less."
Alluding to the fate of Serbia and Montenegro, following a similar fate suffered by Belgium, the Premier said:
"We are in this struggle the champions not only of treaty rights, but of the independent status and freedom of development of weaker countries. In the circumstances, cynicism can hardly go further than in the Chan-

RUSSIAN SOLDIER SHOWS STRATEGY AND CUNNING BEYOND ALL OTHERS
The Wise Instinct of a Horse Saved the Muscovites From Falling Into an Ambush During a Night Attack.
Pinsk, Russia, April 10.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Though the average German soldier has the highest respect for the fighting qualities of his English and French opponents, it is the Russian, according to officers stationed in the East, who employs strategy and cunning to an unexampled degree. There are almost as many stories of Russian cleverness going the round as there are officers who have met with it.
In the great German drive eastward, according to Lieutenant Von D—, the Germans and Russians finally took up their positions respectively on the West and East banks of a river. The Russians were not taking their defeats with equanimity, and on every possible occasion were disposed to develop counter offensive movements.
Through underground channels the Germans learned that the Russians intended, at night, to recross the bridge which, undestroyed, spanned the river, and to attempt to surprise their rivals. The Germans in consequence very carefully and quietly destroyed one small section of the bridge nearest them, leaving a slight gap, and lay in wait for the Russians. The night was fairly dark, but not so dark but that the Germans could see as the Russians suddenly turned a big, unharmed horse loose at their end of the bridge, and with a few whip lashes started him at a gentle canter toward the German lines. Puzzled, German firemen, lying in wait with their rifles as the animal advanced steadily toward them. In a moment or two the horse

In the great German drive eastward, according to Lieutenant Von D—, the Germans and Russians finally took up their positions respectively on the West and East banks of a river. The Russians were not taking their defeats with equanimity, and on every possible occasion were disposed to develop counter offensive movements.
Through underground channels the Germans learned that the Russians intended, at night, to recross the bridge which, undestroyed, spanned the river, and to attempt to surprise their rivals. The Germans in consequence very carefully and quietly destroyed one small section of the bridge nearest them, leaving a slight gap, and lay in wait for the Russians. The night was fairly dark, but not so dark but that the Germans could see as the Russians suddenly turned a big, unharmed horse loose at their end of the bridge, and with a few whip lashes started him at a gentle canter toward the German lines. Puzzled, German firemen, lying in wait with their rifles as the animal advanced steadily toward them. In a moment or two the horse

CHAPTER XVIII

"Remarkable Escape from Death. An accident of a startling character occurred near the village of B... in France.

"An Englishman, apparently about thirty, fell from the train about half a mile from the station. The doctor who examined him pronounced him to be under the influence of some drug, of which a phial was found in his pocket. It is supposed that during the sleep induced by the drug he was thrown forward by the motion of the train and fell against the door, which must not have been properly closed, and that the weight of his body pushed it open, and in this way the accident occurred.

"By an almost miraculous chance he fell down a grassy embankment into a pool in a marshy bit of ground and was not killed. He struck his head, however, with some violence, and when taken up was unconscious, and now lies in a critical condition in a farm house near the scene of the accident. Two of his companions travelling in a different carriage happened to be looking out of the window and perceived something falling from the train, and having observed at the previous station that this gentleman was in the carriage, they gave the alarm and organized a search party to go back along the line, with the result that they found him in the position described, with his head fortunately above the water.

"Another circumstance which conduced to his lucky escape from instant death was that the train at this point slowed down in order to allow the up train to pass at a point nearer the station.

"The unfortunate gentleman had a bag with him containing a change of linen and a good supply of money in English sovereigns and also in French currency, but no letters or papers. One of his fellow countrymen, Mr. Macdonald of Edinburgh, volunteered to remain with him until his friends turned up. He still remains unconscious.

"Then followed a minute description of Sir Everard's apparel and personal appearance.

Lisabel Beresford read the newspaper report as she sat at breakfast, waiting for Miss Carden one morning in the little Welsh inn in which she and Lucy had retired. Sir Everard's forebodings had come true. He had an enemy who was determined he should never find out the cause of Lucy's sudden disappearance. Who could it be?

In her mind Lisabel went over all the inmates of Wayland Manor, rejecting each in turn.

"The only one she could not answer for was that queer foreign maid of Elaines, but she never left her mistress, and, besides, what possible motive could she have for it?"

The same cold chill she had felt before made her shiver. Lucy must not see the paper. She might recognize the description, and in her nervous state any shock would be most injurious. Lisabel, knowing the facts, did not see how unlikely even a minute verbal description would be to be recognized. She folded the paper up and put it away securely.

"They had been together for more than a week, and never once had Lucy referred to Wayland Manor, or to Elaine, or to anything connected with her old home. She had spoken freely of her life at school, of Miss Brighton, but had given no reason for her sudden flight, and she never referred to her terrible experiences on arriving in London.

"They had a snug little cart with a sturdy mountain pony, and, as the weather was delightfully mild and sunny for the time of year, they spent hours of the day in driving about among the lovely scenery that surrounded the village. They often took a substantial lunch with them, and only returned in time to dress for a high tea, after which they drew their chairs round the cheerful fire and read the papers or looked over the magazines and reviews, of which Lord Britton had ordered a plentiful supply to be sent from London. A few letters reached Lisabel through her lawyer, but their connection with the outer world was small.

Lucy came down just then. Already the rest and the bracing mountain air had begun to tell on her. She was still pale and delicate-looking, but her lips were no longer white and the sadness had left her eyes.

"Lisabel," she said, when breakfast was over and they stood together at the window—"Lisabel, do you ever hear anything about Sir Everard Deunham?"

Lisabel looked at her startled. Why had Lucy chosen this time to speak of him?

"Yes," she said. "It is not so very long since I saw him."

"Where?" asked Lucy. Her friend noticed that her hands were trembling.

"At Wayland Manor, at a small house-party there."

"What was he doing at Wayland Manor?" Her voice was scarcely under control.

"Doing?" said Lisabel slowly.

"Dearest Lucy, what is he ever doing but trying to clear up this terrible mystery that separates you?"

"I told him he must not!" said Lucy in an agitated voice.

"Tell him to give it up. There is no explanation possible. He will be sorry if he goes on. Why is he trying to find out? And why does he think that to go to Wayland Manor will help him?"

"He is looking for some clue. He thinks if he had hold of even the slightest he could follow it up."

"Has he got one?"

Lisabel hesitated. With Sir Everard lying in his present precarious state it would be most unwise to tell Lucy anything about him.

"He has been looking up all the old servants," she said at length, "and questioning them, but he discovered nothing of any consequence."

Lucy looked relieved.

"Oh, the servants!" she said. "But why did he go back to Wayland Manor?"

"I suppose he thought he might hear something that would guide him."

"Did he?"

"I think not."

"Where is he now?"

"Heard he had gone abroad."

"Do you know his object?"

"I know no particulars, and anything I do know I am under a promise not to mention. But I can tell you this much—that there seems to me to be no object for his journey which can in any way be connected with you."

Lucy looked uneasy.

"Of course, if you have promised, I will not ask you anything more," she said; "but if you could have told me I might have been able to find the link."

"I really do not think you could," said Lisabel. "I have gone over it many times in my mind, and it seems to me quite impossible it should have anything to do with you. As I said, I know none of his reasons or why he thinks it necessary to take this journey; still, what I do know gives me that impression."

"I wish he would give it up. I cannot be easy in my mind until I know he has closed that page in his life. It makes me miserably anxious to think of what mischief he may do by some unconsidered action."

"Lucy, it is not like you to give way to unfounded fears."

"They are not unfounded. I know, and therefore I fear."

"Perhaps you are not a good judge. Your judgment may have been affected by the strangeness of the circumstances."

Lucy laughed a dreary little laugh.

"You do not—you cannot know what you are talking about," she said.

"I am not unwilling to leave the subject," "Is Sir Everard changed?" Does he admire Miss Verinder very much?" she asked after a pause.

"I should say not. I should say that he sees no woman, he thinks of no woman but one. And yet that woman has not the courage to speak out and give him the chance of clearing up the mystery which darkens two lives. Lucy, won't you break through your silence, and if you will not tell him, at least tell me, and I will advise you as I would wish to be advised if I were in your place? Wait a minute before you decide and remember that neither he nor I could believe any ill of you, even if we saw you do it."

"Oh, I have done no harm!" said Lucy impatiently. "But, Lisabel, do you think I should have acted as I did if such an easy way out of the difficulty as you suggest had been possible?"

Miss Beresford sighed and changed the subject.

"By the way," she said, "I came across a bundle of old photographs this morning. They were in my bag, and must have been lying there a long while. There is one of you among them. You are greatly changed."

"I suppose so. It is a good while since I had my photograph taken."

"This is one taken on the terrace in Wayland Manor, with a dog beside you."

A spasm of strong emotion crossed Lucy's face.

"Poor Bruno!" she said.

"There was another photograph taken of you with Elaine," said Lisabel, understanding the pain it must be to Lucy to have recalled to her memory any actor in that night's tragedy.

"Yes," said Lucy. "I think I have a copy among my things."

"I should like to see it, of all things."

"I can get it for you, if you like. And I will bring down mine and compare them."

In a few minutes Lucy returned with the photograph, which she handed to Lisabel. A strange thrill passed through the latter as she took it in her hand. It seemed to her as if she were on the verge of a discovery of the nature of which she was totally ignorant. She looked at the picture with intense curiosity and interest.

Lucy was sitting on the grass, a childish little figure, her lips parted in a roguish smile, her big eyes luminous with laughter. Standing beside her was Elaine, slight and small, looking down on her companion with an expression Lisabel could not read. The artist had not succeeded in catching Elaine at an advantageous moment. She looked years older than she was, and whether it was the silvery fairness of her hair which did not show in the photograph, or that her eyes came out rather colorless, or both, she could not tell, but the picture produced a disagreeable.

"It is not a bit like Elaine," she said; "and yet it is like some one else. Of course you are right, but I don't care to keep it. Elaine said he had all the copies and negatives destroyed."

Lucy started.

"Elaine said that? My uncle thought it a good one of me."

"Anybody would," said Lisabel. "You look a perfect little witch, but I detest her! No one who saw this would think she was one of the most beautiful women in England. She reminds me of some one. I can't exactly tell of whom. Do you know who it is?"

Lucy looked at it for a moment, then pushed it away with a shudder.

"Tear it up or burn it. She went towards the fire with it in her hand."

"Oh, please give it to me!" cried Lisabel. "We will exchange—and she pushed the photograph she had brought towards Lucy. "It is lovely of you, and I can cut off Elaine's figure, and then have yours enlarged. I should like it so much I can have it," said Lucy. "and I should like to have a picture of Bruno. I was very fond of him. By-the-by, is he still at Wayland Manor?"

Lisabel checked an exclamation, and then said quietly—"I understood he was destroyed by Mr. Verinder's Elaines, because he bit Elaine. She has the mark of his teeth on her arm."

Lucy's eyes opened wide and then clouded with a look of horror.

"I forgot—poor Bruno!"—and her voice died in a murmur. Then, rousing herself, she went on. "Forget all we have been talking about, Lisabel. Believe me, to forget is the only way. I will go and put on my things now."

FOUR SERMONS ON THE SUBJECT OF IMMORTALITY

The First One Dealt With the War and Immortality.

Rev. Mr. Brown, pastor of the First Baptist Church on Sunday commenced the first of a series of four sermons on "Immortality." The subject of his initial discourse was "The War and Immortality," and he chose for his text John 14:2: "I go to prepare a place for you."

"The attention of all thinking men has been called by this great war to the truth of immortality as never before. This subject has been forced upon us by the fact that thousands of our kindred have fallen in battle. I am thinking specially of those who have lost their loved ones, of that large company who wait in fear every day of evil tidings from the front and when we think of our friends who are standing hourly in the valley of the shadow of death."

The war has served to emphasize many things, and among these are (1) The sacredness of international oaths. (2) The rights of weaker states. (3) The superlative worth of freedom. (4) The duty of the strong toward the weak. (5) The supremacy of the spiritual ideals of life. (6) The hope of immortality. The passing, of so many men has served to emphasize this. What we are in the end of all these thousands who nobly fighting have nobly died? Is the six feet of earth to which their bodies are consigned all there is to it, or is there a life beyond for them and hope of immortality for us?

A noble army men and boys, the matron and the maid, Before the Saviour's throne rejoice. In robes of light arrayed. They climbed the steep ascent to heaven. Through struggle, toil and pain, O God may grace to us be given. To follow in their train!

In a time like this no one can afford to be indifferent to the truth of immortality. The life to come is no unmeaning term. We pause often to think of our loved ones in battle, to pray for their safety, and if they have fallen, our thoughts go wandering after them into eternity. There are some men who claim that the truth of immortality has no interest for them, but you can rest assured these are not the men who have given their sons to battle, the men who have passed through a deep and heavy grief.

Who never ate his bread in sorrow, Who never spent the midnight hours, Weeping and watching for the morrow. He knows ye not ye heavenly powers."

The question of immortality is not a mere theological question, one which men might draw fine and often meaningless distinctions. No, it is a great human question that is best studied face to face with life when men are sorrow, suffer, die and face eternity. The sweetest word I ever heard spoken on immortality was spoken by a Roman Catholic nurse to a father who had just watched the expiring breath leave the body of his only son. As she pushed his golden hair back on his forehead, she said: "Don't cry, he will be going for a long time now. What sweeter word could she have said? That was the comfort of the truth of immortality coming to a broken-hearted father in an hour when all other truth seemed to mean quite so much to him.

As long as men keep on dying so long will men keep asking the question, "If a man die shall he live again?" You can no more let the question of immortality alone than you can let the questions of life and death alone. Every funeral bell, every funeral procession, every wreath upon the door, every death notice in the daily paper, every casualty list on the bulletin board will call after you, "If a man die shall he live again?"

"O hills of God that shine afar, We catch the breath of thy pure air, We see through melting clouds thy star, Our hearts grow warm as on we fare."

I believe in heaven because it is one of the universal convictions of the race. I believe in heaven because all men believe in some kind of a heaven after death, where the good are rewarded for the deeds done in this life. These universal convictions of the race regarding God, sin, atonement, rewards and punishments beyond are true. That is the way God made man with these innate convictions regarding these great eternal duties. We cannot believe for one moment that God would deceive, mock or play false with any of His creatures. As surely as he has made the eye for light, the ear for sound, the throat for song, the fin of the fish for water, the wing of the bird for flight, so surely has God made man for Himself, both here and hereafter, and because man has a forever, He gives him here intimations, foreshadowings and foregleams of immortality. In the Alps we read of tales of crystal clear and air so pure that tourists can see reflected in the liquid depths of a mountain tarn objects beyond the reach of the eye, and so it is with the truth of immortality. The argument for immortality is always changing because life is ever changing. We live in a changing world. The argument Socrates gave to the men of his day was satisfactory for them, although it would not satisfy a 20th century man. Immortality is not something that can be mathematically demonstrated. It is a matter of faith, of inner heart experience. Paul could say: "I know if the earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God," and no amount of argument could lead him to give up this conviction. Victor Hugo said: "I feel in myself the future life, I am arising, I know, toward the sky." Tennyson, after his long struggle with doubt, after the passing of Arthur Hallam, came to the point where he was willing to believe where he could not prove, and so he writes: "I trust he lives in Thee, And there I find him, Worthier to be loved."

That was a matter of faith and a venture we all must make if we would find comfort in the truth of immortality. Because Mrs. Kingley believed she would not prove she had written on the tablet over her husband's grave these significant words: "We have loved."

"We love."

"We shall love."

"I believe in heaven because the Bible declares the very truth that nature and history foreshadow. Heaven is one of the great themes of the Bible. The Bible takes these universal convictions of the race such as the existence of God, the reality of sin, the coming judgment, immortality and clarifies them. So we read Christ brought immortality to light. Men had believed in it before, but he set it forth in new and blessed relationships. We can judge the importance of the future life not only by the number of passages in the Bible in which it appears, but also by the fact that it is implied all the way through the book for without the truth as a working hypothesis much of the Bible would have no meaning whatever. Jesus plainly declares in the text that heaven is a place as well as a state and with many other passages might the argument from the Bible be enforced.

III. Character requires it. In thinking of heaven I feel that all too often we have over-emphasized the locality of heaven, the fact that heaven is a place to be entered at death, to the neglect of that other larger fact that heaven is a state to be entered into here and now and to be perpetuated and enlarged after death. Heaven is primarily a state and afterwards a place. Before man could enjoy heaven he must conform to the laws of the heavenly life. Heaven would mean nothing to a man who does not live in the will of God. He would not be at home there.

Those are striking words Byron puts into the lips of the Prisoner of Chillon:

Very chains and I grew friends, So much a long communion tends, To make us what we are."

He was at home in chains, felt a certain friendship for the man would have been at a loss without them. Character alone fits us for Heaven. Conformity to the will of God here is the best preparation for Heaven after death. We must choose heaven here or we will never reach it. We must walk in that direction here and now, we will never get to heaven. Heaven must come to us before we can enter heaven, and because our fathers and mothers lived in a blessed anticipation of heaven and so were fitted for it, longed for it and departing, had the smile of heaven on their faces. We can only think of that life as having entered into that life for which they longed and for which they had made preparation for so many years.

When young Robert Hall stood by the grave of his sainted father, he was led from a life of questioning and doubt to one of faith and surrender to Christ by the reflection, that knowing his father as he did, he knew that that could not be the end of such a noble life.

CONSCIENCE PROCLAIMS IT.

The injustices and the incompleteness of this life requires heaven, else God is not just. The parable of Lazarus and Dives emphasizes this very truth.

"Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivest the good things, and likewise Lazarus' evil things, and now he is comforted and thou art tormented."

No one can look out upon this life with its inequalities, its injustices, its wrongs that are never inflicted here without feeling the need of an immortal life, where these shall be balanced out and justice meted out. Right on the scaffold and wrong on the throne, will be reversed in the life to come. The vindication of God's wisdom and love requires immortality. We can not think of Pilate and Christ, of Judas and John, of Nero and Paul, as occupying common ground in the future life. Thus, conscience proclaims the necessity of a heaven for the virtuous, for the righteous and John in revelation proclaimed the fulfillment of this when he wrote: "I saw underneath the altars, those who were beheaded for the witness of Christ."

The incompleteness of life too, argues a heaven beyond.

The facts of life confirm the hope. That in a world of larger scope, What here is faithfully begun, Will be completed, not undone.

There we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him face to face. This is the blessed hope of the Christian and with this hope before us, we are prepared to win a good warfare on the side of the right against the wrong, and so shall we make the most of life here and insure a place among the blessed beyond. Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the Crown of Life."

These battalions crossed the Atlantic on the C. P. R. liner Empress of Britain, which sailed from Halifax on Thursday afternoon, March 30, at 4 o'clock.
