MINARD'S LINIMENT LUMBER-MAN'S FRIEND.

One in a Thousand, BUT TRUE TO THE LAST

CHAPTER IX.
IN THE SEVENTH HEAVEN.
"Oh, Theo, Theo!" he cries, "what a bewitching little mortal you are!" I look at him in blank amazement. "Why, whatever put that into your head?"

"What? That you are such an enchanting little woman? Why, you did, of course," he says, gayly. "No—to call me 'Theo'?" "Did I, really? Slip of the tongue, my darling, that was all." "Well, but you don't know Theo; you never saw her," I argue.

I hardly notice that he does not answer me, for he stops my mouth with kisses, and we go wandering off into that "happy hunting ground" which some people term "the seventh heaven." Somehow, Adrian and I do not want to talk; we are quite happy in each other's presence. He tells me, that so long as I am within sight and within reach, he does not want or wish for anything in the whole world. I do not answer this at all. I only ruffle my head against his shoulder, and express my satisfaction in a ridiculous murmur, which would sound utterly idiotic to any but the man who is in love with me.

Our engagement is not to be a long one, and the wedding is fixed to take place on St. Valentine's Day. I have hard work to get everything ready for the touseau of Sir Adrian Charteris' bride must of necessity be handsome. As soon as the New Year is turned, I go back to Thorn-ganby Manor, and Loys goes with me, for Teddy takes his long leave late, and the party is quite a large one. Theo cannot join us, for toward the end of January comes a daughter to the house of Lasselles, so Theo is incapacitated from travelling. She is not very strong—none of the Luttrells are—and does not recover sufficiently soon to come to the wedding. I have made a vigorous stand against having any display whatever. One of the girls from Rest comes over to act as bridesmaid, and I tell Sir Adrian to give her something worth having to commemorate the event.

"You know, dear," I say, wisely, "when there are eight or ten young women to give to, it stands to sense they can't expect anything of value; but, when one does all the business, and holds both fan and gloves and bouquet, why, she deserves something better."

So Adrian drives me into the nearest town, and we choose a handsome pearl-and-diamond ring, such as makes Constance almost wild with delight. I carry out my plan of a plain wedding to such an extent that I am married in my travelling dress. We have no fuss whatever—no trembling, as if we were going to be led to execution. I get up and come down to breakfast as if nothing particular was going to happen. Then we go quietly out to church, and I am given to the man who loves me and whom I love. Why should it be otherwise? I lay my hand in his without a single misgiving.

When it is over, the old rector, who has known me from a baby, and who christened me, claims the first kiss, and calls me by my title. I sign my maiden name for the last time—and never did any girl do so with less regret or more blissful hope in the future. I see myself, "in the long vista of years to come," always as Adrian's happy wife—now in foreign lands, quite alone with him, gazing on wild, lovely views; then living a peaceful, social life in our own country; or, again, I picture myself grown older and the mother of all children—but the pictures are all more or less alike, and my husband is the principal figure in each. "My husband"—how strange it sounds! I look at his sisters' husbands, for they are both here—I see Lasselles, viscount though he be, with the physique of a ciller and the manners of a plowboy; I see Teddy Vincent, nice, good-natured, gentlemanly boy, so is, but with just brains enough to carry him through the world—and then I compare them with the man I have just taken till death shall part us. I thank Heaven for the man who has been given to me—a man whose outward appearance is a fitting index of his mind.

We go back to the Manor, and have a merry breakfast with only one speech from the old rector, who hopes we shall be very happy and prosperous; to which Adrian replies in a very few words; and then, the marriage being announced, we go away to begin a glorious life together. We have two whole months before us, and we decide that we will spend them in our native land.

"What is the use of wasting time among stupid foreigners," says Adrian, "who will disgust and bore us beyond everything? Suppose we go for a week to some quiet seaside place, just till we get tired of each other, you know"—with a laugh—and then we can go up to town, and see everything there is to be seen. For we shan't get more than a week's leave for ever so long."

I agree to this, because, so long as I am with him, I am perfectly indifferent to the place I am in; so it comes to pass that our journey ends at Saltburn, and we find ourselves the sole occupants of the huge hotel facing the sea.

"Well, this is a hole, and no mistake!" says Adrian, when he goes to the window and surveys the dull-looking (splanade, and the cold, gray sea beyond.

"Isn't it?" I remark. "Well, go out and see what the town is like when we've had some tea."

My husband puts his arm round my waist and draws me close to him. "How soon do you intend to get tired of me here?" he says, lovingly. "Can't say. Time will show," I answer. "It's better than the Channel and Paris." When we were children, we all used to talk how, when we got married, we would go to Paris—and so the others did. I vowed I wouldn't. Oh, here is tea! You will have a cup?"

He tells me that he will, and, when we have had it, we sally forth into the bleak gloaming together. Alas for my idea of a town! It consists of one street, wherein are some shops just ordinary seaside shops. However, to my comfort, there is a confectioner's of more than ordinary licentiate, and we go in and purchase largely.

"I declare, they never gave us any of the cake!" laughs Sir Adrian, when the young woman's back is turned. "Awful shame to do us out of our own bridecake! I vote we buy one for ourselves?"

"Very well," I agree; "but get a good one." "Have you any—any wedding cakes?" he says, stammering a little, in spite of himself.

"Certainly, sir," answers she, looking at us curiously. "Well, we want one—a good one, but not too big."

I feel I am abominably red, and I wish Adrian had not been so silly. Finally, he buys one that I am certain we shall never eat all of ourselves, and we get out into the fresh air, I, for one, being thankful to cool my burning face.

"I wasn't going to be done out of my cake," he says, triumphantly. "I suppose Loys is stuffing that child of hers with it, and chuckling to think she has outwitted us."

"Goodness, no, you stupid!" I answer; "they don't give cake to babies of that age!" "Oh, don't they? Well, how should I know?"

We manage to remain a week at Saltburn, and I write to Loys that he are not in the least tired of each other, and could stay there all the time we have leave, but we think it will be so many months before we shall be able to get to town again.

Our existence is simplicity itself; each day is exactly like its predecessor. We do not go upon the sands such—they are not attractive—nor upon the pier at all; but we take tickets for the valley—and we certainly get our money's worth for our money. Morning, noon and night we are there; even after dinner I put on my sealskin, and we go for an hour or more, watching the stars come out, and listening to the waves breaking on the rocks and sands. Fortunately, we have neither snow nor rain, but it is bitterly cold, and I am sure, were we anything but a newly married couple, we should both be dead of rheumatism, or some lung complaint. As it is, we leave Saltburn unscathed, and find ourselves in London, very tired, but quite ready for any enjoyment that may come in our way.

They are very happy, those days; we do not meet with many people that we know, and the few that we do meet we do not cultivate. We are quite happy by ourselves. We spend our mornings in picture galleries chiefly, where we do not look at the pictures, but lie back on the velvet seats and talk nonsense. In the evenings we go to the theatres, or concerts, and between whiles we do a little shopping—and I am afraid we must plead guilty to very often going down Bond Street and looking into the brilliantly lighted windows. One night I insist upon dragging Adrian down the Lowther Arcade, and fill his pockets and hands with sixpenny articles, which, as he grumbles, I shall never use nor look at again.

"Didn't I ask you yesterday to have a string of real ones," he says, in an aggrieved voice, when I expend a shilling over a string of large, blue beads, "and didn't you tell me you didn't like them?"

"Yes, dear."

"Then what do you want to buy such rubbish for?"

"Well, because they are so pretty."

"I'll tell you what it is," he says, when we emerge into the Strand again. "I shall steal your purse to-morrow before we come out," and then we both laugh as if something very amusing or witty has been said. The sort of incognito under which was never able to obtain lasting benefit until Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was used.

Too many girls grow up with weak, anæmic bodies and exhausted nervous systems. Indoor life and too much application in school are sometimes the cause.

The blood needs enriching and the nerves need strengthening by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This food cure is doing wonders for many thousands of girls whose parents had almost despaired of their ever developing into strong, healthy women.

Mrs. J. Bagnall, 395 Woodville avenue, Toronto, writes: "My daughter suffered from nervousness since childhood, and any medicines she tried did not do any lasting good. We read in the papers about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and my daughter used it with wonderful results. This treatment has built up her system and so strengthened the nerves that she feels like another girl."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Ed-manson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

we have been keeping ourselves cannot last forever. People find us out, and, as the season begins, we are drawn into its vortex whether we will or no. I am a little disgusted myself, for I have been very happy during the past month; but Adrian says we shall be dull enough when we get to Ideminstre, so we have to submit as gracefully as we can. In the third week in March, Theo writes to me that they are coming up to town on the following day, and we shall have several people to dine with us in the evening. I write to ask her and Lasselles to join us.

During the afternoon I receive a note to tell me that they will come, and show it to Adrian, who says he hopes I shall not be nervous in giving this, my first dinner party.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Practically farmers may easily minimise the loss, due to a backward and cold season, by the judicious use of Sulphate of Ammonia as a fertilizer.

Sulphate of Ammonia contains over 20 per cent of nitrogen, as against 15 per cent in Nitrate of Soda, and is therefore more than 25 per cent better than nitrate of soda as a means of quickening and increasing the growth of crops.

The use of Sulphate of Ammonia has increased enormously of late years and it is recognized to be the most valuable fertilizer obtainable. By its judicious use the production of root crops per acre may be doubled, and the growth of leaf crops stimulated.

We invite the attention of Farmers to our special pamphlet on the best methods of using Sulphate, copies of which will be forwarded free to any address on application.

The price of Sulphate is moderate, and our terms are accommodating.

Launching Reforms.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

A young friend of mine whose besetting weakness is her uncontrollable temper, has moved into a pretty new home. A group of us called on her there and were shown the new domain by the proud possessor. "And let me tell you the best thing," she said, as we finished the inspection. "It doesn't show like the closets and the open fire place, but I think it's best of all. I made a resolution when I came here not to give way to my temper in this new place and I haven't yet, and that's four weeks ago," vigorously knocking on the wooden arm of her piazza chair. Of course we laughed, and then someone asked, "May we know the connection between temper and a new house? Is it easier to keep your temper in a brand new house? I guess I'll have to persuade my husband to buy me one if it is."

"Why, the only connection is that when you go to any new place you feel as if you were starting life all new, and so it's a good chance to leave your faults behind. We've moved three times and each time I've begun the new life with the determination to get rid of some of my horrible temper. Of course, the other moves were just little changes from one hired apartment to another, and since this is the biggest change I'm going to try to make more change in myself."

We all laughed at the lady's philosophy, but after all I thought it pretty fine.

So fine, in fact, that having recently moved myself, I am trying to make this change a peg on which to hang a reform of my habit of procrastination. I am beginning the new regime by going directly from breakfast to my work instead of dawdling about and looking for things to fritter away time upon, as I used to do; and I find it much easier to inaugurate the new habit under the stimulus of new surroundings and conditions.

Good habits are very hard to launch, and it is very difficult indeed to find the right time to launch them. Some day, we all think, the auspicious time will come to overcome our besetting weakness, but we know it is not today. And if a new regime of some sort will give us the needed impetus toward finding that "some day," let us seize every such opportunity. Nor need the new regime necessarily be the move into a new home. You have a lovely new gown. Why not make that the occasion of launching a habit of more careful grooming? You have a new desk. Is not that the opportunity to be more orderly? And why should not the new watch of which you are so proud help you to launch the habit of punctuality.

Perhaps these seem but slender pegs to hang such big reforms upon, but slenderer pegs have held greater changes.

Ruth Cameron

Fashions and Fads.

Evening cloaks are extremely rich. Moire bathing suits have become popular.

Most gowns of white have a touch of colour. The frock of tulle is having undisputed favor.

Tulle and net are having an unprecedented vogue.

Skirt draperies are fastened with square buckles of jet.

There are various models of the half-length coat shown.

Nearly all of the handsome evening dresses have court trains.

Separate blouses of net and tulle are favored above all others.

The long, loose sax gloves are extremely smart for day wear.

Large buttons of the fabric are to be most used for trimming.

Some new hats have stiffly wired bunches of roses placed at one side.

There is a suggestion of fullness below the hips of the new silhouette.

Frocks of white crepe are trimmed with bands of flowered material.

Panels and scarfs are edged with narrow pleatings of black taffeta.

Most afternoon dresses have their necks cut a little low, with no gimples.

There are a few new skirts with a pointed belt in front, like a corselet.

Fringe will be allowed wherever its effects are demanded by the design.

Very smart are the stockings of real lace or silk-embroidered with beads.

Streamers are seen on many hats, and they are very effective and becoming.

Little tailored belts are smartened with a plaid silk sash, fringed at the ends.

Larger hats are being designed, among which the all-white hat predominates.

Gowns and millinery are extensively trimmed with flights of tiny black bows.

The elaborate embroideries done with brilliant colors, continue to be smiled upon.

When choosing a sash, be sure to choose a style, which will improve the wearer's figure.

Buckles are to be popular in the same colors and effects as the braids or bindings used.

A popular trimming for the middle of the afternoon or evening gown is the chou de tulle.

Double jabots of lace adorn the backs of many gowns in place of the sash of silk or satin.

Collars are appearing in new designs, have original touches, which makes them irresistible.

Evening slippers have their heels jewel studded and buckles of unusual beauty adorn the instep.

Frocks of printed muslin have jackets of taffeta, chiffon, silk crepe, crepe de chine or moire.

Grape-Fruit.

Grape-fruit is a sour-visaged imitation of breakfast food which tastes like eating four raw lemons in rapid succession. It is a damp species of food and unless approached with great caution is liable to explode in the direction of the diner's eyeglasses.

Grape-fruit can be eaten at any time during the meal, but is usually served as a curtain raiser in order to prepare the guests for what is coming afterward. This is an excellent idea, for after a man has wrestled with the lithic form of a hide-bound grape-fruit and run down the last seed with the apex of one elbow in full view of the entire company, there will be a perceptible slowing up of his gastronomic ardor.

Before being served the grape-fruit is cut in two at the waist line and turned up so that the seeds can be detected with the naked eye. A careful count has demonstrated that there are 11,724 of these seeds in every half section of grape-fruit, all of which have to be pried out by brute force. This is a delicate process, as a man is liable to get his pick under two or three seeds which let go before he is ready and make an abrupt dive into somebody's butter pad.

Dining cars make it a habit of blasting out the seeds before serving Grape-fruit and also succeed in blasting out most of the juice. They then divide the grape-fruit off into neat, wedge-shaped partitions, which can be showered with pulverized sugar and eaten with a four-ply napkin tucked under the chin. Most people prefer their grape-fruit served in this kind of negligee, as they can finish it before the next course freezes the sideboard.

A few years ago nobody had heard of the grape-fruit, but was content to make a humble breakfast of composition pancakes and a relay of soft-boiled eggs. The crying need of the age, therefore, is a seedless grape-fruit, which can be eaten with careless grace and a mild flourish of a distended little finger.

A GREAT PIONEER.

"After spending $25,000 on his experiments, he died practically penniless." This is the classic phrase which appears in the biography of inventors whose work has redounded to the furtherance of human welfare and the preservation of human life," says the New York Post.

grouse, the inventor of the rocket life-saving apparatus, to which he sacrificed his capital, his business, and his health. He made many journeys from his Cornish home to London with the aim of inducing successive Governments to adopt his apparatus. Those were the days when a coach journey from the West Country occupied four days. He met with official discouragement, and was gathered to his fathers without seeing the fulfilment of his great ambition.

"It was in 1807 that Trengrouse first got the idea of the rocket apparatus." During a mid-winter gale a large frigate drove ashore on Looe Bay some three miles distant from Helston. Of those on board upwards of one hundred were drowned. Among those who witnessed from the shore the loss of the ship was Trengrouse. The scene made an indelible impression on his mind, and night and day he pondered upon the means whereby some assistance could be given to the shipwrecked, some communication be established between the stranded vessel and the shore. His idea lay in the direction of the vessel being equipped with apparatus by the use of which those on board could get into touch with the would-be rescuers on the land, in preference to the first efforts coming from the shore to the men on the wreck."

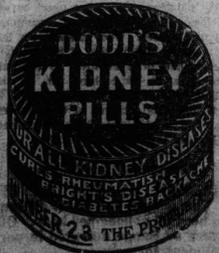

VOTING BY MACHINE.

The President of the Austrian Chamber of Deputies has decided to make a trial of the electric voting machine invented by Herr Neisser Lenx. Each member will have two electric buttons on his desk, one marked "pro" and the other "contra." On the wall opposite the President's chair an indicator is fixed, consisting of 516 glass tablets, numbered 1 to 516. These tablets are dark, but when a vote is taken each shows either a white light for "pro" or a red light for "contra."

Each member has a number corresponding to one on the board, and can therefore personally check the accuracy of his vote. An automatic apparatus counts the vote, and the totals are shown on another indicator. If names are required they are shown on the glass tablets in either red or white colors.

In case of a secret vote the glass tablet indicator is switched off, and only the counting apparatus remains active.

"In spite of every change, the English House of Commons is still something of an amateur Assembly," says the Times. "It has room for, and is disposed to listen to, men of all kinds of interests and pursuits. It is in some respects the best-informed Assembly in the world. There is probably no other body of men, elected by popular and often ignorant choice, that is so well qualified to discuss and to decide upon any conceivable subject. There are men of science in it, men of all businesses and trades in it, men of profound learning and deep culture in it."

Notes and Comments.

The Gibbs-Downey-Morris racket proceeds apace and matters are fast heading to a crisis. We would not be surprised to hear that a cabinet crisis had arisen any day. It is the writing on the wall and forebodings the coming of the end of the Morris administration. If rumour is to be believed some hot language has already been exchanged between Morris and Gibbs as to the candidacy of St. George's.

The editor of the Evening Herald is very anxious about the movements of Mr. Coaker. He tells his readers that Mr. Lloyd did not go with Coaker on his trip north, and he invites them to watch what the Evening Telegram will do about Mr. Coaker's trip north. This shows how perturbed the Morris crowd are about the Opposition tactics next election. Well, in the words of Premier Asquith, we tell them to wait and see.

The fact that Mr. Lloyd was in the words of Mr. McGrath "an important morsel to the taste of Mr. McGrath." It is perfectly true we were engaged as second-master of the Church of England Academy twenty-three years ago this summer. Mr. McGrath is less

Special to Evening Telegram. HOUSTON, Texas, July 8. Lieut. Call of the United States Aviation Corps, was killed to-day by the collapse and fall of his aeroplane.

MONTREAL, July 8. A notable figure of the Trappist Order has passed away in the death of Rev. Fr. Murphy, a former prior of the Lady of Our Lake Monastery at Oka. Before entering the Order he was a commercial traveller.

LONDON, July 8. Presiding last night at a banquet to the teams which had competed for the Empire trophy, the Duke of Connaught said the Duchess was almost well again, and was looking forward with pleasure to returning to Canada in the autumn.

HALIFAX, July 8. A telegram received here announces the stranding of the American fishing schooner "Morning Star," on the Goodwin Island Bar, during the recent storm. A wrecking steamer has been despatched to her aid and is now standing by her. It is not known whether any lives have been lost.

LONDON, July 8. The King and Queen received a real North Country welcome at Warrington and other Lancashire towns. Both King George and Queen Mary talked freely with the workers and accepted several gifts. They will be the guests of Lord and Lady Derby at Knowsley Hall near Liverpool, for a week. Last night they were entertained at a vaudeville performance there.

LONDON, July 8. Sylvia Pankhurst was found guilty of inciting people to commit disorders on June 29th, when she led a mob to Downing Street to raid the official residences of the Premier and Chancellor of the Exchequer. She was ordered to find sureties in $12,000 for her good behaviour for a year, or as an alternative to go to prison for three months. She refused to find the bonds, and elected to go to jail, declaring she would go to jail without water. The prosecuting attorney said the authorities did not desire to punish her, but merely prevent her making inflammatory speeches.

LONDON, July 8. It is stated at Belgrade that the total Serbian casualties during the week's fighting amounted to upwards of 15,000 killed and wounded. The Greeks admit that they have lost 10,000 officers and men. From the Bulgarian side there is no corresponding estimate, but it is presumed their losses were in proportion. On the other hand information which has reached London asserts that the whole story of the battles, storming, desperate resistances and so forth are much exaggerated. Nothing like a real battle has yet occurred. Between these two divergent statements it is no longer possible to judge for the moment that it is feasible to discriminate between the conflicting claims of victory put forward by the parties to the new war. The attitude of Turkey, however, is becoming more clearly defined, and it is tolerably evident she means to utilize the situation to her own advantage. The Porte has formally demanded that the territory within the Bosnia lines shall be evacuated by the Bulgarians at once, and there are rumors that an effort will be made to recover Adrianople. Not too much reliance need be placed on this latter report, for it is difficult to see how the Ottoman Army can advance over the one hundred miles which separates Chatalja from the lost fortress; but it seems certain that military preparations are being made as all officers have been ordered to rejoin the forces at Chatalja.

LONDON, July 8. An arson squad of militant suffragettes set fire to and caused the destruction of the country residence of Sir William P. Lever, founder of Fort Sunlight and Chairman of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, early this morning. The mansion is situated at Rivington, near Norwich, in Lancashire, and was not occupied by the family, but it contained valuable paintings and other precious articles, all of which were consumed by the flames. The incendiaries left a message stating that if Sir William Lever had been as loyal to the suffragettes as Lancashire was to the King, who is now paying a visit to the industrial centres of the country, the fire would not have happened. The loss is placed at $100,000.

British Premier's Tactless Wife.

Dramatic Story of Mrs. Asquith's Over-Whelming Loss of Prestige in British Society.

London.—One of the most tragic figures in British society to-day is the wife of the prime minister of England. Mrs. Asquith herself would doubtless repudiate this assertion with her characteristic remark, "Dear me, how interesting," a shrug of the shoulders, and an airy wave of the hand, but if any woman has ever failed to live up to the high destiny to which she has been called by fate, it is Emma Alice Margaret, the second wife of the Right Hon. Herbert Henry Asquith, P.C., M.P., K.C., prime minister and first lord of the treasury.

"Yet, 'Margot' Asquith, as her intimates the countess of Essex and the duchess of Rutland love to call her, started that strange game miscalled "Life" under the fairest of auspices. She was a daughter of Sir Charles Tennant, a wealthy and well-known Scottish member of parliament, a son of St. John Tennant of St. Rollax, Lanark, and quite early she became initiated into all the mysteries and disillusion of British politics. This did not prevent her becoming a prominent figure amongst "The Sows," a group of young thinkers and politicians which included Asquith, Balfour and other noted men, who preferred to talk of the mystical rather than the charms of mid-Victorian materialism and culture. It also involved her appearance as the heroine of an E. F. Benson novel "Dodo."

Her High Ambition.
About that time, however, she also made up her mind, "I will be the wife of the prime minister of England," she told her girl friends, "Liberal or Conservative?" they questioned in a whisper, with a side glance at Arthur Balfour. "I don't know," she replied quite frankly, "but this much I am certain about, he must be the premier."

Years were destined to pass before she wedded, but that thin nervous frame never faltered in its grim far-seeing, girlhood resolution. In 1891 Asquith's first wife died after 14 years' married happiness. She was Helen, the daughter of a commoner, F. Melland of Manchester. In 1894 "Margot" Tennant married Herbert Henry Asquith while he was home secretary, and she has since borne him two children, a son and a daughter. In 1908 Asquith became prime minister of England, and one of his wife's first public acts after taking up her residence at the historical premier's home at 10 Downing Street was to hold a formal reception merely to exhibit the newest gowns designed by her Paris dressmaker. Picture the outburst of pain and indignation that this thoughtless and irreverent act provoked in the minds of the staid Liberals who remembered the sweet womanly charm and high principle of Catherine Gladstone. "It's monstrous, monstrous," they cried, and even the lace manufacturers of Nottingham uttered a loud and indignant protest.

Asquith Said Nothing.
Asquith bowed his head under the storm and said nothing, but his party never forgave his wife and have never forgotten the incident. "It's a shame," she said, discussing the incident last week, "a great shame and a great mistake. I only did it to oblige the poor Frenchman. He wrote from Paris and told me that he had got a lot of new models to show me." But he replied he could not do this, they were so numerous at this time it would not pay him. "Bring them," I repeated. "I will invite a few friends to look at them. You need custom. It will help you." So he came and arranged them at the official residence merely for one afternoon.

Back Was Lame For Two Years
Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial. Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being sore. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and other work now, and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills." office as a puisne judge, and lords of appeal have next to nothing to do. Yet he is still in the prime of life and full of activity. The lord chancellorship is closed to him; Viscount Haldane is also a man in the prime of life and rich in vitality.

One Great Opening.
"There is really only one great opening for the prime minister and that is the office about to fall vacant. Will Mr. Asquith deny himself that coveted high office of Lord chief justice of England when Lord Alverstone retires? It is not at all likely that he will do anything so imprudent."

"Lord Alverstone's health has completely broken down; his absence has been keenly felt at the law courts; the work of the courts of appeal and of the King's bench division has got hopelessly into arrears. Why the delay in a long-expected decision and re-arrangement if Lord Alverstone is not simply retaining his position until the prime minister has made up his mind as to his own procedure and future?"

The salary of the lord chief justice is $40,000 a year (a permanency of course), which is $15,000 a year more than falls to the premier at his present disagreeable and precarious post. To a mind so legal and so lucid as his nothing could be more congenial than a seat on the bench; nothing could be more to his taste than the effort to get English jurisprudence simplified and expedited.

"Hence the prophet who avers that presently Mr. Asquith will have evolved into lord chief justice is on a fairly solid ground. Whether Sir Edward Grey or Mr. Lewis Harcourt will have stepped into his shoes as prime minister is an interesting speculation piquant in its way as the picture of the evolution of Henry Herbert himself."

But nobody wonders what Mrs. Asquith will say to this new arrangement. And apparently nobody cares!

To take the place of the corsage bouquet, loops of colored ribbon or velvet have been introduced.

Dolly Varden coats of flower sprigged crepon, chiffon, net and taffeta accompany linen frocks.

Some tunic over-drapes are cut forming points and tassels of silk fringe or beads finish the ends.

Recently Mr. Asquith has bought an ancient farm house type of residence in Sutton Courtenay, in rural Berkshire, and any week the news may come that he has retired from his place as premier. He admitted so much the other day to the foreign newspaper correspondents in London when they entertained him at a banquet. What will happen to him? Will he and "Margot" Asquith gladly escape to complete retirement in this obscure village that has not changed its outward aspect in any essential respect for the last 500 years, or will he merely exchange the position of prime minister for another high office in the state—that of lord chief justice, eventually making Mrs. Asquith a peeress? Why not the last alternative? A well known politician said the other day in public:

A Precarious Position.
"Mr. Asquith knows full well that his position as premier is a precarious one. He is virtually under notice. There are many signs that the present parliament is exhausted. It is really kept alive after a fashion for Ireland's sake; the Liberal whips make their steady and strenuous efforts so that home rule may get through.

"If the lords were to pass the home rule bill to-morrow, Mr. Asquith would dissolve parliament next week. Welsh disestablishment leaves him cold; he has only one Celtic affinity; he is not a man of comprehensive or diffuse affections. And of course the suffrage question is far too thorny for his liking, while cold to progressive and idealistic feminism, he dislikes his role of defender of the dragon of privilege against the onslaught of urbane womanhood.

The Herald's Logic.

Monday, we asked the Herald who wrote that attack it contained some few years since and signed "Herbert Piche". Instead of answering our question the Herald logician gets off a lot of twaddle about Mr. Herder, and Mr. Herder's son, a matter quite irrelevant to the issue. We will now let the Editor of the Herald the amount of the "Little Jap" find, that he will not tell us who wrote that article. He is not convinced as to the use of Piche's name. Perhaps we may soon give him plenty of evidence to establish that fact.

Coronation Preliminaries.

The football Tives for the Coronation Sports took place yesterday. The C. C. C. beat the Highlanders by 1 goal to a hard fight. The Cadet five were—H. Whalen, Thompson, W. Hart, J. Walsh and F. Whalen. The C. C. C. and C. L. B. will meet in the Sports to-day and a good game is looked forward to. The tug of war resulted in a victory for the Highlanders over the C. L. B. The Highlanders passed them easily at first but in the next heat there was quite a struggle. The Highlanders and Cadets meet in the sports.

Handsome Regatta Trophies.

To-day the three cups imported by the Trophies Committee of the Regatta Committee, are on exhibition in the window of Mr. Charles J. Ellis store, Water Street. The three cups are certainly the finest seen here in years. The Governor's Cup is particularly handsome, is beautifully chased and engraved and stands with its pedestal 22 inches high. The Society and Swimming Cups are also very pretty. The former measuring 18 and the latter 13 inches in height. The Cups are silver with gold lining and certainly are well worth striving for.

Want Band Concerts.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—I must say I am very much in accord with the remarks of "Frequent" in yesterday's Telegram. Anyone passing our parks in the evenings cannot help remarking that the surroundings would be much improved if a band was discoursing some music, instead of there being (as at present) an empty bandstand to look at. Come, Councillors! be up and doing and see what can be done. Hoping that our friend Tim Shannahan will express his views on the matter, I beg to remain,
Yours truly,

Special Notice.

We take pleasure in announcing the appointment of Mr. Richard C. Power as our Newfoundland Representative for the sale of one of the most attractive securities that we have marketed during the long period of forty years in which we have served the investing public.

We refer to the 7 per cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock of the Maritime Mail Company Limited, a prosperous corporation operating at St. John, N.B., with the largest output of any single mill of its kind in Canada.

This issue is unusually well secured by assets appraised at $160 for every $100 share of Preferred Stock, exclusive of the amount covering the Bonds outstanding. The earnings record of the issuing Company is alike exceptionally strong and rapidly expanding under the present efficient management. Two other desirable features are the 50 per cent. Common Stock Bonus and the alternative plans of payment, cash or instalment.

A fully descriptive circular has already been mailed to our many Newfoundland patrons. We advise these friends of ours and all other interested persons to immediately get in touch with Mr. R. C. Power, from whom additional copies of the circular and further particulars may be had. His office address is given below.

Man Arrested For Stealing $75.

At an early hour this morning Sergt. Mackay arrested an engineer of Water Street West, named O'Brien, who is charged with the larceny of seventy-five dollars, the property of one John Costello. It appears that both men were staying at the same boarding house. They were on friendly terms and had access to each other's rooms. Costello had the amount mentioned in his trunk and during his absence the money disappeared. The one who was victimized reported the matter to the police and Sergt. Mackay was not long in rounding up the accused who, on being brought to the police station, it is said, admitted his guilt. He had on his person $25.10 in notes and silver besides a small cheque. Over $50 of the total sum was missing.

The Spanish Rivals at Rossley's.

To-night will be the last chance of seeing this very funny act at Rossley's. The Spanish Rivals is without doubt, a great act, for laughing purposes, and as a burlesque on the great drama by the same title, can't be beaten. It is astounding how it has been thought out. There are some fine songs in it, and dances by Jack and Marie Rossley. The costume worn by Mrs. Rossley is very handsome and in keeping with the character she portrays. It is necessary to speak of Jack's costume, make-up and acting and in this act he shows a dance that New York itself could not produce. It's a scream.

St. Bon's Reunion.

At St. Bon's College on Monday next the annual reunion will be held, and for which active preparations are now being made by the old boys. In the morning Mass will be celebrated by Rev. Joseph Donnelly, of Bay de Verde, one of the old ex-students. The servants will be two lay students. Benediction will be imparted by His Grace Archbishop Howley. At this ceremony their Lordships, Bishop March, of Harbor Grace, and Bishop Power, of St. George's, will be present. The presiding prefect will be Sir E. P. Morris, President of St. Bon's Association, with Hon. J. Harris, Hon. M. P. Cashin, Capt. English, F. T. Doyle and a few others as substitutes. The orator of the day will be M. W. Furlong, Esq. After breakfast an illuminated address will be presented to His Grace the Archbishop, who is the senior alumnus of the College. It is exactly a half century ago since His Grace left for Rome to finish his studies for the priesthood. The address is splendidly engraved, the work of the Sisters of the Presentation Convent. It is hoped that the attendance of old students at the 1913 celebration will be the largest on record.

Fell Into Hold of Steamer.

Last midnight William Hussey, a workman on the S. S. Glenmanis, who is discharging coal at A. Harvey & Co.'s wharf, fell into the hold of the ship, a distance of about twelve feet. He was picked up in a semi-conscious condition by fellow workmen and brought to the deck. The man was badly bruised but no bones were broken. He was attended by Dr. Fraser who said that the injuries received were not serious. The injured man was then driven to his boarding house in Finn's Street.

ANNUAL OUTING.—The members of the St. Thomas's Choir held their annual outing at Williams' Hotel, Forest Pond, yesterday afternoon. The choir numbering over a hundred, accompanied by Revs. Godden and Hewitt, drove out of town by bus. Games of various kinds were indulged in and a pleasant and enjoyable time was spent. The party returned to town at 10.30 last night.

THE REGATTA.—Quidi Vidi Lake was well sprinkled with enthusiasts last evening, and several crews were out; the water was like oil. The C.L.B. amateurs had a spin in the Doctor; they are the same men who rowed last year. The amateurs and tradesmen from the Shamrock were out for a spin. The work of erecting the new boat house for the C.C.C. is progressing well under Contractor J. Pidgeon.

The British Band of Harbor Grace.

The British Band of Harbor Grace will visit St. John's on Wednesday, July 23rd, by the regular morning train and hold a dance in the British Hall on Wednesday night. It is quite a few years since our friends over the way favored us with the sound of their old band, so no doubt a good time is in store for our visitors to the city. The British band excursion from H. Grace, always seems to take on amongst the city folk and we feel sure this year's gathering will be no exception. Come on bandsmen and let the St. John's folk hear the British band of Harbor Grace.

Reed Paper Mills Annual Statement.

The report of Albert E. Reed & Co., the well-known paper manufacturers, whose mill is at Bishop's Falls, Nfld., for the year ended May 31st last, submitted to the shareholders at the annual meeting, held in London, shows net profit, after meeting debenture interest, of £25,265, as against £48,540 for 1911-12, while including £71,668 brought forward, an increase of £16,600, the credit balance at the date of these accounts was £26,538, an advance of £2,300. The directors recommended a dividend of 7 per cent. for the eighth year in succession, while £5,000 is again transferred to reserve, giving a total of £50,000 at credit of that fund, leaving £74,706 to be carried forward. The board states that their operations were adversely affected during the period under review by the coal and dock strike.—Montreal Star.

Money Famine and 'Armaments.'

The new German and Prussian loans, aggregating more than eleven millions, have failed, and but half the required amount has been subscribed. It may have a remarkable effect upon the money market, says the Daily Mail. "It proves that there is not enough money to 'go round' even now. How much less will there be if Germany spends a further fifty millions of capital on the equipment required by her new Army Bill? Even the greatest of Empires may be taught by this suggestive incident that it must 'cut its coat according to its cloth,' and thus out of evil of the money crisis good may come. "The failure of the loan is from many points of view not a matter for tears. The increase of armaments on all sides is largely responsible for the money crisis, and now the money crisis begins to threaten the advance of armaments. "In the past the German Michael, as an American writer has cleverly observed, has flourished in virtue of constant substantive injections of French and American capital. But French financiers are face to face with a French loan for forty millions. American financiers will have more than they can do to meet the requirements of their own railways. Thus Germany cannot borrow abroad the money which she cannot obtain at home. "It really looks as though sheer financial pressure might at last check the race in armaments which is exhausting the energy of Europe, and might thus assuage the rivalry of the nations."

A Pleasant Outing.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Please permit me space in your esteemed pages wherein to make known the very enjoyable time experienced yesterday at the Battery school picnic, pioneered by Miss May Cooper, teacher at that place. The morning showing signs of favorable weather, we packed our baskets and at 2 p.m. we all met, at the school-room viz., Miss Cooper and her pupils, Miss Mina Cooper (sister of teacher), Miss Gwen Joyce and Miss Rose Pelley being visitors, where the prizes for the year's work were distributed alternately by Misses Cooper and Pelley, after which the pupils were briefly addressed by Miss Cooper. With happy hearts and heavy baskets we left the school-room for Signal Hill, where we made a fire, boiled the water and participated in all the good things prepared for the occasion. While the lunch was being prepared by the Misses Cooper, the children were suitably entertained with games, candies and sports of different kinds by Misses Joyce and Pelley. A most enjoyable afternoon and evening was spent and at the wind up, Miss Pelley proposed three cheers for (1) Miss Cooper (teacher), School children, (2) visitors, lastly and best for a similar outing next year to which all responded in loud hip-hip-hoorays. In fact to use the words of the poet, we may say, "The sun went down; nor ceased our pleasure there." Hoping that I shall be permitted and honored to be among the jolly number next year, and thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space, Yours etc., ONE OF THE BUNCH.

Now the Clearance Sale Begins

All you thousands of people who have stayed at home reap golden harvests now. All those who have gone away will only get mosquito bites and broke. You who have stayed at home will get the pick of the golden harvests in all the stores. You will see those things you have envied so long begin to sag in price, down, down to where your pocket book can reach up and pick them off the limb. You will begin to lay in supplies that will last a year. For now the great piles of merchandise in every store must come down. And there is no other way to bring them down except by bringing their price down. If you are a shrewd housewife, if you know the value of money, if you are the real head of your home you will watch every advertisement in this paper through all these summer days. You will watch the shoe ads and follow the business of these merchants as they begin reducing their stock from day to day. You will follow the ads for suits and dresses, yes and for coats, too, even in these days when the mercury is soaring high. You will follow the Ads for underwear and hosiery, for stockings for the children, for your husband's shirts. You will follow the furniture clearances, the piano clearances, the sales of draperies and rugs and even of the little house-holds. And when October comes you will find to your surprise you have bought at the lowest price many of those things for which your go-away neighbors will then be compelled to pay the highest price. So follow your advertising day by day for this is the bargain harvest of the year. You will save money, you will occupy your time, and you will find it much cooler in most of the stores than it is at home. Show me a woman who follows her Clearance sales and I'll show you a husband who isn't worried about his bills the rest of the year.

Stabbed Comrade With Red Hot Iron.

Philias Maheu, a blacksmith employed at the Angus Shops, was committed for voluntary statement, on a charge of stabbing Yvan Miscovitch, a fellow workman, with a red-hot iron at welding heat on June 27. The two men were fooling with each other, Maheu throwing water on Miscovitch when they reached the large barrel where the tools were cooled off. Miscovitch tried the water on Maheu when they met again, and, according to three witnesses, the latter ran to the furnace and, taking out a red-hot bar of iron, plunged the heated end in his victim's side. The man was so terribly burned that he lay in the General Hospital three weeks. He appeared against the accused this morning and testified that the small amount of water he threw at Maheu was done in fooling. Judge Lafontaine committed the accused for voluntary statement.

New Oil Fields of Naval Value.

Sydney, N.S.W., July 3.—In view of the efforts of the British administration to secure adequate supplies of oil for the Navy, the discovery of oil fields in Papua, is of highest importance. If the anticipations of the discovery are fully realized, the industry in Papua is certain to reach large proportions and will revolutionize the development there. It is well known that Admiralty officials are almost at their wits' end to discover new sources of oil supplies, in view of the spread of the use of oil fuel for warships.

Will Inspect Crocker Land.

New York, July 2.—Equipped to spend three years in the Arctic in an inspection of Crocker Land, the supposed continent which Rear-Admiral Peary believes he discovered, the whaler was made ready to-day to start north either this afternoon or early to-morrow. The Diana carries a high-power wireless outfit which will be set up in camp at Flager Sound in Ellsmere Land at the top of a thousand-foot cliff. The expedition hopes to be able to communicate with the Hudson Stations, and, by consent of the Canadian authorities, news of the exploration will be relayed to New York. Donald B. McMillan, a graduate of Bowdoin College, is in charge of the expedition.

Fateful Numbers

Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema has recently confessed that many of his happiest memories have been associated with the number seventeen, and it is a reminder that Capt. Oates, of the ill-fated Scott Expedition, went to his death in a blizzard on March 17th—which was the date of his birthday. Similarly, the great Oliver Cromwell died on September 3rd, which was the anniversary of his two great victories at Dunbar and Worcester; and Shakespeare's death-day has been claimed by many experts to have been also his birthday. Charles Dickens once declared that all the fortunate events of his life happened on Fridays; and Bismarck held, with Pythagoras, that three and not thirteen is the perfect number. At any rate, Bismarck had three names, three oak leaves figured in his family arms, he was concerned in three wars and signed three treaties of peace, he had three children, he was responsible for the Triple Alliance, in the Franco-German War he had three horses shot under him, and caricaturists always represented him with but three hairs on his head! Thirteen, however, was the fateful number of Richard Wagner, as the centenary celebrations in his honour this year (1913) remind us, for he was born on May 13th, 1813, and he died on February 13th, 1883.

The High Cost.

It costs us so much for the things that we eat, for the rags for our backs and the shoes for our feet, for our tires and repairs for our red motor cars, we must be contented with five-cent cigars! With gowns for the women and things for the kids, with stockings and doodads and ribbons and lids, a man is so busted that when he would dine, he has to drink water—he can't afford wine. The bills from the butcher are now coming in; the grocer is calling for all kinds of tin; my dreams of an outing, I see, were in vain; I cannot indulge in a swift aeroplane. The cost of existence increases each day; the man who sells diamonds insists on his pay; the tailor, with duns in his pocket, is here; I can't go to Europe. I'm fearing, this year, there's something awry in this country. I know; the more a man squanders the poorer he'll grow; he can't buy a thing—it's a sin and a shame—but he is expected to pay for the same. Alas, for that era no modern man sees, when money was growing on gooseberry trees! Alas for that epoch when greenbacks were found, blown down from the bushes and strewn on the ground.

Sensational Rifle Shooting.

Colonel Gaston Bordeverry, whose credit stands some of the most remarkable feats in rifle shooting on record, has just died at Johannesburg. From early youth Colonel Bordeverry was noted for his remarkable eyesight and accurate range of vision. He started business as a wine merchant, but did not make a success of it. In his leisure hours he went in a great deal for game shooting, and so remarkable a marksman did he prove that he resolved to give up his business and make his living as a professional shot on the music-halls. His turn proved most sensational and interesting. Stationed in the gallery, he would extinguish a dozen lighted candles on the stage by shooting with his rifle in less than a dozen seconds, and from this same point of vantage he would shoot at a marked sixpence held between the fingers of a person on the stage. His daughter was a remarkable shot also, and helped him in his turn until her marriage some time ago.

Woman Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Found recently in a room on the ground floor of her home, No. 12a Leduc Lane, with a cup containing carbolic acid by her side, Mrs. Magazine was conveyed to the General Hospital and died shortly after admission. The body was conveyed to the morgue where an inquest is to be held. The police at No. 4 station on Ontario street east were summoned this morning at the hour named by a child from Leduc Lane, who said that Mrs. Magazine had taken poison in her home. Sergeant Maingui rushed to the house and found the woman in a dying condition. He summoned the ambulance of the General Hospital, and returned to give aid to her, making her vomit. When the doctor on the ambulance arrived he immediately made an injection, but said that the woman was beyond aid. She died soon after admission to the hospital. Children in the lane told the police that the deceased always imagined that the neighbors were hostile to her, and some of her neighbors thought that the woman was eccentric.—Montreal Witness.

Didn't Work.

It is a serious offence for a German soldier to appear in public except in uniform. Even when he is on furlough he must always wear it. A certain Lieutenant Schmidt, who was engaged in some adventure or other dressed up as a civilian was having a fine time of it when, on turning a corner, he unexpectedly met his colonel. Lieutenant Schmidt, however, did not lose his presence of mind, but in a changed voice, asked:—"Can you tell me, sir, where Lieutenant Schmidt lives? I am his brother from the country, and am paying him a visit." The colonel gave the desired information, and Lieutenant Schmidt hurried home and got into uniform as soon as possible. He thought he had deceived his superior officer, but next day when he met his colonel the latter said:—"Lieutenant Schmidt, if your brother from the country pays you another visit, I'll have him placed in close confinement for thirty days."

Canadian Subscribers to Crystal Palace Fund.

London, July 2.—The Lord Mayor of London has opened a fund to raise ninety thousand pounds to buy the Crystal Palace for the nation.

Mr. Perkins Bull, president of the British Canadian Realty Company, sends one thousand pounds. "This is the anniversary of the birth of Canadian Confederation," Mr. Bull writes. "I have felt that I could not better celebrate the day than by sending you a thousand pounds for the fund. We Canadians for three-quarters of a century have been following the lead of our Grand Old Man, Lord Strathcona."

Lord Strathcona, it should be explained, promised the final ten thousand pounds to save the Crystal Palace for the nation.

Manchester Miracle.

Last June Tit-Bits published an account of two remarkable cases in which sight had been suddenly restored. One came about through a man having his teeth drawn and the other happened to a man who had a lot of dust blown in his eye in crossing a common. By rubbing his eye the sight was restored after thirty years of blindness. In the first instance the man had only been blind five years.

Early this year, Miss Kathleen Welsh, of Hulme, Manchester, who has been stone-blind for over a year had her sight suddenly restored while attending her grandmother's funeral. When she first went blind every possible thing was done to effect a cure. She received the skilled services of most eminent oculists and had even been for three months in an institution for the blind. She was greatly attached to her grandmother, and when the old lady became ill she prayed earnestly to be given another chance to see her. It was not to be, however, for it was while standing by the graveside of the one she loved that her sight came back. Miss Welsh was naturally much impressed and upset by the funeral service, and it came to her as something of a shock when she realized that she could see the coffin with its brass plate. It was while returning home that it dawned upon her that her sight was really restored. For she saw a bicycle and some horses; and, although her eyes are somewhat weak and it is necessary for her not to over-use them or to remain long in a strong light, there is every hope that in time her sight may be as good as ever. A Horrible Accident Mars Motor Race.

Harry Knight and His Mechanic Killed When Tire Explodes. Auto Upsetting—Was Hero of the Speed Way.

Columbus, Ohio, July 4.—Harry C. Knight, of Indianapolis, known as the "hero" of the Indianapolis speedway, was almost instantly killed, and his mechanic, a native of Houston, Texas, died at a hospital to-night from a fracture of the skull, sustained this afternoon when Knight's machine blew a right rear tire and turned turtle on the hundredth lap of the two hundred miles automobile race given under the auspices of the Columbus Automobile Association. Knight had been out of the race for thirty minutes because of engine trouble and had just re-entered. He was said to have been running at seventy miles an hour when the accident occurred. Johnny Jenkins, of Springfield, Ohio, was following Knight at a short distance, and, according to some of the witnesses, ran over Knight's body, which had fallen to the track. Jenkins declared he ran over something, but does not know whether it was a body or a part of a machine. Knight's head was badly smashed and the top torn off. His legs were driven into his arm pits and the remainder of the body badly mangled. When the tire blew up the car turned over twice and landed in an upright position. McCallis was thrown out at the first turn and suffered a fractured skull. Knight was pinned and mashed under his steering wheel, but fell out just as the car finally righted. He died almost immediately after assistance reached his side. Ralph de Palma, who was following close on the heels of Knight and Jenkins, was running at a high rate of speed, but managed to shave by the wrecked car without smashing into it.

The accident occurred almost immediately in front of the grand stand and was witnessed by thousands of spectators.

Although Knight gave his residence as Indianapolis, his parents live at Jonesboro, Indiana, near Marion. He was 22 years old. He gained the title of "Hero of the Indianapolis Speedway" seven years ago, when he smashed into a brick wall in preference to running down a driver who had been thrown from his car to the track. Just previous to the time he had started again Knight had been officially declared out of the race because of time lost in engine troubles.

84 Foxes in an Express Car
Came From the Yukon and are Bound For P. E. Island.

Perhaps the most valuable, as it certainly was the most odiferous car that ever passed through St. John's, was attached to the Montreal express to-day. It was owned by the Dominion Express Company and contained forty-two pairs of young foxes, ten of which were pure black and which had come from the borders of the Yukon territory. They were in charge of Mr. Holland, of P. E. Island, who was the owner of the black foxes, and the whole were going to the island. The thirty-two pairs were of the cross variety and were for a number of different parties.

Talking to a representative of the Globe Mr. Holland explained he obtained his ten pairs of foxes from the Indians between Lake Huron and Montreal Lake, on the borders of the Yukon. Considering the high mortality attendant on bringing the animals out to civilization, Mr. Holland said he was well satisfied with the health of the consignment. They are very difficult to feed and require constant care. He was asked how much he valued his foxes at, but he refused to put a figure on them. However, on the basis of present prices the little animals represent a princely fortune.

While in the Yukon Mr. Holland got from the Eskimaux a very handsome carved walrus tusk. This was about nine or ten inches long and had been made into a cribbage board. There were also figures of a polar bear, a ship, an Eskimaux ice hut and an iceberg incised on the surface with marvellous skill. Mr. Holland had also the skin of an Alaskan bear of immense size and a small mountain lion, which he had got from the chief of the Indian tribe with which he sojourned and which had become quite tame.

Mr. Holland said he would be glad when he got home and had his foxes on the ranch.

Imitation of Man.

New Ideas for Women's Bathing Toilettes.

Paris, July 1.—Several new ideas are being evolved by the designers of women's bathing toilettes this year.

An imitation of men's dressing gowns for beach wear is the fashion in place of the elaborate cloaks of last summer. These are worn in large loose stripes and in violent colors, and have enormous collars and cuffs of the same soft and absorbent material with which the whole garment is lined.

The competitor of this bathing wrap will be a reproduction of the ordinary opera cloak in bright clinging material, the upper part richly embroidered and finished off with a collar of the same tint as the head-gear. The latter is extremely varnished, ranging from the Dutch bonnet of divers highly finished stuffs for the women who put the decorative quality first and salt water afterward.

A remarkable compromise, which will be very popular, is the old-fashioned rubber bathing cap disguised with a fetching ribbon.

Stockings will be abandoned by the wholesale this season, as it is recognized even among the most more decorous to show the lower limbs than to show the arms and shoulders at a ball.

As to bathing dresses themselves, a wave of severity is setting in. The costumes of old gold, brilliant green and pale amber which were seen last summer are no longer in favor. There is nothing especially striking in the actual bathing dress yet, but it is understood that the dressmakers have designed several startling surprises which certain society leaders will introduce when the holiday season is in full swing.

Netherlands to Build Navy.

The Hague, Netherlands, July 3.—The Commission appointed to inquire into the defence of the Dutch East Indies has reported in favor of establishing a Dutch navy, comprising nine Dreadnoughts of 21,000 tons each, five of which shall be constantly stationed in the Indies, the construction of a naval base and three forts at Jangjopriok, and the organization of a naval militia.

A period of thirty-five years is fixed for the completion of the scheme, and the annual expenditure at 45,000,000 florins (approximately $18,000,000).

£200,000 from £140 Loan

A loan of £140, which Dr. S. Higley, of Wellston, Ohio, made a quarter of a century ago to Charles Froelich, a struggling farm lad, has been repaid more than a thousand times in the form of a legacy amounting to £200,000. With the borrowed money Froelich entered a college, graduated as a mining engineer, and emigrated to Australia. Eight years ago, grown beyond recognition, the former farm lad walked into the doctor's house and paid back the £140 with compound interest. He informed his benefactor that he had been successful beyond his most sanguine expectations in Australia and South Africa. After a stay of several weeks he returned to Australia, to seek Mr. Henry Thorncroft, a lawyer at Melbourne, visited Dr. Higley to notify him that Mr. Froelich had died and left his entire estate to the benefactor of his early youth. Dr. Higley is now seventy years old—Daily Mail.

Difficult to Catch.

An Englishman who was appointed to an important post in China, got married soon after. Amongst the recipients of the usual little cardboard boxes containing a piece of wedding cake was a Chinese merchant with whom the bridegroom had an outstanding account for goods supplied. After the honeymoon, one of the first persons the newly-wedded husband met was his Celestial creditor.

"And how did you like the cake?" said the Englishman, laughing, after the usual congratulations.

The Monks of St. Bernard.

Although most people have heard of the Great St. Bernard Hospice and its rescue dogs, few know anything of its varied history or realize what a hard and perilous existence the brave monks, whose home it is, are called on to endure. Standing almost on the summit of the mountain pass between Martigny and Oosta—one of the principal highways connecting Switzerland with Italy—the monastery is more than eight thousand feet above the sea-level and near the region of eternal snow, for in this desolate part of the Alps the winter lasts from the end of September till the middle of June, and even in July snow storms sometimes occur, much to the discomfort of the tourists who visit the institution in large numbers during the summer.

The hospice was founded in A.D. 962 by a nobleman named Bernard de Menthon, for the benefit of pilgrims travelling to Rome. For many years afterwards the monks were constantly harassed by the brigands who infested the surrounding mountains, and sometimes even had to barricade their doors and windows and live in a state of siege until the weather drove the enemy away. The building was once destroyed by fire, and when Napoleon made his famous journey across the Alps in the spring of 1800 he used the place as a barracks and converted the large room where travellers are now sheltered into a hospital ward for the weary frostbitten soldiers.

The last village on the Swiss side of the pass is Bourg St. Pierre, and at the inn there visitors are shown the small table and the cloth-covered armchair used by Napoleon at breakfast before starting for Italy at the head of his army of thirty thousand men.

The monastery is a plain, unpretentious looking block of gray buildings, built with very thick walls in order to withstand the force of the terrific gales and snowstorms. The snow is frequently eight or ten feet deep round the hospice and sometimes forms enormous drifts which reach to the roof of the building.

On the way to the monastery stands an iron cross erected in memory of a monk, named Francois Cart, who was killed by an avalanche while making a path through the snow for some travellers, and facing the building is a large statue of St. Bernard de Menthon. Shelter can be provided for between three and four hundred travellers at a time, and sleeping accommodation for about a hundred. Any one crossing the pass is welcome to the hospitality of the monks.

There is, however, a collecting-box in the beautiful chapel where Mass is celebrated every morning, and contributions are naturally very welcome, for the expenses of keeping up the monastery are extremely heavy; all necessities of life having to be brought up from Aosta and the adjacent villages, including the winter forage for the cows which supply the hospice with milk, butter and cheese. Fresh meat can be obtained in the warm weather, so a sufficient quantity has to be salted down to last the whole of the winter, while during the brief summer an enormous stock of fire-wood has to be laid in. This, as can readily be imagined, is no light undertaking, for there are no forests near the monastery, and it all has to be carried on the backs of mules from a distance of several miles.

Two meals of plain but abundant fare are provided every day at the hospice, at twelve and six o'clock, and almost every nation under the sun will be represented in the company gathered round the long tables in the paneled dining-room, where the monks mix freely with their guests and do their best to make them feel at home.

The rules of the institution are by no means strict. Snow-bound wayfarers can pass a pleasant time listening to the stirring tales of adventure recounted around the large open fireplace, inspecting the museum, or reading in the library, before retiring to the bedrooms and the comfortable curtained beds. Musical people too are also catered for, as the hospice can boast of two pianos, presented at different times by King Edward, and a harmonium which was subscribed for by some English people, including Mr. Gladstone and Cardinal Manning.

It is estimated that more than twenty thousand persons cross the pass every year, and more than two-thirds of the number have to undertake the journey during the winter. The majority are poor laborers, on their way to work, who cannot wait for more favorable weather, so it speaks volumes for the vigilance of the monks that a life is very rarely lost now. The monastery is connected by telephone with stations on both sides of the pass, and whenever travellers in the pass start to make the ascent, the number is immediately telephoned to the monks so that they can look out for them and send rescue parties to their aid if they fall to put in an appearance.

Every one has heard the wonderful stories related of the sagacity of the St. Bernard dogs. At the top of the pass is a monument in memory of a dog who saved forty lives during the ten years of its existence. On one occasion it is discovered in the snow a child whose mother had been killed by an avalanche. After rousing it by licking its face, the dog induced it to get on its back and brought it safe and sound to the hospice. Unfortunately this dog was killed several years ago by some unknown person, probably by error. The inscription on the monument runs: "Barry the Heroic. Saved the lives of forty persons and was killed by the forty-first."

In the early part of the last century one of these splendid animals was decorated with a medal for having rescued twenty-two people from a snowy grave, but lost his own life while on an errand of mercy in the winter of 1816. A courier from Piedmont, after sheltering for a time at the monastery one night during a severe snowstorm, insisted on continuing his journey to the village of St. Pierre, as he expected to meet some friends there. The monks, after trying in vain to dissuade him, lent him the dog and two guides to show him the way, but when the party had proceeded some distance in safety down the mountain they were overwhelmed by an avalanche and killed.

According to the traditions of the hospice, the St. Bernard dog is a cross between a Danish bull and a mastiff, a native hill dog. After the breed was established it was kept pure until the winter of 1812, when, owing to the severity of the weather and the number of travellers on the pass, the monks were compelled, contrary to their custom, to send out the brood bitches as well as the dogs, with the result that all of the females perished from cold and fatigue and the true breed could no longer be continued. The problem was finally solved by crossing the St. Bernard dogs with Newfoundlanders. Though it was not a success at first, owing to the thick coat of the Newfoundlanders, which hampered the animals in the snow, the monks eventually obtained the necessary shortness of hair by breeding with their own short-coated dogs. Sometimes, however, puppies with rough hair would be born, and these were given away to the villagers in the surrounding valleys, so that St. Bernard dogs soon became general in Switzerland, though they were not introduced in England until 1860. Some of the finest specimens at the monastery stand more than thirty inches high at the shoulder and weigh over one hundred and fifty pounds. They are extremely powerful and have been known to drag an unconscious man over the snow for three-quarters of a mile. Their sense of smell is so highly developed that they can detect a human being even when he is covered by several feet of snow and though the mothers are inclined to resent interference they are very gentle and good-tempered as a rule.

A Paris Chemist Has Discovered How to Grow Hair.

In Paris the ladies have entirely abandoned wearing hats, which is due entirely to this new discovery. It has been proven that Henna leaves contain the ingredients that will positively grow hair. That they contain this long-looked-for article is proven every day.

The French are now placing on the market a preparation, containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale. This preparation, is called SALVIA and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, SALVIA makes a most pleasant dressing, and is sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle can be purchased for 50 cents.

The training of such intelligent animals does not present many difficulties, and is undertaken in the summer months. The young dogs are taken into the hollows or valleys, where there is always some snow to be found. One man will go on ahead and completely bury himself in the snow. Then a dog is at first taken by one of the monks to look for him, and afterwards sent by itself to discover the hidden person. By degrees it is taught to bark when it has found him and also to rouse the man if unconscious and lead him back to the hospice.

During the winter months it is practically impossible for an inexperienced person to achieve the journey across the pass without assistance, for, apart from the danger of avalanches which no one can foresee, not a trace of the path is visible, and deep snowdrifts are numerous and often hide dangerous precipices, while dense fogs and blinding snowstorms come on with appalling rapidity to confuse the exhausted traveller, who cannot resist the desire to lie down and sleep.

Before the telephone was introduced the dogs used to carry food strapped to a saddle on their backs, as well as a fagon of wine tied to their collars, but now they are sent out with the wine alone, as the weight of the food and the saddle impeded them in their work. These dogs are so trustworthy and intelligent that they are sometimes despatched by themselves to guide travellers down the mountain-side or show them the way to the monastery. If they happen to find an exhausted wayfarer when not accompanied by a monk they begin to bark loudly, and if too far off to be heard at the hospice, quickly return there for human aid.

It can easily be realized what terrible hardships and perils are endured by the heroic monks in the course of their duty, when they have to venture out in the middle of the night, with the thermometer standing below zero, to grope their way down the treacherous mountain-side, knowing that a false step to the right or left or the rush of an avalanche at any minute may hurl them to instant death. They carry their lives in their hands, yet these splendid men think nothing of remaining out in the blinding snow for many hours at a stretch searching for lost travellers.

The monastery staff comprises seventeen monks and about fifteen assistants and laborers. Though they are all picked men, and specially chosen for their physical strength and robust health, fifteen years' work at the hospice is the utmost limit of their endurance. Most of them break down in their twelfth year, not only on account of the constant exposure and hardships they are called on to face, but also because of the intense cold and the difficulty of breathing such a rarefied atmosphere, which permanently injures the health—in fact, even in the most favorable circumstances no one could exist at such an altitude for more than twenty years.

Blacking & Mercantile Co., Ltd., Amherst, N.S.
Dear Sirs.—Nearly one year ago I had my first order of "Mathieu's Syrup" from you. It was not known in this country, and gave samples to several families whom I knew would use it. After a few weeks I began to have a call for it, and sales have increased wonderfully since. I have not the least doubt but that it will soon be the best selling remedy for coughs, colds, etc., on the market. In my store here sales are good and our people ask for it. Several stores in this county now keep it in stock and report sales increasing. I have bought from you since August 16th, 1907, 4 Gross and have only three dozen on hand at this date, and which I am holding for retail trade in my store. Yours truly,
LOUIS A. McLANSON.

AGAINST HEADACHE there is no remedy so active as Mathieu's Nerve Powders which contain no opium, morphine or chloral. 25 cents per box of 18 powders.

Not Stuck-on Itself.

The built-in—not stuck-on—tire like Dunlop Traction Tread is the only successful Anti-Skid. Manufacturers of the stuck-on type dare not make the corrugations big enough to prevent skidding without fearing to make them so big that they will destroy resiliency.

The Cheapness of Satisfaction.
The cost of the safety which you obtain by purchasing Dunlop Traction Tread tires is insignificant in comparison with the price of neglect.

Takes a Grip on the Road.
Dunlop Traction Tread grips the road. It doesn't matter where the road is or what it is made of.

Success is Always in Evidence.

We predict that Dunlop Traction Tread will become the standard Anti-Skid tire of this country. Watch the tires as the cars go by.
