CHAPTER XLII.

"We will drive over to the abbey after lunch, Gardner," he said. "In the meantime you can employ yourself as you please. I am bothered about my favorite hunter. People do not credit me with much sentiment, but I can drop tears when I see my animals dying before my eyes. I am going to the stables."

"I will accompany you, if you do not object," said Gardner.

"My dear fellow, don't talk about my objecting to anything. If I didn't want you I should say so."

They were standing in the hall now, and Hartley was promptly in attendance with Gardner's hat.

The barrister found plenty to interest him about the grounds. There were dogs of almost every description, and by the fine appearance of some dozen or more savage-looking bull-terriers, he shrewdly suspected that more than one brutal fight had taken place in or about the stables.

"I may be a fool to worry myself about the horse, for I swear that I would rather see him dead than any one else should ride him!" observed Lord Cecil. "The vet says that he has a cold in the lungs, and it takes a deuce of a lot of pulling through. It's a queer request to make to you, Gardner, but I want you to promise to use your influence, when the worst comes to the worst, so that I may have my horses and dogs—those which I have always regarded as my own particular property."

Herbert Gardner looked at him gravely.

"That is a very strange request to make to me," he said.

"I don't think so. I am not so blind that I cannot see how Lady Stanhope has taken to you. She has held you up to me as a model young man already."

"Well, I would prefer not to discuss the business in fragments," Gardner responded. "I have already promised to do all in my power for you, Stanhope. You are my client, and it is my duty to work in your interest. You may depend upon me."

"I believe you—I believe that you are as true as steel. If I could only live my past over again, and be cured of my ugly temper. If I could have friends like you, I should be a

"The young barrister never forgot the introduction to the earl's daughter. He had listened almost in differently to the rhapsodies of Sir Charles; he understood that a lover's eyes saw perfections where others saw faults, but he at once confessed that Lady Gladys' beauty had not been overrated one jot.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER I.

"After a time he invested in some other mines; and next he purchased a large area of land in which one of the most productive coal veins was found. And now he is a millionaire!"

"A most industrious man," said Lady Iris carelessly, "and very successful too. So he has bought Hyne Court? I remember that better than any other place in the neighborhood."

"Yes," continued the earl, "Richard Bardon, Esquire, is now master of Hyne Court. Rumor says that he will be offered a peerage when the present government goes out."

"Offered a peerage!" repeated the girl, with eyes that flashed as she looked upon the ancient motto, "Held with honor." "If I were a man I should not care for a peerage unless it came by hereditary descent and was at least three hundred years old. Go on, papa, if you please."

"Richard Bardon is a tall, stout man, with a florid face, a deep bass voice, a loud laugh and a familiar manner that at times is apt to make one grow warm. He has never aspired the letter 'h' in his life, and never will. It is reported of him that, after having rendered some great services to the country, one of the royal dukes paid him a visit. Bardon had been carefully drilled as to how he should receive his royal guest; but his instincts were too much for him. He grasped the prince's hand, and gave him a tremendous slap on the shoulder. "I am glad to see your 'andsome and 'earty face, your 'ighness!" he cried. And the duke was much amused at his reception. "And some and 'earty" was Bardon's name for many months afterward. He has a wife—well, politeness forbids me to describe her. Instead of walking, she rolls, and instead of smiling, she simpers. She calls her husband 'Mr. B.' and she is always speaking of 'Mr. B.' and his 'igh connections."

"What dreadful people!" sighed Lady Iris.

"I have not finished yet," said the earl. "They have one daughter, Marie—certainly the most honest, straightforward, well-intentioned girl I have ever met. Nothing ever makes her ashamed of her parents; and she will not own that they are in any way inferior to other people. In addition, the millionaire has a son and heir—a fine, handsome, talented young man. The father is lord-lieutenant of the county. The son is Master of the Huntsgton Hounds. The father declares that he could buy up half a dozen dukes, and that his son must marry a duke's daughter; while the son says he shall marry to please himself."

"What horrible people! And do you really mean, papa, that they are received in society?"

The earl looked thoughtfully at his daughter.

"My dear Iris, in this country a man with an income of half a million yearly is a power in the land; he can do so much that society is compelled to tolerate him, he can, for instance, secure an election. There is literally no end to his influence, so that society makes the best of it, and grudgingly gives him a place."

"In fact, they despise the man, but respect his wealth," said Lady Iris. "That is mean. I would respect both or neither."

"Money is a power that must always be respected," returned the earl slowly. "I assure you that the whole county has improved since the millionaire came to reside in it. He has built churches, almshouses, schools, and hospitals. One heard nothing but the name of Bardon, the Bardon Almshouses, the Bardon Hospital, the Bardon Convalescent Home, the Bardon Schools, and the Bardon Free Libraries are scattered all over the country. The man is a power in the land; one cannot help knowing him."

"Papa," she asked, with something of awe in her voice, "do you ask these people here?" Unconsciously her eye sought the motto "Held with honor" as she spoke.

SUSAN IS SHOCKED.

Arent shoes and stockings in this day and generation the most fascinating, the most tempting, and the most astonishingly expensive item in the feminine wardrobe?

That old tongue twister that we used to say ten times in quick succession as a forfeit at the children's parties: "Shoes and socks shock Susan" has suddenly acquired meaning. I never could see why Susan should be shocked at anything so commonplace and necessary. I know now. Susan is a person transported from the old days into ours and she is astonished beyond measure at the diversity of feminine footwear and shocked at the cost of it.

Shoes in the Old Days.

Do you remember the old days when shoes were either black or tan, when one had one pair of every day shoes and one pair, with perhaps a pair of white kid slippers for parties and a pair of brown sneakers for sport wear (only we didn't call it for sport wear then we called it for summer vacation).

And in the stocking drawer she sees silk stockings of grey, black, tan and white, besides one or two odd colors to match sweaters, and some colored sport stockings.

Husbands Would Like to Know.

If someone were there to tell her that the silver slippers cost $12, the grey suede pumps $8, and even the sneakers $2.25, and that not a pair of stockings in that drawer cost less than $1, and some of them $3 she would ask: "Where is all this money coming from?" A question that economists and some husbands would like to know the answer to.

A friend of mine who has just started keeping a clothes budget is astounded at the cost of shoes and stockings. "But what can you do?" she says. "You can't look well dressed no matter how nice your other clothes are unless the shoes and stockings are right."

What indeed, except budget? The amount you have a right to spend for clothes and keep within it one way or another? Perhaps one will be better dressed with a gown costing less and the extra spent for shoes and stockings.

And, fortunately, there are always birthdays and Christmases, and a word to a wise family is sufficient.

FOR OFFICE.

I've never been a candidate for any public snarl; let others keep on their bulwarks straight, or I eagle on the map. I sometimes think I'd like to run for justice of the peace, if when the long campaign was done, the running staff would cease. But when I contemplate my friends, who've run and lost or won, I know that running never ends, when once it is begun. At present I'm a humble bard, who for no office pants, and I provide the sprays and lard to feed my hollow suite. I am contented in my mien, I have no vain desires, and I can buy cheap gasoline, and sometimes rubber tires. But if I once for office ran, the halberd would gain; I'd be no more a plaid man, serene and safe and sane. I'd cease to thrum my tuncful lyre, I'd wear my wreath no more; I'd seek the farmer at his byre, the merchant in his store; I'd nail the roughshod on his beat, the rustic herding dots, the croaking sweeper on the street, to bone them for their votes. I'd work the same old bag of tricks until my name was mud; the stern of office-hunting sticks, when once it's in the blood.

Editor Evening Telegram.
 Dear Sir,—I am sure you are always interested in hearing what Newfoundlanders are doing in this country, and to publish in your widely circulated paper items of interest pertaining to our country. We recently had the pleasure of a visit from our distinguished fellow-countryman, Lord Morris. At a reception and dinner given in his honor at the Shelburne Hotel, Brighton Beach, on the evening of August 19th, quite a large gathering of Newfoundlanders assembled to do him honor. It made me feel good to meet so many and shake the hands of old friends I had not seen for years. Promptly at 7 o'clock, the appointed hour, Lord Morris arrived at the hotel and was escorted to the seat of honor at the banquet table by that Prince of Newfoundlanders, James F. Phelan, an old-time friend of his schooldays at St. Bonaventure's College and ex-Trade Commissioner J. M. Devine. As our distinguished guest entered the dining room, Pryors' world-famous band played that stirring music "See the Conquering Hero Comes," and at intervals during the evening appropriate airs such as "Hail to the Chief," etc.
 The dinner itself was one of the finest I ever attended, and it has been my pleasure to be present at some of the best of them in New York, given to statesmen of international repute. I am enclosing copy of the menu. The tables were profusely decorated with flowers, while the Union Jack, Stars and Stripes and Newfoundland's Pink, White and Green were in unison conspicuously displayed. After all the good things on the menu had been partaken of and the final Demi-Tasse sipped, Chairman John M. Devine rose to introduce the distinguished guest of the evening, while the hotel band played "The Banks of Newfoundland." In a brilliant and eloquent speech, Mr. Devine paid a warm tribute to Lord Morris' distinguished career, saying in part that it was for him (Mr. D.) a great pleasure and honor to welcome and introduce to those present such a distinguished fellow-countryman. He reviewed Lord Morris' history covering a period of forty years, his long political service in the interests of his country; his winning battle after battle at the election polls; his ability as a jurist and his tireless efforts at all times, with voice and pen to say a good word in behalf of his native land. "Who may some," said Mr. Devine, "who may take the narrow view that Lord Morris' elevation to the peerage meant a throwing down of colonial responsibilities for a selfish motive and self-glorification, but those who know him best are convinced that his acceptance of the peerage and locating himself in the heart of the empire was actuated by the thought that amidst such surroundings he could render greater service to his country. It has been said that he should not praise people until after they are dead, but the case of Lord Morris is an exception. It is only right that we should say such good things of him while he is still in the flesh. Indeed, said the Chairman in closing his remarks, he has well earned the honors that have been showered upon him; it is the reward of service, and while he has walked with kings he has not lost the common touch. Every mountain and valley, river and stream of Newfoundland is still dear to him, and he is still anxious for the welfare of every fisherman who wrests a livelihood from the bosom of the Atlantic. Deeply sensible that you endorse to the full the sentiments I have expressed and that same have your warmest approbation, it is my esteemed privilege and the highest honor since coming to this country to present to you our greatest Newfoundland—our distinguished guest, Right Hon. Lord Morris."

LORD MORRIS SPEAKS.

On rising to reply Lord Morris received an ovation such as can only be tendered by loyal Newfoundlanders. The entire assemblage rose and joined in the singing while the band played "We Love Thee Newfoundland." That Lord Morris was visibly impressed with this wonderful reception given him was quite apparent as he rose to speak. He prefaced his remarks by referring to the happy thought of the intertwining of British, American and Newfoundland flags, stating that the preservation of the world's peace could best be secured by the unification of the great Anglo-Saxon race. What could not England, America and Newfoundland accomplish if they were lined up together. In speaking of the scene of his labors for so many years, Newfoundland, Lord Morris said, that it is difficult to transport an old tree, meaning, of course, that while he had met with abundant success in the mother country the scenes of his earlier years, held the largest place in his heart. He would always be interested in Newfoundland and her hardy sons. On land and sea they had distinguished themselves. He predicted great things for the old colony in the future. Newfoundland must keep abreast of the march of civilization. Old time methods must be discarded. Who would think, said Lord Morris, a few years ago that Newfoundland has the second largest iron mine in the world. He grew optimistic when talking of its vast wealth and forehanded a wonderful development of sea-wealth now laying dormant. In warmest terms he closed his speech thanking all for their kindly recognition and the extremely happy evening afforded him.

THE TARIFF.

The tariff as it has been padded out and the rates increased during the nearly three year regime of the present Government, who, it will be remembered, went to the country with the insincere cry of reduced duties, is an important factor in the lives of Newfoundlanders, which must neither be forgotten, nor permitted to be winked out of sight, when the time comes round for a consideration and discussion of its demerits—it has no merits—by the electorate. A commission of sorts was appointed by the Executive last spring to go over the whole revision of the tariff, but so far as can be learned, instructions have been issued that instead of going over it, the members of the Commission are, to walk very warily around it, and to handle it as delicately as possible, in order that the ratings may be brought up to a standard which instead of a reduction will make for a further increase. There is no necessity for emphasising this point, for it will be remembered that Premier Squires when introducing the Budget at the recent session of the House, estimated the revenue for the year ending June 30, 1923 to be $8,903,000, an increase over the actually collected revenue of 1921-22 of fifty thousand dollars. For the same fiscal period, his estimate of expenditure was in the vicinity of $8,850,000, a sum which has possibly been augmented by emergency expenditure for which no provision was made in this estimate, but which nevertheless will have to be found somewhere, and if it is not taxed on the people directly, it will come out of their pockets in some other way by processes known to the present Government, and improved on by them in the way of sur tax, super tax and sales tax, all of which have tended to place a far greater burden of taxation on the consumer than any government in Newfoundland had ever imposed. And now, it is said, the orders to the Tariff Commission are specific. In effect they are that in the revision it must not be forgotten or left out of consideration that no matter what happens, the rearrangement or readjustment of the rates and items must be so made that revenue will have to meet expenditure as estimated, plus emergency allocations for such public works as been ordered by the department controlling the same, or by the Ministers who are said to be the real powers behind the acting Premier. It will be well for the people to watch closely the deliberations of the Tariff Commission and their ultimate report. The responsibilities of finance that have to be shouldered by the quarter million of people in this Colony are greater in proportion than those of any country in the Empire. Sir Richard Squires was most eloquent and vigorous in his condemnation of the tariff as it was in 1919 and previously. Has he lessened it? Nay rather has this modern Rehobotham piled on still more. In effect he has said since he assumed office almost three years ago, to slightly misquote the words of that tyrannical king of Israel, "and now whereas my predecessors did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my predecessors chastised you with tariff whips, but I will chastise you with tariff scorpions." Let the taxpayers think it over.

HIS DIARY. Aug. 26.—Again much talk of an election in the fall, and a scribe in the Telegram sheet will have it so, but this, to my mind, naught save idle gossip, nor will there be an election till the next year. I did wait upon Mr. Jennings in the Public Works office, and he welcomes me from my trip and would have me tell him some thing of it. I learn from him how times will be mighty had in the North next winter, nor can anything be done to prevent it. So to the Board of Trade where Mr. McKay discourses on his silver mine, and will have all believe it to be worth millions, which I hope is true, but he ever an optimistic fellow. REG. DOWDEN, Sec. Orphanaid Club, aug23,1922

Open Letter to City Councillors.

Gentlemen: I have been following the proceedings of the public meetings of the City Council hoping to find some expressive opinion on the House Building Proposition submitted by Mr. Collishaw, but so far there is no indication that you intend even to seriously consider the merits or demerits of the proposal. As one who is interested in the proposition and who hopes to take advantage of the same should it be realized, I think that justice to the citizens, especially those who want comfortable and clean workmen's houses, you should at least analyze the offer of Mr. Collishaw and if you turn it down give the public, whom you represent, your reasons for doing so. I appeal specially to Councillors Outerbridge and Dowden, young men who are supposed to represent and embody progressive ideas of the city. In the past we had too many ultra-conservative old men in the Council who had not the spirit and energy to undertake bold progressive measures in harmony with the times as regards civic improvements in streets and houses. Now we have some young men in the Council including yourselves, who are supposed to have new ideas as to what constitutes a well governed and a clean city and the public are counting on you to put into execution the ability which they credited you with when they elected you to office as City Councillors imbued with up to date ideas in civic matters. Are you going to be true to the trust reposed in you by the people? Are you going to be true to the promises made before you were elected? This is the day of the young man. The young men are successfully handling the big problems of business, finance and government the world over. They are not afraid to be progressive. It is to young men the world looks to-day for a bold solution of her problems. It is to you, therefore, the public of St. John's are looking to take up a bold campaign for a cleaner and better governed city. The proposition of Mr. Collishaw to build 100 houses for workmen is one that you cannot afford to ignore without losing the esteem and confidence of the people, especially those who want better houses and a city cleared of slum habitations. The public will certainly expect that if you do not advocate this building proposition, you will at least study it and advise it as a cold business offer and that having done this, if you turn it down you will give your reasons publicly for doing so. If you are believers in the scheme and are held back by your associates, you should at once let the public know. There is a way open to you then which I have much pleasure indicating, viz., to call a public meeting and invite all who want a cleaner city and better houses and you will, I venture to say, be both pleased and surprised at the result. However, whatever may be the result, you and your associates will have done your duty. If you do not get a big endorsement why then let the proposition drop. I claim, however, that the public will back you once you get them to understand this building proposal clearly. Now, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it? We want houses and you have been preaching houses. It is now up to you. PATRICIO.

Here and There.

Enquiry To-Day.

EVIDENCE WILL BE MADE PUBLIC

The Magisterial enquiry into the death by drowning of Thomas Anderson and F. Leslie Southgate, begins at 3 o'clock this afternoon before Judge Morris. The circumstances surrounding the tragedy are so peculiar that the enquiry will be followed with the greatest interest. As a consequence of the interest taken in the matter, it has been decided that the evidence will be made public. There are a large number of witnesses to be examined, and if there has been negligence—as is believed—the blame will be placed on the right shoulders.

DROVE WITHOUT LIGHTS.—A motorist charged in the Police Court to-day with driving without lights, was ordered to pay costs.

THE LONG POND ACCIDENT.—It was Dr. Macpherson, and not Dr. Anderson who assisted in the resuscitation of the boy nearly drowned at Long Pond yesterday. Inspector General Hutchings was on the scene with a pulmotor but the use of this was not required.

TORBAY ROAD.—The Torbay Road is now in excellent condition and a great deal of the credit for this goes to Mr. Parsell, foreman of the workers, who made the improvements. The road bed is now hard and smooth and is now as well adapted to motor traffic as any highway in the Colony.

Obituary

REV. H. I. LEGG. There are few men in Nova Scotia who will receive with more interest the information of the death of the late Mr. Leggo than the Nova Scotians. The late Mr. Leggo was a Newfoundlander who came to Nova Scotia in 1858. He was a very top of the profession. A son of the Rev. Mr. Leggo, who was a prominent and successful agriculturist, he was a member of the Nova Scotia Agricultural Society. He was a man of broad abilities and increasing progress and cheerfulness of spirit. He was a man of well-earned respect and esteem by all.

Obituary.

REV. H. LEGGO. There are hosts of Newfoundlanders both in this country and abroad who will receive with deepest regret the information of the death of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, on August 22, of Rev. H. Leggo.

The late Mr. Leggo was typical of those Newfoundlanders who make their way from small beginnings to the very top of the professional ladder. A son of the common people, he worked assiduously for self-improvement and for personal elevation on the ladder of life, and in the process attained great good and high benefits on those who were privileged to meet him either as school teacher or as minister of things sacred.

The writer was privileged to be a pupil of the late Mr. Leggo when he was in charge of the Church of England school at Bay Roberts. Like all those who came into intimate contact with Mr. Leggo, he found him a man of broad abilities, unbounded energy, progressive progress and outstanding earnestness. He occupied a place in the affections as well as in the respect of the scholars and is held in esteem by all of them to this day.

Mr. Leggo was born in Curlew, Nfld., in 1872. After a very successful career as a school teacher, he decided to study for Holy Orders. During his career at Queen's College, St. John's, there sprang up between the late Bishop Jones and the theological student an attachment that lasted through all the years of Mr. Leggo's labors in the Diocese of Newfoundland. In 1899, Mr. Leggo was made a Deacon, and in 1900 he was ordained Priest by Bishop Jones. He was for years chaplain to the late Bishop of Newfoundland, and accompanied his Lordship on his trips around the island in the famous old churchship Lavrock.

In his career as pastor of Church of England missions in this country, the late Rev. Henry Leggo did notable work on the Mission of Flower's Straits of Belle Isle. He devoted his whole time and he sacrificed ease and health to the interests of his flock under his charge. His name will be a household word in the mission which is now in the capable hands of a worthy successor of similar energetic and devoted type, Rev. J. Richards, R.D.

After his ordination and his work in Newfoundland, the late Mr. Leggo went to England, where he spent eight years at theological study and parochial work. He studied at Pembroke College, Oxford, returning to this country in 1914 and later went to Nova Scotia, where he became rector of Granville Ferry and at Hubbards. In 1920 he became pastor of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, Dartmouth, N.S., and was in harness until, at the age of 48 years, he was called to his eternal rest. Unfortunate for several years, and as a result of his tireless and unsparring missionary work, he had been in a poor state of health and had to submit to several operations. One brother, who hurried to Dartmouth when news of his fatal seizure was telegraphed to Newfoundland, was at his bedside when the end came.

The funeral service was held at the St. Alban's church on Friday, August 25. The remains were taken to Christ Church, Dartmouth, where a second service was held, followed by interment in Christ Church cemetery.

The late Rev. H. I. Leggo is survived by his wife, who was formerly Mrs. MacLean, of Hubbards, N.S., by his mother and by several brothers, all to all his immediate family is extended the sincerest sympathy of the Newfoundlanders who came under his influence as a teacher and pastor, and all of those who made his acquaintance in his various spheres of work in this country and abroad.

H. M. MOSEDELL.

RICHARD HORTON ODWYER, I.S.O., COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC CHARITIES.

After an illness extending over many months, there passed away this morning, one of our leading estimable citizens, Richard Horton Odwyer, Esq., I.S.O., Commissioner of Public Charities. Born in St. John's in the year 1858 he had just completed his 64th year when the end arrived which thus separates him from his home and scenes of his earthly career, and reverts as well another with one of the notable mercantile families prominent in Newfoundland during the century just passed.

He was the eldest of the four sons of the late Hon. Richard Odwyer, whose name and fame still lingers in the minds of his widespread business interests conducted on the premises of the front portion of which is now occupied by the new building of the Bank of Nova Scotia. No merchant of his day surpassed him in business energy, ability and integrity, and because of his high character and influence he was honored with a seat on the Legislative Council. After enjoying considerable wealth he retired with his family to Liverpool in the year 1893, leaving the business affairs in the charge of his brother, the late Mr. Odwyer. In that city he spent the remaining years of his life, the end of which came to him in the year 1875 at the age of 71. His eldest son, who has now departed from amongst us, thus left here at the early age of nine, and so was educated principally in the old land. Several years he spent at the renowned College of Durham, having as an intimate classmate the present Cardinal Bourne of Westminster, one of England's most eminent ecclesiastics. After the death of his uncle he returned permanently to Newfoundland in the year 1879, and in conjunction with his brother, John, assumed the management of the Water Street business under the old firm name of R. Odwyer, until the fluctuations of commerce brought about his honorable liquidation, at the sacrifice of most of the private wealth of the partners. Richard then entered public life as one of the candidates of the Liberal Party led by Sir Wm. Whiteway, and in the year 1889 was elected for Placentia and St. Mary's, together with his colleagues, the late Judge George H. Emerson and the late Jas. J. McGrath, Governor of the Penitentiary. Sir William having defeated the party of Sir Robert Thorburn assumed the Premiership, and in the formation of his Cabinet conferred on Richard Odwyer the important position of Receiver General. For four years he held this office with much distinction and then succeeded his father-in-law, the late John Casey, as Commissioner of Public Charities. No department of the public service entails more responsibilities that call for the exercise of much wisdom and discretion, but Richard Odwyer by his faithful and diligent labor, well maintained the even balance between the people and state he served, and as a testimony to his valuable services was honored a few years ago with a membership in the Imperial Service Order, a distinction of great and rare merit, and only conferred after years of honorable duty. It was but rarely he took to himself a holiday—tho' over and over again well earned—and because of this constant and scrupulous attention to duty it is believed his powers of endurance were undermined and the illness brought on which has now so fatally resulted. Mrs. R. H. Odwyer, who survives him, was the renowned songstress Miss Ellice Casey, who for so many years was the leading lady chorister of the R.C. Cathedral, and who in all the prominent public musical entertainments formerly was ever foremost in freely giving of her talents to help constantly all the worthy movements for which these were held. Mr. Odwyer also leaves one son, Angus Odwyer of the office of Baine Johnston & Co., Ltd., and two daughters, one the widow of the late Captain Atley, R.N., for many years in charge of the training ship Briton, the younger, Miss Vera Odwyer, one of the city's most popular young ladies. Of his brothers, but one now survives, James Odwyer the youngest, residing in England. John, who died in 1885, and William by a sad coincidence died in England but two days ago. To the members of the family there will be much genuine sympathy expressed because of the loss of a most affectionate husband and father and a true and noble gentleman with a record in every sense unblemished.

In Memoriam.

IDA MATSON BLANDFORD.

Ida Matson Blandford who died of meningitis at Chengtu West China, on Friday, May 6th, 1922, was born in Fitchburg Mass., February 28, 1859. Her early education was received in the Public Schools of Fitchburg. At the age of fourteen she united with the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Fitchburg of which her parents were members. She entered the Academy at South Lancaster, Mass., where she spent several years, later entering the Nurses' Training School of the New England Sanitarium, Melrose, Mass. She was graduated as a nurse from this school in 1913. July 1st, 1914, she was married to Claude L. Blandford, son of Capt. A. Blandford, S.S. "Glencoe," and the same year they entered the Washington Missionary College at Washington D.C. where she took the Medical Evangelistic Course. In August 1915, she accompanied her husband to China, going directly to Chengtu Szechwan, where a year was spent in language study. She also helped with the teaching in the Mission Girls' School. A year later she, with her husband, moved to Chengtu Szechwan, to open work for the Seventh Day Adventist Mission. She engaged in teaching and other missionary work till her death. In 1921 a home was built in Chengtu where many happy hours were spent in planting and caring for flowers, of which she, in the absence of friends and relatives, had grown very fond. Her Chinese friends delighted in bringing her seeds and flowers for planting. She knew the Chinese name for every flower and shrub that was brought here. She was possessed of a splendid disposition for a missionary. Her home could be open to many or few without the intimacy of the situation showing evidence of becoming tedious. Those who have lived in her home, be it the time long or short, have gone away conscious of having received of true hospitality, the late Mrs. Blandford. The evening of Wednesday, April 25th, she suffered from a severe head-

FOOTBALL NOTES.

During the week four postponed football games of the regular League fixture will be played, while the season terminates on Monday next, after one of the greatest seasons' football in the annals of the League. The remaining games are as follows:—Star vs. C.E.L.; Guards vs. Highlanders; B.I.S. vs. Saints; Saints vs. C. E. I.; Fellsides vs. Highlanders. The Star and C. E. I. eleven will take the field this evening, when an interesting game will no doubt be the outcome. Both teams are very evenly matched. The Saints and B.I.S. postponed game which is scheduled for Wednesday evening will probably be re-arranged after this morning's meeting of the League. The game has been set down for Wednesday night, but owing to unforeseen circumstances the Saints line-up will be unable to play owing to the Highland Games, which take place Wednesday afternoon. The B.I.S. goalie, J. Phelan, will be missed by the Irish players when they clash with the Saints, in what is expected to be the game of the season, and the outcome depends so much on the League championship. They are, however, trying out two substitutes, and it is believed one of the other will make a good showing between the posts. Now that the evening's are closing in very quickly, it is necessary for every player to be on the field on time. During this week the games will commence sharp at 7 o'clock.

N.A.A.L. SPORTS.

The general secretary of the National Sports Committee has arrived in town after an enjoyable three weeks vacation. Mr. Grace has thoroughly recuperated after his holiday and will get down to business this week with his committee to arrange for the 3rd Annual Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association Sports Day which is scheduled for Wednesday next, Sept. 6th.

HIGHLAND GAMES.

The big attraction for this week will be the Highland Games, which event takes place at St. George's Field at 2.30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 30th. The prizes placed on exhibition in the window of T.A. MacNab and Company are the best selected gifts for an athletic meet seen in a long while. Many passers-by have viewed the handsome prizes with praise and admiration which reflects great credit on the part of the energetic committee in their selection.

The many friends of Manager Chas. Schroot of the Grand Falls Baseball Club will be sorry to hear of his recent illness, having being confined to the General Hospital since Thursday last. It is to be hoped that Mr. Schroot's illness will be of a short duration and that he will be enabled to leave the Hospital completely cured.

MEETS WITH ACCIDENT.

While engaged with the B.I.S. Football Team at practice on Saturday evening last, Mr. Fred Brim collided with the new goalie, Mr. Channing, as a result of which he will be sporting a beautiful "gravel" rash for the next few days.

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

The final championship game of the season will take place on tomorrow evening at 7 sharp, when the Saints will make a strong endeavour to take the honors from the boys in green and gold. A win for the latter means the third consecutive championship, while a draw will necessitate their playing off with the Cadets. Needless to say, great interest is created. Particularly so in view of the fact that the famous Irish goal-keeper, Mr. Jack Phelan will not be in their line-up.

INTER TOWN CRICKET.

The city team, comprising such wielders of the willow as, Messrs. Bert Job, Alec and Harry Winter, Dr. Fox, J. G. Higgins, R. G. Goodridge, Angus Reid, P. J. Berrigan, and many others will be leaving here by next Sunday's express for Grand Falls to compete against the paper town men for the C. H. Hayward Cup. The games are scheduled to take place on Sept. 4th, 5th, 6th. The Grand Falls team will return with the City eleven to play a series of games in this city.

INTER TOWN BASEBALL CUP.

To clear up any misunderstanding that might or has prevailed in connection with the rules governing the inter-town baseball trophy which is now being competed for we publish the following from the Minutes of the St. John's Amateur Baseball League.

Minutes of meeting held in the office of Vice-President J. O. Hawvermale, Aug. 19th, 1919.

The Chairman announced that the meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing the inter-town games, and that on the recommendation of the Grand Falls team, the trustees of the said Inter-Town Trophy had altered the inter-town series rules from three games to seven, challenging teams to play three games on the home ground of the Cup holders, and the balance of the series on the home grounds of the challengers. In the event of either failing to observe these regulations the Cup to be surrendered to the Trustees for disposition. In this case the Grand Falls team were the challengers. The St. John's team the Cup holders. It was arranged that four games be played at the grounds of

Citizen Defends Syrians

The Syrian people have almost all been forced out of their own country by the black hand of the Turkish Government and having come to this free British land to make their homes have invariably conducted themselves as decent law abiding citizens as much if not more than our own people have been. They are respected by the most of our own people. They have conducted their business in an up-to-date way as much as they possibly could. They are respectable members of the Church to which they belong and made their contribution in the great war by the sacrifice of the lives of some of their sons. They rallied with our own boys to the call of duty and did not shrink in doing their bit. The Syrians as a rule that live here have established a reputation for sobriety and integrity, and their morals are above reproach so there is no justification in bracketing them all in the same class as the exceptions who break the law, as some of our own people do. The liquor traffic under the law, and regulations of the Government would afford an endless topic for articles thereon, if the sheet I have mentioned desires to what the public appetite on such a subject, I am,

(Mr. Grace Standard, Aug. 25th.) On Friday last the S. O. E. members of the town held a big day in honor of the visit of the Supreme Grand President and Secretary who were visiting them, Bros. T. J. Russell and D. J. Proctor. The visitors were met at the station at 2 p.m. by District Deputy E. Simmons several past presidents officers and brethren. The Supreme officers were accompanied from St. John's by a goodly number of past presidents and officers of Dudley and Empire Lodges and Past District Deputies G. B. Lloyd and A. G. Williams. When the party detrained they were ushered into five motor cars kindly placed at their disposal by Messrs. F. C. Archibald, M.H.A., H. D. Archibald and Bros. W. S. Goodwin, A. L. Rodgers and D. Deputy E. Simmons, and driven to Le Drews Hotel. After luncheon the cars again assembled and took the party through the town and suburbs the beauties of which were greatly admired by our distinguished visitors and brethren, returning to the hotel at 6.30 p.m. At 8 p.m. a regular lodge meeting was opened when shortly afterwards the Supreme officers on an official visit were announced. P. W. Harris then retired and escorted the visitors to the lodge room when they were accorded the usual grand honors. The Supreme President delivered a very forceful address which was listened to with rapt attention by the assembly. He was followed by the Supreme Secretary who also delivered a fine speech dealing principally with figures and the standing of the S.O.E. generally. He then invited any criticisms and questions, and very readily answered all that were put in a most satisfactory manner. Past D. Deputies Lloyd and Williams D.D. E. Simmons and several visiting past presidents also made short speeches all dealing with the visit of the Supreme Lodge officers and the benefits likely to accrue therefrom.

After the meeting closed the whole assembly repaired to the Banquet Room below where a goodly repast was partaken of and the usual toast list followed. In response to the toast of the Supreme Lodge, S.F., T. J. Russell spoke feelingly of the pleasure of this trip to our island. He was greatly impressed with the serenity which was noticeable in the villages and hamlets passed through, contrasting it with the roar and bustle of city life so recently left behind. The Supreme Secretary followed and amongst other things said that the only real joy in travelling was the journey's end where such meetings and fraternal greetings, of which to-night's was a sample, fully compensated for any inconveniences met with on the road. In wishing us au revoir they hoped that ere long they or other members of Supreme Lodge would visit us again, a wish that was fully reciprocated. The banquet hall was tastefully decorated by our inimitable outside guard and the catering was done by a committee of brethren, second to none in that line of work. The singing of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem made a fitting close to a most pleasant and enjoyable evening.—COM.

Germany though Rich is Shamming Poverty.

Germany, far from being poor, is one of the richest countries in the world. Such is the rather startling statement made by a writer for the London Daily Mail, whose proprietor, Lord Northcliffe, was before his recent illness, in Germany investigating conditions with a view of telling the world the truth about that country. No matter that the mark is quoted lower and lower in Toronto papers. National wealth, the writer reminds one, does not consist of money which by itself is worth nothing, but of tangible property and goods, and it is increased by production. Now Germany has plenty of raw material within her own borders and it turning it into manufactured goods at a tremendous rate. Hence Germany's wealth.

FAR RICHER THAN FRANCE.
Germany is far richer than France, whose industrious peasants and bountiful crops used to amaze Canadian soldiers. All North Germany is a level plain, very fruitful and easily cultivable and it is opened up by a unique system of gently flowing deep rivers which can easily be connected, and only turbulent or "small" rivers. The principal wealth of nations is created nowadays in factories. Modern industry, as Canada and the United States keenly realize, depends on coal. Germany lost much coal by the peace terms, but in the Rhur Valley alone, she has about 200,000,000 tons of coal, twelve times as much as France and considerably more than the United Kingdom.

STRATEGIC TRADING POSITION.
For international commerce Germany has the best position in Europe. Russia, which formerly bought more from Germany than from any other nation, and is likely to become a tremendous market for German goods in the near future, is almost next door. Germany has 60 million of population while France has less than 40 million. Owing to her superiority in man power and natural resources, and therefore in production, Germany is undoubtedly twice as rich as France.

HUGE PROFITS IN CHEMICALS.
Germany's industries are extraordinarly prosperous, declares the investigator, but the profits are disguised as far as possible by "writing off" large sums. He cites the Badische Aniline and Soda Chemical Works whose gross profits in 1921 were 497 million marks, whereas its capital was only 400 million marks, and which, after writing off 145,528,245 marks managed to pay a dividend of 30 per cent. Its profits for 1922 can be imagined. And other great chemical industries show similar prosperity despite the fact that they are almost everywhere hampered by high tariffs, prohibitions and Government subsidies. Nevertheless between 1916 and 1921 their net profits have been increased eightfold. Some concerns even paid as high as 220 per cent. on their 1916 capitalization despite of huge sums written off.

BRITISH TAXES FOUR TIMES GERMANY'S.
We are told that Germany is crushed by taxation, but avers the writer, Germany's national revenue for the current year equals at the present rate of exchange $250,000,000 whereas Great Britain's is $1,000,000,000. In other words the people of Britain are paying four times the taxes paid by the people of Germany. Germany is eating good food drinking its full of excellent beer and wine wearing fine clothes, and lastly going in for every form of enjoyment to a far greater extent than it ever did in the palmiest days of the Kaiser. Germany is far from short of what she claims as her greatest shortage, by breeding live stock. The fact that the German masses are not poor, but usually well off is apparent to every visitor and to every reader of a German newspaper. Theatres, concerts, hotels and restaurants are overcrowded with well-dressed people. Even in out-of-the-way industrial towns where there are no visitors, all the pleasure resorts are crammed to their utmost capacity. Picture theatres are arising everywhere and producers are turning out films in which thousands of performers take part.

GAMBLING IS RIFE.
Horse racing meets have never been so numerous nor so well attended. Young Germany is taking to sports with energy. Spectators are luxuriously dressed, and carry Zeiss glasses, which sell for $50 a pair at the Canadian rate. German publishers are turning out sumptuous editions and novels which have unlimited sale. While beer drinking has declined, and the appetite for fine wines, champagne excepted, has increased, and much wine is imported. A veritable craze for sweetened liquors, chocolates and cigars has set in. Liqueur consumption has more than trebled. Never in German history have people been so well dressed, nor have they spent so much money on gambling and betting. Speculation in stocks and shares and exchange has become universal. The central streets of the town are becoming filled with small bankers and brokers, who serve the gambling mania and the business pages of newspapers are filled with advertisements for managers and clerks familiar with exchange and share business.

Keen Sportsmen.

COMING TO FISH FOR COD.
The following letter has been received by the Game and Inland Fisheries Board from a prominent citizen of the State of New York, whose name is for obvious reasons withheld.

"Game and Inland Fisheries Board, St. John's, Nfld.
Gentlemen.—The writer expects to be in St. John's, Newfoundland, the latter part of September, too late to enjoy your salmon fishing, but am writing to enquire if there are any facilities for codfishing off the coast, by hook and line, and if there are motor boats which make trips for this purpose. Do your laws restrict fishing off the coast, as outlined above, and are there any other inland fish for which there is no closed season?
Your advice will be appreciated.
Yours truly,

Beer With a Kick.

WOMAN FINED $100.
Charged with brewing hop beer over proof, a woman pleaded not guilty in the Police Court to-day. Accused had been warned a month previously but continuous complaints of drunks on and around her premises had caused samples of her brew to be taken. D. J. Davies, Government analyst, said the strength of the beer was the same as Bass' Ale. Accused pleaded for another chance, but as she had been warned before, a fine of $100 was imposed.

Salmon Plentiful.

MANY POACHERS CAUGHT.
Salmon have been very plentiful in the various rivers this year, as a result of the high water early in the season, which enabled the fish to get up to the pools. Poachers have been numerous, but thanks to the vigilance of the wardens, several have been caught and heavily fined. Cases of poaching have occurred at Curling, Glenwood, Botwood, Little River, and St. Mary's. The salmon are not taking readily to the fly this year, although there are such large numbers in the rivers.

Imitating Dempsey.

WANTED TO FIGHT WOMEN.
"He met me and my daughter on the main road, and stripping off his coat, challenged us to fight" said a woman from a nearby settlement, who was the plaintiff in a slander case heard before Judge Morris to-day. The "he" referred to was a big, strapping, young man of the same place. Plaintiff stated that defendant had thrown a stone and a stick at her and had called her by a variety of abusive names. Plaintiff stated that she was in bodily fear of defendant. The case was dismissed.

Championship Game.

SAINTS AND B.I.S. MEET TO-MORROW.
As the Highland games take place Wednesday, it has been decided to play the Saints-B.I.S. football game to-morrow evening. The championship may depend upon the result of this game, and there is a considerable amount of interest among fans, as a consequence. If the B.I.S. win, they are champions for the third successive year, thus winning the cup for keeps. If they draw, they play off with the Cadets for first place, while to lose would mean that the Cadets become champions. The largest attendance for the season is expected at this game.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

IRISH PATRIOT AT REST.
DUBLIN, Aug. 28.
Michael Collins was laid to rest on Monday in Glasnevin Cemetery, after a demonstration of national grief such as has been seldom seen in the long duration of Ireland's troubled history. Collins went to the grave amid the tears of a nation that worshipped him, personally, as a gallant young patriot who combined all those traits that Irishmen hold dear. It was a military funeral. Fellow officers who bore the body into the cathedral last night remaining on guard until this morning, when solemn Requiem High Mass was celebrated before a multitude that overflowed into the street. Sister Mary Celeste came from her convent in England to pray for her "baby brother" and beside her at the grave knelt Sean Collins, brother of the dead hero, who knelt near by.

QUEBEC, Aug. 28.

The wrecking steamer Lord Strathcona reached the scene that evening, and it is thought necessary to unload the stranded vessel before attempting to refloat her.

MORE TROUBLE IN NEAR EAST.

ATHENS, Aug. 28.
The expected offensive by Turkish Nationalists against Greek forces in Asia Minor appears to have begun, although extent of operations is not yet known. Kemalists hurled several divisions against Afium Karahissar, yesterday, in an attempt to break through the Greek front, but an official statement from Smyrna says they were repulsed. Information both from Greek and foreign sources indicates the excellent condition of the Greek Army.

Peps, Peeps or Pep-is.

In the London Chronicle of recent date, appears the following verse by Ashly Sterry, which deals with the pronunciation of the name "Peps". There are people, I'm told—some say there are heaps—Who speak of the talkative Samuel as "Peeps"; And some so precise and pedantic their step is, Who call the delightful old diarist "Pep-is". But those I think right, and I follow their steps, Ever mention the garrulous Gossip as "Peps".

A HOT DAY.—To-day was one of the hottest for the season, the thermometer registering over 85 degrees in the shade. Work was done in the greatest discomfort as the heat was very sticky. If it were not for the slight breeze which prevailed, the temperature would have been intolerable.

Household Notes.

To make quick chocolate caramel, melt three square chocolates in a pan, add three-fourths cup of butter, 1 1/2 pounds brown sugar and a fourth cup red label Karo. Stir, and cook until rosey. Add a cup chopped nuts, and pour into two bread pans. Cut into cubes when nearly cold.

With the vinegar to be used for salad dressing cover a kernel of garlic. Put this into a closed jar, and when making dressing use a teaspoon of this. It gives a delicious flavor to the salad.

After dishwashing rub lemon over the hands before drying them. Allow juice to remain on hands for several minutes, then rinse off in clear water, dry hands, and then use a greaseless hand lotion.

When you are planning a picnic, lunch or motor trip, try packing individual lunch boxes. Everyone's taste can be considered, and a great deal of unnecessary passing and unpacking is avoided.

To make an excellent horseradish sauce peel one round horseradish and grate. After measuring grated root, beat into an equal quantity of heavy cream beaten stiff. Add salt and pepper, and serve cold with hot fish.

Rich cakes of small size should be put into a hot oven and the temperature gradually decreased. Larger cakes, made with a good deal of flour, are best if put into a cold or cool oven and the temperature gradually increased.

If anything on a cooking range boils over and smokes, open all the windows and lift one plate from the pan to allow the smoke to be drawn up the chimney. A little vinegar put on to boil will destroy any lingering disagreeable odor.

Butterscotch sauce for ice cream is made by cooking together in a double boiler a cup of sugar, a cup of dark corn syrup and a cup of cream. Stir well together and cook for an hour; then heat in two spoonsful butter and a little vanilla.

A treat for the lover of spice cakes is marshmallow gingerbread. After taking a loaf gingerbread from the pan halve and place it between the halves cut marshmallow. Put back into the oven until the marshmallows are puffy; then serve hot with whipped cream.

Do not discard the cornet which is made with strong elastic webbing. Cut out webbing, wash with soap and soft brush, and use to replace the worn elastic in old brassieres.

Fruits can almost always be canned satisfactorily by cooking in the open kettle, but vegetables keep much better if put into jars first, then sealed and sterilized.

A well-balanced and delicious luncheon for a cool day is creamed tuna fish, baked potatoes, currant puns, canned peas, with whipped cream and chocolate.

To make sour cream cakes beat two eggs well, add one cup sugar and a cup sour cream. Mix and sift one-eighth teaspoon salt, one and a half cups flour, one-quarter teaspoon soda and one and a half teaspoons baking powder. Add to first mixture and flavor with vanilla. Bake in well-greased muffin tin in moderate oven.

To bake a picnic ham soak it overnight first in cold water. Then put in to fresh water and boil until nearly tender, allowing to cool in water in which it was boiled. Take it out and roll in a mixture of breadcrumbs and brown sugar, and stick whole cloves into it. Bake in a dripping-pan with a little water in pan, and baste often with sweet vinegar drained from watermelon pickles.

Football Reminiscences.

By ONLOOKER.

11TH LEAGUE MATCH. Stars B.S.—Result: Star 3; B.S. 1. Played on Nevelly Grounds, July 6th, 1898.

The attendance at last night's game was not so large as usual, no doubt due to it being the eve of the general election and to the prevailing idea that it would be simply a walk-over for the Star team. At 6:40 p.m. the teams lined up as follows:—

Star—Goal: Gault; backs: Ryan, English, half backs: Vintcombe, Coward, forwards: Brophy, Brownrigg, Edson, Marshall, Collins. B.S.—Goal: T. O'Neill; backs: Hall, McLoonlin; half backs: Donnell, Conolly, Crotty; forwards: McHiggins, O'Mara, Jordan, Tobin.

The B.S. defended the Eastern line in the first half, having an uphill task at the start against their powerful opponents, and also a disliking in their eyes. On form the Stars would have rushed matters having everything in their favor, the game for this half was slow and uninteresting, the kicking being wild, without the slightest attempt at short passes, the ball being as often "out of play" as it was inside the touch line.

A fruitless struggle for the Star ten minutes after the start, and one for the B.S. five minutes after (during which O'Neill had a try out shot high) were the only items of note till after 25 minutes play, from some hustling in front of goal, Brownrigg shot right into the goalkeeper's hands, the referee deciding that the ball was over the goal line. A corner also fell to the Star, which came to nothing; but they continued to press, O'Neill saving in excellent form till half time, the teams meeting with the score one—nothing in favor of the Star. On resuming, the Star rushed, the pace getting a little faster, but the strong defence of the B.S. kept the game pretty close for some 12 minutes, when the forwards, who were faster on the ball than their opponents, brought the game up field, and although the goal was partially cleared, Condon (who found the net—score 2, for the Star). Within three minutes after Brownrigg shot a third, and it now seemed as if we were to be treated to the procession to the B.S. goal.

In the surprise of everyone, the B.S. now woke up, and for the balance of time, had, if anything, the balance of the exchange, this being the only period that Gaul had to exert himself. After two of three ineffectual attempts, O'Mara at length landed the ball safely in the net amidst cheers for the B.S. The whistle sounded the Stars second League victory by 3 goals to 1. Referee: F. Leonard; linesman: F. H. Donnell (C.C.C.).

NOTES ON THE GAME. It was not by any means a brilliant game and very little enthusiasm or excitement prevailed among the spectators (Reserved Seats) on the fence. The Star team did not include Ned Power, otherwise it was the same as defeated the cup holders, whilst the B.S. played two forwards in the front rank viz.—Higgins and O'Mara. The Irishmen are therefore to be congratulated on the showing they made against the "shining lights" of the season.

We cannot congratulate the Star on last night's play, combination being sadly lacking, and an improvement will have to be made to carry them through the season. Amongst the forwards, Condon (Capt.) and Brownrigg excelled, whilst of the wing players we preferred Brophy to Collins, the latter being erratic in shooting, and we think he would do better as an inside left. Vintcombe is a hustler but should not leave his position so much. The backs were very reliable, but we have seen English in better form.

For the losers all played well for a supposed weak team) and believe will yet give a good account of themselves. We must single out O'Mara in the front line who played a grand game, and we have no hesitation in saying that Frank Conolly was the best half back on the ground on last night's play.

The backs, Hall and McLoonlin, played a rattling game, but held back too much on the goal. According to our idea of the game, O'Neill made a capital goal keeper, and we must congratulate him on his first appearance in the position. Altogether, the game was value for about a goal to 1, play being pretty evenly divided, and then there was that little uncertainty about that first goal.

Household Notes.

Broiled scrod.—Split back and remove backbone from a cod or haddock broil over a hot fire in a well-oiled wire broiler. Spread with the following mixture: One-fourth cup creamed butter mixed with half teaspoonful of salt, dash of pepper and a half tablespoonful finely chopped parsley. If berries have come from a dusty store, first look them over, hulling them as you look, and place in a colander. Wash hot water over them twice, allowing all berries to become washed. Finish with cold water, drain and turn into a cold, dry dish, and place in refrigerator until used.

Make potato rosettes for a change: Add two tablespoonfuls to a pint of hot sliced potatoes, then a half teaspoonful salt, the beaten yolks of two eggs and enough hot milk to allow mixture to pass through pastry bag. Shape rosettes on a buttered tin pan, and bake in hot oven until nicely browned.

The Origin of Cricket.

How did the game of cricket originate? It does not seem to have existed previous to the reign of Queen Elizabeth; if it did, then there are no traces of it in any shape or form. Nearly all other forms of ball-play were practised by the ancients. The pastime evidently had its origin in "rounders" and "stool-ball," and a mild form of to-day's game was fashionable amongst boys in the sixteenth century.

In those days it was not scientifically played, and pitches were not so smooth as a billiard-table. Indeed, they were often diversified by saw pits. And the bat was crooked. Slowly, but very surely, the game became popular, and a Lord Chesterfield advised boys to excel in cricket. It was one of the first public schools to take it up. At this period rangers were employed, and stood at the wickets just as they do nowadays, but the scores were kept by cutting notches in tally-boards. The ball had heavy cross-seams, and the bats were so curved that it was impossible to avoid hitting skiers every time. Most of the fiddlers stood square-leg, in Indian file.

Cricket was complained of by some writers, who did not think it right that butchers and baronets should play together; further, they thought it led to a lot of idleness.

Then there was a good deal of betting in this pitiful period of history, some varying from £600 to £1,000 being laid on a match.

The first county match took place in 1711, when Kent played England. Money was lost and won, and a lawsuit resulted. Cricket laws were first made at the "Star and Garter," Pall Mall, and one was to the effect that, the pitching of the first wicket was to be determined by the tossing of a piece of money. The ground was chosen where the balls would shoot best. The "no-ball" of that time was the same as a "no-ball" of to-day. Generally speaking the ancient game slowly resembled the modern game, excepting that "the other players" may place his body anywhere within the swing of his bat, so as to hinder the bowler from catching him, but he must neither strike at nor touch he with his hands.

An individual named Brett was, about the year 1780, the fastest and straightest bowler in England. He is described as "tremendous." A certain Lambert was the first to discover how to break a ball, and his deliveries are referred to as "teasing and deceitful." Neighbouring county cricketers cursed him.

But Lillywhite and Broadbridge, who were bright, particular stars about 1790, were the parents of modern trundling. They were the first to indulge in straight-arm bowling.

The modern style of forward play was introduced about the year 1850, and came into use on account of quick deliveries rising to a dangerous height.

Eyes and overthrows did not find a place in correct cricket until much later, and by most players the innovation was not appreciated at first.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

ALL THAT SHE ASKS. A bit of the praise which once she heard. And a bit of your patience, too! All that she asks is a kindly word. When your love was fresh and new, A fond caress when you came at night, And her eyes will gleam with the old delight.

It is man who fashions a woman's life. Shapes it, happy or sad, And we learn of the husband from the wife. Know him for good or bad, For her face is an open book which gives.

The world the tale of the life she lives. Day by day in the house she stays, Keeping the home for him; With the work to do and the babes to raise.

While the cham of her youth grows dim, But all that she asks from the man is this: A kindly word and the evening kiss. Oh, you smiling and churlish men, Sudden and quick to rage, Changing the home to a tiger den.

Is this good wife's wage? Why not give her the joys of life and make her happy to be your wife? It isn't the money you make or spend, Or the great deeds you may do, On which the charms of her life depend.

Her happiness lies with you, And all she asks through the years is this: Your kindly thought and your evening kiss.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

THOUSANDS PAY LAST RESPECTS TO MURDERED LEADER. DUBLIN, AUG. 27.

With imposing military honors, the body of Michael Collins, Ireland's warrior statesman, was placed on a Catafalque before the main Altar of the great Cathedral. Here, tomorrow morning solemn Requiem Mass will be celebrated for the repose of his soul. Sunday's total suspension of civic activities permitted people to render, unrestrictedly, the homage they so wished to render the memory of a beloved leader. Not from Metropolitan alone, but from country districts nearby, they streamed to the City Hall, where the body laid in countless thousands, to gaze upon the features of the man to whom, more than anyone else, the people looked for a peaceful settlement of Ireland's woes. They came by train, donkey-cart, jaunting car and on foot. The war of hate and ambush goes on, with ambushes and snipings, where innocent civilians, innocent women are wounded and some killed. The main fighting is over, but a sudden attack on Bantry, South East of Cork, on Friday, by Rebels, shows the revolution still in progress and Richard Mulcahy the new Commander-in-chief, has much to do before it can be said that peace and order are restored throughout the land.

L. G. TO WRITE A BOOK. LONDON, AUG. 27.

Premier Lloyd George has made known that all the proceeds of his forthcoming book will be devoted to charity. There has been much criticism in certain sections of the press over the propriety of the head of the Cabinet writing in book form memoirs containing official information, while still in an official position, and making money thereby. In reply Mr. Lloyd George authorized the following statement: "There have been a large number of articles, pamphlets and books published from time to time, containing criticisms of my conduct in certain sections of the war, some of which were obviously partisan reasons, and promulgated by parties hostile to the Government. These publications contain distortions of fact, calculated to mislead the public." The Prime Minister feels impelled, therefore, to publish at the earliest moment his account of the great struggle. The Prime Minister also feels unable to take any personal advantage out of the story of the struggle and of the suffering nation during the great war, and intends the whole profits of the book shall be devoted to charity connected with relief of the suffering caused by the war.

The Big Ten Mile. (By A. J.) There are many runners practicing for the big ten mile and Telegram cup, including the Halifax champion Jack Bell. Meanwhile there are a few runners who are active to keep onto Bell in the running this time. Jack Kavanagh is getting in trim, and Harrison Hill can hold the big champion pretty close. So can Thorburn Taylor and Pat Dunphy is getting right into Bell's stride for the ten mile. Sullivan, Wall and Ring will likely enter, while Marshall, Batley and Hickey are out for something. There is a man from the hill who is nearly as fast as Mr. James, the one mile record holder of a few years ago. He is taking long runs nightly. His stride is something of a dog trot, but he is as quick as "Sweet Echo" or "Howard Mann," and can hold onto Bell just as easy as Jack Kavanagh can. He is a short man, about Dave Maynard's style and only carries 97 pounds in weight. Ron O'Toole is now able to run the ten miles, and will surely have to be reckoned with for the Telegram cup. Ron is the local five mile champion. He is about five foot three inches in height. A short champion, yet not the only one in Newfoundland. We have James Maynard, Kavanagh, Green, Skirving, Hooker, Phelan and others in running. In skating we have Chislett and Donnelly, none of which reached five foot four. So a short man need never despair of becoming a champion either in running or skating. Your quickness supplies what you want in your size.

Rescued from Drowning. SWIMMING INSTRUCTOR AVERTS TRAGEDY. Swimming Instructor Hickey of Long Pond has yet another life to his credit. Yesterday afternoon a boy named Kavanagh was swimming out of his depth when he was seized with a cramp. His companions hurried to his rescue, and Hickey, who was standing on the bank, also plunged in and succeeded in bringing the drowning lad ashore. Artificial respiration was applied, and Dr. Anderson, who had been summoned, succeeded in bringing Kavanagh back to consciousness. He had fully recovered last night. Hickey has rendered valuable service since his appointment as Swimming Instructor at Long Pond.

How to Play Lawn Tennis.

FOREHAND and BACKHAND DRIVING.

By S. POWELL BLACKMORE

(Author of "Lawn Tennis Up-to-date" in Cassell's Magazine.)

In the previous article we traversed many of the elementary rules which are generally recognized and accepted by the good-class player as almost inseparable from effective stroke play of the ground. Thus we made some little study of the value of the correct footwork in lawn tennis, and advantages of a full swing of the racket and the imperative necessity of accurately timing the actual hit. Here, therefore, we may usefully proceed to a scrutiny of the methods of the world's champions; we may attempt to penetrate the secrets which govern their wonderful speed and stroke, and maybe we shall see how far any average player can improve his game by earnest endeavour to follow in their footsteps.

Every ambitious player must strive hard to attain some measure of skill in driving the tennis ball off the ground. He should cultivate a fast drive and must become as confident in handling the back-hand drive as he feels sure of the fore-hand ball.

Given a good playing surface the young player, if he displays dogged persistency and will concentrate upon every stroke, can acquire a hard, accurate drive in three or four years. A few years ago I should have been held up to general ridicule for such a statement. To-day, however, the modern youngsters, and more especially the Continental boys and girls, are demonstrating daily that, given the necessary pluck, this promise is liberally true. The old school's teaching said: "Learn to get the ball over the net; perhaps the other fellows will miss it." The up-to-date youngster says: "Smite the ball hard; hustle your opponent every time." So, before the war, we believed that the acquisition of a drive meant ten years' hard work and a rich father; to-day we know of a score of young Continental players who, by hitting hard and always, can now produce first-class drives and tremendous punch with only three or four years' spare-time practice—and no private means.

The plain fact of the matter is that lawn tennis in other countries is speeding up tremendously every year, and English players are not keeping step with this advance. We are still relying upon the methods and the moods which produced our types of steady base-line players, and in consequence, England is now lagging far behind in the international struggle for supremacy on the courts. Sometimes I wonder whether modern tennis has not gone beyond us; whether as a race we have the suade you that super-tight stringing is a tad. Quote him William Johnston: "I go for a racket with thin gut and one as tightly strung as I can get it done. Tight stringing is essential to make the fastest returns."

Let us analyze Johnston's epoch-making forehand drive. First we may watch his footwork—he is lithe and quick as a bantam-weight boxer in the ring—it is one outward manifestation of an alert mind. Often we see him in an expectant, crouching attitude, ready to spring into the sideways position at a moment's warning. Suppleness, too, is the keynote of his racket work. The racket swings easily in the hand; obviously it is only lightly held by the fingers. Then comes the moment for the drive. In a fraction of a second he is round into the sideways position, feet planted wide apart, knees bent, left shoulder pointing well towards the net. Simultaneously, with a loose, supple movement, the racket is swung far back horizontally, and there it is poised for a moment. Then as the ball comes up from the ground and reaches waist height Johnston with a full, loose swing brings the racket horizontally sweeping forwards on to the ball at the top of the bound, and as he does so he throws all his weight forward into the actual hit. "I strike the ball," says Johnston, "when it reaches a point slightly behind my left foot." And the point where the ball is actually struck is of vital importance—an inch makes all the difference to the success of the drive.

Finally, he declares, the secret of the power he gets into his forehand shot lies in the transference of body weight at the moment of hitting the ball; it is due to the fact that nearly his whole weight is behind the stroke. "At the moment of striking the ball I am throwing my weight from the right to the left foot." In this stroke the racket arm swings back bent at the elbow; the one thing to strive for is, suppleness. Then, in the swing forward, the elbow straightens at the moment of impact and the driving power comes almost wholly from the shoulder. On no account should the follow-through be consciously checked; the racket should, in the cross-court drive, finish well behind the right arm. In all the main essentials of this drive, especially as regards his warning against tightly gripping the racket—for that produces a stiffish ungainly swing—Andre Gobert offers very similar advice to William Johnston. Finally, keep well away from the ball sideways, but get on to the ball quickly once it has bounced. First learn to hit at the top of the bound, later when more proficient cultivate the drive off a rising ball. (To be Continued.)

Remarkable Feature at The Nickel To-night.

BEAUTIFUL CLOTHES DISPLAYED IN "THE OTHER WOMAN."

One of the most successful artists upon the silver-sheet to-day is Jane Novak, an important member of the all-star cast of "The Other Woman," the newest J. L. Frothingham Production. Hodkinson released, which is at the Nickel Theatre to-night. Miss Novak is a radiant beautiful blonde, possessed of the histrionic ability to a rare degree, and has been seen in many successful picture productions in the past which called for the displaying of all her infinite talent. She is perhaps best remembered for her splendid work in support of William S. Hart in such pictures as "The Tiger Man," "Selfish Yates," and "Wagon Tracks," and she also registered most successfully in Marshall Neilan's production "The River's End." Not only as an emotional artist of rare ability is Miss Novak famous, but she has won for herself the reputation of being one of the best-dressed girls on the screen. She is never garish nor loud in her costumes, manages to impress one with her absolute knowledge of "how to dress." While most of her past pictures have given her but little opportunity of displaying beautiful clothes, the role which is hers in "The Other Woman" permits of the wearing of many charming frocks, an opportunity of which Miss Novak has taken the fullest advantage, and as a result a rare treat is promised the feminine patrons of the Nickel Theatre when Miss Novak and her co-workers brighten the screen here to-night and to-morrow night.

Is Leaving Country.

Mr. M. Nikosey, Auctioneer, informs us to-day that it is his intention to sell by auction all his goods and property in St. John's and leave this country for good and all. Mr. Nikosey, like many other respectable Syrians in St. John's deeply resents the attack that has been made upon him by a city weekly paper and feels that in the face of such persecution it is impossible for him to continue to do business here any longer. He has been in this country for 24 years and considers himself a Newfoundlander, having worked up a respectable business and brought up his children here. His goods valued at about $8,000 will be put up at auction, the sale continuing every afternoon and evening. After disposing of his goods, he will sell his house on the Higher Levels; his furniture and all other holdings and no reasonable price will be refused. In taking leave of this country, Mr. Nikosey is thankful to God and to Newfoundland that he is taking with him a good family that he has reared here, and before his departure he will tell the whole story of his 24 years sojourn here and the story of his ten years on Bell Island and the reason why he left the Island. He feels that unjust comment has grievously hurt his character and the characters of his fellow countrymen here and thinks it hardly fair that because there is one black sheep in a flock, the whole flock should thereby be condemned. No one should miss the sale that is to be held, as everything will be sacrificed.—adv.

Wedding Bells.

FORWARD-FRENCH.

At the home of Mrs. N. Forward, Carbonar, a quiet but pretty wedding took place at 4 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon 23rd inst., when Miss Annie E. Forward of Carbonar and Mr. W. French, son of Mr. Robert French of Harbor Grace were united in hymens bonds. Rev. W.B. Bugden officiating. To the strains of the wedding march which was played by Miss May Noseworthy the bride entered the room leaning on the arm of Mr. Robert Fraize, who performed the duties of father giver. The bride was prettily attired in a dress of navy blue with hat to match. Miss C. V. Forward of Carbonar, acted as bridesmaid and the groom was ably supported by Mr. Warren Goodwin, of Harbor Grace. After supper was served, when the usual toasts were engaged in, and the health of the bride and groom duly honored, the happy couple motored to Bay Roberts, where the honeymoon was spent. The bride was the recipient of many presents, the groom's gift being a cheque. It is the sincere wish of their many friends that happiness will be theirs, as they voyage along over the Matrimonial Sea.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)
Codfish—The exports this week totalled 18,504 quintals, chiefly new fish, as follows:—

From Outports: By schooner G. A. Wood 4,556 qtls. from W. & T. Hollett, Burin to Oporto; by schooner Edward Roy from J. O'Brien, Curling to Halifax; by schooners Enid B. Legge from the Burgeo and La Poile Export Co. and T. Moulton, Burgeo, 6,149 qtls. to Oporto; by schooner H. H. McIntosh 200 qtls. from Farquhar & Co. to Halifax, and by schooner Edith M. Cavell 4,321 qtls. to Oporto from Penny & Sons, Ramona.

From St. John's: By S.S. Bothna 1283 qtls. to Spain; by S.S. Rosalind 628 qtls. to West Indies, via New York from Messrs. Job Bros., Harvey & Co., C. F. Bennett, Jas. Baird and the Kennedy Co. The Portuguese exchange is in a poorer condition, and it seems impossible to make outright sales and full cash payment for cargoes. The stocks of Newfoundland fish for the week were 25,455 quintals with 5,257 quintals for the week's consumption. New fish is coming in fairly plentiful in carts from the nearby outports to the city and in schooners from the more distant ports along the coast. The price generally is $6.00 talqual and $6.50, with West India and damp thrown out. The outports are reported to be holding out for $7.00 a quintal.

Codfish—There is an absence of any new development in the codfish market. Fishermen are not yet disposed to purchase their requirements ahead preferring to take their chances. At the present prices, supplies are generally light and until we see increased offerings it is impossible to form any opinion of how the market will go. At the present time the demand is steady for all that is obtainable in the local market at $11.19 for good lots. The exports this week were 37,846 gallons.

Cod Liver Oil—Great expectations are entertained by all local dealers from the investigations now being made by the scientists sent out by the British Government. It is too early to give any definite information, but from facts that have been heard from those intimately connected with Dr. Zilva and Mr. Graham they have expressed their amazement at the wonderful and unique conditions in Newfoundland that adapt themselves to fishery life on our coast. They have seen nothing elsewhere to compare with it and are impressed accordingly. With such environments they forecast that our fish and livers must be of exceptional quality. The exports this week were 4816 gallons to Liverpool.

Lobsters—The lobsters put up in patent cans this season, about 75 per cent. of the pack, have turned out exceptionally well. Importers in Great Britain are asking that all lobsters in future be sent them put up in patent cans. The fishery ended on August 12, and is reckoned to be about 9000 cases. Three-fourths of the catch is exported. The opinion amongst retailers this week is that the price will decline now that the big orders are all filled. There will be no fall fishing this year.

Flour—The decline in wheat is not so strongly in evidence this week as last. The September quotation hovers around 102% since Wednesday. Pending the information of the proposed Canadian Wheat Board wheat transactions have been next to a standstill at Winnipeg, while the United States has taken advantage of the situation and unloaded fifty million bushels. The quotations are still $9.25 for Windsor Patent, etc., but four for October delivery will be lower. Imports this week were 12,074 barrels.

Pork—The U.S. Pork market is fairly active this week at steady prices. In Chicago the small supplies of export barreled pork have caused firmer prices. This is regarded as merely temporary, as the hogs which are in more than average supply and with the large corn crop in sight, there is not likely to be any advance in the pork prices that rule here at present, viz: $29 for Fat Back and clear; $31.50 Ham Butt; $39 Family Mess, and $24 Spare Ribs. The imports this week were 895 barrels by the Canadian Sapper.

Beef—The imports this week were 210 barrels by the S.S. Rosalind and Sable I. The local market is still unchanged and the easy prices that prevailed all the season still prevail. Bos. Flank $22; Extra Family $21; Family Special $18; N. J. Boneless $17, and Morris' Boneless $16.50. There has set in a heavier exportation of cattle to Europe this week from both Canada and the States, which may have the effect of stiffening the prices shortly. The S.S. Silvia brought in 327 barrels this week.

Molasses—The schooner "Isabel Moore" arrived from Barbados this week to A. E. Hickman & Co. with 326 puncheons, 33 barrels and 56 half barrels of molasses, which makes the total receipts of St. John's since the season opened about 9,200 puncheons. Practically all the Choice has been sold in Barbados and there is very little of Fancy left. The R. J. Dale arrived also with 238 puncheons. Donald H. will likely bring a cargo from Barbados this month. The price of Fancy is still 80 cents in the local market, and some importers are asking 75 cents for Choice as against 70 per gallon wholesale last week.

Sugar—Refined sugar continues firm owing chiefly to the demand from Europe. Heavy consignments of both raw and refined have been going forward the past month which stabilized the market in the United States, where a further advance is expected. The fact raw sugar is now half a cent dearer than it was last week. The local quotation for American White Granulated is $11.75 per 100 lbs. The imports this week are 600 barrels, 475 sacks, and 325 cases.

Potatoes—This week 380 barrels and 30 sacks were imported by the S.S. "Rosalind" new Nova Scotia potatoes. The local crop is turning out well, and with a continuance of favorable weather farmers expect good results. Sales to householders are being made in half and quarter barrels at $1.80 and $1.00 respectively. The local price in the stores is 15 to 20 cents a gallon. Imported potatoes are selling at $3.50 to $4.00 per barrel. Local grown will supply the market generally from now till November.

Hay—Although the hay crop in Canada has been a large one, the prospects of a renewal of a brisk export trade to the United States is causing a halt in the expected decline in price. Three years ago the United States relieved Canada of most of its surplus hay at $38 to $40 a ton. Something like this is again anticipated to absorb the extra crop of new "Timothy." Meanwhile sales are going on this week in Montreal at $20 per ton for No. 2 and $18 for No. 3. The prices of old Timothy are holding at $28 and $23. Local prices are still $40 per ton and $2 per hundredweight for new. The S.S. Manoa brought in 150 bales and the Canadian Sapper 67 bales this week.

The Heligoland Sea Fight.

The naval action off Heligoland on August 28, 1914 was the first sea battle in the Great War. British submarines reported to our Admiralty that the main German fleet was in several ports on the Heligoland Bight, having left five or six cruisers and a dozen destroyers on guard twenty miles out. The Admiralty then made plans to destroy this little lot before the German fleet could come to their assistance, especially as at low tide the larger German ships could not get out of port. At first our Admiralty only proposed to send two battle cruisers and a number of destroyers and submarines, but at the urgent request of Lord Jellicoe they, at the last minute, ordered Sir D. Beatty's battle cruisers and Commodore Goodenough's light cruisers to act in support. The Germans discovered through their wireless that something was going to happen and reinforced their cruisers. On the morning of August 28, Commodore Tyrwhitt, with two light cruisers, 33 destroyers and eight submarines, attacked the German flotilla and was himself attacked by the German cruisers "Hela," "Stettin," "Frauenlob" and "Arfadne." His ship, the "Arctura," was struck 25 times and much damaged. Commodore Goodenough's light cruisers then came up and joined in the fight, and the Germans added the "Strassburg," "Stralsund," "Mains" and "Cohn." The battle now became general and the British were hard pressed when the scale was turned by the arrival of Sir D. Beatty's squadron, the "Lion," "Queen Mary," "Princess Royal," "Invincible" and "New Zealand." These came on at full speed, and, opening a terrific fire as they came within range, destroyed in turn the "Mains," "Arfadne" and "Cohn." The British rescued most of the crew of the "Mains" and the Germans most of the "Arfadne's" crew. The total German loss was three big ships and more than a thousand men. The British loss was 31 killed and 52 wounded, and one ship damaged. An authority at the time said that if the German navy had come out and fought instead of staying in port, it is probable the war would have been much shortened.
