The Times on the Panic. Europeans Murdered. New York Yacht Races. Billiards. Evangelical Union. Indian Depredations.

London, Oct. 3.—The Times this morning, in an editorial retrospect of the late American financial panic says: The recklessness lately characterizing the management of some of the greatest undertakings in America have induced chronic nervousness, momentarily liable to become acute. Even Americans, says the Times, are not all smart men or daring speculators. The Times thinks the danger has disappeared for the present, but political and financial causes are liable to reproduce it at any time. The country with an immense field for enterprise and comparatively limited capital is always liable to panics. The improvements made in Western communications are most useful and profitable but may cause further trouble. The entire blame of the disaster rests up on the unsound monetary system of the country.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Advices from Africa announce the capture of a white man by the natives, while proceeding westward on Congo River. From the description of the man Mr. Charles Livingstone believes it is his son.

Late advices from Paraguay show that the privations of the English colonists continue, and there is great dissatisfaction.

Despatches to the Daily Telegraph from Balkh, Central Asia, reports a severe defeat of Afghans by Persians.

Two Europeans named Piquette and Rivas, supposed to be Swiss travellers, have been murdered by the natives in Central Asia.

There is reason to believe that the Afghans desire the conquest and annexation of Bokhara. The rebellion has broken out at Kohan.

Galveston, Texas, Oct. 2.—The town of Lampasas was inundated on Saturday last. The water was so swift that some 20 houses were carried away and six persons drowned.

New York, Oct. 2.—The autumn regatta of the New York Club came off today. The following started:—Schooners—Atlanta, Alarm, Eva, Clia and Peerless. Sloops—Vision, Vizen, Ariadne, Vindex and Westwind. Vizen was first round the buoy, followed by Peerless, Vision, Vindex, Clia, Ariadne, Westwind, Eva and Alarm in the order of their names. The run home was so close as to render victory doubtful up to the last moment. Eva came in first, winning the schooner cup. Time 7 hours 17 min. 21 sec. Vision second.

A match game of billiards between Garnier and Daly for the champion cue, 1,500 points, was played at Tammany Hall to-night. Garnier won in the 47th inning, Daly's score standing 1,224. Garnier refused the cue when Daly was challenged by Cyrille Dion.

In the Evangelical Alliance to-day, Rev. Dr. Stoughton, of London, said they came not to settle any Ecclesiastical question or propound any dogma, but merely to meet to express their views on religious matters.

Dr. Fisch, of Paris, said his reception was so kind he almost felt he was in Heaven.

Rev. S. Coulon, of Geneva, was happy to come to this classic land of religious liberty.

Denver, Oct. 2.—There is intense excitement among settlers and stock-men in Arkansas Valley, south of Pueblo, on account of depredations committed by roving bands of Cheyenne Indians, who have already wantonly killed several hundred head of cattle. The Indians will be severely punished if they can be overtaken.

Hamilton Central Fair. The Exhibition came to a close on Thursday afternoon. The day was very fine, like its predecessors, but the number of visitors did not exceed three thousand. The Treasurer stated that the number of tickets sold on Wednesday was about fifteen thousand, but after counting the receipts it appeared that estimate was too high by about three thousand.

In looking through the prize list, we observed that for the best 40 pounds of butter, packed in firkins for exportation, the first prize, a cabinet case sewing machine, presented by the Gardner Sewing Company, Hamilton, value $50, has been awarded to Mr. Donald Clarke, Puslinch; the second prize, a Saratoga trunk given by Mr. James Phelps, Hamilton, value $25, being taken by Mrs. McDougall, of East Flamboro'.

A noticeable circumstance has been the presence, during the Exhibition, of a young man belonging to one of the Good Templar Lodges of the city, who supplies every one who wished it with a drink of syrup and water, without charge.

POLICE COURT. (Before the Mayor.) Oct. 3. Elephant Henry was charged with retailing fish around town before 3 o'clock, contrary to by-law. Fined $1 and costs. John Allan was charged with being drunk on Wyndham-street yesterday. Being his first offence, the case was dismissed.

Interesting Marriage Ceremony.

Last Thursday evening the Wesleyan Church presented a lively appearance. From seven o'clock the various streets leading to the church were thronged with a hurrying, eager crowd—young and old, rich and poor—each seemingly determined to be there first, as though nothing could be done until he or she was there. The event that seemed so mightily engross the public mind was the announcement that had gone abroad that Miss Minnie Stevenson, daughter of William Stevenson, Esq., of Maple Bank, Guelph, and Mr. Charles McGill, teller of the Ontario Bank here, were to be married in the church. By half-past seven o'clock, the hour at which the service was to be performed, the spacious church was literally crammed, a large number having to content themselves with standing room. The bride has been a resident of Guelph from her infancy, and was highly esteemed; while Mr. McGill, although not residing here for so long a period, has made many friends. These facts, coupled with the other fact that a wedding, among all classes and in almost every country, has ever been an important event, naturally enough had the effect of drawing a full house, more especially as the wedding took place in the church and was free to all. About eight o'clock the bridegroom, accompanied by his three groomsmen, entered the church, and walked up the left aisle to the altar. A few minutes later, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered by the right aisle, and was followed by her three bridesmaids. The bride's party took their stand to the left of the bridegroom, and the Rev. I. B. Howard, pastor of the church, proceeded with the beautiful service, in the most solemn and impressive manner. The train were pronounced on a magnificent scale had been made for the reception of the bridal party and guests. The residence was brilliantly lighted, and the verandah had been enclosed with damask, forming a beautiful promenade for those who wished to indulge in it. About 10 o'clock the party repaired to the dining-room, in which were two large tables, capable of accommodating some 34 persons. The repast spread upon them was of the most recherche description, both the substantial and the numerous "delicate trifles" of a well-appointed wedding supper being there in profusion. A great attraction of the evening, to the ladies especially, was of course the room in which the bride's presents were displayed. These were numerous, appropriate and valuable, consisting of a silver tea service of four pieces and silver; fruit salver, a magnificent piece of jewelry, plated bracelet cooler with knife; three plated crest stands, for preserves, pickles and condiments respectively; plated silver pitcher; salt crust and spoons, in mahogany case; very handsome egg cruet, with 6 cups and 6 spoons; six plated fruit and cake baskets; set of jewelry, including bracelets; silver fish carvers; sets of ivory-handled dinner and tea knives, with carvers; two stained glass vases with pendants; two toilet sets; two sets of vases, one marble; music rack; two card cases; magnificent lady's dressing case, covered in fine pictures, and an Osborn sewing machine with marble top. Prominent amongst the presents were three copies of the Holy Scriptures—two exceedingly handsome church bibles, and one large family bible, with gilt edges and profusely and beautifully illustrated. About 12 o'clock the bride and bridegroom left in a carriage for Galt, where they intended taking the train for Hamilton, whence they will proceed on a trip east. About one o'clock the party broke up, all apparently highly delighted with their visit to Maple Bank.

An inquest was held in Toronto on Thursday on the body of Mary Ann Wilson, who, it is alleged, died from the effects of an abortion produced. The investigation is the result of her death-bed confession. A young man named Villiers, charged with being an accessory, is under arrest. Deceased had been in the service of Mrs. John Kay, 284 Wellington-st., as housemaid for four years, and Mrs. Kay said she was a very good girl indeed. She had told Mrs. Kay that a man named "Bob Villiers," who worked at Notman & Fraser's, photographers, had seduced her under a promise of marriage. Deceased further said that Villiers was about getting married to another woman, and she previously seduced two other girls, both of whom had died. The doctor advised Mrs. Kay to send deceased to the hospital, but that she would not do—she preferred letting the deceased stay in her own house.—There being no direct evidence against Villiers, he was dismissed.

AN UNLUCKY SUNDAY.—The town of Chatham on Sunday last was the scene of a continuous succession of serious accidents. A Mr. Browne and his wife were returning home from a funeral, and in crossing the railway track, their vehicle was struck by the train, whereby the man was killed and his wife was seriously injured. About the same time at another place, a lady was dangerously hurt by stepping from her carriage while the horses were running away. Later in the day, a farmer's daughter nearly sliced all her fingers off with a carving-knife, and the last terrible event was a Mr. Banks falling into a railway culvert and breaking his hip-joint for one day.

INDEMNITY.—The Rev. Dr. McLaren was last night indicted into the chair of the Professor of Systematic Theology at Knox College. The ceremony took place at Knox Church. After the learned gentleman had been inducted into the Professor's chair the Rev. Mr. Cavan delivered a lecture upon the subject of the particular branch of Theological Science which Dr. McLaren was appointed to teach.

The tailors' strike continues in Toronto and is delaying orders seriously, in consequence, in certain establishments, as well as increasing the cost of clothing.

Noble Utterance from a Roman Catholic Pulpit.

A remarkable sermon was preached lately in St. John's Church, Quebec, by the Rev. Abbe Lacasse, cure of Port Daniel, Bonaventure County, which is said to have caused quite a sensation. About 3,000 of an audience were present. In the following extracts the Rev. preacher denounces the conduct of the Quebec Conservatives in calling men of Liberal principles Rouges, a nickname implying that they are akin in political principle to the Red Republicans of France.

A perusal of the following will expose at once a dishonest attempt made by a contemporary to show that this Quebec preacher had reference to the Ontario Government when he spoke of political corruption:

"Next to the priest, those who should most guard against nepotism, taking Christ for example, are our public men. The public man who does not keep ever in mind the holy precepts of the gospel, and allows himself to be guided by a party spirit, will oppose the most urgent reforms in the fear that he may endanger the party in which he is bound up. His interest—he will see the finest enterprise wreck, a whole people either suffering the most horrible hardships or exiling themselves from their native land—see, in fine, enthroned as master in the land, perjury, violence and the most shameful corruption, rather than expose himself to the sight of other men replacing him. If public opinion is awaking—if the clamors of a still Christian people, notwithstanding all this, force his hand—he may grant such reforms, but with clauses which nullify them in practice, because, above all, he must save his party interests; because to wipe out the corruption, the violence and the abuses upon which he trades and fattens, would be to shake down the edifice of his fortunes. Ever inspired by the same narrow spirit, the public man, without heart, without bowels, will hire writers, whose whole and sole duty is to lavish the most fulsome flattery on his partisans, and to pour out a continuous stream of calumny upon his adversaries, regardless of truth, justice and honor. And it certainly is not the least evil, this soiling upon the young educated men of the country to mould them to falsehood, to lead them to prostitute their talent, to teach them the art of blackening the purest actions, and to give a fair aspect to the most criminal undertakings. And these writers only succeed too often in duping public opinion, in suppressing the good faith of men, regarded with reason as the most upright and influential. This evil, antagonistic to the sentiments of love and charity preached by the Saviour, is general in all countries, and unfortunately our own Canada, so profoundly Catholic, has been also attacked with it. It is useless to inveigh upon the sad spectacle afforded by our own country, since a certain number of years. You all know this page of our history; you know all that has been done to sow dissensions among us Canadians, who have such great need of union—to destroy adversaries, and to discredit them—by designating by a 'word' which recalls ideas of blood and carnage a host of honorable citizens, submissive children of the Church, who after all sought but to enjoy in peace the rights guaranteed to them by the constitution of their country. And by a strange anomaly, many of these very calumniators might themselves, and with much justice, be styled men of blood, as they are the ones really who foment the worst passions, prejudices, and animosities against their brethren."

SABBATH SCHOOL ASSOCIATION OF CANADA.—The Tenth Provincial Convention will be held in the City of Toronto, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, 21st, 22nd and 23rd October, 1873. The business sessions will be held in Shaftesbury Hall, and the evening sessions and mass meeting of schools in the Metropolitan Church. The Rev. Albert D. Vail, of New York, Mr. Charles M. Morton, of the Plymouth Bethel, Brooklyn, New York, and H. A. Smeltz, State Superintendent Maryland Sabbath School Union, have promised to be present. Philip Phillips, of New York, will conduct the singing. It is also expected that Rev. Dr. John Hall, of New York, and Rev. W. F. Crafts, of Massachusetts, may unite with the Convention. As many eminent British and Foreign Ministers of the Gospel and others will have been in attendance at the Evangelical Alliance, in New York, the Convention anticipate being favored with some of them. The Great Western, Toronto Grey and Bruce, and Northern Railways, will grant return tickets at one-third fare to those presenting certificates from the Convention. Return tickets, by steamer City of Toronto, at one fare, for the double journey from Lewiston and Niagara. By Silver Spray, members who have paid full fare from Port Dalhousie to Toronto, and attended the Convention, will, by presenting a certificate at the office in Toronto, get a return ticket for fifty cents. A room in Shaftesbury Hall will be provided for the exhibition of Books, Maps and Sabbath School furniture. Publishers, Manufacturers and others are invited to avail themselves of this means of presenting to view whatever may be helpful to the Sabbath School Teacher.

The visit of Mr. Joseph Arch, President of the Agricultural Laborers' Union of England, to Hamilton, was signalized by a dinner tendered him on Wednesday evening, in the Townshel, House by the Trades' Unions of Hamilton. Mr. Arch is accompanied by Mr. Arthur Clayton, member of the Consultative Committee of same body. The occasion was an enthusiastic success, and Mr. Arch made an excellent speech.

The King of Italy has been visiting the Emperors of Austria and Germany, and appears to be on cordial terms with them. A real friendship and alliance between these three nations would be an important event in European politics. It would seriously damage the Ultramontanes, and would render impossible any restoration of the Temporal Power of the Pope.

An Impartial Opinion.

The Monetary Times, a non-political commercial journal, has an article on the result of the Commission, in which it says:— "If the charge of Mr. Huntington that the Government sold the Pacific Railway Charter to Americans has not been proved before the Royal Commission—and no one pretends that it has—enough and more than enough has been proved for the honour and fame of the country and its leading public men. Two facts, which have an ugly look in juxtaposition, have been proved: that the Government promised to use its influence to secure Sir Hugh Allan the position of President of the Pacific Railway Company, and that Sir Hugh subscribed $162,000 towards the expense of the elections; $45,000 of the money being handled by Sir John A. Macdonald, $32,000 by M. Langevin, and $85,000 by Sir G. Cartier's election committee. The money was asked for by the Government, at the very time they were promising him their influence. It will be observed that it was at the same interview when the promise in Sir John's telegram was accepted by Sir Hugh that he was asked by Cartier to subscribe to the elections, and promised to do so; a promise of which the fulfilment cost him him $162,000. The juxtaposition of these facts, have a damatory eloquence that no denials can silence or refute. All the witnesses knowing to the facts including Sir Hugh Allan and Mr. Abbott, swore that there was no connection between the two acts; that the agreement the Government came under to use their influence to support Sir Hugh's claims to the Presidency of the amalgamated company expected to come into existence, and his princely subscription to aid the Government in the elections, were two isolated acts, having no sort of bearing one upon the other. The public will still have its own opinion: it will believe the facts are stronger than the denials."

Mr. Dorion and "The Times."

Hon. A. A. Dorion has written a letter to the London Times, defending the action of himself and Mr. Blake in refusing to accept the Royal Commission proffered by Sir John A. Macdonald on the disallowance of the Onths Bill. The following is an extract:—"Moreover, while we knew the wide powers of a Parliamentary Committee as to the nature of evidence which it may receive, there is no doubt, with us at all events, as to whether a Royal Commission has equal powers. The House of Commons might certainly act independently of the decision of the Commission; but such a decision—unlike that of a Committee, which would be nothing till adopted by the House—would be a judgement absolutely complete. That we should not be willing to permit such a judgment to be promulgated with any semblance of authority, you will readily understand, when I tell you that the very Chairman of the Committee, who would have been the Chairman of the Commission, is among those who are accused of having received money from the funds arising out of the corrupt bargain for the railway contract, to promote his own election. The Committee had also before them the fact that the House of Commons had already refused to accept a Commission instead of a Committee when proposed to it by the Premier, although there was no formal motion nor, therefore, any division, because Sir John avowed that he found the opinion of the House to be against it. Now, Sir I need hardly ask you in what position we should have placed ourselves, if, having been directed by the House to do one thing we had on account of a temporary difficulty not only of our own motion abandoned that duty, but had at the same moment undertaken to do something which the same authority had practically declared should not be done."

The appointment of John McKeown, Esq., Q.C., by the Ontario Government, as County Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for the County of Lincoln, has been received with general approbation by the press throughout the Province.

The National Association of Science, of London, has offered a prize of £300 for the best essay on a subject connected with International Law.

The New York Graphic says that the first idea of the sewing machine was patented in England eighty years ago, and that Elias Howe is not the real inventor.

CHAPTER II.

A TIMELY ARRIVAL.—HECTOR AND FLORA PURSUED BY IAN AND THE M'KENZIES.

Hector M'Leod had doffed his dripping head dress, plaid, and tunic when he entered the hut, and when he saw sprang to his feet on the entrance of Ian, he glanced at his superb proportions with sufficient to indicate that, single-handed, Ian M'Kenzie would have a hard struggle before he would be successful in carrying out his foul purpose.

His well formed head was proudly thrown back, his large black eyes flashed a keen glance at Ian, and continued to gaze steadily at him, while his features, handsome and regular, were not in the least discomfited, although he saw the menacing attitude of the other. He was taller than M'Kenzie, but of a slighter build, and appeared to be much more agile.

His companion, although apparently a lady of refinement and culture, did not, after the first moment of surprise, appear to be so much alarmed as might naturally have been expected. Perhaps she was accustomed to see men in angry and stormy moods, and knew that the chivalry of her countryman would secure her—because of her sex—against any indignity or harsh treatment.

Instinctively she felt that a quarrel between the two young men was imminent and she at once associated herself with the cause or causes. She had met Ian before (although, as the reader is already aware, under the assumed name of Randall Murray), and was quite conscious that he favoured her with more than an ordinary share of attention; she had never encouraged him in this, and felt sure that her coldness had often exasperated the fiery youth. And now she was partly right in concluding that seeing her in the company of another had driven him to the point of open rupture with her companion. One instant sufficed for these thoughts, then with a resolution as quickly formed she sprang between the two youths, and, addressed Ian, said—

"What has happened—oh, tell me what has happened that you appear so agitated?"

Ian's breath came hard and fast, and it was unmistakable that, when the fury raging within burst forth, the exhibition of wrath and rage would be terrible.

"Stand aside," he muttered huskily. "To you I will say nothing at present; with your companion I would have a word—ay, and a blow, mayhap."

"You can have a word with me, sir, whenever you desire it, and that with pleasure; but why you should desire a blow I cannot imagine. So far as I am aware, I have given you no cause to be angry with me, and nothing has yet transpired between us to incite us to quarrel."

These words were spoken by M'Leod with a quiet firmness which grated on Ian's ear. At the same time the young man's hand caught the hilt of his claymore, and he judged by the light in Ian's eyes that he would be fortunate indeed if he did not require to draw it.

"Has there not? That you shall know directly; but this lady must first be removed. I desire not that she should be witness to the death-struggle, for death-struggle it shall be."

It was evident that Ian was struggling hard to appear outwardly calm, and to repress the raging demon in his breast.

"No, no; I will not be removed," exclaimed Flora, springing to Hector's side. Then, she turned, and, addressing Ian, said—

"Randall Murray, tell me why it is that you force a quarrel with this man, who is a stranger to you. Think you he has won me from you? Ah! you start; and I know that I have judged you truly. Know, then, that you are in error. Yours I never would have become—his I was before I ever saw you."

Ian fairly trembled with passion. Bestowing a look of the most intense hatred upon both, he sprang to the wall where hung the claymores, and, seizing one, confronted Hector.

"I told you," he exclaimed with terrible vehemence and excitement, "that you should know why it was necessary for us to fight to the death. Listen—address me no more as Randall Murray, but as Ian M'Kenzie, the sworn enemy of the M'Leods. But an hour ago I made a solemn vow before heaven that I would your blood avenge the death of my brother, Randall M'Kenzie, who fell by the accursed hand of your father; and that I would wage war so long as I could draw a weapon against the vile race. That vow I swear, by the dead body of my father, which in this room shall be witness to it, I will keep. For another reason we must fight—if you are the lover of Flora Macgregor, I am to be her husband; that, too, here I vow, and that vow, too, will I keep. Now, accursed Catewan—clansman you are not—prepare yourself for the issue. Or will I need to taunt and sting you before you find courage to enable you to—"

"Cease, villain!" shouted Hector, now evidently roused by Ian's language, and fiercely drawing his claymore. "By heavens, there has already been enough of words—too many, you may find to your cost! A Catewan, you say! The M'Kenzies should think twice before they lay their own guilt upon other clansmen's shoulders. But enough; to the issue with it. Keep behind me, Flora darling and fear not."

"Remove her, Angus; quickly; then returned to the fray," shouted Ian, as his blade clashed against that of Hector M'Leod. A loud cry rose from Flora's lips at the same moment, and turning rapidly, M'Leod was horrified to see the young lady struggling in the arms of the Highlandman, who had at Ian's bidding thrown himself upon her.

The electors of Hochelaga lately held a public meeting to hear the explanations of their member, Mr. Beaubien, better known as Allan's $7,000 man. Beaubien was invited to attend for that purpose, but he declined to face the music. Over one thousand people were present, and after addresses were delivered on the political situation, motions were passed condemning the prorogation of Parliament, and expressing disapproval of the general conduct of the Dominion Government.

It appears now that Mr. Langevin, in his effort to show that there was an immense expenditure of money on the Quebec elections apart from the Allan fund, has been drawing a long bow at a venture. He swore that Catewan admitted to him that his election had cost him $15,000. Catewan now flatly denies that his election cost him that sum and also flatly denies that he ever told Langevin it did. In fact, it was Langevin who said to Catewan: "This election must have cost you $15,000," and then went to the witness box and said that Catewan had told it to him.
