

FLATLY CONTRADICTORY VERSIONS OF DISASTER GIVEN BY CAPTAINS

STATEMENTS OF TWO CAPTAINS DISAGREE ON ALL VITAL POINTS WORLD AWAITS INVESTIGATION

Inquiry Opened at Montreal Yesterday Prelude to Searching Probe at Quebec Early Next Week — Kendall's Story of Disaster Backed Up by E. gineers.

Canadian Press Despatch.
MONTREAL, June 1.—Now that the first burst of excitement and grief at the loss of life thru the sinking of the C. P. R. steamship Empress of Ireland has partially spent itself, and the general public is settling down to await the government enquiry before giving judgment as to the responsibility for the frightful accident, an unhappy controversy between the commanders of the two vessels involved is looming large on the horizon. Doubtless each of them feels badly over the event itself, but at present it seems to be a case of "blaming the other fellow" and shifting the blame, as far as possible.

In Direct Conflict.
 While the tragedy is written so deeply on the hearts of thousands as never to be erased in life, the two men who stand out conspicuously before all the world as possibly more or less responsible for it are in wordy conflict over it. Captain Kendall of the Empress of Ireland tells the coroner at Rimouski that the captain of the collier Storstad might have prevented loss of life if he had kept the Storstad's nose in the gap she made in the Empress' side. Captain Anderson of the Storstad, in interviews in this city, says he did try to do this, but the Empress "was going at good speed ahead" and drew away in such manner that the bow of the Storstad was forced out of the hole.

Kendall's Story Supported.
 Captain Kendall's evidence, in brief, is to the effect that the captain of the Storstad was at fault, first, in propelling ahead when the Empress of Ireland had signaled that she was "under way," but is stopped and has no way on her," and second in backing out from the gap she had made in the Empress' side. Captain Kendall is backed up by his chief engineer, William Sampson, an Irishman, and by James Rankin, a marine engineer, both of whom state that the collier should have kept her nose in the hole and held up the Empress long enough to allow the crew to launch the boats and get the people off in safety.

Captain Anderson takes quite a different view of the Empress' actions just prior to the fatal crash by the Storstad. He says the Empress was going fast ahead, and it was impossible after the collision to keep his vessel's bow in the rent she had made because the Empress was going fast.

Collier Took Risk.
 As to statements made by Captain Kendall and others to the effect that the Storstad did comparatively little toward using its boats to save lives, Captain Ove Lange, agent for the Storstad, says the collier, at great risk to itself, did everything possible to save the Empress people and took on board 250. Third Officer Sæge of the Storstad, who was on the bridge at the time, corroborated this. The Storstad's crew seems inclined somewhat freely to lay blame on the Empress for the accident.

Preliminary Enquiry.
 The truth, it is hoped, will be drawn by the official enquiry, which is announced to open on June 9 in Quebec City. A preliminary enquiry was begun today in Montreal by Captain Lindsay, who is the commissioner. He is privately securing for the government information to be used by the investigating board. This board will be composed of two judges of the Canadian Admiralty Court, to be appointed by the Dominion Government, and one representative of the British admiralty, appointed by the imperial government.

and mother, Lieutenant Elizabeth Delamont of Prince Albert, Sask., was the daughter, and Deputy Bandmaster Arthur Delamont of Moose Jaw, Sask., the rescued son. Bandmaster Leonard Delamont of the Moose Jaw S. A. Band, was the son who gave his life for his mother. A. W. Delamont, of 606 Manning avenue, Toronto, who has charge of the Boys' S. A. Band of the city, and at whose home they are now staying, is another son and was at the station to meet them when the train pulled in.

Too feeble from the awful experience which they had gone thru to make the effort themselves they had to be lifted from the train car to the station platform. With the assistance of the Toronto son, who with his arm around her helped support his mother the staggering survivors were taken to a waiting motor car. So dense was the crowd of Salvationists and others who had gathered to see the train come in that the services of several police officers were necessary to force a pathway thru to the station.

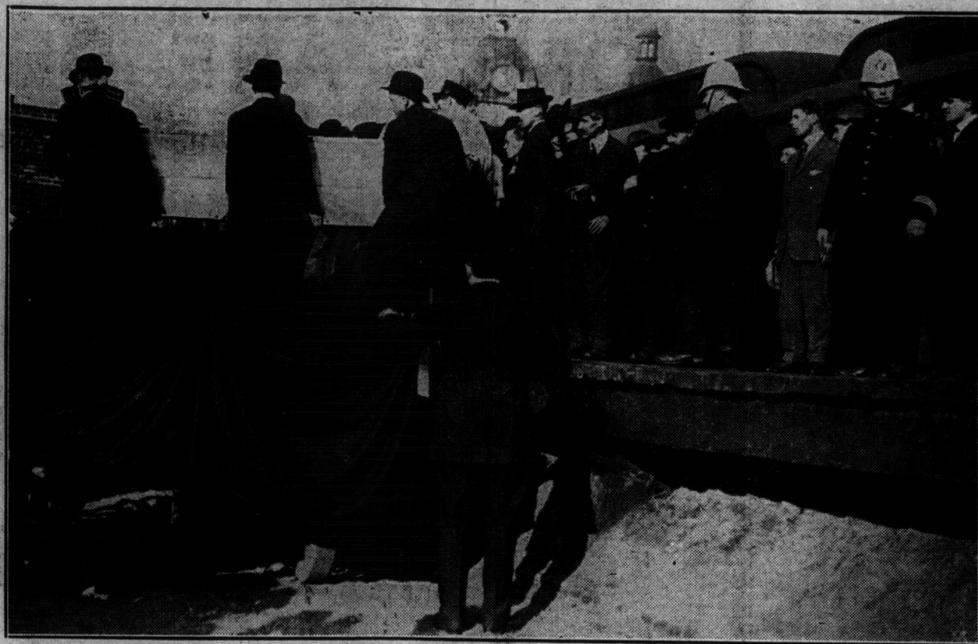

Lieutenant Elizabeth Delamont, the daughter, who was unconscious for three or four hours after her rescue, and who had been confined in the hospital at Quebec for three days, was very weak on her arrival here, and her condition is now critical. Bandmaster Delamont and his wife and Deputy Bandmaster Arthur Delamont are also quite weak from shock and exposure, and they, too, are in a rather serious condition.

When interviewed by The World a story of almost unthinkable hardship and suffering, of miraculous escape from death and of heroic self-sacrifice on the part of the son, who gave up his chances of life to his mother was told. Their story follows:

Having taken a number of ocean voyages when a young man Bandmaster Delamont said that when he heard the warning signal he realized at once that something of a most serious character had occurred. He awakened his two sons, who were with him, and hurrying into some clothes told the two young men to place life belts about themselves and make their way with all haste to the deck.

Door Was Locked.
 He then left them and ran to the cabin of his wife and daughter. He found that the door of this had in some manner become locked, and it was necessary to break it open by striking the door with his fist. The three then made their way to the deck, which by this time was on such a steeply slant that it was with great difficulty they managed to climb on to

A large dray, draped in black, met the Montreal train last evening and immediately the fifteen coffins were placed upon it and removed to an undertaking establishment.

INTENDED TO SAIL ON ANOTHER SHIP

F. J. Rutherford Consented to Cross on Empress to Accompany Friend.

Canadian Press Despatch.
MONTREAL, June 1.—Among the prominent Montrealeers who were passengers on the Empress of Ireland, was Frederick J. Rutherford, living at 100 Chomedey street. Mr. Rutherford was silk buyer for James J. O'gilvy & Sons. He had made arrangements for a business trip to Montreal, having booked his passage on the steamship Baltic, sailing this morning, but cancelled this to accompany a friend, Mr. Hiram Jensen, who was returning to England on the Empress, to close some legal business transactions.

Both Mr. Rutherford and his friend occupied staterooms near the smoking compartments, in a section which suffered badly from the collision. Being in this position, their chances of escape were very slight.

When news of the disaster reached Mrs. Rutherford she became dangerously ill and was taken to the home of friends at 33 Stavner street, Westmount. Mr. Rutherford was formerly employed by T. C. Watkins of Hamilton, Ont.

MARINE MEN STUDY CONFLICTING STORIES

Statements of Captains Kendall and Andersen on Wreck Pondered Over.

MONTREAL, June 1.—Marine authorities were busy this morning digesting the statements of Capt. Kendall of the lost liner Empress of Ireland, and Capt. Andersen of the collier Storstad, who returned here in brief, the contents of the two are as follows:

Capt. Kendall: Empress was stationary when Storstad ran into her. She was steamed ahead; Storstad then backed away, the requested to forge ahead and Storstad, after clinging to wreckage, saw two of Storstad's boats, but they had only two or three survivors each. As a seaman, Storstad's captain should not have needed to be told what to do in such an emergency; after collision had torn open Empress' side.

Capt. Andersen: Vessel was in full view when great distance from each other; Storstad had right of way. When collision came Storstad's engines were reversed. After collision Storstad did not back.

ther and son also searched long, but in vain among the bodies of the dead for that of Leonard Delamont. All this time Elizabeth Delamont was confined to the hospital, and it was with difficulty that she lasted the train journey thru to Toronto. She is now in a serious condition.

Capt. Sparks of Toronto, a brother-in-law, is leaving at once for Quebec, where he will seek to identify the remains of Arthur Delamont from among the additional bodies that are being brought there.

A Trick of Fate.
 That the Delamont family were on board the Empress of Ireland when it was wrecked in the manner it was seems almost a trick of fate. When coming from England in July, 1909, on board C.P.R. liner Lake Manitoba, the boat they were on was rammed in dense fog at almost the same hour in the morning and at the same point in the St. Lawrence channel, by the ill-fated Empress of Ireland, which on this occasion also was outward bound. Bandsman Delamont, who is a light sleeper, said the shock of the two vessels as they collided against each other woke him and that he immediately made his way on deck. The captain of the Lake Manitoba told him that it was one of the narrow escapes of a wreck that had ever occurred.

and the precipitation of the mass into the water.

Bodies Mute Witnesses.
 Nothing of finality can be learned. Officials are mum. Three facts, however, stand forth insistently to give some basis for the belief. The first is the sight of the bodies in the charnel house with their cruel and gaping wounds. So terrible are some of the marks, even on faces, that spectators blushing down the aisles, have voted their wonder at such disfigurement being received either in the staying in of the bulks or the battle with the tearing wreckage.

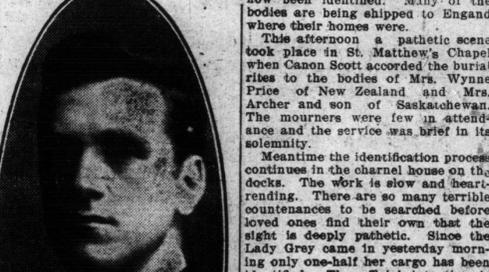

When news of the disaster reached even more convincing. It is learned that in at least one or two instances murderous-looking knives have been taken from the clenched hands of

UNINSINKABLE SHIP IS POSSIBLE, SAYS EXPERT

But Such a Boat Would Be Practically Useless for Traffic.

Canadian Press Despatch.
MONTREAL, June 1.—G. B. Hunter of the transatlantic and dreadnought shipbuilding firm of Swan, Hunter, Wiglesham and Tyne, who is in Montreal, when asked tonight if it would be possible to build an unsinkable ship said: "An unsinkable ship can be built all right but she would be little or no use as a carrier. She would be absolutely no use at all for freight and very little good as a passenger ship."

WOMAN SURVIVOR FOUND DEMENTED

Ran From Crowd on Landing at Rimouski and Hid in Bush.

Canadian Press Despatch.
QUEBEC, June 1.—From Rimouski today came a tragic echo of the wreck of the Empress of Ireland. When the survivors were landed at the wharf a young Norwegian woman, whose mind had been unshaken by the shock, broke away from the crowd at the wharf and ran aimlessly toward the bush. Today she was discovered as the result of a thorough search. It had been instituted by the officials. When found she was gibbering incoherently but followed the search party like a child. She is now lodged in the Hospice of the Sisters of Charity, where she awaits identification. It is thought she may be the wife of Magnus Larsen, who was separated from her by the explosion which took place directly after the wreck.

BARS EXEMPTION ON EXTRA LAND

Scarboro Court of Revision Throws Out Claim of Scarboro Seminary.

The claim of the Saint Augustine Seminary on Kingston road for tax exemption on the 60 acres which it has purchased in addition to the original holding of another 60 acres was thrown out by the Scarboro court of revision yesterday morning. Exemption was granted for the original holding as in the past, but the court held that if religious institutions were allowed to hold as much land as they pleased and enjoy the privilege of tax exemption it would be unfair to the other taxpayers and make serious inroads on the general fund.

The decision is most important, as it signifies a limit being placed on church exemption. The officers of the seminary did not state whether or not an appeal would be made.

VALUABLES ON STORSTAD

MONTREAL, June 1.—The C. P. R. today sent men aboard the Storstad to bring ashore the clothes and valuables left by rescued and dead passengers of the Empress of Ireland in the pockets of some garments were letters that tell their own tales and some money, in some cases considerable amounts. A C.P.R. constable was stationed alongside the Storstad today.

Relief Fund Grows at London Queen Mother a Contributor

Canadian Associated Press Cable.
LONDON, Tuesday morning, June 2.—Queen Mother Alexandra, enclosed with her cheque, for $1,000, to the lord mayor, for the Empress of Ireland relief fund, a sympathetic reference to "the poor sufferers from a most appalling disaster." Sir Herbert Beerbon Tree sent $461, the proceeds of the inaugural meeting of the People's Theatre.

These comprised only additional subscriptions to the relief funds yesterday evening. As the holidays have intervened the appeals have not yet had a full start. It is expected that a considerable move forward will be made today.

SHOULD BLAME MEN "HIGHER UP"

Premier of New South Wales Would Make Owners of Wrecked Steamers Face Trial.

Canadian Press Despatch.
LONDON, June 2.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Sydney, N. S. W., says that the premier, W. A. Holman, in announcing a message of sympathy in the loss of the Empress of Ireland, made the following statement:

"I expect that the enquiry will end in the condemnation of some unfortunate second mate or seaman. There will be no safety for the traveling public until the directors of the companies which send 1500 people to sea in a ship capable of being destroyed in 15 minutes, are put on trial as accessories to manslaughter. I hope that the Canadian Government will deal with the calamity in that spirit. I am not saying who is innocent or who is guilty, but if the disaster was due to a human failing, the people who make money by gambling in human lives ought to be punished."

Aged but 16 and 12 years, two lads are under arrest, charged with breaking into the office of Shea's Hippodrome Sunday afternoon, and by breaking thru a wired partition, stealing a cash box containing $100. When arrested they had squandered all but $42 of the $100.

NEWS OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO WOMEN

FIRST NIGHTS AT TORONTO THEATRES

MISS HASWELL'S FIFTH OPENING

Summer Season Starts at Princess Theatre This Evening.

THE CHARM OF ISABEL

Title Role is One of the Best in Miss Haswell's Repertoire.

Tonight Miss Haswell will open at the Princess Theatre, her fifth season in Toronto, presenting for the first time on any stage, outside of trial performance in New York City, the delightful comedy, "The Charm of Isabel" written by Mr. Sydney Rosenfeld, author of many well-known plays, such as "The Senator," "At the White Horse Tavern," "The Vandervell Cup" and many other of America's most successful dramas and comedies. The author has come from New York to supervise the production to be made by Miss Haswell. As the part of Isabel has been originally written and designed for her, it is the intention of Miss Haswell to use this play as the starting vehicle for her coming season throughout Canada. The play abounds in original episodes and devices, which follow each other in quick succession and illustrate in a comic fashion the fate that may overtake a charming young woman who has the habit of being over amiable. The title role is one that affords unusual opportunities for an actress, and is considered by Miss Haswell as one of the most sympathetic she has ever had to play. There will be special matinees given Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, the former to be attended by the graduating class of the University College, who will occupy the boxes in a body.

MOTURING SATIRE A HUGE SUCCESS

Harry Tate's Company Draws Approval of Hippodrome Audiences.

The Hippodrome presents a sparkling and humorous program this week, Harry Tate's satire, "Motoring," proving a scream from start to finish, and with the "car" despising speed there is plenty of go to the entire situation that will satisfy the most ardent enthusiasts.

The Nine White Hussars, a first-rate musical company, present an individual treat both from a musical and spectacular standpoint. Their selections are well chosen and excellently executed, the leader proving himself a master hand.

FIRST CLASS BILL AT WINTER GARDEN

"Nine Crazy Kids" Present Novel Turn - Luba Meroff's Songs - Please Audience.

The bill at Loew's Winter Garden Roof this week fairly bristles with special acts, presenting special management, and the result is an entertainment of distinctly pleasing quality. The Nine Crazy Kids, presented by Minnie M. Woods, after a lively 40 minutes of song and chatter, with the German schoolmaster as the butt of their jokes. Roland West presents Henry B. Toomey, an actor of unusual looks and ability, in the "bare stage" sketch, "Side-lights," which is an interesting and in which the comedy is well handled.

Vocal Recital. Last evening in St. George's Hall a vocal recital was given by pupils of Mildred Walker. Those taking part included the Misses Irene, Biddell, Delia Hunter, Ruby LeCornu, Lennell Ellis, Hester Gordon, Florence Robertson, Beulah Henderson, Pauline Miles, Isabella Whittam, Winnifred Lucas, Lavonia Nunn, and Mrs. Peter S. Fisher. Violin obligatos were rendered by Florence McMillan.

Sensations at Scarborough. Undoubtedly those writing Talbots are well named. There is some very remarkable feats of twirling and tumbling and other contortionist exercises. At Scarborough Beach last night they entertained a very large crowd, and made an undoubted thrilling act of leaping from a high tower into a shallow tank of water. The famous Italian band conducted by Luigi D'Urbone promises its engagement. It becomes more popular, apparently, the longer it stays, and the regular patrons of the park are hoping that it may remain for several weeks yet.

GIRLS' GUILD DANCE.

The Girls' Guild of St. Chad's Church are holding a box social in the basement of the church Thursday night.

RECALLS EPISODE OF THE BOER WAR

"Zira," Gripping Play Which Features Adele Blood at Shea's.

A CRUEL CHILDHOOD

Development of Drama is Intensely Stirring - Cast Exceptionally Strong.

The presentation of "Zira," the gripping play by J. Harley Manners, which is being presented this week at Shea's, with Adele Blood in the title role, had an opening last evening, and met with an enthusiastic reception. Applause broke out in the second act, when Zira defies her heartless opponent, and three curtain recalls followed the close of the scene. The other acts all evoked warm applause. The story is that of a girl who has a cruel childhood, followed by what was supposed an unfortunate marriage, which later, however, turns out to have been no marriage. Struggling out for better things and happiness, the girl becomes a red-cross nurse during the South African war. An opportunity comes to her to replace in an English woman of position, whom she supposes to have been killed by a stray shot. Zira goes to England and there wins the love of Lady Constance Clavering, her supposed aunt, and of Rev. Gordon Clavering, her nephew. Eventually the one thought to be dead returns and an expose results. The working out of the incidents involve many thrilling moments and the emotion of the audience is stirred perceptibly by the highly realistic playing of Miss Blood.

As Lady Constance Clavering, Maud Turner Gordon was clever and entertaining, her crisp speeches and decisive gestures being as natural as life itself. Marie Chambers as Ruth Wilding was as pitiless as the requirements of her part demanded. Some of the best playing of the evening was done by John Dwyer as Sir Frederick Knives, who played the part of the most natural way in the world. Sidney Price as Colonel Sylvester, and William P. Carleton, as the nephews of Lady Constance, did justice to the parts entrusted to them.

PUTS ON NEW PLAY IN CITY THEATRE

Charm of Isabel to Be Seen by Public for First Time.

AUTHOR TO BE PRESENT

Sydney Rosenfeld Comes From New York to See Miss Haswell Play.

Sydney Rosenfeld, dramatist, New York, arrived in the city last night to be present at the presentation of the "Charm of Isabel," of which he is the author, at the Princess Theatre, by Percy Haswell and her company for the first time this evening.

Mr. Rosenfeld told The World that he had written this drama especially to provide Miss Haswell with a star role. It has only been seen at some trial plays in New York, and Toronto audiences will therefore have the opportunity of passing on the merits of the creation for the first time.

Miss Haswell purposes starring through Canada with the production, for it will place high-class drama, to make a short address on his first appearance tonight. "The Charm of Isabel" is a comedy. It is the dramatization of a temperament, said the author. An attractive young woman, who is over-ambitious, sets into a series of troubles as a result of her charming disposition, and humorous and unexpected incidents follow each other rapidly. In the architectural work of this play the author eliminated devices that are stale and hackneyed. Miss Haswell considers her part one of the most suitable that could be created. Mr. Rosenfeld has written for the stage for thirty-five years and is the author of the successes "Senator" played by W. H. Crane; "The White Horse Tavern," by numerous stock companies, and "The Vanderbilt Cup," starred in by Elsie Janis. Speaking about the effects of the moving picture hall upon the high-class theatres, Mr. Rosenfeld said that in New York it had brought down prices in at least three leading houses, for while seats were still sold for two dollars, an extra seat was now being given with each performance, and he believes that this will redound to the benefit of the stage, for it will place high-class dramas within the reach of the masses. He said also that the moving picture hall would train in the young a taste for better things, and they might be expected to turn from the cinematographic views to actual stage presentations.

COMPLETE STORY IN "EAST LYNNE"

Perfect Photoplay Delights Large Audience at the Grand.

A UNIQUE PRODUCTION

An exceptionally good photoplay, "East Lynne," the offering at the Grand Opera House this week, being the first of a series of exclusive camera productions to be given at this house this summer. This photoplay tells the entire story of the book much better than any company has ever put it on the stage, for it pictures details of the narrative impossible of presentation by an acting company on account of the limitations of the stage. Two large audiences witnessed the two performances yesterday, and everyone was loud in praise of the perfect "localization" of this famous emotional drama, so familiar to the older theatregoers and intimately associated with the success of the talented emotional actress, Ada Gray. In the presentation of the photoplay the Grand Opera House Orchestra, with Frank Jennings as leader, gives a musical accompaniment that is appropriate and lends a thoroughly theatrical atmosphere to the photoplay. It takes over two hours to give the entire play. The production is made up of three parts, containing 117 scenes and requiring over 7000 feet of film to narrate the complete story. The picture is of the good; the actors in their facial work putting the words in the mouths of the audience. Such expressions as "a more satisfying entertainment than a dramatic company," are indications of the success of the unique play, and voices the opinion of nearly everyone who saw the pictures yesterday. Unlike a regular dramatic performance of a popular book, the whole story is shown—not such patches as are easily adaptable to stage display—but the development of the narrative in every essential detail, from the shooting of old Hall John and the vicissitudes of the East Lynne estate to the pitiful death of Lady Isabel. The corpse-covered hillsides of old Worcester, the swan-dotted lake beyond which Lady Isabel followed her husband and Barbara Harb on their misguided secret mission of mercy, ruinous old Boulogne, with its restless tide, where Levison pursued Lady Isabel to force his unwelcome attentions; the flight of the cloistered chaise from the manor—all these and almost innumerable other striking scenes impossible of presentation on the stage—are pictured with fidelity. "East Lynne" picture play is a big production and should attract large audiences all week at the Grand, and especially at the matinees, which are given every day.

LOTS OF VARIETY IN GAYETY SHOW

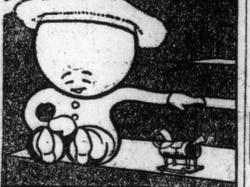

Host of Pretty Girls in Pleasing Costumes Make Up Chorus.

There is plenty of variety in James E. Cooper's Beauty, Youth and Folly which is being played at the Gayety Theatre this evening. The first act is staged at a florist's store, and Tom McRae, as an eccentric porter, causes many laughs by the manner in which he treats the customers to the store. There are a host of pretty girls in pleasing costumes who make up the chorus. At the end of the first act a baseball game is played, in which most of the well-known baseball players, on this continent are personified.

EFFICIENT HOUSEKEEPING BY HENRIETTA D. GRAUEL DOMESTIC SCIENCE LECTURER

Fruits Shrubs THE juices of almost all fruits make the most wholesome and delightful beverages for daily use as well as for company affairs. These simple beverages are more quickly prepared than lemonade, for just a few spoonfuls of the juice are added to a glass of food water. The base of all the fruit syrups and shrubs is the same; a syrup of one part water and two parts sugar boiled until it threads from the spoon when the strained juice is added. Cherry juice gives the most refreshing drink of all. Here is the recipe: Seed three baskets of cherries and wash them well, cover and let stand thirty hours in the refrigerator or other cool place. Strain thru a sieve, then thru a cloth. You should have three pints of juice. Now boil two pints of sugar with one pint of water and when it threads from spoon pour in the cherry liquor and boil five minutes longer. Remove from fire and let it get almost cold, then bottle securely. This is the rule for all the fruits, but when two or more are combined it varies a little, depending upon the tartness of the juice. Raspberry shrub: Crush the berries in a stone jar and cover them with older vinegar, let stand over night and next morning strain and add the sugar syrup as directed. Boil ten minutes and bottle while hot. Strawberry shrub is made in the same way and the berries may be mixed in the proportion of two parts strawberries and one part raspberries. The finest of all shrubs is made with one part each of currants, raspberries and strawberries. A raspberry or strawberry vinegar, made by the Creoles, that will keep for years and improve with keeping, is composed of a quart of berries and a quart of best cider vinegar. Let stand in a deep porcelain or stone vessel twenty-four hours. Strain thru a fruit press and add another quart of fresh berries and let stand again. The third day repeat this, adding another quart of fruit. Then strain twice thru a fine bag and add a pint of sugar to each pint of liquid and boil ten minutes. Bottle and keep in a dark, cool place. No sweet table is without fruit and each variety has its own health-giving properties that assist digestion, refresh the brain, invigorate the body; all conducive to long life. Where fruit beverages are used in abundance it is said there can be no craving for intoxicants, and headaches and biliousness disappear. When their value is more generally understood, the manners and morals of our world may be changed for the better.

THE GARDEN CONDUCTED BY RACHEL TODD, M.D. FAMILY UNITY A Few Busy Pests Now at Work in the Garden

Just now requests for advice from various gardeners regarding many troubles are accumulating daily. We cannot hope to be able to answer more than a few of these, choosing those that are most interesting and of the greatest importance. And the cutworm seems to be doing the most damage these last few days, judging from the various inquiries. Now, the aristocratic name of the cutworm is Noctua claudanthina, which means in English that it comes in leaf-eat-night, and is the most severe pest possible. No one ever sees him, but the havoc he works is lamentably visible. Where he hides in the daytime, is somewhere in the earth, or under stones, or chips, or suchlike. It is a well known fact that where these worms are in colonies they make a practice of even climbing up trees, destroying buds and flowers and young fruit at any time of the growing season. There is no disguising the fact that cutworms are fatal to a garden. Young plants whose buds are eaten off as clean as if cut with a knife, leaves with whose sides oiled out as if cut with a rip-saw; transplanting eaten clean around the stems an inch or so above the soil; all these things spell ruin. From the nature of the injuries inflicted our gardeners can easily see that cutworms must be got rid of, and at once. Even a single couple of these worms can manage to complete a remarkable amount of destruction in one night. And since the worm never by any change remains on the surface of the ground, it is necessary in case where the ordinary garden hose is of little or no use. This is a case for a medicated spray, preferably one of Paris green. And the worm must be coaxed out of his concealment by a bait of some kind. Any soft sloppy food, sweetened, and then moistened with a solution of Paris green, should be placed in small quantities near the plants. This bait will, as a rule, attract the worm, and he will poison himself. You may find one or more dead next morning near the food, ugly short naked worms, dark gray or light brown, perhaps marked with blotches of color, or not, according to the nature of the soil.

I have often noticed a plant specimen that for some unapparent reason is sickening and dying. When I make this discovery I just pull up the plant, root and all. Too often there will be found clinging to the roots one or many more tightly curled-up inch-long brown shining worms, hard as wire. Examining into the spot occupied by the plant there may be found many more of the vermin. I have found it useful to sprinkle a handful of fine table salt on the infected spot. This kills the worms. They stretch out flat and die. I use dry salt which works more effectively and more safely than pouring a salty solution on the infected spot. The briny solution, if used, might be injurious to other plants, while strange to say, the dry salt seems to be absorbed into the earth, doing no other harm than to the wire worms. Try salt. The trouble usually comes from a too-free use of fresh manure, or your plants may have been infected when bought.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

By Leona Dalrymple
Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguished this new winter studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 86.
A Minister's Plight.
A PHYSICIAN may have a pretty hard time of it with his neighbors. He is always ready to "come in" with some one of his women patients, but I've decided that any man whose business is wholly dependent upon the favor of women can never be quite sure what happens to him. Therefore the minister's path is never a thorny one. With his Ladies' Aid Society and the various pink teas in which he is the sole representative of the male sex he must walk with exalted care or there is a deal of fussing and most expurgations. I notice, however, that the weather too had in winter and when the weather's nice they play golf. I do myself.
The minister of our church is departing. I nearly said "again." He is not departing "again"—he is merely the third in the past 18 months. Mary and I entertained him at dinner just before he left, for he was something of a favorite with both of us.
"Are you sorry to go?" I asked him.
"Well, yes, Peter," he admitted. "I think I am. I'm like a bit of ivy—just beginning to take root and love the soil when I find I'd better tear up the roots and transplant them, or some vandals hand will do it for me. That's just about what is due to happen to me. You see, there is one very estimable lady with a tart tongue who has told me repeatedly that I can't preach. There's another who insists that I don't call on

PLANNING A GRADUATE'S FUTURE

By ELEANOR ACES

Grace La Rue

"Choose Practical Work," Advises Grace La Rue

EVERY June an army of young girls is graduated from the various schools of the land. The majority of these girls face the question of what to do to earn a livelihood. More of them have won their diplomas through sacrifice than by the easy path of financial plenty. They struggled to get an education that they might the better get a living.
Once there was not much of a problem ahead of the girl graduate. She was graduated that she might teach school. She worked single-mindedly along that line. She expected before long to resign the school teacher's job and "get married." Then her wage-earning days were over.
But that was the day before yesterday. Today she knows she has to make her own way; she studies in the independence, and marriage as a final solution is the last thing in her alert and active mind.
She also knows that all avenues are more or less crowded, and she must be among the fittest to survive. Mean-

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How "Misplaced" Sympathy Weakens the Will-Power

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

THE word "misplaced" is often used as an adjective to modify sympathy. Almost as a universal proposition, it may be said that sympathy, except in actually demonstrable and evident physical distress, is misplaced.
That is to say, proffered acts and words which pamper and spoil and coddle another, because they are expected, or even at times deserved, like almsgiving, often do more harm than good.
If you are not stranger to suffering, you will now know that you are out of such bondage, realize that sympathy plays havoc with self-help. It, in short, does injury and is far from beneficent.

Grateful tears, or tears that reach forth from the heart for another's woes, real or imaginary, "butter no parsnips." To weep for the ill that are narrated and unseen is impossible. A brother's distresses claim, perchance, the soft intercourse from heart to heart, which waits many a sigh from India to the pole. But even inter-family sympathy is challenged, if not repelled, when not tangible to the five Gargantuan senses.

To each his sufferings. All are men. The tender for another's pain. The good, and still my headaches, which are very severe and completely prostrating at times, appear in spite of all my efforts to eradicate this trouble. My only hope is that I will be freed from this affliction in later life.

Let it be said for the nonce, with a thrown gauntlet of defiance which brooks no opposition, that the unfeeling individual—selfish though he oft-times is—becomes an unwitting benefactor to the one crying piteously, to the morbid, be-thoughtened one who craves your tender mercies.

Just so much feeling will itself unblest, which leans for all hope and pleasure on another's breast, is a sorry figure. Sympathy thus craved is rarely, if ever, bestowed. It is a strain in ten a sadder, if no wiser, person after his lamentations.

And justly so. The person who is troubled with the obsession that his troubles, trials and tribulations are to be assuaged by adding them to another's burdens—the unwilling recipient of which has no doubt successfully hidden his—will be almost times in ten a sadder, if no wiser, person after his lamentations.

Shall you weep if a Napoleon falls? Shall you shriek if the palladium of Bulgaria's liberties is crushed to earth? Are you in high dudgeon if the Sultan of Morocco is slain by some mad Mullah of the desert?

There are, true enough, moments even in a Stoic's life when the heart is so full of emotion that, if, by chance, some one shakes it as a grain of sand into a mighty, becalmed pond, it vibrates into overwhelming eddies and spills across the analyzing banks, never again to drop back.

In misery's darkest cavern known, Where hopeless anguish poured his tears And lonely wail retired to die.

Dr. Hirschberg will answer questions for readers of this page on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. He will not undertake to prescribe or offer advice for individual cases. Where the subject is not of general interest letters will be answered personally if a stamped and addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all inquiries to Dr. L. K. Hirschberg, care this office.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

LORNA DOONE : Condensed by Augusta Shelby

BLACKMORE'S novel, "Lorna Doone," has surrounded Devonshire with the glamour of romance and thousands have been induced to visit the fair land by reading the book. Here is the story in brief:
John Ridd, a young farmer, climbs to the top of a cliff in the vicinity of his home and falls exhausted. When he regains his senses, a young, beautiful girl is bathing his head. She tells him her name is Lorna Doone, and at this he is dismayed, for the Doones are the outlaws of the countryside. Almost immediately there appear several of this terrible clan and John is forced to hide between two large rocks in the water to escape them.
For six years the young farmer is haunted with the memory of this beautiful girl. Then, one day, now grown to sturdy manhood, he climbs the cliff again and finds her, more beautiful even than he has remembered her. Again and again he braves death to meet her, and one day, in her bowery, she tells him the story of the Doones; how her grandfather, Sir Ennor Doone, had been driven from his northern lands, only to take ruthless possession of this neighborhood; of his tyranny; of her cousin, Carver Doone's, infatuation for her.
Three times after that the farmer makes the trip and no Lorna awaits him. Then by accident he learns of her grandfather's serious illness and that she is a prisoner in his house. Through countless dangers he makes his way to her. She gives him this warning: "You must watch this house day and night if you wish to save me. You see that tree with seven rooks' nests. If you see

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

They refused my husband a place at his father's house, and he left town for parts unknown.
"Affairs became so bad that I was compelled to leave him the last time. He was back here looking for me, but I compelled myself to stay out of his sight.
"I think I nearly went insane from grief, and I don't feel as though I can ever kill the love for him.
"I feel as though I want a home with my baby. My former sweetheart offers us a home. Do you think I could hear to forsake my baby?
"I haven't as yet procured a divorce. It would be easy to do, but I cannot endure the thought of the being severed.
"My people are very anxious for me to marry the one I met first, but I love him as a brother, but that is all."
"LOUISE."

WHAT a sad story, and what a true one.
I knew how it was going to end before I got through with the very first page of your letter, poor, foolish, headstrong, selfish, warm-hearted Louise.
You had a pearl in the hollow of your hand—a beautiful, pure, perfect pearl—and you threw it away for a piece of colored glass that sparkled when you looked at it.
And now the glass has turned out to be sooty.

Dear Annie Laurie:
I read your advice to young girls and thought I would ask you about my love affair. First, I am 24 years old.
Six years ago I met a young man that I promised to marry after a courtship of several months. I didn't feel as though I had the right love for him, but thought perhaps it was love since he admitted me so much.
No definite arrangements were made for a wedding, as we were both young.
Then I met the real one. A dashing blonde soldier of fortune, well educated and a world-wide traveler. After knowing him a week he asked me to marry him. I explained everything to him, but he was so infatuated with me and I with him that within a month we were married. Did I love him? Ah, you cannot imagine how I loved him. I told him every thing in my power to make him happy. He seemed to love me, in fact, as much as I him, but he wanted to be always on the go. I refused to let him every time after a separation of several months.
My people are in good circumstances, but they refused to help me if I went back to him after our third separation.
My husband's people know I have done right, so they are keeping the little girl for me and I am working

What Queens Spend for Dress

WHO is the most extravagant Queen in Europe in regard to dress? Queen Victoria of Great Britain would answer that Queen Victoria of Spain easily takes the first place as the best dressed royal lady. She obtains all her dresses from Paris, and her wardrobe is valued at $1,000,000. The German Empress has all her dresses made in Berlin, and has spent $1,000,000. An equal sum is expended by the Czarina, who dresses in private very simply and only goes out for expensive robes on state and festival occasions, which, however, are

The Good Night Story

Little Rooster's Punishment—By Vernon Merry

ONCE upon a time a proud, wilful young rooster, who had lost a leg, a wing and one eye in quarrels with the other fowls of the farm yard, said to his mother that he was tired of the company of his brothers and sisters and cousins, and was going out into the world to seek his fortune.
She, who loved her poor, little, crippled son in spite of his faults, pleaded with him to stay with her. He only laughed.
"You are a simple woman, good mother," he said, "I have wit and talent. My place is not among common country fowl. Good-by."
As he half-flew, half-hopped over the fields he came to a tiny streamlet almost dried up by the sun.
"My friend," cried the streamlet, "I am so weak I cannot carry away these leaves which obstruct my passage. With a stroke of your beak you can restore me to life. I shall surely reward you."
"Do I look like one whose business it is to sweep brooks?" asked the rooster, continuing on his way.
A little farther on he saw the wind blowing breathless on the ground.
"Come to my aid," it cried. "I am reduced by the heat of the day. I allowed myself to be lulled to sleep by the perfume of the roses, and lo, here I am almost lifeless. If you will fan me a CHAMPAGNE RHUBARB COMPOTE. Whip, but do not peel, the rhubarb, cut it into three-inch lengths, lay it in a wide saucpan, barely cover with water, and add a little sugar. Simmer over a gentle fire until the rhubarb is tender, but not broken. Remove straining well from the juice. Lay the pieces in a glass dish, sweeten the juice to taste, add a few drops of cochineal. If the color is not very bright, and boil it rapidly for 10 minutes. When this has somewhat cooled off, pour over the pieces of rhubarb.

RUBARB AND ORANGE JAM. This jam although very nice, does not keep long, and therefore it is not advisable to make too large a quantity at a time. Clean half a dozen sweet oranges, remove the rind, scrape off as much of the white pith as possible, and boil in water for about two hours. Drain and strain finely as though for marmalade. Remove the pith and pips from the oranges, and place in a preserving pan with two pounds of rhubarb cut into small pieces, and three pounds and a half of preserving sugar. Boil slowly until the jam sets when tested on a cold plate, sweeten, but only just enough water at the bottom of the pan to prevent the contents from burning. Ginger or lemon flavoring to taste can be added if desired. When quite cold put a few spoonfuls in each quart jar and serve. With a little cream piled up in the centre of each this makes an attractive sweet.

INTERFERES WITH TORONTO'S RIGHTS

Provincial Hydro Commission's Order Criticized by Mayor.

WOULD MEAN A LOSS

No Comparison Between Toronto and London Systems, Says His Worship.

"If the citizens of Toronto will stand for the interference in their internal affairs by outside parties and interference with properly constituted and authorized management, on sane and prudent lines, then I am mistaken," said Mayor Hocken in his address to council relating to the reduction of Hydro-Electric rates in Toronto. "The Toronto Commission are by special act vested with the management of the Toronto system on behalf of the citizens, and I submit that the order of the provincial commission constitutes a gross and unwarranted interference with the rights of the Toronto commissioners by a body whose financial responsibility in connection with the enterprise is of a most limited nature."

Regarding the comparison that has been made between the situations in Toronto and London the mayor pointed out that the London commissioners controlled both the water and electric supply, and that London had no underground plant such as Toronto, hence the difference in rates.

For this the government accepts as security a mortgage on the western division and on the Lake Superior branch subject to all existing prior mortgages thereon. The government will not be required to implement the additional bonds so guaranteed, and will not be required to pay interest without recourse on the bonds so guaranteed.

Such a centre for your garden can be easily selected from the rare collection of marbles, terra cotta and pottery pieces now on sale in the Basement. Many of them are copies of rare antique pieces—benches, fountains, flower vases and boxes. See them tomorrow.
