Historic Don Scene of Bitter War Between Starving Gulls and Ducks - The Battling Birds Fall an Easy Prey to Boys in the Neighborhood.

Bitter battles, areial and payal, have been fought upon and over the historic waters of the Don during the last few weeks. The farring squadrons have not been those om man, however, but of ducks and gulls, and the contested grounds or water has been the feeding grounds at the mouth of the sewer near the Winchester-st. bridge.

Both gulls and ducks have a hungry time during the winter, and as soon as opened, both made for the feeding ground thus exposed. Both parties were lesperately hungry and were prepared to battle for food, but it appears that gulls are better fighters than ducks. for despite the fact that there were thousands of the ducks and a much less number of gulls, the gulls were always victorious, and when they arrived, suc-Maxwell Attempted to Cross ceeded in driving off the forces of Irishmen in the United Kingdom are Le Pays to-day contains some amusing

Irish Race Stands Unmistakeably for What is Desirable in World To-Day

VERY REVEREND DR. BURKE, president of the Catholic Church Extension Society, and editor of Register-Extension: Nobody can regard the Irish race with any other feelings than those of respect and admiration. It stands unmistakably for what is most desirable in the world to-day-intelligence, honesty, chivalry, generosity, purity, religion, patriotism, all are typified in it; and never did a sordid world require these qualities to be kept more persistently before it. In God's good providence, the very troubles, miseries and persecutions of the Irish have been turned to the benefit of the nations at large. They are everywhere in orde terrarum, as the Romans said of the Christians in the first century, and wherever they are, they have proved a "saving remnant" in an irreligious and materialistic community. But it is said, and with a show of logic, that nations must be justified before nations; there is no hereafter for them; individuals can await their reward in Heaven; so we confidently hop that justice may be done speedily to Ireland, so that, one of the brightest stars in Britain's imperial crewn, she can "Remember the glories of Brian the brave," be true to Patrick's gift of faith, and at the be time feel, in legislative freedom, that capability to keep and help her own children, until is fulfilled in the ways of peace, and in the arts and marts, the prophecy of Newman, who saw her again the "Centre of the world." Every Canadian worthy the name will wish her what he himself prizes—self government—and all other good gifts on this, St. Patrick's Day.

La Follette Again in Race To Split Progressive Vote Opens Campaign in Dakota

Taft Managers Claim 123 Delegates Out of 142 Already Chosen-Roosevelt People Claim Nomination Would Be 10 to 1 Shot if People Were Allowed a Say-"Br'er Rabbit He Lay Low" Now the Attitude of WASHINGTON, March 16.—(Special)—The Taft-Roosevelt struggle D ase as ever, and neither combatant has broken away from the other to go after La Follette, who is again in the ring.

The senator has announced his candidacy and stands upon a platform which by the way does not include the recall of decisions. His visit to North Dakota is designed to hurt Roosevelt. One appeal made by him to North Dakota is based upon his unswerving opposition at all times and places to Canadian Reciprocity. There has been some effort in the past to make capital for Roosevelt out of anti reciprocity centiment in the border states. But the Wisconsin Senator who never waltbled on the issue is now to be reckoned with.

The Taft people are claiming 123 delegates to the National Convent out of 142 already chosen. This does not mean a great deal because a number of these delegates were selected before the Colonel's hat was thrown into the ring, and also because a number of them are from the Southern States, and may be influenced by money, as were the southern delegates in 1888 or by deals for future patronage. Still the figures so far as they go look good to the White House. Nearly 900 delegates are yet to be elected and the big states like New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio have not spoken, but as already said the figures look good to the White House and the President's friends are saying that while Roosevelt is mak-

The cost of the ships themselves, it has now transpired, was greatly underestimated. On the authority of an official thoroly acquainted with the whole situation, that when everything has been thought of and reverything has been thought of and provided for, an expenditure of no less than fifty-five mill'ons was involved by the Laurier scheme, which would even not have

Juror Roosevelt Puts Doctrines Into Practice

(From the unpublished manuscript of Herr Doctor von Krystall, Count of Rutils. By permission of Henr von Krystall's publishers, Zuber & Seidensticker, Berlin.)

On Thursday I motored to the village of Mineola. It is the seat of the dministration of justice for this part of Long Island called here the "County Seat." I was attracted to the house of justice, by the fact that Herr Roosevelt, who was at one time the chief burgomaster of this country, was serving as a juryman. The jury had just been sworn as I entered, and I had Bourassa and Lavergne May no difficulty in recognizing the great statesman.

The case on trial was not an important one. The plaintiff and deendant were apparently Slavs, with little knowledge of English, and the property in controversy was a gas stove. I was struck at the outset by the fact that the defendant was accompanied to court by his entire family. His wife sat beside him, with her baby in her arms, and fully a dozen children, all apparently of the same age clustered about him. I was at a loss to account for the defendant thus troubling himself to bring so many children to the courtroom until the plaintiff commenced to tell his story. He had not proceeded far when he was interrupted by Herr Roosevelt, who asked how many children he had? The plaintiff replied that he had none.

Then said Herr Roosevelt, "You need go no further. I don't believe a word of your story; it is made up out of whole cloth."

At this point the judge rapped for silence, and admonished the jurors that they must not form or express any opinion about the merits of the case until they had heard all of the evidence, the arguments of counsel, and the charge of the court. Every eye was now turned upon Herr Roosevelt, who rose with great dignity and said:

"I see you are a reactionary; you prefer legalized symbolism to exact

"I see you are a reactionary; you prefer legalized symbolism to sacred nan rights; I demand your recall,"

I must here explain to my readers that in this country Herr Roosevelt and his followers teach that the judge may be removed or recalled popular vote. His honor, the judge, was quite taken aback by Herr R velt's remarks, and after consulting a huge law book announced that the statutes of New York did not provide for the judicial recall.

"Human rights," said Herr Roosevelt sternly, "are above statutes. Gentlemen," he said, addressing those in the court room, "shall this judge

There was a show of hands, and the recall would have carried, but for fact that the vote of the defendant's children were disallowed on the

This victory quite elated the judge, who ordered Herr Roosevelt to take his seat and the trial to proceed. A few moments later the defendant's attorney objected to some question, and the judge overruled the objection.

"I appeal from that ruling," said Herr Roosevelt.

"Who do you appeal to?" asked the judge smilingly,

"To the people," replied Herr Roosevelt, amid great applause.

Then followed some conference, and it was decided that the Plebiscite could not be taken without a week's delay.

"That will be very inconvenient," Herr Roosevelt admitted, "as I am going on the stump next week."

going on the stump next week."

His honor then asked the value of the gas stove in controversy, and on being told that it was only three dollars, he offered to buy it, giving the plaintiff and defendant a dollar and a half apiece.

This arrangement proved to be satisfactory to all and the judge was complimented upon his Solomonic methods. "I am delighted," said Herr Roosevelt as he bade the judge goode-bye; "but are you not wasting your time in a place like this? Did you ever think of a career on the federal baneha?"

arsenals, drydocks, coaling stations, and shipbuilding and repairing plants. These are first necessities to the actual construction of vessels and the maintenance of a fleet. The naval men want what the admiralty first suggested to Canada, namely, the creation of a complete Canadian fleet unit. To do this, however, is a matter of possibly ten years if the foundations have to be adequately prepared. Meanwhile as a temporary measure of practical assist-ance to Great Britain, it is suggested that Canada might at once build and maintain as a part of the imperial fleet at least one super-Dreadnought which could be incorporated in the Canadian fleet unit when finally established.

Mr. Hoey says that the theory most generally accepted and the one which has the greatest weight of authority in its favor is that which assumes that St. Patrick was born in Scotland, at Dumberton, on the Clyde—"the son, as we may suppose, of a French or British official employed in the Roman service at that extreme outpost of their settlements in this island, where he would have spent his youth surrounded by a perpetual clangor of barbarous bettle, amid clans of Picts and Scots swarming across the barriers of the Lowlands."

The opinion that St. Patrick was a Scotchman, says Mr. Hoey, has the unanimous assent of all the antiquaries of Scotland, and all the best of the Irish. White Star Liners "Olympic" and "Titanic," the World's Largest and Finest Steamers.

Owing to the coal strike in England the sailings of the Transatiantic steamers to and from the British ports have been materially affected.

The White Star liner "Olympic," the largest and finest steamer afloat, sailed from Southampton on March 13th, and will sail from New York on March 23rd. As this ship will have a very large list of passengers it is essential that persons intending to make this trip should secure their accommodation at once. Among the special features of this steamer and her sister ship the "Titanic" (which makes her maiden trip from Southampton April 10th, and trip from Southampton April 10th, and from New York April 20th), are a la carte restaurant, magnificent reception room, grand dining saleon, seating 550 first - class passengers, the largest apartment on any steamer; verandah apartment on any steamer; verandah and palm courts, lounge room, smoking room, Turkish and electric baths, salt water swimming pool, squash racquet court, and attractive gymnasium situated on the sun deck, passenger elevators, etc. Full information as to reservations, etc., can be obtained from H. G. Thorley, Passenger Agent, 41 King Street East, Toronto.

Big Firms Not Bothered By Union's Action In Calling Out Employes.

"It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." The truth of this old adage sprears to be adapted to the tailors sirks situation in Toronto. While the striking arment workers and pant makers are no doubt causing a setback to some of the shops, other employers are rushed to turn out clothes, and what means loss to one means profit of the other.

"It is entitle injuring you at all?" asked The World at the Frances-Godfrey Company, East King-street.

"No," was the reply. "We are rushed to get the work out and I think the strike is helping us. We do not employe union labor."

Mr. Moreland, of the Hobberlin Co, said that the strike was not injurious to his firm and that business had never been better. They do not make any discrimination among their help and employed both union and non-union. "Our men were out for three days but a single pack of the world are now quite satisfied. Business is good and I do not anticipate any trouble." stated E. K. Sommers' manager of the Scotiand Woolen Mills. Ed. Mack thought that his men the weight carrying apacity requiped as to tire carrying apacity to the carrying apacity to the general to it.

Many automobile makers sell their cars under to hold the price of the car down to the general public, but any man who has had any experience in driving a motor car will be very careful before purchasing a pacity of their various sizes of tires, which should be a very valuable one to every motor car owner who is not sure on this point.

Toronto Symphony Abroad

The Toronto Symphony Orchestra this year has been doing some very fine outof-town work and such places as Owen Sound, Galt, Barrie, Kingston, Hamilton, Orillia, London, and others are being included in the season's work. It Kingston the band played to a capacity house and altho the train was delayed so that the concert did not start until after nine o'clock, the audience was an extra number the Liszt Rhapsody. The following are some of the comments received from out-of-town papeers:

festivities commenced with a luncheon to the tenantry of Minto estates, which was given in the mansion house. There were two tables, one of which was presided over by Lord Minto with Lady Elicen Elliot at the other end, the second table being presided over by Lord Minto as the opposite end. Members of the house party were also present and included Earl Grey, ex-Govarnor-General of Canada, and Lady Grey; the Hon. Arthur D. Elliot, the Hon. Fitzwilliam Elliot, and the Hon. Esmond Elliot. After luncheon, Mr. Gilbert Davidson, Barnhills, proposed the health of Lord Melgund, and on behalf of the Minto tenantry, presented his lordship with a demi-huring 18-carat gold watch, with the inscription, "Presented to Viccount which Lord Melgund has received on this occasion, as well as the many valuable and interesting souvenirs and gifts which Lord and Lady Minto recived during their residence in India, when his excellency was viceroy them. In the early evening the Minto school children assembled at Minto House and viewed the presents and were after wards entertained. The estate employes were entertained to supper and dance at the home farm on the fcllowing night when Lord and Lady Minto as the opposition of the work of the watch, which bore the inscription "Presented to Victor Gilbert Laristone Garnet Elliot, Viscount Melgund, from the estate and farm servants." * St. Michael's Hospital *

By Margaret Lillis Hart

(By Margaret Lillis Hart.)

Among those who are "doing things" with the view to meeting the wants of our ever increasing population, are those who have the affairs of St. Michael's Hospital within their keeping. Beginning in a small way at the time when our Dominion was celebrating the silver jubilee of its existence, the hospital has developed and proved its usefulness to many thousand citizens, and from outside during the years of its service. Its surgical wing, added some years ago, to the old house in which the establishment was begun, gained for the institution the reputation of being among the best equipped in the department of surgery in Canada. among the best equipped in the department of surgery in Canada. Now a magnificent medical wing is just completed, and this late addition is one more step towards tite time when St. Michael's will rank second to none in America.

A few days since a stroll was taken thru the new wing. Accompanied by one of the sisters of the bouse a tour of the entire building from basement to roof was made. Things that struck one generally were the roominess and light everywhere in evidence. Wide corridors, stairs, easy of ascent, light flooding the apartments. lofty ceilings, sunshine everywhere. The new wing corresponding to the rest of the building is of red brick, four storeys high in addition to the basement. Windows innumerable shaded by restful green blinds, two to each window, in order to get the best adjustment of light, punctuate its walls, and the ornamental iron finishing of the copings give a picturesque touch to the exterior. Broad flights of marble stairs, with iron balustrade of handsome design, fireproof, as is the building thruout, lead one from storey to storey. Two elevators perform the same office, and a freight elevator will be principally ured for bringing supplies from the basement to the kitchen proper, which for the best sanitary reasons is placed at the top of the house. Among the things on which the hospital congratulates itself is its fine staff of physicians, a glance at its roll showof physicians, a giance at its for showing names amongst the most honored in the ranks of our country's practitioners. Another thing of which it may be proud, but of which one hears only by proud, but of which one hears only by accident, is the charity of its every-day life. Business and business methods are not always interspersed with charity, indeed, the virtue is often-times lacking in the stress and strain of our mercantile age, but at St. Michael's business and chari-ty walk hand in hand. "There's a wo-man and her baby here, both very ill. Can you take them?" said a voice over the 'phone a few days ago, and then the further information was added that the enquirer had been able to do something for the other children, but the mother and sick baby were still un-provided for, and the case was urgent. The sister at the hospital end of the phone knew there was not a bed, and literally not a corner vacant, but charity knows no obstacles, and the answer was "all right, send them along."
"Where are you going to put them," said another sister, who was standing by. "I don't know," was the laughing response, "but we must make a place somewhere," and a place was made.

With much reason to be elated with With much reason to be elated with the progress made, those in charge will never feel that they have reached the point at which they aim until all departments are on the same footing as the newer parts of their establishment. The matern'ty and out-patient departments, the chapel and nurses' home are still crying out to be replaced. To do this it may not be necessary to wait until the shekeles are gathered together by slow process of hospital savings.

Ite be that even now a Hugh Ryan or a John Ross Robertson is meditating to assist speedily in placing St. Michael's in the position of which it already gives promise amongst the first of kind on the continent.

The Factor of Safety is Five

VERY Alco, Truck is built to bar pull of 500,000 pounds. withstand a shock five times greater than the normal strain. The factor of safety built into the Alco Truck is five. This is a high factor, as all engineers know. In a huge bridge the factor of safety is only two.

Assume that a five-ton Alco Truck with five tons aboard is traveling along at nine miles an hour. Assume that a rear wheel drops accidentally into a hole ten inches deep. The rear springs, the rear axle and the frame are prepared for the shock.

They are prepared for even a far greater shock-and not only one but hundreds and hundreds like it.

For Alco springs and axles and frames are tested in the Alco shops by special superhuman machines, which register how much strain each can withstand.

As an instance, an Alco Truck is run over the country near the Alco shops for a road test. A wheel is dropped into a hole. An instrument attached records the strain in pounds pressure. The Alco engineers know by reading the instrument if the springs have the desired factor of

To test an axle in the Alco physics laboratory, the axle is placed on a machine representing spring seats and wheel centres, and the load is applied.

If it is a five-ton rear axle the pressure applied is five times the capacity load, or 25 tons, plus the weight of the chassis. The machine which does the testing is capable of a draw-

That is the reason you never see the wheels of an Alco Truck toeing in at the top and out at the bottom.

When a wheel toes in at the top and out at the bottom it is a sure indication of a weak axle.

But a large factor of safety, such as five, in the Alco Truck, does not mean a super-heavy monster.

The Alco Truck is no heavier than the average truck of its rating. The reason for this is clear; by using materials of high physical properties with great ductility—materials that show a high elastic limit and tensile strength - materials minus seams, flaws, checks, pipes and cracks, the weight can be reduced to a mini-

The analysis and specifications covering these materials are determined by long heat treating and laboratory tests-an experience common to the American Bocomotive

A large factor of safety also means long life. No one can tell how many vears an Alco frame will last-perhaps longer than a man's lifetime. A front or a rear axle may last twenty, thirty or torty years.

And thus through the truck. An Alco Truck never wears out. Few considerations are as important in buying a truck as that of the factor of safety. Study it in the Alco exhibit at the Motor Truck Show: You will see with your own eyes what a transportation experience of seventy-six years means in motor truck building.

What Mayor Thorp of Guelph Has to Say:

In response to an enquiry about the eastern end of the city, he wrote: "The concentration of industries in this section of the city calls for an immediate increase in the number of dwelling-houses that will be required to take care of the increased population, which naturally follows the establishment of the different factories.

"At the present time there are, practically speaking, no vacant houses in this section, while the new industries locating here, and the additions to the existing ones, call for an increase of at least 900 workmen, which means an increase in the general population of 2500 people.

"In addition to the new works which are locating here there are already about seventy factories of various kinds in this city. I may further state that, in view of the above industrial activity, it is my firm belief that a considerable increase in real estate values may be expected in the near future, and especially in St. Patrick's Ward and St. George's Ward, by the advent of the new industries."

And, mind you, since the mayor wrote this letter, negotiations have been entered upon and completed with many other big firms.

A Few Convincing Facts:

Guelph and Environments Have a Population of 18,000

Real estate in Guelph is advancing more rapidly than any other city of its size in Ontario.

The increase in building in 1911 over 1910 was 301 per cent.; 1912 is already breaking this record.

Guelph owns all her public utilities, gives cheap service, and makes her profits reduce taxes, which will eventually disappear. The assessment is on a very low valuation.

Guelph is the largest shipping and transhipping point on the main line of the G.T.R. from Toronto to the Canadian border at Sarnia.

New Factories---The Seven League Boots With Which Guelph is Making Such Rapid Strides.

Here are a few of the factories that have located in the last year. They are all within a half-mile of our property:

Guelph Stove Works, employing 150 to 200 men.

Stewart Sheaf Sodder Company, will employ, when buildings now being rushed are completed, 200 to 400 men.

Gibson Manufacturing Company, doubling their plant, will require

Independent Tire Company, erecting big concrete factories to employ 250 men. Dozens of other industries have been lately secured, employing hundreds of men.

Guelph has almost five thousand industrial workers. Two new big factories are now negotiating for sites, in the eastern section of the city, near St. George's Heights. Every indication points to the factories of Guelph paying wages to seven or eight thousand highly-skilled workers by the end of this year.

The Location: St. George's Heights and Extension

occupies a high, level situation in the eastern section of Guelph, offering a wide view of the beautiful city. It is on Grange Street and Simmers Avenue. The new civic electric belt line, which will in all probability be built this summer to relieve the constantly-increasing demands of this section, will run along both these streets.

At present, St. George's Heights is three minutes' walk to a car line. The proposed Toronto-to-Guelph radial will run within three or four blocks of the property.

It is within a mile of the city hall. The city is built right up to the property. It is required at once for the homes Guelph needs. Quick turnover is assured.

when people go away from their usual environment or occupation, they are more liable to accident or to get into trouble. Accidents seldom happen to a man who is working all day, for he becomes familiar with the danger attendant, and will guard agains it, but when he is on his way home, or out for the evening, the liability to meet with accident is increased. Now, as long as almost every person is engaged Every purchaser buying a lot in St. George's Heights to resist an appeal to the people, while The Wichita Eagle, a strong progressive newspaper says:

In the great national campaign the issues are getting down to something definite when the partisans supporting two of the leading Republican candidates are divided over the merits of a direct primary. The direct primary applied to national affairs is the most comprehensive show-down which this nation could devise. It is the most unartificial thing in politics. The direct primary is as simple and as direct a method of government as the showing of hands in a meeting, or a standing vote.

Trading of federal patronage for votes, and the log-rolling of conventions all have but little show when confronted by a direct primary operated by the people.

The attitude of various public men, and the attitude of presidential candidates towards this method of arriving at a vote is very illuminating. It shows who trusts the people at large and who fears a popular verdict.

The man who makes good, or the man who knows that he will make good, has nothing to fear from popular direct primaries. The maeses of voters

Porcupines In Fine Fettle Situation Shows Improvement

Mining Market Instances Remarkable Buoyancy and Makes Excellent Progress-Cobalts Continue to Lag.

World Office,
Saturday Evening, March 16.
The Porcupine stocks listed in the stock markets have made more actual progress during the past week, than they have at any similar period since January 1st last. Public interest in the trading has shown a material expansion, and this has, of course, inspired a more sustained speculative movement, which has, of itself, worked out in the interest of holders. Added to this there has been considerable short overing under way, and the complete the stock markets have been considerable short on much for the bear interest to withstand. Prices adopted an upward rend early in the week, and the swing toward higher levels, once inaugurated, was carried on almost without a re-A measure of activity in some of the Cobalts has been in evidence during the week, but no general movement has been manifested. This is exactly in accordance with the general feeling extant on "the street," where it is not expected that any revival of activity is to be anticipated. Some of the cheaper issues are being selected for special attention, and the manner in which prices are moved on the incoming of any material demand calls attention to the fact that it would take only a slight degree of speculation en-

One of the most significant factors of the week has been the decided carcity of stock available for borrowing by brokers. Up to this time the earishly inclined traders have oftimes fattened their pocketbooks by making a loan of securities and at the ame time sellinf the shares short in the market. This worked out splendidly while prices were going down, and many bears amassed much profit thereby. The trouble arose when the rend to prices changed, and it came to head when the stock they had borowed was called by its actual owners. This is what happened during this reek, and the buying in of securities in the open market to replace those put ut by the "shorts" probably represented not a small fraction of the total ound of day-to-day transactions. attention to the fact that it would take only a slight degree of speculation enthusiasm to lift the list out of its apathy. Some of the Cobalts look remarkably cheap around present levels, and an adjustment in values of these to a range more on a par with indicated merit seems probable, the this will probably be brought about in a gradual manner. News from the camp is favorable, and from the record of production to date, this year should exceed any previous twelvementh. Meanwhile, the market is not likely to run into any extensive broadening of public interest, and consequently no great changes are to be expected.

A remarkable advance in prices has been shown this week, but an even more astonishing record is shown by comparing the prevailing prices with those current a month and two months ago. The market has, of course, demonstrated a measure of buoyancy from time to time, but the actual upward swing has been brought about so gradually, that its extent has not yet been fully realized by many traders and speculators. The following table shows in graphic form the gains which have been made by the active issues:

It is to be presumed that much of the revival of confidence in the Porcupine securities—and that such is now manifested cannot be gainsaid—is due to the feeling of expectancy over the commencement of operations at the stamp mills in the camp. This inauguaration means, of course, that in the very near future the Porcupine will be credited each week with a production of so many ounces of gold, and as by the end of a couple of months, when the machinery will have "found itself," the four mills in operation will be crushing between 900 and 1000 tons of ore per diem, it is to be anticipated that the weekly cutput will run into many thousands of dollars, probably in the neighborhood of $100,000. The realization of this expectaction should have a material effect on sentiment in respect to the properties of known respect to the properties of known merit in the camp, and the almost complete turn-over of late in the manner in which the gold mining stocks are viewed is but a preliminary in-stance of this fact. It is interesting to note that, whereas a month or so ago, when prices were at a much lower range than they are now, and when declines were the rule now, and when declines were the rule almost every day, floor trading brokers and market followers were universally bearish, they are now of a decidedly bullish frame of mind. This is, of course, quite in accordance with precedent, as stock market history plain-ly evidences the fact that when values 4.440 ly evidences the fact that when values are going fown the trading fraternity 2.846 is bearish, and when they are going up it is bullish. It is only necessary to recall the extreme pessimism which ruled a short time ago, to realize the extensiveness of the present change in this respect. It is hard to convince a man that there is merit in a stock which is dropping like the mercury. which is dropping like the mercury ouring a cold spell, but let the price go soaring, and he will convince himself that a 50 per cent, appreciation in price is imminent, and that he should be on the "bandwagen."

The future of the market seems, at the moment, to be highly promising. The many adverse factors which overhung the situation a few weeks ago have either disappeared or have lost their significance thru getting out of date. It is the fashion now to be bullish on the Porcupines, and the public display a measure of confidence, such as has not been equalled in a long time. That they lost all sembiance of

Proven Oil Lands Consisting of 240 Acres, King's County, Coalinga, California, U.S.A.

The wonderful development of the oil industry in California during the last few years is one of the marvels of the age. From a product of about two million barrels in 1898 it has grown to over sixty million barrels in 1911. The oil resources of the state seem to be no less vast than the mineral fields, and, like the latter, they still await their full development. So abundant is the supply that it is recknowed by acres, rather than by wells.

million barrels in 1911. The oil resources of the state seem to be no less west than the mineral fields and, like the latter, they still swalt their full development. So abundant is the supply that it is reck oned by acres, rather than by wells.

Oil is superseding coal for fuel throughout the state. Railroads, factories, gas plants, power plants, sugar refineries, steamships and other industries, depend on oil for fuel entirely. Rapid as has a few years old, has made more money and paid greater profits to the investor on the capital employed same length of time. Hundreds of men have been quickly relied from humble means to affluence. The increase in the value of land has brought fortunes to hundreds more.

The lominson oil Company's property consists of 240 acres of patented and proven OHL-BERGHOUT LAND, situated in King's County, California, east of the croppings. Their well is drilled to a depth of 2480 feet, and they have already struck oil which is high gravity, 33 per cent., and a "gueher" is condensity expected on from 400 to 800 feet additional drilling.

The Canadian Coeilinga Company, which adjoins the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S property on the north, have their well down about $800 feet, at which depth the oil came in, and is now producing 7800 barrels per day, which means an income of $8250.00 per day, and their stock is selling at $20.00 per share. This well is only a short distance from the one now being drilled by the DOMINION OIL COMPANY'S development work, and who is without doubt one of the best authorities on oil, predicts that with from $4.10 per barrel up.

Many sufferers have given up in despair until they have been induced by some in-terested friend to try a box of Stuart's Dyspensia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspeptic's hope. They are a natural restorative of healthy action to the stomach and small intestines, because they supply, the elements that the weak stomach lacks-pepsin, golden seal and other digestives.

If you are afflicted with any of the symptoms above described, be assured no more sensible help to be given them than to supply elements which will do the work of digestion for them. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been found by test to have digestive powers, one grain of the active prinof these tablets being sufficient to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food. It is plain that no matter what the condition of your stomach, or how far your disease has progressed, one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets taken at meal time will do the work-give your stomach an opportunity to regain its lost powers, the muscles will be sriengthened, the glands invigorated, and you will be a new man. costs nothing to prove the effectiveness of this cure. > Typhold Carriers That Live Long. One of the surprises of modern medi cine is the persistence in a few persongs of typhoid bacilli after an attack of typhoid fever. In a case just reported by Dr. Philipowicz, typhoid bacilli were found in the bile thirty-eight years after the original attack of fever; and even this is not the greatest limit, as in three cases on record the bacilli were still present after forty-seven, fifty and fifty-two years, respectively. What to do with the "typhoid car-riers" is a problem, as these persons are liable to spread the disease.

The answer is plain and clear: "By doing the best." We advise correctly as to styles and material. Everything this season will be along quiet lines. Steel-greys, with two or three faint hair stripes, and green-greys, with plain herringbone effect, are much in favor. Then there are blue-greys and purple-greys greys are indeed much the vogue. You can hardly err in choosing a grey. Lovat shades, with small invisible check, make a stylish suit.

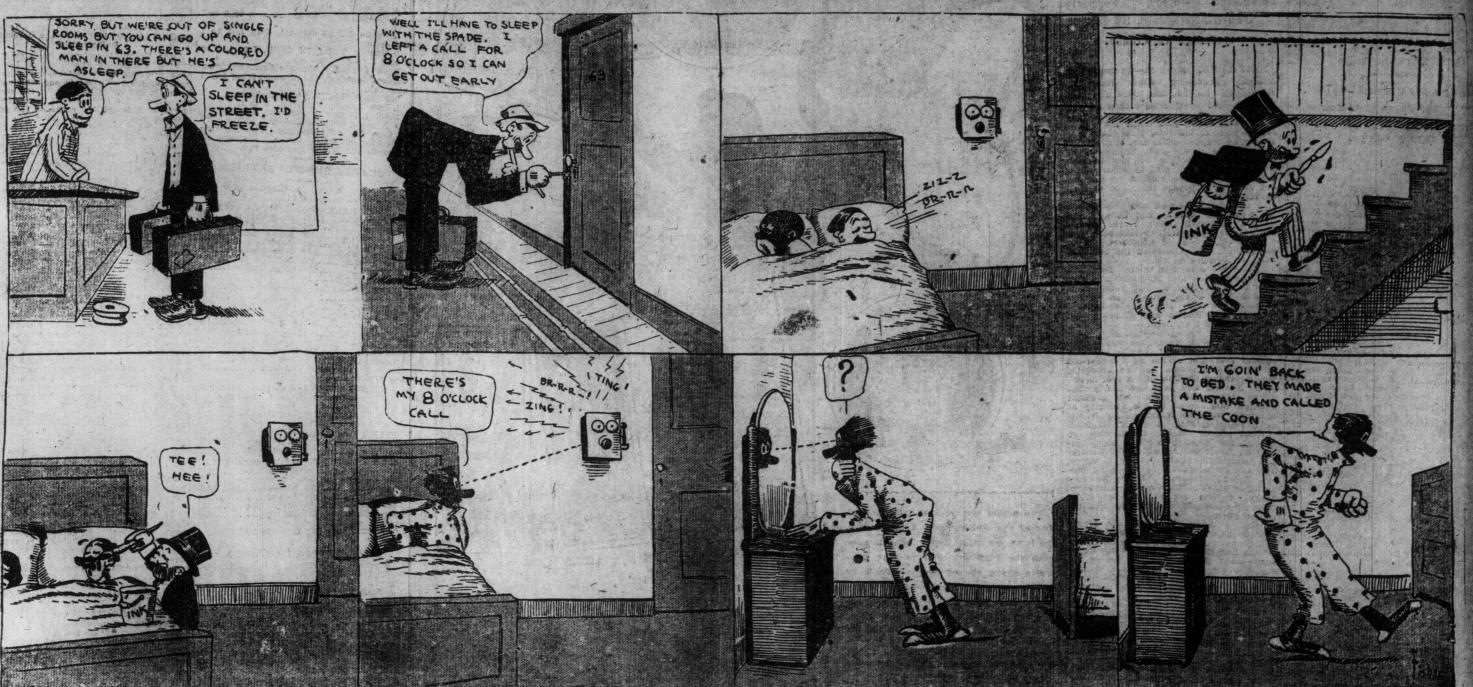

Materials here are sure to be to your liking. But after all it's the style and fit and finish of Coleman's clothes that give this store distinction—all made to the customer's measure.

STICKS ON MINOR LEAGUE

Doc Wiseman, Nashville Outfielder, Not Good Enough to Go Higher: Yet Too Good to Go Back,

It is not unusual for a big league player to remain with the same team for eight, nine, ten or eleven years, but instances of a minor leaguer sticking to the same club for evieven seasons are limited to one, just one. Doc Wiseman the Nashville outfielder, is the possessor of this unique record. Wiseman started in Nashville in 1900 and has remained there ever since, being given his release recently. It is doubtful if Wiseman's record will ever be duplicated, for it is more than unusual to find a player who for eleven years is not good enough to go higher and yet is too good to go back.

Ten seasons, anyway, without show ing signs of deterioration.

One day a batter raised a high foul directly over the plate, and the catcher, misjudging it, was hit squarely on top of the head by the descending sphere, which knocked off his mask and bounded away about 30 feet. That night Ashenback finished his supper early and was passing out of the dining room when he happened to wa'k behind his catcher, who was devouring his evening meal with gusto and enthusiasm. Stopping at the table, Ed. passed his hands over the backstop's head, feeling for the bump which he thought would surely be there on account of the contact with the ball that afternoon. Bu there was no lump to afternoon. Bu there was no lump to be felt. "No wonder," said Ash. "How could there be a bump? Your head is a solid bone."

It's about time the Civic Guild of Art got to work, and if we can't have pretty vehicles traveling to and fro and parades on King-street of fas ionable equipages, as we used to have that we got some handsome buildings, architecturally beautiful structures, that combine utility with appearance for people to look at. If Toronto seeks to appear to be appearance for the features of a great city. So far as I can see, it is proposed that we shall adopt old country customs with motor buses instead of tubes, which would not have encumbered the streets and would have given the distance of the features and would not have encumbered the streets and would not have close to the cult of the horse shows are held than ever, and race meetings, while not as long in duration as formerly, are increasing in number. When one remembers that these things were wont to be considered aids to the greater use of the horse, and that the horse is being displaced, it seems strange that it should be so, although the proves how thoroly imbedded in human nature is the love of the noble animal. And that reminds me that the idea that trials of speed are to be conducted on a higher and more becoming plane than the idea that trials of speed are to be conducted on a higher and more becoming plane than the idea that trials of speed are to be conducted on a higher and more becoming plane than the idea that trials of speed are to be considered aids to the greater use of the horse, and that the horse is being displaced, it seems strange that it should be so, although the proves how thoroly imbedded in human nature is the love of the noble animal. My friend Boniface evidently knows body. London, or he would know that the latter city was easily the first with tubes, and that New York, in its desire to be original, built the elevated reliways that have made those parts of the city thru which they pass eye sores and practically slums compared to what they once were. However, as the oracular delivery arose out of a remark relative to the disappearance of the horse from the streets of Toronto, return can legitimately be made to that subject. It is undoubted that the handsome equipages, with their prancing, high-spirited and majestic horses, are no longer seen on the streets. There are no more Saturday afternoon gatherings of tandems, unicorns, four-in-finands and pairs at the gueen's Park, and drives out to the Hunt Club. Now it is all automobile, cumbrous and ugly, where it used to be bright and gay. Now we have the hideous tooting of a rubber excrescence instead of the music of the bugle and the horn and the clanging of merry bells, with the effect heightened by gay ribbons, shining harness his New York better than he knows London, or he would know that the Unreliaine Varning "Cannot you bring some influence to bear to get the newspapers to stop circulating sensational stories rekarding the betting that accompanies horse racing?" said a leading turfite to me on Friday. "I wish to goodness I could, for that sort of thing has been and is the bane of the sport." I replied: The other day there appeared on the front page of an evening paper a yarn about vast sums of money won thru certain victories of Canadian owned horses at Charleston. Doubtless some money changed hands as a consome money changed hands as a consequence of the enterprise, pluck and grit in sending these horses abroad to get race-wise and to fit them for their gins, Restigouche and Others campaign in Canada so that aliens shall not come over and clean up everything but anything like the huge amoun mentioned has neither been wagered nor won. How far the tradesmen in St. Lawrence market may be better off than they were I am not prepared to say, but it is a certain fact that the hotel-keeper referred to us a big winnote has by no means had his bank account swollen to the extent mentioned in this particular evening paper. Any way no well-wisher of the turf will circulate such rash statements. It is steamer Minneapolis, which left New that of Clem Beachey, Jr. The Linsday Horse Show.

People who have good horses will pleased to hear that it is proposed to have a spring horse show in Lindsay on Saturday, April 27. At a meeting recently held a great deal of enthusiasm was manifested. John Carew, president of the Lindsay Central Fair, warmly advocated the holding of the show. He claimed that Victoria County was the hest breeding spround in County was the best breeding ground in the world for an animal that can be shipped to any country or clime and stand the eviction country or clime and stand the existing conditions met with. This is a pretty large order, but it is confidence of this sort that leads to accomplishment. Two years ago a decidedly creditable show was held at Lindsay and it is now proposed to make this an annual affair. While this year it will be confined to one day, it is hoped and intended to take a longer period in the future and to hold a show period in the future, and to hold a show that will favorably compare with any others. A strong committee was appointed of which Mr. Carew was made chairman, the other members being Albert Ashmore, T. Skuce, Jas. Robert son, J. Williamson, J. Hickson, Jas. Begg. E. H. Hopkins, M. Leddy, M. Coughlin, Mr. Kelly, W. Channon, D. McMann, Mr. Anderson, B. L. McLean, T. Waldon, J. Brock, Mr. Costello (Emily), Jas. Taylor and W. Mitchell.

If War Were Declared. In his new book, "The Horse," Colonel R. F. Meysey-Thompson, an English officer of note, estimates that 156,-000 horses would be required to mobi-lize the military forces of the British Empire, and that 500,000 more would be wanted within six months after war had been declared. How futile must be all measures designed to subsidize the breeding of light horses in any-thing like sufficient numbers to supply the great armies of the world is made apparent by these figures. And if, by government expenditures of millions annually, the farmers could be subsidized to breed horses enough, what would be done with them in time of peace?

It is noteworthy that the most famous stallion in Great Britain for getting steeplechasers is Wavelet's Pride, by Fernandez, by Isonomy, and sire of Mr. Seagram's 1897 Queen's Plate Winner. Fernandine, or as he was then called Ferdinand. Wavelet's Pride is described as the iron horse, and is a strending tree. splendid type in power and symmetry. Epsom Downs attract every year for Derby Day many people who have not the slightest sympathy for the turf. Perhaps the strangest of all these alien race-goers was Herbert Spencer, who was once wickedly persuaded by his friend, the late Sir Francis Galton, to go to the Derby with an Oxford clerical don. "They were," records Sir Francis in his volume of memoirs, "as incongruous a pair as could easily be deviced, but they enjoyed each other's company." "All went well." except that Spencer would not be roused to enthusiasm by the races. He said that "the crowd of men on the grass looked disagreeable, like flies upon a plate; and that the whole event was just what he had imagined the Derby to be."

THE IRISHMAN.

The rude the soil and chill the air; Then well may Erin's sons adore isle, which nature formed so fair. What flood reflects a shore so sweet Or who a friend or foe can meet So generous as an Irishman?

His hand is rash, his heart is warm,
But honesty is still his guide;
None more repents a deed of harm,
And mone fongives with nobler pride;
He may be duped, but won't be dared;
More fit to practise than to plan;
He dearly earns his poor reward;
And spends it like an Irishman.

If strange or poor, for you he'll pay.

And guide to where you safe may be:

If you're his guest, while e'er you stay,

His cottage holds a jubilee.

His immost soul he will unlock,

And if he may your secrets scan.

Your confidence he scorns to mock

For faithful is an Irlshman.

By honor bound in was or weal,
Whate'er she bids he dares to do;
Try him with bribes—they won't prevail;
Prove him in fire—you'll did him true.
He seeks not safety, let his post
Be, where it ought, in damger's wan;
And if the field of fame be lost.
It won't be by an Irishman.

RORY O'MORE.

Young Rory O'More courted Kathleen Bawn. He was bold as a hawk, and she soft as the dawn; He wished in his heart protty Kathleen to please, and he thought the best way to do that was to tease. "Now Rory, be alsy," sweet Kathleen would cry, Reproof on her lip, but a smile in her eye,

"With your tricks I don't know, in thoth what I'm about: Faith, you've teaz'd till I've put on my cloak inside out."
"Oh, jeweil." says Rory, "that same is the way
You've thrated me here for this many a day,
And 'tis plaz'd that I am, and why not, to be sure?
Bor 'tis ail for good luck," says Bory O'More.

"Indeed then," says Kathleen, "don't think of the like,
For I half gave a promise to soothering Mike;
The ground that I walk on he loves. I'll be bound."
"Faith," says Rory, "I'd rather love you than the ground."
"Now, Rory, I'll cry, if you don't let me go;
Sure I dream ev'ry night that I'm hating you so!"
"Oh!" says Rory, "that same I'm delighted to hear.
For dhrames always go by contrairies, my dear."
"Now, Rory leave off, sir, you'll hug me no more, That's eight times to-day, that you've kissed me before."
"Then here goes another," says he, "to make sure,
For there's luck in odd numbers," says Rory O'More

O'DONNELL ABOO. By M. J. McCann.

Proudly the note of the trumpet is sounding Loudly the war-onless arise on the gale; Freetly the steed by Lough Swilly is bounding, To join the thick squadron in Baimear's green vals,

On, every mountaineer, Strangers to flight and fear. Rush to the standard of dauntless Red Hugh! Bonnaught and gallowglass, Throng from each mountain pass.

On for old Erin, O'Donnell Aboo. Princely O'Neill to our aid is advancing

With many a chieftain and warrior clan,

A thousand proud steeds in his vanguard are prancing.

Neath the borders brave, from the banks of the Bann:
Many a heart shall quail

Under its coat of mail;

Deeply the merciless foeman shall rue.

When on his ear shall ring,

Ecome on the breezes' wing.

Tir Connell's dread war-cry, "O'Donnell Alcoo!"

Wildly o'er Desmond the war welf is howling Feriess the eagle sweeps over the plain.

The fox in the streets of the city is prowling:

All, all who would scare them are banished or slain. Grasp every stellwart hand. Hackbut and battle brand.

Pay them all back the debt so long due. Norris and Glifford well.

Can of Tir Connell tell;

Onward to glory, "O'Donnell Aboo!"

Sacred the cause of Clan Connaill's defending.

The siture we kneel at, the homes of our sires:
Ruthless the ruin the foe is extending.

Midnight is red with the tunderers fires.
One with O'Donnell then,
Fight the old fight again,
Sons of Tir Connell, all valiant and true.
Make the false Saxon feel
Erin's avenging steel!

Growing Unrest in Labor World

Conspicuous among the world movements of to-day is the general tabor unrest and the growing inclination on the part of workers to stand together not only nationally, but internationally. This tendency is being ascribed in large part to the activity of the apostles of syndicalism, a development of trades unionism which has become a serious menace to the social fabric as now constituted. It took form in France about twenty years ago and its doctrines have permeated Western Europe and have taken root in Great Britain. In August last a volume appeared in England under the title "Syndicalism and Labor. Notes Upon Some Aspects of Social and Industrial Questions of the Day." In explanation of this title, the author, Sir Arthur Clay, says that French trade unions are divided into two classes. "In the one are those unions which propose to gain their ends by revolutionary means and are known as 'Syndicats Rouges; in the other are those whose efforts to improve their position are restricted within constitutional limits, and are called 'Syndicats Jaunes.' The word 'Syndicalism' is used with reference to the objects and methods of the former class." As it has been put, the object of the syndicalist is to transfer industrial capital from its present possessors to himself and his weapon is the "General strike." The interests of Syndicalism are furthered by the "Confederation Generale du Travail," an organization, familiarly known as the C. G. T., formed in 1895 by representatives of French trade unions, and affiliated in 1902 with the Federation of Labor Exchanges. Thru its relations with the employes of the postal, telegraph and telephone services the C. G. T. has exercised a colossal influence in France and was responsible for the postal strike of 1909 and the naval reservist and railway strikes of the following year

Discussing the British situation at the date of his writing Sir Arthur Clay remarks that "there can be no doubt that at the present time the relations between capital and labor in this, as well as in other countries are in a position of more than usually unstable equilibrium. Existing conditions cannot continue and unless some means can be found for harmonizing the relations between these two great social forces, industrial agitation and conflict must become more widely spread and more serious and the progress of civilization will be jeop-ardized. This opinion has been sustained by the materialization of the strike of mine workers in Great Britain and by the partial strikes and general unrest in France, Germany and the United States. So far as the British miners are concerned it is conceded that they have substantial grounds for their demand that the principle of a minimum wage be conceded. The question would not have arisen but for the admitted fact that the coal seams are not of constant quality. A miner may encounter a series of "faults," stony dips and interruptions which may reduce his output of coal to a point insufficient to yield him a living wage. The difficulty is not new and in particular cases the employers have recognized the justice of the demand. Coal is a necessity and in Britain at least there is no present prospect that any general substitute can be found. Possibly in the future the vast movement of the tides may be turned to advantage but as things are Britain has no such natural water powers as Ontario possesses and have been made available by the public policy of the Ontrio

Another point practically peculiar to Britain is the system of royalties imposed in the interest of the surface owners. Except in the relatively small number of instances where surface rights have been sold or leased under reservation of the minerals, these royalties are drawn by the land owner from all minerals in process of working. The five per cent. tax imposed by Mr. Lloyd George yielded in 1909 no less than $1,500,000. This means that British land owners drew during that year the large amount of $30,000,000 in royal-ties on coal alone. They vary in amount from a maximum of 30 cents a ton in the West of Scotland to 5 cents in Northumberland and Durham—the average running from 14 cents to 6 cents. In the black districts of Germany the minimum royalty is 31/2 cents and the amount which goes to the state, not to the land owners, varies with the price of coal and is on the whole lower than the British impost. In Belgium the tax is two cents and in France the royalty system can hardly be said to exist. British mining royalties are not dependent on anything but the amount of coal which is sent to the surface and the call has already been made that they ought to bear a part of the extra charges involved by an increase in wages. The call is supported by the fact that the toll taken by the landlords has on occasion been varied for the benefit of the coal lessees and if so the question is pertinently asked, why not for the improvement of

On the other hand the coal owners put up a case mainly based on a wages agreement entered into in the year 1910. The miners are accused of violating that agreement which it is claimed has operated equitably for them. In the case of abnormal conditions the coal owners claim that they have always been willing to make a fair allowance in the way of compensation. It is also offered in their behalf that the imposition of a minimum wage would remove a powerful incentive to the collier to do his best and that the inevitable result would be a sharp falling off in the production, due to the feeling that no matter what the output a good day's wage would be received. Under the system hitherto existing, it is claimed, the miner himself loses, as well as the colliery proprietor, by laziness or indifference. That there is some reason for this contention has been shown by the position taken by Mr. Asquith who, while acknowledging that the case for a minimum wage had been established, also indicated that some guarantee for efficient working should be required from the miner. The mine owners also represent that the average dividend paid on capital employed for the past financial year was only a little over 6 per cent. Averages are, however, unreliable quantities. Some collieries paid no dividend, others paid very large dividends and were easily able to advance wages. But undoubtedly the chief obstacle in the way of an agreement is the difficulty of granting a minimum wage except on the basis of a minimum of work in return.

Coal and transportation lie at the root of British national pros perity and the logic of events which cannot be resisted has created in these lines two thoroly organized and largely antagonistic parties. That same logic has led directly to syndicalism, which as Earl Gray recently remarked is based on the theory of essential antagonism between classes. His remedy is co-partnership of capital and labor. Nothing but co-partnership, he thinks, can create or restore the sense of community of interest between those engaged in industrial enterprizes. Earl Grey does not regard nationalization of the mines as offering any security against strikes and refers to the strikes on the nationalized coal mines of New Zealand and in the postoffice. Co-partnership he holds, can be fostered by the state if the rule is made that whenever other things are equal public contracts shall go to those firms which have admitted the principle of co-partnership. The national issues involved by the general disturbance of trades and industries are so great and far-reaching that in the near future a serious effort must be made to prevent stoppage of work in basic enterprizes.

A LEAK

The Weakness of Laurier

We have never underestimated the ability of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He is the greatest poet we have in Canada and he has a natural gift for politics. He took his defeat last September in a way that commended him to the people and he helped the dumfounded Liberals to pick themselves up and reform as best they could their scattered legions. It was felt at that time that the Liberals would be strengthened by his leadership; the feeling to-day is no less general that they will be benefited by his retirement.

The trouble is that Sir Wilfrid is not fighting the Conservatives, but the Nationalists. He seems to be less concerned with Borden than with Bouris set upon humiliating the Nationalists who contributed to his humiliation. At every point he seeks to charge them with inconsistency and to demonstrate that they arrayed the clerical influence against him by false pretences.

Now all this is interesting, but from the standpoint of the Liberal party it is not politics. Sin Wilfrid lost ten or twelve seats in Quebec at the last election, but Quebec did not place the Borden Government in power. His uncalled for comments upon the nomination of Dr. Sproule for speaker his proposed amendment to the address criticizing the personnel of the cabinet, and his fatuous trifling with the school question were all promoted by desire to embarrass his personal enemies in the Province of Quebec. They certainly could not and did not help the Liberal party.

Generally speaking it is well for the members of a defeated government to efface themselves, and let the rank and file of the party take up the work of opposition. Sir John Macdonald passed from the leadership of the government to the leadership of the opposition, and thence to the leadership o the government again, but Sir John was a marvelous man, and political probabilities cannot be measured by his achievements.

Elections This Year

General elections will probably be held this year in five provinces of the Dominion. In British Columbia the McBride Government has already appealed to the country and polling is set for the 28th inst. In New Brunswick the legislature is holding its last session and dissolution will follow hard upon prorogation. Elections are due this summer in Quebec and in Saskatchewan and Premier Sifton is said to be shivering on the brink in

The return of the McBride Government in British Columbia, and of the Fleming Government in New Brunswick are taken for granted. In Quebec the situation is complicated by the rumored retirement of Sir Lomer Gouin and the attitude of the extreme Nationalists headed by Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne. In Saskatchewan, Walter Scott and his government would be hopelessly beaten on provincial issues, but an effort may be made to round up the grain growers on the reciprocity issue. In Alberta there has hardly been any party government for some years. Mr. Sifton is enlarging his cabinet, and conciliating all the insurgents, including Charlie Cross.

MycSecrets of Beauty Advice About Hands

"Work the hands back and forth from the wrist for a few miutes."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

Many of my correspondents complain that they are emerging from Winter with "disgraceful looking hands." I do not suppose that this statement is really true. Americans, and especially American girls, are prone to extravagance in conversation. What they mean, as I learn by reading their letters further for particulars in this bill of complaint, is that the hands look rough and red.

Don't mourn those reddened, coarselooking hands. You will only etch lines in your face and cause the muscles to sag as muscles do early in life if they have not been upheld by a cheerful disposition and the facial exercise that laughter brings. Besides all force is wasted that is not used in upbuilding new conditions or in remedying old ones. What is to be done with those red

First, do not expose them to sudden changes of temperature.

Don't plunge them into hot water and draw them out of the hot water and dry them in a cold room. Sleep in a cold room by all means, but don't dress in one. If there are no means to make your bedroom warm for the morning toilet dress in some part of the house that is warmed, if necessary by the kitchen stove. Cold followed by heat or the opposite extreme is sure to redtexture of their skin

Second, do not wear tight gloves. dislike a tightly-gloved hand. It has always seemed to me vulgar. I am glad to see that Fashion is recognizing this and giving her endorsement to the practice of wearing gloves a half or whole size too large, so that the glove will wrinkle a trifle over the hand and look as though the wearer were comfortable. Wear gloves that are otherwise comfortable, that is, that do not irritate the skin. For Summer cotton or very thin suede, silk or chamois are best. Suede / are best in Winter, because they are softer than most other materials used by the glover in providing his stock. Woollen gloves may be worn over the gloves, but I do not advise wearing them next to the skin, for they chafe the skin, making it rough. Third, do not wash them in water too often while they are in the coarse, reddened state. Remove the dust or grime when possible by rubbing oil or cold cream over the hands and afterwards carefully wiping them. When you wash them in water let it be in merely warm water. Into this you may drop a teaspoonful of powdered borax to a quart of water, or in the same amount of water a dessertspoonful of liquid ammonia or a half dozen drops of tincture of benzoin. All these will whiten the skin. If you drop in the water a handful of bran er oatmeal it will soften and whiten the hands. Drying the hands is as important as washing them. In the first place don't thoroughly dry them, but rather leave that task half done, and pour over the hands a half dozen or more drops of glycerine. If glycerine does not "agree" with your hands, but seems to irritate them, its action is softened by mixing the glycerine with an equal por tion of honey. Another preparation that helps to dry the hands and at the same time refine the texture of the skin is:

Rose water, 1 oz.

That faithful aid to beauty, the lemon, should be on every tollet table. The juice of half of one could be mingled with the same quantity of glycerine for the after wash drying of hands

Dry the hands gently. Don't treat them as though you were putting them through a clothes wringer with the Monday wash.

New York City is Expected to Take Similar Action When Ordinance Is Veted Upon.

NEW YORK, March 16.-The farreaching effect of the campaign against the use of the muffler cut-out on motor cars is evidenced in an order recently of London, which will end the cut-out nuisance in that city on March 31. The local campaign against the cut-out was proval by the vast majority of the auto obile community, but it may be asked why does not the order go further and should it not eventually be extended to motorcycles, many of which emit reports like Maxim guns as they go thru the streets? There is no more diffi-culty in having a silent motorcycle than in having a silent motor-car, and perfectly efficient silencers are now fitted to the best makes, thus demonstrating that it would be no great hardship to fix a date after which open exhausts on motorcycles should also be prohib-

The Fallacy of Buying a "Discount" Automobile

When you buy an automobile at a cut price you forfeit

There are two kinds of "Discount" cars—those that are purposely listed at a high figure so that their price may be cut and those on which the dealer divides his profit. Cars of the first named class have no definite value. The prices at which they are sold are seldom the same to any two buyers. While you might receive a 10% discount, as likely as not Since no two have paid the same price there is no basis of valuation if you ever wish to re-sell the car.

car is not of as much value if once having been represented in the community it no longer is sold

If dealers split their profits they must sooner or later go out of business. They cannot stand back of the car with the service it should have.

And after all, that is the biggest item to consider. Don't buy any car that does not carry with it a complete service from the dealer.

By securing even a 20% discount you put your-self in a position to pay double that apparent saving in repair and service charges, before the

Howard E. Coffin Built It

To all who know, that is an endorsement of the greatest value. It is in its line, as if to establish the merit of a new electric light, one would say it was an invention of Thomas A. Edison. Nothing more could be said.

The "33" is Mr. Coffin's latest of six great automobiles.

Year after year during all the rapid development of the industry, he has been its recognized leader. His inventions are universally used. His cars of earlier design are even now leaders of their class tho' built years ago.

He has made the "33" a simpler car than any one else has

It is quieter, too. The mechanism is entirely protected from dust and dirt. There are approximately 1000 fewer parts.

The saving effected by this simplicity accounts for the high quality of materials, of workmanship and of an equipment equaled only by care selling at above $2500.

Here is told but a few things of which you should think seriously in making such a large purchase as is involved in buying an automobile. Let us tell you more. Certainly it is to your advantage to buy at as low a price you can. But don't forfeit service or accept an uncertain value, to obtain that discount.

It will be worth your while to talk to us before you place your order for any automobile selling under $2500. Won't you either come to see us, or write or telephone?

The early automobile enthusiasts were mostly designers and builders. were mostly designers and builders. They were pretty nearly the only dedenders of the "horseless carriage" in those days; but their predictions have all come true. The Duryea Brothers were among the best of the prophets. J. Frank Duryea had the vision to see the automobile in its final form and for its final purpose before most men formulated either. That is probably why in developing the Stevens-Duryea car he originated one after another of the features of construction that have become fundemental in all fine cars now. "In the application to vehicles alone it will be widely beneficial. Bicycles of all sizes will be equipped with it. Small, light boats will be driven by it at high speeds, and there is no reason why our many streams and bodies of water should not become as popular water should not become as popular pleasure resorts as the bicycle has made our common roads. Tri-cycles, carriages—both large and small—will be nicely adapted to the needs of everybody, and in a few years their prices will likewise be suited to the buyer's purse.

Practically all of this prediction has come true. Its application to house-house has had more difficulties to overcome in its early stages. It is amusing to lock back at some of the objections to motor-cars that were raised a dozen or fifteen years ago, and then to hear the common complaint mow-a-days the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first successful American gasolene motor-cars that were raised a dozen was the first s

They were based, of course, on a more intimate knowledge than what most people had of what J. Frank Duryea was doing in developing the gasolene motor.

"Such a motor will be found useful in almost every household and in every shop of every kind for all classes of work," said Duryea, discussing automobile engines, with the light of his brother's inventive genius behind him.

Bunty Pulls the Strings" to be Presented Here This Week By An Imported All-Scotch Co.

The Royal Alexandra Theatre this week will have as an attraction, the successful Scotch comedy "Bunty Pulls the Strings," by Graham Moffat. The appearance of "Bunty Pulls the Strings" in America marks an epoch in American theatricals, from the fact that it is the first all-Scotch company that has ever been imported from the Scottish theatres, dealing with an entirely Scotch subject, and written by a Scotch author and actor. It was a mooted question among American prolucers for a long while, whether such an attraction would stand a chance of success in America, and argument ran high. However, the Messrs. Shubert and W. A. Brady had faith in it, and without any undue heralding the "Bunty" opened in New York, and the rest is American theatrical nistory. Not in the memory of the oldest play-goers had New York seen its like, and by the middle of the day following, its first performance, the house was sold out, and has kept sold out since the tenth

Do you know of a level crossing which should be protected and is not If you knew of any such crossing and anyone is killed upon it bec it is an unprotected crossing it will be your fault after you have read the words and those that follow.

If you want to be an ostrich and hide your head from your remone bility, read no further.

All that anyone who knows of a dangerous and unprotected crossing has to do to secure the protection of that crossing is to write to the ch man of the Dominion Railway Board. Describe the crossing. Tell wh it is dangerous and it is the sworn duty of the railway commission to vestigate and verify your facts.

It is then their further duty to order the immediate protection of crossing. Of the expense of this the board may bear twenty per cent. to $5,000 and the remainder must be borne by the municipality in which the crossing lies and by the railway or railways which own the track.

Three years ago the Dominion Government voted a million dollare to be spent at the rate of $200,000 a year to protect dangerous level crossing With this was the power to command the expenditure by railway companies and municipalities of another four million dollars.

The board are not compelled to act off their own bat, but when the receive a complaint they must act. The complaint is up to you.

In the three years since the passage of the act only 129 crossings have been protected. The commissioners have reported that they know of m applications being refused.

In those three years 174 persons have been killed on level crossing while 218 have been injured. Even if only those who had been injured. and have recovered had applied for the protection of the crossings upo which they were hurt many crossings still waiting to claim a further toll of death would now be safe-guarded. If the relatives of those who have given up their lives upon such crossings had complained many more would have been protected.

What is the answer? Do those who have lost their flesh and blood to these monstrous anachronisms care nothing that others may come to their corrows? Do those who have been injured upon these crossings test that there is no danger of their again coming into danger upon them and therefore do not care? It is not that it is once more the working of maniferentest enemy, ignorance. They do know.

It is up to every man who reads this to see to it that if he knows of any dangerous crossing it shall forthwith become a protected crossing. It will not be enough for him to protect just one crossing and then rest upon his laurels. But let each man resolve that he shall have at least that one saving grace to his credit and then go on and on and on.

Here is a pleasant and very present little hunt for the sportsman det out and bag a level crossing. There is no closed season and no sportsman license is required. You may bring down as many of them as you can find. Start right out and protect your crossings. If your children have to cross one on their way to school, protect it, and in so doing protect them. If one lies on your way to work, whether you travel afoot or in your motor car, see that it is protected. If you cross one on the way to church or to the corner store to buy a cigar, see that it is protected.

Not only resolve to protect all the crossings of which you know or shall come to know, but tell your friends and get them in the game. Out out this sermon and mail it to your sister, to your cousin or your aunt and get them gunning for dangerous crossings.

Remember that all you have to do is to write to the railway commission at Ottawa and tell where it is and why it is dangerous and they must do the rest.

It is always fun to spend money when it does not reduce your bank roll. Come on and spend that four million dollars.
IT is up to YOU!

First, let ing enough to accept a scheme which would not amount to much more than making the Irish legislature a kind of glorified county council, to deal with purely trivial local and provincial affairs, he is now no longer master of the situation. He has got to save his own skin; he has got to save his own party from being derided, despised, and rejected by his own people. He has been compelled to put forth fresh demands, painfully conscious—for he is a far-seeing politician—that the claims he is obliged to make may defeat their own object. He has intimated to the reform of the house of lords, but really on the tacon the tac-

"We Shall Compel You."

Ministers have got to think of the future of the Liberal party. The confident in their own minds that the general feeling of the electorate is favorable to the abstract principle of home rule, they know perfectly well they will have a long sojourn in political exile if they say to the British electorate: "We are not going to consult you on the provisions of our home rule bill, but, under the authority of the Parliament Act, we shall set up an independent legislature in Dublin; we shall make you pay towards old-age pensions in Ireland; we will compel you to contribute millions a year to assist the Irish, and we will give the Irish the right to control the Excise and the Customs, and to tax British goods landing at Irish poets." the turn the tables on his opponents and said it was really the Unionists who had to get the aid of Mr. Redmond and his men if the government were going to be removed. Unionists laughed at what they thought to be a far-fetched and daring argument even for the prime minister. But Mr. Asquith was quite right, and I have an idea that he made the observation, and took notice of the repudiation, for use on a subsequent occasion.

Churchill's Plans

Thirdly, Mr. Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, is not going, as he is mittled, to take up his residence at Admiralty House. His public explanation is that to reside there is much too expensive for a man without large prints means. At the dinner table, however, he laughs and says, "Well, it is not worth while to have all the trouble of going there for only three months."

The right to control the Ercise and the customs, and to tax British goods landing at Irish ports."

If they did this the cabinet would be sure of a continuation of Nationalist support during the next couple of years, when, despite rejection by the house of lords, home rule will become law. But they have to consider their own fate when once more they appeal to their constituencies. The government might, of course, take its courage in both hands, and, greatly daring, call upon their followers to support the kind of home rule which the extreme sections of the Nationalists in Ireland are demanding. They know tull well, however, the price they would have to pay, and there is every indication that they do not intend to pay it.

What, then is going to be the procedure in three months. The government does not expect to be in office in three months' time, and the mason of its departure will be defeat by the joint votes of Unionists and Nationalists on the question of home rule, the Unionists condemning it because it goes too far, and the Nationalists condemning it because it goes too far, and the Nationalists condemning it because it does not so far enough.

What is quite certain at present is character at to meet with the approval what is quite certain at present is that the cabinet have not yet decided on the momentous questions whether, under the home rule scheme, the Irish parliament is to have complete control of Irish finance, including the customs, and what proportion of Irish representatives shall in future sit at Westminster.

Questions of Home Rule.

The original idea undoubtedly was rather a milk-and-water plan of local self-government which was not likely to raise the antagonism of Englishmen and Sectional self-government which was not likely to raise the antagonism of Englishmen and Sectional self-government which was not likely to raise the antagonism of Englishmen and Sectional self-government which was not likely to raise the antagonism of Englishmen while to shift all his goods to Admiralty elf-government which was not likely at the dinner table that it is not will to raise the antagonism of Englishmen while to shift all his goods to Admiralty and Scotsmen as it was raised a House for three months.

Quarter of a century ago when proposals for home rule became acute in British polities. Mr. Redmond, Mr. Dillon, and the other chiefs of the Nationalist party have been, and are, pertained willing to accept a modified measure of local self-government, because in the historic words of Mr. ecause, in the historic words of Mr. their action in regard to home rule will billion at Bermondsey, if the Irish can not have alienated great masses of Libert actions and the contract the contract of the c only set the half it will not be long before they get the whole. Life has not opened its sliver portais to them, and they have turned down the path leading to eternal sordidness and degradation. People look askance at them, and sneer a little, perhaps, forgetting that they were pretty and enthusiastic once, but they turned the handle of the wrong door, and walked down the corridor to the room of Unfortunate Despair. After all, they are human souls, and have been misadjusted in their cranny in Life.

A crowd gathers at a street corner. A flashily dressed man stands in a wagon exhorting them to buy. He holde aloft a bottle of brown looking stuff, which is guaranteed to cure all ills, from ingrowing toenalls to tuberculosis. One by one, he gathers in the quarters, and one by one the crowd disperses. He is a money-grabber, a cowardly parasite, who lives on the labor of his fellows. The hat tamale man sniffs and claps his hands together, and goes on calling his wares. And the dark-hued couple who stand playing the hurdy-gurdy shake their tambourines, and march on down the street.

is displayed in what might be termed as the middle section of this very remarkable costume. The crushed girdle relieves any severity. But quite the most unusual touch is the tablier collar.

A few months ago this tablier effect was aung in front from a high waitt line. Mile. Gaby's newest gown shows it hanging down the back. It starts from the upper band of trimming on her bodice, runs over the shoulder and ends below her waist line—in fact, at the exreme dower band of the trimming. Only a slender, flat-backed woman could manage this without appearing protessure.

Gone is the high colffure with which Gaby familiarized us during her stay in New York. She reappears in Paris with a new coiffure, one which shows the shape of her head. It is low and only slightly wayed, and the only decoration is a narrow, jeweled band, a duplicate of the one which Princess Patricia wears.

This week I am going to explain some of the novelties by which you can give a of the novelties by which you can give a suggestion of Spring smartness to your wintery costumes at the first suitable and sunshiny moments. For example, in some of the new lace, whose naming as "Shadow Chantilly" will give you some little idea of its soft and elusive loveliness, which is in direct contrast, by the way, to the bold beauty of a new version of the "point de Venise plat," which, a clever and inexpensive conv. as it is, of the old style of pensive copy, as it is, of the old style of plat Venetian, is also assured of a vogue during the coming season, more especially in a very uncommon and effective shade

Some lace flouncings, too, where the design is worked in ivory tone on a background of rather coarse ecru net, is a forthcoming and fascinating novelty, as in also a blending of point d'esprit and Maline lace, while as to the durable and decorative broderie Anglaise, it promises to be more varied and attractive than

There are, too, some new lace collars, by means of which those of you who may be inclined—or, what seems more likely, compelled—to study economy, may at small cost get an appearance of up-todateness and costliness to an old theatre coat, be this of fur, or velvet, or satin.

This immediate use is no deterrent to the later appearance of the pretty thing, or a filmy chiffon wrap, or even a Spring tailor-made, seeing that Fashion's favor is given to this latest and largest lace col-lar in one and all of these different posi-

Now it will help any of you who are so inclined to display the odd, or one-sided bodice, which is the fashion—or the treak—of the moment, this tunic being entirely composed of pale ecru-tinted tace as regards its skirt, though at the Last, and actually least, too, as regards its size— wiolet here is the "Casaque" tunic, with seamlessly covered kimono corsage, very high waist line and very short skirt pattern which only just covers the hips. The variously colored chiffon of which it is made being worked all over with a Valenciennes lace design in erru and medallions of the new and effective Epsonge embroidery in white, a little fringe of grelottes again combining the white ecru tones very prettily.

Such a tunic will, of course, transform the plainest white or pastel-colored or black satin slip into quite a smart tiolette, so I commend it to your special con-

Blouses in their turn still proclaim the popularity and the preciness of varied effects. Paisley patterned crepe de causes and soft silks being softened by a filmy transparency of black or colored ninon, while metallic net will just shimmer faintly through, first a softness of mellow-toned lace and then a final velling of ninon, white broderie anglaise being another fabric which is going to be much used in conjunction and contrast with ninon, and not only for blouse, but for entire dresses as well.

The germ of this disease has been discovered, but not its anti-serum, or any successful means of preventing its spread. The medium of infection is the minute, gelatinous has such extraordinary vitality that it even adheres to and destroys barkless chestnut fence

These sticky little seeds of the death-dealing fungus are peculiarly adapted to be carried to be carried from one tree to another on the feet of insects, squirrels and birds-and thus the infection has spread in the last few years to nearly every chestnut forest and grove east of the Alleghenys. chestnut trees in Bronx Park are gone.

Probably the fine chestnut forests of Southeastern Pennsylvania and Central New Jersey show the worst ravages of this disease. The situation is so serious that Governor Tener, of Pennsylvania, has issued a call for a convention to be held in the State Cap-itol at Harrisburg on February 20 and 21 of this year to consider the important problem of sav-ing what healthy chestnut trees remain.

A forest attacked by this fungus growth is a melancholy sight. The chestnuts mortally stricken, or already dead, stand out ghastly white among their living companions. Close inspection leaves no doubt about the cause. The exterior appearances of this fungus first is numerous yellow pus-tules on the smooth bark of the tree. In the deep cracks of the oldest bark it takes the form of yel-low or orange lines. Later the color turns to a much deeper yellow and finally deeper yellow and finally brown of deepening sades. Within the pus-tules, the perithecia are

With n the permecia are the elongated sacs or asci containing the spores, always eight in number.

It is estimated that this tree blight during two years has cost $100,000,000 in whole forests destroyed.

What is the remedy? It must soon be found, or the chestnut's career in this country is ended.

Fry one medium-sized onion in two ounces of butter, without letting it acquire any color. Add one-quarter of a pound of fresh lean bacon, or raw ham cut into medium sized dice; fry for a few minutes and add about one pound of boned chicken meat cut into large dice. Let these ingredients stiffen well; take care to stir fairly often and moisten with two quarts of white chicken consomme. Boil and set to cook gently for twenty or twenty-five minutes with lid on. Now, add about one-half pound of peeled gombo cut in coarse slices, and three or four medium sized tomatoes peeled, chopped up and with their seeds removed. When the gombos are well cooked, carefully remove all grease from the preparation. Test the seasoning, and if desired add a few drops of Worcestershire cauce. Gernish the soup with two or three tablespoon-fuls of plainly cooked rice.

This is a very delicious but expensive soup.

Turkey Stuffed with Chestnuts.

F OR a turkey of six pounds take one and a half pounds of sausage meat and two pounds of chestnuts. Split the shells of the chestnuts and soak them for several minutes in very hot fat. Then skin them quickly and put them in a saucepan with a good quantity of ordinary broth, or simply hot water. Keep the chestnuts as whole as possible. When they are cooked, drain them and mix them in with the sausage meat. With this mixture stuff the turkey, which you must take care to clean well, and season the inside with salt and pepper. When the turkey is well stuffed, tie it up and cover it with strips of cooking bacon. The this bacon on, and set the turkey to roast in the oven, taking care to have a moderate heat. Baste it frequently during the cooking. When it is cooked to a turn, serve it accompanied by its own gravy, in a sauce book. This gravy should have a little fat.

good hot or cold. In case you wish to serve it cold, a good simple vinaigrette sauce already described may be served with it.

A favorite sauce to serve with hot asparagus is "Sauce Hollandaise." A simple way of preparing this sauce is as follows: Boll down a small glass of vinegar with as much water and a pinch of salt. Then remove to the corner of the fire and throw in four yolks of eggs. Beat up vigorously to mix the yolks thoroughly. Then thicken with about half a pound of melted butter, dropping in from time to time a drop of vinegar. Keep the sauce in a warm condition during the latter part of this operation.

In view of what occurred at Dothe-time.

So the grey wolf passed silently along his way down the fir-tipped upland, nose pointed towards the white wisp of old moon hanging low above the trees, and the king rat, snugly ensconced behind the frozen armor of his grass roof, continued his sleep unmolested.

That same evening the big muskrat had drifted out of his citadel of green white water and reed, thru the narrow channel gate to the greater water beyond. He knew that in so doing he was risking much, but he had fed all winter on the roots of the sluggish water, and the swift river-current bore on its bosom many little succulent titbits from the upper regions, where spring was loosening the bands of the mountain waters, such as a bit of green moss, a twisting white flag-root, or a bunch of knotted lily-bulbs. From his narrow entrance-channel the big rat had seen these tender morsels go swirling by on the stream. Back in the lower chamber of his dome-like home, his mate, no longer able to hunt for herself, waited for him to return with food with which to gratify her hunger.

So he had ventured out in the free water. He hugged the wooded shore of the stream, swimming low, his round ears and blunt nose above the water, his small hand-like forepaws curled under his throat, his strong hind feet pushing him swiftly up the stream in spite of the resistance of the current.

Some sixty yards from his gate, he turned and with a quick movement of his hind legs shot far out into the swirling ice-caked water. He had spied the branch of a green-willow drifting on the current.

As he grasped the branch, setting his long obtail like texth firmely to the stream in spite of the current. So the grey wolf passed silently along the branch of a green-willow drifting on the current.

As he grasped the branch, setting his long chisel-like teeth firmly in its tender bark, and turned once again homeward. a slender black animal, long of body and short of legs ran along a partly submerged log on the river shore and dropped noiselessly into the water. The rat, drifting leisurely down stream, towards the black entrance of his home, saw nothing of bis enemy until the hig mink was close unon him

Like a flash the mink darted in, and my whole reveals a prominent man as the shakey head, with its long sharp teeth flashed towards his throat for the death grip, the rat dived, and with swift sure stroke struck upward with his yellow fangs.

The mink squealed, and twisting about, buried its teeth in the rat's shoulder. Its grip was a bare half inch too low to give the killing strike, and with a swirl of the yellow water the twe animals sank down, down, into the cold black river's depths. The mink was struggling now, struggling to free himself, and finish the battle closer to the river's surface. But the rat's teeth gripped tighter, and down they passed into the blacker depths of the current.

"What I want," he finished by de-claring, with savage distinctness, "is one-on-the-trunk."

And the operator, who evidently knew some slang-probably she had brothers-retorted, quietly, "Yes. you do."

OLIVER'S ADVICE.

The night is gath'ring gloomily, the night is closing fast;
The tempest flans his raven wings, in loud and angry blast!
The thunder clouds are driving athwart the lurid sky
But put your trust in God, my boys, and keep your powder dry.

There was a day when loyalty was hailed with honor due, anner the protection wav'd to all the good and true—And gallant hearts beneath its folds were link'd in honor's

tle. We put our trust in God, my boys, and kept our powder dry.

They come, whose counsels wrapped the land in foul, rebellious flame.

Their hearts unchastened by remorse, their cheeks untinged by shame.

Be still, be still, indignant heart—be tearless, too, each eye
And put your trust in God, my boys, and keep your powder dry.

The Pow'r that led His chosen flock by pillar'd cloud and flame
Thru parted sea and desert waste, that Pow'r is still the same;
He falls not—He, the loyal hearts that firm on Him rely
So put your trust in God, my boys, and keep your powder dry.

For "Happy homes," for "Altars free," we grasp the ready sword
For freedom, truth, and for our God's unmutilated word,
These, these the war-cry of our march, our hope the Lord

Then put your trust in God, my boys, and keep your powder dry.

THE BATTLE OF THE BOYNE.

July the first, in Oldbridge town, There was a grievous hattle. Where many a man lay on the ground
By cannons that did rattle.

King James he pitched his tents between
The lines for to retire;
But King William threw his bomb-balls in
And set them all on fire.

Thereat revenge the Irish vowed
Upon King William's forces,
And venemently with ories did crowd
To check their forward courses,
A ball from out their battery fiew,
As the King he faced its fire;
His shoulder knot away it shot
Quoth he, "Pray come no nigher!"

Then straight his officers he did call,
Saying, "Gentlemen, mind your station,
And prove your valor one and all
Before this Irish nation,
My brazen walls let no one break
And your subtle fees you'll scatter,
Let us show them to day good English play,
As we so over the water."

Then horse and foot, we marched amain,
Resolved their ranks to batter,
But the brave Duke Schomberg he was slain,
As we went over the water.
Then King William cried, "Feel no dismay
At the losing of one commander,
For God shall be our King to-day.
And I'll be general under."

Then stoutly we Boyne River crossed
To give the Irish battle;
Our cannon to his dreadful cost
Like thunder-claps did rattle.
In majestic mien our prince rode o'er;
The stream ran red with elaughter,
As with blow and shout we put to route
Our enemies over the water.

PADDIES EVERMORE The hour is past to fawn or crouch
As suppliants for our right;
Let word and deed unshrinking vouch
The banded million's might;
Let those who scorned the fountain rill
"We're Paddles evermore!"
Let those who scorned the fountain rill
Now dread the torrent's roar,
And hear our echoed chorus etill
Now dread the torrent's roar,

We're Paddies evenmore!"

Look round—The Frenchman governs France.
The Spaniard rules in Spain:
The gallant Pole but waits his chance.
To break the Russian chain.
The strife for freedom here begun
We never will give o'cr.
Nor own a land on earth but one.
We're Paddies and no more.

THE WEARING OF THE GREEN.

Oh! Paddy dear, and did you hear the news that's soing round?

The Shamrock is forbid by law to grow on Irish ground:

Saint Patrick's Day no more we'll keep, this color can't be

For there's a cruel law agin the wearing of the green.

I met with Napper Tandy, and he tuk me by the hand.

And said he "How's poor ould Ireland, and how does she stand?"

She's the most distressful country that ever yet was seen:
They're hanging men and women there for wearin' of the green.

Then since the color we must wear is England's cruel red,
'Twill serve but to remind us of the blood that she has shed;
You may take the Shamrock from your hat and east it on the sod,
But, never fear, 'twill take root there, the under foot 'tis trod.
When laws can stop the blades of grass from growing as they grow, they grow,
And when the leaves in summiretime their vacture dare not show,
Then I will change the color I wear in my caubeen;
But till that day, place God, I'll stick to wearin of the green.

ERIN, THE TEAR AND THE SMILE

Erin, the tear and the smile in thime ever Blend like the raimbow that hangs in the rikies Thy suns, with doubtful gleam Shining thru sorrow's stream, Sadd'ning thru pleasure's beam Weep while they rise,

Erin, thy silent tear never shall cease—
Erin, thy languid smile ne'er shall increase—
Till, like the rainbow's light,
Thy various tints unite
And form in Heaven's sight,
One arch of peace!

RICH AND RARE. By Thomas Moore.

Rich and rare were the gems she wore.

And a bright gold ring on her wand she bore;

But oh, her beauty was far beyond

Her sparkling gems and snow-white wand.

But oh, her beauty was far beyond

Her sparkling gems and snow-white wand.

"Lady! dost thou not fear to stray,
So lone and lovely, thru this bleak way?
Are Erin's sons so good or so cold
As not to be tempted by woman or gold?"
"Sir. Knight. I feel not the least alarm;
No son of Brin will offer me harm,
For, tho they love woman and golden store
Sir Knight, they love honor and virtue more."

On she went, and her maiden smile in safety lighted her round the green isle; And blest for ever was she who relied Upon Erin's honor and Erin's pride.

THE BELLS OF SHANDON.

By the Rev. Francis Mahony (Father Prout). With deep affection and recollection.

I often think of those Shandon Bells,
Whose sounds so wild, would, in days of childhood,
Fling round my cradle their magic spell;
On this I ponder, where'er I wander,
And thus grow fonder, sweet Cork of thee,
With thy bells of Shandon,
That sound so grand on
The pleaseant waters of the River Lee.

I've heard bells chiming, full many a clime in.

Tolking sublime in cathedral shrine?

While at a glib rate their brass tongues would vibrate.

But all their music spoke mought like thine;

For memory dwelling on each proud swelling

Of thy belfry knelling its bold notes free,

Made the bells of Shandon

Sound far more grand on

The pleasant waters of the River Lee.

Pve heard bells tolling "Old Adrian's Mole" in.
Their thunder rolling from the Vatican,
And cymbols glorious, swinging uproarious
In the gorgeous turrets of Notre Dame:
But thy sounds were sweeter than the dome of Peter
Flings o'er the Tiber, pealing solemnly,
Oh; the bells of Shandon

Sound far more grand on The pleasant waters of the River Lee he decided to make the attempt for fieedom, and despite difficulties and dangers, he reached a seaport (probably modern Wicklow) and found a ship, laien with a cargo of dogs, ready to sail from thence. By great persuasion, he was permitted to work for his passage. After sailing steadily for three days, they landed, presumably, on the coast of western Gaul. From this point Patrick and the ship's company journeyed inland, thru desert and rough country, for nearly forty days, of deliverance and escape. He was born toward the close of the fourth century, probably between the years 277 and 389. The place of his birth. Bonavem of Taberniae, is also hidden in obscurity, some writers claiming Bonavem to be modern Dumbarton, south of the River Clyde; others aver that it was in southwestern Britain, near the sea coast, probably in the region of the lower Severn.

Patricius Sucatus, to give him his correct name, was the soh of one Calpurnius; a freeman and a Roman clitizen of Britain; a decurio or magistrate, belonging to the middle class of landed proprietors. Calpurnius was a deacon in the Christian Church, and his father. Potitus, had been a presbyter. Thus was Patrick educated in the Christian faith and early taught the scriptures.

About the time Patrick reached his sixteenth year, a party of Irish freelbooters landed on the seacoast near his home; plundered his father's farmhouse; and among others, he was taken prisoner and carried into captivity in Ireland. After weary journeyings across the island, Patrick was brought by his captors a master who dwelt near the wood of Fochlad, "nigh to the western and prayer.

Patrick was brought by his captors into the kingdom of Connaught, to serve a master who dwelt near the wood of Fochlad, "nigh to the western sea."

For six years Patrick served as a slave in Connaught, herding his master's flocks. During the time of this aptivity there came over his mind a great spiritual change. He had hitherto given little thought to religion, but now the Lord "opened the sense of his untellief," and in the ardor of his religious motion, he describes himself as often his own see and residence there, making it the prime church of Ireland. His ministry was not confined alone to Connaught, but extended over Ulster and Leinster, either by his own visitation or thru the work of his converts. There remain extant few details of the actual work accomplished in Ireland, but it was in nowise as easy, perfect or complete as legend would have us believe. The churches

Some years before his death he resigned his work as head of the Church of Armagh, and retired to Dalaradia, where he died at Saul on March 17th, 469 A.D. (This date is not definite.) Legend says that after his death there was no night for twelve days, and that for a whole year the nights were less dark than usually.

about fourteen years, during which time the was associated with Bishop of Germanus and Celestine, Bishop of Rome. Up to this time, ne definite work of evangelization had been carried on in Ireland, and the church now decided to send out a bishop with that end in view. Thus in 431 A.D. a deacoft, Palladius, was ordained first bishop of Ireland. He labored, however, only a short time, as he died within the year, and following his death, in 432 A.D., Patrick was ordained bishop to Ireland.

Many traditions and legends exist as to the miraculous powers possessed by St. Patrick, such as the banishment by him of frogs and snakes from the Green Isle, but these are mere fables, as even in the days of Patrick the people believed profoundly in fairy inhabitants, apparitions, voices, etc., and were ever more ready to believe in the supernatural than in the actual; and herein do we find to-day, as in the days of St. Patrick, the brilliant imagination of the Irish "not dim, nor its natural force abated."

HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ, AUTHOR OF "QUO VADIS," WHOSE NEWEST NOVEL, "IN DESERT AND WILDERNESS," A STORY OF AFRICA,

Among the current publications of the Copp. Clark Co. are: "The Trevor Case," by Natalie S. Lincoln, a detective story, with scenes laid in the City of Washington: "The City of Enticement," by Dorothea Gerard depicts the fascination of Vienna for a number of English people; "The Wrong Woman," by Chas. McClelland and Goodenid have the lowing new books: "The Garden of India," by Michael White, a book of tales of Incia, said to rival Kipling's best; "Country Neighbors," a pastoral of Long Island, by Susan Taber; "Shamrock Land." a book of Irish travel, by Plummer F. Jones; "Surgery and Society," a tribute to Listerism, by Dr. C. W. Saleeby; "How to Get a Job and How to Keep It," by Nathaniel C. Fowler, Jr. They announce also "The Lighted Way," by Opperiheim for early publication.

One point of interest in Norman S. Gurd's "Stand of Teeumseh," is that the description of the Battle of Tippecanoe differs very much from the account of the Battle of Tippecanoe, hitherto accepted. In the researches by the author he was fortunate enough to come across a despatch signed by Col. Elliott, Supt. of Indian affairs at Amherstburg, to Major-General Brock, containing a full account of the Battle of Tippecanoe as related to Colonel Elliott by a Kickapoo chief, who was present at the engagement. His description of the battle is founded on this Indian accounts on a

These accounts corroborated one another in many details, and differed from the account of the battle given by Drake in his Tecumseh, which was published in the early thirties, and by Eggleston in his later work, published in 1878.

Tecumseh's address to Brock, in which he shows the Indian belt, is taken from the report made by one of the government officials at Amherstburg, which report is now in the Canadian archives.

Mr. G. K. Chesterton now lives in the country a few miles from London in the dainty little Village of Beaconsfield. That is the reason, doubtless, why he is writing a preface to A. H. Beverstock s volume on the agricultural loborer in England. "There was a revolution," says Mr. Chesterton, "in England at the time of the French Revolution. In two aspects it differed from the French. It made no noise, and it was a triumph of the rich over the poor—especially the rural poor."

William Dean Howells, whose middle name so aptly describes the position he holds in American literature, is pre-eminently the man to whom the modern American author owes most. Alone almost, among American writers (an honor, indeed, which he shares only with the late Frank Norris), he has stood for the critical attitude, and for a distinct standard of criticism toward the art of the novelist. In these days of sensationalism, of the "muck-raking" novel, of morbidity and its attending dangers, Mr. Howells gallantly holds the fort for clean and wholesome ("realism." The we ourselves agree rather emphatically with R. L. S.'s strictures on Mr. Howell's theories of the literary art, we pause, ere we pass on to other matters, to congratulate the greatest American realist on his attaining his seventy-fifth birthday.—N. with his famous novel "Quo Vadis," of which nearly a militon copies have been sold. While "With Fire and Sword," "The Deluge" and "Pan Michael" brought this Polish author greater literary fame it was not until "Quo Vadis" appeared in 1896 that he leaped into popularity. A dozen other novels followed his "best seller" and in 1905 he was awarded the Nobel literary prize of $40,000, but of late Mr. Sienkiewicz has written less frequently. In his newest novel "In Desert and Wilderness" translated from the original Polish by Max A. Drezmal, Sienkiewicz conducts the reader on a real journey thru Africa in company with two kidnapped children. The author's extraordinary power of observation and faculty of description make the book glow with the atmosphere and color of the desert."

"Sienkiewicz," says William Lyons Phelps, Professor of English Literature at Yale University, "is undoubtedly one of the great masters of the realistic novel. He takes all human nature for his province. He has the very exuberance of power, and an endless wealth of material . . . and also the stimulating influence of a great moral force."

The Original Three Musketeers. With evident compiacency The London Standard announces to the world its discovery that D'Artagnan and the Three Musketeers were real personages and not creatures of fiction. The Standard might have pushed its discoveries a little further. It says, for instance, that Dumas rested his possel on a memoir of ther. It says, for instance, that Dumas rested his novel on a memoir of D'Artagnan by one Montfort, a historian with a poor reputation for veracity, and that the novelist did not believe in the existence of his heroes. "Probably," it says, "Dumas would have been more surprised than any one to know that his heroes after all had really an historical existence."

surprised than any one reliable than Montfort, and as Dumas had studied the period, we cannot imagine his being very much surprised if he should come to life and read The Standard. For instance, one of the best things in "The Vicomte de Bragelonne" is his story of D'Artagnan's capture of Fouquet. Any good life of Louis XIV, will tell The Standard how "the King sent M. Artagnan his Captain of Musketeers," after Fouquet, and will give the story of the arrest not very differently from the way in which Dumas sives it. The Standard's next discovery will probably be that La Mole and Coconnas, in "Queen Margot." (villainously entitled "Marguerite de Valois" in the English translations,) had "really an historical existence."

1 D'Artagnah was killed just in the way Dumas described. The provelist took liberties with the deaths of Athos and the rhymeshoud be submerged rather than augmented. Read "stilled" for "mute" in the first line, and "which God had stilled" in the second last line of the above quotation, and note the difference.

1 have indicated some of the faults of this verse, which may be overcome readily by careful study of technique, but in these poeems there is evidence of what a leading American critic calls "the inborn talent," and as an example of better work by this author, I quote:

Several volumes of verse have come to my desk within the last few weeks, but this is the only one which approaches near to real poetry, and this book contains many smooth-flowing lyrics, graceful and full of color, which yet seem to lack the "point d' appui"—like a joke with the joke left out, or a wasp without a sting.

Searching critically for the weakness in these verses, I am often at a loss to discover just why that necessary final fillip does not tickle the literary pelate. In other cases, however, the fault is easily discoverable. I know there are yet those who consider the power to write poetry to be the result of a divine afflatus, but a writer must either by dint of hard work, or by the constant unconscious process of absorption, sacquire skill in the combination of words, both as to their specific meantines, and as to, their specific meantines, and as to, their sound values.

Faked the Break.
A story is told of a street faker who was eloquently holding forth to a crowd with regard to the virtues of his cement. He was demonstrating by actual experiment the wonders it might perform. He took up a plate, broke it into halves, cemented the two pieces, and then suspended from the mended plate a ten-pound weight.

mended plate a ten-pound weight.

"As strong as steel, gents," cried the faker, "and always ready. To this plate I have hung a ten-pound weight. I will now substitute these for a twenty-pound weight. The cement, you observe, holds firm. I now increase the weight to thirty pounds, and—"

At this point in his discourse the plate broke, and there was a crash. plate broke, and there was a crash, whereat the the crowd smiled broadly.

The faker, however, refused to be cast down by this mishap. "And now, gents," he continued, "you will further observe that the plate now breaks with ease, thus affording an opportunity to cement the edges more carefully and firmly together whenever it is desirable to do so."

On a certain famous course the approach to one of the holes has to be played over a stream on to the green. Most golf balls have a fondress for stopping haif-way and falling into the stream, but a stranger who was playing on this course recently successfully drove his ball across. As he and his caddy leisurely followed the ball he asked: "What is this stream called?"

The caddy scratched his head.

I had by this time written quite a that still greater success might be members of which were till then almost amateurs, and produced two short plays-"Till the Bells Ring" and "Annie other Scottish players who are nearly all now in one or other of my companies in London, New York or on tour. I called my company at that time the Scottish National Players. The good notices which our work received in the Press encouraged me to go on, and I set about getting two fourther pieces. The Concealed Ped" and "A Scrape of the Pen which indue course were produced at, the Glasgow Athenaeum.

Then came the inauguration in Glasgow of the Scottish Repertory Theatro, one of the main objects of which, it was stated, was the giving of assistance to Scottish authors and the production of plays dealing with Scottish life. So it occured to me that I might be able to join forces therewith. I approached the management with the suggestion that the idea of having English actors to play Scottish roles was one that would most probably result in an injustice to both the actors and the roles. But, somehow nothing came of my overtures, and I decided, therefore, to fall back upon my own resources, and try the variety stage with "The Concealed Bed." The piece was cut down to suit music hall requirements, and was played as a farce at one of the Glasgow houses. However. even the as a draw it set up a record for the theatre, we had no little difdiculty in persuading other managers to give it house room. Still, we persisted, and bookings followed intermittently. At Aberdeen Mr. Walter Hast man. Another of my correspondents told me that his father was a poplar writer of humorous prose and verse, yet this is how his family had to spend Sunday: morning prayers, breakfast, church, dinner on food cooked the previous day, afternoon church, tea preparation for and followed by Bible class, family worship, bed.

A suggestion which certainly contained humor, the it did not seem such as could well be made use of, was put to me to the effect that in the scene outside the church an elder, who on week-days was the local carpenter (and, therefore, coffin-maker), might come up to Weelum with the remark in a much-concerned tone that the minister had not yet arrived, and as the congregation were getting impatlent, Weelum might take his place in the pulpit and "say a few words." After some argument, in which Weelum showed strong disinclination to fill the vacancy, the elder would conclude with the tempting offer, "Come! just say you'll do it, and I promise to make your coffin free of charge."

cess the following is eloquent: A few weeks back a copy of an illustrated paper, in which "Bunty" was dealt with at considerable length, was sent home to Milngavie, and was carefully perused, among other, by an old man who had been in the habit of working occasionally for us. As he handed back the paper his only remark was, "well, well, and to think that I cut their grass."

Already the word "Bunty" seems to have come to possess a meaning of its daughter in a household over the members of which she is apt to exercise a here is an expression which I am told one of a certain family used towards

A Plant Which Flowers Under Snow. The soldanellas of the high Alpine meadows of Switzerland bore their way up thru the coating of ice and snow by means of heat generated by the growing stem. Quite commonly, if the layer of snow is very thick, the flower will open without ever reaching the surface at all. The blossom is in no way affected by its strange surroundings. The space round the stem is, of course, thawed by the growing stem, which gives out heat. A Plant Which Flowers Under Snow.

Each one of the above four lines of figures spells a word. This most interesting puzzle can be solved with a little study, as follows: There are twenty-six letters in the alphabet, and we have used figures in spelling the four words instead of lettors. Letter A is number 1, B number 2, C number 3, etc. throughout the alphabet.

USE YOUR BRAINS. Try and make out the four words. ACT QUICKLY. This is a chance for clever persons to win Cash and other Prizes with a little effort. MERRIMAN, THE AUTHOR. "With Edged Tools" was the first of the brilliant series of Merriman novels to be put on the stage. It ran 1079 nights in London and Britain generally, and the balance of thirteen hundred in Montreal, Toronto, Chicago, Winnipeg and Western Canada, to all of which cities it has, or will, return. This success is largely due to the fact that the same brilliant original All-Star English Company has been kept together and have, so to speak, grown into their parts. This is the first time in Canadian theatrical history that an origincompany, complete in every detail, has been brought from the other side, and that a big production will be presented at less than dollar-fifty prices.

Merriman, the author, was a peculiar man. Modest to a degree, he was not of the class that sits in the office and writes news from the front. He drew out the whole plot and complete synopsis before he put pen to paper. His Ms. was clean-page after page without an erasure. The typewriter was a superfluity. He loved the life of action, and fate, rather than inclination, made a writer of him, and made him express himself in words and not
