Gently and clear the sparrow sings,
While twilight steals across the ses,
And still and bright the eveningTwinkles above the golden bar h, steadfastly the sparrow sings,

And sweet the sound; and sweet the touch
Of wooing winds; and sweet the sight
Of happy Nature's deep delight
In her fair spring, desired so much! But while so clear the sparrow sings A cry of death is in my ear; The crushing of the riven wreck Breakers that sweep the studderii And sounds of agony and fear.

How is it that the birds can sing?
Life is so full of bitter pain;
Hearts are, so wrung with hopeless gried
Woe is long and joy so brief;
Nor shall the lost return again.

Yet still the sparrow sits and sings,

Till longing, mourning, sorrowing love, Groping to find what hope may be Within death's awful mystery, Reaches its empty arms above; And, listening, while the sparrow sings, And soft the evening shadows fall, Sees, through the crowding tears that bil A little light, and seems to find And clasp God's hand, who wrought it all

Are put up in packets to meet the urgent demand of my customers for reliable colors in a convenient form for domestic use.—
Since the first of January I have sold no Anliines except such as are put up in my own establishment, and the largely augmented demand convinces me that though Anliine Dyes have been for many years put up in packets by various dealers in different parts of the Dominion, mine are giving better satisfaction than any hitherto offered to the public. Every packet of my Dyes is accompanied by full directions for use and and when these directions are followed success is guaranteed. The colors are -ALSO-—ALSO—
