To London Old Boys and Girls

We extend a hearty welcome, and invite them to visit our big shoe store while here.

We are "old boys" ourselves. The father of this business, the late J. J. POCOCK, did a shoe business here, back in the fifties, and put up one of the first shoe exhibits at London's village fair. We have grown with the city, and are now the largest footwear dealers in Western Canada.

Our wholesale warehouse is on Carling street; retail store, 140 Dundas street. Call and make yourself at home. No suggestions to buy.

PROSPECTS OF A HOT FIGHT

In the British House Over the Old Age Pensions Bill.

Peculiar Proposition Made by Philipinos to the Brritish Government.

Lord Pauncefote Confident of an Hon erable and Satisfactory Settlement of the Alaskan Boundar, Question.

[Special London Cable Letter.] London, Aug. 5.-It is understood that one of the principal measures of the coming session will be old age pensions, and there is every prospect of a hot fight over the bill. Many supporters of the government are wholly opposed to what they term "socialistic legislation," the taxpayers are in arms against the prospective heavy demands upon their diminishing incomes, and it is pointed out that no matter how disastrous it turns out to be, such a measure could never be repeated in a democratic country like England. It is recognized on every side that increased expenditure would be requisite to meet the fierce rivalry of the United States and Europe, while signs are not lacking that Great Britain's income is

NEARING HIGH WATER, and there is a widespread feeling that this is no time to sacrifice millions, which might be spent in insuring the country against hostile fleets. As to the age pensions scheme, many people think it would fatally decrease the sense of duty towards the family and render the citizen less thrifty and ener-

FILIPINOS WANT TO BUY AN ISLAND.

Interesting information comes from the British North Borneo Company, in that it has received a request from the Philippines, asking the company to lease or sell to Filipinos, Banquey Islands, just south of Palawan Island. It is only sparsely inhabited by natives. The Filipinos who are engineering the deal say that in case or their defeat, Aguinaldo and other leaders, with a large section of the Filipinos, may settle at Banquey, under British protection and this country's rule. The board is now considering the question, but it is understood the company is not adverse to leasing the island, on very favorable terms being offered. LORD PAUNCEFOTE CONGRATU-LATED.

Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador to the United States, continues to receive numberless congratulations on his elevation to the peerage. A representative of the Associated Press yesterday, saw piles of letters and telegrams on his table, but singularly, his own part he would be glad if the none has yet arrived from Africa. The ambassador said: "Naturally I am transcontinental scheme; if it did, he averse to trumpeting my work at the conference. Little can be said that the scheme was meritorious it should be world does not know already. But I can express my solid conviction that a tangible commencement has been made in new methods of international dealing, especially in the settlement of the grave issues which are bound to arise at times among nations. HONORABLE SETTLEMENT OF

THE ALASKAN DISPUTE ASSURED.

"It would manifestly be out of place for me to discuss the Alaskan question. I am not sure I am thoroughly conversant with the latter developments. However, the good sense, tact and wisdom of the diplomatists on both sides are sufficient guarantee of a final honorable settlement. I am afraid excessive praise has been rendered me for the good understanding which exist between the two countries; but it is assuredly flattering, and it would be affectation on my part to appear to ignore the happy change which has come about recently, and which none is in a better position to recognize that the ambassador.

Owing to the prorogation I will be unable to take my seat in the present session of parliament, but I will go to Windsor to 'kiss hands' in the ordinary course."

A New Transcontinental Railway Taking Shape-Prohibition Again.

Ottawa, Aug. 5 .- By working steadily all day and until 1 o'clock in the morning all the railway subsidies were disposed of, and the time for prorogation brought that much nearer. The Rainy River and Quebec bridge were the most discussed items.

Mr. Richardson made an effert to restore the amendment, which was voted down Thursday, limiting the maximum rate on wheat to be charged on the Rainy River line, and moved, seconded by Mr. Oliver, that the minimum freight rates on wheat from winnipeg to Fort William should be limited to 8 cents per hundred pounds. Only five members, Messrs. Davin, Martin, ver, Richardson, and Clarke Wallace, voted for the amendment.

THE LONDON AND PORT STAN-LEY.

Mr. Clancy objected to the proviso that the subsidy to the Lake Erie and Detroit River Railway Company for a line from St. Thomas to Ridgetown shall be payable only in the event of adequate running powers over the Canada Southern Railway between the two points not being granted on the terms to be approved by the railway committee of the Privy Council. He protested against the subsidy being tied up, as there was very little possiof these rights being obtained. Mr. Beattie, London, said the road should be constructed as rapidly as possible, and the restrictions should be removed, as this section was neces-sary to connect with the London and Port Stanley Railway, of which the city of London was the owner, and offered another outlet for that road. Mr. Blair would be glad to meet the wishes of Mr. Clancy, but the difficulty was found in the paralleling of an existing line. Sir Wilfrid Laurier pointed out that if constructed the line would parallel an existing line at a distance of not more than three or four or six miles, and, it had been claimed, would paralyze the business of the road.

Mr. Foster pointed out that a new trans-continental line from Ontario to Pacific Ocean was taking shape, and the government had already sub-sidized the connecting links. The Edmonton, Yukon and Pacific Company had obtained enormous powers on the Liard, Mackenzie, Yukon and other rivers, and the house should have further information in order that members might judge of the capability of the company to carry out their obligations. AN AUSTRALIAN CATTLE STAM-PEDE.

[From Harper's Magazine.

When a cattle rush comes in the blackest of the night, among thickstanding, low-limbed trees, with the nature and levels of the country unknown and invisible, to stem it calls for the finest and flercest quality of horsemanship. As he dodges, swerves and clings in the saddle to avoid mutflation from the rushing trees, he must see to it also that the horse shall win to the lead of that thundering multitude beside him.if hands and spur may compass it. And when he does the maddest of the danger is still to come. The rider's hands must do double duty now as he lets loose the whip and guides the horse as well. If the leading cattle swerve and swing away, carrying confusion among the rest, and breaking the directness of the rush, it is the finest moment of the drover's life. As the beasts that come thundering blindly on feel the scorching of the thong on head and flank, and hear the rote of man's supremacy that they have feared since branding time, the eddy spreads. The blind rush becomes a maelstrom, the maelstrom spreads into eddies of confusion—the clash of horns and huge muttering sounds. Then the herd settles down and spreads out. Some Odd Ways of Serving It-Import. ant Place of the Samovar in Every Russian Home.

ffrom the Chicago Tribune.] Among the interesting things in a visit to various countries is the individual way in which tea is served. A traveler in the far north was the guest of a Finnish lady. She made the most delicious tea, for which she had paid $2 50 a pound. Beside the nostess stood a huge samovar. Inside it are hot coals, round the tin of which is the boiling water, while above it stands the teapot, kept hot by the boiling water below. It is good tea, for it

The tea is carefully strained, so that not a bit of the leaf comes into the cup. The tea is pale straw-colored and weak, but with lemon it forms a refreshing beverage. At the end of the meal everyone goes and shakes hands with the host and hostess, saying

TEA IN RUSSIAN HOMES. In the interior of the Russian houses the principal room is a hall, serving grounds. as a vestibule, salon and dining room. Sometimes there are a few pieces of furniture of empire style, brought from Moscow; in one corner is an old "clavecin," a harpsichord, a relic of an-other age. "On the white walls hang old portraits; beneath a veil of soot bitumen grimaces the naively terrible features of the hetmans, to whom the estate formerly belonged. Under the eyes of these old ancestors the long table is served for supper, with the samovar throned on one end.

In fact, this may be considered as translation of our national word "the fireside," with all the associations that the word calls up.

The northern man who hides his fireside behind the ninviting walls of a stove, does not find his domestic center around the chimney piece. His household god is the machine that is always boiling and singing, the source of light and heat, which pours out incessantly during the long winter days the comforting drink.

Around the table wherethe samovar sings is a large family, a word which in Russia has the old signification, formerly the universal sense. First the ancestor, who presides at one end of the table, then the children and grandchildren, then a whole clan of semiservitors, a sort of adopted relation who are not servants.

Among these are the maiden ladies of noble birth, often daughters of those who have been killed in the war fighting for the master of the house. These maidens pay for their food and lodging by some slight superintendence in the affairs of the household. One of them takes charge of the samovar-nymph of this brazen fountain, she puts her whole soul in it, and all her faculties of thought and love. Her life has never had any other occupation than to calculate the exact amount of sugar and boiling water to be put into the glasses, from morning to night.

At the end of the meal each one kisses respectfully the hand of the ancestor, thanking her for their bread and salt. During the whole season the greater part of the day is passed around this table. Neighbors, strangers, all are invited to take their seats at the table and wait for the evening meal.

ETIQUETTE OF JAPANESE. Japanese tea, according to strictest etiquette, is served in a room especially prepared for it, called cha-no-yu, found in all the large houses of Japan. From the moment of entering the room by the low door-way, only two and a-half feet high, no one is allowed to rise from the kneeling or squatters posture assumed. If necessary to change positions, a shuffling motion is made to drag the body along. The floor is covered by four mats, leaving the place in the center for the sunken fireplace. The master of ceremonies wears over his ordinary costume a short black jacket, gauzy, like grenadine. In his belt is thrust a piece of silk folded for a holder. When the kettle lid is to be raised the adjusting of this mathematically-folded holder is a matter of great importance.

the master proceeds to brighten the are extra full, which occurs in weakfire. WHY DO YOU BLUSH?

Latest Theory Is That There Are Two Closely Allied Causes.

The general idea that blushing is due to fullness of blood in the brain is incorrect, according to the new theory of a French expert. It arises from the relaxation of the arteries of the face, neck and breast, thus allowing an extra quantity of blood to rush to the Those arteries have in their walls a layer of rings of muscular There should not be more than four fiber, which contract or relax accordor five persons at a cha-no-yu. ness, the patient blushes. Blushers are more liable to redden in damp or stormy weather than in the cold days of winter or the hot days of summer. If this glowing of the face were the result of emotion, why this difference? If it is due to weakness, the fact assumes the appearance of

There are two closely allied causes of blushing. One is named "ereuthophobia," that is the ordinary cause-weakness, and the extreme sensitive ness and other conditions caused by it. Everything is done according to exact The other is designated "erythrophorule, with all the precision of time and bia," and is the fear that one will blush unconsciously at awkward mo-

The latter is a peculiar form of the disease. The individual in question, although not given to blushing, becomes gradually possessed with a fear that he will do so at an inopportune ty of water added; then whipped to a froth with a mixer, a section of bamboo until it completely masters him and one and a fourth inches in diameter, makes him grow red in the face when there is not the slightest reason for it.

At the most simple question the color rises, and he is placed in the most ab suspicion, because other people accept his confusion as consciousness of guilt; holding it with the right, conveys it to he recognizes the fact, and, of course, his condition grows worse. Weakness is responsible in this case also for the having such a superior artist. Then deplorable state of things, for when the sufferer is taken in hand and gets 'braced up" he smiles at his former fears. It must be a very strong emotion that auses a flush to come to the face of a really healthy man or woman. Whatever they may feel they will show fear when confronted by great danger. In the latter case there is no doubt about Bed Bugs—the housewife's horror—may be quickly and there may be a feeling of fear within, but it is not shown in the face. A similar remark applies to the sense of shame under reproach. That feeling will not be betrayed by a blush be cause the individual is not afflicted by the disease.

> Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but little things, in which smiles and kindnesses and small obligations given habitually are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.—Sir H. Davy, Capitain Conrad, a Canadian diver, was at work on the wreck of the fruit-ship Oteri, which had gone ashore on a coral reef near Ruatan, Honduras. A new leak had developed, and it was necessary to stop it at once, although the hour was four in the afternoon. Captain Conrad called his assistants, and they anchored the diver's boat with the apparatus. On his way down, Con-rad noticed the rare beauty of the translucent tropical waters, and the lovely color of the coral and the thousands of fish swimming about.

As he was getting near the point where the work was to be done, a long, dark arm shot across the faceglass of his helmet. He had been in tropical waters before, and knew the sign. It was the octopus-the real devil-fish feared by all divers. He gave the danger signal, and was pulled up.

At the surface he considered the situation. The ship was leaking badly, and could not be left safely thus all night. He called for a heavy harpoon, forgotten, lined with tea lead, contains and cut the handle, making a weapon about three feet long. Armed with this, he went down again to fight the octopus and stop the leak.

This time he did not notice the Slowly he approached the spot where the octopus was hidden der the side of the vessel, gathering it-

There were but four or five feet between the coral reef on which the vessel had grounded and her side at this point, and Conrad settled himself here for the battle. It was not slow in coming. The snake-like creature extended one of its long arms. Conrad gave a quick thrust with his harpoon, but the devil-fish was quicker than he, and snatched away the arm. Again the creature struck, this time touching Conrad on the hip; but on the instant it lost its arm, severed by a blow from the harpoon.

Then the fight began in earnest. The devel-fish tried to envelop the man in its many tentacles, and the diver kept slashing with the harpoon. He inflicted wounds enough to disconcert the creature and prevent it from enwrapping him, but for some time none of the wounds were serious.

At last, just as the creature had come to alarmingly close quarters, he managed to drive the harpoon into a vital spot. When badly injured in the body, the cuttlefish discharges a great quantity of dye, which colors the water a jet black. Instantly Conrad found himself in a mass of ink. He gave the signal and was pulled up.

It took some time for the dye to clear away so that anything could be seen in the water. Then Conrad went down again. He did not have to renew the battle. The octopus was dead.

BASEBALL

"Good-bye, boys, I hope you'll win out." It was the end of the seventh inning, and Price was saying farewell to his late fellow-players of the London team, before leaving for his home in Windsor, Ill. Price had ceased to be a member of the team, but his heart was still with them through seven tough innings.

The Hams were five runs ahead, and Hagerman had been too much for the Colkneys. The fans had ceased to hope. Then came the lucky eighth. McCann dropped a long fly of Mc-Fadden's to center. behwartz hit safely to left. They both advanced a base on a passed ball. Lonman pop-ped a little one to Hagerman. Cope drove the ball to center, and McFadden and Schwartz tallied. Cope was forced out at second, Babbit getting to first on fielders' choice. Seiver hit safely to short, and Mohler drew a pass, filling the bases. Reed and Jones singled in succession, scoring Babbit and Selver. Then McFadden hammered out a two-bagger, bringing in Mohler and Reed, the last one giving the Cockneys a lead of one run. The visitors went out in one, two, three order in the ninth.

Richardson, Hamilton's new second baseman, made a clean single and a home run. The visitors got all their hits, save two, in the fourth and sixth innings. Umpire McKeever robbed the visitors of a run in the fourth. Cope threw to first to catch Richardson, and he would have been caught several feet away, but the ball bounded out of McFadden's hands. McKeever, who turned Rochester 5 12 4 9 8 away a second too soon, called the batter out, and refused to change his decision, in spite of a vigorous kick

FOR THE FANS. The remarkable brace in the playing of the Pittsburgs since the release of Manager Watkins strengthens the belief that there was serious friction between that official and the players.

It is rumored that another manager, name unknown, will succeed Fred Hoey when the New Yorks return home. It is also said that the drag net is out for cheap minor league players to take the places of several members of the team who have grown disheartened. Young Hemphill, of St. Louis, the center fielder and speedy base-runner Tebeau recently secured at Grand Rapids, has been sold to Cleveland.

Toronto Telegram: The Toronto Baseball Club have farmed out Pitcher Hardy to Woodstock, and he will finish the season with the Canadian League. At the beginning of next season he will join the Toronto team. As yet Hardy lacks the control necessary to make a successful twirler in the Eastern League.

Spectator: Jimmy Dean, who has played second base for the Hamiltons for several seasons, has been released. Jimmy has been playing good ball, but is not able to do his best now on account of an injury to his arm. Other players will be released in a few days, as President Stroud is determined to have a winning team.

WHEEL. NEW MILE RECORD.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—"Major" Taylor, the colored professional cyclist, rode a mile, paced by a steam motor, at the Garfield Park track, Tuesday, in 1:22%, beating the world's record by 5% seconds. The first quarter was made in :20%, the half in :39%, and the threequarters in :59%. Taylor's performance is the most remarkable, in that it was not aided by wind shields or any other device, being simply a straightaway paced race. The Garfield track is a half-mile in circumference.

Welcome Old Boys

Toronto, Detroit and Chicago | MacLellan, H. S. Alexander, F. Hart-Send Three Large Contingents.

Hundreds of Others Come From the Far-Scattered Cities of the Continent.

Royally Welcomed at the Station by the Mayor and the Bands and the Freedom of ddresses of Welcome and Speech Making at Victoria Park-Grand Military Tattoo and Firewoks This Evening - Three Happy Days of Entertainment.

The city of London is in the hands of her children. The citizens have abdicated in favor of boys and girls from far cities. The citizens are very happy over their freedom from responsibilities, and the visitors have taken up their role of rulers with easy grace and light heartedness. The entry was heraided with the blare of trumpets and the noise of drums. A citizens' committee met them on their arrival and offered homage. Thousands of people crowded the railway stations and the streets and lustily welcomed the monarchs of the day. The business streets were gay with bunting and flags. Union Jacks and the Stars and Stripes floated from innumerable flag staffs, windows and cornices.

There are no men and women in London today. Nobody counts years. Boys and girls are they all, and gray hair is as good as locks of gold. The reception committee and the sub-committees had arranged everything for the reception admirably. That is, everything but the weather, which in the stress of other matters was probably overlooked. A gentle summer rain began to fall about 9 o'clock and kept falling with provoking persistence until after the Toronto contingent had arrived at 11:25 a.m. By 10 o'clock the members of the reception committee were assembled at the city hall. The Seventh Fusiliers

Band was also there and enlivened the time of waiting with music. "WE WALK."

Chairman McPhillips was kept advised by telegrams of the advance of the invaders. At 10:30 a message was ing with which the assembled crowd received from Messrs. E. W. M. Flock greeted the visitors as they marched contingents at Chatham. It read: Phillips, chairman of the reception "Detroit train just left. All wear committee, to be heard. He cordially All wear

Later a dispatch was also received from Messrs. Frank Love and John Carling, jun., who had gone to Woodstock to meet the Toronto delegation. It announced that the Toronto train had just left that point, and it was found that the Detroit and Toronto trains would arrive about the same time, the former by C. P. R. and the latter by G. T. R. The C. P. R. officials agreed to hold the Detroit train a short distance from the station until the reception committee should arrive from the other station.

Meanwhile Richmond street between Dundas street and the G. T. R. station was thronged with expectant crowds, who waited and laughed and chatted cherrily in the rain. At 11:15 the reception committee formed in line at the city hall, with the mayor and Ald. McPhillips at the head and the Seventh Battalion Band leading the way. Wm. Wanless was marshal.

THE BADGES. Everybody wore an Old Boys' badge of some sort. The secretary and the chairman of the reception committee were distinguished by blue silk badges, the other members of the committee wore badges of red silk, and the guests' badges were of white silk. These were all stamped with the city's coat-of arms, and inscribed, "London Old Boys' Re-union, 1899." They were fastened with a neat gold clasp stamped "London." In addition to these, which were furnished by the committee, Old Boys' badges, pins and souvenirs of all sorts were being sold on the streets. One very pretty badge of yellow silk bore clasped hands in the center, and was inscribed: "Welcome, London Old Boys. Home, Sweet Home. Our City is Yours."

THE FIRST ARRIVAL.

The train bearing the Toronto contingent arrived in the city at 11:25. As it pulled into the station, the crowd, which was so dense that one hardly move about, gave three hearty cheers, and the Seventh Battalion Band struck up "Auld Lang Syne." 'Kerchiefs and small flags were waved on all sides. A hearty handshaking followed. Many of the visitors, including the ladies, were carried off without ceremony by friends; others went to the hotels for dinner; while a detachment formed in line behind the band and the citizens' committee on Richmond street. The procession then moved off for the C. P. R. station to welcome the Chicago and Detroit contingents. The Seventh Band was in the lead, and a large body of representative citizens, and the London Old Boys' committee. The band of the Fortyeighth Highlanders headed the Toronto contingent, and the Royal Trumpeters' Band followed in the rear. The line of march was direct up Richmond street to the C. P. R. station, as the Toronto contingent was somewhat late in arriving. The line of march was thronged with citizens.

AT THE PARK.

Arrived at the park the visitors and citizens assembled together around the band stand, from which hung inter-twined the flags of the two countries. It was some minutes before the cheercommittee, to be heard. He cordially 'We Walk' badges. Chicago follows welcomed the visitors in a brief but twenty minutes later." welcomed the visitors in a brief but happy speech. Mayor Wilson followed in similar vein, and extended the freedom of the city to the guests. Hon. G. W. Ross spoke at some length with characteristic humor and good feeling. He was glad to see that the Old Boys of London were always to come home when they wanted to. They had a right to be proud of their native city. London was the fairest and most beau-tiful city on earth. He referred pleasantly to Nicholas Wilson, the veteran teacher, who was seated on the plat-form, and remarked laughingly that Mr. Wilson had doubtless flogged most of the visitors more than once. The Old Boys of London had received good educations. Some persons said the schools of today were not as good as they used to be, but be that as it may, the London boys of the last generation had certainly been well educated. London Olu Boys made the best of citizens. They were fond of their homes and their children. They had the quality of goodness, which was worth just as much in the city of Toronto as in the city of Toronto as in the city of London. London turned out doctors who could cure their patients, and lawyers who knew how to prepare a good bill of costs, an essential qualification for the bench. The speaker referred feelingly to the illness of Sir Frank Smith, which prevented him from being present. Continuing. he said there was nothing the city of London had snore reason to be proud of than the men and women she had sent forth to fight the battles of life. If the British and Canadian strain were taken out of the American national life, the best part of it would be lost. The British and Canadian element supplied the spirit of enterprise and the genius of liberty to the American nation. He was to be present with the Americans as a fellow-guest. He prayed that the two flags might never be separated. (Cheers.) They represented the same principles of liberty. The speaker could not conceive of Canadians on the south side of the line fighting against Canadians on the north side. He urged the visitors to stay as long as they liked. and the citizens would make them wel-JUDGE DAVIES.

Judge Thomas Davies, president of the London Old Boys' Association of Detroit, made an eloquent address. God bless the man, he said, who originated the idea of those Old Boys' Associations. It was pleasant to come back, to revive the past and refresh the souls with the happy memories of youth. It made them better fitted for the future. One should never forget his old home-especially such a home as London. (Cheers.) Although over the border there were some different characteristics, the Canadians and the Americans were one in the elements of Anglo-American civilization, which was the greatest instrument for the progress of the world, and the uplifting of humanity. Judge Davies spoke of the great problems the present generation was called upon to face-municipal ownership, the struggle between capital and labor, the unity of nations, etc. He hoped when all the nations were united the English would be the common tongue. ALD. McCONNELL.

Ald. McConnell, of Windsor, spoke briefly. He promised that Windsor Old Boys would look after the Detroit Old Boys.

NICHOLAS WILSON. The veteran school teacher was received with ringing cheers, and presented with a bouquet by Mr. Alf. Wigmore, of Toronto. Mr. Wilson said he many of the old boys. He was the last rose of summer, a little faded, but with some life yet. (Cheers.) The term "Old Boys" had originated, he thought, at the celebration of his (Mr. Wilson's) 50th anniversary as a teacher, and was due to Mr. Thomas Purdom and Mr. Frank Love. London was a proper in Frank Love. London was a p __neer in educational reform. It was the first place to adopt the Saturday holiday, and the first in the province where free schools were instituted. He regretted that they were going back on the principle "Woodman, spare that tree." Mr. Wilson humorously remarked that the London girls never grew old. A Voice-You must be Irish. (Laughter.) Mr. Wilson said his wife was. He came to London in 1842, and when two regiments of soldiers were encamped where the audience now stood. His wife came here ten years earlier, so that they were two of the oldest of the association. Mr. Wilson said that one day in 1851 he whipped 83 scholars. Voice-Frank Love must have been there. (Laughter.) Mr. Wilson-No, that was before Frank's time. On this occasion he tried to find out who had committed a certain fault, and as no one would (Continued on page 6.)

But the first dose of seasickness was enough. I took precautions next time." "How?" inquired Banks. "Well, I reasoned it out. Seasickness is caused by gas in the stomach. "I've carried Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets on every voyage I've made since." "I must invest 50 cents in a box, this trip," said Banks.

The Old Boys.

To the Old Boys, Welcome! The hearth-fires have been kindled for you. You are here not as strangers within our gates, but as feilow-citizens-citizens of no mean city, as every one of you is proud to confess, no matter where your present lives are cast. If some of you, who have been long absent, feel as strangers, it is not because of any defect in our hospitality, but because London has outgrown your recollection. There is little in the London of today that the memory can identify with the London of even twenty years We who abide here are hardly sensible of the changes continually going on around us, but the old boy who returns with the image of the Forest City in his mind, as he knew it years ago, will be struck with the metamorphosis which time has worked. The old landmarks, one by one, have been swept away by the rush of improvements. The playgrounds on which the old boys used to romp are now boulevarded streets and avenues. In two decades the city has doubled its area and population. Many of the old boys may well rub their eyes today when they gaze on the altered features of the old town. There is a touch of melancholy, too, in the thought that time has made changes in the human sphere. It has narrowed the circle of early friends, but if the old faces are fewer, the new faces shine with welcome to the old boys, and the old girls as well.

The reunion today demonstrates the power of a sentiment. This sentiment -the love of home—is deeply planted in the Anglo-Saxon character. It has struck its roots through the whole empire, and has been fertile of the greatnot as strong as in the old days, when cosmopolitan or citizen of the world is the word home has no meaning loses something precious in life, and forgets splendid tribute to London that so many of her old boys, scattered far and wide, should reassemble to show their affecclaim to be worthy of the honor. The old boys will see their native city under the happiest conditions. It is flourishing as never before. The wheels of industry are humming; building is active: permanent improvements are spreading and everything is buoyant and expansive, excepting street railway receipts. Whatever division of opinion there may be in London, there is only one opinion about the old boys, and that is, they are welcome home. The heart of London is large enough to enfold all her children.

Obligatory Arbitration.

The subject of obligatory arbitration, in cases where semi-public franchises over public streets are involved, was before the City Council last night in two ways. Ald. Plant moved that the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a clause for insertion in the agreement between the London Street Railway and the city, providing for arbitration in cases of dispute, such as that now in progress. We presume Ald. Plant's principal object is to get the subject of arbitration definitely before the public as the true method now and hereafter. If the Company are not bound, and choose to refuse so reasonable a request, so much the worse for the Company.

Ald. Parnell gives notice of motion, to ask the Ontario Legislature to pass measure providing for obligatory arbitration, whether the parties wish it or not, in cases of dispute connected with semi-public franchises over public streets. The present position of affairs is intolerable, and should be rendered impossible for the future, both in London and elsewhere. Ald. Pannell's notice of motion is to be commended Why any fair-minded person should vote against it when it comes up, we cannot imagine, it being so obviously in the public interest.

In common with the Pirates of Penzance, the Canadians dearly love their Queen, as was convincingly shown the other day when the Dominion House of Commons rose in a body and sang the English National Anthem, after passing a resolution of sympathy with the mother country in regard to her course in the Transvaal. It may be hoped, respectfully, that nothing of precision, steadiness, unanimity in pitch and correctness of tone production was lacking in the spontaneous choral manifesta-

Like a flash Mrs. Jennison tore off her skirt and slung it over the bear's While the enraged bear was tearing the garment to pieces in an ef-fort to extricate itself the woman fled down the hill to the camp. Some of the men, hearing her screams, started out with their guns and met her. They killed the bear and captured the cubs, which Mrs. Jennison is now raising on a bottle.

Sizing Up the F. P. [Forest Free Press.]

The London Free Press preaching a sermon on deception is rich. Why, that journal has a well-earned reputation for the practice of regular and systematic deception in both its editorial and news columns in regard to any question in which it is interested. Examples of this practice could be cited from almost any subject the paper takes sides on, but one glaring sample and in improving the property. Randall from the West Huron investigation it- was also to reserve as his share of the self will suffice. On July 20 the evidence taken before the committee of investigation showed that fourteen ballots at one poiling place, all marked for Mr. Holmes, were of a different weight of paper, and also somewhat differently printed, as compared with ed, was to have deeded back lots 11, 12 the rest of the ballots, which looked and 13, which Randall claimed to have like crooked work having been done. Of course, the London Free Press published this evidence, and announced with startling headlines that bogus erected a cottage on lot 13. The attor-ballots had been found. The evidence neys in the meantime had become bitter taken next day revealed the fact that at another polling place 40 ballots ex-actly like the fourteen alleged bogus ones were marked for Mr. McLean, showing that there had been no crooked work so far as these different ballots were concerned. The London F. P. est achievements of the race. In this in its report of the second day's promigratory age, perhaps home ties are tion of the evidence which placed the matter in its true light, and its readers are to this day (unless they have other sources of information) in blissful ignorance of the facts, and living under the delusion that the fourteen ballots a modern type. But the man to whom were bogus. Could deception be temptible way than this? The people who are wronged and deceived are those who pay the London F. The Forest Free Press does not profess to be infallible in its judgment, nor perfect in any particular, but there is no lecture coming to it from a paper that writes its editorials on a bias, perverts legitimate news. tion and gratitude, and London can suppresses evidence, falsifies reports and opens its columns to anonymous rib-stabbers whenever it suits its purpose to do so. No, the London F. P. must completely change its ways before it can consistently preach journalistic morality to other papers.

SETTLED AT LAST

The Long-Drawn-Out Case of Randall Vs. Atkinson Decided.

Windsor, Aug. 6 .- Referee Marcon has handed out judgment in the long-drawn-out case of Randall vs. Atkinson, that has been before the courts for nearly five years. In August, 1887, James A. Randall and the late John Atkinson purchased Bois Blanc Island from Mrs. McKee Rankin, the actress, for $40,000. A year later Ran-dall disposed of his interest to Atkinson, the agreement being that the former was to receive just what money he had contributed to the purchase price profits lots 11 and 12, on which he had erected a summer residence. Atkinson paid $5,000 on account, and gave him a due bill for $3,242 for the balance. Randall conveyed the entire island to Atkinson, and the latter, it was claimpurchased and given Atkinson credit for in the accounts between them. The deed was never given. In 1894 Randall enemies, and Atkinson hired men to tear down the coftage, claiming that the land on which it was built was his. Randall then began suit to regain possession of the three lots, and to recover damages for the destruction of the cottage. At the trial Atkinson claimed that the due bill given for $3,242 was excessive, and had been obtained by fraud. The court directed the conveyance of lots 11 and 12 to Randall, and submitted to Referee Marcon the ques-tion of the ownership of lot 13, the correct amount of the due bill given to Randall, and the amount of damages to be assessed for the destruction of the cottage. The referee's judgment is a complete victory for Randall. He finds that the amount of the due bill should be $4,248 93, more than $1,000 in complete victory for Randall. excess of the bill given, and computed interest at $2,780 91. The referee decides that lot 13 was purchased by Randall, and assesses damages for the destruc-tion of the cottage at $936. Col. Atkinson died about a year ago, and since then the action has been against the

John Dirk Killed and His Wife Injured Near Pomeroy, Iowa.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Aug. 5. - John Dirk, a farmer living near Pomeroy, met a horrible death at his farm from a maddened bull. Mr. Dirk had gone out in the pasture, when he was attacked by the enraged bull. His cries were heard by his wife, who ran to his assistance, and together they drove the animal away. As they were leaving, the bull attacked them again, knocking both down.

Dirk told his wife he was dying, and she managed to escape and summoned a neighbor, who fired two charges from a shotgun into the animal, driving it away. Dirk's body was trampled and bunted into an almost unrecognizable mass. Mrs. Dirk had two ribs crushed.

GROWTH OF CAPITAL IN GER-MANY.

Mr. Conant calls attention to the extraordinary speed with which capital occumulates under modern conditions. He says:

One of the most striking phenomena of the new economic conditions is the rapidity with which capitalization proceeds, when once a country has entered to any considerable extent upon the career of machine production. This has been illustrated in a remarkable manner by the history of Germany and Russia during the last 25 years. In 1870 Germany was a comparatively poor country. * The estimated wealth of Germany in negotiable securities in 1895 was $18,000,000,000, and she ranked second among European na-tions. * * * The capital of the 11 large Berlin banks, exclusive of the Imperial Bank, increased from 586,000,-000 marks, at the close of 1896, to 844,-000,000 marks ($200,000,000) in 1898.

IN RUSSIA. The development of Russia has been, in some respects, even more remarkable than that of Germany. • • • The issues of the shares of stock companies in Russia amounted in 1895 to 129,363,-000 rubles, in 1896 to 232,640,000 rubles, and in 1897 to 239,424,000 rubles ($120,-000,000). The issues for 1898 probably exceeded 300,000,000 rubles. The savings-banks deposits, which as recently as 1885 were only 26,619,440 rubles, were 508,512,000 rubles ($250,000,000) in August,

IN GREAT BRITAIN. The vast balance in the United Kingdom of imports over exports suggests something of the extent of British capital invested abroad: Great Britain, according to recent estimates, has capital invested abroad to the amount of £2,000,000,000, or nearly $10,000,000,000. The interest upon this sum, at 4½ per cent, would bring her an annual revenue of $450,000,000; and she derives a like amount from the passenger and freight earnings of her merchant marine. So far as these for-eign investments are safe and well chosen, * * the result is much more beneficial to British interests than if the increasing savings of the country were kept at home to bid against each other in the stock mar-

MACAULAY'S FAME

The necessity of sending capital abroad to obtain profitable returns is of the nineteenth century. In recent years interest and discount rates have One Reason for It-He Was a Typical Englishman.

The reign of Queen Victoria has been the golden age of English prose, says Henry D. Sedgwick in the August Atlantic. The greatest masters lived earlier,—the makers of the English Bible, Milton and Burke. Other masers of great fame—Hooker, Browne, Addison, Bolingbroke—have been scattered over other generations; but the prose of Victoria's reign has Newman, Ruskin, Carlyle, and Macaulay. Such diverse excellences of so high a reach have never appeared in England at one of Australia, India, Canada and Egypt time before. In these men manner has so well matched matter that it seems the order of nature for a priest to the fields which have been and will be write like Newman, a poet like Ruskin, a prophet like Carlyle, an historian like ment of capital, and not merely to the Macaulay. The diversity of these four, one from another, forbids any comquantity of finished goods laid down parison; do you prefer a horseshoe, a saltcellar, or a bottle of cologne? Nevertheless, time has already thrown The writer draws the moral for his own country, which last year sent out more manufactures than she imported: out some hints concerning their enduring quality. Tract number 90 is already old with a great age; Sartor Resartus is powerless to arouse the youth of today; the period of Ruskin's ain, France, Germany and Belgium, where she will be compelled to seek tyranny is past; and still Macaulay's though it is 50 years since they free markets and opportunities for inwere first published, are read continuvestment in the undeveloped countries, ally, from London to Melbourne, from if she is not to be crowded to the wall by the efforts of the other great civilized powers. • • If the treasury

New York to Singapore. For Macaulay's fame there seems to be one principle reason-that he was a typical Englishman. All his English critics agree—and they ascribe it to him as a great limitation—that he was a man who represented his generation, who believed their beliefs, hoped their hopes, and feared their fears. Whether that charge be serious or not, Macaulay was far more than that; he had much of the permanent English in him. He did hold the political opinions of the men who emancipated the Catholics and reformed the House of Commons. Yet those political ideas of 1830 were not transitory, but English; they were merely the nineteenth century form of the ideas which have been working at the social and political constitution of England ever since Magna Carta. Englishmen have always been zealous to obtain what they have deemed their rights. These rights have not been creations of the imagination, no children of theory, but certain definite powers to be enjoyed, certain definite restraints to be cast loose. Macaulay's speeches on the Reform Bill are characteristic of the English mind. He instinctively employs only English arguments; he disclaims any symmetrical theory; he courts property, he shouts warning of instant danger. His voice sounds like the voice of England calling to her children in a good set English speech.

An Interesting Case. Mr. W. G. Phyall, proprietor Bodega Hotel, 36 Wellington street east, Toronto, says: "While living in Chicago I was in a terrible shape with itching and bleeding piles. I tried several of the best physicians and was burnt and tortured in various ways by their reatments to no avail, besides spending a mint of money to no purpose. Since coming to Toronto I learned of Dr. Chase's Ointment, I used but one box and have not been troubled with American Markets.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Corn and pro-visions cut out the pace on 'change to-day. A heavy cash demand for corn resulted in a complete recovery of an early decline, the market closing %c to wheat ruled weak early, but recovered with corn, and closed 1/2c higher. Oats closed a shade higher. The Liverpool market was the guiding star of wheat traders at the opening. The usual surprise came from the English market, quotations there being about 1/2d higher—a population. market, quotations there being about price of cheese took a decidedly up-1/4d higher—a condition not looked for, ward turn today, compared with last in view of the decline here yesterday. Week. At the board this forenoon 637 This was afterward explained on the ground of advanced ocean freight rates, 220 white. For both 9%c was offered, but it had its effect on opening prices here, September starting at 69%c, an advance of 1/4c. A momentary dip to 691/4c followed, but good buying by shorts, mostly local, resulted in a gradual advance to 69%c to 69%c, the high-est point reached during the session. Besides the strength shown by Liverpool, prospective buyers were encouraged by continued crop damage reports from the Northwest, and by Snow's crop summary, which made the condition of spring wheat 85, or 5 points less than July 1. This indicated a total crop of about 275,000,000 bu. But interest in the market soon died out. The cash demand was almost nothing here, and only a moderate demand was reported from the seaboard. The North-west, which was a seller in this market reported the flour trade quiet, and the first rush of winter wheat apparently over. The buying demand dwindled to almost nothing during the realize on earlier purchases were at-tended with considerable difficulty. September slowly declined to 69c to 69%c, and hung around that price until about noon, when the strength of corn put some life into wheat, and resulted in steady advance, which was continued to the close. Northwest receipts were 305 cars, against 319 last week, and 70 a year ago. Chicago received 125 cars, 16 of contract grade. The proportion of new wheat was much smaller than at this time a year ago. Total primary receipts were 672,000 bu. Atlantic port clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 269,000 bu. A visible decrease of about 600,000 bu in Northwest stocks for the week was looked for. September advanced to 69%c to 69%c, and closed at 69%c, an advance of 14c.

The leading future closed as follows: Wheat —No. 2, Sept., 69%c; Dec., 71%c to 71%c; May, 74%c. Corn—No. 2, Sept., 30%c to 30%c; Dec., 28%c to 29c; May, 30c. Oats—No. 2 Sept., 19%c: Dec., 19%c; May, 21%c. Pork—Sept., 28 62%; Oct., $8 70. Lard—Sept., $5 47%; Oct., $5 22%. Short ribs—Sept., $5 20; Oct., $5 22%. Cash produce was scarce. Fruit alone was active. Butter, which has been rising steadily for some time past, went up to the 20c mark in the wholesale market this morning. Prices of fruit were: Huckleberries, per basket, 65c to 90c; thimbleberries, 6c to 7c; black currants, scarce, 60c to 70e a basket; peaches, per basket, 35c to 60c; apples, 60c to 90c a bushel; watermelons, 20c to 30c each; muskmelons, 10c to 20c each.

PENALTY ASKED FOR GEN. TORAL

Spanish Court-Martial's Decision Expected Today.

Reported Capture of a U. S. Steamer by the Filipinos.

Madrid, Aug. 5.—The trial of Gen. Toral and the other officers concerned in the surrender of the Spanish army at Santiago was concluded Thursday. The defense insisted upon the contention that the disasters at Santiago were due to political rivalries.

The prosecution demanded the punishment of Gen. Toral, and that Gen. Pareja be reprimanded, agreeing to the acquittal of the other accused officers. The court's decision is expected to be rendered today. In regard to the officers concerned in the fall of Cavite, the court informed Major Sostoa, who was the commandant of the Cavite arsenal, that there were no charges against him. Admiral Montojo, who commanded the Spanish squadron destroyed by Dewey, is not charged with surrendering Cavite, but is accused of other of-

Burton, of company D, Fifty-first Iowa, from Villisca, has been suspended for cowardice, and is not at Manila await-ing dishonorable discharge. Burton was principal of the school at Wymore, Neb., when the war broke out, and disappeared, going back to his old home at Villisca, Ia., and taking the captaincy of the company. He is reported to have deserted his troops in an en-gagement, and hidden in a ditch, while the company went into action without

The captain of the Saturnus once obtained possession of a ship belonging to the Compania Mari-tima, held at San Fernando by the insurgents, by mooring the Saturnus alongside and hauling the other vessel away in the night.

JAMES MACFADDEN

Death of a London Old Boy at Stratford.

James MacFadden, late clerk of Perth county and surrogate court, and local registrar, who was recently retired, and whose position was given to Mr. W. C. Moscrip, of St. Marys, died at his residence in Stratford yesterday morning after a lingering illness. Mr. MacFadden was born in what is now the township of West Nissourl, about six miles from London, on April 25, 1821. He was of Irish descent, his father being Jas. MacFadden, of Armagh county, Ireland, and his mother Miss Reid, of the same place. Early in the present cen-tury his parents settled in Nissouri, and young MacFadden was sent to the public and London grammar schools, the latter then being under the principalship of the late Rev. Benjamin Bayly, with many young men who subsequently distinguished themselves in life. Amongst those now alive are: Police Magistrate Parke of London, Hon. Mr. Justice Robertson, Mr. Hugh Richardson, stipendiary magistrate at Regina, and Judge Hughes, of St.

Thomas. Previous to 1837 Mr. MacFadden joined the militia here, his father being captain of the company. When the rebellion broke out the company was transferred, and it did not take part in the engagements. He studied law in the office of the late Judge Daniel, and passed his examination in 1854 as attorney-at-law. Shortly afterwards Mr. MacFadden moved to St. Marys, and precticed law there until 1866, he having received the appointment which he held up to Aug. 1 this year, on June 16, 1866. On June 25, 1860, Mr. MacFadden was married to Miss Catharine A. MacLean, daughter of William Mac-Lean, then of St. Marys, who predeceased him in June, 1894. While a resident of the Stone Town he took an active interest in municipal affairs, and was a member of the town council in 1863 and 1864, but upon moving to Stratford he devoted himself exclusively to the duties of his office. The deceased was one of the oldest Masons in Ontario, having been initiated into St. John's Lodge, No. 209a, in London on Aug. 1, 1842. He was master of St. James' Lodge, St. Marys, in 1861 and 1862, and at the time of his death was an honorary member of Stratford Lodge, No. 332, and Tecumseh Chapter, No. 24, of Stratford. He was an adherent of Knox Church, Stratford. The surviving family are: Mrs. Harry of Pony, Montana; J. A., Stratford; Mrs. Duncan Jeffrey, St. Paul, Downie; George F., Little Rock, Arkansas, and Katie, at home. The funeral will take place from his late home on Huron street to Avondale cemetery, on Sun-

THE CHICAGO OLD BOYS.

The train bearing the Chicago Old Boys was about two hours late in arriving, but the large crowd who had gathered at the C. P. R. station waited patiently, and gave them an enthusiastic reception as the cars pulled in. There were nine special Pullman coaches, and they were all filled. The engine, No. 400, was covered with small flags and bunting, and the cars were bedecked with bunting of bright colors. Large streamers were also suspended along the sides of the cars, in-scribed "Chicago-London Old Boys." A huge Union Jack and Old Glory hung side by side on one car, and attracted a good deal of attention. It is estimated that some 600 people came with this excursion. The Seventh Band played "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again" and "The Star Spangled Banner," as the visitors were disembarking. After the visitors had been given a hearty welcome and hand-shake, they formed in line and headed for Victoria Park, accompanied by the four bands. The Chicago boys carried many banners, one being inscribed "Home, Sweet Home."

TO THE PARK.

The delay in the arrival of the Chicago special induced the committee to proceed at once to the park. The procession was one of the most striking ever seen in the city. The hands of the Seventh and the Forty-eighth Highlanders led, and in the van were three of the oldest of the "Old Boys"-Messrs. Nicholas Wilson, John Christie and Samuel McBride. The Detroit contingent brought up the rear, and the members carried red, white and blue umbrellas. The cheering along the route to the park was almost continuous. Owing to the delay in the arrival of the Chicago train, the Windy City contingent were late for the speech-making at Victoria Park. They accepted the freedom of the city by proxy, however, and without delaying at the park, marched down Welling ton street to Dundas, west to the market, and thence to their hotels.

Tranquil. Tribune from the City of Mexico says: The rebel Yaquis forces are now reported to have been swelled to 3,000 or 4,000 men. They are encouraged by Indians from all along the Yaqui River, who are flocking to their stronghold in the mountains. The government de-

Acting on this advice I procured the medicine, and less than half a bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I doubted the power of any remedy to do me good.

Conscious that, in the drunkenness of his astonishment, he returned a lame and seemingly ungracious reply to offer any congratulations, Roy made no movement to detain the ecentric guest, when he, after another dazed look around the apartment, as if wondering how he got there, espied the door, and approached it with the briefest of Good nights. Another man would have taken mortal offense at the lack of respectful ceremony. The doctor, in his semi-trance, had not an idea of the commotion he had

And she has borne it all, without a murmur, like the brave, true woman she God forgive me! I can never pardon myself!"

He was sitting, his arms crossed upon the table, and his head upon them, when Jessie glided in stealthily. Over her white wrapper she had thrown a crimson shawl, and her long hair was loose upon her shoulders. Whatever resolve had drained her cheeks and lips of bloom, and lighted the steady flame in her eyes, had been acted upon with precipitancy, lest her nerve

"I cannot sleep tonight," she commenced, hurriedly, "still less can I leave you tomorrow, without expressing to you, however feebly my sense of the goodness and mercy you have showed me from the hour I entered this house, until now. I may have appeared unobgervant and unthankful; may have seemed to accept your benefits as if they were my due, when, in reality, I was unworthy of the least of them all; but it was because I did not know in what form to express my gratitude. If, in my acquiescence in your proposal that I should go to my sister for a season, I have used few words; have not thanked you for this fresh proof of your delicate watchfulnes over my comfort and happiness, I beg you to attribute my shortcomings to other reasons than insensibility or misconstruction of your motives. I was entirelyunprepared for the suggestion. It was shock to me, because I had dared to believe that you would see fit to let me remain here with you until vacation, when we would go to Dundee to-

Standing on the other side of the table, she saw a slight but eager change in the expression of the mute form. It was as if his hearing were strainedf or was as if his hearing were strained for her next utterance, but the features were still concealed.

On the roof of the bay window, the soft, large drops of the April shower were beginning to fall in musical whispers.

Jessie put out a hand upon the marble top of the table to steady herself, as she resumed. There was that in this continued silence that awed and made her incoherent. It was unlike Roy's usual reception of her advances-his ready and indulgent courtesy. Her heart beat painfully and fast, but she did not swerve from her resolution.

Grece, when their daughter, Mrs. Alice May Murdock, widow of the late John Mur-dock, of Seymour, Conn., was united in marriage to John A. Young, a prominent merchant of Thamesford. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about fifty guests by Rev. J. Her, of Ridgetown. The bride was assisted by Miss Thompson, of London, and Mrs. Smith, of Sarnia, while Mr. W. A. Finch, of London, and Mr. Isaac Unsworth, of Florence, upheld the groom. The young son of Mr. Young, Master L. Bruce, and the little daughter of the bride, Miss Velma Murdock, led the bridal party into the handsomely decorated parior, the latter carrying a basket of beautiful roses and carnations. The bride was given away by her father. The bride was attired in a handsome and becoming costume of Nile green silk, with libertre silk trimmings, and carried a boquet of beautiful bridal roses. The bride is a daughter of Dresden and very popular. She is well known among the lady Maccabees and the Rebekah lodges of the western portion of the province, having held important offices in Colfax Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Sarnia. The groom is well known and very popular throughout Ontario, particularly in Oddfellows' circles. He is junior P. G. a. of the Grand Lodge of Ontario, and is at present a prominent candidate for representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, which meets in Detroit in September. Quite a number of guests from a distance were present to witness the ceremony, and a large number of congratulatory telegrams were received from friends of both bride and groom in Carberry and Neepawa, Man., Toronto, London, Chatham, Thamesford, Sarnia and other points. Entries Closed Today-A Partial List of the Attractions.

Toronto, Aug. 4.-Entries for Toronto Exhibition, which opens on the 28th of August and closes on Sept. 9, close with the manager, H. J. Hill, on Saturday next, the 5th inst. Up to date the entries received are in excess of last year. All the space in the main building and the annex is already taken.

An exceptionally large number of industries will be shown in actual operation, such as butter-making, cigar and cigarette-making, dress-binding, string-making, crushing ore direct from the mine, and so on.

As this year the exhibition comes of age, the directors have determined to be more than usually lavish. They have materially increased the prize list, taking in among other things buttercompetitions, and creating making special classes for export bacon hogs and giving gold instead of silver medals in the sweepstake classes. The Dominion Shorthorn Association has also added $750 to the amount given in prizes for shorthorns.

The special attractions will also be on a grander scale than usual. On the opening night the grounds will thrown open free, and instead of the gates being closed as is customary on the first day at 6 p.m. they will remain open until 11 p.m., and a monster tattoo given with a thousand participants and a thousand dollars worth of fireworks. The spectacle will be of a double character, illustrating the battles of Iloilo and Omdurman with a grand tableau of Anglo-Saxon unity at the close. All the latest inventions will be exhibited, including demonstrations in wireless telegraphy, wireless telephoning and the improved X-rays. The free water spectacle this year will show Niagara Falls reversed, by the explosion beneath the waves of a quantity of gun cotton, and a practical illustration of life-saving from shipwrecked vessels, firing rockets, stringing life lines, etc. Other star numbers will be the Strector Zouaves in their wall-scaling act and military feats of storming a supposed-to-be impregnable fortress, the McCarte sisters, one of whom walks a wire suspended high in air from the teeth of two sisters, the great Dunham family, the Mertsell sisters, the Six Sinnettes, the four La Mothes, Arnold Kiralfy's Jolly Troupe, Leoneda's great dog and cat show, Prof. Cadeaux on the bounding rope, the Romello Bros., Prof. Sutherland's great equestrian act in which he performs on a trapeze built up from the backs of two galloping horses, boomerang throwing performing Arabs, and a number of acts, including the shooting of a woman from a cannon suspended from a rising balloon. Excursions have not only been arranged from all over Canada, but from many States in the union, while every day rates will be

A Quartet of Them Whose Histories Are World-Wide.

The Man With the Iron Mask," the Emperor Napoleon, Jefferson Davis and Captain Dreyfus-By Comparithe Most Adverse Fate of Them All.

With the opening of the doors of prison for Capt. Alfred Dreyfus will end the most cruel case of persecution known in modern times, a persecution that has made Capt. Dreyfus famous, and his persecutors despised by the entire world. The persecution of Dreyfus appears even greater by comparison with the treatment accorded other famous prisoners of practically modern times. Aside from Dreyfus, the three most famous prisoners of modern history are without doubt the "Man with the Iron Mask," Emperor Napoleon, and the president of the southern confederacy, Jefferson Davis.

The first of these, and the most mysterious of prisoners, was the man of the iron mask. He excited the curiosity of the world during the reign of Louis XIV. A masked man was taken to Saint Mars, then the governor of the castle of Pignerol. Without his mask the man was never seen, even by his physician, but the wearing of the mask was not so brutal as it sounds. It was made simply of black velvet arranged on light steel

When Saint Mars was promoted to the care of the famous Bastile the masked prisoner followed in his train. During the journey from one prison to the other orders were given to kill him if he made any attempt to make himself known. During his confinement this prisoner was richly dressed; his room in the Bastile was arranged with special regard to his comfort; every expressed wish was gratified; the governor himself waited upon him, and treated him with the greatest deference.

Once, while in the Bastile, the prisoner scratched a message to the outside world upon a silver plate with a knife, and threw it out of the window into the water. An ignorant fisherman picked it up and took it to the governor of the prison, who asked him if he had read it. 'I don't know how to read," was the answer. "I have just found it, and no one has seen it." "Go; you are very fortunate in not knowing how to read, replied the governor. At another time the prisoner again attempted to communicate with the outside world by writing a message on his shirt and throwing It out of the window. This fell into the hands of a friar. who returned it to the governor, asserting that he had not read it. But the governor had his doubts of the man's honesty, and as "dead men tell no tales," the friar was soon dead.

In 1703, after a short illness, the masked man died. Everything used in his room was burned; the walls were rubbed down and whitewashed; even the tiles were removed, in fear that he had forced some scrap beneath them. The respect shown him at all times marked him as a man of distinguished birth. When Louis XV. reached his majority, the mystery was explained to him, but he would not divulge it. The most he would say was, that "the man's detention prevented great misfortunes."

There have been many conjectures as to the identity of the man with the iron mask. The story to which the most credence has been given is, that he was a twin brother of Louis XIV.

For 22 years after the marriage of Anne of Austria she was a childless woman. There was a prophecy that she would bear twins, who would bring about civil war and convulse the nation. To prevent this Louis XIII. determined that if the world knew of the younger it should be only a matter of conjecture.

The latest version given is that the man was an untitled Italian who sought to betray the French King of Italy. He was hurried across the frontier and forced to wear the iron mask.

The most distinguished of all pisoners was Napoleon Bonaparte. His unbounded ambition worked his ruin-doomed him to a year of exile on the Island of Elba, and six years of imprisonment on the barren one of Saint Helena. Byron has described him as a gambler

"Whose game was empires, and whose stakes were thrones, Whose table earth, and whose dice were human bones.

At Elba he may be said to have bad a miniature empire-his diminished household represented an imperial court-the forms and etiquette of the Tuilleries were observed. The Bourbons knew this life had not killed the lion, or even lulled him to sleep, rather be was preparing for a spring. When the news came that Napoleon was on Fench soil, the army, shouting "Vive l'Empereur," Louis XVIII. ignominiously fled from his capital.

Russia, Prussia and Austria had suffered so many humiliations at the hands of Napoleon, they allied themselves together to cage the lion, and England joined hands. The combination was too strong. After Waterloo, and Napoleon's despair ing cry: "Sauve qui peut," he fied to Paris, carrying the news of his own defeat. He wished to embark for America. in fear that he should be given up to the Bourbons. The harbor was so closely bleckaded by the English the chances w re he would be taken prisoner. Because of that he decided to ask the hospitality of England. In a fatal moment he stepped aboard the Bellerophon. Orders were given that Napoleon should be taken to untarily accompanied him into exile. treating him as an emperor, and as far as possible keeping up the customs of court life.

Napoleon died in 1821 of cancer in the stomach. He was buried under some willows-a spot chosen by himself He had often expressed a wish that he might lie on the banks of the Seine. Louis Philippe, liberal enough to admit son the Latter Seems to Have Had that Napoleon had shed a halo of glory over France, petitioned the English Government to return his ashes to French soil. There was a generous response. No crowned head in Europe has ever been so royally interred as was Napoleon beneath the Dome des Invalides.

Among celebrated prisoners Jefferson Davis takes high rank. He had done all that man could do to divide the Union and form a southern confederacy. He was able and popular enough to be chosen its president, thus making him a shining mark for vengeance, if his were a loss

On that memorable morning in April when a telegram from Lee su moned him from church, warning him to leave Richmond, as the army had reached limit of endurance, all save himself that the end had come. He issued clamation that the confederacy had ed on a "new phase in the strug and still had the advantage. B April closed he was a fugitive, a upon his head. He hoped to reach Kirby Smith and make a deflant in the southwest. Camping in Geo he was aroused by the startling n that the camp was surrounded by U cavalry. In a partial disguise he tri escape, but was recognized and m prisoner.

He was confined as a military pri at Fortress Monroe. At the north were only kind feelings for Lee, for Davis there were the bitterest ex tions. He was held responsible for drop of blood shed, as well as fo misery endured in southern prisons the hands of the northern populac would have had short shrift.

Twice the seasons rolled around he was still a captive accused of trea During his captivity he suffered one instance of ignominy. One morning keepers and a blacksmith with irons instruments for rivetting them stood fore him. When he saw them he spr and caught a chair, as if single-handed he could spare himself this shame. The men begged him not to compel them to use force, but he vowed he would fight to the death. More men were called, and the work was soon done. For days he lay upon his cot, stunned and almost bereft of reason. But the U. S. Govern-

Davis' trial was postponed from time to time, until finally, on account of his failing health, it was proposed he should be released on bail, and Horace Greeley signed his bond. Two years later the prosecution was dropped. He was simply disfranchised. To-day it is a matter of safety to the United States that Jefferson

Davis was never hanged. The days when a man wore an iron mask were the days of the inquisition. A scratch of a pen by one of the Lord's annointed could consign a man to a dungeon or to death. Early in the ninetenth century Napoleon, a mere commoner, set Europe in a blaze, humiliated and dictated to hereditary sovereigns, yet was subjected to no personal violence. In the middle of the century an inciter to rebellion, branded as a traitor, served but a short, and, save for his irons, a mild imprisonment. The century is nearing its close; France, the cultured, the refined, steeped in the arts and sciences, has flung law and justice aside and done deeds befitting the dark ages to the person of Alfred Dreyfus. It was only since his return to France to receive tardy justice that the full measure of his persecutions have become known, and even now it may not all have been told. This man, accused of selling valuable military secrets to a foreign government, secrets which the foreign ruler denies having received, without receiving a fair trial to prove either his guilt or innocence, was brought before his companions-in-arms and there degraded from his rank; his straps torn from his shoulders, his sword broken in pieces, and sentenced to solitary impirsonment for life on a barren island under a tropical sun, fitly called Ile du

During the voyage across the Atlantic he was thrown into the hold as merchandise, with 1_irchandise. At Guiana he lay for four days in a temperature of 113. From there he was removed to a cell 18 feet square, made of iron bars, and with one barred window.

That more rigor might be used, the false story was spread that the wretched man had tried to escape. Lebon, who must henceforth bear the sobriquet of the "Man of the Manacles," cabled that the prisoner be put in irons. The irons were forged from old iron before the prisoner's eyes. As he pathetically ex pressed it to his wife: "They put irons on me when I was ill." But there is even worse to tell. The sharp points and ragged edges of the irons, forged by unskillful hangs, cut his flesh to the bone, and he endured two months of this misery, one of them on bread and water. And now after all of it France has awakened to a realization of what she has been guilty, and has taken steps that will return to an injured servant his standing and his honor. Of all the famous prisoners of recent history whose imprisonment has made national or world history the story of Alfred Dreyfus is the saddest.

Sanitation in British Army and Navy. The conditions under which Brifish sailors and soldiers live are far more sanitary now than in the past. In 1865 more than 11 deaths occurred in every 1,000 men affeat, while ten years later the number fell to 6.8, in 1885 to 5.4, and in 1895 to 4.4. In the army the figures are net quite so satisfactory.

Dreyfus' Children.

In reading of the affair which has apset the equilibrium of France for the ast three years, writes a correspondnt of the Chicago Record, one is apt o think that little of the familiar side of the case, the daily scenes, the heartches, the sufferings in the home of Capt. Dreyfus. An Antwerp merchant, Miss M. lust returned from Paris, says that, being in Paris on business a short time ago, he visited the house of some friends of the Dreyfus family, who told him that every year Capt. Dreyfus' children receive on New Year's Day, Easter, St. Nicholas's Day and Christmas a large case containing many pounds of beautiful presents. each case comes the simple inscription,

'From Papa." The donor remains always anonymous, his object being to make the innocent children believe their father really sent the gifts. This has been kept up ever since the day when the martyr left his country in exile.

AN IRATE TRAVELER

Lays a Complaint Against the Street Railway Company.

A commercial traveler desires to lay complaint against the street railway company. He reached home on a late train last night, and as he had a heavy grip and was very tired, he decided to take a car for the first time since the strike. His destination was the corner of Waterloo and Central avenue, and he boarded a belt line car at Dundas and Richmond. When the car (No. 80) reached Adelaide street the conductor told him to get off, as the car was going no farther. The traveler kicked vigorously. He had not been notified when he boarded the car that it was not going to complete its trip. He pulled out his watch and called a policeman to witness that it was only 11:04 p.m. He demanded a transfer as a part of his rights, and even this was refused. At last the conductor was frightened into giving him one, but the transfer was useless, as no other car appeared. The traveler leaves his name with The Advertiser as a guarantee of good faith. Yet the company claim to be running a full service and the city council meekly

One hears the spirit-like rapping of the broken pieces of ice together, the lapping and swishing of the dark streams of water which wear their way slowly through the ice. One feels suddenly lonely, powerless, overwhelmed with the majesty of Him who holds the waters "in the hollow of His hand." Derbyshire-the Peak country-made famous forever by Scott's well-known novel, "Peveril of the Peak," is probably the fairest county in gardenlike England. 'Tis a beauty of peace and cultivation which meets our gaze from the windows of the railway carriage. This is the beauty which fills that word "home" so full of meaning to an Englishman—and yet for a Canadian it lacks the nobility, the breadth, the freedom of our native land. But how lovely it is, rolling light green hills, with their peaks of chalk, which give their name to the county-dark green hedges and graceful oaks and elmssmooth, white roads, winding up and down-silvery streams which

It was these lines of Swinburne which rang in my ears as I gazed at Bodiam Castle, an "ideal ruin," a few miles from the quaint old town of Hastings. Sparks from a freight locomotive on the Grand Trunk set fire to the grass about two miles east of Glencoe on Sunday afternoon. A high wind prevailed at the time, and the fire spread quickly to the adjoining fields, burning over a large area of meadow and pasture land and destroying several rods of rail fencing. The fire was only kept from spreading to the barns and grain stacks of Dan and Malcolm McMillan, by the united efforts of themselves and several of the neighbors, who managed to confine the fire to the woods, where tt spread less rapidly, and finally died out when the wind fell. Those who had fencing burned are Philip McRae, W. Sutherland, and Donald and M. McMillan. A pile of stovewood containing about 25 cords, belonging to Hugh

RELAXATIONS OF ROYALTY

Themselves.

Mrs. Sarah Tooley, in the Woman at Home for July, describes some royal amusements. "The Queen's tavorite amusements throughout her life have been equestrian exercise, sketoning, and simple round games, notably Patience." 'Patience" is now her chief diversion, and her Majesty takes her Patience table with her wherever she journeys by sea or land. The Princess of Wales used to be specially devoted to dancing. Latterly her favorite amusements have been spinning-on a black ebony spinning wheel-and photography. Of her daughters, the Princess of Fife is quite an expert with the camera, and the Princess Victoria has taken to photography and fishing; Princess Charles of Denmark is a great cyclist. The two Princesses Louise are fam-ous "fishermen." Princess Louise of Great Britain finds her chief recreation in housekeeping. Princess Christian cycles and plays the piano.

The Prince of Wales enjoys most sports, but detests fishing. His principal hobbies at Sandringham are horse-breeding and battue shooting. Bowls and recently golf are among his favorite pastimes.

The Duke of York, on the other hand, is an enthusiast for fishing. "Lady Mary" states in her Glass of Fashion: "Not everybody is aware that the Duke of York is a capital player on the banjo, and when in the company of his own and his wife's chosen friends will sing comic songs to his own accompaniment by the hour together. The duchess, like her mother before ner, is fortunate in the possession of a sweet contralto voice, and warbles with no little taste and feeling, to the delight of the home party at Sandringham. Delcasse's present misgives the story, which, he says, he has "a source to which I am bound to attach importance." This is the explanation: "Emperor Nicholas is disappointed and tired of the throne. The absence of an heir excites the superstitious feelings, and he connects himself with a Russian legend, according to which an heirless czar is to be succeeded by a Czar Michael, predestined to occupy Constantinople. The death of the czarewitch and the failure of the conference at The Hague led him to decide to abdicate on the occasion of his coming visit to Darmstadt. On this becoming known in Paris, M. Delcasse was sent in hot haste to dissuade him from carrying out this intention."

TRANSVAAL-JOINT INQUIRY. The stories published in New York of the secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, concerning his worryings with President Kruger and the British Cabinet's approval of such action, are evidently baseless, as Mr. Chamberlain's proposal of the Transvaal Government will have on the position of the uitlanders, was only presented to the Transvaal Government Wednesday and the latter is still considering its acceptance.

A Johannesburg dispatch says: Prestdent Kruger has accepted Secretary Chamberlain's proposals for a joint inquiry into the effects of the new franchise laws; only on condition that the inquiry shall cover the whole catalogue of matters in dispute, including the question of British suzerainty. The British Cabinet yesterday approved of Secretary Chamberlain's dispatch to Sir Alfred Milner, instructing him that the joint inquiry must be restricted to the franchise laws, and directing him to inform would insist on immediate settlement. THE DYNAMITE QUESTION.

It is reported that the dynamite commission will not recommend the cancellation of the monopoly, for the reason that foreign shareholders are interested in it. It is believed that the outcome will be the importation or dynamite under certain new restrictions. The price of dynamite has been reduced 70 shillings.

WATER SCARCE IN OLD LONDON

President Kruger that Great Britain; The Experts Say the Thames Is Drying Up.

> Central India Is Also Threatened With a Water Famine.

London, Aug. 4. - London is within sight of a serious water famine, according to the testimony of unbiased experts. It is rumored that t. supply of the east end, which is derived from the River Lea, is about of the day and night, with what consequences to the teeming population of the east end may be easily imagined. The major portion of London's water supply, however, comes from the Thames, which, according to latest reports, is practically drying up.

Last week--so it was stated at the London county council meeting yesterday-the flow at Teddington just above London, dropped to 940,000,-000 gallons a day. The parliamentary commission appointed to investigate counted on an average daily flow of 1,350,000,000 gallons, leaving, after the water companies were supplied, a surplus of 1,000,000,000 gallons-none too much to keep the long, wide estuary clear of shoals and mudbanks, and to carry impurities out to sea.

VITAL PROBLEM FOR LONDON. If August and September are as dry as last year the water companies may have to take the whole flow of the Thames in September, or put customers on shortest rations. With the Lea exhausted and the Thames depleted, the question of the hour is: Where is London to turn for a water supply? It will take years to bring water from the Welsh hills, as has been suggested; yet the Government is taking no steps seriously to grapple with a ques-tion which clearly must soon be solved if the health of the city is to be regarded.

WATER FAMINE IN INDIA FEAR-

ED. Bombay, Aug. 4.—The monsoon rains have failed in the western and southwestern portions of Central Inda, and famine is feared. Crops are withering in the intense, untempered heat, onefourth part is already ruined, and if no rain falls within the next ten days disastrous scarcity is inevitable. The utmost anxiety prevails. As the probability grows that the government will not be able to maintain exchange at its present level, the currency proposals are endangered. The natives have a ready explanation. They say simply that Lord Curzon's luck has failed. POLO PLAYER FATALLY HURT.

Characterize the Business Outlook in Canada.

Midsummer Trade in Toronto Heaviest on Record for the Season.

Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says: Canadian trade advices vary somewhat with the sections reporting. Toronto reports the volume of midsummer business as the heaviest on record for the season of the year. Orders for drygoods for fall delivery are large. Lumber and building material generally are active, and numerous delays have been caused by the non-delivery of structural iron. classes of this latter product are scarce and dear. Hog products are reported very active, and Canadians' supplies have been so heavily reduced that importations from the United States are shortly exhausted. Fewer renewal of bills are reported than usual. Business at Montreal is of seasonable summer proportions. Uneasiness of depositors in small banks this week caused a run, culminating in the closing of one of these institutions, and the stiffening of money rates generally, but the situation is now reported as quieter, and little further trouble is expected. In the Maritime Provinces there is little or no improvement to report in trade; but in British Columbia retail business is fair, building is active, and shipments to the Yukon region are very heavy. Business failures for the week number 26, as against 16 last week and 23 in this week a year ago. United States bank clearings for the week, $1,596,778,656-an increase of 34.6 per cent, as compared with the corresponding week last year. For the Dominion of Canada the clearances were: Monitreal, $14,034,885; Toronto, $8,231,421 -increase 10.5 per cent; Winnipeg, $1,-787.693—increase 48.1 per cent; Hallfax, $1,428,292; Hamilton, $678,438—increase 3 per cent; St. John, N. B., $675,283—decrease 1.3 per cent; Vancouver, $1,005,-720: Victoria, $572,015.

Dun & Co. say: No important change is reported from Canadian offices, though the prospect is generally considered favorable. At St. John the volume of business is moderate, with collections fair. The hay crop is reported abundant and the fruit crop average from Halifax, with a better shore trade than for some years, and a fishcatch above the average, with prices well maintained, and encouraging prospects for fall business. Quebec also reports a promising outlook for fall, with good collections. At Toronto the movement of merchandise is large the season, and there is a good demand for fruits, teas, coffee and sugar, while hardware and metals sell No material improvement is noticed at Victoria, but conditions are on the whole fair, with collections Wholesale trade at Vancouver for July was good, with retail active and collections satisfactory.

ON THE OTHER SIDE. Dun & Co. say: July failures have been smaller than in any other month of which there is record, excepting May, and trading failures smaller than in any other month. Failures for the week have been 182 in the United States against 196 last year, and 23 in Canada, against 21 last year. Bradstreet's says: All signs indicate the maintenance of general trade and industry in an unprecedented midsummer volume. Cereals are all lower on the week, reflecting the generally favorable crop outlook, and also some indifference as regards foreign buying of wheat, though export demand for corn has been apparently sumulated by recent price reactions. All classes of iron and steel are either firmly held or tending up. Wool is still moving upward in sympathy with improved demand for the manufactured article, but buying is more closely confined to manufacturers, speculative dealing being apparently less noticeable. The boot and shoe trade continues in good shape, and hides are slightly higher on the week, with the finished product firm. The anthracite coal trade appears to be well under control, and recent advances are reported maintained.

Comes Up for Discussion at the Council Board-$1,200 To Be Expended on the Breakwater-Important Notices of Motion.

The City Council last night held a lengthy meeting. A request from West Londoners to have about $10,000 expended on the breakwater was among the chief matters considered. Much of the time was taken up by the liscussion of No. 2 committee's action in taking out of Mr. Baldwin's hands the contract for supplying gravel in No. 5 ward. Finally it was decided to give Contractor Baldwin another chance. Some important notices of motion were presented. Mr. Wm. Gurd asked payment for a plate-glass window broken during the street railway trouble, July 8. Referred to No. 1.

David Sare and others offered to pay for the extra foot on a cement walk on Evergreen avenue. Referred to No. 2 committee.

The council, at a previous meeting, decided to charge the extra cost against the city engineer. Ald. Mc-Callum stated that Mr. Bailey and four others were of the opinion that the action regarding the walk was irregular, and on that ground they objected to paying for more than was petitioned for-a four-foot walk.

John W. Graham and a large number of other West Londoners petitioned to have the breakwater raised and BREAKWATER REPAIRS. James W. Campbell, Wm. Spence, R. A. Jones, W. T. Hamilton and J. F. Redmond represented the petitioners, and each addressed the council. Mr. Spence stated that $5,000 would fix up the breakwater to last ten years. Mr Jones thought that possibly $10,000 would be required. All urged immediate action, so that the work could be done while the water was low in the river. An earthen breakwater was all that was needed. The river could be straightened at the same time as the breakwater was repaired.

Ald. Jolly stated that under the amalgamation agreement West, London was entitled to $1,200 this year for repairing the breakwater, if required. If not required there the sum was to be expended on the ex-village streets. He moved to refer the matter to the engineer and chairman to have the fund expended on the breakwater. Ald. Garratt seconded.

Ald. Parnell fell right in with the idea advanced by the petitioners, and moved that the matter be referred to the city engineer to present an estimat to the board of works at the next meeting.

In reply to Ald. McPhillips. Mr. Jones said that to spend $1,000 this year on the breakwater would be, to a large extent, wasted. The work, if done at all. should be properly done.

Ald. Jolly's motion carried.
Chairman Taylor and Dr. Cl. T.
Campbell asked the council for a grant to assist the board of health in entertaining the delegates to the health officers' convention to be held here Sept. 14 and 15. Between 100 and 200 visitors are expected. The advantage of having the provincial board of health here before London's new sewer system is completed was pointed out. An appropriation of $200 was made.

COMMITTEE REPORTS. The report of No. 3 committee was adopted unchanged. In connection with the board of works' report, Chairman Douglass presented Contractor Howie's claim for damages through the failure of the city to order any plank walks laid in the city, after giving him the contract. After some discussion a motion was passed instructing Mr. Howie to furnish a statement of his loss. The city engineer suggested that plank walks to the value of $300 be laid in each ward as an offset to Mr. Howie's claim.

No. 2 committee's recommendation. to refund Mr. John Labatt $125, half the cost of the private drain on Adelaide street, was sent back to committee. HOSPITAL CONTRACTS

Chairman Jolly reported for the hospital committee. Tenders for electric light fixtures were accepted as follows: London Electric Light Company, $92 60 and the Rogers Electric Company, $9 95.

COST OF INSPECTION. In reply to Ald. McCallum, the chairman of the board of works said two inspectors were needed on each cement walk contract. The contractors had two gangs at work. Ald. McCallum-Sixty-six cents an hour for inspection of a sidewalk is pretty high.

A TROUBLESOME CONTRACT. Ald. Pritchard wanted to know if the board of works had taken the contract for supplying gravel in No. 5 ward out of Contractor Baldwin's hands and given it to another contractor.

Ald. Douglass stated that Baldwin had not supplied the kind of gravel Ald. Wilkey upheld the chairman and the engineer. The mayor was sorry the committee should fail to report an important matter like this to the council. Ald. O'Meara also objected to the committee's action on the ground of irregularity. Ald. Rumball said that if they hadn't an engineer they could back up they should sack him. The aldermen who interfered with him in such matters as these took a good deal upon them-

Contractor Baldwin was given another chance to fulfill his contract for the supply of gravel in No. 5 ward. The placing of a fire alarm box near the Columbia Handle Company's factory was urged by Ald. Carrothers.

TO AVOID STRIKES. Ald. Plant read clause 33 of the street railway bylaw, and contended that under it the council had power to insert a clause providing for the compulsory arbitration of disagreements between the company and their employes. He saw no reason why the members of the council should object to having such an insertion. Then neither the men nor the company could tle up the road. There could be no strike for a week, or a day, even. He moved to instruct the city solicitor to prepare the clause for insertion in the Great Britain Has Most of the Foreign Trade-A Very Complete Volume.

We are indebted to Mr. Shimizu, Japese consul at Vancouver, for the thireenth number of "La Resume Statisique de l'Empire du Japon." It contains statistics in Japanese and French, and many of them are of great inter-We learn from the first table that the Japanese empire consists of 594 islands, large and small, of which islands, large and small, of which largest is Niphon, with an area of 44,571.12 ri carre, a ri carre being almost e equivalent of six English square The total area of the empire, including Formosa, is 27,062.46 ri carre or exactly 161,179.48 square miles. The empire proper shows an ancrease of about half a million a year. During the last eleven years the gain has not been quite 11 per cent, which not as rapid-as the increase in Great Britain, the low rate being due probably to the small immigration into Japan. The tatistics show that, so far, the Japanese are not prone to emigrate, and that, except where they are shipped away in large numbers under contract, as to Hawaii, they prefer countries near at home. Thus in 1897 nearly 15,000 out of the 23,857 emigrants went to other parts of Asia. The number of foreigners then resident in Japan was 10,531, of whom the Chinese come first, the English next, and the Americans third. The increase in the number of foreign residents is slow. The industrial statistics are full, but a summary of them would not be of special interest. A few features may be mentioned. The forest lands have an area of about 18,000,000 acres belonging to the state, and of other lands the state owns about 27,000,000 acres. The forest area is slowly increasing. Of tea Japan produced 8,470,182 kwan, a kwan being equal to a little more than eight pounds avoirdupois. The cotton manufacturing industry shows rapid growth, 32,068,243 kwan of the raw material having been used in 1897, a gain of 30 per cent over the previous year. The manufacture of European paper is also growing very rapidly. Another industry that is increasing at a tremendous rate the manufacture of matches, over 25,000,000 gross having been made in

Of the metals, the following were the products: Gold, 30,981 ounces; silver, 2,078,396 ounces; copper, 5,354,338 cwan: iron, 7,299,579 kwan. Almost all the metals are represented in the tables, but these are the principal, except manganese. of which the product was 4.732.923 kwan. In all the chief lines of mineral product there is a steady ncrease, and a particularly rapid one In manganese. Of petrolum 8,366,000 river are the chimney pots and kwan were produced, a very rapid in-crease. The value of the fisheries was nearly 48,000,000 yen, and the increase is rapid. There is a rapid increace in the product of salt. All the industrial statistics exhibit remarkable ss, and it is interesting to note that between 1892 and 1897 the rate of Laxa-Liver Pills the best medicine to take.

Constipation is a serious matter at any time, but especially so in summer time. The heat makes the germs of fermentain the system. People who want to keep healthy during the hot season should see to it that their

The foreign trade of Japan in 1897 was valued at $82,435,849 yen, the exports being largely in excess of the imponts. There has been a gain of nearly 300 per cent since 1888. The United States is first on the list of purchasers of exported Japanese merchandise, France being second, Hong Kong third and China fourth. Great Britain Who are "the three finest comic characters" in all literature? That is is sixth on the list, with about one-sixth as high a figure as the United States, but the British Empire as a a bold question to rise. Eut it is raised in Gentleman's by Mr. J. B. Hadley. whole surpasses the United States in And this is his answer: this respect. When we come to the imports of Japan, we find Great Britain far in the lead, British India second, China third, and the United States

If I were asked to name the three finest comic characters that human genius has yet familiarised to the mnagination of mankind, I should unhesitatingly select "Sir John Falstaff," "Don Quixote," and "My Uncle Toby," would be found to cavil at my selection. Some, perhaps, would be inclined to advance the claims of "Sir Roger de Coverley" and "Parson Adams," or to "hark back," to Gargantua and Pantagruel and the earlier Rabelaisian humor. * * But, for me at humor. * * * But, for me at least, the trio I have named will always stand pre-eminent, forming, as it were, the upper hierarchy of the Comic Immortals. So he heads his paper "The Comic Immortals; a Comparison and a Contrast." The antitheses suggested are inumerable. Here are a few:

Sir John Falstaff and Don Quixote equally excite our mirth, but the form-er is not only the cause of wit in others-he is witty himself and relishes a ojke. Whereas the latter never smiles. Nothing but his wit and good-humor save the English knight from absolute contempt, and nothing saves the Span-iard but his virtue and valor. We as often laugh with Falstaff as at him, but Quixote never shares the joke. He gives it up to us entirely. But though there is more wit than humor in Fal-staff, and no wit and infinite humor in the character of the lean knight of La Mancha, it would not be right to say that Shakespeare's creation excels in wit alone. A higher compliment cannot possibly be paid to the fine genius of Sterne than to associate My Uncle Toby with Falstaff and Don Quixote. It would be preposterous overpraise to compare Sterne as a man of genius with Shakespeare and Cervantes: but the single character of My Uncle Toby would not have been unworthy of any comic writer the world has yet produced. But, exquisite as is the humor displayed in the delineation of my Uncle Toby's character, it is not the point of the picture that is the most precious. It is his unaffected goodness of nature that leaves the strongest impression on the mind amidst all his amusing eccentricities.

Whitby, Aug. 4.-No class of society is more indebted to Dodd's Kidney Pills than is that important half of mankind-the women. Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved themselves to be "woman's best friend." And they do all this because they act on the kidneys. The kidneys are the organs which hold the balance between health and disease. If they do their work properly the rest of the body is kept in health. If they fail to act as they ought, disease, both in the kidneys themselves and wherever the blood circulates, is inevitable. The kidners, if healthy, filter disease impurities from the system. If unhealthy they don't. That's the case in a nut-

ABODES OF THE CLIFF DWELLERS

Village Formerly Inhabitated by Them Discovered in Utah.

Charles E. Clinton, of Salt Lake City, gave to a Tribune reporter the following account of his recent discovery of a cliff dwellers' village four miles from Good Hope, on the Colorado River, in Good Hope, on the Colorado River, in San Juan county, Utah:

"About March 10 I left Graves Valley, on the Dirty Devil River, and made my way to Hindoo Mountain, a great isolated peak on the San Rafael desert, where I intended to prospect. One afternoon shortly afterward, while viewing the country from the mountain, I saw to the southwest a green. and though the decision of such a question must be, to some extent, a mater of individual taste and predilection, I think few competent judges heard of thing in that region, and I determined by the southwest and gray cliff. Trees are an unheard of thing in that region, and I determined by the southwest and support of the southwest as green and support of the southwest a termined to go over and investigate. I cut across the country, through canyons and gorges to Good Hope bar. There was a large force of men working on placers, but not one of them knew anything about the cottonwood grove. After a day's rest I started out to find the red and gray cliff, and after much toiling through gulies and ravines I came to its base. "The cliff was almost perpendicular, and I despaired of ever getting up, until I found where a series of rim rocks ascended for several hundred feet. The ascent grew gradually steeper until entirely perpendicular, then hand and toe holes, six inches apart, took the place of rim rocks. After much climbing, I came to a narrow trail, which ascended by winding backward and forward across the face of the cliff until it reached the top, where a unique sight was awaiting me.

"Scattered for a full mile were small sandstone huts in a state of perfect preservation, while near every hut grew two or more cottonwood trees. The huts were fifteen feet apart and arranged in rows. There were no signs of public buildings, all the huts being alike in size. After wandering through the streets for some time I forced open the stone door of a hut and entered. With the exception of some pottery and a few square stones it was empty. I then went from house to house, most of which I could not open. In five huts which stood in a row I found mummies, each one wrapped in a blanket, which when touched dropped to pieces. I gathered the mummies into one hut and left them there. Through the center of the village ran a small stream which had worn a bed eight feet deep in the sandstone. It was alive with small speckled trout and sunsides. There were several hundred acres of tillable land about the village and what looked like a burying ground. But the sun was now getting dangerously near Mysterious canyon on the west and I had to leave the place. It was dangerous work climbing down and it was dark before I reached the bottom."

Mr. Climton thinks there are great dis-

Mr. Clinton thinks there are great discoveries yet to be made in this village, and in the near future, he, together with J. B. Telford, of Osceola, Nev., will leave to thoroughly explore the cliff.—Salt Lake Tribune.

"Between the Courses."

"Good evening, Mrs. Nesmith. Yes, generally, you remember. So I hope know I'm late, but not too late. I hope, you're satisfied." I know I'm late, but not too late, I hope. Oh, thank you; you're very kind! Take out Miss Wilson? Delighted, I'm sure. We're old friends, you know. Ah, good evening, Miss Wilson, A charming little party, isn't it? Our hostess tells me I'm to have the pleasure of taking you in to dinner."

"Indeed? I'm sorry for you, Mr. Reed. It's a shame to be imposed upon by me, when there are so many charming debutantes present."

"I'm more content, I assure you." "It's very nice of you to say so, any-

"It's really so. When a man gets my age he's apt to become a little weary of the ingenuous, gushing debutante, however charming she may be." "And when a woman gets to be my age, she ought to know enough to stay

I got a dead of pleasure out of it at the time-though I do hope I wasn't quite so self-con-scious as she is; but I'm tired enough of it all now."

'Oh, you're becoming pessimistic." "This deadly round of pleasure is enough to spoil the sweetest temper and mine was never remarkably good.'

Then why do you keep it up? "Habit, I suppose. I've nothing else in particular to do, and the invitations will come. Do you mean to say that you really enjoy it still?"

"Well-I confess that I was remarkably relieved tonight when I found that I should not have to listen to the prattle of some ingenue.

"I think you've said that before." "I shouldn't wonder. I've thought it several times."

Then I really should have been missed if I had stayed away?" You certainly would. This is more than I dared hope for."

You are positively inspiring. This is something unusual after five years of bellehood-unsuccessful at that." 'Unsuccessful! Nonsense!

"Of course, goosie; I'm still unmarried. "Oh, but--!"

MILLIONS FOR TRAVEL

The Americans Spend $150,000,000 in Europe Every Year.

[New York Journal.]

Much has been said and written about the great number of Americans who go abroad every year, but few persons not connected with ocean transportation realize what an immense business has been built up in travel abroad. The bald statement that 150,000 Americans will go to Europe this year conveys no adequate impression of its proportions.

These figures, it must be remembered, relate only to Atlantic travel. There are increasingly large numbers of persons who start on their wanderings from Pacific ports. This travel has received an unusual stimulus this year from the events which have turned the attention of Americans to the far east. Counting in the voyagers to the Orient to South American and other less visited points, there are probably not less than 200,000 Americans who will visit foreign shores this summer. If they all went on one grand excursion it would require a train of passenger cars thirty miles long and a fleet of 500 steamers, forming in single file a steaming line 100 miles long, to convey them. SEVENTEEN MILLION DOLLARS. There are thirty teamship lines carrying passengers from New York, some twenty from other Atlantic ports, and a dozen from different points on the Pacific. Of course, many of these do their principal business in freight, and have only a small passen-ger capacity. The great passenger carrying lines number about a dozen altogether. These various companies run about 150 ships, beside freight steamers and sailing vessels.

The cost of first cabin passage by all the great lines is $100 during the summer season. Second cabin passage costs from $40 to $80. About two-thirds of the Americans going abroad travel first cabin and one-third second cabin. Accordingly, if the estimated number Americans go abroad this season, they will pay the steamship companies something like $17,000,000, or very nearly the amount of the Spanish indemnity. The cost of the stay in Europe, wherever the tourist may elect to roam, varies, of course, according to his means, tastes and methods. The rule ordinarily laid down is an average of $10 per day for each person to cover all the ordinary expenses of tra-vel. As the length of the usual stay is from six weeks to two months the outlay for each person, judged by this standard, will amount to between $400 and $600. Of course, there are many who spend many times this amount, and an average of $500 for each person is a very conservative estimate. According to this calculation the amount spent by Americans on foreign touring this summer will not fall short of $100,-000,000, or more than is spent by the governments of the smaller European countries for all their expenses.

THE GREAT ITEM OF TIPS. One item in our foreign travel account that amounts to surprising proportions is the expenditure for tips. The American abroad realizes that he is expected to tip, and if inexperienced he is likely to overdo this matter, distributing his fees with a lavishness that excites the contempt rather than the admiration of the recipients.

Five per cent of the amount purchased is the established European tip. waiters in the restaurants expect that; more they do not appreciate nor un-derstand. But even if Americans adhere to this rule, which most of them do not, their outlay in tips and fees amounts to a pretty penny in the course of a season.

The tipping on shipboard varies according to taste or will, but on a land tour through Europe the fees to waiters, porters, guides to public buildings and a horde of unnecessary officials Science Monthly for August.

Another item that reaches to about the same figure is the money expended for souvenirs. Every American who goes abroad brings home a number of little gifts for his or her friends, and this outley is salden less than $25 and this outlay is seldom less than $25 for each traveler. The custom of shop-ping abroad has fallen off considerably of late on account of our rigid customs inspection and the national pride in our own products. But every woman who goes to Paris spends from $25 to $500 for the "perfectly lovely" creations of the Parisian shops. Thus another item of millions is added to the account. From these figures it will be seen that by a conservative estimate $150,-000,000 will be spent this summer by Americans who are going to foreign countries, and at least $100,000.000 of this amount will be spent abroad.

In 1885, according to the police reports, a little more than 20,000 Americans visited Paris, while the number of English visitors was 35,000. In 1895. the number of Americans had increased to 42,000, and of Germans 32,000. During the coming season, estimating the increase of Parisian visitors from the probable increase in the number of Americans going abroad, the number recorded by the Parisian authorities will be more than 60,000, while the English and Germans are hardly likely to approach the 50,000 mark.

The Face in the Crowd

[Frank L. Stanton.]

It was but a face, in passing-somewhere on the crowded street; Strange that, after all the darkness, in the sunlight we should meet; Strange that, after words that wounded, in the lifeways I should see Lips that never meant the music they uttered once to me! Did I feel the pulses quicken? Did a sudden mist of tears Blur the beauty and the brightness of the sweet, remembered years?

It was but a moment's feeling; though my heart was crying loud, Still, I knew but 'twas a vision, fading in the fading crowd.

Sure, there are so many roses, one should never make a May! Faces shall be fair tomorrow for the ones that fade today; Life is only in the future-weeping not about the past, And the dust of graves we grieved for brightens into bloom at last!

But these memories—they will linger steadfast as the star above; Life is life—the ages tell us—life is life and love is love. Wherefore, on these worldly high-ways, there is something still of the fancied benediction of a fair and fading face.

Dreams-all dreams; for we are areamers where the lights above us gleam:

Dreams are only lights and shadowslove itself is but a dream.
Life hath duties—duties calling; phantoms, should we still embrace-Leave the lights that shine forever for a dream that frames a face?

Let it pass; the crowd is careless; of that crowd am I today; Life and love are fading-fading in the mysteries away.

Silent are the stars above us to out hope and to our trust; Let us dream a heart will love us when heart is dust

MENTAL FATIGUE IN THE SCHOOLROOM.

Regarding the number of hours of mental application per day which may be safely expected of a pupil in school, investigations have tended to show that there is a danger of requiring too many. When pupils return to school morning after morning without having recovered from the previous days' labors, it is evident that too heavy draughts are being made upon their nervous capital. It may be said in reply that many factors conspire to produce this depleted condition, as insufficient sleep, inadequate nutrition, and outside duties; but the answer is that under unfavorabe circumstances less work may be demanded. As the curriculum is planned in many places, alike in graded and ungraded schools, the pupil is expected to be employed in the school for five or six hours a day no matter what may be his age, and to this work should be added studies at home for the older students. Now, as Kraeplin has justly observed, nature ordains that a young child should not give six hours' daily concentrated attention in the schoolroom, but, rather, she has taken pains to implant deeply within him a profound instinct to preserve his mental health by refusing to attend to hard work for such a long period. Consequently, in such an educational regime, the mind of the pupil continually wanders from the duties at hand. The most serious aspect of this is apparent, that when attention is constantly demanded and not given, or when a pupil is pretend-ing or attempting to keep his thoughts turned in a given direction, yet allows them to drift aimlessly because he is practically unable to control them, he is acquiring an unfortunate habit of Excavations Prove That Antiquity Was Up to Date.

Silk. Linen' and Woolen Fabrics as Good as Ours-Wonderful Perfection of the Ancients.

Up-to-dateness thy name is antiquity, says a Paris letter; mode, thou art older than the proverbial nills. There has just opened here an exhibition of clothes and stuffs taken from the graves of Egyptian patricians and imperial Roman officials, ladies and gentlemen, who were buried in the second and third century, respectively, after Christ; and these, being in a rare state of preservation, bring Mr. Ben Akiba's saying, "nothing new under the sun," home to us with terrible

Those very latest Paris novelties in stuffs and colors, the fashionableness of which makes them the property of a favored few only, are not novelties at all, they, or their originals, must have been quite common on the Nile sixteen or seventen centuries ago, for the people who were them then though more or less high up on the social ladder, were not exactly Vanderbilts, as the absence of articles of intrinsic value in their graves proved. Indeed, the ornaments found together with the clothes were paltry as to weight in gold and silver, which shows that the corpses, when in the flesh, can not have belonged to upper tendom, for in those days the rich never failed to provide their beloved dead with a few gold coins to pay their way in eter-nity, they also buried their favorite jewels with them.

The graves were unearthed in Antionos, Egypt, at one time seat of a Roman governor. The well known Egyptologist, Gayet, superintended the work and brought his finds to Paris. As the inscriptions on some of the graves showed, many of their occupants were Christians. The bodies of the females were clothed in silk and wool, their undergarments being of graves was adjudged to be from the factory of Raute Lisse, one of the first weaveries of France. And the colors of these sixteen and seventeen centuries old grave clothes were of the most tashionable hue-"Bysantinian," it is called in Lyons, only finer, more delicate, and certainly more lasting. Here is a dress of a noblewoman buried at Antipolis: A long linen shirt of the finest batiste, as the stuff is today, with insertion of lace. The ground color is white, with blue polka dots and heart-shaped dots of white hue inwoven. The borders around the shoulders and in front are of raised embroidered work, the pattern of which is quite fashionable just now. This embroidery is visible through the overdress; also a mod-ern frock. The dress material is yellow crepon, cut decollette, square. The dress has insertions over the breast and is done up with many flounces and frills. The poor, dead lady wore an opera cloak, bright red silk, with a white feather collar and a hat made of narrow bands of red silk sewed together. She had on tan shoes, on which figures are impressed in gold.

Your correspondent knows that he is challenging belief by the above statements, but he is copying from the official report of the excavations, made to the government. The yellow dress from the year 200 is edged with an embroidered border of many colors. The borders of imitation precious stones, worn, appeared like bad counterfeits of the Roman-Egyptian original.

Some little time ago an article appeared in many papers stating that the handkerchief was an invention of the fifteenth century. Fiddlesticks! M. Gayet assures us that the most of the female corpses excavated by him held handkerchiefs between their fingers.

On the Paris boulevards one sees nowadays many women wearing dresses with embroidery in high relief. It's so fashionable! Strange, the Roman-Egyptian ladies of the second and third century thought so, too, as their dresses prove. And these big buttons, pastels of rococo-ladies framed in bright metal, which were all the rage not long ago-our sisters at the beginning of the Christian era thought them pretty, also, though they used, of course, different subjects, goddesses and nymphs, instead of queens and great ladies. The sleeves of all the Roman dresses are of a peculiar pattern, which was revived in the middle ages; they must have swept with them the ground, as they measure more than a yard and a half: they were also wide and volumin-

A woman, whom her tembstone designated as a "musician," had on a cloak of orange-colored linen; her dress of purple cloth was enlivened by red and green fringes and borders; the collar was beautifully embroidered; also sleeves. She wore a red leather belt and a linen skirt, with fine, colored insertion. Her tan shoes were decorated with gold. Her handkerchief had many furbelows. The comb in her hair was set with bright pieces of glass. If it were of celluloid instead of turtle shell one might think it had come from a Paris 1-franc bazar. This girl wore a signet ring, adorned with the classic head of Apollo. Around her neck she had a string of imitation pearls, with clasps of gold bronze; up-of Venus. The Romans believed that persons departing this life take up their earth-ly professions in their new abode, and therefore provided the dead with means of earning a livelihood. This musician's grave contained a box of rouge, some of the latter still intact. The graves of two circus riders were likewise unearthed-each containing, besides the corpse, what was left of a leather saddle—not a side saddle, by the way. The leather work on the boots of all the ancient ladies is very beautiful; they could not do better in Vienna or Russia today. One of the circus women must have been a Christian, being designated as "the Sainted Euphemia." Her corpse was dressed in a sea green fringes and braids set "V" shape upon the lower half of the skirt; the color of the braid is alternately white and violet. The sleeves have embroidery white and green on violet ground. In this grave a pair of house shoes were found, similar to those worn in Egypt today. The graves of the men contained all sorts of implements, besides arms. One of the ancient corpses must have been a literary man when in flesh, for was accompanied by a full outfit of writing material, ink, stylus, parchment and books of reference. A thing which M. Gayet could not understand was the fact that all the men had black and all the women had yellow hair. A chemist solved the riddle: the hair of the females was dyed or bleached with a dye or bleach that would be worth hundreds of thousands in these days of parroxide blondes, that become brunettes again over night.

Black Muslin in Vogue.

Black lawn hats are the latest fancy of fashion, and all the smart women wear them. They are made with a shirred crown, and four or five plissed ruffles standing out from the face to form a wide brim, says the Boston Globe. A piece of the lawn is wound about the crown and tied in front in a huge bow. There is no color about it anywhere, and nothing employed in the making but the black lawn. Nothing can be more becoming than this charming framing for the face of full black frills, all fitted and undulating over the hair, says the Chicago Tribune. They cost fabulously in the shops, because they are a novelty, but if you are clever you can make one for yourself. If it is too difficult to make the hat without a frame, you can buy a black wire frame with a plain crown about three inches high and a narrow brim, as you only want a wire or two to support the ruffles, as they stand out well with their own fullness.

Black muslin frocks, too, are particularly fashionable, made with tunics, and have the upper part of the body, e tight sleeves and the bottom of the trailing skirt shirred in little fine shirrings on cords of featherbone, the tunic falling long and being ruffled about the edge. Such a gown as this, of the finest, thinnest black French lawn is worn by a well-known society woman at Newport, and with it she wears a white tulle hat heaped high with white tulle pompons.

The white muslin gowns worn are made in the most ravishing styles, with a profusion of little frills, puffs, ruches and tucks, and with their floating tunics they look like something out of old pictures.

They have no lining in the sleeves and under the shoulders, and the glow of the flesh shows through beautifully. With these floating white gowns are Electric Novelties for the House.

Electricity for heating is now introduced in many houses, and the kitchen outfit is almost complete. One can cook without heat, dust or smoke in the new electric kitchen. There are electrical tea-kettles, stew-pens, coffee-pots, irons and toasters. They are easily manipulated where electricity enters the house. By attaching a wire to the knot on the susual implement heat is quipkly communicated to it. Very little heat is given to the sur-rounding air by the fluid, and one can cook in a small kitchen with a large electrical range without experiencing any appreciable discomfort from the temperature. For hot-weather use the electrical outfit is unsurpassed, and is bound to come into general use as electricity becomes more popular as an economic household agent. The small electrical cooking utensile cost from $5 to $50 apiece but a complete electrical kitchen outfit can be obtained at from $100 to $200.

Invalid's Bereen.

Here is a suggestion for the comfort of your dear one: Procure a screen large enough to shut off light, draughts, etc., and secure privacy when necessary, and on the side which is to be next the bed or invalid chair attach pockets of various shapes-one for a book or a magazine, a long narrow one for the clinical thermometer, others for bottles and boxes of medicine; still others for seissors, rubber bands, handkerchiefs, small shawls, station-ery, and so on. Your own intelligence will tell you just what particular pockets your invalid will most appreciate, and they may either be stitched on, glued on, or attached by means of fancy sewing or embroidery.

Girls Should Be Taught the Duties of Motherhood

To the Interest of Posterity-Sed Hif-fects of Ignorance.

[Hamilton Times.] A little while ago when a few alarmists were screeching about Ontario's low birth rate and pointing with envy to Quebec, the Times ventured to say that Ontario's case when considered in the light of death as well as birth statistics, gave no cause for apprehension. We pointed out that while Ontario had a comparatively low birth rate, on the face of the returns, it had also a very low death rate, whereas Quebec's infant mortality was enormous. In Ontario marriages take place much later in life, contracting couples are better edu-cated for parenthood, and infant life has a better start. In spite of the affectation of horror by some people we cannot but think that extremely early marriages and excessive fecundityespecially under conditions of poverty and mental and physical strain on the mother—are not conducive to the virility of the race. Four or five well-born, well-nurtured, well-educated, happy children in a family are better than a dozen weaklings, who start handicapped pre-natally to perish by the way or drag out a miserable manhood or womanhood. This view, we are led to believe, is held by many people who decline to join in the rout raised in certain quarters. And intelligent people in Quebec also see that there is another side to the birth rate question. The gross ignorance of very young mothers is chargeable with an awful amount of infant suffering and mortality. Dr. Laberge, city health officer of Montreal, the other day said that "the If a medal were ignorance of young mothers, over-crowding, want of fresh air, and posawarded for the most perfect temsibly poor milk, are the causes that are carrying off infants at the rate of 130 perance medicine or 140 a week," in that city. What an awful thing to contemplate! But what ily use it would matter about the poor slaughtered innocents; the birth rate record is kept high!

Dr. Laberge thinks some organized system of teaching young mothers their duties and responsibilities ought to be undertaken, even if the city has to pay for it. Perhaps something could be done in that way, but to the student of sociology that would seem to be beginning too late and touching only the fringe of the subject. The girls should be taught while they are yet girls. Marriage at 15 to 18 should be discouraged, and young women ought to be taught plain facts about themselves and the duties of wifehood and parenthood—facts which even among Ontario mothers and daughters are, to the latter's cost, too often untaught. No duty is so important as that of the wife and mother; to none do many im-mature girls bring less intelligence. They blunder along, it is true, but human souls pay the penalty of their ignorance. Mothers are too much to blame; the early marriage, high birthrate cranks are also blameable. It is a delicate subject but somebody has a duty to perform toward the young girls; that somebody is primarily the mother. If the mother is incompetent, then society must instruct them, or so-

Montreal, is in receipt of a letter from one who says she is "an old woman," and her advice is:

"Instead of teaching young mothers begin with the girls. Get up a society of intelligent women, and, as you say. divide the city into sections. Let the women find out the girls, rich and poor, contemplating marriage, and send them to the institutions where babies are cared for, eay, for a month or three months, those who are able to pay for the instruction to do so. Have a woman with practical knowledge give common sense talks to these girls, how to handle and care for infants. Tell them their duties as wives and mothers; show them the serious side of marriage, for the mothers of ection of "Golden Medical Discovery." | side of manriage, for the mothers of daughters; tell them how infants are to be fed—not with the bottle; tell them that when the law of nature is outraged humanity must suffer, as we notice at present in the many unhappy homes where the children have no love for the parents nor the parents an income of the parents are little things to help them and make them happy."

"Well, Peggy," said Fred, kindly, "of course there must be some people like that to be proud of the others, and it may be just as well for you and Olive for the parents nor the parents an in-telligent love for the children."

There is more to be considered in this connection than mere numbers of births. Men exercise judgment in breeding horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. How much more should we consider

"Meadowhurst Children and other Tales," by Mrs. Eleanor Le Sueur Mac-Naughton, of Quebec, is a book of stories for children, which should receive @ >>>>>> a warm welcome from the Canadian public. It is not necessary to read more than a page in order to see that the author is thoroughly at home with children, and finds an infinite fund of interest in their sayings and doings and all the workings of their minds and hearts. This, of course, is the primary qualification for success in writing for children. Mrs. MacNaughton possesses, in addition, a bright and attractive literary style, free from all unnecessary verbiage and other unassimilable matter. The child who takes up this book to read will find himself or herself fairly and squarely dealt with; that is to say, talked to about things of real interest in language which needs no interpreter beyond childish experience. Mrs. MacNaughton observes in her preface-and quite correctly in our opinion—that books of this character are scarce. We congratulate her on having so successfully realized in the book before us her own conception of what a book for children should be. We are not told where "Meadow-hurst" is, but considering that the author lives in the ancient capital, we should be disposed to locate it somewhere on the St. Lawrence shore. Certain it is that a French-Canadian population forms part of the background; and it is pleasant to observe with what friendliness and sympathy Mrs. MacNaughton describes their customs and characteristics. In a country like ours, in which it is important to cultivate good feeling between our different race elements, this gives the book a distinct value apart from its other merits. The Meadowhurst children are either permanent residents of the place, or visit it for their holidays; and a very happy and interesting group they form. They have a great many different ways of amusing themselves. In the first chapter they perform a play, "The Babes in the Wood." In the second they have a picnic; in the third a bazar; in the fourth a plot begins to form, which in the fifth results in a wedding, seen, however, and described entirely from a child's point of view. Chapters six and seven tell of stirring adventures; and to the end there is always something doing which holds the reader's attention and sometimes almost hold his breath. We must in particular mention the story in two parts, called "The Children's Rock," in which is most graphically and feelingly narrated the danger and the rescue of two children who were caught by a rising tide while playing on a rock at a considerable distance from the delivered his message in a calm, even land. A brief quotation from the book will perhaps give a better idea of its quality than any description. The the aged heroine.

"Pooh!" said Fred, "What a goose you are, Peggy. Why, I should love an army to come, and if there were any flags that ought to be up and the enemy hauled them down, Larry and I would pull them up quicker'n winking if we got the chance. Wouldn't we Larry?'

"Yes, after the army had tramped away," said Larry.
"No," said Fred, "we'd haul them up again while the enemy were there all pointing their rifles at us, at least, I would; you could be a coward if you liked."

"Oh, ho!" said Larry, "I'd like to know who was coward last year when we met the snake?"

Fred turned very red in the face. He can't bear snakes, and one day in the autumn, when were were gathering cones and mosses for our bazar, and met a big black and yellow one, he turned white and ran away. "I wasn't afraid of the snake," he said, "it could do no harm; for father says none of the snakes here are poisonous, but it was so ugly it made me feel sick.

"Well, the enemy would make me feel sick," said Larry. "How silly you both are," I said. "to dispute what is never likely to happen. There is no war now and no enemy to come to Meadowhurst; and though I should like to do something brave just as well as you, Fred, I believe I'll ever get a chance, don't not till I'm big anyway, and perhaps not even then. Heroes and heroines are nearly always great people, kings or queens or generals, or they live when something exciting is going on, like Barbara Fritchie. Of course, in war time there must be lots of chances."

"Everybody has chances," said Fred. "Our teacher was telling us that just the other day. He said that the world was a battle field and that every one had a chance to be a hero, and he is making a good rattling piece about it. I don't know it all yet, but just listen to this verse," and Fred jumped off the sofa and stood up very straight while he said:

"In the world's broad field of battle, In the bivouac of life, Be not like dumb driven cattle; Be a hero in the strife."

"There, now, what do you think of that?" "I don't know what it means," said

Larry. "Do cattle go to battle?"
"Of course not," said Fred. "Well, why does he say not to be like them?" "He means—why, he means not to act as they would if they did go, you stupid.' 'I don't see how he knew anything about it," said Larry, "and 1 don't think he knew much about cartile either. If they did go to battle and were anything like Farmer Flaxman's bull, they'd make things pretty lively and not be dumb, either.' "Oh, Larry, do stop teasing," said Peggy. "Your verse sounded splendid. Fred, and it is lovely to think that! we may all have chances, and I hope that you and Olive may have, but I'm afraid that I could never be brave. I to, since she's a girl, to be something like cattle, kind and harmless and useful; but you bet when my chance comes, I am going to take it, and then perhaps you will both be learning a piece about Fred Archer instead of Barbara Fritchie.

"Do cattle learn pleces?" Larry said, but Fred took no notice of him, and as the garret was beginning to get dark, we all went down stairs. The book is full of pleasant scenes, now and then lit up by a touch of humor, and could hardly be read by children without helping to make them happy and good.

William Was Proud.

When he arrived, a young and unknown kitten, at his future home, he had no idea what honors awaited him. His name, William Anthony, United States Marine Corps, tells that his owner is a small American boy who was greatly interested in the Spanish-American war, and a hero-worshipper, who was familiar with the names and deeds of our country's latest heroes. William Anthony was the name, you doubtless remember, of the orderly who announced the blowing up of the Maine to the captain. It is said of him that he saluted just as he would have saluted his superior at any time, and tone, as he would any message. small boy, when he read of the blow-ing wo of the Maine, was deeply imwill perhaps give a better idea of his small boy, when he read of the blow quality than any description. Whether because of his name, or because he was educated to be exclusive, William—as he was called for short—would not eat out of a chipped saucer, nor would he eat meat that was not carefully cut.

Summer came and the small boy and his family were to go to the country; what was to be done with William? The cook had a sister, who had children who were fond of cats, William would be welcome. The small boy thought about it for some days, and as the cook, who was devoted to William, was going to visit her sister, the boy decided that his much-loved William might go.

These children welcomed William with enthusiasm, almost forgetting to show how delighted they were to see their aunt. The oldest girl had studied English history; she knew the kings were sometimes given titles that showed their character, such as William the Silent. In less than a week William Anthony became William the Proud. The family adopted the name easily, for they were English, and used kings and queens; it was in their blood, so to speak. The cook adopted the name as particularly fitting, and it was introduced to William's own home. This year the cook is not going to live with her sister's children, and other arrangements had to be made for William the Proud. The grocer came forward and announced that he generally needed a cat in his store to take care of the rats and mice. William won the cook's affection because he was a champion in the matter of catching rats and mice, and his virtues were made known to the grocer. The grocer sued for the honor of William the Proud's company; the small boy said he might live with the grocer for the summer. The grocer was happy. The day came for William to start. "I shan't take him on the delivery rounds," announced the grocer," some of the streets are paved with cobbles: I'll come in the afternoon and drive him home over smooth pave-

You should have seen William the Proud. The grocer's wagon arrived with a large empty fruit crate having a hinged cover. William was put in this with so much dignity that he was not at all humiliated. The cover was dropped quietly upon him; he was carefully carried to the wagon, the whole family watching from the front door, as the grocer drove away very carefully with William the Proud, in what he evidently regarded as a throne of state, mounted in a royal carriage. "Well. I should be troubled about William if he did not always do his duty. There never are rats or mice where William lives. He is William Anthony, U. S. M. C., now: I do not want him called William the Proud any more. That's not American," announced William's chum and companion before he started for the mountains.-The Outlook.

No Armor Against Fate. (This song is said to have been a favorite one of King Charles II.) The glories of our blood and state Are shadows, not substantial things; There is no armor against fate: Death lays his icy hand on kings; Scepter and crown Must tumble down, And in the dust be equal made With the poor crooked scythe and spade.

Some men with swords may reap the field. And plant fresh laurels where they But their strong nerves at last must yield:

They tame but one another still;

Early or late

They stoop to fate. And must give up their murmering breath When they, pale captives, creep to death.

The garlands wither on your brow, Then boast no more your mighty deeds; Upon Death's purple altar now

See, where the victor victim bleeds; Your heads must come To the cold tomb Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in their dust.
