THE PROGRESSIVE BICYCLE BAGPIPE.

The Scottish bagpipe has been heard on the hills of auld Scotia; it has stirred the soldier to deeds of daring on the battlefield; it has been heard at the festive gathering, but not until last Tuesday evening have we ever heard of its stirring music being discoursed from that modern institution, the bicycle. On that evening nearly 50 of the best riders of the South Side invited John Crerar, the wellknown Scotch piper, to accompany them, and seated on one of the sad-dles of a tandem John pedaled with all his power and "hotch'd an' blew wi' micht an' main" such stirring airs as "The Campbells Are Comin," and other favorites from his soul-inspiring chanter. Starting from Mr. Crerar's place of business at 87 Thirty-first Albany (late Toronto club) defeated gan avenue, and spinning down to Fifty-fifth street boulevard, passed through Washington Park and back on his team, and yet he leads them all in batting. Rare old man!

Many league eyes are already fastened upon Fifield, the successful young pitcher of the Detroit club.

The Washingtons are touted as the as it wended its way over the South Side. Bagpipe music from a bicycle is a novelty that will not soon be forgotten.—Chicago Western British American, July 4.

A LOCAL TOURNAMENT. London bowlers are up to their eyes in work at present. Early in May, on the completion of the new lawn and renovation of the club house, the bowlers took active steps to bind all bowlers together, and at the meeting for the purpose of organizing the Western Ontario Bowling Association, held here on May 25, the question as to grouping the different clubs and arranging the first year's games was referred to a committee, consisting of President Macbeth and Secretary Ed Weld. Since that time all of the weswith, and although some have joined the association, yet quite a considerbeing themselves thoroughly well established, or for other reasons, have not yet determined whether or not to join, or have postponed joining for the present. Under these circumstances, the committee have thought it best, at all events for this year, that the idea of grouping the clubs be abandoned, and in arranging for this year's games it was decided that a lawn bowling tournament be held in London, commencing on Labor Day, Sept. 7, next, at which there will be limit, however, as to the number of players of a club in either the doubles or singles. A committee has been appointed to arrange for suitable priezs. No entry fee is to be charged in rink competitions, but a fee of 50 cents per man to be charged in dou-bles and singles, to go towards providing the prizes for the same. It is intended to publish a circular with as full particulars as possible, which will be sent to each club in ample time before the date of the tournament.
The London club confidently hope that all sister clubs will unite to make the tournament a successful and enjoyable one, and so promote a friendly feeling with the different clubs, and extend the interest taken in the game of lawn bowls.

THE CANDIDATE.

There is probably little in romantic literature that surpasses the meteoric career of William Jennings Bryan. who was yesterday nominated at Chicago for the highest office within the gift of the American people. The constitutional age of presidents is 35 years. Bryan is 36, and if elected in November, he will be the youngest President that the White House has ever known. He is essentially a selfmade man, and a man of the people. His principal education was gained in the public schools of Salem, Ill., where his parents resided. During the succeeding six years he received an academic training. The bent of his mind was toward the law, and it was in the office of Lyman Trumbull that he laid the foundation of his legal career. In 1890, when only 30 years of age, he was elected a member of the House from the first district of Nebraska. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, stating that turned to Omaha to accept the editorship of the World-Herald, of that city, although his home for many years has been at Lincoln, the State capital. Mr. Bryan is about the medium in height. His face is cleanly shaven, and in appearance he resembles the great Pennsylvania commoner, Samuel J. Randall, who, at Mr. Bryan's age, might readily have passed for the latter's twin brother. He is a strict churchman, and on several occasions during his residence in this city ad-"I beg your pardon," she exclaimed solicitously, "I didn't mean to step on your foot." COMMENTS ON THE DEMOCRATS' CHOICE. London, July 11.-Commenting on the action of the Chicago convention, the Standard says that the only alternative for the honest money Democrats is to rally to the support of McKinley, who now alone represents the forces of honesty and fair financial dealings. The paper assumes Mc-Kinley's election, and says it fore-sees that Great Britain will have to face downright commercial hostility. It concludes by saying that the col-lapse of the Democracy, and the triumph of McKinleyism will not gladden the hearts of Englishmen. The Daily News says that Bryan's views are great nonsense; nevertheless he is a perfectly logical bimetallist. McKinley is almost certain to win. Anyhow, he is sound on the money question, despite his rampant protectionism.

For example, Mr. Edgar, M.P., formulated a straight indictment against Sir Adolphe Caron, a member of the Government, and asked for a committee of the House to investigate the charges, which, on his responsibilty as a member of Parliament, he declared to be true. The Conservative Government first refused point blank to permit any investigation, on precedent for their course, the baffled Ministers resolved to appoint a com quire into the charges. But the Conservative leaders declined to accept Mr. Edgar's indictment. They emasculated the charges made by him, so as to deprive them of their true meaning, and by this means whitewashed their Ministerial associate! another which gratifies us, it is the great volume of hearty thanks which come from grateful parents for the cures Hood's Sarsaparilla has effected upon their children. The agony of despair turns to unspeakable joy as mothers and fathers see dreadful sores and eruptions gradually yield to the potent purifying power of this great medicine, and bright boys and girls given perfect health. FOOLED THE HENS.

How an Ingenious Farmer Made His Chickens Hatch.

Pittsburg Commercial Gazette. Miles Gearhart's hens would not hatch, and that being his only way of incubating he was quite at a loss to know how to increase his stock of poultry. Finally he struck on a unique plan, with flattering results. Selecting the biddies that did not lay and were inclined to hatch he made them a close-fitting cap of heavy cloth, which completely blindfolded them and was impossible to shake When a chicken is blindfolded will squat down and stay there. Thus reasoning Miles altogether has set five hens, each day liberating them for food and exercise. To date three hens have brought out all the eggs intrusted to them except three and are proud of their families as though they voluntarily contracted them.

FORCE OF HABIT.

London People Have Become Used to the Great Specific Remedy.

London, July 6.-The dispatch from Detroit with reference to the cure from Bright's disease and blood poison of Mr. Langley, of this city, by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, has recalled the wonderful facts of the case to the citizens, among whom Mr. Langley is well known. It has reminded them that Mrs. Langley among others also made a wonderful recovery. The use of the pills, however, has become so universal here, and there has been so many instances in which they have been used with beneficial results, that a similar case would hardly excite as much interest now as it did then, when the medicine was less known.

President Kruger's library is said to contain now, besides the Bible and the Pilgrim's Progress, a complete set of Mark Twain's works.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial s without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhea, cholera, and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief, and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

Lady Aberdeen's Thoughtful Consideration Exemplified.

She Writes to the Mother of a Govern ment House Employe Who Was Killed.

The following is a copy of the sympathetic letter which her Excellency the Countess of Aberdeen so thoughtfully sent to the mother of the young groom who was lately accidentally killed by a fellow-servant in the grounds of Government House:

"Dear Madam,-It has deeply grieved his Excellency the Governor-General and myself to be obliged to send you such sorrowful tidings, and we beg now to be allowed to convey to you and to Mr. Taylor and to all your family the expression of our most earnest and respectful sympathy. Your boy has only been with us for a than in the corresponding week of any short time, but he attracted us from other year, except 1895. Not much can the first, and he soon became a general favorite in the household because of his brightness and willingness, and because he entered so heartily into all his work. I think, too, that I may safely say that he was happy amongst us, and that he found much to interest him in the life here and in the outdoor winter sports in which he and his companions engaged. This sad and sudden termination to a hopeful life has, therefore, come to all in this house as a personal sorrow, and we find it very hard to believe that he who was amongst us in all the vigor of youth but three days ago has now been called away from all his earthly friends Thomas had been using an air-gun of his own, but it was out of repair, and the gunsmith had lent this other gun

The coffin was of polished oak with plated handles, and an engraved plate bearing his name and age. It was placed in our private chapel, and surrounded with flowers and white lilies, and later the whole coffin was covered with wreaths from his fellow-servants and one from his Excellency and my-self. The service was conducted by our chaplain, and all the household and many friends from outside the house attended. His Excellency and his military secretary and some of Thomas' fellow-servants carried the coffin out. "The cemetery where your son's body lies at rest is a pretty one, and his Excellency has selected an attractive spot for the grave. We shall hope to send you a photograph both of the chanel when the casket was lying there, and also of the grave. Twelve or thirteen carriages followed the hearse to the cemetery. We shall hope to put up a little memorial of Thomas at the cemetery. "If there are any further questions which you would like to ask, please write them to me and I will try to ansew them for you. I also enclose a little bit of Thomas' hair, which we asked our nurse to cut for you, and I want to assure you that all that loving care could do was done in preparing his body for its last repose, and I kissed his brow in your behalf as a farewell from his mother. "We all united in prayer that you and yours, and all to whom the poor boy was dear, might be sustained and comforted under this terrible bereavement. We felt how crushing must be the news thus telegraphed to your home from a far country, and you unable to do anything. We were, however, very thankful that the news should be broken to you by one so gentle and sympathetic as Mrs. Rawlinson, and whose sons appear to have the monkeys combined.

been acquainted with Thomas. "I cannot hope to say anything to cemfort you. I send you some little verses, which contain helpful thoughts for such a time, and I trust and pray that you may be able to believe that God is love, and that even in this dealing he has some wise and loving purpose for your son, and for those whom he leaves to mourn him.

"May God be with you. With renewed and most sincere sympathy, believe me, yours very truly, "ISHBEL ABERDEEN."

mental Music Thoroughly.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Gounod, the composer, bitterly resented the omnipresence of the average piano player. He was strongly in favor of a somewhat severe pianoforte His argument was that 99 out tax. of every hundred who learned to play the instrument failed to attain to more than a superficial stage, either of conception or execution, and that they wasted valuable time, which might otherwise be employed in doing some thing that would benefit them. He also contended that the piano practice of students constituted a public nuisance, and was irritating and exasperating to such a degree as to become The proposed tax was never zens. levied, but some figures published by a French scientist may possibly in some measure tend to restrict the indiscriminate teaching of music to very young children. It is declared that a large number of nervous maladies from which girls of the present day suffer are to be attributed to playing the piano. Children are kept at dreary and distasteful work at the keyboard hour after hour daily, and the nerves simply will not stand the strain.

It is said to be proved by statistics that of 1,000 girls who study this instrument before the age of 12 years, Fourth street, has a story about the less than 600 suffer from this class of disorders, while of those who do not young is proved to be equally injurious. The remedy suggested is that children should not be permitted either to study either instrument before the age of 16, at least, or in the case of delicate constitutions, not until a later age. So far as the piano is concerned, however, it is possible that the true remedy may be found in a better method of teaching. The main point in early tuition is to "form" the hands and give them flexibility and strength. This is purely mechanical, and it can be done away from the pianoforte keyboard. The endless repetition of sound, which is responsible for much of the wear and tear of the nerves of young musical students, is thus avoided, and better progress is made from the concentration of the mind and technique only. The objection has been raised that such a system makes "mechanical" players. As a matter of fact, it makes only those 'mechanical" who would be so under the ordinary system of tuition. To those of true artistic instinct it is an inestimable help and shortener of labor. IRELAND'S OLDEST WOMAN.

Kitty Reynolds' Mind is Clear, and at 112 She Can Thread a Needle Without the Aid of Glasses,

The oldest woman in Ireland has seen more years than her name would indicate. She is in the Union Hospital in Strokestown, County Roscommon, Ireland. Just now she is in her one hundred and twelfth year, and is known still as Kitty Reynolds.

There is no doubt of her age. A couple of giddy young things who are also in the hospital, and who are ninety and ninety-five years old, respectively, remember distinctly that Kitty Reynolds was a fully matured woman when they were mere infants. Kitty, as she is called by everyone, remembers clearly many incidents of the rebellion of '98, which she tells with considerable power of description.

Her brain is still active, and her intellect unimpaired. She can't hear quite as well as she used to half a century or so ago, but her eyes are still as quick and keen as ever. She is proud of the fact that she can thread needle quicker than fledglings of

Many years ago, when Father Mathew began his crusade for temperance, she became one of his disciples, and since that time has never tasted Prodigious Labor in Learning Instru- alcohol in any form. So firm was she n that determination that only a short while ago, while in a precarious condition because of an attack of influenza, she refused to take stimulants when ordered to do so by her physician.

Manitoba wheat is steady at 58 1-2c for No. 1 hard, 62 1-2 Owen Sound and Midland, and at 66c north and netted a good sum for the growers of this district. The berry came in large, a great number of samples measuring 5 1-2 and 6 inches. Then came the raspberries, black as well as red, and they, too, have proved to be such a crop that several growers could not dispose of their whole picking on Tuesday. Cherries were also a very large crop, and the late variety is of a very fine quality. Currants and gooseberries are also a good crop, and along with the other fruits have commanded a good price. Detroit has been a great market for our berries. but this year Buffalo has fallen into line, and handled large quantities of better market places every day for our fruit. Even Quebec has sent in large orders this year, which have been filled with satisfaction. Apples are to be a big crop here, while peaches will completely outdo any previous year. Truly this is the land of milk

A mixture recommended: One part by weight of arsenic, one of sugar, and five of bran, to which is added water sufficient to thoroughly wet the mix-ture. The arsenic and bran are first mixed together, then the sugar is dissolved in water and added. This is scattered upon the ground, about a teaspoonful in a place. Another poisonous mixture recommended: Bran 100 pounds; paris green, 3 pounds; old molasses, 2 quarts; mix, and add a little water if necessary to make the mass stick together. Grasshoppers mass stick together. Grasshoppers seem to be fond of this mixture, and it may be used successfully where there is no danger of domestic animale being poisoned.

"When grasshoppers become numerous every precaution should be taken to limit, as far as possible, their breeding grounds, and resort to methods for their destruction before they reach the adult stage.'

WHAT AUNTIE SAYS.

Ever since I was married, up to the last month, I have had trouble with my hushand about his food. I would get the very best flour and pay the highest price for baking powder to make my biscuits and pastry with. He would always eat them and then say I was trying to poison him and that I wanted to get rid of him, he had indigestion so bad. A friend recommended me to try Dalley's Self-Rising Flours, and I did so. I made biscuits and he was very fond of them, and ate them. I felt a little nervous as I thought he would glare at me again and say that I wanted to kill him. But this time he did not, he said I had struck the right key in my cooking. I told him I had tried another kind of flour, and he said to keep on using that kind of flour. He said he would live a few more minutes if I did not make any more skips

A Living Toad That Didn't Travel Six Inches for Thousands of Years.

Eureka, Springs, Ark., July 9.-In the mining district, some three miles from this city, there has just been made a most novel, and, viewed from a scientific standpoint, a most interesting and death the title expired. The barony valuable discovery. Half way up the mountain a prospector was working in a six-foot ledge of calcareous rock, bearing every evidence of the Silurian age. He had progressed fully five feet into the ledge when a blow of the sledge revealed to his astonished gaze a live toad snugly ensconsed in a cavity in the solid rock about the size of a quart cup. The sides of this cavity were perfectly smooth and bore no evidence of crack, seam or crevice. The toad's position was about equally distant from the upper and lower surface of the ledge. Above the ledge is a stratum of pure white sandstone three feet thick; and immediately over this a layer of soil, out of which tower great oak trees two feet in diameter. The find was made by D D Field formerly of Topeka, Kan., and an experienced miner, who has for some months been prospecting in the mineral region in this vicinity. Asked as to the accuracy of the above account, Mr. Field signified his willingness to attach his signature thereto under oath. The mayor or any prominent citizen of Eureka Springs will vouch for any statement he may make, and any num ber of Topeka people will testify to his reputation for truth and veracity. When first exhumed from his adamantine tomb, the toad's eyes were closed, and there was little manifestation of life, other than a palpitating motion of the throat. Shortly after his advent he opened one eye and began to move his front legs. Gradually his stiffened members regained their strength, until now he is a decidedly lively batrachian. He refuses all food

however, and has forgotten, if he ever knew, the art of hopping. But he is an expert crawler, and seeks, and evidently enjoys, the light of which he so long had been deprived. Time, though, has set lightly on his batrachian brow. He seems to anpreciate, too, the importance and privilege which attach to great age, and moves about with a solemn and arrogant mein. But when you scratch his sides with a lead pencil, he readily yields to the seductive sensation, places one front foot on his heart or stomach, and, as he cocks one eye up ecstatically, seems to say: "Oh! if you would only make it my back." Unlike Shakespeare's toad, he does not sweat venom nor moisture of any kind; his color, too, a lurid copper hue, further marks his personality as distinctive from any batrachian yet found. Some years ago, near Peorla, Ill., live toad was discovered in a sub-carboniferous formation under similar conditions, except that it was of a pale slate color. Mr. Field will endeavor to preserve the life of his little ward, and it will probably be sent to the Smithsonian Institution.

Queen Victoria Revives a Barony that Was in Abevance to Give a Child Her Rights.

There is in England a small peeress. for whom the Queen has done a re-markable thing in order that this little girl may enjoy her full rights when she gets bigger. SECOND ONLY TO NEWTON. After recounting the series of discoveries and inventions which have claimed for Lord Kelvin a place second in the judgment of some to Newton only, the writer tells of one remarkable peculiarity:

While the higher mathematics and all the mysteries of logarithms and the calculus are as easy to him as the alphabet, he often appears puzzled when a sum is presented to him in ordinary numerals. A question of simple addition placed in this way on the board will sometimes lead to the query being put to the class or to an assistant, with a certain funny look of helplessness: "How much is

He will converse with a nobody in a manner so respectful and attentive as to make that nobody imagine himself that he has been delightfully interesting and even informing to Lord Kelvin. This arises from the simplicity and sweetness of a great nature. There are, however, some things which do rouse that equable spirit into a white heat. RHEUMATISM'S VICTIMS.

After Spasmodic Efforts for a Cura Usually Give Up.

There Is One Medicine That Has Cured Thousands After Other Medicines Had Failed A Released Sufferer Adds His Strong Indorsation of This Wonder-

From the Trenton Courier. What an innocent sounding name has rheumatism, and yet how terrible a reality to the thousands who suffer with it. Doctors agree that rheumatism results from poison of and deposits in the blood, but as to just how they can be reached and eradicated, it would seem that their knowledge fails. The usual treatment is a long series of medicines which may give temporary relief, but do not cure, and then the patient usually gives up, thinking that there is no medicine that will cure him. This is a mistake. Rheumatism is not a necessary evil, and because one is growing old it is not imperative that one should accept rheumatism as a natural accessory to advancing years.

There is a remedy for rheumatism

despite the general belief that it cannot be cured-a remedy that has cured thousands of the most severe cases. A noted instance of the truth of this assertion which has just come to the knowledge of the editor of the Courier, is the case of Robert Francis, Esq., formerly of Trenton, now retired from business in Rat Portage, Ont., and still residing there. He has been a victim of rheumatism for over three years. Last winter he visited his friends in Trenton, and was then contemplating a visit to the South in search of relief from his constant foe. He had to use a staff in walking, and went at a slow pace. This Christmas he was here again on a visit to his friends, smart and erect and without the stick or the sorrowful look of a year ago. His friends and acquaintances all accost him as a new man and congratulate him on his healthy, fresh and active appearance, in contrast with a year ago. He has cheerfully and gratefully given the following statement of his efforts after a cure. "My home is at Rat Portage, Ont., where for years was engaged in business and where still reside. For three years I have been a great sufferer from rheumatism I tried several highly recommended remedies to no purpose, as I continued to grow worse, till it was difficult for me to walk. I was for thirteen weeks confined to my bed at home and in the Winnipeg hospital. I was then in duced to try the Mount Clemens springs. I took six courses of baths of 21 baths each, without any seeming ly beneficial result. I read of several cures in the Courier from Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People, and friends who used them with benefit to themselves urged me to try them. I did so, and after a short time I felt an improvement in my condition. I have taken twelve boxes in all and my improvement has been continuous and satisfactory, so that I need the cane no longer, and I have increased my weight from 140 pounds to 175 by the use of Pink Pills. I am not entirely free from rheumatism, but I am new man, 1,000 per cent better than I was a year ago, and I attribute my

The City of Glasgow's Very Successful Scheme-The Scotch City Turns Plague Spots Into Comfortable and Cheap Dwelling Places for Workingmen-Good Work for an Improvement Association.

While so many problems of city government engage attention it might be profitable to thin attention to the workings of the City of Glasgow, one of the few novel cities of the world.

The construction of Glasgo's municipal tenement-houses, whether of the better or poorer class, is admirable.

The City of Chasgow is run for the benefit of the people on strictly business principles. The municipal corporation conirols whatever by their nature are monopolies—water supply, gas and electric lightling, as well as the stockyards, the public markets, even the old clothes market—and all are under the jurisdiction of the common corporal.

Eighteen years ago the town council leased the street railway system to a company, and the lease expires this year. The contract stipulated that five years prior to the expiration of the lease a new lease should be made so that both parties could be reached. It is significant of the paternal character of Glasgow's municipal government that the demands made by it in the negotiations largely related to the comfort of the laboring Eighteen years ago the town council leas-men who operate the line. The council said to the company: "You must give better service, employ a better class of men, pay them better wages and work them shorter hours," but negotiations fell through, and the City of Glasgow now begins the operation of her own street

Glasgow seeks the welfare of all its peo ple, rich and poor alike. It is the only city in the world to own lodging-houses. Some may say that in acquiring these it made a virtue of necessity, but, be that as it may, virtue remains.

The municipal tenements consist of blocks of flats on either side of the Salt market. The buildings are four stories in height; the ground floors are occupied by shops. The houses are usually arranged so that on two floors there are three tenements, a tenement of two rooms being on each side of the staircase and a tenement of one room between them. There are also several flats of three rooms each. The tenement of one room is fourteen by thirteen feet. It is fitted with a bed closet (which is expected to answer the purpose of a second room), a scullery, a large press or cupboard, a commodious dresser and a kitchen range. Such an apartment rents for $40 a year. The two-roomed flats have a lobby fitted with a press or closet. On one side of the lobby is the living-room, which is completely furnished as a kitchen. A scullery adjoins. There is also a bed alcove in the room. On the other side of the lobby is the sitting room, to which is attached a bed closet. Such a flat rents for 49.50 a year. The three-roomed flats rent for $80 a year. Gas is supplied by the city at the unusual rate of sixty cents per 1,000 feet. There is a laundry at the top of the house for the use of the tenants. These artizans' dwellings are constructed in the most substantial manner. The stairs are stone and the stairway walls are tiles or glazed brick, which are easily kept

It has long been objected that these dwellings do not meet the necessities of the poorest class of laborers. The rents were oo high for men who work in the streets or on the docks and at other kinds of unskilled was possible for the municipality to reach these men in any way. If it had been a question of letting rooms to single men the arrangement could have been made easily enough. But the difficulty was to devise homes for large families; and it usually happens that in this part of the world the poorer the man the larger is his family. Houses could be built, of course, but could the poorest class of laborers afford to pay a rent which would return to the municipality an interest of 2, 3 or 4 per cent on its investment? Could the municipality compete in that respect with the owners of rookeries where families live in single apartments? Much deliberation was given to the subject. It was found that the municipality could put up a block of substantial buildings to meet the wants of the class hitherto left untouched, but that it would not be practicable to provide anything more than what are called "one-roomed houses," that is to say, one room to a family.

To be sure the rooms could be divided by a partition reaching within two or three feet of the ceiling—the sleeping quarter being thus separated from the cooking quarter. It was finally decided that a block of single-room tenements should be constructed. A place was cleared at the rear of a block of artizans' dwellings, and a plain building of three stories was erected, with four single-room tenements on each floor, two in the tront and two behind. These were let at rents well within the means of unskilled laborers. The buildings were opened a few months ago, and they have been filled ever since. The experiment is financially successful, but in other respects there is little to be said for it. Of course the apartments are larger, lighter, healthier, better-built than any single room tenements in the old rookeries. Nevertheless, the objections to the herding of a family in one room are not thereby removed. They are merely minimized, and in a very slight degree. It is not by any means demonstrated that annicipality is justified in doing any-

The construction of Glasgo's municipal tenement-houses, whether of the better or poorer class, is admirable.

The stairways, being built entirely of masonry, are consequently fireproof. The stairs themselves and the hall floors are of masonry, are consequently fireproof. The stairs themselves and the hall floors are of stone and the walls of the halls are faced name "Plimsoll mark," arrived in this with glazed tiles or glazed bricks, as the case may be, and are easily kept clean.

A very large amount of work yet remains to be done on the municipal estate which comes under the administration of the improvement fund. Old houses are still being torn down and crowded areas are being cleared away. Of course all this is very expensive business. But it is being gradually carried on so that the cost may not fall expensive business. cessively on any single year. Besides, Glasgow, like every other city in the United Kingdom, is suffering from a depression of trade and this is not the time to tighten the screws of taxation

An organization known as the Improvement Trust was instituted to let air, light and, if possible, a little sunshine into the dismal closes and courts of the city, where not fewer than 75 000 harmon being lived. not fewer than 75,000 human beings lived amid surroundings which had become moral and physical "plague spots," a danger and disgrace to civilization, and it has largely succeeded. The condition of has largely succeeded. The conditions to the older city referred to comes down to us in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. They could never be very wholesome, but would be tolerated with a modern Scotch population. But we have evidence that even then the dark places of the city were not free from the hygienic and moral evils has to five from the magistrates and the magistrates the church were, in the magistrates and the church were, in the absence of the police and of street and stair lighting, little able to repress. When, therefore, the great railway works came to be con-structed and other industries were stimu-lated in the west of Scotland, in Ireland, teening with an ever-population, and in Glasgow with its tempting port, when no preparation had been made for it, the inchigrants took possession of the older and denser parts of the town, and the authorities were face to face with an exigency that only a drastic remedy could ed their houses. Thus High street, Salt market, Gallowgate, Trongate, Gorbals, Calton and other gardens developed gradually into the "closes" and "vennels" which fell to be broken up under the improve-ment scheme of 1866. A bold and serious thing it was on the part of the authorities of 1865 to face the promotion of a bill that necessitated the purchase of all this densely crowded and heavily rented property, much of it, too, divided and subdivided by legal writs into flats and half flats. The improvement act was passed by both houses of parliament, and it gave assessing powers during fifteen years -five years at six pence per pound and ten years at three pence per that prostration caused by changes pound—and the tax was laid on occupiers of season, climate or life, and while it exclusively, i.e., all persons hiring houses or flats in Glasgow above a certain very small rental. Immediate progress of the property, and the town council resolved to impose the maximum rate of six pence per pound. Being entirely a new tax and laid body circulates in the head, and when on the evening of the November election of this 1866, occasion was taken to arouse the citi- and improperly elaborated, then the zens against the scheme and its principal brain and its structures are irritated author, Lord Provost John Blackie, Jr. and painful. mum be levied in the first year. In going to parliament the sum estimated as necessary to be raised by taxa-tion was placed at £500,000, and the tax was based on that calculation. But it must be kept in view that as time wore on more liberal ideas than those of 1866 were advocated, with the result that many more streets, wider thoroughfares and more efficient sewerage operations have been carried out than was contemplated in 1866, and at an additional cost in ground and works of probably £200,000, and also that the number and the paying power of the ratepayers have greatly increased. Ex-Bailie Archibald Dunlop was chairman of the committee from 1884, and he and his predecessors in the office have been supported at one time and another by the best men in the town council, who find in the complex affairs of the trust an excellent training school, which serves them in good stead in other departments of the public service. Bailie Dunlop recently retired from the council, leaving with the improvement tax at 1d per pound sterling, and with the prospect that this rate will suffice until the trust is wound up. Only older citizens, familiar with the old city, can realize the vast improvements wrought by the improvement scheme in many ways. Even its supposed failures have been sanitarily beneficial. For example, ground in various quarters, cleared of its buildings, failed to sell, but the health of the district has been thereby immensely benefited. There has, indeed, been no property market for several years, because overbuilding and depression of trade, arresting the growth of population, had left many proprietors with a heavy handful of unletterable property. The committee have had to submit to some temporary unpopularity because of this state of matters, yet there is no scheme

One paper saw in them "the promise of fine work" and "evidence of great imaginative power." Mr. Andrew Lang found the verses full of promise, comparing them with the school verses paring them with the school verses of Sir Walter Scott, which, he said, "are really not so good as Edmund Curtis'." The Westminster Gazette sent a man to interview the youthas though his head had not been sufficiently turned by the notice he had already received in the public press. The reporter describes his as a bright-faced, intelligent looking lad—still a mere boy, with frank gray eyes, and a smooth, fair skin. He was much affected by the kindness which had been showered upon him, and gave some details of his past life. He was proud of the fact that the family was proud of the fact that the family had lived in Donegal for longer than he could tell, and that there must be

Raggles was only a scrubby little Indian pony. His owner had evidently considered him of no use, and had cruelly turned him loose on the bare

He was a sorry looking little fellow, as he stood one morning at the gate to Mr. Hudson's large cattle ranch, shivering in the wind, and looking with a wistful gaze at the sleek, fat onies inside

Mr. Hudson noticed him, and started Mr. Hudson noticed him, and started to drive him away. But his little flaughter Lillian said: "Let him in, papa, he looks so hungry." Mr. Hudson opened the gate, and the pony walked in, just as if it were his home. Mr. Hudson made inquiries, but no one knew anything about him, so Lillian claimed him as her special property, and named him Raggles, on account of his long, tangled mane and tail

He was a docile little creature, unlike the rest of the ponles on the farm. He soon came to regard Lillian as his mistress. She learned to ride him, and a visit, onions."

But Raggles seemed to consider she was not much of a rider, for he would carefully avoid all the dangerous-looking places and holes in the ground made by coyotes and prairie do When the next spring came Raggles did not look like the same little scrub. His rusty brown coat had all come off, and a new black one had taken its place.

By the next fall the neighborhood could boast of a public school, and when Lillian began to go, Raggles found he had regular duty every day. Lillian would saddle him and ride to the school house, two miles away, then tie up his bridle and send him home. At about half-past three Mr. Hudson would saddle him again and send him for Lillian. He always arrived on time, and M he was early would wait patiently by the door until school closed.

Some readers will remember the bizgard that struck Western Kansas in 1885, when so many people lost their lives and thousands of cattle were frozen to death. The storm commenced about noon, and the weather grew steadily colder.

The snow blew so thick and fast that Mrs. Hudson was afrait to trust Raggles to go for Lillian, but Mr. Hudson was sick, and there was no

She went to the barn, put the saidtile on him, and tied plenty of warm wraps on. Then she threw her arms around his shaggy neck and told nun to be sure and bring Lillian home. He seemed to understand, and started out with his shambling trot one hour passed slowly the anxious parents. When two sad hours passed, their anxiety was terrible, as they strained their eyes to see through the blinding snow his staggy form bringing their darling tafely home. At last he came with Lillian back, bundled up from head

The receipts from the new liquor ki-censes of Philadelphia amount to $1,-648,670. The cost to the city, says the Lutheran Observer, for police, courts and prisons necessary to punish criminals and support paupers made by the saloons, is several times as great, besides the murders, poverty, wretchedness and woe caused by them. In a pecuniary view alone, this method of out of order and refused, apparently, raising revenue is like "saving at the to pllow the course which had been spigot and wasting at the bung-hole."

Lord Wolseley, commander-in-chief of the armies of Great Britain, does not take as kindly a view of Tommy Atkins' drinking habits as Kipling, but is probably nearer the truth. In a re-cent speech before the British Army Temperance Association, Lord Wolseley made this striking statement:
"There are yet some battles to be fought, some great enemies to be en-

Astronomers in Fear That the Planetary Gearing Was Out of Joint. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

There was great excitement in aslinnot long ago. The moon had gotten marted out for her for all eternity. The situation was grave. Calculation upon calculation was made by the savants, but no solution of the phenomenon seemed to be mathematically obtainable. It was discovered that both the fixed stars and the planets were affected in exactly the same way. The whde universe was out of order! Fortunatly, the poor, ignorant public had not let gotten wind of the affair, when it occurred to some one of the astronomes that the fault might well be in the oservatory itself, and not in the general machinery of the universe. The observatory of Brussels is of comparatively ecent construction. It is supposed to have been built in accordance with he latest attainments of science and rt, but, unfortunately, it was placed, contrary to Biblical admonition, upon a hill of sand, and the away from its proper position. This movement threstened to continue. But as to the conduct of Dame Luna, the scientists are completely reassured, having revised their calculations with due allowance for the enforced bias of

WHY EURGLARS KILL.

One of Them Says Fear of Prison Alone Promots the Act.

The London Chronicle publishes the following as remarks made by "an old criminal, now retired," when questioned as to the use of lethal weapons by burglans. "New hands," he said, "never carry a revolver, and seldom make anything in the shape of a murderous attack on anybody interfering with them. There may be a skirmish and some hard hitting in the attempt to escape, but nothing beyond that. "There is no accidental character about the policy that a 'freshman' pursues. He gets his instruction from the experienced cracksman into whose companionship he has fallen, and he is counselled, as a matter of expediency, not to carry weapons when entronomical circles in the city of Ber- gaged in his initial enterprises. If, at the very outset, he is clumsy enough to get captured, the fact that he has a clean record, and that he was not armed, goes a long way with judge and jury, and he may get through this particular escapade and quite a considerable number afterward, before being sent up for any considerable stretch. "Afterwards, of course, it is a very different matter. Should a man have been convicted three or four time, he knows that his next offense will be punished by something like fifteen years' penal servitude; more, likely enough, if the judge should be either Mr. Justice Hawkins or Mr. Justice Day. So the determined man makes up his mind that he will never again be captured if killing will prevent it. He sizes up the chances and concludes that he would as lief take his chance of the gallows (with a bid for freedom) as go into penal servitude for practically a lifetime. Therefore it is that from this time onward he goes armed, not in the least because he is murderously inclined, but because he is overcome with the horror of penal servitude and, believe me, I would rather be hanged myself tomorrow, in my prime, than go into penal servitude for another five years. "Do you suppose there would be fewer crimes of violence if the sentences were less severe?"

'That has nothing to do with it.

What leads us on and on to the commission of crime is the infernal system of police supervision. My last sentence was the outcome of a job which was 'put up' by the police themselves. I had been out of prison too long for them, and they wanted to see me back, and so they set a 'nark' at work, who mixed me up in an entirely bogus rob-

"That kind of thing has been done over and over again, and innocent men as often as not have been trapped. The fact that I had kept out of jail for nearly two years was actually used against me at my trial, for phen my previous convictions were recited the detective in charge of the case volunteered the statement that during that time I was suspected of having gained my living by distincest means, as I had been in no employment.

"Employment, indeed! As though the police would permit us to take any sort of situation! When a man has been hunted down by the police, and been hunted down by the police, and in sheer desperation reverts to his career of crime, small wonder, I say, that when he finds himself cornered he shoots, or stabs, or bludgeons in his dash for liberty. He may die in bed with the stain of blood on his hands; if luck is against him and he is captured, then I say he is better off on the scaffold than in lifelong penal servi-

CANNON MADE FROM TREES.

The Cuban Insurgents Mave the Stranges Artillary of Medern Times.

In these days of 80-ton guns, it seems hardly possible that an enlightened people would make cannon from trees. That is just what the Cuban insurgents have done, however, and with excellent success.

There grows in the interior of Cuba peculiar tree with a winding grain. The wood is remarkably tough, and to split it by ordinary means is almost an impossibility. When wanted for artillery purposes the tree is felled, a section some five feet in length and one foot in diameter is selected and cut, the bark is removed, and all knots and uneven places on the surface are dressed down. The embryo cannon is then placed on rude trusses and a bore burned in it with white hot crowbars or round iron pipes from the sugar mills. This burning out of the interior serves to still further toughen the wood. While the bore is being burned, green ox hides are cut into long strips by commencing in the center and working toward the outer edge, as one would peel an When all is in readiness, one end of this rawhide band, which is about three inches in width, is spiked to the wooden cannon near the breach. A lever, or bar, is attached to the butt. Two or three stout negroes grasp the arms of the bar and slowly turn the hollowed log on its supports.

The band of green hide is kept un-der a strain, and in this way the core of the cannon is wound with one of the toughest materials, wire excepted, in the world.

The first layer of hide is tightly wound to the muzzle of the growing gun and back toward the breach again to the muzzle and back, until a number of successive layers have thus been wound on and the promising piece of artillery has grown several inches in

It is then placed in a draught of dry hot air and allowed to harden. When the hardening and curing process is complete, the persevering patriots have a really serviceable weapon, which will stand a greater strain than manufacturers of modern artillery would readily believe.

One of these home-made combination wood and rawhide cannon is said to have withstood 104 charges of powder before becoming useless. The projec-tiles for it were made of scrap iron, round stones and fire-hardened clay

The utmost ingenuity has been shown by the insurgents in supplying themselves with weapons. Almost everything has been pressed into service which would suffice for cannon.

result of a useful invention, which is just about to be placed on the market, will be to create a new era in the history of oil and to start fresh life into the regions which have flour-ished in the past, but are now regarded as played out. It will turn the desert regions of the oil sections into bustling towns, and will furnish an enormous supply of petroleum that would be sufficient of itself to do the work of the greater part of the world. The dead wells will become as fountains, and the springs of the deep will give up their wealth in an inexhaustible quantity.

This invention is the work of Washinton gentleman, Mr. Tapley W. Young, and consists of an electric heater, which can be lowered into the well. The electricity is generated in large quantities, and so powerful is the heat that the refuse matter, which clogs the pores of the stone, will be melted and run out, thus allowing the

To understand the principles upon which this invention is founded, it will be necessary to explain that the theories as to exhaustion of so many wells is that the oil, in passing upward through the stone, has clogged the porous stone with paraffin in such quantities that the further flow is stopped and the well ceases to produce. Some think that it is because the supply in the earth has given out, but the generally accepted idea is that the oil is still in abundance, and only ceases

The stone through which the cil passes is of a very porous nature, and as the liquid is in a crude state, the thick matter becomes as dregs, settling in the rock near the edges of the bottom of the well. It has been common to use torpedoes to shatter the stone at the bottom of the well, thus break-

By the Young method the machine, which is about three feet long and resembles an iron cartridge, is placed at the bottom of the well, and the elecabout me, so I wrote to Aunt Susan and tricity turned on so powerfully that it receives just enough volts to produce an enormous heat without melting the metal. The current goes down the wires, and by the peculiar construction of the carbon-packed chambers the intense heat is radiated about into the rock in all directions. Thus the paraffin and other refuse is softened and melted up so that it runs, and when the well is started a fresh flow takes place just as strong as it did when the well was first sunk. This rejuvenating mood, I thought I would cheer Mrs. of the dry wells of the oil districts of diana.
