

ENORMOUS WAVE HITS BIG CUNARD; FIVE OVERBOARD; SCORES INJURED

Immense Sea Sweeps Across Crowded Steerage Deck of the SS. Campania, Drowning and Maiming—Gallant Rescue by Stewardess.

New York, Oct. 14.—Five lives are known to have been lost, and more than 20 persons injured, some of them seriously, on the Cunard Line steamer Campania last Wednesday, when a gigantic wave rolled over the vessel, and swept across a deck thick with steerage passengers.

When the Campania reached quarantine today, ten of the injured passengers were still in the ship's hospital, some of them seriously hurt, and a score of others were nursing minor injuries. The steamer was moving along under full headway last Wednesday afternoon. A heavy quartering sea was running, but the weather conditions were far from unpleasant, and the big boat's decks were crowded with passengers.

between that deck and the deck above, and carrying everything with it. The steamer's side was buried so deep that passengers on the deck above the steerage were submerged to their waists, as the immense volume of water rolled aft and then surged forward. All the cabin passengers on the upper deck succeeded in clinging to supports, while the water surged around them, and were saved, but the unfortunate ones on the steerage deck, found themselves utterly helpless.

Carried All Before It. The irresistible rush of waters, sweeping toward the forward part of the ship, carried everything before it. Notlings, heavy railings and other obstructions, which had been arranged near the railings to prevent passengers being washed overboard, served their purposes only in part. So great was the volume and force of the rushing waters that a door in the rail was smashed, and through this opening, five helpless ones, who had been caught by the wave, were swept to their deaths. Others dashed against the rails, and other like obstructions, escaped death, but many of them received severe injuries. One young woman had both legs broken at the thigh, and several persons suffered broken arms and ribs, while more than a score were bruised and battered.

Deck Strewn With Injured. When the wave cleared the vessel, the forward part of the deck was strewn with injured, and for hours, Dr. Verden, the ship's doctor, aided by a number of physicians among the cabin passengers, was busy in attending to their hurts. In the meantime an inspection of the steerage was made by the ship's officers, and it was learned that five of the passengers were missing. No further information regarding the result of the inspection was given out. From one of the steerage passengers, who escaped death or serious injury in the disaster, it was learned that the lives of several children were saved by a stewardess, Miss Cotes, and deck steward. The little ones were playing about the deck, when they were caught in the swirl of water, and carried off with the others. On the return rush of the wave, the children were being carried swiftly toward the open door, through which the five who lost their lives had been carried, when Miss Cotes and the steward rushed to their rescue, and dragged them back to safety.

Wednesday's disaster marks the first time in the Cunard Line's history of more than 60 years, that a passenger has been lost from one of its steamers by accident.

Milwaukee Plan Lost.

New York, Oct. 14.—John Graham, of Milwaukee, was one of the passengers washed overboard and lost. He was traveling in the steerage. The others who lost their lives were two Irish girls and a Danish boy, and a man whose nationality has not yet been ascertained.

WAS EVICTED; DID NOT WORRY

Mrs. Hill, an Aged Lady, and Two Little Children Turned Into the Street.

Mrs. Hill, an aged lady, who earns a livelihood by washing, was evicted from her home on Simcoe street east last evening. Turned out on the street with her were her grandchild, considerably less than 10 years of age, and another little one whom Mrs. Hill has given a home for some years.

The eviction was made at the instance of Charles Depper, owner of the house, who claims that Mrs. Hill owes him $20 rent. But Mrs. Hill did not worry as much about her position as did many of those who stood by and witnessed the eviction. Sympathy for her was expressed on every hand, as her furniture was being bundled into a wagon. "Oh," she said, "don't trouble about me. I guess I will be all right."

THE SUAVE LITTLE CHAP IS CAUGHT

Jules E. Rosa, Alleged Forger, Arrested by the Police at Sarnia.

The police court on Monday morning will be "graced" by the appearance in the dock of Jules E. Rosa, the suave little chap who a few days ago got a $50 diamond ring and $20 in cash from Mr. Thomas Gillean, jeweler, and in return gave a check said to be worthless. Rosa posed as a chauffeur for Mr. Christie, the biscuit manufacturer, of Toronto, whose name the check bore. Telephone inquiry at Toronto showed that Mr. Christie had issued no check to a man named Rosa. The latter is wanted for forgery. After his London visit, the police of surrounding towns were notified, but nothing was heard of the alleged chauffeur until last night, when the Sarnia police notified Chief of Police Williams that he was under arrest there. Detective Rider will bring Rosa back today.

GERMANY ASKS FOR EXPLANATION

She Semi-Officially Inquires of Britain Truth of Alleged Plot Against Kaiser.

Cologne, Oct. 13.—The Cologne Gazette prints an inspired dispatch from Berlin apropos of the Figaro's accusations to the Matin's story, which can be interpreted as a plain hint to the British Government to explain its role in the matter. The dispatch notes that while the Matin's version only gave ground for the assumption that the suggested alliance of France and Great Britain against Germany had an official character, the Figaro's version confirms this assumption by giving the names of parties, and says that this makes the case against M. Delcasse all the stronger. The mention of the name of Lord Lansdowne, the British foreign secretary, in connection with the matter sheds upon the story an embarrassing light for Great Britain, according to the dispatch, which says: "It is exceedingly regrettable to us to regard British statesmen like Premier Balfour and Foreign Minister Lansdowne as capable of such a game, but if such revelations are repeated and remain uncontradicted, one cannot avoid growing more and more sceptical about the matter. The question arises as to how it was possible that the French statesmen, who were undoubtedly men to be taken seriously, could have believed that there was an offer of a British alliance if no adequate basis existed for such an exceedingly serious matter."

Life's Curtain Rings Down on Career of Henry Irving

The World-Famous English Actor Passes Suddenly After Performance at Bradford, England.

London, Oct. 13.—The English-speaking world has suffered an irreparable loss by the sudden death tonight of Sir Henry Irving, who was universally regarded as the most representative English actor of contemporary times. Sir Henry died literally in harness. He was giving a series of farewell performances in the English provinces, and this week was playing an engagement at Bradford, appearing in several favorite roles.

Thursday he presented "King Rene's Daughter" and "The Bells," and appeared to be in excellent health, taking the exhausting part of Matthias in the latter play with all the vigor of youth. Tonight before an enthusiastic audience he portrayed one of his most characteristically intellectual parts, Lord Tenyson's "Becket."

After the performance Sir Henry returned to his hotel, reaching his rooms at 11:30 o'clock, when it was observed that he was in great pain.

Physicians were immediately summoned, but before they could arrive, Sir Henry was seized by an attack of syncope and expired within a few minutes, without having uttered a word, in the presence of Frank Stoker, who had been his immediate manager for many years, and a few other intimates. The event caused the greatest pain and consternation among the members of the company. To the last moment of his life, Sir Henry Irving's heart was in the work in which he had devoted his career—the raising of the standard of his art.

On Wednesday he was entertained at luncheon in the Bradford Town Hall, when the mayor presented to him an address from his admirers. In replying to the address, Sir Henry spoke of himself as one of the sands of whose life were fast running out, but no one then present had the slightest idea that the end would come so soon. He proceeded in his reply to eloquently advocate the establishment of theaters by the municipalities, "because," he said, "I believe that by this means the standard of the true drama, as distinguished from miscellaneous entertainments, would be successfully upheld. Money is spent like water for all kinds of philanthropic and educated objects, but who amongst you ever dreams of endowing the theaters? I am sure the time will come when you will regard the theater as necessary to a liberal education and be prepared to consider any reasonable suggestions for the extension of its legitimate influence. It may be that in years to come our countrymen will scarcely understand how in our times so potent an instrument of good or ill as the stage was left entirely outside the sphere of public administration."

His Last Lines. London, Oct. 14.—Seldom has the death of a public man in England called out such a universal expression of sorrow as has followed the tragically sudden death of Sir Henry Irving at Bradford last night. Appreciations, histories of his career, and stories of his many-sided activities, fill the newspapers. His last words on the stage as the curtain was running down on the death of Becket were: "Members of the company now recall that Sir Henry showed signs of exhaustion and overstrain during the past week, which did not attract particular notice at the time. During the performance of 'The Bells' at Bradford Thursday, the veteran actor delivered many passages of his work with his customary freedom of movement on the stage. Once or twice last night towards the close of the performance, he was seen to support himself on the settee, but he appeared before the curtain and acknowledged the cordiality of his reception. Ellen Terry was greatly distressed at the news. She said: 'I know all this has happened as he wished. He worked to the very last. Full possession of his faculties, it rebukes me that he finished his evening's work. His last expressed wish, the wish of his life, was for a municipal theater, where everything would be of the highest order, where the standard of true drama as distinguished from miscellaneous entertainments would be successfully upheld. A realization of this wish would be a firm monument to him.'

ON STAGE HALF A CENTURY. Noted Actor Had Made Frequent Appearances in America.

Sir Henry Irving was born in Keinton, Somersetshire, England, Feb. 6, 1838. The distinguished actor's name was originally John Henry Brodribb, his stage name of Irving being legalized by British royal license in 1858. His parents, intending him for a commercial career, began his education with that end in view, but at an early age he manifested a desire to take up the profession which has since made him famous. After a careful preparation, Sir Henry made his first professional appearance on a stage at Sunderland in 1856. After playing in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Manchester and elsewhere, not without meeting with frequent discouragements, he made his first London appearance at Saint James Theatre in 1866.

His First Success. He soon became noted as an interpreter of Light comedy parts, and also as the "heavy" in such roles as Robert Macaire and Bill Sikes. But his first great success was as Digby Grant in the comedy "The Bells" (1870), which he performed at the Vaudeville Theater for 300 consecutive nights.

November, 1871, he was engaged by the Lyceum Theater and added to his laurels in "The Bells" as Matthias (1871), "Eugene Aram" (1872), "Richard III" (1873), and "Hamlet" (1874). His first appearance in "Hamlet" excited great difference of opinion among also over his interpretation of "Macbeth" (1875), and "Othello" (1876), and again with Edwin Booth in 1881, but the importance of his art constantly increased. Sir Henry's "Richard III" (1877), and his "Louis XI" (1878), attracted perhaps more attention than any effort up to this time. In 1881 he made his first great tour of Scotland, Ireland and the provinces. In 1878 Sir Henry secured control of the Lyceum Theater, London, where he had long been the leading attraction. He then secured Ellen Terry, and the history of that theater from that time until 1902 was a history of the achievements of these two artists. Continued on page 6.

NO DIFFERENCES WITH GOVERNMENT GERMANY GIVEN A BAD SCORE

Sir Wm. Mulock Retiring Solely Because of Long and Arduous Public Life. Reported Offer of Britain to Join With France Booms Bigger Navy Cry.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Sir William Mulock made the following statement to your correspondent in reply to statements made by a Toronto newspaper which seeks to misrepresent the circumstances under which he retires from the Federal cabinet. "It is quite an error," said the Postmaster-General, "for anyone to suggest that I am withdrawing from the Government because of any disagreement with the Government, or any of the members on any question whether political or personal. I am leaving the cabinet simply because, after nearly a quarter of a century in unintermitted public life, with its many arduous exactions, I do not feel equal to a continuation of the task, the duties of which have already become a severe strain. It is with the utmost regret that I part from the Premier and my colleagues and from a Government which enjoys my fullest confidence. I have enjoyed the honor of serving in the French Chamber of Deputies and the British Parliament, the article concludes as follows: 'While the work of clearing up this matter is primarily the affair of France and Great Britain, still Germany takes a most reasonable interest therein. Although subsequent events have removed this danger, it is only natural that Germany should follow the further developments of the incident with close attention, for we can learn many things from them.'

PETERS' THE ORIGINAL Swiss Milk

Music and the Drama

It requires no little foresight and theatrical knowledge to select a first-class vaudeville bill each week. There are multitudes of performers on the road, all anxious for engagements. They are, like all other classes, good, bad, and indifferent. To read their advance paper, one would get an idea of a credible disposition, but to believe that each individual act is the best in the business. But the men who know their business take these personal eulogues with a grain of salt.

Manager Bennett, of Bennett's Vaudeville Theatre, is one of those who know how to discriminate. The excellent performances each week at his theatre bear testimony to this. Each week he gives his patrons something which appears to them far ahead of the previous week's bill and as a result the people of London have confidence in him and always leave his cosy theatre well satisfied indeed.

Next week he will present a bill which should make friends amongst Londoners. The act which will probably attract the most widespread attention will be best known as Prof. Montague's Cockatoo Circus. The birds are endowed with almost human intelligence, and they will be sure to please not only the ladies and children especially, but all the other patrons of Bennett's as well.

Harry Spingold & Co. will be in a comedy sketch entitled, "Winning a Widow," which is described as a sparkling clever sketch, without a moment's lag or a dull line. The people like good acts of this class and Manager Bennett guarantees this one.

"Always in the Way," a new act by Burton and Brookes, is said to be a winner—just the sort calculated to make a big hit with vaudeville lovers. Burton and Brookes are both endowed with good voices and their singing will be sure to please.

The Ramsey Sisters will be seen in a fetching comedy wherever presented. Hubert Deveau, the cartoonist and comedian, is also on next week's bill and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis will put on a sketch entitled, "A Roman Romeo."

These with the moving pictures and the excellent music provided by Prof. Stevens' Orchestra, should make up a bill immensely pleasing to patrons of the Vaudeville Theatre next week.

There will be a matinee each day and a performance each night.

The average so-called Irish play is a travesty on a whole-souled kind-hearted people, and this is all the more reason why the leading legitimate theatre of Irish character deserves the cordial welcome and patronage he receives. Joseph Murphy has succeeded, because he presents in an artistic manner types of life from the Emerald Isle. He has achieved reputation as a legitimate actor, and much of that reputation has been gained by his work in the play, "Sham Rhu."

Without going into technical details it may be said that the play consists of life-like, original and picturesque representations, first of a muscular, clear-headed, witty and brave young Irish lad, Larry Donovan; and, second, of a burly, open-hearted, fun-loving, whisky-using north of Ireland man of middle age, known as Red John (Sham Rhu). These are strong sketches of the Irish character as drawn by Mr. Murphy, and patterns of straight-out Irish character acting. The pretty Irish play about these two characters is full of music, clean sentiment and every large city in the United States and Canada. This year it is stronger and better than ever. Fred Mackintosh, the manager for Mr. Kingsley, has tried out the production in a most elaborate manner. The automobile and bicycle race is a strong feature and one of the most sensational scenes ever produced. The story is taken from life and is told in a powerful way, so simply that any child can follow. Popular prices are in vogue, namely 15 and 25 cents at the matinee, and 15, 25, 35 and 50 cents tonight.

Capacity audiences at the Grand Opera House coming week will welcome the return of the Stoddard Stock Company to this city. This is already assured by the advance sale of seats. Speaking of last Monday's performance of the company at St. Catharines, the Star of that city says: "The people of St. Catharines showed us the kind of entertainment they desire."

Pierce Kingsley's great American play, "Deserted at the Altar," will appear at the Grand this afternoon and evening. This play has had a long and successful career, being in its third season on the road, and it has been endorsed by the press and public in every large city in the United States and Canada. The average so-called Irish play is the most remarkable lecturer on the American platform, he has held the attention of that city with three thousand people at a dollar a head to hear his great lecture on "Acres of Diamonds."

Probably the strongest musical attraction will be Lenora Jackson, the distinguished violinist, and Sybil Sammis, the American prima donna soprano, assisted by Charles E. Clarke, baritone, and Alex. McFayden, pianist. Miss Jackson was the violin soloist in some of the largest musical organizations and clubs both at home and abroad. She has appeared with Patti, Paderewski, Melba and Nordica in concerts, Montebello, Plovez, in Italy. Her prettative recitals will also be especially attractive. He will deliver "Den Hur" regarding the interpretation of which that never touches anything but the most with my heartiest approval, and your elocutionary powers are exactly suited to the work. He also said: "My work is in the hands with this man, and will prove an effective form of high-class platform work."

GEO. ADE AND HIS FAILURE

George Ade has his first failure, in "The Bad Samaritan." He said to a reporter: "Successes always arrive on schedule time with me. I can almost set my watch by them. I know we would not have been in the market as speculators over 'The Samaritan' before I wrote a line of it."

"Because it was written too hurriedly, too much of a rush job for the work would mollases, and I cannot add up heart throbs like so many items in a grocer's bill."

"But what was the psychological error?" "There were two, as near as my hindsight allows me to discover—one is that the American public has ceased to be interested in wealth. Money is too common. A millionaire is no longer a curiosity or even an object of interest. Instead of playing a star part he is only one of a big horde, almost as monotonous as the old Greek chorus, at that. That's where I erred. To me a lot of money has always seemed a stick out of that window without hitting a millionaire. Here in New York that man with a thousand puppy dogs would stir up ten times the interest that a man would who had $100,000. Money is too common. So you see I did it about the central figure of his ailment."

"And the other reason?" "The love of an old man, a rich old man in love with a young servant, a housekeeper in a country hotel. When acted seriously, and it was, it was a failure. I don't wonder now that I have seen it with the vanishing of authorship. It did seem good when you wrote it."

"The original manuscript is masterly, and I suppose it is worth about two cents a pound now as old paper. It is written on good quality of linen paper, by the way. I might get more for it if I was going up and maybe paper is."

"Is it a singular thing that when you send the manuscript of a new play to a publisher by express and they ask you to put a value upon it you send a hardy make up your mind just how many thousand dollars you should put on it? The play has been produced you begrudge a 25 cent express charge to send it anywhere."

"Do you really think even now that 'The Bad Samaritan' is a poor play?" "I think that it has more funny lines than any play I have produced. Also I think the idea of a man who tries to do more for his money and finds he is only doing them an injury is not bad. The dog's life he leads is just about what would happen to Mr. Impulse. He indulges his vanity and the public to not measure out human emotion as you

Week after next Cuning, the famous jail breaker—the man who can not be kept behind bars, no matter how securely he may be handcuffed, will be the leading attraction at Bennett's Vaudeville Theatre. At every performance anywhere from two to four policemen go on the stage and put anywhere from two to four pairs of their own handcuffs on Cuning's wrists, sealing the keyholes with wax and leaving a private mark on the wax so there can be no chance of it being tampered with, and in addition putting their own manacles on his legs and sealing the keyholes and finally putting him into a steel cell in which he is bound with chains, padlocks, and generally is possible to make his confinement secure. Notwithstanding all of this preparation while the policeman, or whoever in the audience wishes to go upon the stage, are guarding all sides of the cage, Mr. Cuning, in from five to ten minutes, walks out free with a lock on the handcuffs opened, on the steel cage in which he was confined apparently tampered with in any way.

"How I came to conceive of my present act is easily told," he said to a reporter. "During the time that I was home from my different tours I was associated with the sheriff of my county, who was a warm personal friend of mine, and of course through him I saw a great deal of jail methods, and had a chance to examine hand-cuffs, manacles, and the locks and construction of prison cells."

"After a while I began to see possibilities of such an act as I understand at the present time, and immediately began the work of perfecting it. Then I started out on the road. My success at first was like that of all acts of this class. I had to fight against the skeptic, the man who believed that I was a fakir and that, were the truth really known did not do anything out of the ordinary at all."

"How I do my act is of course my secret. One thing, however, I want understood is that I do not wish to be classed as a fakir. My act I intend as only a scientific demonstration of what can be done along this line, and I present it in every case as such. It is not intended to amuse and I have a standing challenge of $50 to the person or persons who can accomplish what I am doing. I especially challenge the newspapers to prove that I am not doing what I claim to do, and offer $50 for such an expose."

Some Seasonable Advice. The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy has won for it a wide reputation and many people throughout the country will agree with Mr. Charles W. Mattison, of Milford, Va., who says: "It works like magic, and is the best preparation I know of. It couldn't be any better." He had a serious attack of dysentery and was advised to try a bottle of this remedy, which he did with the result that immediate relief was obtained. For sale by all druggists.

The frosts of age do not cool the fires of Christian love. MOTHER GRAVES' Worm Exterminator has the largest sale of any similar preparation sold in Canada. It always brings satisfaction by restoring health to the little folks.

Well Half-Mile Deep. In 1877 for some reason it was thought profitable and possible to secure an artesian well in the Ohio State House yard. The geology of Ohio as a science was all untried. In fact, the first volume of the Ohio geological reports contains the written record of this boring.

Down 275 feet—over half a mile—the auger was sent by the slow and laborious process of the time, and nearly a year was spent in the work. The boring was completed on Nov. 4, 1877, and stopped on a 1.185. No artesian water was found. The boring was made with a steam pump of the grounds. Its site was pointed out to the writer some years ago, and it is now probably covered by the cement walk extending out to Third street from the judiciary building. Water was struck and plenty of it—free salt, sulphur, magnesium, etc., but none of it came to the surface.

Professor Theodore G. Wornley, the professor of chemistry in Sterling Medical College, embraced the opportunity to secure the temperature of this deep boring. With a thermometer placed in a specially prepared iron case, and left at the bottom for 24 hours, he found the temperature at the bottom to be 88° Fahr. Making deductions for the distance below the surface, at which the heat of the sun ceases to be felt, he computed that the temperature increased one degree for secured especially strong talent for the coming fall and winter. The course will open Nov. 7 at the Lyric Club, of Chicago, comprising a strong quartet and Mary Agnes Doyle, specialist in Irish dialect. The second number on the course is Lulu Tyler Gates and her company of artists. Miss Gates is one of the most popular public readers in the country. She is accompanied by Walter Bentley Ball, notable baritone; Ebba Hjertstedt, the young Swedish violinist, and Miss Grace Gilmore, pianist and soprano. Dr. Russell T. Conwell, of Philadelphia, is one of the noted lecturers of the course. It has been by the Phil-

The Copley Square Concert Company of Boston, is an attractive musical number, which will come as the seventh on the course. Maro, the magician, with his quiet, will be one of the drawing features, too. Maro is without a peer in his line of work. Elias and Fruit Day, artists in the line of caricaturists, will give an entirely new and different programme to the audience in the course, and will form a most pleasing attraction. Dr. Ed-ward Burton McDowell, lecturer, travel-er, illustrated by moving pictures and colored views, will not only be an education in itself, but will prove to be intensely interesting. The Royce-Griley Recital Company, in songs and reading work—Mr. Griley, reitler and pianist, Mr. Rogers, harpist and vocalist, and Mr. Rogers, harpist and vocalist, will give a most interesting and pleasing company of entertainers. The committee spent much time and thought in securing a variety of talent and also aimed to secure the best and most distinctive line. A rare treat is in store for all who may be enabled to attend this course.

SWIFT-GOING CAUSES MOST RAILWAY WRECKS

ALTHOUGH OTHER REASONS MAY BE GIVEN.

Whenever excessive speed is blamed for a wreck on the rails all railroad men set up a loud howl of protest. Yet it is the engineer's own opinion of disinterested parties who know the railroad business that four accidents out of five on every railroad road are caused by putting on too much steam where conditions require a slower pace.

"In eight cases out of ten," said one railroad man whose experience is that gained from many years of railroading in the United States, "the cause of railway accidents can be found in excessive speed—that is, going too fast for the roadbed covered. There are in every road stretches of track where operating officials have a right to call for every ounce of speed the train can make, but there are also a great many places where the least possible speed is required, places such as curves, track switches and other such soft spots as they are called."

"When the speed schedule is adjusted to the necessities of the road, an engineer usually can take his train through in safety, but it is when the running time has been reduced without due consideration of these soft spots and the engineer is forced to make high speed where safety requires a low down, that an accident is the final outcome."

"Perhaps, however, it is not always the fault of the officials that a train is called upon for more than it can safely give, for the officials must give heed to the engineer's calls, and it is seldom indeed that an engineer is willing to confess that he cannot make the pace asked of him. Besides, there is a great faith which every locomotive driver has in the division superintendent, which makes him willing to try anything his boss suggests to him. Just as a dog will jump from a third or fourth story window at the whistle of his master, the engineer will jump at the call of the superintendent. Yet he will not jump if he could not make it, and he will not jump if he could not make it."

"It is the hardest thing in the world to get an engineer to confess after a wreck that he was going at a high speed at the time. That is why we always hear of 'spreading rails' and such things when a train jumps the track. This explanation, however, should not be taken as a cause of such an accident on the road of which I knew every inch. I got hold of the engineer and asked him how fast he was going at the time. He thought it might have been 20 miles an hour, on account of the curve. Little by little he increased his estimate, until I found that he had been making up and had taken the curve at a pace which acted on the train like the old game of crack the whip acts on the small boy on the end."

"The worst spots on a roadbed are the spots that set the limit on the speed to be made over that roadbed, and as these spots are taken more or less into consideration the chance of an accident is increased and diminished"—Chicago Tribune.

The Dressy Wrap in Practical Guise

Of the Two Kinds of Dressy Wrap, the Semi-Tailored Appeals Most Strongly to the Business Woman and the Popular Empire Model Lends Itself Particularly Well to the Delicately Tinted Bronzings and Stintages Which Are Employed for This Outer Garment.

Flat Appliques of Pale Colored Pastel-Embossments on Silver or Gold Cloth Foundations Set Off Neck and Collar, Belt or Yoke Effect—The Softest of Liberty Satins Like These Wraps and Make Them Suitable to Wear Over the Shortest Frocks.

[By Katharine Anderson.]
What woman or girl is there of moderate income who has not longed to possess a dressy wrap for the various social events which are a part of her life during the winter season? The jacket or cloak that does service for everyday wear seems totally out of keeping with a fancy frock and all the lovely accessories that go to make up an afternoon or evening toilette. Yet previously the dressy outer garment has been the least acquired of an economical woman's wardrobe. A growing sense of the fitness of things, however, has pervaded the entire feminine world and this year a fancy wrap has become a necessity to any woman who makes a pretense of being properly and well dressed.

If it has been considered an impossibility before, it has to be made a possibility now even at the expense of some other part of the costume. But the woman who plans out the cost of her wardrobe before hand will not be forced to "skimp" in any direction. In the first place, if her income is small, she should choose a general color scheme for all her best frocks, thus having the gloves and shoes and hat which complete one costume quite as appropriate for another. After this is settled the coat is a simple matter and in reckoning the probable cost of all, the coat comes in for its share of consideration.

There are two kinds of dressy wraps—the garment which can be worn in the afternoon as well as evening, and the wrap which is intended merely for Driftwood.

We were sitting on the bank of a little creek that flows into a river, and as we sat there we broke off sticks from the over-hanging willow trees, and idly threw them into the stream. One would float gaily and triumphantly on without a hindrance, and as far as we could see, it was sailing on, on to its haven, the river, to take its part in all the noise and traffic of the big water-highway.

Another would proceed with a series of jerks. It would be stopped here and there, and side-tracked, as it were, until some stronger gust of wind or a bigger eddy would throw it on again, to meet the river.

Still another would go gaily on for a short time, and then founder, while the largest class were those which foundered before they had a chance to sail at all. One could not help but think how like to human lives these all were. There are those favored of fortune who are "born with a silver spoon in their mouths," and who start out with every advantage that money and love can give them. Life seems on a long progression of pleasures to them, and they sail on without one apparent obstacle to their success.

Evening wear. The former bears decidedly the stamp of the tailor-made. The latter is a product of the dressmaker's art and in its make-up runs the gamut from delicate fancies and laces, and soft delicate fabrics and laces.

Of the two, the semi-tailored wrap appeals most strongly to the average busy woman of today. In it she never appears overdressed, while with a French maid she is not out of place in her own plain smartness.

The materials suitable for this kind of coat are principally velvet and broadcloth, heavy shantung and basket-weave being employed frequently with warm interlinings. When the wrap is draped from broadcloth, very elaborate colorings are worn give it a dressy look, and the palest of blue, pink, and coral, Nile green and cream shades mark the season's most attractive models. Velvet wraps show bright colorings, such as royal purple, blue and red as well as rich moires and greens.

Soft chiffon satins like these garments and as the inside is in evidence both in the collar and at the hem, quite as much as the outside, the selection of the lining is of equal importance with the outside material. Delicately-colored cloths and silks display smartly, but match them perfectly. More sober velvets are lightened by linings of white or cream. Cloth-covered buttons trim the simpler coats, and on more elaborate models mingle with hand-painted or enamel discs.

One of the elegant features of these new wraps is the heavy silver and gold cloth appliques almost buried beneath embroidered flowers in softest tints that blend in with the cloth itself. The appliques are of silk in soft tones are also modern.

Splendidly suited to the semi-evening wraps is the popular Empire cut. With all the looseness and easiness of a Grecian coat, it still has the semblance of a garment for street wear and does not demand a great amount of trimming to make it look handsome.

Many indescribably charming examples are being offered for sale at exclusive shops, among which is a broadcloth in palest lavender, with wide tucks of the material outline the deep Empire yoke, from beneath which emerges a full skirt, laid in several folds, and the back and front and meeting up each side half-way to the hips. A row of five cloth buttons is applied on either side of the pleats below the waist, and three similar buttons appear at the head of each side opening. Deep porcelain blue satin forms the collar and is set in the lower fullness of the Bishop sleeve. An exquisite blending of lavender and blue pastels delicately outlines the applique of satin and shades it to the cloth. Embroid buttons in the same colorings ornament sleeves and collar.

With unique lace trimming, another Empire wrap that is distinctive, has a long skirt of crepe broadcloth gathered into a plain deep yoke. Heavy velvet lace cut in square boxes shape is joined down the middle of the back by buttons of silk, clear, the front both back and front on either side, the bodice latches into long loops that widen slightly and reach almost to the bottom of the coat. In velvet, it is particularly effective, when lined with handsome white satin, for these wing sleeves spread each time the wrap is lifted and display a broad expanse of pearl whiteness.

An example of this in plum-colored chiffon velvet has the wings attached to a tight-fitting casing of the material. A jabot rever of velvet falls from the collar on either side of a vest front and is trimmed with a wide band of silver cloth. McAlhonnike motifs of the same braid ornament the collar and the plaited back.

A clever art student, who has just returned from Paris, has fashioned a fetching garment for herself after a model on cape lines worn by a French actress. Of simple garnet broadcloth, the upper cape flares and displays, while the upper cape fits snugly over the shoulders and is attached in front well back of the revers like the front of a sleeve. This cream satin lined the garment, and faces a point of the upper cape that is tucked back to show the fur-trim as it emerges from beneath the fold of broadcloth. A single Hercules braid of black trims the edges of the broad satin revers that are thrown back when the coat is open, and extend to the bottom of the cape.

For the girl who has to count each penny in planning the winter wardrobe, as well as for the girl who makes her purchases with no thought of expense, the dressy wrap is built on less tailored lines and for evening wear alone. The making of it is distinctly a dressmaker's art, and a small amount of ingenuity she can fashion it herself.

Many a begonia or satin gown that has been worn several years for special occasions only, is made use of in these fussy wraps, and an all-lice dress which has become out-of-date can be worked up into a most stunning opera coat.

Chiffon is an inevitable accompaniment of all entire lace coats. It gives just the softening effect needed, and really preserves the fineness that catches the gaze of the eye. Warrant is added to these coats by placing cotton sections between thin silk linings. Over the outside is tucked the chiffon, plain or according to pattern, and then the lace finishes all.

Contrasting lovely is a long coat on this order built of Renaissance lace with shoulder cape. Kimono sleeves of the lace cover voluminous bishop sleeves of chiffon that terminate in wide ruffled cuffs. Bouffants of chiffon edge the cape, and styles of this kind material hang from the neck at the neck and are caught at intervals down the fronts of the coat by lous flower medallions.

The season's craze for moire silks is a soft, shimmering, shimmering, shimmering heavy white moire. Wide bands of Argentine lace outline four panels which extend from the neck and comprise the entire body of the dress-length wrap. These panels are joined at the shoulder seam and caught at intervals under the arms. A lace-trimmed full of the silk passes over the shoulders and the top of the exceptionally full sleeves of mousseline. Wherever Argentine lace appears on the coat, wide velvet ribbons of the same color and width, with rows of Valenciennes insertion and ribbon set off the trim, silk-lined sleeves. The coat is lined with figured silk and finished with a wide band of neck as well as the front on either side.

Another smart wrap which made its appearance at the end of last year, is the Mandarin coat. This is a heavy silk garment worn by high dignitaries in China, and is magnificent in variety-colored embroideries. Hanging loosely from the shoulders to the foot of the skirt and finished with wide oriental sleeves, it is especially well adapted for hostess use.

An inexpensive and charming little coat to slip on over party frocks is built of elderdown in the shape of a long cape, with a wide band of silk employed and goes away with the need of a lining. At the neck is attached a red ridinghood cap with a fine quality of dressmaker's art, and the cape is built of more costly material and it can be put together at just half the cost of a lined garment.

One of the railroad Billerbits you know. "All, indeed!" responds the heiress. "Yes, He and I, Jimmy Merson, Percy, and Russell Serage and Gastor and that crowd of fellows are such chums."

"How interesting it must be to know all those famous names!" "Oh, not very. They are much like everybody else. After all, as one goes through life, one meets many people who really fill his ideal, and that person, Miss Muchoyno, is yourself. I have never seen her, but she is just a minute. There goes Cassius now. Cassius! Oh, Cassius! Cassius!"

"Will you have it delivered or carry it home with you?" mildly inquires Percy Bedou.

Heighly tossing her proud head, the lovely heiress is about to arise and leave when a way of recognition rings over her head, and she exclaims:

"Mercy! I know you now. You are the best dressed woman I have ever seen in the leather goods until week before last, and I'm going to be in the umbrellas as soon as my vacation is over."

But Percy, ere the sun went down, had convinced her that she would better accept a life position in a cozy little flat—Chicago Tribune.

One of the first signs that something is wrong with an infant is disturbed sleep. Usually the trouble is with the stomach or bowels. If you give it an opiate or "soothing" medicine of any kind, all these things give is unhealthy, unnatural and injurious. Your baby will sleep and let you sleep if you treat it properly. In Baby's Own Tablets there is not an atom of poisonous "sleepy stuff" and yet by their beneficial healthy action, they give refreshing sleep. They remove the cause, and the result is healthy, refreshing, life-giving sleep from which the little one awakens bright and well. Mrs. S. Douglas, Pettitocia, N. B., says: "My baby was troubled with constipation, was restless and uneasy, and did not sleep well at nights. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and the change they made was wonderful. They regulated the bowels, and he now sleeps well at night." REAL-LIFE ROMANCE; MOST AMAZING STORY

WENT TO PRISON TO SAVE A WOMAN'S HONOR.

The dreams of dramatists and novelists were surpassed the other day in New York when a lawyer divulged an amazing story of how a young man of wealth and position a year or so ago exchanged a college career and the brightest part of his life for a term in Sing Sing prison as a burglar that the honor of a woman's name might be preserved inviolate. The woman declared her lawyer that only her servants knew of the plot, and that some of them have since blackmailed her out of $50,000.

Though the names of the principals were kept secret, this fact did not detract from the intense dramatic interest of the tale. It is told by Carl Fisher-Hansen, lawyer and philanthropist.

In brief, there is now in Sing Sing, serving a three-year sentence, and under an assumed name, a youth who suddenly disappeared from one of the greatest colleges in the east. This boy, he is understood to be scarcely past his teens, and was loved by a woman, who is described from one of New York's oldest and most respected families.

The young man, son of a house whose name is familiar to even the casual follower of events, was in the apartments of this woman when her husband entered and caught him. In a moment of suspicion might be entertained against the woman, the college man told her husband he was a burglar and had entered the flat to rob, which he tried to do after intimidating the wife.

The apparent intruder was arrested, tried and convicted under an assumed name. The husband, however, did not even now the one for whom a college career and several years of life were sacrificed in trying, without notice, to obtain freedom from the governor pardon for the prisoner.

Mr. Fisher-Hansen, whose office is at No. 246 Broadway, vouches for the remarkable story. It is a story that would have become known to the public had not the lawyer telephoned concerning it within the hearing of a man who is closely connected with a circle of newspaper men.

A little while ago a young woman, breathing an atmosphere of refinement, requested the lawyer by telephone for an interview. Her name alone would have identified her from any professional man in New York. Mr. Hansen met the client in his office, and she told, incidentally, the following tale, fainting twice during the interview.

"I want your assistance in having a man named John Sing Sing. He has been in prison because of his friendship for me, and to save me from the suspicions of my husband, he harbored an insane idea that I was not faithful to him. He is serving a sentence of three years on a charge of burglary, to which he pleaded guilty under an assumed name, without any one knowing the true facts of the case."

"This man is innocent, and now that my husband is dead, I want to make reparation to the best of my power. I would have him placed again before his friends and the public, and I would have lost my good name and a scandal would have followed."

The woman, whose name Mr. Hansen guards with all the care of a lawyer, told a dramatic story of the incident which led to the exile of an innocent man.

While her husband, a wealthy business man owning factories in New Jersey, was absent one evening, the man who is supposed to have been the burglar, the husband returned, and found a strange man in the apartment, insane and unrecognizable, and he sprang upon the seeming intruder, and he found himself in a predicament which she knew she could not explain to the satisfaction of her husband and the world, nearly collapsed under the strain. But the college student was ready to match for the infuriated husband he managed to gasp out:

"Let me go! Don't kill me! Have me arrested—I wanted to rob the flat!"

Confronted by this statement, so adverse to his first suspicious impulse, the manufacturer released his hold slightly and questioned the man. "Besides, I would have lost my good name and a scandal would have followed."

BARONESS BURDETT-COUTTS

The World's Greatest Woman Philanthropist
Angela Georgiana, Baroness Burdett-Coutts, the lady philanthropist of England, one of the partners in the great banking house of Coutts—second only, in wealth, to the Bank of England—and one of the richest peresses in the kingdom, has had a romantic and remarkable career in her ninety-one years. She was a close friend of Queen Victoria, and Edward VII. said of her: "Next to my mother, she is the most wonderful woman in England."

She was the daughter of Sir Francis Burdett and Sophia Coutts; her maternal grandfather, Thomas Coutts, died ignoring his children, and leaving his great fortune to his second wife, who was Miss Mellon, a well-known actress. The widow later married the Duke of St. Albans, whose relatives treated her with ridicule and contempt for her verbal inaccuracies, her quaint speeches and her inability to master the social code of her set. Her will revealed her revenge when it was found that every penny of her fortune went to her step-granddaughter, Angela Burdett, then twenty-three, with the understanding that she should add a layman and Coutts to her name.

Then Miss Burdett-Coutts, in 1837, the year Victoria became Queen, began her life of benevolence and beneficence, limiting herself to no one phase of helpfulness; but wherever she could benefit humanity her heart and her purse were open. She built and endowed St. Stephen's Church, Westminster; endowed three colonial bishoprics, secured the government adoption of traveling inspectors of schools, gave funds for the topographic survey of Jerusalem, aided campaigns on a large scale, established a home for women, fitted out hundreds of boys for the navy, suggested the formation of the East London Weavers' Association, erected model tenements, aided Sir Thomas Brooke in his work in Sarawak, helped the starving fishermen of Cape Clear Island and the poor of London and Scotland, organized the Turkish Comptessionate Fund to help the peasantry during the Russo-Turkish war and for nearly seventy years has devoted herself to charities.

In 1874 the Queen made Miss Coutts a peeress, and ten years later, when she was sixty-seven years of age, she married W. L. Ashmead-Bartlett, a young American—now a member of Parliament—thirty-seven years her junior, settling on him an annuity of £250,000 a year. Surprised because of her age, and later, genuine hostility, when it became known that the Baroness, after nursing young Bartlett through a long illness incident to his work on her Turkish charity, had married him.

Interesting Gossip About Notable Men and Women.

BY THE MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.

King Edward's impending visit to Lord and Lady Londesborough at Londesborough Park, in the east riding of Yorkshire, serves to recall the fact that it was there, where the King, while still Prince of Wales, contracted the typhoid fever to which he so nearly succumbed 25 years ago.

Lord Londesborough, who succeeded to his father's honours and estate about five years ago, is believed by many to have royal blood in his veins, for his grandfather, who was killed in the earlier part of his life, Lord Albert Conyngham, was a younger son of that 17th century Marchioness of Conyngham who throughout the entire reign of King George IV. was the dearest friend of that monarch, her association with the "first gentleman in Europe" being characterized by the most unshinishing friendship and the most sordid greed.

Lord Albert inherited the colossal fortune of his mother's brother, old William Denison, of Denbigh, amounting to many millions of dollars, on the condition that he should assume the patronymic of Denison and invest a considerable portion of the money in landed property in Yorkshire.

Queen Victoria, who liked him, created him first of all baron and then Earl of Londesborough, the title being taken from the country seat which he purchased in Yorkshire. It is a magnificently timbered demesne, which belonged in turn to the Cliffords, the Boscawens, the De Witts, and George Hudson, the "railroad king," who sold it for about $2,000,000 to the first Lord Londesborough. The sixth Duke of Devonshire, once duke of the old manor house, where Pope and Garrick had been frequent guests and the present mansion is an altogether modern affair, more spacious and luxurious than impressive. The rectory of Londesborough was held for many years by Sidney Smith, and the church in line, with many grand old monuments of the Cliffords and of the Cavendishes.

Lady Londesborough was formerly one of the reigning beauties in England, and still remains a remarkably handsome woman. A sister of the Earl of Westmoreland, she was once the subject of the sensational libel suit which led to the imprisonment of the late Edmund Yates, editor of the London World.

One winter before her marriage Lady Grace Fane, as she was then, was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Aids Nature.

Rothschild, the chief of the French branch of the house, and a Baron of the Empire, within the last two months, has now been followed by that of the Duchess de Gramont, who was Marquise de Rothschild, of the Frankfurt line. She married the duke as his second wife in 1878, becoming a convert to Catholicism a short time previously, and two years later her sister, Bertha, likewise abandoned Judaism to become the wife of the Prince and Duke of Wagram, grandson of the first Napoleon's famous marshal, Berthier.

Not is this all; for young Gustave Lambert, son of the Baron Lambert, who now has become the head of the French banking house of Rothschild, and grandson of Baron Gustave Rothschild, of Paris, has sustained a fracture of the skull and other injuries, through a fall from his horse at Brussels—injuries from which he is not expected to recover. This accident to the young man's head, which he sustained on a horseback when, through a sudden swoer of her mount, she was thrown with such terrific force against the branch of a tree that she was hurled through a fall from his horse at Brussels—injuries from which he is not expected to recover.

Nothing came of all these romances, save a criminal prosecution, which, in a great measure owing to Yates' chivalry, was refused to disclose the name of the writer of the offensive paragraph, resulted in his being sentenced to a term of six months imprisonment. The person who was the real author of the libel, although she escaped prosecution, paid the penalty of her culpability in another way. For the late queen, having learnt in some way of her identity, caused her to be informed that her name had been stricken from the list of those ladies qualified to appear at court.

Lady Londesborough is tall and fair with a wealth of bright, soft, golden hair, and usually in the evening dresses in white, which sets off her great height. Lord Londesborough holds the quaint office of hereditary vice-admiral of the Yorkshire coast, and maintains at each of his country seats a splendidly equipped amateur fire brigade, composed of the servants, indoor and out, of his house, which he himself acts as fire chief. Many English great nobles have colonies, for example, and maintain fire brigades of their own, perfectly drilled and splendidly equipped, for the protection of their oft historic country seats.

Through the birth of Lady Victoria Grenfell's little son the Governor-General of Canada and the Countess Grey have attained the dignity of grandmothers. Lady Victoria is the eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Grey, and was signified by a wonderful ball given for her in 1887 by her uncle, Capt. Hoffer, the King's equerry, at Dorchester House, from which mansion, now occupied by the American ambassador, she was married to Arthur Grenfell. I may add that she is a god-daughter of the late Queen Victoria's husband, Prince Albert, and that she is the daughter of his large fortune, after a fashion, to the United States, having acquired it by means of a boom some years ago in America's railroad stocks. He is one of the nine sons of the late Pascoe Grenfell, who was one of ex-Vice-President Levi P. Morton's partners in his London banking house of Morton, Rose & Co.

The eldest of these nine sons, who bore his father's name and who played in the Eton eleven against Harrow in 1880, met with a fate that remains to this day shrouded in mystery, for, being in Africa about the time of the outbreak of the Matabele rebellion, he started, just before it began, on an expedition northward, with the intention of making his way to those great lakes which are the source of the Nile, and from thence down the river to Cairo, a trip subsequently safely performed by Capt. Grogan and other explorers. But Pascoe Grenfell was never seen or heard of again after his departure, nor has the most diligent search, carried on for years regardless of expense, been able to disclose the slightest trace or clue to his fate. Another brother, namely, Cecil Grenfell—is married to Lady Lillian Spencer Churchill, one of the sisters of the Duke of Marlborough. He served for a time as aide de camp to his father's brother, General Lord Grenfell, now commander-in-chief in the Egyptian army, and is a stock broker. Another brother was killed at Omdurman and on uncle is the famous athlete, William Henry Grenfell, M. P., of Taplow Court, who twice swam across Niagara.

Sir Robert Stout, the chief justice of New Zealand, who has been hurling from his bench in the antipodes a fierce judicial denunciation of that august body, the Privy Council in England, is one of the most curious characters of Australian life. He is the only lawyer occupying a seat on the bench of a British tribunal, and the only knight who is a professed atheist, and nicknamed as such "the Braithwaite of the antipodes." His anti-religious opinions did not, however, prevent him from according hospitality to General Booth on the occasion of the recent visit to New Zealand of the creator and chief of the Salvation Army. Indeed, throughout the general's sojourn in the capital of the colony he was the guest of Sir Robert, and the discussions that must have taken place between them probably have been most interesting.

In view of the important role which the belief in the Al-ihity plays in British courts of justice I have never been able to understand how Sir Robert could have found it consonant with his professed principles to accept the office of chief justice, especially after presiding over the only atheist congress ever held in Australia, and lecturing on free thought all over the antipodes.

His attack on the Privy Council recalls more especially to his role as the supreme court of appeal for the empire, and he urges the colony to decline to consent any longer to an arrangement whereby matters of vital importance to the industrial and commercial life of New Zealand should be held up by an appellate tribunal sitting at the other end of the world and composed of members entirely ignorant of the affairs of the colony. While there is some ground for the stand which he has taken, yet the change which he suggests and the demands which he makes would affect the entire relations between the colonies and the home Government.

ter of Darlington's daughter, would have been Queen of England, Scotland and Ireland. The romance may be said to have begun when Sir Edward Walpole, second son of the first Earl of Orford, Prime Minister of George I. and George II., took lodgings in London at the shop of a haberdashery at the bottom of Pall Mall, where there was appointed a beautiful girl named Clara, daughter of the postmaster of Darlington. Between the gay and handsome man of the world and the first apprentice to a haberdashery, a friendship was discovered, which led Edward Walpole to move to a house at the top of Pall Mall, and the Darlington postmaster to hasten to London, intent upon taking his daughter back with him to his home. She professed repugnance and went to pack her chest. Instead of doing this, however, she slipped out of the house, ran up to Edward Walpole's house, took the head of his table, and never again relinquished her position.

Lord Orford threatened that if his son married the girl, he would disinherit him, and so the couple remained together, but to outlive the terrible father, Edward Walpole fled to France, where he was married for Ireland. Three children were born, and then the mother died. Sir Edward was then obliged to bring up the ordinary monarch in the habit of going to his three illegitimate children, the first of them married Lord Albemarle's daughter, the second was the wife of a bishop of Exeter. Another married the first Earl of Desart, while the third, after a first marriage to a nobleman, gave her hand to the royal Duke of Gloucester, who died exactly a hundred years ago. The Duke of Gloucester's marriage law had not been enacted, and her union with the duke was so entirely valid in every sense of the word, that she was allowed to share her husband's honours and prerogatives, as well as his royal status. The first of her children, who bore the duke, namely, William Sophia, and Caroline, were princesses of the blood. The first Duke of Gloucester, that is to say, George, died in 1700, and his daughter, who was the wife of the Duke of Devonshire, was devoted to their children, and in her old age was the most affectionate of mothers. Her second husband, Prince Sophia, who died unmarried.

Count Bertrand, who died the other day in Paris, at the age of 85, was probably the only remaining survivor of the era of the first Napoleon who could claim to have been an intimate of the emperor, with the great emperor of the French. In fact, he was the companion of Napoleon in his exile at St. Helena.

True, he was merely a child at the time of the emperor's coronation, but he had fallen conqueror seem to find here in playing with little Bertrand, and he was the only one of the emperor's children who followed and drilled the little fellow and he riding on his knee. The boy was his godchild and was the son of the Count's brother, who, with his wife and children, accompanied Napoleon to St. Helena and remained with him until he died, bearing with him in all his eccentricities of temper and of manner, and his devotion to the emperor, which evoked universal admiration on the part of the English people of the island. The late Count's mother, who was a little woman, and was wont to describe his longevity to the fact that he made a practice of eating only one meal a day, and that was a quiet hotel, and then taking to his bed for three months. During the whole of that time he never left his room, and he was only brought to him once a day, and the man was under the strictest orders not to speak a word to him the whole time.

Prophecy Was Fulfilled. The advent of Japan as a great world power appears to have been foreshadowed in a curious manner by Wilhelm Rihales in his novel "The Forest People," which was published at Frankfurt so long ago as 1872, under the pseudonym of Zeng. One of the characters in this book after delivering an oration at the grave of a German sailor who was killed on the California coast of the Pacific, thus unbosoms himself:

"You gentlemen, this is a good spot in which to lie at rest and listen to the sound of the approaching footsteps of the great nations of the future. Hark! They come, singly at first, men in pairs, in twentys, in their thousands, in their millions. Who said what are they whose giant tread is thus hastening hither? They are those who will yet unfold on this spot the flag of the future. A future when those who will live to die another England, an England of the Pacific Ocean, arise in glory and might. Today we call this land Japan, a land before which the world has before a dark, unsolvable riddle. When this time comes, potent new nations, owning and navigating ships of gigantic make, will travel and intermingle between the coasts of Asia and America, as now they do between Ham and Hamburg, between Dover and Calais. In that age to come, the power of commerce and enlightenment will gradually destroy the ancient might of the sword and of tyranny, and the England of the Pacific, as the England of the North Sea in the

A CARPENTER TURNS SUGAR INTO DIAMONDS HE HOLDS THEY ARE AS GOOD AS KIMBERLEY'S GEMS.

A. E. Mears, of Princes road, Ashford, Middlesex, is a carpenter by trade. He makes doors and similar things for a living, and in his moments of leisure he makes diamonds as a hobby. He does not make them of wood, but of sugar, and maintains that they are as good as anything that ever came out of the Kimberley.

Now that Mr. Mears has probed the mystery of diamond manufacture, it is easy to him as shelling peas, and he is frankly surprised that the world has existed for so many thousands of years without solving this elementary scientific problem.

But it has not been easy to learn. Mr. Mears informed a reporter that for time and all his spare money in learning how to make diamonds by hand. For ten years he has thought, sweated and dreamed of diamonds, until now he can make them in a sugar pound or two. He has spent much time and much money in his experiments, and the fragrance of much burned sugar has been wasted on the desert air, but he is quite certain that the result is a diamond of No. 1 water.

It is perfectly simple," said Mr. Mears, adding that he had, afterthought, "when you know how to do it." "First you take your sugar; any sugar will do—Demerara, castor, crystallized or loaf, twopenny a pound or fourpenny a pound, I don't care what it is. You then—"

But at this point it apparently occurred to Mr. Mears that he was about to divulge a secret that might easily be the means of paying off the national debt and leave a little for current expenses. The thought gave him pause, but he went so far as to say that the sugar was first turned into carbon and then, by easy stages, into diamonds.

Mr. Mears stated modestly that he had not yet sold or attempted to sell any of his diamonds. The largest he has yet produced is a crystal three-eighths of an cubic inch in size, but he has some bigger ones in the oven, so to speak. He is concentrating all his energies on increasing the size of the gem. He is quite confident that he can produce them the size of walnuts, and hopes yet to show the wondering world a home-made diamond as big as an apple.

When Mr. Mears was asked whether he really thought his productions were actual diamonds, he replied that he did not "think," but was "absolutely certain" they were. He had applied two tests. First, he had cut out a kitchen window with one, and, secondly, he had tested them with hydrofluoric acid. The reporter put it to Mr. Mears that any one can buy an implement for minuscule which will cut out a kitchen window, and he agreed readily. He, however, maintained that hydrofluoric acid corrodes anything but a diamond, and that his crystals

Good tea must be grown under proper conditions Low, damp or swampy lands in a warm, humid climate produce tea of rank, rapid growth, coarse in texture, woody fibred, rudely flavored—makes a cup heavy, murky in color, rough-tasting—it is poor tea.

But the Indian and Ceylon teas used to make the Red Rose brand are grown on the high lands of India and the mountain sides of Ceylon.

These teas are grown in clear dry sunshine, they mature slowly, the leaves of the Ceylon teas are tender, delicate, finely flavored, but not strong.

The Indian teas thus grown are full bodied, richly flavored, smooth in texture, strong.

Such Indian and Ceylon teas combined in Red Rose Tea produce a cup of a rich rosy brown, strong and smooth—all the richness and strength of Indian, all the delicacy and fragrance of Ceylon teas—that "rich, fruity flavor" which belongs alone to Red Rose Tea—more qualities of tea excellence than any Indian or brand of Ceylon alone can possess.

How to be Healthy and Beautiful.

BEAUTY HINTS for EYES, EYEBROWS and LASHES

Don't Fail to Massage the Lids

Heated Almond Oil Gives a Gloss to the Lids

THE woman who wants pretty eyes will not have them circled with dark lines. Nor will she allow the lids to become heavy and wrinkled, or bags to form underneath the eyes. Neither will she neglect the care for eyebrows and lashes, for these play a most important part as a frame for the eyes.

I have read of some women who have attempted to change the color of their eyes, but in this matter I think Dame Nature has the better of us. If this were not the fact, I have no doubt there are women who would have the color of their eyes changed to match every gown, and we wouldn't tell our own sisters if we met them unawares.

A bright, sparkling eye is essential to beauty, and the most important factor in this respect is good health. Dull eyes may be made lustrous by proper attention to hygiene. Then, too, a great deal can be done by outward care.

After strain or exposure to glaring light it is most beneficial to lie down in a darkened room and place on your eyes a small linen pad soaked in a solution of water and boric acid powder in the proportion of a teaspoonful of the powder to a pint of boiling water. This is also very soothing to the nerves. All things that are liable to overtax the eyes should be avoided—dotted veils, reading in a poor light, fine needlework, all these are enemies that will drain their forces.

In case of inflammation the following treatment is harmless and helpful:

Use an eye cup morning and evening to the eye, containing a solution of salt and water in the proportion of a pint of water to a tablespoonful of salt. This should be warmed to about the heat of the body. Place the cup containing the solution over the eye, and then turn the head back and open the eye. This acts as an excellent tonic to the eyelid.

Every one should sleep in a darkened room, so that the night will not be too severe a strain upon waking. To keep the lids from becoming wrinkled or heavy nothing is better than daily massage. Massage each eye separately, from outer corner stroke the lid toward inner corner, and at the same moment roll the eye outward. The rolling of the eye produces a slight resistance to the touch, which is beneficial.

Any one doubting the importance of fine brows and lashes to the beauty of the eye should remove them from a beautiful face in a picture and notice the change in the expression—from one of beauty to one that is almost repulsive.

The eyebrows and eyelashes will respond quickly to good treatment. It is amazing that women who pencil and paint their eyebrows do not get to work systematically to improve the health and beauty of the growth. Even the most unruly and scraggy brows can be permanently improved by careful treatment. If they are thin, they should be brushed night and morning with a toothbrush which has been dipped in heated almond oil. Or this lotion may be applied:

EYEBROW AND EYELASH GROWER.
 Cologne, 2½ ounces; glycerine, 1½ ounces; fluid extract of alopecia, 2 drams; oil of sweet almond, 1 ounce; oil of bergamot, 1 ounce; oil of clove, 2 drams; liquid soap, 1 ounce; liquid petrolatum, 1 ounce.
 Mix the oils with the balsam, then mix the soap with the petrolatum, and combine the two mixtures, and continue to heat until you have a thoroughly incorporated emulsion.

No argument is needed to prove the desirability of beautiful eyes. They will glorify the palest face, and without beauty of these soul windows the face cannot be perfect.

Health Through Hygiene -- Foods for the Thin Girl

By Dr. Emma E. Walker
 Copyright, 1905, by A. S. Barnes & Co.

TO give you some general directions as to foods that are suitable for the thin girl: Cereals eaten free-sweet and starchy fruits and vegetables, such as sweet and Irish potatoes, cooked bananas, beans, corn and peas; figs and soups, especially cream and biscuit; honey and simple desserts. Nuts are very nutritious if you are able to digest them. Milk, cream, cocoa and chocolate are fattening.

Take plenty of time for your meals, and do not eat too great a variety at one time; see that your food is well cooked. Carefully avoid a large amount of green vegetables, acids, pickles and condiments.

I have found an excellent diet in general for a thin girl to be as follows:

For breakfast a little fruit, cereal and cream; toast and a glass of milk. For lunch, bread and butter and milk—plenty of it—a baked potato with salt and butter and stewed fruit. For dinner, an ordinary mixed diet, not too great a variety, with food well cooked. I know of a girl who was never able to lay on more than a few pounds of extra flesh. After about nine months of this diet she weighs fifteen pounds more than her average weight has been for years.

Massage with liberal application of olive oil or cold cream is very beneficial in most cases of extreme leanness.

Nothing is better for the thin girl than plenty of fresh air and sunshine. Breathe deeply and often, especially in the open air.

Warm baths are good for the thin girl, though she should wear plenty of clothing so that she will never become chilled; she may take a cool rub afterward. Cold is an enemy to the thin girl. The time spent in a sun bath will well repay her.

Learn how to relax, both in action and in rest, because nervous tension is one of the bones of this condition. When you take your daily periods of rest, let down the tension of your muscles and nerves by some exercise. You will find it most restful to simply open and close the eyes slowly and drowsily, stimulating sleep; stop thinking and yield to the soothing influence of the movement of the eyelids.

You cannot find anything which will more quickly develop the neck than the following resisting exercise: Lay the head in the palm of the hand at the temple, then push the head slowly toward the shoulder, resisting the movement with the force of the hand. Come back a correct position of the head in the same way, resisting the pressure of the hand by the head. Repeat this exercise to the left.

Clasp hands back of head, and carry the head back, resisting with the hands. Take chin in hand and repeat the exercise in the opposite direction.

Another method of filling in the serow-outlines of the neck is to take a deep breath, and then force the breath down into the neck, thus swelling out the neck. Or the muscles may be exercised by a rigid contraction of the jaw, often repeated. The first-named exercises, however, give better results in every way.

Arm raising develops the chest muscles, the same which are so quickly increased in size by swimming. There is no better way of increasing your bust than regular swimming practice at the seashore. But, if you wish to take up some method which can be followed out at home, practice this resisting exercise:

Different chest muscles may be reached by varying the position of the arms. For instance, push the heels of the hands together, assume the waist line from right to left, and reverse. Practice the same exercise breast high, and finally overhead.

I have often read your advice to women, and I have followed it very closely. As you have helped so many others, I do not think you will mind if I ask you for a little more advice. me away from the cottage. As we went I glanced back and there was that yellow livid face watching us out of the upper window. What link could there be between that creature and my wife? Or how could the course, rough as it was, be connected with her? I knew that my mind could never know case again until I had solved it.

"For two days after this I stayed at home and my wife appeared to abide loyally by our engagement for, as far as I know, she never stirred out of the house. On the third day, however, I promise was that she held her solemn back from this secret influence which drew her away from her husband and her duty.

"I had gone into town on that day, but I returned by the 2:40 instead of the 2:30, which is my usual train. As I entered the house the maid ran in to the hall with a startled face.

"Where is your mistress?" I asked.

"I think that she has gone out for a walk," she answered.

"My mind was instantly filled with suspicion. I rushed upstairs to make sure that she was not in the house. As I did so I happened to glance out of one of the upper windows, and saw the maid with whom I had just been speaking running across the field in the direction of the cottage. Then, of course, I saw exactly what it all meant. My wife had gone over there, and had asked the servant to call her if she returned. Thinking with anger, I rushed down and hurried across, determined to see the matter once and for ever. I saw my wife and the maid hurrying, stop to speak with them. In the cottage lay the secret which was casting a shadow over my life. I vowed that, no longer, I did not even knock when I reached it, but turned the handle and rushed into it.

"It was all still and quiet upon the ground floor. In the kitchen a kettle was singing on the fire, and a large black cat lay curled up in the basket, but there was no sign of the woman whom I had seen before. I ran into the other room, but it was equally deserted. Then I rushed to the stairs, only to find two other rooms empty and deserted at the top. There was no one at all in the whole house. The furniture and pictures were of the most common and vulgar description save in the one chamber at the window of which I had seen the strange face. That was comfortable and elegant, and all my suspicions rose into a light. My wife had been taken at my request only three months ago.

"I stayed long enough to make certain that the house was absolutely empty. Then I left it, feeling a weight from my heart such as I had never had before. My wife came out into the hall as I entered, and she was too hurt and angry to speak with me, and pushing past her, I made my way

WOULD YOU HAVE A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION

How to Secure One and Enjoy the Best of Health is Nature's Way.

Healthy beauty is the only kind that remains. Of what avail is the artificialness of the use of lotions, washes and powders containing lead, zinc and arsenic, but a travesty easily seen through. It is the richness of the flesh and pure blood that makes people attractive. You cannot have health, good looks, lustrous hair and bright, sunny eyes unless your blood is pure, rich and red. You cannot have that symmetry of development, that radiance of beauty and that healthy glow to your skin which is guaranteed by a pure, vigorous blood supply unless your stomach, liver and bowels are in a normal condition. If you are constipated, if you have indigestion or an occasional attack of biliousness, there is reason enough why you have a bad complexion, but that is no excuse for your using cosmetics to cover up defects. Better use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills to cleanse the blood of impurities, regulate the bowels and establish a normal condition of digestion and nutrition. Beatin right and you will have no use for artificial beautifiers. Under the action of these wonderful little vegetable pills the blood is thickened and enriched, the nerves are strengthened, the muscles take on new energy, the skin becomes rosy and red, and the complexion is normal and active as Nature intended it should be. Try this plan, use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills each night for two weeks and you will be astonished at the improvement. Depend upon it that these little pills will not only correct a bad complexion, but they always cure sick headaches, constipation and biliousness in one night. Price 25 cents at all dealers.

KELPION

The Ointment That Heals 25 Cents.

A pure, stainless iodine ointment applied to cuts, burns or bruises to subdue pain and reduce inflammation.

Cancer and other malign growths often result from the slightest breakage of the skin.

"Kelpion" will kill the microbe of poison and prevent infection.

Private C. T. Mayes, who served through the Boer campaign with the Imperial Volunteers, has this to say of "Kelpion": "The pot of Kelpion issued to our V. I. C. Kit was one of the few things we took from the front with us. It was very useful indeed, one of the finest and quickest remedies for cuts, sprains, skin diseases, wounds and bruises.

"Your Kelpion surprised every one who used it, for it cured foot sores, and it ought to command a large sale in South Africa if advertised for that reason. I have heard praises from all C.I.V.'s and Regulars who used it, and I guarantee every C.I.V. will recommend it."

WHAT KELPION WILL DO.

It will cure all skin diseases and eruptions, whether of the nature of eczema, an ulcer or a cold sore.

It will allay all inflammation, whether internal, as of the lungs, or due to rheumatism in the joints.

It will reduce swellings, whether due to sprains and hurts or from internal enlargements.

into my study. She followed me however, before I could close the door. "I am sorry that I broke my promise," she said, "if you only knew the circumstances I am sure that you would forgive me."

"Tell me everything, then," said I.

"I cannot, Jack, I cannot," she cried.

"Until you tell me who it is that has been living in that cottage, and who it is to whom you have given that photograph, there can never be any confidence between us," said I, and reading away from her I left the house. That was yesterday. Holmes and I have not seen her since or do I know anything more about her strange business. It is the first shadow that has come between us, and has so shaken me that I do not know what I should do for the best. Only this morning it occurred to me that you were the man to advise me, so I have hurried to you now, and place myself unreservedly in your hands. If there is any point which you have not made clear, pray question me about it. But, above all, tell me quickly what I am to do for this misery is more than I can bear."

Holmes and I had listened with the utmost interest to this extraordinary statement, which had been delivered in the jerky, broken fashion of a man who is under the influence of an emotion. My companion sat silent for some time with his chin upon his hand, lost in thought, but he then said to me at last, "You are sure that this was a man's face which you saw at the window?"

"Each time that I saw it I was some distance away from it, so that it is impossible for me to say."

"You appear, however, to have been disagreeably impressed by it."

"It seemed to be of an unnatural color, and to have a strange rigidity about the features. When I approached it vanished with a jerk."

"How long is it since your wife asked you for a hundred pounds?"

"Nearly two months."

"Have you ever seen a photograph of her first husband?"

"No, there was a great fire at Atlanta very shortly after his death, and all her papers were destroyed."

"And yet she had a certificate of death. You say that you saw it?"

"Yes, she got a duplicate after the fire."

"Did you ever meet any one who knew her in America?"

"No."

"Did she ever talk of revisiting the place?"

"No."

"Or get letters from it?"

"No."

"Thank you, I should like to think over the matter a little now. If we may have some difficulty, if, on the other hand, as I fancy is more likely, the inmates were warned of your coming and left before you returned yesterday, then they may be back now, and we should clear it all up at once. I will advise you, then, to return to Norbury and to examine the windows of the cottage again. If you have reason to believe that it is inhabited, do not force your way in, but send a wire to my friend and me, and we shall be with you within an hour of receiving it, and we shall then very soon get to the bottom of the business."

"And if it is still empty?"

"In that case I shall come out tomorrow and talk it over with you. Good-bye, and, above all, do not fret until you know that you really have a cause for it."

"I am afraid that this is a bad business, Watson," said my companion, as he returned after accompanying Mr. Grant Munro to the door. "What do you make of it?"

"I had an ugly sound," I answered.

"Yes, there's blackmail in it, or I am much mistaken."

"And who is the blackmailer?"

"Well, it must be the creature who lives in the only comfortable room in the place, and has her photograph above his fireplace. Upon my word, Watson, there is something very attractive about that livid face at the window, and I would not have missed the case for worlds."

"You have a theory?"

"Yes, a professional one. But I shall be surprised if it is not turned out to be correct. This woman's first husband is in that cottage."

"How else can we explain her frenzied anxiety that her second one should not enter it? The facts, as I read them, are something like this: This woman was married in America. Her husband developed some hateful qualities, or shall we say that he contracted some loathsome disease, and he came a leper or an imbecile? She fled from him at last, returns to England, changes her name, and starts her life, as she thinks, afresh. She has been married three years and believes that her position is quite secure, having shown her husband a death certificate of some man whose name she has assumed, when suddenly her whereabouts is discovered by her first husband, or we may suppose, by some unscrupulous woman, who has attached herself to the invalid. They write to the wife and threaten to come and expose her, and she asks for a hundred pounds and endeavors to buy them off. They come in spite of it and when he husband mentions casually to his wife that he has seen her in the cottage, she knows in some way that she is being pursued. She waits until he is asleep, and then she rushes down to endeavor to persuade him to leave her in peace. Having succeeded, she goes again next morning, and is surprised to find that she is told us, as she comes, that her husband has not gone there again. She afterwards has the hope of at last slipping out, knowing how her husband is too strong for her, and she makes another attempt, taking with her the photograph which had been previously demanded from her. In the midst of the interview the maid advantage, from the back door, and she would come straight down to the cottage, hurried the inmates at the back door into the grove of ir-trees, probably, which was mentioned as standing near. In this way the place deserted. I shall be very much surprised, however, if I shall see him when he reappears in this cottage. What do you think of my theory?"

"It is all surmise."

"But at least it covers all the facts. The only facts come to our knowledge which cannot be covered by it. It will be time enough to reconsider it when we can do nothing more until we have pursued from our friend at Norbury."

"But we had not a very long time to do for that. It came just as we had wished our investigation to be ended," said I.

"Have seen the man again at the window. Will meet him 7 o'clock train and will take no steps until you arrive."

He was waiting on the platform when we stepped out, and we could see in the station lamps that he had been very pale and quivering with agitation.

"They are still there, Mr. Holmes, and he is laying his hands on my friend's sleeve. I saw lights in the cottage as I came down. We shall see it in a moment or two."

"What is your plan, then?" asked Holmes, as we walked down the dark road.

"I am going to force my way in and see for myself who is in the house. I wish you both to be there as witnesses."

"You are quite determined to do this in spite of your wife's warning that it is better that you should not solve this mystery?"

"Yes, I am determined."

"Well, I think that you are in the right. Any truth is better than indefinite doubt. We had better go at once. Of course legally, we are just as ourselves helplessly in the wrong, but I think it is worth a try."

It was a very dark night, and a thin rain began to fall as we turned from the high road into a narrow lane, despoiled by ruffians on either side. Mr. Grant Munro pushed forward bravely, however, and we stumbled after him as he went. "These are the bushes of my house," he murmured, pointing to a glimmer among the trees. "And here is the cottage which I am going to enter."

We turned a corner and he spoke, and there was the building across the black foreground. The door was not quite closed, and one window in the upper story was brightly illuminated. As we looked we saw a dark blur moving across the blind.

"There is that creature!" cried Grant Munro. "You can see it yourself that someone is there. Now follow me and we shall soon know all."

We approached the door, but suddenly a woman appeared at the shadow and stood in the golden track of the lamplight. I could not see her face, but she was dressed in a dark, ornate gown, and she had a look of intense determination.

"For God's sake, don't," she cried.

"I had a presentiment that you would come this evening," she said, "but I had not thought that you would be so late. Trust me again, you will never have cause to regret it."

"I have trusted you too long, Effie," he cried, sternly. "Leave me to go, I must pass you. My friends and I are going to settle this matter at once and forever." He pushed her to one side and we followed closely after him. As he threw open the door an old woman ran out in front of him and tried to bar his passage, but he thrust her back and an instant afterwards we were all in the light of the hall. Grant Munro rushed into the room and at the top, and we entered at his heels. It was a cosy, well-furnished apartment, and with our burning curiosity upon the table and two upon the mantelpiece. In the corner, stooping over a desk, sat what appeared to be a little girl, but we could see that she was dressed in a red frock and that she had a look of intense determination. As she whisked round to us, a cry of surprise and horror. The face of the stranger lived and stared at us as if we were absolutely devoid of mystery. An instant later the expression was explained, while our amazed guest passed his hand behind his laughing, a mask peeled off from her countenance, and there was a little black and white creature, flashing in amusement at our amazement. I burst out laughing, and my friend sympathized with her merriment, but Grant Munro stood staring, with hand clutching his throat.

"My God!" he cried. "What can be the meaning of this?"

"I will tell you the meaning of it," cried the lady, sweeping into the room with a proud, set face. "You have forced me, against my judgment, to tell you, and now we must make the best of it. My husband died at Atlanta. My child survived."

"Your child?"

"She drew a large silver beaker from her bosom. 'You have never seen this open.'"

She touched a spring and the front hinged back. There was a portrait and an intelligent-looking, bearing unmistakable signs upon his features, of the African descent.

"That is John Hebron, of Atlanta," said the lady, "and a noble man never walked the earth. I cut myself off from my race in order to wed him, but never once while he lived did I for an instant ever regret it. It was our misfortune that our only child took after her people rather than mine. It is often so in such matters, and little Lucy is darker by far than her mother was. But dark or fair, she is my own dear little creature, and I will do all in my power to protect her. The little creature ran across the words and nestled up against the lady's dress. 'When I left her in America,' she said, 'it was only because her health was weak, and the change might have done her harm. She was given to the care of a faithful Scotch woman, who had been my servant. Never for an instant did I dream of disowning her as my child. God forgive me, but I had not the courage to keep her. I had to choose between you and my own little girl. For three years I have kept her existence a secret from you, but I heard from the nurse, and I knew that all was well with her. At last, however, she came an overwhelming desire to see the child once more. I struggled against it, but in vain, though I knew the danger. I determined to have the child over, if it were but for a few weeks, and I had a hundred pounds to give the nurse, and I had instructions about this cottage, so that she might come as a neighbor without my appearing to be in any way connected with her. She followed me however, before I could close the door. 'I am sorry that I broke my promise,' she said, 'if you only knew the circumstances I am sure that you would forgive me.'

"Tell me everything, then," said I.

"I cannot, Jack, I cannot," she cried.

"Until you tell me who it is that has been living in that cottage, and who it is to whom you have given that photograph, there can never be any confidence between us," said I, and reading away from her I left the house. That was yesterday. Holmes and I have not seen her since or do I know anything more about her strange business. It is the first shadow that has come between us, and has so shaken me that I do not know what I should do for the best. Only this morning it occurred to me that you were the man to advise me, so I have hurried to you now, and place myself unreservedly in your hands. If there is any point which you have not made clear, pray question me about it. But, above all, tell me quickly what I am to do for this misery is more than I can bear."

Holmes and I had listened with the utmost interest to this extraordinary statement, which had been delivered in the jerky, broken fashion of a man who is under the influence of an emotion. My companion sat silent for some time with his chin upon his hand, lost in thought, but he then said to me at last, "You are sure that this was a man's face which you saw at the window?"

"Each time that I saw it I was some distance away from it, so that it is impossible for me to say."

"You appear, however, to have been disagreeably impressed by it."

"It seemed to be of an unnatural color, and to have a strange rigidity about the features. When I approached it vanished with a jerk."

"How long is it since your wife asked you for a hundred pounds?"

"Nearly two months."

"Have you ever seen a photograph of her first husband?"

"No, there was a great fire at Atlanta very shortly after his death, and all her papers were destroyed."

"And yet she had a certificate of death. You say that you saw it?"

"Yes, she got a duplicate after the fire."

"Did you ever meet any one who knew her in America?"

"No."

"Did she ever talk of revisiting the place?"

"No."

"Or get letters from it?"

"No."

"Thank you, I should like to think over the matter a little now. If we may have some difficulty, if, on the other hand, as I fancy is more likely, the inmates were warned of your coming and left before you returned yesterday, then they may be back now, and we should clear it all up at once. I will advise you, then, to return to Norbury and to examine the windows of the cottage again. If you have reason to believe that it is inhabited, do not force your way in, but send a wire to my friend and me, and we shall be with you within an hour of receiving it, and we shall then very soon get to the bottom of the business."

"And if it is still empty?"

"In that case I shall come out tomorrow and talk it over with you. Good-bye, and, above all, do not fret until you know that you really have a cause for it."

"I am afraid that this is a bad business, Watson," said my companion, as he returned after accompanying Mr. Grant Munro to the door. "What do you make of it?"

"I had an ugly sound," I answered.

"Yes, there's blackmail in it, or I am much mistaken."

"And who is the blackmailer?"

"Well, it must be the creature who lives in the only comfortable room in the place, and has her photograph above his fireplace. Upon my word, Watson, there is something very attractive about that livid face at the window, and I would not have missed the case for worlds."

"You have a theory?"

"Yes, a professional one. But I shall be surprised if it is not turned out to be correct. This woman's first husband is in that cottage."

"How else can we explain her frenzied anxiety that her second one should not enter it? The facts, as I read them, are something like this: This woman was married in America. Her husband developed some hateful qualities, or shall we say that he contracted some loathsome disease, and he came a leper or an imbecile? She fled from him at last, returns to England, changes her name, and starts her life, as she thinks, afresh. "And if it is still empty?"

"In that case I shall come out tomorrow and talk it over with you. Good-bye, and, above all, do not fret until you know that you really have a cause for it."

"I am afraid that this is a bad business, Watson," said my companion, as he returned after accompanying Mr. Grant Munro to the door. "What do you make of it?"

"I had an ugly sound," I answered.

"Yes, there's blackmail in it, or I am much mistaken."

"And who is the blackmailer?"

"Well, it must be the creature who lives in the only comfortable room in the place, and has her photograph above his fireplace. Upon my word, Watson, there is something very attractive about that livid face at the window, and I would not have missed the case for worlds."

"You have a theory?"

"Yes, a professional one. But I shall be surprised if it is not turned out to be correct. This woman's first husband is in that cottage."

"How else can we explain her frenzied anxiety that her second one should not enter it? The facts, as I read them, are something like this: This woman was married in America. Her husband developed some hateful qualities, or shall we say that he contracted some loathsome disease, and he came a leper or an imbecile? She fled from him at last, returns to England, changes her name, and starts her life, as she thinks, afresh. She has been married three years and believes that her position is quite secure, having shown her husband a death certificate of some man whose name she has assumed, when suddenly her whereabouts is discovered by her first husband, or we may suppose, by some unscrupulous woman, who has attached herself to the invalid. They write to the wife and threaten to come and expose her, and she asks for a hundred pounds and endeavors to buy them off. They come in spite of it and when he husband mentions casually to his wife that he has seen her in the cottage, she knows in some way that she is being pursued. She waits until he is asleep, and then she rushes down to endeavor to persuade him to leave her in peace. Having succeeded, she goes again next morning, and is surprised to find that she is told us, as she comes, that her husband has not gone there again. She afterwards has the hope of at last slipping out, knowing how her husband is too strong for her, and she makes another attempt, taking with her the photograph which had been previously demanded from her. In the midst of the interview the maid advantage, from the back door, and she would come straight down to the cottage, hurried the inmates at the back door into the grove of ir-trees, probably, which was mentioned as standing near. In this way the place deserted. I shall be very much surprised, however, if I shall see him when he reappears in this cottage. What do you think of my theory?"

"It is all surmise."

"But at least it covers all the facts. The only facts come to our knowledge which cannot be covered by it. It will be time enough to reconsider it when we can do nothing more until we have pursued from our friend at Norbury."

"But we had not a very long time to do for that. It came just as we had wished our investigation to be ended," said I.

"Have seen the man again at the window. Will meet him 7 o'clock train and will take no steps until you arrive."

He was waiting on the platform when we stepped out, and we could see in the station lamps that he had been very pale and quivering with agitation.

"They are still there, Mr. Holmes, and he is laying his hands on my friend's sleeve. I saw lights in the cottage as I came down. We shall see it in a moment or two."

"What is your plan, then?" asked Holmes, as we walked down the dark road.

"I am going to force my way in and see for myself who is in the house. I wish you both to be there as witnesses."

CLERICAL FORCE AT CITY HALL MAY BE LARGELY REORGANIZED

More Modern Methods of Doing the Work Necessary—Various Changes Proposed.

Some important changes may be instituted in the clerical department of the city hall before very long. Indeed the entire reorganization of the staff is not at all unlikely. The attitude of the city fathers seems anything but favorable to the present method by which the work is being carried on, and more modern methods will probably be instituted.

It was at one of the council meetings held a short time ago that the ball was started rolling in this direction. Ald. Cooper brought the matter to the council's attention first in advising that the assessing work should be started earlier in the year and that the city clerk should receive the roll from each ward at a certain date. Also the council's attention should be directed to the fact that the work is not finished before another year begins and that the court of revision should meet to hear appeals four times a year, once after the completion of each ward's assessment.

This motion of Ald. Cooper will be considered at a future meeting. At the meeting of No. 1 committee yesterday afternoon, Mayor J. J. Peare stated that he had personally investigated to a certain extent the duties of the clerical force in assessment commission and engineer's departments, and he had found that the work included very many details which require the knowledge of an expert to handle.

"We all have our own ideas about this work," said his worship. "I have details beyond my observation. I think that it would add efficiency and economy to the service to secure a man thoroughly familiar with every detail of the work."

The mayor thought the council should have City Auditor Jewel make a thorough investigation into the clerical work and that he should draw up a report.

Ald. Greenleaf moved that the mayor's suggestion be recommended to the council.

"The question of the necessity of having extra help could be considered in Mr. Jewell's report, also," said Ald. Greenleaf.

"Perhaps some work from one office may be transferred to another, and adjusted to secure more satisfactory results," said Mayor Campbell.

The question of securing parks and recreation grounds occupied the committee's attention for a while. It was moved that the council be requested to submit a bylaw to the council to the effect that certain properties in different parts of the city for playgrounds. The matter was laid over for a future meeting. Chairman Stevely agreeing to see the city solicitor regarding purchase of same.

City Clerk Baker found great difficulty in preparing the voters' lists owing to the lateness of the time at which the assessment rolls are returned to him. He asked that the council be requested to return the rolls at different times instead of having them come in the fall as they do now. The matter was laid over pending action of council.

Ald. Carson moved that Mr. Grant be instructed to report the valuation of properties for insurance purposes. The local firebills were insured for less than one of the old storage buildings. The present way that the real estate insurance is fixed is on the assessment of property made years ago. The council will be recommended to have the insurance based on the present assessment values.

Another insurance matter came up for consideration. Mr. Nelson had had $4,000 of insurance on the Western Park buildings, which had been placed with his company taken away for some unaccountable reason. To replace this $4,000 the council would either have to take away that amount from some buildings for business or insure the matter was laid over.

The telephone in the home of Mr. J. Peare, the park commissioner, will be paid for in part by the city. Mr. Peare will pay what is a fair share of the sum, and the committee favored the application that the city pay the balance of the same.

The council will be asked to secure the pictures of the mayors of the city since ex-mayor Little's time, for the purpose of adorning the council chamber walls.

Exemption was granted the Salvation Army Rescue Home in South London. All such charitable institutions will be exempt from taxation when the new provincial law comes into force next year.

GRANGERS WANT LOWER TARIFF

Resolution Passed by Forest Rose Grange, Westminster Township.

The following committee report by Forest Rose Grange, Westminster Township, was read and it is published by The Advertiser:

Whereas the Grangers and Patrons of Forest Rose Grange, Your committee appointed to consider the tariff question, do hereby report:

That the Government of this Dominion has appointed a commission to inquire into the working of the present tariff, and take evidence and if the tariff is not satisfactory, to make such changes (if any) are wanted, and the manufacturers of Canada are using every means in their power to have the duties on foreign made articles largely increased, and that any increase would certainly be an addition to the already too heavy burden borne by the Canadian manufacturer. The so-called "National Policy," which was devised to encourage and protect and assist the infant industries of the Dominion, has in the past quarter of a century they have been to the extent of over 24 to 25 per cent of advantage over all outside competition, and that the tariff is a heavy pack of canned goods all orders may not be filled and values are firm. Hardly a week goes by without a shipment in all seasons, and the demand for structural steel and builders' supplies continues very active. Collections are generally good, and from certain localities show considerable improvement. Deliveries of grain have been rather light but wagon deliveries are better and arrivals of country produce have been fairly large. Grain prices are firm. Rough orders are still large. This season, particularly applies to drygoods, but the cereals also report a heavy trade and collections, as in other departments of trade, show improvement and demand for hardware lines also continues very brisk. A feature in trade generally is the large number of new stores that are being opened throughout the country and generally with excellent prospects of success. Ideal threshing weather has resulted in the heavy movement of grain and the distribution of large amounts of money among the farmers.

Hamilton trade reports to Bradstreet's say business conditions there continue satisfactory. The movement of wholesale trade is active and heavy, and retail trade shows a better tone. Collections are fair to good, while values generally hold steady to firm. Receipts of all lines of produce are fairly large, and the outlook favors a continuation of existing cheerful trade conditions.

London reports to Bradstreet's say merchants generally view with great satisfaction the expansion which trade has shown, and the bright prospects for the immediate future holds out. The demand for wholesale lines is still active, but retail trade has not been unusually brisk during the past week. Collections are generally good, although here and there there is talk of a little slowness, which, however, is expected to show improvement as more of the crops are marketed.

Ottawa reports say there is a fairly good tone to wholesale trade there. Drygoods and groceries are moving, and well and country trade shows a fairly good tone. Collections are improving, and local industries continue active.

HERE'S A CLUE IN HAMILTON CASE

Police Learn of a Couple Who Went Driving Towards Grimby Park.

Hamilton, Oct. 13.—The mystery surrounding the woman murdered in the park on the 24th of last month, and the police are unable to solve it.

The Ontario authorities have been contacted with, and a government detective will be put on the case at once.

Today more than 3,000 people viewed the remains, but there is not one who seems to know her.

What seems important is the fact that a lot of the woman's apparel, now in the hands of an undertaker, is new. Her linen has never been washed, and the black skirt looks new also. The clothing is of rather a cheap class.

An important clue is being followed by the police.

Saturday night a man and woman answering the description of the murdered woman and her escort, registered at the Commercial Hotel.

They were morning he went to William's livery, picked out a rubber-tired car, and asked that it be sent to the Commercial Hotel.

Harry McManus, who registered at the Commercial as being from Ontario, He also asked McManus where there was a nice, quiet drive, and was recommended to go out towards Grimby or around the bay.

The man said he wanted a quiet driver, as a friend was going with him. On their return, the man and woman went to the American Hotel, where they registered.

Clerk Price, of the Commercial, thinks the man who registered there is the man who accompanied the woman on the night she was murdered, although neither is sure, but could identify the man any time. Neither of these men got square look at the woman.

"Then I quit the doctors and started to take Dadd's Dyspepsia Tablets. After the first box I had no more trouble. It is now two years since I took them and I am still well. I do all my own work. I can never tell you why I recommend it to all my stomach troubles to take Dadd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

THERE'S ONLY ONE BEST

In baking powder—it is Strong's.

There are a number of good reasons why it is best...

1st—Only the purest and finest materials are used.

MICHIGAN WANTS OUR BEETS

Unless U. S. Tariff Lowers Many Factors Will Go Out of Business.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14.—A New York dispatch says that to save many Michigan beet sugar factories from being shut down because of a scarcity of material, a protest against the present sugar beet tariff has been made before the United States general appraiser here by the Michigan Sugar Company, of Marine City, Mich., who ask for a reduction of the tariff from its present rate of 25 per cent ad valorem to 10 per cent.

The Michigan Sugar Company is asked to lower the duty in order that the American factories may get beets from Canada. The technical ground on which the protest was made declared that sugar beet was merely a raw material for use in manufacturing sugar. To allow the board to consider this point the case was adjourned until Dec. 6.

WILL CHANGE TIME

M. C. R. to Operate Road on Eastern Instead of Central Standard.

An event of deep importance to the traveling public takes place on Sunday, Nov. 5, when the Michigan Central Railroad, who ever since their coming to Canada, have operated the "Canada Southern" division of their line on Central Standard time, will adopt the Eastern Standard time for all of their lines from Windsor east. Eastern Standard time is the official time of Ontario and the action of the M. C. R. will result in everything in Ontario being on Eastern Standard time. For as soon as the M. C. R. makes the change the Pere Marquette and T. H. and E.—the only other lines now using Central Standard—will follow suit.

The change will be a most important one to St. Thomas, where the railroad is being in constant use and citizens, as well as railroaders, will welcome the change. The one hour of difference often led to serious results.

Supt. Adams of the M. C. R., today informed The Times that the change would be made on the new M. C. R. timetable went into effect on Nov. 5.

BURNS PROVED FATAL

Little Gladys Jenkins Dies From Injuries Received Two Weeks Ago.

Gladys Jenkins, the little York street girl who so severely burned some two months ago, passed away last night at the Victoria Hospital.

Gladys was about six and a half years of age. She was playing with a candle when her nightdress became ignited and before her mother, who was in the next room at the time, was able to extinguish the flames the child was very badly burned.

She was taken to the hospital for some time, but she rallied, and her recovery was hoped for. Of late, however, her strength had declined and she died after untold suffering the unfortunate child died last night.

Mr. Henry Jenkins, 54 York street, is the father of the little victim.

COMING TO LONDON

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas Tendered Farewell by Brooke Friends.

On a recent evening one of the largest farewell gatherings ever witnessed in the township of Brooke was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas, lot 12, on 14, where over two hundred of the neighbors and friends for miles around assembled to say good-bye to the popular host and hostess, who are about to leave for London.

Mr. Lucas was born and raised on the old homestead, and for over sixty years has lived in the township. He is now residing in the community he is now leaving. During that long period he has frequently been honored with many important offices as an evidence of the regard in which he was held, having filled all the elective offices in the township, with the exception of the office of justice of the peace, which he declined to accept by acclamation. He also took a prominent part in the Orange Order, filling the highest office in the organization.

During the evening an address was presented to him, expressing the sincere regret felt at the departure of the popular host and hostess, and wishing them many years of success in their new home. Accompanying the address were two Morris chairs, and the Morris chair for Mr. and Mrs. James Lucas, Jun.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucas have purchased a property on the outskirts of West London, where they will make their home. P. C. Lucas, of the local police force, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas.

"GOLD GOLD."

"Good." He Says. "But Comfort Better."

"Food that fits is better than a gold mine," says a grateful man.

"Before I commenced to use Grape-Nuts food no man on earth ever had a more indigestible and unwholesome stomach than I had for years."

"I could eat nothing but the very lightest food and even that gave me great distress."

"I went through the catalogue of prepared foods but found them all (except Grape-Nuts) more or less indigestible, generating gas in the stomach, (which in turn produced headache and various other pains and aches), and otherwise unavailable for my use."

"Grape-Nuts food I have found easily digested and assimilated, and it has renewed my health and vigor and made me a well man again. The catarrh of the stomach has disappeared entirely with all its attendant ills, thanks to Grape-Nuts, which now is my almost sole food. I want no other."

REMAINS LAID AWAY AT VANNECK

Funeral of Late Rev. John S. Scott Held to Scene of Boyhood Days.

The remains of Rev. John S. Scott, late pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Toronto, were laid at rest this afternoon at Vanneck Cemetery.

The funeral was held this morning from the residence of Rev. James Bantyne, of Thornton avenue, and it was attended by many of the London friends of Mr. Scott, as well as a number from Vanneck and vicinity, where Mr. Scott had spent his boyhood days. The service was exceedingly simple, but was nevertheless impressive, consisting of the singing of Psalm xxxiii, and prayer by Rev. W. I. Clark.

The attendance included the majority of the local Presbyterian clergy, several from other points in the London presbytery, and Rev. Mr. Knowles, of Galt, and Rev. Dr. McNair of Oakville, the latter friends of Mr. Scott. The pallbearers were eight members of St. Andrew's Church, St. Paul's.

The funeral proceeded to Vanneck Presbyterian Church, where a public service was held at 2 o'clock.

At noon yesterday, the remains of Mr. Scott were removed from the residence of Capt. McNair, in St. Paul's, to St. Andrew's Church, where the deceased had been for two or three years his pastor. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. E. C. Currie, of Burns, moderator of the the Sarnia presbytery, assisted by Rev. A. J. McCallum, of London, Rev. Mr. Sockburn, of Toronto, and others. Mr. McCallum, of London addressed the congregation and spoke of his daily life with the deceased pastor during the last month of suffering, his patience and fortitude, and his strong faith in the Saviour. During Mr. McCallum's address many in the congregation were moved to tears. At the conclusion of the service the people were again given an opportunity to view the remains after which the casket was placed in the hearse to be taken to the tunnel depot en route to Vanneck for interment. The pallbearers were Messrs. Dr. MacLean, Thos. Symington, George Leys, H. Ingram, Robert I. Towers and Madeline MacKenzie.

800 DELEGATES COMING

The Sunday School Convention This Month Will Be a Big One.

Final arrangements were made last night at a meeting of the Sunday school workers and superintendents of the city for the entertainment of the great convention of Sunday school workers, to be held here on Oct. 24, 25 and 26. The meeting was held in the First Presbyterian Church and was largely attended.

The planning committee handed in a list of those who were willing to entertain delegates and it was found to be most satisfactory. Some churches have not sent in their lists yet and they were urged to do so as soon as possible. A general meeting of all the committees will be held in the Dundas Center Church, on Tuesday evening next.

Secretary Jackson will be in the city next week to make the final arrangements. It is expected that 800 delegates will be in attendance. The general committee are preparing a special hymn book for the occasion. The afternoon sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian Church, and the evening sessions in the First Methodist Church. Organist Phelps will preside at the organ in the afternoon and Mr. A. D. Jordan in the evening.
