A HOME IN THE HEART.

BY ELISA COOK.

Oh! ask not a home in the mansions of pride,
Where marble shines out in the pillars and walls;
Though the roof be of gold it is brilliantly cold,
And joy may not be found in its torch-lighted halls.
But seek for a bosom all honest and true,
Where love once awakened will never depart;
Turn, turn to that breast like the dove to its nest,
And you'll find there's no home like a home in the heart.

Oh! flink but one spirit that's warmly sincere,
That will lighten your pleasure and solace your care;
Find a soul you may trust as the kind and the just,
And be sure that the world holds no treasure so rare;
Then the frown of misfortune may shadow our lot,
The week-searing teardrops of sorrow may start,
But a star never dim sheds a halo for him,
Who can turn for repose to a home in the heart.

THE LADY OF BUSTA.

A TALE.

About ninety years ago, Busta in Shetland was the property and residence of a gentleman named Gifford, in whose family history some incidents of a remarkable character took place. The wife of Mr. Gifford, usually designated Lady Busta, was a woman of vigorous mind, and of a temperament uncommonly proud and imperious, as the events to be related will sufficiently show. Lady Busta had borne to her husband four sons and several daughters. The eldest of these sons, John Gifford, had reached the age of twenty-five, at the period to which our narrative refers. Some years before that period, a new inmate had been added to the house of Busta, in the person of Barbara Pitcairn, the daughter of an old and dear friend of the Giffords, and who had recently been left an orphan. Barbara had sprung up, in the course of the two or three years spent at Busta, into a lovely and a blooming woman.

One day in the pleasant month of May, Lady Busta entered the sitting room in the mansion of Busta, where Barbara Pitcairn was seated alone bending over her work. A storm was on the lady's brow, as the orphan girl recognized at a glance; and when she recognized it, she trembled. "Know you, Barbara Pitcairn," were Lady Busta's first words, as she seated herself opposite the object she addressed, "know you the pleasant news I have heard to-day?" "I know not indeed, madam," said Barbara, attempting to smile, though she could not help shrinking under the stern gaze which Lady Busta fixed upon her. "I have heard, then," continued the lady, "that the heir of our house and name, John Gifford, has formed an attachment without my consent, and one unworthy of himself and his family." "Can it be, my lady?" said Barbara, timidly, hearing rather than seeing—for her eyes were fixed on her work—that a reply was expected from her. "It can be, and is so I am told," continued Lady Busta. "But mark me, Barbara Pitcairn—and you, I know, converse oft with John Gifford, and may tell him this—mark me, when I say, that before I saw the heir of our house degrade himself by a mean alliance, I would prefer to have him stretched a corpse at my feet!" These words made her auditor shudder; but the lady went on, her voice rising into accents of sterner passion as she spoke—"Ay, girl, though these breasts gave him food, I would sooner see his comely body lifeless—bloody—disfigured before me, than see him disgrace the name he bears! My lady works, Barbara Pitcairn?" The young lady raised her eyes to the speaker's face as these last sentences were uttered, but dropped them again instantly, with an involuntary shudder at the expression which Lady Busta's countenance wore. The latter then, as if her mission was sped, rose slowly, and left the room.

For some minutes after she was gone, Barbara sat motionless as marble, and with its hue upon her features. When she awoke from the stupor into which she had fallen, it was only to enter upon a state of more acute suffering. Her work fell at her feet, and she wrung her hands bitterly. "The evil day, then, has come at last," was her thought. "Heaven help the destitute, and those who have no home!" For a time Barbara could do nothing but repeat to herself such expressions as these, while her tears fell fast. "Yet can it be possible," thought she, "as she became more composed, that Lady Busta should have discovered all! Would she not have driven the object who offended her from her doors! And yet why should I deceive myself?" continued she, relapsing into her grief; "how can it be concealed long, even if yet unknown! How can it! No; something must be done instantly. I must see John immediately, ere this threatened storm breaks and involves us in ruin." Barbara hastily arose as she spoke, dried the traces of her tears from her countenance, and gathered her work into its place. She then prepared her attire for a walk abroad.

Our story requires that we should follow the young lady whither she went. Not far from the house of Busta was a roe, or a n of the sea, of considerable extent, being about a mile in breadth, and running into the land for several miles. To the shore of this sheet of water Barbara took her way, and walked out of sight of the family mansion, where she sat herself down on the grass. This day was a pleasant one of early summer, and at another time the orphan girl might have found pleasure in contemplating the smooth surface of a sea which rarely held a placid mood; but now her heart was too much occupied with other thoughts to enjoy the beauties of nature. Her eye and her mind were fixed on the angle of the hill, by the foot of which she had taken up her station. Not had she waited long before the object for which she looked, appeared. A young man, in a hunter's dress, with a dog by his side, and a gun on his arm, came round the end of the hill, and advanced towards her. In a few minutes the pair were folded in an embrace, which proved that John Gifford and Barbara Pitcairn were lovers—at least.

John heard from the young lady's lips the language which his mother had used respecting his formation of an attachment to her station, and the narrator's tears again flowed as she repeated the words. Though concerned to hear what had passed, the heir of Busta was also irritated by the unfeeling expressions of his mother. "She has governed all as she wished," said he, "but affections are not to be ruled. Nor have I placed mine on an unworthy object, but on one who by birth and in every thing else but wealth, is mine equal—indeed, of whom I am unworthy." Such words as these were soothing to the ear of Barbara, but her alarm was too great to be quickly or easily removed. "She can only suspect an attachment between us, dearest Barbara," said Gifford; "but long ere her anger can go further, I will have taken steps with my kind father's help, to make it harmless." "There is more in it than suspicion, John," was Barbara's reply; "she has discovered—or been informed of something." "Suspicion, dearest, is all, believe me," said the young man; "our confidants are all true, and I bear the written tokens of our affection ever in my bosom—close to my heart. See here, love," said he, showing the corners of a few papers in the situation he spoke of. The converse of the pair continued for some time longer. At its close, Barbara, with her heart partially lightened of its load, took the path homewards, while John remained behind for a space, in order that jealousy might not be further awakened by their return together.

On the day following these occurrences, John Gifford and two of his brothers, William and Hay, with their cousin John Firkin, a young clergyman, lately made assistant to his father, the minister of a neighbouring parish, left Busta house to cross the roe already mentioned in order to spend the day with a gentleman on the opposite side. Barbara, from her window saw them take boat on the roe. Her heart communed with her lover even in this separation. A motion made by him with his handkerchief was answered by her in the same way; and, though unperceived by others, the signal gave joy to them. John's youngest brother James did not go with the rest by boat, but chose to ride round the head of the voe, to join the party at the same house. Cheerless was that day in the dwelling of Busta to some of its inmates. But the dusk came at length; and then the eight o'clock bell rung for supper, which was to be the signal for the return of the party across the lake. But an hour passed, and they came not; another hour, and still they did not appear. However, the night was so calm that no dread of an accident was felt at Busta. It was concluded by all that the party had been prevailed upon to stay all night.

Early on the morning, nevertheless, a horseman was sent from Busta round the head of the voe, to ascertain the safety of the party. The man returned—his horse covered with foam—with the alarming intelligence that, on the previous evening, the party had taken boat from the opposite side of the voe, as soon as they heard the supper bell rung! Who shall describe the alarm and agony of the father, or of the poor orphan whose life was bound up in one of the lost, though even her anguish she was forced to conceal! The cold, stern heart of Lady Busta was well shown by her manner of receiving the intelligence brought by the servant. "If the boat has sunk, my sons cannot all be lost, for James went not with the rest, but rode by land." James, however, was with the rest. He had chosen to take the boat on his return, with his brothers and cousins.

MORAL COWARDICE.—Why is it, in fact, that the tone of morality in the high places of society is so lax and complaisant, but for want of the independent and indignant rebuke of society? There is reproach enough poured upon the drunkenness, debauchery, and dishonesty of the poor man. The good people who go to him can speak plainly, and very plainly of his evil ways. Why is it then, that fashionable vice is able to hold up its head, and sometimes occupy the front ranks of society? It is because respectable persons, of hesitating and uncompromising virtue keep it in countenance! It is because timid woman stretches out her hand to a man whom she knows to be the deadliest enemy of morality and of her sex, while she turns a cold eye upon the victims he has ruined. It is because there is nobody to speak plainly in matters like these.

And do you think that society is ever to be regenerated or purified under the influences of these unjust and pusillanimous compromises? I tell you never. So long as vice is suffered to be fashionable and respectable, so long as men are bold to condemn it only when it is clothed in rags, there will never be any radical improvement. You may multiply temperance societies—you may pile up statute-books of law against gambling and dishonesty—but so long as the timid homages of the fair and honoured are paid to splendid iniquity, it will be in vain; so long will it be felt, that the voice of the world is not against the sinner but the sinner's garb; so long every weapon of association, and every battery of office will be but a missile feather against the Leviathan, that is wallowing in the low marshes and stagnant pools of society.—Devey's Moral Views.

RESIGNATION OF MINISTERS.

In the House of Lords, on the 7th, Lord Melbourne announced the resignation of all the Ministers and its acceptance by the Queen—in consequence of the vote in the Commons on the Jamaica Government Bill, in which Ministers had a majority of only five. In the House of Commons, a similar communication was made by Lord John Russell, who in an able speech explained at length the reasons for this step.

It appears that Sir Robert Peel received Her Majesty's commands to form a new Administration, but Her Majesty declining to dismiss her Household Officers, Sir Robert declined undertaking Her Majesty's command. Upon this Lord Melbourne was again sent for and at the latest accounts it was reported that the following arrangement had been made, Lord Normanby Premier, Lord Durham for Foreign Affairs, Mr. P. Thompson Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Lord Howick Home Department.

Lord Howick is understood to have been very active in endeavouring to conciliate the English Radicals to Lord Melbourne's third Administration but without success.—Lord Palmerston and Sir John Hobhouse decline coming into office.—No final arrangements are yet made or in a fair way of being completed.

The ministry under Lord Melbourne had been in existence about four years. The ministry under Earl Grey went out of office in July, 1834, and a new ministry was formed with Lord Melbourne at its head. This latter was dissolved in November, 1834, and another was formed with Sir Robert Peel at its head. In April, 1835, Sir Robert Peel and his colleagues resigned, and Lord Melbourne was reinstated in office.

RESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER.

On the 6th May, Mr. Abernethy resigned the Speakership of the House of Commons, stating that he had no longer the strength to meet, as he had heretofore done, the fatigue and labour inseparable from the discharge of the duties of the situation in which he had the honor to be placed. Mr. Abernethy concluded—"As I propose to continue the discharge of my present duties until Whit Sunday, I do trust that the house will be of opinion that I act with propriety in now limiting my observations to the simple announcement of the fact of my intended resignation."

Lord John Russell then rose and said—Sir, I am sure the house will have heard with great concern the announcement you have just made. (Hear, hear.) Sir, if I were to consult my own feelings, rather than yours, I should be disposed to make some remarks upon that announcement, but I am sure, sir, that I am consulting your feelings when I say that I shall not now enter on the question of the merits which have been conspicuous in the situation which you have filled. I will only say, therefore, sir, that in leaving the chair, I am sure you will carry with you the respect, regard, and gratitude of the House.—(Hear, hear, from both sides.)

Sir Robert Peel.—Mr. Speaker, as the noble lord has declared that out of consideration to your feelings he has placed a restraint upon the expression of his own, I feel myself almost compelled to follow the example he had taken. But as my situation is not altogether the same with that of the noble lord—as, on your first proposal to the chair you had the cordial support of the noble lord—and, as it was my painful duty, sir, to give my vote to another candidate, I may, perhaps, be justified in so far dissenting from the example of the noble lord, as to offer my public testimony to the integrity and impartiality with which you have discharged your duties in presiding over the deliberations of this House—(cheering)—and to declare that I think, not only on account of the discharge of your duties in the chair, but on account of your persevering efforts to improve the conduct of private business, thereby to raise the character of the House in the estimation of the country, you are entitled to an expression of public gratitude.—(Loud cheers from all parts of the House.)

Mr. Abernethy is to be created a peer.

Lord John Russell gave notice that on Friday the 10th, he should move for leave to bring in a bill for uniting the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada.

The debate on the Jamaica government bill was then resumed, and concluded. The vote on taking the question, was for the bill 294—against it 289—a majority so small as to ensure the defeat of the bill in the House of Lords, if the Tories think proper to oppose it there.

The trial of the Earl of Stirling has resulted in an acquittal on the charge of forgery. The Jury found, however that some of the documents produced by him, in support of his claim to the title, were spurious.

Notwithstanding the proclamation of the Queen advising the Chartists to abstain from their illegal practices, a meeting took place at the Crown and Anchor tavern, in London, on the night following, at which more than 2000 persons were present. The meeting was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Stephens, in a most inflammatory and seditious speech, concluding—"If the throne and the altar protect the poor, then he would support the throne and the altar; but if they did not support and protect the poor, then he would say—"Down with the throne—perish the altar."

At Manchester eight chartists have been arrested, while in the act of drilling, and warrants were issued for the arrest of others.

THE CANADIAN PRISONERS.

EXCHEQUER COURT, May 6th.—The judgment of the Court in the above case, was delivered this morning by the Lord Chief Justice Baron. After recapitulating the substance of the return made by Mr. Bachelor, the gaoler of Liverpool, he said it had been urged most ingeniously at the Bar, that the Legislature of Upper Canada had no right to pass an Act of Parliament, giving the Lieutenant Governor power to grant conditional pardon—that if it had it was of no force or effect out of the province, and therefore not one was bound by it out of the Province, nor could any one act upon it legally—that the pardon being conditional, it was not competent to the prisoners to accept it, or if so, that he could call his assent. The Court was of opinion that it was not necessary for them to decide the first points in that case. If the condition was void so also must be the pardon. If the condition was lawful and the prisoner had not assented to it, then he could not have the pardon, but having assented to the condition, he could not revoke it without also revoking the pardon. The situation of the prisoner appeared to be, that he had been indicted for high treason, of which he had confessed his guilt. He was liable to be tried for the treason in England, and he could not plead the pardon; he was in such a situation that any of Her Majesty's subjects would be aiding and abetting treason if they allowed him to go at large. The Court were therefore of opinion that the prisoners ought to be re-detained. If they had not or could not be lawfully transported, of which the Executive Government would no doubt be advised, it would be their duty to take measures to have the prisoners tried in England for the treason.

The prisoners were then removed.

The Toronto Examiner of Wednesday last, states, that "Rumours of the most unpleasant description relative to the Clerk of the House of Assembly have been current during the past week. It is stated that he has left home with a large sum of money, (variously stated from £2000 to £5000), placed in his hands to pay the contingencies of the House of Assembly. There is no doubt that Colonel Fitzgibbon has gone from home, that he received a sum of money to pay contingencies, and that he has only partly done so. One of the accounts, which we are informed was settled, is Mr. Dalton's of the Patriot. From Colonel Fitzgibbon's hitherto unimpeachable character as a man of integrity, we cannot allow ourselves to credit the current rumours, but we must express our surprise that they have not been contradicted by the government organ."

The Superintendent of Police at Montreal has issued a notice to the following effect:—

"Understanding that it is not generally known that passes are required by persons desiring to go to the United States, I hereby notify such persons that passes are absolutely necessary, and that to obtain a pass the applicant must furnish a certificate, signed by two known citizens, or (in the country) by the Curate or Justice of the Peace residing nearest the residence of the applicant, certifying the honesty of the applicant, and that in their opinion there will be no danger in granting a pass."

COMMERCIAL.

The sales of wheat were less free. United States sweet flour was selling at 36s. to 37s. per bbl. of 196 lbs.

By the last quarterly return the bullion in the Bank of England has decreased since the last report £1,050,000, and the deposits £891,000.

THE QUEBEC TRANSCRIPT.

FOR PUBLIC CONSIDERATION.

AN instance has presented itself which has produced more or less of the same consequences, than the blind concession that the members of the medical profession alone are competent to administer remedies for disease. The general contumacious which is given to this preposterous pretension of an interested class, is one of the most prolific sources of disease, suffering, and early death. How many thousands of persons there are, at this moment surrendering their constitutions to the insidious inroads of almost every variety of human malady, from their reluctance to incur the expense of consulting a physician, and from their silly prejudice against the most simple medicines, unless sanctioned by the doctor's authority of a pretendedly learned prescription? If they could see that the eruption in plain English, they would find, in a vast majority of cases that it effected nothing in the world but a little rhubarb, or some or jalap, or aloes, mixed with sugar and waters and sayaded with a little poppy-seed, or some other acridly direct and a simple cathartic like this is generally efficacious. But the doctor keeps the prescription, and when the patient gets ill again he has again to consult the physician, instead of procuring for himself, at a more moderate price, the remedy of the world-famous remedy which he felt relieved of. It is that a majority of the population of every civilized country submit to be treated in this way into their systems, because the relief they derive from a medical aid is of more extensive, temporary, and efficient remedy, and thus a complete and the miserable condition of an ignorant physician, that a Prescription by the Doctor has been here in the world, killed thousands of lives. A medicine as compounded that it will cleanse the alimentary canal of all impurities and restore the system of the body, give a new and restoring action to all the systems that contribute their agency to the disease, and thus should be pronounced the most valuable remedy, relieve the whole system of febrile and inflammatory symptoms, and necessarily prove a great blessing to mankind if rendered at a price which places it within the reach of all classes. It is a medicine of such efficacy, it cannot fail to work more cures, and to do far more general good, than all the medicines of the medical profession combined can possibly accomplish their private practice. Such a medicine the public has in MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS and PHOENIX BITTERS, the efficacy of which are established throughout the United States, and voluntarily testified by thousands of individuals whom they have relieved and cured. It is in vain that the interested denouncers of popular medicines attempt to insulate these in their indiscriminate approbation. Facts bear testimony and are more numerous even than professions. Consult the most eminent and successful physician that ever lived collect so many testimonials of remarkable cures, and of so extensive an alleviation of suffering under an almost countless variety of human diseases, has been spontaneously presented to the proprietor of the LIFE PILLS and PHOENIX BITTERS during the last two years? He believes not, and would be happy to put the question to the test.

The prevalent reputation of these medicines being firmly established upon the basis of innumerable facts, it only remains necessary to inform persons who are unacquainted with them of some among the most terrible of maladies in which they have repeatedly proved successful, and in which therefore, it may confidently be presumed they will succeed hereafter; 1. Dyspepsia, both chronic and casual, and/or the worst symptoms of restlessness and pain, flatulency head-ache, nausea, loss of appetite, heart-burn, costiveness, biliousness, indigestion, general debility and wasting away of the body. 2. Diarrhoea, whether febrile, mucous, serous, leucorrhoea, bilious, or tubercular. 3. Jaundice, both bilious and spasmodic, hepatic, infantile, and of the dark green variety. 4. Helminthia, or worms, both albic and anal, and of every variety, from the large tape and joint worm to the insect larvae of the stomach and rectum. 5. Piles, of the blood, the bleeding, the white and the mucous variety. 6. Constipation, whether arising from constipation or obstruction, and of however long standing. 7. Colic, the flat, the painters', the constipated, the constructive, and tubercular. 8. Coughs, the common or humid cough, and the dry and the whooping cough. 9. Asthma, the nervous or dry, and common or humid. 10. The Breast pang, acute and chronic; and also Pleurisy, or chronic pain in the side. 11. The Daily Fever, whether of the mild, the acute, or the sweating variety. 12. Fever and Ague. 13. Influenza, in any stage. 14. Dysentery, acute and chronic. 15. Rheumatism, acute and chronic, together with podagra, or gout. 16. Marasmus, whether as general atrophy or loss of flesh, or pulmonary decline and consumption, if taken before cavities have been formed in the lungs. 17. Scrofula—singularly and rapidly efficacious even in the worst cases. 18. Scoury. 19. Hypochondriac, and all other nervous affections. 20. Spasmodic Prolapsion of the heart and of the arteries. 21. Head-ache.

It is evident, therefore, that these medicines are compounded of ingredients which act upon the system universally, and not merely upon the organs. They act without causing pain, or producing any prostration of nervous energy, but on the contrary, strengthen, invigorate and calvein, from the first day's experience of their operation, until the period of convalescence. Directions for use accompany them.

13. All post paid letters will receive immediate attention.

Sold wholesale and retail by WM. B. MOFFAT, 267 Broadway, N. Y. A liberal discount made to those who purchase to all agents.

BEGG & URQUHART.

N. B. The Life Medicines may also be had of the principal druggists in every town throughout the United States and the Canada. Ask for Moffat's Life Pills and Phoenix Bitters; and be sure that a fair sample of John Moffat's signature is upon the label of each bottle of bitters and box of pills.
