Co-Operative House-keeping.

(By Dr. Frank Crane)

The one institution in which progress lags in our cities is The Home. Notwithstanding that being our bulwark, palladium and so forth, we do not seem able to be able to apply the modern improvements suggested by advanced economics and municipal science.

The plan that suggests itself as being most up to date is some sort of co-operative housekeeping where drudgery could be reduced to a minimum, waste eliminated and comfort secured with economy. But most co-operative schemes go to pieces upon the rocks of personal independence. We would rather have an expensive and ill-managed household than one in which somebody else interferes.

In the Garden City of Letchworth, England, they have been conducting interesting experiments which have created a discussion in the British press. Some twelve or sixteen homes are grouped into a housekeeping unit. The most costly consists of two living rooms, etc., and rents for $350; the cheapest, a bachelor apartment, with sitting room, bedroom and bath $300. In a central building is a dining room with separate tables, and rooms for reading, tea, smoking and the like. Three good meals a day come to 70 cents. The average bill at the restaurant for two people is $4 a week. By paying a small extra sum, one can have meals sent to one's own home.

A family of three persons can thus live in the neighborhood of London, in a comfortable dwelling, for from $350 to $700 a year and have none of the trouble attendant usually upon keeping house; rent, food, heat, light cleaning and service are included in the price.

Why do not our builders try more experiments of this kind among us? The difficulty, of course, is nicely to balance the two opposing demands. First the demand for absolute privacy when we want it, including the privilege of going out and coming in when we please, dressing to suit ourselves, and generally minding our own business without the assistance of interested and officious neighbors; and secondly securing the pleasures of a common dining room and social life when we are so disposed, together with the manifest advantages of co-operation.

It does not seem an insuperable problem. And if the English can solve it, they the most individualistic of people, why not we?

The salary minimum for rural postmasters is to be increased from $25 to $50 per year. Several thousand persons will be affected.

Women's Institute

The Echo Place Institute met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. Edmondson, Hamilton Road. A large attendance of members and visiting friends being present.

The subject for the day was biscuit and pastry, the members responding to their names with recipes. Several new members were added, and the institute now has about forty members.

A good paper, "Uselessness of worry," was read by Mrs. C. Edmondson, showing how foolish it is to worry over things that cannot be helped. Mrs. Barnes also gave a paper on "Thanksgiving and its Origin." The Pilgrim fathers being the first to set aside a day in thanks to God for their bountiful harvest, and for bringing them safely through the perils of another year.

A good program of music and recitation was rendered by the following: instrumental duet, Misses Marjorie and Beatrice Davidson, recitation Miss Moyer; vocal duet, Miss Nealson and Miss Moyer; recitation, "The busy body," Miss Moyer; piano solo, Miss Mabel Edmondson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, also the minutes of a meeting of the board of directors, which was held at the home of Mrs. C. Shultz, yesterday.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. E. Day, Nov. 20.

W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. met at 17 Nelson street yesterday, and a very interesting account of the 36th annual Provincial Conventions, held at Stratford for 5 days, was given by Mrs. Kerr and Mrs. Shultz. Especially reported was the missionary work by Mrs. Gordon and the missionary by Miss Sproule. Also most gratifying were the reports of "Things," given by Mrs. McAlister, Mrs. Miller, Miss Gowie. One mass meeting was addressed by Mr. H. E. Irwin, K. C., Toronto. For three days, after dinner addresses were given by the Mayor, council, Ladies' Aid, W. M. S., Y. M. C. A., and the ministers. The work of the year was made prominent, led by Miss Edwards, Toronto, Miss McKee, North Mrs. Deutor, North Bay, gave a good report in regard to missionary work done by over three missionaries in the field. The conference of the county presidents was largely attended by representatives from all over Ontario, led by Mrs. McKee. Over 300 delegates responded to the roll call. The appropriations, resolutions, plan of work committees all appear in annual report. Mr. Welcher, of the anti-tobacco society in the United States, gave a telling address, and was most successful in Toronto, speaking in some 30 schools.

A doleful wail swept over the land. What is it all about? The "drys" are making records and the "wets" are losing out. The "wets" are losing out at last. Let all the nation shout, Profound the loud triumphant blast The "wets" are losing out.

BORDEN CLUB.

The annual meeting of the Borden Club showed that institution to be in a flourishing condition.

Mr. Robert Ryerson, the retiring president and, in fact, the daddy of the enterprise, has from the inception showed marked executive ability and tireless energy. The value of his splendid work cannot be over-estimated, and it is a pleasure to know that he has consented to remain on the executive.

He is succeeded by Mr. Hall, a native of Ireland, who has been in Canada some ten years, and holds a prominent position with the Watson Manufacturing Company. He also has been a leading participant in the affairs of the club, and without doubt will make good in his new office.

HON. MR. WHITE.

The Finance Minister certainly made good upon the occasion of his first visit to Brantford since succeeding to that portfolio.

When his name was first mentioned for that high post there were plenty of people who asked "Who's White?" They don't ask that question now, but instead exclaim, "I'd like to meet White."

Those who did know him, of his rise as a young man from the assessment department in Toronto to a very large field of financial responsibility, of his success throughout, his clear-headedness and many other qualities, realized that Premier Borden had made no mistake in his choice of this man for Cabinet rank and that faith has been abundantly justified.

The auditors who listened to his delightful address at the luncheon, may perhaps be surprised to know that the first public speech he ever delivered was as recently as 1911, when he became so aroused over reciprocity that he decided to do his utmost to help fight it. By common consent he made the oration of the evening in Massey Hall on that occasion and he has since delighted many other audiences. His afternoon address yesterday seemed almost casual until his listeners realized the deep thought and the basic truths which formed the foundation of his deliverance. They speedily recognized that they were listening to one who thoroughly knew his subject and who had much enlightenment to impart.

In the House he is equally effective. He does not believe in long speeches and never makes them, but what he has to say is always to the point and uttered with much lucidity and directness. In the details of department work he is equally strong and the two budgets which he has presented have compared most favorably with all other efforts of the kind ever recorded at the capital.

HYDRO ELECTRIC IN HAMILTON.

The people of Hamilton were told by interested individuals that Hydro Electric would never be a success in that city, that the Cataract Power Company was good enough for all their needs and that the Municipality had better stand aloft from the Beck scheme.

The same sort of talk was used in Brantford and in both places it took a lot of fighting to down the Hydro opponents.

The following from Hamilton tells just how much the Ambitious City has suffered. "Engineer Sifton of the Hydro Department to-day submitted a statement showing the profits from the Hydro Department for the past eight months and an estimate of the cost of making needed extensions of the system. The gross profits was over $26,000, and the net profit amounts to almost $6,000. He estimates the amount required to complete the system, that it may provide for the increased demands, at $335,264 on one plan, and $330,830 on an alternative plan. For the larger amount, he informed the board, that he would be in a position to supply eight times the number of customers that could be accommodated by the original system, which cost about $300,000. As the system is incomplete, Mr. Sifton regards the showing remarkable. The report was allowed to stand for a week.

The Courier has always predicted that equally gratifying results will also occur in this city, and there does not seem to be the slightest shadow of a doubt about it.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

For men whom Liberals used to claim did not possess adherents of cabinet calibre the Tories seem to be digging up quite a few of them thank you.

"The Liberal party in East Middlesex stands on precisely the same platform as in Chateaugay,"—Toronto Globe.

Amid all the deserved congratulations in connection with the success of the corner stone laying, the name of Ald. Spence is deserving of special mention. As chairman of the committee having the ceremonies in hand, he was on the job from first to last.

So Governor Sulzer of New York State is down and out. That he did wrong seems to have been established, but the trouble is that the organization which put him out—Tammany—is doing worse wrong all the time. His dismissal is not to stamp out vice but to help the continuance of the same on a wholesale scale.

HERE AND THERE

The parting from brother Was tearful and sad. "Be good," whispered mother. "Make good," counseled dad. —Pittsburgh Post.

Our Funny Language.

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which a sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper runs while the sleeper sleeps. Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper until the sleeper, which carries the sleeper, jumps the sleeper and wakes the sleeper in the sleeper by striking the sleeper under the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleep for the sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Connoisseur.

A well-known racehorse owner said to a veterinary surgeon: "How is it you haven't called on me for your account?" "Oh," said the vet. "I never ask gentlemen for money." "Indeed! Then how do you get on if he don't pay?" "Why, after a certain time I conclude he's not a gentleman, and then I ask him."—Tit-Bits.

MARRIAGE AND LONGEVITY.

Statistics Show That Married Men Live Longer than Bachelors.

The death rate for married men is much lower than that for single men at each age group from 20 to 80 plus except the highest, and even there it is about the same. From 20 to 30 years the death rate among married men is 4.2, while among single men it is 6.6. From 30 to 40 years the death rate among married men is slightly under 6, while among single men it is nearly 13. From 40 to 50 years there is an even greater difference. The death rate among married men is 9.5, whereas among single men it is 19.5. From 50 to 60 years there is less divergence in the death rates, but there is a difference in favor of the married of nearly eleven deaths per year per 1000. Even from 60 to 70 years the death rate of married men is less than 32, while that of the single men is 51.

Undoubtedly the lower death rate among married men is partly due to the fact that as a rule those who are in good health are readier to marry, while those with more delicate health, especially if suffering from any definite ailment, are not willing to assume the burden and responsibility of a family. Another factor quite as surely is that married men live much more regular lives as a rule, and consequently avoid many of the dangers of irregular living. Besides feeling their responsibility to others, they do not take such risks of life or illness and, as a rule, avoid venturesome expeditions and dangerous occupations. Jacques Bertillon, the French expert on occupational morality, has found that low death rates occur particularly in occupations in which the workman is under more or less supervision as regards not only health but also habits of life, and which he is surrounded by influences tending to prevent dissipation, and conducive to regular hours and habits of life.

This view would seem to be corroborated by the statistics as to the morality among married men who have lost their wives either by death or divorce. The death rate among these "unmarried men" is considerably higher than that of husbands of the same age and even as a rule it is higher than that of the bachelors of the same age. The death rate, for instance, of widowers and divorced men between 20 and 30 years is nearly double that of single men. From 30 to 40 years it is only 14.1 to 12.9, while from 40 to 50 years the mortality of divorced and widowers is slightly less than that of single men of the same age. From 50 to 60 years, however, it is slightly higher once more. At all these ages the "morality" rate among widowers and the divorced is at least nearly and sometimes double that of married men.—Journal of American Medical Association.

Horrible Dueling.

A particularly terrible kind of duel was fought on one occasion in Mexico. The opponents were an Indian settler and a rich cattle owner. The weapons chosen were butchers' knives, and he was settled that each combatant was to hold out his hand in turn to have one of his fingers cut off. The first to show the least sign of suffering pain was to have a bullet put through his heart by the other. The Indian had the first cut and amputated the cattle owner's first finger at a single blow. The Indian's first injury was the loss of a thumb, and he likewise remained as impassive as marble. This horrible drama went on until each combatant had lost four digits. Then the cattleman's second became so frightened at the ghastly sight that he shot the Indian dead and ended the fight.

A Golfer's Discovery.

An enthusiastic golfer, one of those fellows who can speak on nothing else but golf, was one day taken by a friend to our local observatory to have a look through the telescope. The golfer's friend, who was a keen astronomer, got him a look at the moon through the telescope and then asked him what he thought of the planet. To his amazement he answered back, "It's a' right, but it's awfu' ru' of bunkers."—World of Golf.

DEMAND FOR MONEY BETTER THAN SUPPLY

Montreal Star, 13, Oct.

That the demand for English capital is far greater than the supply at the present time, and that those in immediate need of money must pay the price, was the opinion expressed this morning by Mr. Humby Drummond, who has just returned from England.

Mr. Drummond, while in London, went very thoroughly into the financial situation, and on his return this morning spoke very plainly on matters pertaining to English capital.

"The stupidity of municipalities, the stupidity of promoters and the fallibility of the Senate on the naval question have knocked the gilt off the Canadian gingerbread temporarily," declared Mr. Drummond, "and to cure the common Canadian complaint of swell-headedness, one has only to make a short visit to London."

Mr. Drummond, while declaring that there was little or no misapprehension abroad regarding the great majority of Canadian enterprises, pointed out that the time had come when Canada and Canadians must do more work and less talk.

"Municipalities here," added Mr. Drummond, "seem imbued with the idea that there is no limit to the supply of gold in England, and they must be brought to understand that this is not the case."

"Much of my time was taken explaining why the naval bill had not been passed and Englishmen find it difficult to understand our method of dealing with such questions. All of which has its effect on questions of finance.

THE ROAD TO YESTERDAY.

(Emily Huntington Miller.) We dreamed alone, my heart and I, Of summers lost and vanished springs;

A little wind went singing by, With breath of roses on its wings; "Come out!" he beckoned, "come away! I know the road to Yesterday!"

We ran together down the way, The plum trees dropped their fragrant snow;

We found the homestead old and gray, The garden where the children played, Before their feet had learned to stray Beyond the realm of Yesterday.

The roses blossomed, white and red; The plum trees dropped their fragrant snow;

A joyous bird sang overhead, The very song of long ago; And sunbeams, through the open door, Wove webs of gold along the floor.

But from the window one should look, With tender longing in her face— And one, above a holy book, Sit musing by the fireside place— Sweet souls that changed to food in wine.

THE JUDICIARY.

Legislature and executive are means given to allow the people to do what they please under certain constitutional forms. The judiciary is a means given to prevent the people from doing what they please. How can we explain the fact that these judicial restrictions are of the very essence of freedom? I answer, because the law of the United States, as defined and administered by its courts, represents not only restraint, but self-restraint, and the kind of self-restraint which the nation must be prepared to exercise if it hopes permanently to enjoy the advantages of political freedom.—President A. T. Hadley, Yale University.

Life's bitter bread and meager wine And all the empty rooms should fill With children's voices, clear and sweet;

And on the silent stairways still Sound the light tread of children's feet—"O heart!" I sighed, "what need to stay? There is no road to Yesterday."

UNCLE SAM AND MEXICO

The Latest Statement of the Affairs of These Two Countries.

(Mamillan Press Despatch) WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—General Huerta plans to assemble the foreign diplomats in Mexico City today or to-morrow, according to latest state department advices, and make a statement on the present situation. No inkling of Huerta's purpose was contained in the dispatches. His statement will be received with the keenest interest, for it will alter the situation. Those closest to the administration policy believe dealings with Huerta are practically ended, and that peaceful measures to improve the situation will next be exercised in other directions. Speculation on the possibility and extent of dealings with the constitutionalists has been revived by the present situation but brings no definite statement from official quarters.

President Wilson has from time to time said he would welcome information as to the purpose of the constitutionalists, should they become successful by arms. There has been no direct communication, but the president is expected to be in receipt of information along these lines directly.

One difficulty is that the constitutionalists are in various parts of the republic, and communication is so slow that united action on any plan which might be submitted would take some time to formulate. In the meantime the administration regards Huerta's promises for a solution by an election as violated, and is said to feel free to hear other proposals.

The meeting of the diplomats, in Mexico City Wednesday was inconclusive and bound, none of the participants to any definite course, according to other advices. Official despatches to-day reported that the meeting called for a discussion of the situation in the republic reached no collective opinion as to a solution of the problem.

The meeting was held at the German legation, and representatives of Great Britain, Spain, Germany and Austria, France, Russia, Norway and

With the City Police

Armed with a warrant to search the premises of Solomon Savarian, 18 Seridan St., Chief of Police Slemm, accompanied by Constables Borthwick and Blanchard, paid a visit to that address last evening and as a result of the little surprise call, nine Armenians were placed under arrest on a charge of gambling and Savarian was taken into custody on a charge of running a common gambling house.

It was about 10 o'clock when the police officers crept silently up to the well known wooden home, and as one of the blinds did not exactly fit the window, an excellent opportunity was afforded, to see what was going on inside. According to the police, ten men were gathered around one table, four were playing cards, while the rest were looking on. A nice little pile of cash occupied a prominent place in the centre of the table.

After viewing the game from the outside for a few moments, the police decided that they would rather be on the inside looking out than on the outside looking in, and with the order, "hands up" the three officers dashed into the room, much to the consternation of all within. Tables and chairs were upset, cards and money flew in all directions. Somebody tried to turn out the lights, while one man made a bee-line for the back door.

The officers were on the job, however, and Constable Borthwick made straight for the table and did his best to get the coin. Savarian was also looking for any cash that was to be given away and just as one Constable reached the table, he put out his fist and the money disappeared. The officer saw the move however, and he followed the money to Savarian's pocket and immediately confiscated it.

In the meantime the other officers had also been busy and between putting the men under arrest and picking up cash, which had been scattered over the floor, they had some job.

In police court this morning the following men were charged with gambling: Roman M. B. Henry Tom, Dick Pappaya, Solomon Savarian, Mar Megs, Avi Keil, Dipona Kathegian, Moses Mamillan, Mistapa Hasanga. In addition Savarian was charged with keeping the house.

Evidence was given by the police telling of the raid of the house, while most damaging evidence against the accused was given by Savarian's step-son, who stated that he had often seen men there, and that his father was owner of the house, was paid 10 cents out of every dollar won by those in attendance. He was closely cross-examined by Mr. Woodgat, counsel for the defence, but he stuck to his story, going down into the court room and picking out the men whom he had seen pay over money to his father.

Several foreigners were called by the defence and they told the same old story, that they were simply playing to see who would pay for the coffee. They denied that they had been playing for gain.

The magistrate, however, stated emphatically that he did not believe the story of the defendant Savarian, who said he was simply paying back to one of those present an old debt, when the police entered, thereby attempting to account for the money on the table. In his opinion, he should be charged with perjury. The other defence witnesses, he thought, were not telling the truth.

Taking this into consideration he decided to find Savarian guilty of keeping a common gambling house, while in the other cases, the accused were allowed to go with a warning.

In the case of Savarian, a fine of $50 and costs or three months' was imposed.

Found a Lost Boy. On their way to the golf links yesterday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Cocksbutt and the Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance, picked up a little lost boy who was crying bitterly by the roadside. Mr. Cocksbutt took the boy, who was unable to tell his name, into his motor, and on his return from the links, left the little fellow with Chief Slemm, who subsequently found that the boy's parents were foreigners named Rodginski, living in the North ward, and they were delighted to get their son safely home again.

The huge steam shovel of Wright, Hazard and Cohen Company is showing no mercy to the land at the foot of the Jubilee Terrace, and already it has dug out a very large hole in the grounds leading to the approach of the Lorne Bridge. Activity is the by-word at present in that vicinity. A large number of workmen and teams are busily engaged there in the construction work of the Lake Erie and Northern Railway. At the foot of Church street a large pile driver is in operation, and a great change will be noted along the river front by the time that "old Father Time" announces his 1913 fallowen celebration.

Wm. Allan, a farmer, near Aylmer, Que., was gored to death by a bull. Port Hope's new Carnegie library costing $10,000, and containing seven thousand volumes, was formally opened.

THIRTY KILLED IN AIRSHIP DISASTER

board the burned and wrecked Zeppelin and by the accounts of the terrible missing catastrophe in Wales. The Zeppelin airships have been singularly unfortunate ever since their invention by the aged soldier count. No fewer than seven of them have been destroyed by fire, explosion or wreck. Zeppelin's I, II, and IV, met with disaster in this way, also the Deutschland I, and II, and now the L. I, and L. II, the first airships attached to the German navy have gone the same way.

Many minor accidents have happened to other airships of the same system by which numbers of soldiers have been killed or injured. On the occasion of the last catastrophe on September 9, the German Emperor is said to have wept on hearing the news. He had been in command of the naval manoeuvres during the day, and the dirigible, the L. I, considered the pride of the German navy had been engaged in reconnaissance work. In the evening he was blown away to sea by a violent gale, and when the struck water broke in halves, many of the members of the crew being inside her cabins.

Hundreds Witnessed Disaster. The hundreds of people who witnessed the accident and were appalled when they saw the great structure burst into a glaring flame and then fall from a height of 900 feet a mass of blazing canvas and molten aluminum across the public highway.

It was impossible for some time to approach the flaming dirigible beneath which the members of the crew had been crushed and burned.

Naval Constructors Neumann and Metzeler and Naval Chief Engineer Ansch were among those on board.

Lieut. Commander Behnich was personal friend of the emperor. He was formerly navigating officer of the Imperial Yacht Hohenzollern and later commander of the Cruiser Panther.

Lieut. Freyer was formerly personal adjutant of Prince Adalbert, one of the sons of the emperor. He served with the Panther on board a torpedo boat after studying with him at the naval academy.

A director of one of the aviation companies at the Johannisthal aerodrome was an eye witness of the disaster. He described it as follows: "I was working in my office about 500 yards from the scene of the accident when I was startled by an explosion of extraordinary violence. My first thought was that an aeroplane had landed on the roof of a building and that the gasoline had exploded."

"I rushed to a window and saw the new dirigible in flames and plunging toward the earth. The outer covering of the air craft had been already burned off and the inner balloons containing the gas had disappeared. The naked aluminum frame work with its outstretched ribs and its tapering ends and with the gondolas containing the motors beneath fell rapidly to the ground. When the skeleton of the immense craft struck the earth the heavy gondolas buried themselves in the ground.

"I rushed immediately to the scene after ordering the fire department from the aerodrome to follow, but when I arrived there was nothing left to be done except to take out the dead bodies of the victims from the great mass of twisted wreckage."

Not only the German navy, but the German army as well suffered from aviation accidents to-day as three army officers belonging to the flying corps were killed this morning in aerodrome accidents.

The balloon lay in a great "S" curve, a mass of glowing tangled girders and wires. The cylinders of the centre gondola and one of the after propellers could be distinguished. Otherwise there was nothing to indicate that the debris was that of Germany's proudest attainment.

Pioneers armed with axes hacked at the wreckage for two hours before they could extricate the last of the bodies of the victims from the blackened remains.

The dead were borne on stretchers to the balloon hall and a company of soldiers roped off the place to keep back the rapidly growing crowd and reporters from the wreck.

The six inmates of the centre gondola had been blown through the sides of the car by the first explosion and their bodies fell four hundred yards away from the wreck of the balloon which was traveling at forty miles an hour when the accident happened.

All the others except two were it is believed killed by the explosion of the gasoline tank and the fire and were probably dead before the wreckage reached the earth.

The commander and the officers of the admiralty trial board were seated in a gondola and after the fire broke out were caged inside a network of red hot aluminum girders and canvas which blazed like so many torches.

Two of the crew were still alive when dragged from the wreckage. One of them, however, died as he was extricated. The other Lieutenant Baron Von Bleul, was found to have both of his eyes burned out and was otherwise desperately injured. He was taken to the hospital morning, "I'll die."

Beside the officers already mentioned, Lieut. Trenk who was second-in-command, Chief Engineer Hausmann and three engineer secretaries from the admiralty were on board.

loon which landed in France in April this year. The rest of those on board were warrant officers of the German navy. The engineers of the Zeppelin Company had expressed their confidence when the L. II, was completed that she would be able to cross the Atlantic.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The dirigible before she left the balloon hall took on board her regular naval crew and a number of officers. She headed for Berlin a short distance off in a light wind. About a dozen flying men were circling the aerodrome at the time in their aeroplanes.

Everything was apparently in good order on the airship when she started. Then suddenly an explosion was heard by those on the ground, evidently in one of the motors in the centre gondola. A flash shot out and the next instant the whole ship was on fire and plunging downward. Every inch of the canvas covering and the balloons' disappeared in a moment.

A second and more violent explosion was then heard, the fire having reached the gasoline tanks filled with about a ton of explosive liquid fuel and in another instant the wreck of the newest and most modern of Germany's dirigibles lay a flaming mass on the ground. The fire departments of all the neighboring towns were called to the spot, but there was nothing left to save.

Some of the Victims

Captain Haeseler, Lieut. Koch and Sergeant Mante, all of the German army aviation corps, were the victims of the fatal aerodrome accidents, which occurred early this morning.

Capt. Haeseler, accompanied by Lt. Von Freyberg and Lt. Koch accompanied by Sergt. Mante left Berlin last night with instructions to fly to points in Silesia and Bavaria, respectively to deliver military messages.

HON. MR. WHITE'S VISIT WAS ONE OF MUTUAL PLEASURE

Chancellor of the Exchequer, at his official residence in Downing street. He found his financial views were largely shared by Mr. Lloyd George. The only difference between them seemed to be a difference of salary. But there, no doubt, Mr. Lloyd George's abilities were in a ratio to his stipend. (Laughter and cries of amen.) Briefly, then, the consensus of expert opinion seemed to be focused on the following causes for the world wide stringency.

First, they probably all knew that a few years had witnessed a tremendous industrial expansion in the world over. Great Britain, however, had been unusually prosperous. Her trade returns reaching record proportions. This was also true, although perhaps to a lesser extent, of France, Germany and other European countries. Then the United States and Canada had been unusually prosperous also. Canada, two years ago had a total foreign trade of $800,000,000. A year ago of over $1,000,000,000 and this year indications were that this huge figure might even be exceeded. South America also had been expanding at a phenomenal rate. The Argentine and Brazil especially increasing their trade by leaps and bounds. Then there was the Orient. It was only a generation or so ago that Japan was looked upon as a semi-barbarous country. To-day it was a world power and now signs were not wanting that China, the sleeping giant of the centuries was awakening to her great possibilities. Now this phenomenal growth of the world's trade meant the calling for large sums of money to finance the various new enterprises called into life and activity and Great Britain and other centres of Europe as the bankers of the world had had to call up all their resources to meet these demands. Of course, there was the annual adding to the world's wealth of some $500,000,000, represented in the production of gold. Part of this gold, however, went into the hands of a very grave question whether the gold production to-day was keeping pace with the business expansion of the world and as they all knew to have sound finance, gold must bear a certain ratio to credit on which the business of the world was transacted.

Another prime factor in the money stringency was contained in the regrettable war waste. Some twenty years ago, it almost looked as though the dream of universal peace was at last to be realized. But then came the Spanish-American war. First there was the Spanish-American war, then the struggle between Britain and Boer. Then came one of the most dreadful and costly wars of modern times when Russians and Japanese came to grips. As if that were not enough Turkey and Italy had to resort to hostilities, there was the little scrap in Morocco and only now they were emerging from the Balkan war clouds—a war which at one time threatened to engulf the whole of Europe. These wars meant the absolute waste of billions of treasure. They also destroyed confidence resulting often in the hoarding of money and the natural curtailing of credit as a consequence.

Then another reason for the tightness of money was to be found in the feverish anxiety of the great powers to strengthen their forces on land and sea. Why Mr. Lloyd George had informed him that this year Great Britain would expend on her navy, and he hoped he wasn't reading on dangerous debatable ground when he talked of the navy, because he was not there to talk of anything but saving of politics (laughter), a greater sum than was expended on all the navies of the world. Great Britain herself included thirty years ago.

Now these were some of the reasons why "money was tight" and why credit was being contracted and shortened. The financial powers had been obliged to call a halt till conditions again became more nearly normal. Then and not till then would money become easier.

However, there were signs that there was already a "loosening up." Personally he was glad to be able to tell them that Canada had come through the stress and strain as well or perhaps even better than most other borrowing countries. Her credit in Great Britain stood very high and here he took occasion to severely condemn the wild-catter and his schemes, many of which had been floated on the London market to the great detriment of the country. And the reason that Canada's credit stood so high was that "basically she was sound." She had a wealth of high class agricultural lands, ten per cent of which only had been as yet touched in the West. She had great mineral wealth, forest resources which with intelligent conservation were practically inexhaustible and she had fisheries unsurpassed in the world. It was these basic assets which placed her in such a proud position to-day and which enabled her to maintain her credit so well in a period of world wide depression.

Mr. White referred to the record harvest this year in the West and to the pleasing fact that the banks were providing the money with comparative ease for the marketing of the grain, showing that Canada's financial system was in a healthy and elastic condition. He referred to the value of intensive farming and stated that it was only a question of a few years when the product of the farms in Ontario, the West and the other Provinces, would be doubled, if not quadrupled.

Without being too optimistic the Finance Minister left the impression with his hearers that the worst of the financial strain was now over and that money for legitimate purposes, municipal and otherwise, should be easier to secure than it was at the beginning of the year, although it will probably be some time yet before it can be classed again as plentiful.

Mr. W. F. Cocksbutt, M. P., in a few well chosen words voiced the unanimous opinion of those present in stating that the Finance Minister's illuminating address had been greatly enjoyed and appreciated by all. A hearty vote of thanks was carried, to the accompaniment of three cheers and a tigger.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a conclusion one of the most delightful luncheons ever given by the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Brantford. The Minister of Finance personally assured the Mayor and members for South Brant that he would certainly try and find time at some future date to again visit Brantford.

He seemed greatly pleased with his brief visit to the city and all he saw here.

Visits Glebe Lands.
After lunch, Mr. White, according to the request of Ald. Spence and Mr. Cocksbutt, motored to the East Ward and was shown the New England Glebe lands which the city is anxious to acquire and which will require a special act of the Dominion Government to make legal any sale or transfer.

Walks Round Golf Links.
Afterwards he visited the golf links, where he spent nearly an hour or so. The Minister is an enthusiastic golfer and was very much delighted with the Brantford course. He was introduced to a number of the members. Jocularly, he stated that he was not quite sure from the standpoint of the health of future generations of Canadians, whether he would not be justified in cutting out some of the "Post Office" and other grants and devoting the money instead to the establishment of municipal golf courses.

Mrs. W. E. Cocksbutt subsequently entertained the Minister to tea at her residence on Gladwin St., at which a number of guests were present. The Hon. Mr. White leaving at 6 o'clock on the G. T. R. train for the East.

THE FALL WEATHER
HARD ON LITTLE ONES
Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

He showed the value of the trained mind in the case of the geological society which visited Toronto this year. The society were able to travel through the country and pick out the different kind of rocks and thus exhibited superior knowledge.

The trained mind while crossing the country appreciates the beauties to a greater degree than the untrained mind. At the conclusion of the able address a vote of thanks was moved by Principal and seconded by Inspector Kilmer.

Miss Dodd Is Defeated

Big Surprise in the Golf Tournament.

(Canadian Press Dispatch) WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 17.—Miss Gladys Ravenscroft of England, former British titleholder and Miss Marion Hollins of New York, won their matches in the semi-final round today for the women's national championship at the Wilmington Country Club and will meet tomorrow in the final for the American title.

Miss Ravenscroft was a surprise and a disappointment, the holder of the British and Canadian championships going to pieces and losing to Miss Ravenscroft by 8 up and 7 to play. Miss Dodd did not win a single hole.

The other match between Miss Hollins and Miss Harriet Curtis of Boston, former American champion, was one of the most even matches ever played in a semi-final round for the American championship. It was nip and tuck, hole for hole and almost stroke for stroke until the 20th hole when the Metropolitan champion earned the right to go into the final against Miss Ravenscroft tomorrow.

An At Home-Tendered To Wesley Choir

A very successful At Home was tendered to the members of the Wesley Church Choir and their friends last evening in the parlors of the church, by the choir master and organist, Mr. and Mrs. Porter.

There were numerous contests and games indulged in during the evening, the feature being the guessing contests, which proved very exciting. After the contests a solo was rendered by Miss Husted followed by a reading by Mr. L. Miller, which was very much enjoyed.

The young ladies were then told that Princess Czinzella would tell them their fortunes which they hoped would come true. Mr. J. S. Moyer then told a fish story about going fishing at the Caledonia Fair.

Lunch was then served to the sixty guests that were present, which was also greatly enjoyed.

The Pastor, Mr. Liddy, was then called upon for a story and he very graciously complied with their wish. He told them a Legend of the Rhine, which was very interesting.

Mr. Liddy then moved a vote of thanks to the host and hostess of the evening and was seconded by Mr. Ed. Passmore. Mr. Porter then gave three cheers for Mr. Porter, which were given very heartily.

The toast of "Grace Church Scouts" was proposed by Rev. Mr. Potts who expressed his pleasure at the manner in which the scouts were carrying out the scout law and referred to the fine results which are being attained.

Scoutmaster J. E. Pennington was called upon and delivered an address of welcome which was hearty and to the point. The toast to "The King" was proposed in an able manner by Scoutmaster Guenther and honored by the banqueters.

"Our Country" was toasted by Scoutmaster Guenther and responded to by Scoutmaster Woolams, both of whom dwelt upon the greatness and resources of Canada in a pleasing and patriotic manner.

Scoutmaster Hutton toasted the "Scout Movement" in a brief and thorough manner, and the response by Scout F. Riley was an extremely clever and comprehensive oration.

THE ARREST OF A C.P.R. OFFICIAL

Latest Details Regarding the Matter—Settlement is Hoped For.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—Mr. S. Almas, the agent of the C. P. R. in Vienna whose arrest on a technical charge of encouraging the emigration of Austrians liable to military service, has roused the protest of both the British and American ambassadors, has been responsible more than any man for the growth of trade between Austria and Canada for the remarkable expansion of Canadian interests in Europe.

A Hungarian by birth, he emigrated to the United States in 1884 where he had a successful business career and became an American citizen.

Coming back to Europe he entered the service of the Austrian government as an expert adviser on the methods of improving Austrian exports to North America. He persuaded the Austrian government to get together an exhibit of Austrian goods and hire a car from the C.P.R. in which he travelled through Canada.

One of the pleasantest events in the history of Grace Church Scouts transpired on Thursday night, the 16th, when the parents of the boys were entertained at a banquet by the members of this troop.

The headquarters presented a bright appearance gaily decorated in true patriotic style with flags and bunting which set off the well laden tables to the best advantage.

After the banquet at which the needs of the parents and scouts were so well cared for by the Misses Roberts, Bartle and Bonney, toasts and speeches were in order and under the able chairmanship of Mr. Myring, they were delivered in a happy vein.

The chairman's helpful opening remarks, Scoutmaster J. E. Pennington was called upon and delivered an address of welcome which was hearty and to the point.

BIG LEAGUE TO COACH THE LEAFS

Will Teach Youngsters the Sliding Art - Leafs to Train at Marlin Springs.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—President McCaffery returned home from New York last night, and announced that the Leafs will train at Marlin Springs, Texas, next spring. This is the training camp of the New York Giants, and the Leafs will play games with the McGrawites daily. The team will report in Marlin on March 16.

A well-known big league player will be signed up within the next few days to coach the pitchers and catchers and show the youngsters how to slide and run the paths. He will drill the squad morning and afternoon in the sunny south.

President McCaffery stated that there will be several changes on the team, but will not give any names. He will attend the National Association meeting in Columbus, which takes place on Nov. 11, 12 and 13, and it will be here that he will dispose of his surplus. Many of the veterans are labeled for pastures new.

Babe Borton, the first baseman secured from the New York Americans, promises to make good here, according to the president. He throws and hits left-handed, stands 6 feet tall, is shifty on his feet and a sterling fielder.

Leo Callahan, the Leaf outfielder who broke his leg in Rochester some weeks ago, left the hospital in that

YOUNG FORTUNE FOR "BOOBIE" CHAMPS

St. Louis Browns Get as Much as $77 Each for Winning Cellar Crown.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16.—The Browns and Cardinals are willing workers, and labor cheaply, too, when pitted against each other. For toiling probably harder in the eight games of the booby series than they have all season, braving the condemnation of the opposing team and the public, too, each set of players split less than what Larry McLean, the former Cardinal, got for his bit of the world series sports. The players of each club received less than $1,700 to divide any way they desired.

Each Brown received $77.22. The pot was split 24 ways, although some players received more than others. Crossin, Taylor, Wares, Bissland and Sloan, recruits who joined the club after September 1, each came in for a half share.

The Browns gave a share to George Stovall, former manager, and a share to Manager Rickey, although Rickey had told the players that he did not want the money, because he believed he had not been with the club long enough. Dr. Martin Pike Lawler, the club's trainer, and Hiram Julius Mason, the club's secretary, each came in for a share.

AN ARMED GUARD AT FOOTBALL PRACTICE
EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 17.—It is a probability a new chapter was written in football history at M. A. C. when the Aggie secret practice was protected from observation by an armed outpost of soldiers in full uniform.

Two of the crack M. A. C. cadet companies were selected for the outpost work, which was very strict. Only those having signed passes from Coach Macklin, countersigned by Col. Mueller, were allowed on the field, and none but the managers and newspaper men were granted these.

The Aggies are out for blood this fall and are leaving no stone unturned. Since the athletic field has no side wall or fence surrounding it, it was thought best by the authorities to take the protection above mentioned in order to obtain complete secrecy.

GREAT RECEPTION
LONDON, Oct. 16.—The Oil Tank Steamer Narragansett, which "arrived with the milk in the morning," on the scene of the Volturno disaster and by scattering tons of oil on the raging sea helped so much in the rescue work was given a great reception on her arrival in the Thames at noon to-day. A band on board a tug met her down the river and played her to her berth to the strains of the "Conquering hero" and a succession of national airs.

ENGLAND VS. STATES
WILMINGTON, Oct. 16.—To-day at the golf tournament Miss Dodd, British champion beat Mrs. Vanderbeck 5 up and 3 to play. Miss Curtis, Boston, former national champion beat Miss Harrison, Irish champion, 3 up and 2 to play.

Tomorrow Miss Hollins will play Miss Curtis in one of the semi-final matches, while Miss Dodd and Miss Ravenscroft are fighting it out in the other semi-final to see which shall represent England in the final struggle for the American championship.

A WAITING ATTITUDE
LONDON, Oct. 16.—The British Government has adopted a waiting attitude in regard to the Mexican situation. It considers the matter thus far as an entirely internal affair of Mexico, and does not contemplate any action, although it is watching events closely.

Lyons Says:

I know we can't get them all, but when I see what prices other Tailors and Clothiers charge, and the make of their Clothes, I begin to wonder why we don't have every man in Brantford for a customer. Come in and get started to-morrow.

TIGERS MAY LOSE WILSON AND LEWIS

Lewis is Unable to Play for Business Reasons—Stuart to Replace Wilson.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—Gloom was thrown into the Tiger camp yesterday afternoon when Jack Lewis, the former McGill outside type pitcher, announced that Saturday would see his last game. Lewis was counted on to strengthen the outside position, which is weak, but he says that the Canadian Westinghouse notified him it did not wish him to lose time practicing. Craig may not play Saturday, but he was out this afternoon. He is in good condition and will most likely be used for half the game. Wilson has not been out this week. He says he is through and Stuart will take his place against Montreal on Saturday.

RALPH ROSE IS DEAD

CHAMPION EIGHT YEARS
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Ralph Rose, the giant shot putter, died here to-day of typhoid fever. Rose was a big, florid, full-blooded man of the type typhoid finds rich soil. From the first his battle against the disease was not encouraging to his physicians.

Ralph Rose was born in Tealdsburg, Cal., graduated from the high school there, and for a time attended the University of Michigan. He returned to California, studied law and was admitted to the bar. For eight years Rose was the champion weight man in amateur athletics. He was 29 years old.

WILL BRING TWO MEN FOR EACH POSITION

Ottawa Management Taking No Chances on Game at Toronto To-morrow.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Father Stanton decided yesterday to take no fewer than 28 men to Toronto for Saturday's game against the Argonauts. He will thus have a regular and an understudy for each of the fourteen positions on the Ottawa team for the game against the "Big Four" champions. Ottawa leaves for Toronto to-morrow and will be accompanied by about a hundred supporters.

The announcement that President Ben Simpson had named two western men, Hugh Murray and Frank Robbins, to handle the game caused an expression of disappointment in the camp of the local club, as they think the Big Four President ought to have selected at least one easterner, but they will make no kick.

The team who will face the Argonauts are as follows: Quilly, flying wing; General Backer and McCann, halves; Snelling, quarter; Emerson, Holly and Sullivan, scrum; Vaughan and Black, inside wings; Elliott and Megueghlin, middle wings; Fisher and Cassels, outside wings.

Substitutes—Killan, Gilligan, O'Leary, Kulin, Tubman, Holden, Cummings, Willis, Kennedy, Johnstone, McCann, Disney, Ryan and McE'ligott.

Ryan Quilly and Elliott have been unfortunate and all three are battered up, but their injuries will not keep them out of the game. The team held its final practice yesterday afternoon, when "King" Clancy was on hand to assist Father Stanton with the big squad.

WILL PLAY FOR NATIONAL HONORS

Women's Golf Championship To be Decided To-Day at Wilmington.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 17.—America and England will meet in the final match for the national women's golf championship, to be played on the links of the Wilmington Country Club on Saturday.

In the semi-final matches to-day Miss Muriel Dodd, British and Canadian champion, will play Miss Gladys Ravenscroft, who held the British title last year, while the other survivors of the third round, which was played yesterday, are Miss Marion Hollins of New York, Metropolitan champion, and Miss Harriet Curtis of Boston, a former national champion.

Miss Dodd defeated Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck in the third round, 5 up and 3 to play, after she Philadelphia had held her own for the first nine holes. Miss Ravenscroft was successful in her match with Miss Fanny C. Osgood of Boston, 3 up and 2 to play, although the lead changed frequently during the early stages of the match, and both were on equal terms at the thirteenth hole.

Miss Hollins won from Mrs. E. H. Fitter of Philadelphia, 2 up, in the most closely contested match of the day. Miss Curtis won the first two holes in her match with the Irish champion, Miss Mabel Harrison, and retained the lead throughout the match, winning by 4 up and 3 to play. A man never makes a bid for notoriety when he does his duty.

Investigation Will Prove That We Give the Most for the Money in Men's Clothing

Sixty years of this finding out process have brought us the largest Clothing business in the city, and each year our leadership becomes more pronounced.

Now it will be perfectly clear to any man who gives the matter the least thought that such remarkable success could result only from remarkable inducements.

We've had to give more for the money and we do. We sell you clothing made in our factory, with but one cost added to the cost of making.

In any other store you have to pay two profits—the maker's and the retailer's.

This is why the same grade of merchandise costs in other stores 25 p.c. to 33 1-3 p.c. more than our prices.

But even this great saving in price wouldn't account for the wonderful growth of our business if our clothing failed to reach the highest standards of style and quality.

Investigation has proved these facts to many men and always to their advantage.

Investigation will prove them to you.

Why not investigate at once?

Football

The pride of the Paris High School and a number of enthusiastic supporters, came here yesterday to contest a series of 13 events with the athletes of the B. C. I. at Agricultural Park. All the events were keenly contested and from 2 o'clock until the whistles sounded for 6 o'clock, the boys struggled for the honors. The B. C. I. boys must take off their hats to the Paris boys as the final score gave them 41 points to Brantford's 34, and they won out in straight sportsmanlike style. The local boys lost in the same style and made a showing of which they may be proud, capturing seven firsts, five seconds and three thirds, while the Paris boys secured six firsts, seven seconds and nine thirds.

R. H. Patten of the B. C. I., who on Field Day won the senior championship for the school again showed himself the best athlete on the field, winning 16 points. Moyle of Paris, came second, with 11 points and Wentworth, also of Paris came third with 10 points. In some of the events very good marks were made.

NEW YORK'S FIGHTING PREIST

He is Not a Prize Fighter, But is Not Afraid of the Best in the Ring.

New York Press.

The man who has had more fights, harder fights, and has "kicked more persons in the last six years than any other man in New York," is not a prize-fighter, or a gangster, or even a policeman, but a priest of the Catholic Church. He is the Rev. Phillip J. McGrath of St. Peter's Union Mission for Seamen on West street, the down-town North River waterfront.

Father McGrath does not fight because he likes it, but because he and his water-front people are not the kind that can be persuaded to be good. "As long as they know that I am master here they will be good, and then being good will become a habit with them," is the way Father McGrath explained it to the reporter.

Father McGrath came to West street from a rural parish. But he was young, carried his 200 pounds easily, and had learned to fight as a boy in the East Side "Gas House District." The priest's story of his first fight shows why he turned from meekness to militancy. He had been about three months in the parish, and was returning late one night from a visit to a sick woman when he saw across the street "a lad of mine" in a doorway with a sailor. To quote Father McGrath as reported by his interviewer:

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"What do you want to know for? Go to—," was the rejoinder.

"I'm Irish, you know. I had been several years since I had been told to travel in that direction. So right there was where I lost my timidity. All the prowess I had had in the days when I had roughed it with the boys in the Gas House District came back to me. I gave that fellow a left hook on the jaw and down he went. Then his pal, who had been on the lookout, came over to help him, and I used my walking-stick on that pal with telling effect. Somebody saw a priest fighting with the two men and ran for the police. But by the time the police got there the fight was over. Those two men, who were brothers went very quietly to the station house in Charles street, and they were sent up the river.

"It seems that fight was the turning point of my life, and also of the lives of many people along this waterfront. From that time on there has seldom been a week that I have not been in a mix-up of some kind. But every time I had a fight I felt I had removed some influence from this locality."

Father McGrath doesn't tell of all his fights. "On one of the few that the Press representative heard of from his lips, this account of a battle against a saloon gang is most interesting:

"My fight against 'greatest odds' was in a saloon not many blocks from here, in West street. I was walking out one night with a young man of the neighborhood. There are several young men in this neighborhood who have come to the conclusion that some night I am going to go up against a gang of men who will be more than a match for me. So they have constituted themselves my guardians. If they have an idea that I am on my way to tackle some particularly tough proposition they come along, whether I say so or not. They are good boys and they can fight if they have to. But I generally try to do all the fighting myself.

"Well, as I was saying, one of these young men and myself were walking along West street. As we reached this saloon—certainly not, we were going past it—we heard an 'up' and men shouting: 'Give it to him—' 'Let him have another!' I looked under the curtain and saw the room crowded with struggling men. I gave the young man my police whistle and told him to make himself heard. He did. While my young friend was giving the alarm I pounded on the door. A man opened it part of the way and when he saw me he leered: 'Git away from here. Yer can't git in here. Before the lad could close the door I had pushed him aside and was in the saloon. There were about sixty of the lads and they had one lad down on the floor, unconscious, and they were kicking and stamping on him. He was terribly cut and he died late. He could have been saved, but at the hospital he was merely bandaged up and then sent away. The lads had broken heavy beer-glasses and had used the handles with the jagged pieces attached as weapons.

"I started to make my way to the unconscious lad's side, but his assailants turned on me. I backed up against the wall and started in with my night-stick. We had quite a merry time cracking heads until two policemen came. When they entered the door one of them saw me and called, 'Keep it up, Father; we'll reach you in a minute.' 'Better clean this place out,' I replied. Well, all four of us got to work in earnest and I'll bet you never saw so many men go through so small a door in so short a time in your life. We had a merry time in court the next morning too. The population of 'the Island' was materially increased by that episode."

Much of Father McGrath's work is of course, accomplished without fighting, and he talks of the amateur concerts at the mission, of working with the courts, of watching the recreation pier, of sending girls home. But the fight seems to be a necessary part of this priest's labors. As he explains it in our final quotation from his story:

"I have so many fights because I go out into the streets to look after sailors, who, like all other children need to be looked after. In looking for my charges I come across conditions that must be remedied. I remedy them. I have never been whipped in a fight since it became necessary for me to assume the role of militant churchman," as you term it, and I believe that this is because I have always been fighting for the right.

"Because I am master in this neighborhood my people respect me and trust me and I am able to do good. Why, every year I send home to the wives and mothers of sailors at least $12,000. Hardly a day passes that I do not receive a letter from abroad from a mother or a wife asking me to find the missing sailor laddie. Often I do. The young boys in this neighborhood are growing into better men, I believe, because the church takes an interest in them. The clean-living church is teaching them in having its effect. The tone of this community is being elevated, and in a few years it will give the police less trouble than any other section of New York. You may call me the 'fighting priest' or whatever else you like. I fight because fighting is the one thing necessary here just now. When fighting is no longer necessary I will do no more fighting."

Greater than Panama's Bridge of Water

The Panama Canal is the logical outcome of the trend of modern commerce—it is monumental evidence of the present-day need for shortening distance—for lessening time and for reducing cost of distribution between maker and consumer.

In point of distance, the Panama will bring the Pacific nearer to the Atlantic by 1,000 miles. In point of time, the sea voyage between Halifax and Vancouver will be shortened by 24 days. In point of cost, the canal will very materially lessen the expense of carrying freight between these places. But there is a stronger factor than even the Panama in shortening distances, lessening cost and saving time between manufacturer and user.

It is Advertising—

It is the quickest—
It is the most direct—
And it is the cheapest— means of communication between the maker and user of goods.

For instance, Advertising enabled a manufacturer in Nova Scotia to carry a demand for his product from his factory to the Pacific Coast

— in a few days
— at an insignificant cost compared with slower and more laborious selling methods.

In one week, thousands learned of his product where it would have taken years for the news to get around without advertising.

To the Manufacturers of Canada:

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Laidlaw Building, Toronto.

You will be alert to take advantage of the Panama route for the physical transportation of your goods. Have you considered how quickly, how far, and at what small cost the Advertising Trade Route will carry demand for those goods?

We Have Plenty of Coal Have You?

On Barton's Reef

By GEORGE ETHELBERT WALSH

Copyright, 1908, by George E. Walsh

A DEAD animal ain't generally worth more'n what his pelt will bring in the open market, minus the fees an' commissions of them rascally agents who come down here to swap trade with us an' get the lion's share, an' the jack-ass, too—me an' the rest of the hunters down here bein' mostly the jack-asses—but a live animal is an ornamental commodity that has what Captain Kennelly calls "possibilities." I'm meanin' by that that an old diamond back rattler's skin an' teeth an' rattles ain't worth much more'n a $5 down here, but a live rattler shipped up north in a cage may bring $25, an' again, it may be knocked down for an even hundred.

So Captain Kennelly ain't never been in the killin' business. An' I was sprung up by Captain Kennelly! "Live an' let live," that's been our motto, an' we waxed fat—the captain weighs 200, an' I ain't far behind an' weighin' 'nuf millionaires exactly, but middlin' 'nuf millionaires, too, but there is room for a difference of opinion.

We'd been up the Caloosahatchie one winter tryin' to bag snakes, birds, an' other creepin', crawlin' an' flyin' critters when we got wind of a mighty big, sassy mountain lion roamin' 'round 'n' near Wadin' Landin'. The captain decided at once that we'd bag the critter. Mountain lions was bringin' pretty handsome prices then—the Florida variety bein' a little underpriced for they ain't no bigger'n a good size dog.

The captain an' I sailed up the Caloosahatchie an' went campin' on that big fellow's trail, an' before a fortnight we had him clip an' clean aboard the Marthy Ann, tied to an' sailin' 'nuf a-roarin' in a box on deck as though he'd like to eat us alive. We was mighty tickled at our prize, an' we figured on a couple of hundred apiece when we landed him north.

The Marthy Ann warn't much of a sailboat, but she was a tubberin' old craft that did duty for us for well nigh a dozen years. When we set sail down the Caloosahatchie the captain says:

"Steve, can't you take the Marthy Ann to Charlotte Harbor alone? You can hand the critter over to the railroad people there an' get a receipt for him. I want to get off at Fort Myers, an' run up a spell to see Cousin Obadiah. He's real sick, they say."

I warn't goin' to stand in the way of the captain's seein' his sick cousin, so I answered with a fubberin' old craft that did duty for us for well nigh a dozen years. When we set sail down the Caloosahatchie the captain says:

"You think you can manage it alone all right, Steve?"

"I'll land this old patriarch in Charlotte Harbor before night or I'll drown him in the gulf tryin' it," I answered promptly.

I didn't know that I was makin' a pretty sure guess of what I'd be doin' before sundown. I just hove off from the dock an' turned the Marthy Ann's nose toward the gulf. I ain't much of a deep water sailor, but I know the coast up to Charlotte Harbor to'rably well an' I didn't have no misgivin's.

That lion was mighty quiet-like at first, but when we got away from the land an' he began to sniff the salt air of the gulf he sort of got uneasy. He was gettin' out of his element, an' he felt sort of homesick. Maybe it was seasickness. I dunno which. Anyhow, he roared an' whined an' scratched to beat the band. He jest kept me company with his noise, an' I didn't have no time to get lonesome. Once or twice he got so scratchy that I took a look at his cage to see if 'twas all right.

Barton's reef is jest ten miles sou'-west of Charlotte Harbor—a nasty little, treacherous shoal that sticks out of the water at low tide an' keeps out an' sight at flood. "Tain't charred, an' sometimes a ship trips up on it an' jest natchurally rips herself to pieces tryin' to get off ag'in."

I don't know what made me forget Barton's reef, for I'd been round it a dozen times, an' come to think of it now, I'd been nigh wrecked on it once or twice. I ain't got no excuse to make except that lion must have made me forgetful by his sverlastin' roarin'.

First thing I knowed a puff of wind keeled the Marthy Ann over, an' before I could fetch her up ag'in we struck somethin'. It was only sand an' mud, but the keel struck there, an' the next wind slambanged the old lubberin' craft clean over on her side. I wasn't lookin' for the shock an' pitched head-foremost through the air an' landed 'bout twenty feet away.

When I went down into the water I expected to land bottom somewhere less than a mile or two, but the sudden way in which I stopped showed me that I was on Barton's reef. I was standin' on my head in 'bout a foot of water. There was some mud, an' that made sticky standin', but when I finally got my head out of it, an' the water cleaned out of udder an' mouth, the Marthy Ann had drifted away in deep water.

I ran after her, but she was holdin' her own so tantalizin'-like that I couldn't gain an' inch. I swam round for some minutes, an' then to save my life I turned back to the reef. I could see the bare back of the reef jettin' above the gulf 'nuf more'n ten yards away. I ain't much of a swimmer, but I made double quick time to that reef.

I hadn't thought much 'bout that lion all this time, so excited was I over the loss of the Marthy Ann, but now I jest

THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

Driven From the System by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The sufferer from rheumatism who has not gone about curing himself in the right way must expect a return of the torture with every change to cold or damp weather. It is not the change in the weather that causes the rheumatism, but it does start the aches and pains. Rheumatism is a deep-seated disorder of the blood. You cannot possibly cure it with outward applications or hot fomentations as so many people in their ignorance of the real cause of the trouble try to do.

Rheumatism can only be driven out of the system by driving out the poisons and in the blood. This can only be done by making the blood supply rich, red and pure. It is in this way that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism, even after other remedies have failed. These Pills make rich red blood; they go right to the root of the trouble, and the pains and aches are driven from the system and will not return if the blood supply is kept pure. That's the whole secret of curing rheumatism, and if you are a sufferer, begin to cure yourself to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Among the many sufferers from rheumatism who have been cured by this medicine is Miss Mary E. Kelly, South Dummer, Ont. Miss Kelly says: "Some time ago I had a very bad attack of rheumatism. At times I would be confined to bed for a couple of days and would seem almost paralyzed, with the intense pain in my back and legs. At such times I could not walk, and my joints were stiff and swollen. I consulted different doctors and took their medicine, but did not get more than temporary relief. At this time, a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a supply. After taking a few boxes I found they were greatly helping me, and I continued their use until the trouble completely disappeared. I can strongly recommend this medicine to others who suffer as I did from rheumatism and tortures of rheumatism."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

about three feet above it, I was to'rably comfortable, an' I addressed myself to the marooned critter ag'in:

"Now you kin have the reef an' all that goes with it, I'm off for the Florida coast, an' I ain't comin' back. Anythin' your better'n bein' drowned on the reef or bein' chewed up by a cowardly lion."

I guess my words sort of startled him, for he growled an' whined an' seemed anxious to accompany me. He was sufferin' from my desertin' him. At any rate he crept down on the reef, his tail in the water an' his head might close to the other edge of the reef, an' then I saw him spring an' shoot through the air just like a skyrocket.

There was a crash an' a disturbin' confusion of the gulf. I saw stars an' sharks an' numerous other unpleasant things. When I got a grip on the float in 'box ag'in I was half-drowned, an' that old lion was hangin' for dear life on the other side of it. He was 'bout as frightened as I was. His paws was within feet of my head, an' I could feel his breath fannin' my cheeks, but he warn't for fightin' any more.

We hadn't improved our positions much, for that wabby old craft warn't built for two. Both of us couldn't keep our balance at once. When the lion was I was down, an' when I bobbed up above the gulf his head went under. We went seawarin' like this for some time, neither one able to catch his breath.

Then it occurred to that tiral critter that I was tryin' to duck him, an' he began to hit me with a snappin' an' snarlin' 'nuf to give one the shakes. After pawin' some of the hide-off my hand he got more brave an' tried to climb over on my side. That was his ondoin', for the box tripped clean over an' landed both of us in the water. The lion started away, an' we had to make a swim for it.

I got there first, for I had begun to scent sharks. I diveded 'nuf worse'n all the lions in Florida. I jest yelled an' jumped up on the box an' tried to hold my feet in the air. I kicked an' splashed to frighten the lion away, but he was game. He crept on like a paddle wheel, churnin' the water into a terrible foam.

He struck the box ag'in with a bang, an' over we went once more, turnin' a clean somersault in the water. I went down pretty nigh to the bottom of the gulf an' then bumped up ag'in the box, so hard that I had a headache for a week after.

The lion was there ahead of me, an' he took a turn at fightin' me off. I saw he was gettin' 'nuf to the game. The box was a good boat for us, but too small for two. When my father had to keep ag'in, an' as possession is half the law the big yellow one was goin' to hold on to his advantage. I couldn't get a hold of the box without gettin' a swipe that ripped up a yard of human hide.

I saw somethin' in the water a little way ahead that made matters worse. It was a shark comin' to see what all the disturbance was 'bout. He was sailin' along like a revenoo cutter after harbor thieves. I knowed then 'twas a question of shark or lion.

As I chose the lion 'nuf I could knock him off, the shark might be satisfied with him an' leave us alone for a spell. I jest made for that box an' put up the fight of my life. It was give an' take, an' no quarter for the vanquished.

My, how we spit an' tore an' cuffed each other! It was like a cat an' monkey tied up in a bag. We didn't stand on any rules, but jest fought fit to kill an' never knowed how much we was tearin' each other to pieces.

But I hadn't forgot that shark. I jest kept a weather-eye on him an' tried to twist the box round so he'd come up under the lion an' not on my side. I guess the battle would have gone hard with both of us an' the shark would have a dinner of lion, meat an' human legs if recoco hadn't come in the nick of time.

I heard a voice call over the water in the captain's drawl. "Hello, Steve! What you tryin' to do? Don't kill that lion. Part of him belongs to me."

I jest twisted round 'nuf mighty scared, for I thought I must be a dreamin', an' there was Captain Kennelly in the Marthy Ann, sailin' straight down upon us.

"Good Lord, captain!" I says. "I'm nearly tuckered out."

Then I dropped the box an' swam for the boat. If you'll believe it, that old yellow critter was ahead of me. He jest leaped from the box to the deck of the Marthy Ann an' was ragin' an' roarin' up an' down it when I crawled aboard.

"Steve, this is bad work," said the captain. "I thought I could trust you better'n that. If I hadn't felt snaphoon 'bout you an' come down jest in time to find the Marthy Ann floatin' away on her sides we'd lost our prize an' the boat too."

I didn't have breath for any reply then, but I felt mighty like explodin' an' sayin' somethin' that would hurt the captain's feelings. But I didn't, an' later I forgot all 'bout it in the excitement of capturin' an' oagin' that old lion ag'in—the cause of all the trouble. He seemed to think he owned the Marthy Ann, an' we had a long tussle to convince him of his error.

My, how we spit an' tore an' cuffed each other!

OUR YOUNG FOLKS TALES OF THE RED LOT TEAM

"SCARED TO DEATH AND AFRAID TO RUN!"

WHEN the bus drew up in front of the appointed rendezvous to carry the Red Lot Baseball Team to Colbyville, five miles distant, for its game with the crack aggregation of that village, there were exactly nine of the Red Lot players on hand. It was a Wednesday afternoon and the remaining members of the team had found it impossible to get away in time for the trip.

There was also another boy present—a lad about fourteen years of age dressed in a fashion that doubtless pleased his fond mother exceedingly—but caused him no end of mortification. Most decidedly he was not a member of the Red Lot Team.

His name was Kenneth Blair and he was a new-comer in the neighborhood. He lived in the big stone house with the spacious grounds in the most fashionable section of town and people said that his father was a very rich man.

Now Kenneth's family but just returned from a five-year stay abroad and that, maybe, accounted somewhat for his unusual attire. He wore a frilled blouse, waist and knee collar, full, baggy knickerbockers and the cutest little straw-hat you ever saw. Besides, there were dainty bronze buckles on his neatly-shined shoes that sparkled like gold in the sunlight. So no wonder the boys of the neighborhood considered him more or less of a "sissy." But—well, that would be telling the story before the end.

As the Red Lot Team climbed into the bus, carrying their gloves and bats, and eager for the fray, little Kenneth stood regarding them with hungry eyes. "Bud" Allison, the doughty captain and short-stop of the nine, had just sat down in one of the end seats and was closing the door when Kenneth spoke up.

"Say, Captain," he said, "there's room for one more. Do you mind if I go? I'm willing to pay my way."

Several of the Red Lots snickered. But not "Bud" Allison. As game a player as ever covered short-field and as ready to stand up for his rights and fight when justified, he was never guilty of ridiculing or sneering at another boy, large or small. Indeed, it was this unflinching good-nature and generosity of his that accounted in large measure for his great popularity.

"Bud" surveyed the spick and span kid before him a moment and said:

"Sure not, Kid—climb in," he said. "I'll have one rooster with us anyway. I'm willing to pay my way."

Kenneth needed no second invitation. In just about two shakes of a lamb's tail he was up the steps and into his seat, which happened to be next to "Bud." The door banged and the bus swung off on its five-mile journey.

"Let's see," said the Captain, "your name's Blair, is it, Kenneth Blair?"

"Yes," answered the boy, "and I'd like to know your big brother before you all went to live in Europe. What? He's in school in France now? Well, well—Bob and I were good pals. Ever play baseball, Kid?"

And that started it.

In just one minute Kenneth felt as much at home with the Captain—this crack player on the best team in the whole town—as though he'd known him a long time.

Yes, Kenneth had played baseball but in France the three boys he had to play it with were three other American lads who lived in the same block with him in one of the smaller French towns.

"Good for you, Kid!" laughed "Bud." "I bet you could put an American boy down in—well, down in the Black Hole of Calcutta—and he'd play baseball just so he had a bat and a ball! You come right in with us today and carry our bats—and you

"sub" go in; but "Bud" Allison didn't feel altogether certain that the "sub" would do his best. He was in a quandary.

Suddenly someone plucked him by the sleeve and he heard a small voice exclaim:

"Hey, Captain, let me go in! I can't do any worse than strike out!"

"Bud" looked around, hopeful, and beheld—Kenneth Blair! There he stood, neat and trim in his natty little suit, his buckled shoes and his nifty straw hat.

The captain of the Colbyville snickered.

The spectators, crowding around, let out a hoot of derision.

But "Bud" Allison, to all appearances, hadn't even heard them. He was looking straight at the eyes of the dandified youngster before him—and he thought he saw something in those eyes worth seeing.

"All right, Kid," he rasped out. "It's up to you!"

Bill Courtland, the chunky third-baseman, opened the inning with a smoking single to center that was good for two bases. This seemed to worry the Colbyville pitcher quite a little, for he gave a base-on-balls to "Smoke-Ball" Thompson, a crack pitcher but a notoriously weak hitter, as his position of last on the batting list testified.

Then it was Kenneth's turn to bat! "Hoo-ee! Hoo-ee! Wow!" shouted the crowd. "Look who's here! Look what the cats dragged in! Say, Flossy, does your Mamma know you're out of your nursery?"

But "Bud" Allison was on the job. As Kenneth passed him, on his way to the plate, "Bud" put one arm over his shoulder and walked along with him.

"Hold your nerve, Kid!" he said in a low, fierce tone. "They haven't got your goat—and they can't get it either! Listen! There's a man on first and another on second—you try and bunt that ball! That will scatter the crowd and the runners up—that infield won't be looking for it! Bunt! D'you understand—BUNT!"

Kenneth nodded slightly, but said never a word.

Bravely, amid the taunts and jeers from the side-lines, he marched up to the plate, his bat clutched desperately in his hands and a grim, scared look upon his face.

"Hey, Mike!" called out the Colbyville pitcher to his catcher, "who's little girl is this? Say—wouldn't it be a shame to dirty up his pretty collar?"

And with that he suddenly hurled the ball—almost straight at Kenneth. It seemed, for he had to jump aside mighty quickly to keep from being hit on the head.

Kenneth's face blanched as his knees trembled. There was no doubt about it, the Colbyville pitcher was trying to scare him away from the plate!

"Ball one!" called the Umpire.

The pitcher wound up and sent a daisy right over the heart of the plate. Kenneth, remembering "Bud's" instructions, "choked" his bat and caught the ball on the side of it.

But, alas, it rolled foul.

"Strike one," the Umpire called.

"Ah! So that's your game is it, Flossy!" cried the pitcher.

Then, turning, he signalled to his infield to "close in"—that they might better handle a bunt. And the infield—every last boy of them joshing the poor blazer and telling him what a mother's darling he was—closed in, "way in, much farther than they should have."

Kenneth clutched his bat like a drowning man holds to a straw, closed his eyes and took one wild, desperate swing. All recollection of "Bud's" instructions to bunt had flown from his mind.

"Zing! Right on the nose, the bat caught the ball and sent it hurtling over the heads of the 'closed-in' infield. It landed just a little back of the short-stop's regular position—and if that player had been there it would have been an easy 'out.'

But as it was—it wasn't! Like a flash, "Bill" Courtland had scored from second-base!

The Colbyville left-fielder came in on the run, scooped up the ball and managed to hold "Smoke-Ball" on third—indeed, he almost got him sliding into the base.

Then he stopped, ball in hand, and his mouth flew wide open in amazement.

There, not ten feet from the home-plate, stood Kenneth, stick-swinging, bat in hand, looking straight at the eyes of the dandified youngster before him—and he thought he saw something in those eyes worth seeing.

"All right, Kid," he rasped out. "It's up to you!"

Bill Courtland, the chunky third-baseman, opened the inning with a smoking single to center that was good for two bases. This seemed to worry the Colbyville pitcher quite a little, for he gave a base-on-balls to "Smoke-Ball" Thompson, a crack pitcher but a notoriously weak hitter, as his position of last on the batting list testified.

Then it was Kenneth's turn to bat! "Hoo-ee! Hoo-ee! Wow!" shouted the crowd. "Look who's here! Look what the cats dragged in! Say, Flossy, does your Mamma know you're out of your nursery?"

But "Bud" Allison was on the job. As Kenneth passed him, on his way to the plate, "Bud" put one arm over his shoulder and walked along with him.

"Hold your nerve, Kid!" he said in a low, fierce tone. "They haven't got your goat—and they can't get it either! Listen! There's a man on first and another on second—you try and bunt that ball! That will scatter the crowd and the runners up—that infield won't be looking for it! Bunt! D'you understand—BUNT!"

Kenneth nodded slightly, but said never a word.

Bravely, amid the taunts and jeers from the side-lines, he marched up to the plate, his bat clutched desperately in his hands and a grim, scared look upon his face.

"Hey, Mike!" called out the Colbyville pitcher to his catcher, "who's little girl is this? Say—wouldn't it be a shame to dirty up his pretty collar?"

And with that he suddenly hurled the ball—almost straight at Kenneth. It seemed, for he had to jump aside mighty quickly to keep from being hit on the head.

Kenneth's face blanched as his knees trembled. There was no doubt about it, the Colbyville pitcher was trying to scare him away from the plate!

"Ball one!" called the Umpire.

The pitcher wound up and sent a daisy right over the heart of the plate. Kenneth, remembering "Bud's" instructions, "choked" his bat and caught the ball on the side of it.

But, alas, it rolled foul.

"Strike one," the Umpire called.

Bobby's Reasoning

PAPA says that I'm a regular little interrogation sign.

Says I bover so with questions he can hardly read a line.

Huh! I'd like to know how papa found out all the things he knows.

If he didn't ask folks questions, how'd he learn 'em do you s'pose?

hadn't even started for First-base!

As the Colbyville captain, grumpy and sore, phrased it afterwards: "There that Flossy-boy stood scared to death and afraid to run!"

The whole Red Lot Team was shouting at Kenneth to cut out for First. But—well, when he did recover his self-possession, the ball had beaten him there by yards!

After that, there was nothing to the game. The unusual incident seemed to put the whole Colbyville Team up in the air. Kenneth's "out," of course, brought the head of the batting-list up again. And they pointed out four more runs before the side was retired.

And, you may be sure, with that last "Smoke-Ball" Thompson attended to the enemy in their half—indeed, they went out in one, two, three order.

Of course, Kenneth's single was a rank piece of luck, a "scratch hit" of the worst sort. But—it turned the trick. And isn't that, after all, all that's required?

Moreover, it just goes to show what an uncertain thing this game of baseball really is and what a big figure the element of luck often puts in it.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES FOR THE LITTLEST ONES

THE BOY WHO DIDN'T BREAK OPEN HIS BANK

LITTLE Dorothy squirmed and twisted and wriggled and stamped one small foot on the floor.

"Dorothy!" sharply exclaimed Mamma. "Stop that instant! I simply can't imbiton your frock if you people in the neighborhood to send him on errands. Then, somehow, he became less enthusiastic about it.

And if the truth be told, he was sorely tempted to break open that bank and buy cookies and 'all-day-suckers.'

"All of a sudden, Uncle Will remembered that in a few weeks he would have to write to Papa's friend and tell him how much he saved. So—well, then, he realized how ashamed he would be to have to write that he had saved but a very, very little bit.

My, how he did work those next few weeks, running errands, selling papers, cleaning the snow off sidewalks and doing every thing he could think of to earn money.

"And, would you believe it, at the appointed time, he had saved a little over five dollars. Think of it! Five times as much as the gentleman had given him! So, proud as a peacock, he wrote and told him."

"What do you think happened? Why, Uncle Will received a nice, jolly letter from Papa's friend telling him how proud he was of him and—oh, how proud he was of him!

"This, in round numbers, my boy, he for to give him one, much as he would have liked to.

"One evening, an old friend of Papa's—and a very rich man—came to dine with us and seemed to take a great fancy to Uncle Will. He soon learned that he was 'just crazy' for a bicycle, and you child, my savings account with which to buy that bicycle. To-morrow I'll send you a brown-china bank—and I want to see how long it will take you to save up enough to buy it."

TOOLS OF THE ESKIMO

W H have so many tools about us which are so perfectly manufactured, so beautiful in design and finish, and so wonderfully fitted for the services for which they were made, that we seldom stop to wonder how we would get along in making any particular thing without such good tools.

It is very interesting to see what tools the Eskimo has made, even if he has never seen those of ours which he seems to have borrowed after in his crude manner. The Eskimo tools shown in the illustrations herewith, were thought of enough interest to be placed upon exhibition in a case in the New National Museum, where many other interesting relics and trinkets of the frozen zone are to be seen.

Probably the most striking carpentry work of the Eskimo is found in the cabinet-work construction of the Eskimo Kayak or skin-boat which is made over a wooden frame. Then the Eskimo has a good deal of digging to do, in making his snow and ice house, and in making holes through very thick ice through which he catches seal and fish. After catching these animals he must cut them or chop them up and prepare them for eating, and in the case of the seals, he uses almost every part of them for some purpose or other.

In tool set "A" we see a pick, the head of which is of bone, while the 15-inch handle is of hard wood. Notice the handy grip-notch in the middle of the handle, underneath. This keeps the front hand from slipping back upon the rear hand, and is quite a novel device. The head of this pick is lashed to the handle by rawhide of walrus, which is put on wet and when dry tightens wonderfully, thus binding the head to the handle very securely. Just below the pick is a stone-headed hammer, with a short bone handle.

These are all drawn in proper position to one another. At the left of this hammer is a small knife, the blade of which is of stone, and the handle of hard wood. As the Eskimo house-lamps and cooking-dishes are of soapstone, the hammer shown, would be very useful in making such dishes by the aid of a stone chisel of very hard stone, such as jade for instance, which is a favorite with the Eskimos.

In set "B" we have an adz, used to hollow out a "dugout" canoe in certain places, or to use as a scraper to get the bark off the outside. Below the adz is a pretty fair copy of our kitchen chopping-knife, which is used to chop up meat in a wooden dish as we make "hash."

The handle of this chopping-knife, which is about the size of those we have, is made of bone, and the blade is of slate, sharpened along the chopping edge.

Under the chopping-knife is one of several kinds of scrapers for getting the hair off of any skins that are to be tanned according to Eskimo fashion.

The blade of this is also of slate, and the long handle with peculiar bent end is of hard wood. As the scraping is done, one hand holds by this bent end while the other guides the knife by the shank near the blade.

Along with these tools there are quite a number of needles, one of which is shown below the scraper. All the needles are made of stone—jade mostly, and are too heavy of course for any fine work, such as we use needles for, but they will do for sewing skins together, or for carrying things through small holes in wood or stone, in the manufacture of hunting-weapons or other implements.

wrote, "is what you have saved since I gave you the start—and, whenever you report to me at the stated times, there'll be a dollar to match every one you've saved. We've got to have that Red Filer, you know!"

"Well, to make a long story short, in eight months your Uncle Will had earned—and saved—twenty-five dollars of his own money. And, too, he had received the same amount from the gentleman—thus making fifty dollars in all. Then, one day, Papa's friend came on another visit and the morning after his arrival he and Uncle Will set off downtown—to buy the Red Filer! That afternoon, they came home with it. It was a beauty and, oh, how proud Uncle Will was of it!

"After that it was not hard for Will to pay off the rest of what he owed on his new bicycle—for he was enjoying the use of it and, besides, he was able to run many more errands on it than before. Bicycles in those days cost a great deal more than they do now. In fact, Uncle Will paid ninety dollars for his and it took him nearly a year longer to pay it all off.

"Now just suppose, Dorothy, that he had given up and cried and broken open that brown-china bank to buy candy and ice cream instead of saving his pennies! Why, he wouldn't have owned a Red Filer at all! And just think how proud you will feel the day you find you have saved enough to buy that beautiful doll!

Would you be glad then that you didn't break open your bank?"

Little Dorothy rubbed her tiny head a moment and then looked up at Mamma and smiled. "Mamma," she asked, "will you let me 'port to you every month and—will you give me dollars like that gentleman did?"

"Sakes alive, Dorothy!" exclaimed Mamma, with a laugh. "It's nearly nine o'clock! Get into bed right away!"

But Mamma did, all the same. And how little Dorothy cuddles and moths eyes that beautiful doll with the big blue eyes and the golden hair—and is so proud of it as Uncle Will was of his bicycle!

So, you see, there are things in the world—things worth having than candy and ice cream!

A TROUBLESOME FAMILY

GRACIOUS me! Priscilla Alden, how did you get such a fright?

I declare it is no use trying to keep children looking right. Just last week I had you meddled and your cheeks all done up new. Now you're black again as ever and your hair's in tangles, too.

And your sisters are no better; look at that bad Mary Jane. What a sight her nice clean dress is where she stayed out in the rain! It would take a dozen people to keep you as you should be. Where you get your careless ways from goodness knows—it's not from me.

And that ragged Dolly Varden, her condition is a shame! I'm afraid her case is hopeless, though, poor thing, she's not to blame. For I left her just a moment, thinking she was safe from harm. And that wretched Fido got her and almost chewed off her arm.

I expect I'll have to leave you and go somewhere for a rest. Or get rid of you entirely—I don't know just what is best. I must certainly do something, if you do not mend your ways. For you're such a dreadful worry that you're shortening my days.

COUNTY COUNCIL CONCLUDES SESSION

Government take up the matter, had been put through. The council passed a resolution that this work be continued by the delegation.

Several Reports.
 The reports from the several committees were read and adopted without change.

Roads and Bridges.
 The roads and bridges reported that on June 28th, the committee on the West town line between Oxford and Burford examined the bridge over Mud Creek and decided it was not necessary to build a new bridge, and therefore authorized its chairman to take the matter up with the chairman of that committee for Oxford and have the bridge repaired.

A bridge on the Oxford town line had been repaired and it was recommended that payment for the work be made.

The committee met at the Landon bridge in reference to diverting the stream but it was decided to take no action.

The committee also met on the Governor's Road opposite Lot 13, first concession Township of Burford in conjunction with the trustees of the village of Princeton and it was decided to put in an Ingot tube. The same has been done but the wing walls and railway have not been completed. Payment was recommended for the work.

On Sept. 19, the committee met on the town line between Onondaga and Ancaster and examined the Uric bridge, and it was decided to reopen the same in conjunction with the bridges committee of Wentworth.

The committee also reported that it had entered into a contract with the city of Brantford for the reconstruction of the road leading to the House of Refuge, and for the construction of a road leading from the House of Refuge road to the Sanitarium.

A number of accounts were recommended paid.

Finance Committee Report
 The committee recommended that the county grant of $100 to the Children's Aid Society be paid over to the society.

The request of Chief Felker of Paris for the reward due for the capture of a horse thief resulted in the committee recommending that the clerk be instructed to prepare a by-law providing for the payment of such rewards, and to submit the same at the next meeting of the council.

It was recommended that the grant of $500 to the Brantford General Hospital be paid, and that $100 be put in the estimates for the 25th Brant Dragoons.

In regard to further payment by the county on account of the Brantford hospital building, it was recommended that this matter be left over until the December session, as they may be able to dispose of the debentures issued for this purpose.

The committee recommended the payment of a number of accounts.

Committee on Printing
 The committee on printing recommended the payment of $65.65 for printing done.

The committee drew attention to the unnecessary ordering of large quantities of forms, and thus putting the county to expense without any benefit. The committee recommended that if this is done, that payment be refused.

The committee on jail supplies reported upon the acceptance of tenders for jail supplies.

Committee on Education.

The committee on education reported that the claim sent in by the board of trustees of the Brantford Collegiate Institute for the period between January 1 and June 30, 1913, amounting to $21,355.69, had been examined.

The committee were of the opinion that the following pupils charged are not residents of the county, therefore the county is not liable for their maintenance:

E. Brigham, 301 West Mill street, 20 days; W. Spencer, 61 days; Errol Wait, St. George, 98 days; G. Cowie, Scotland, 96 days; Louise Horning, Scotland, 96 days; E. Courtnage, Hartford, 103 days. Total number of days, 484.

This deduction would leave the amount due $20,628.28 the Collegiate Institute. It was recommended that the Warden issue his order on the treasurer for the amount.

The building and grounds committee recommended the payment of a number of accounts.

Mr. Belyea's Work Appreciated.
 That the excellent work of Mr. John Belyea, the caretaker of the court house and grounds is duly appreciated by the county councillors is shown by the fact that a resolution expressing appreciation of his work moved by Councillor Jennings and seconded by Councillor Layton, was unanimously approved.

Those present were Warden Kendrick, Councillors Layton, McCann, Davison, Cook, Jennings, Waite, Simpson, Milmine, Purfis.

THE MYSTERY OF A WELSH FARM

Murder Charge Against Servant Reduced to Manslaughter.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The charge of murdering her mistress brought against the girl, Alice Hughes, of Prestatyn, was reduced to one of manslaughter at Rhyl Police Court on Tuesday, and she was committed for trial.

Miss Jane Roberts Humphreys, of Plas Ucha Farm, near Prestatyn, was found dead with finger marks on her throat on Sept. 17. Her servant, the accused, was arrested, and remanded to Walton Prison, Liverpool. At the inquest the coroner's jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes," but after reading the deposition of the Director of Public Prosecutions and instructions for the case to be proceeded with. Six magistrates took their seats on the Rhyl Bench on Tuesday.

Mr. Joseph Lloyd, for the prosecution, said he proposed to put before the Bench the whole of the other evidence against Hughes. Whether he would ask for a further remand, or not depended on whether a letter from Hughes was produced or not. If not, he should introduce secondary evidence. Evidence might be introduced as to the girl's state of mind. It was a question to be finally decided in another court.

In reviewing the conduct of Hughes before and after Miss Humphreys' death, Mr. Lloyd remarked that the girl knew the condition of her mistress at the time she left the house—a statement which Hughes received with a manifestly negative shake of the head.

Mr. Lloyd also commented on the replies of the girl to questions as to her mistress's condition, and also her alleged reluctance to enter the house, adding that while standing at the station waiting for the train to Liverpool she made a voluntary statement to a police constable.

Counsel Objects.
 Mr. Horatio Jones (defending) objected, as there was no evidence that his client had been cautioned before she made the statement.

Mr. Lloyd, continuing, said Hughes on the occasion referred to asked the constable, "How are they at Plas Ucha?" and added, "I would have been dead now only I was the strongest." Mr. Lloyd also called attention to the existence of scratches on Hughes's arm.

Mr. Gantlin (magistrates' clerk) then read the evidence previously given by Constable Nelson and Dr. Batten Williams, upon which Mr. Lloyd subsequently further questioned them.

Nelson confirmed Mr. Lloyd's version of the conversation on the railway station, and Mr. Lloyd said that, and the other point he had mentioned, constituted all the evidence he proposed to produce, and the Bench did not consider it enough he would ask for a remand in order to produce secondary evidence.

Proceeding with his examination of Nelson, Mr. Lloyd elicited the evidence that while on the way to Walton in the train Hughes said to Nelson, "This thing would not have happened if they had not sent for you."

Cross-examined, Nelson admitted that the girl, when charged, appeared vacant, and that she denied having done it. He found no reason to interfere on the first occasion he was called in. It did not occur to him that there was anything wrong between the girl and her mistress. When he last saw the former at 9.30 she seemed flurried.

Replying to Mr. Jones, Nelson said Hughes' statement at the railway station was made in the presence of the wardresses and Constable Wasley. Nobody had lived at Plas Ucha since the tragedy, and he considered her question as to how they were at Plas Ucha was a strange one.

Constable Wasley, replying to Mr. Lloyd, said he heard the conversation at the railway station between Nelson and Hughes. Neither he nor Constable Nelson made the statement now under discussion, nor where they asked to do so.

Constable Nelson, recalled, said he was not asked the question at the inquest. The statement was contained in his evidence sent to the Public Prosecutor.

Mother Becomes Hysterical
 Wasley, again questioned by Mr. Jones, asked Nelson asked him some few days after the inquest whether he recollected Hughes's statement.

"In consequence of a communication did you make this statement to him immediately after the inquest?" asked Mr. Lloyd.

Wasley said he did.

Mrs. Grace Hughes, the girl's mother, was next called, and on seeing her Alice Hughes burst into tears. She said that she received three letters from her daughter from Walton jail. They were in English—the first letters in this language she had ever received from Alice. The first was in possession of her husband, but she had burnt the other two.

She was under the impression that someone else had written the letters and that her daughter had copied them because of religious references at the end.

Mr. Lloyd suggested that the answer should be taken that Mrs. Hughes could not say, Mr. Lloyd said he was obliged to take the course he had done, but if the Bench were not satisfied he would have to call secondary evidence, and show the letter to the Bench. The secondary evidence, would be that of the person who saw the written letter.

"The magistrates have no right to see the letter," interrupted Mr. Gamin.

At this stage Mrs. Hughes became hysterical. Mr. Lloyd intimated that he had concluded his examination and she was taken from the court.

Dr. B. Williams said Miss Humphreys died from shock owing to the fact that a hand was applied to her throat. The grip which caused the marks on the throat did not cause strangulation.

Dr. Eytan Lloyd, medical officer of Rhyl, who carried out a post-mortem examination of the deceased in company with the last witness and Dr. E. R. Evans, said death, in his opinion, was due to heart failure which might have been caused by excitement. There was no evidence to show that the grip which caused the mark on the throat produced strangulation.

In cross-examination Dr. Lloyd said heart failure was the immediate cause of death, due to excitement, and the condition of the brain probably led up to it there being something akin to a convulsive fit. The marks on the throat were only skin deep, and might have been caused by Miss Humphreys.

The magistrate reduced the charge to manslaughter, and committed the accused for trial, bail being fixed at £10.

AUTUMN DAYS.

A deep silence has settled on the wood. Across the rill a grey squirrel is drumming on the grey trunk of a fallen tree. The grey squirrel is gathering nuts for the winter. The young deer has changed its summer coat for one of a more sombre hue—a red brown to match the autumn leaves. Now the leaves are falling, unveiling the forest and opening lanes through which we get glimpses of jumping deer.

This is the time to visit the Algonquin National Park, a delightful spot to enjoy a few days rest, study wild animal life, enjoy autumn in the forests and gather strength for the strenuous life ahead during the winter months.

Good accommodation at the Highland Inn at reasonable rates. The Grand Trunk Agent can tell you how to get there, or write Mr. J. E. O'Son, Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Ont.

An affirmative answer from all the bishops of Canada would mean the recognition of the famous nee decree. The inquiry is ordered by a letter signed by Cardinal Ruini, in which the following questions are asked:

"What was, ten years ago, what is to-day in your diocese the number of Catholics, non-Catholics and non-baptized?"

"What is the average number of mixed marriages, which have been incurred or attempted in the ten years with or without distinction?"

"Have the precautions prescribed been omitted or neglected in how many cases?"

"In other cases, what results have the precautions brought, the such, the education of the children in the Catholic religion, especially?"

"Finally what rites, especially?"
