JOE GENELLE IN DAWSON

Alleged Accomplice of James McMillan

Who Burned Steamers Mona and Glenora in Steamboat Slough.

When the steamer Casca arrived this morning there was among her passengers at least one man who did not come as a tourist and who, on arriving, did not make any inquiries regarding hotel accommodation. The passenger referred to was Joseph Genelle who was brought to Dawson from British Columbia under police escort and immediately on his arrival he was taken to the barracks and placed in jail.

Recollections of the burning of the two steamers, Glenora and Mona, in Steamboat slough across from Klondike City early last winter are still fresh in the minds of the people. It will be remembered that while the steamers were still burning James McMillan who had been employed as watchman on board and who was in the city at the time the fire was discovered, was arrested by the police within a few minutes after he reached the scene of the conflagration. TEMPORARY GOVERNOR

Major Wood's Appointment is Confirmed

Comptroller Lithgow Receives a Wire From Deputy Minister of the Interior.

Comptroller Lithgow yesterday afternoon received a telegram from Deputy Minister of the Interior James A. Smart, confirming the news of the appointment of Major Wood as temporary commissioner during the illness of Governor Ross. Such a step was necessary in order that various territorial enterprises now in progress might not be delayed, particularly the construction of the roads. Major Wood's functions in the gubernatorial chair will be more in the nature of a business capacity than for any legislative purposes. He will sign the checks in the payment of labor bills and various other accounts which arise from time to time and assume other similar responsibilities until such time as the governor either returns to his post or his successor is named.

The wire which Mr. Lithgow received was in reply to one sent the deputy minister in regard to letter of credit necessary for the prosecution of the road work. Credit to the amount of half the entire appropriation for the construction of roads has been placed at the disposal of the territory and the balance will be available as soon as that now on hand has been used up. Concerning the appointment of the acting commissioner the wire said:

"Major Wood has been appointed temporary commissioner. Please see him and consult in matters requiring attention."

It has been reported several times that Mr. Smart would visit the Yukon this summer, but in his wire which was dated yesterday no mention was made of such intention. Major Wood is expected back from up the river tomorrow on the Selkirk.

Gold Bottom Will Celebrate

Gold Bottom and Hunker will celebrate coronation day, Saturday, August 9th. The village will be prettily decorated and sports such as foot racing, jumping, throwing the hammer, tug of war, etc., will be indulged in. There will also be literary exercises. National and patriotic songs with patriotic speeches will be the leading features of the event. Capt. Belcher, Dr. Clendemas, Corporal Ryan, Rev. Geo. Pringle, Malcolm Campbell, G. H. Locke, Wm. Lennox, J. A. Crowe and Messrs. Nichols, Justice and McDonald are the committee of management.

BULLETIN.

Whitehorse, July 31.—The improvement in Governor Ross' condition continues. His articulation is now very distinct. The power and functions of his arm are gradually returning.

WATER FRONT NOTES.

Regular days of departure have been established for the steamer Zealandian on the Fortymile-Eagle run. Two trips a week will be made one only to Fortymile and the other through to Eagle. She will leave for Fortymile on Mondays at 2 p.m., leaving the lower port on Tuesdays at 9 a.m. Thursdays at 10 a.m. is the sailing date for Eagle, leaving there on her return Friday evening at 10 and Fortymile at 10 Saturday morning. She left today on her first trip to Eagle with the following passengers: D. Martin, J. E. Newsbaum, Mrs. Newsbaum, Jennie Wilkins, Mrs. Walker, Jack Lawrence, Mrs. Boardman, Rev. C. Reed, T. F. Morphy.

The Dawson on her last trip to Whitehorse covered the distance in less than three days. She left here 17 hours after the Casca and beat the latter into port at Whitehorse by four hours.

Last Tuesday morning about 1 o'clock the steamer Sybil broke arrived breathless and very much excited and essayed to carry out his bluff by seizing an axe and attempting to chop a hole through the frozen surface of the Yukon. He was brought to jail that night and next morning he confessed to the whole thing; how he had been employed by Joseph Genelle, owner of the steamers who was then in British Columbia, as watchman with the understanding that both steamers were to be burned by him during the winter as the two were insured for, something like $18,000 which was more money than the craft were worth owing to the fact that there was little business for boats of their design on the Yukon. For burning the boats McMillan said he was to receive $1,000. Previous to the fire McMillan had disposed of the bedding, furniture, utensils and provisions aboard the boats, and the police had even heard of his remarks made in Dawson to the effect that there would probably be a fire in Steamboat slough sometime during the winter.

On the strength of McMillan's confession an application for the arrest of Genelle was made to the British Columbia courts. He was arrested and afterwards released on a writ of habeas corpus. Having considerable means he employed counsel and made a bitter fight against being brought to Dawson. However, the fact that he is here shows that his resistance was in vain.

McMillan when arraigned in the territorial court pleaded guilty but has not yet been sentenced. This has been deferred until Genelle could be brought in and tried, McMillan being the principal witness for the prosecution. It is not known when Genelle will be arraigned, but probably within a few days.

Again Remanded

Thomas Dutton, the gentleman of ebony hue who is charged with stealing a gold watch and chain from a hotel in Klondike City, was in court this morning but hearing of his case was again remanded. He will be up for preliminary hearing tomorrow morning.

THE ONLY WAY.

Dawson and the Yukon territory generally have suffered alike from sudden legislative changes. Mining regulations have been made and unmade on short notice upon so many occasions that no room for wonder is left that unrest and uncertainty prevails among the mining population. The same thing is true in respect to local affairs. Orders have been given and reversed, and given again and reversed again, so that it has been impossible to determine from one week's end to another what would be done.

The reason for the existence of such a condition may be easily traced. In both cases the governing power has not been responsible to those affected by the laws.

The mining regulations have, in many cases been the result purely and simply of a ministerial whim, while ordinances have been passed for the government of the town which may be described in much the same manner.

The only way in which these difficulties may be overcome is through absolute withdrawal of federal influence in territorial affairs, and of territorial influence in local matters.

FOREST FIRES.

Frequent reference has been made in the columns of the Nugget to the loss that has accrued to the territory from the carelessness of parties who have occasion to build camp fires in the woods. In this connection our attention has been called by the territorial secretary to a set of rules published by the federal government for the guidance of settlers in Manitoba and the Northwest territories.

Violation of the law respecting the preservation of forests is punishable in both districts mentioned by heavy fines which have had a most salutary effect in reducing the number of forest and prairie fires. The rules referred to are as follows:

- (1) In building a camp fire choose a place that is sheltered from the wind, and clear away any moss or inflammable material surrounding it. (2) Be sure thoroughly to extinguish your camp fire before leaving it. (3) Be careful not to throw away a cigar stub or match on the prairie or in the woods before it is extinguished. (4) Settlers desiring to burn brush and log heaps in clearing their land must do so at proper seasons of the year, and now allow the fire to escape from their premises. (5) All employers of labor should see that their employes whose work is in the open air are furnished with copies of the act respecting prairie and forest fires or other instructions in regard thereto, as such employers are responsible for any violation of the law caused by their servants.

atic effort in the way of protecting our forest resources, which form such an important part of the Yukon's natural wealth. It rests, therefore, with the public generally to observe every caution to prevent fires occurring, for when once started they must simply be permitted to burn themselves out. We are greatly pleased to give publication to the foregoing rules, and trust that the same will be followed by everyone who has occasion to make use of open fires.

A little care in such matters may frequently save untold damage.

The efforts of the city council to secure improved mail facilities during the winter months should be given general support. If the overland road is completed before the close of navigation, as there is every reason for belief will be the case, there will be no interruption of communication during the year. The mail will be brought through without delay and, as the route will be greatly shortened, the cost of transportation will be proportionately reduced. In future the mail service should be as good in winter as it is in summer.

Unimproved property may be found in the heart of Dawson, which has been allowed to remain without sidewalks being constructed around it for 4 years. Other places may be cited on the outskirts of the city where property owners have been compelled under threat of the law to build walks. Why such discrimination?

It is not to be anticipated that any great amount of interest will be manifested in the election until the date upon which it is to occur is announced. In the meantime the "wise ones" are lying low.

Seattle is making the best possible out of Tracy's exploits for advertising purposes.

Tax on Mackay Estate

New York, July 23.—The chancellor of the British exchequer may net a goodly sum, says a World dispatch from London, from the estate of John W. Mackay. In legal circles it is considered a nice point as to whether the British government is or is not entitled to claim the death duty of 8 per cent. on what Mrs. Mackay may inherit under her husband's will since, although not naturalized, she is domiciled in England.

A death duty must be paid on all the testator's investments in English securities, which are said to reach nearly $10,000,000. But Mr. Mackay's friends assert that foreseeing a prospect that his estate might be mulcted by the English treasury because his wife was domiciled there, he assigned to her four years ago the greater part of the fortune he intended to bequeath her, including his English investments, and that the balance of his fortune goes to his son.

Sourdough Returns.

Nat Lyons, a well known sourdough, returned to Dawson this morning on the steamer Casca. He has been absent since last September having spent the intervening time in the eastern states and England. He went to the Buffalo exposition and this spring crossed the water to witness the coronation ceremonies. London was superbly decorated for the occasion and on account of the postponement due to the king's illness, many people lost a great deal on money. Before he left the metropolis the crowds were thinning out and the representatives of nearly all the foreign powers had returned to their homes. Mr. Lyons says that Dawson is quiet but still looks good to him.

A FEW TRACY COMMENTS.

But this degenerate fiend has no quality that mitigates in the slightest degree his murderous character. He cares nothing for human life. Where he has spared the families who have fed him, it was to feed his own vanity. He has affected gallantry and politeness to women and kindness to children merely to attract the more attention. There is nothing about this hardened murderer to awaken sympathy. His heroism is all desperation, his gentlemanly appearance all vanity, and his consideration all a dramatic performance in order to secure position in headlines. —Stockton Independent.

Harry Tracy is a survival from an age long past. He has no place in the civilization of today, and he will probably find before long that he has no place in the world of today. The territory where such as he can find refuge has been greatly contracted within the past few centuries, and it is most unlikely that he will be able to reach an asylum before the power which he defies places its grip upon him. Nevertheless, he has demonstrated that even this practical age has possibilities of adventure unsurpassed by those of medieval times. —Boston Post.

Tracy, the Mexican outlaw, who is giving Seattle officers a merry dance, is evidently losing his nerve. The last time the posse closed in on him he missed his man, though close enough to burn his face with powder. However, he made a successful sneak through the serried lines of hypnotized deputies and faded away in the distance. Maybe, now that he can't shoot straight, they'll nail him next time. —Nebraska State Journal.

The success of Convict Tracy in eluding the Oregon and Washington officers is not such a mystery when we learn that he is a native of Boston and lived for years in that city. After learning to make his way through the narrow and intricate street labyrinths of that place it is merely child's play to dodge pursuers in the northwestern wilderness. —Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

The outlaw Tracy has at least the virtue of generally telling the truth, as it develops that he did about killing Merrill, and the probability is that he also told the truth, substantially, as to the manner of Merrill's death. —Portland Telegram.

The exploits of the murderous outlaw Tracy show that the heroes of adventurous fiction are not, after all, impossible. In intrepidity, fearlessness and fighting qualities he is D'Artagnan, Alhos and Porthos rolled into one. —Sacramento Bee.

Geronimo, the Indian chief, offers to capture bandit Tracy. He might be able to do it, but with Geronimo and Tracy both loose at the same time it would be risky for the rest of the population. —Chicago Record-Herald.

It is an insignificant town, indeed, that does not come forward these days to claim the honor of having entertained Mr. Tracy in jail, or otherwise, at some remote or indefinite time in the past. —Butte Inter-Mountain.

Tracy has been "surrounded," "hemmed in," "definitely located," "in a death trap," "at the mercy of the posse," and several other things, but none of them has feazed him for a minute. —Helena Record.

After Ellen Stone has finished lecturing on "How I Was Captured," Major Pond might arrange with Harry Tracy to take the platform for a series of talks on "How I Wasn't Captured." —Hartford Post.

Seattle parks must be the most romantic and dense places on earth and an ideal spot for the lovers' retreat. The above inference is drawn from the Tracy episode. —Blaine Journal.

It seems that Oregon could not hold Tracy, and Washington can't whip him. It is to be hoped that he will not tackle the balance of the United States. —Florida Times-Union.

Now if the president wants a rapid and hot fighter to tackle the trusts, what's the matter with Hon. Harry Tracy, late of Oregon and adjacent states? —Atlanta Constitution.

"Has the Oregon outlaw confederates?" asks the San Francisco Chronicle. He certainly isn't recognized as a good union man by labor organizations. —Anaconda Standard.

The Washington people may finally have to send the strenuous Mr. Tracy to the United States senate in order to be sure of a little tranquility. —Washington Post.

Life as a bandit will perhaps have lost its charm when the Tracy story can only command a position on the inside pages of the daily newspaper. —Tacoma News.

There are enough people who would have captured Tracy to make a fair-sized army, but the army would be distinctly one of peace. —Tacoma Ledger.

There is no doubt that Merrill is dead; now for Tracy. He has been a very expensive creature during the past month. —Portland Telegram.

The only thing that has succeeded in overtaking Tracy and staying with him for a brief space is darkness. —Helena Record.

Funds for the Miners

Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—President Mitchell will leave for Chicago tomorrow afternoon. He will stay in that city a day and will go direct to Wilkesbarre to resume active management of the strike. The national officers attach a great deal of importance to the resolution reported by the committee appointed by the convention to draw up an expression in regard to the recent mine horrors in which so many men lost their lives. In this resolution attention is called to the fact that in several instances the miners have been back to work in mines before the bodies of their friends had been removed.

This afternoon several large contributions for the strike fund were raised. District No. 15 (Iowa) sent $5,000; the Boilermakers' and Iron Shipbuilders' National $546.

Indianapolis unions met tonight and resolved to assess members at least 1 per cent. per week on their earnings for the anthracite strikes. This will amount to $2,900 per week.

Outbreak Expected

Jackson, Ky., July 22.—James Cockrell, assassinated yesterday from an upper window of the court house, will be buried tomorrow morning. There was no demonstration today when the remains arrived from the Lexington hospital, and the town is quiet tonight, but the general impression is that after the funeral, the friends of Cockrell will assume the aggressive and the Harris faction the defensive.

It is generally known that both sides have their arms stored about the town and are ready to line up at any time. Samuel Jett, uncle of the dead boy, is expected to become the leader, now, of the Cockrell faction. With the exception of Thomas Cockrell, now in jail for the murder of Benjamin Harris, the eldest in the family is McKinley Cockrell, aged 19 and too young to be made a leader in such a contest as is expected.

The funeral tomorrow will take place from the Cockrell farm near Jackson. McKinley Cockrell said tonight that he would leave as soon as the burial of his brother was over, and very many others are leaving the town.

Lieut. Foster, in charge of the New Orleans branch of the United States hydrographic office, reported to Washington that a recent survey of the Gulf of Mexico near the mouth of the Mississippi river, shows only twenty-five fathoms of water, where there was sixty fathoms at the time of the previous survey.

Foraker for Roosevelt Cincinnati, O., July 22.—Senator Foraker, in the course of an interview here today, was asked: "Are you correctly quoted as to the Republican candidate for 1904, namely, that nobody is seriously thought of but President Roosevelt?" "Yes, the statement published is correct and the fact is as there stated. Roosevelt is the only man who is seriously thought of by the great masses of the people. There are a few flickering flames that some ambitious partisans are trying to blow into a blaze, but they cannot make them burn steadily, and they will all go out in due time, extinguished by the fire-damp of American politics."

the country place, heaps of money—and perfect liberty! There anything left to wish Hildreth asked, laying down lawyer's letter. Helen shrugged and bit as she answered: "Why only one could have been a widow?"

"I can't ready to immolate myself. I'm easier made than born," Helen said, catching her hand. "I'll make you my lord, Helen of the castle, and I will promise to do the appearing act whenever you are ready."

"I don't understand. Of course I should hate being a made widow. Widows have to wear caps, and people say such horrid, horrid things of them if they venture to be seen in public. But if only one could be that estate, with all the money or softened to a becoming widow's memory, why, it would be a good thing. Widows, for all their money, have the best lives of the best she could. Scowling at the unknown art to her. She had persisted in the face of the world. Now that the tide had turned, she had begun to ebb. "I had anybody all my money should not mind," she went on. "But there is not a soul. Maybe I might be selfishly glad. If there was a soul nearer than ninth cousin, a wonderful fairy fortune would be in two. I cannot feel that I in the least deserve it. But only think! I can have what frocks I please and money for my poor people instead of pennies."

"Will it spoil you, I wonder?" Hildreth said meditatively. "You know I've always said money was the touchstone. Any poor body can be tempted; there is so little temptation to be anything else."

"I wish I knew," Helen said. "I think souls are like flowers, making earth they grow in too rich—unless it does not kill them outright."

"You are not offensively rich. All this, this great-uncle's legacy loots of a quarter of a million. Spending that will never bother a person of your luxurious capacities," Hildreth said consolingly.

Helen laughed. "And I have existed on less than six hundred a year," she said. "Promise me, Vance, you will never change—the beastly money will make no difference with us. It's bound to make a difference. I'm of daring to ask you now to do with me at L'Ally's!" Hildreth laughed back: "Nothing will go with but Merry's or the Sweldorf. I cannot eat your dinners there. I have not the coin to return you in kind."

"You are horrible!" Helen said. "By way of punishment, I will write myself to dine with you tonight. Not at L'Ally's either—we'll go to that forty cent place where the food is so sinful that it always suggests an appeal to the police. Maybe some of the others will be there."

"All of them. It's near the middle of the week. Pay day is two days ahead for most of the gang," Hildreth answered, with a flickering smile. "Lord, I shall like to see you when they know! You are going to tell them, of course, Helen?"

"You may tell them. I shall not say a word," Helen said, setting her lips together. "I'm beginning to be cowardly," she went on. "Suppose it should turn out that my money costs me my friends—and my happiness?"

"I hardly understand," Hildreth said.

"She raised her hand. "This is my money," she said. "All these five years I have been out in the scurry of life. I have hugged the belief that people liked me for what I was, not for what I might do for them. Lately, since my money has asked for and exploited my stories, there has been so perceptible a warning up in some quarters that has made me a bit cynical. I'm saying to myself, 'Suppose the money draws the sycophants to me, and the fear of seeming sycophants drives away the real ones?' That would be terrible. I hope—oh, I hope—that those I care most will understand, however my way of life changes, I myself shall be just the same."

"I shall believe it," Hildreth said, taking her hand to his lips. "In any case, you must dine with me this evening, and at the forty cent place—it survives so long."

"It does not, you shall dine with me," Helen said gratefully, "and not at the Sweldorf either. It shall be in the country, under my own vine and fig tree."

"The forty cent place did not answer to my prayers," Hildreth said upon the anniversary of Helen's inheriting. He sat opposite her, with a broad damask snowfield between, all the breadth of it gleaming with silver and crystal. Roses lay loosely over it—heavy headed hothouse roses grown upon the place. Helen, a vision in misty white, with pearls at her throat and richer roses at her breast, was all unlike the girl of last year. She had been trimly tailored made, yet very, very threadbare then. Somehow Hildreth found it hard to give her place to the fluffy, flutery creature who now answered her name.

He had been absurdly fond of the money. He had been absurdly fond of the reflected that between them the two had had nothing certain a week. Free lances of the pen, they had been also free companions, sentient, responsive as the wind harp to the winds, yet never by any chance sentimental.

"I suspect it died in answer to my petitions. I did not see how else I was ever to get you down here," Helen said demurely. "Vance, you have treated me very, very badly—only three letters and two snippets of your valuable time when I came to the city. By way of penance you shall now tell me everything about everybody."

"For instance?" Hildreth said inquiringly.

Helen shook her finger at him. "You know," she said. "But by way of setting you off, who has my place at L'Ally's and the offices? Do you know Gumpsey's begged me to work exclusively for my 'discoverers'?"

"Characteristic," Hildreth said. "But as to your place, you don't really think anybody could take it. Marvel has not got done lamenting your loss to literature, and Ransom sighs for your stories of occasion."

"You flatter me," Helen said. "Ransom was always a dear. He read my things by the light of his own kindness. But tell me about the new young women. There must be new young women, who strum a guitar for you to smoke by and know, as I did, not to bother you with a word."

"Oh, there are two or three," Vance said indifferently; then, suddenly rousing: "And one of them's a corker, too—western girl, two years in civilization. If she ever quits hurring her r's, yours truly will surrender at discretion."

"Dear, dear, this is crushing!" Helen said, pretending to hide her face. In reality she studied Hildreth from the ambush of her fingers. "If you love her very much, Vance," she said in muffled tones, "fetch her here for six months. I'll try my best to straighten out the tragic accent."

"Don't know if it's worth while," Hildreth said, drumming on the table. "There's a photo—square jawed fellow, with gimlet eyes—which keeps ward over her den. I've a sneaking suspicion the gimlet eyed is a lion in all our paths."

"Oh, he need not count. I can take care of him," Helen said, smiling wickedly.

Vance got up and went to her side. "No; you can't," he said, "for the very excellent reason that you have got to take care of me. I've been all sorts of a fool, Helen, over this blessed money."

"I knew it all along," Helen said. "How glad I am you have seen light at last!"

reminds me of another whose absurdity is due to the provision of a drop too little, or rather a drop of the wrong sort. A priest who is a total abstainer, was expecting his cousin, a Dublin solicitor, on a visit and, knowing that he did not hold the same views as himself on the drink question, went to the village grocery store and obtained a bottle of port. This was delivered and decanted by his reverence.

At dinner time, he hospitably poured out a glass and said, "There, Cousin Tom, that's the best vintage Ballyporeen affords." The solicitor sipped it critically and then said, "Well, Cousin Cornelius, to my mind it tastes a wee bit too much of the musheruns' (mushrooms). It proved to be catchup.—A Kerry Man in London Spectator.

Honest Poverty.
Is there for honest poverty
Who hangs his head and a' that,
The coward slave, we pass him by,
And daur be puir for a' that,
For a' that and a' that,
Our toils obscure and a' that;
The rank is but a guinea's stamp,
The man's the gowd for a' that.

What though on homely fare we dine,
Wear hodden grey and a' that?
Gie fools their silks and knaves their wine;
A man's a man for a' that,
For a' that and a' that,
Their tinsel show and a' that;
The honest man, though e'er sae poor,
Is king o' men for a' that.

You see you birkie, ca'd a lord,
Wha struts and stares and a' that,
Though hundreds worship at his word,
He's but a cool for a' that.
For a' that and a' that,
His riband star and a' that,
The man of independent mind
He looks and laughs at a' that.

A prince can mak' a belted knight,
A marquis, duke and a' that,
But an honest man's aboon his might
Guid faith he mauna fa' that!
For a' that and a' that,
Their dignities and a' that,
The pith o' sense and pride o' worth
Are higher ranks than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may—
As come it will for a' that,
That sense and worth o'er a' that earth
May bear the gree and a' that,
For a' that and a' that,
It's comin' yet for a' that,
When maun to man the world o'er
Shall brithers be and a' that!

Peacemaker is Shot
New York, July 12.—While attempting to stop a quarrel among several men in the club house at No. 14 West Twenty-seventh street, the headquarters of the Colored Greater New York Democracy of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District, J. H. Smith of No. 15 West Twenty-fourth street, "black lieutenant," was shot in the abdomen. He is in the New York hospital in a critical condition. Smith made an ante-mortem statement to Coroner Scholer in which he said that he did not know the name of the man who shot him, except that he was called "Eph." He said that a number of men started to quarrel at the club house at 3 a.m., and that he attempted to quiet them. One of the men, all of whom were colored, turned on him and began to abuse him for interfering. That man then left the club, returning an hour later. According to Smith, the man laid in wait in the lower hallway. As the colored politician descended the stairs to leave the house he was confronted by the man, who pointed a revolver at him and fired two shots.

Those Checked Trousers

Mrs. Stukely was not perfectly happy in her married life and Mr. Stukely was. That is rather an unusual condition, but it was by no means as bad as it might have been, for the one bar to the perfection of domestic bliss in Mrs. Stukely's case was, from a certain point of view, insignificant—a sort of crumpled rose leaf in her fairy bed, a freckle on the face of smiling fortune, if such poetic smiles may be applied with propriety to a pair of checked trousers.

Stukely had been a bachelor for so long that his friends had almost despaired of him before he met his fate in the person of the lady who now adorns his home, the result of which was that he had become "set" in some of his habits. He had certain ways of doing certain little things, particular methods of—well, winding up the clock, for instance; of folding his napkin and arranging special pieces of bric-a-brac—little exactnesses that were rather praiseworthy than otherwise and attachments to peculiar objects. One of his strongest attachments was that which he had formed for the checked trousers.

It was a wonder that he did not wear them at his wedding. He had a sort of theory that their pattern and hue were especially adapted to a frock coat, but his best man overruled an actual suggestion to that effect and he submitted against his own convictions. Nevertheless he wore them to church on the return from the honeymoon, and after that time they were inevitable every Sunday and on all state occasions not demanding full dress.

It was some time before Mrs. Stukely really noticed them, or rather the monotonous regularity of their appearance, and some little time after that before she spoke about them. She felt a little delicacy on that score. One day, however, she remarked: "You've had those trousers quite a long while, haven't you, my dear?"

Stukely beamed with gratification. "Yes," he replied, glancing at them with a complacent smile, "I've worn those trousers now for nearly five years. You would hardly believe it to look at them, would you? I think they're rather a neat pattern. The check isn't too large and they hang well, too. I believe in avoiding extreme styles in clothes, then a man can get something good and stick to it. Now, this cloth doesn't seem as if it ever would wear out."

"I fancied," said Mrs. Stukely, who disliked checks, "that it did look just a tiny bit worn. Don't you think there is a little threadbare place at the knee?"

"Why, no," replied Stukely, "not a bit of it. They're good for another five years, as far as I can see." He spoke so decidedly that Mrs. Stukely wisely said nothing more at the time. Nevertheless, she made up her mind that the trousers would not last five years longer if she could prevent it in any way.

She hesitated for some time, but the closet door was open and the trousers were hanging in plain sight. It seemed such an easy and simple thing to do. She went to her sewing machine, opened a drawer and took out a little oil can. Then she took down the checked trousers from their hook, spread them out and carefully dropped the oil just above one knee. It made a nice, conspicuous stain, and Mrs. Stukely smiled in a satisfied way and replaced the trousers.

She was so self-satisfied that she did not even blush when Stukely made the sad discovery. He had called her to him and was contemplating the great stain ruefully. "I can't think how it got there," he said, "I am always so careful, and I should think that I would have noticed it when I put them away."

"A stain doesn't always show when it's fresh, you know," said the guilty woman, sweetly. "It's too bad. It's certain that you can't wear them, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," replied Stukely, with a sigh. Then he hauled down the wedding garment, to his wife's profound joy.

About noon the next day a man came to the house and presented a note from Stukely asking his wife to give the bearer the checked trousers. Mrs. Stukely lost no time in getting them for the poor fellow, who looked as if he was in need of something to eat as well as to wear. She asked him, in her kind way, whether he would not like a cup of coffee and a sandwich; but, rather to her surprise, he declined the refreshment, and, taking the bundle under his arm, slouched off with it.

"There's a good riddance," said Mrs. Stukely, as the man closed the door. "I'm glad that I've seen the last of those trousers." She went about her domestic occupations singing cheerfully. The bar to her happiness was removed.

That was on a Monday. On Saturday the man returned and this time got out of a wagon that stopped at the gate. He carried a parcel under his arm.

"It's my trousers," said Stukely, who was in the hall when his wife opened the door. "I had them cleaned—and, by Jove!" he added as he opened the parcel and held the trousers to the light, "they look better than new."

Mrs. Stukely struggled against an inclination to cry. "I thought you had given them away to the man," she said.

It was more than exasperating the way Stukely crowed over those trousers after that. It was unbearable. But Mrs. Stukely was not at the end of her resources. One day she went to the closet again, and, taking down the trousers, struck a match on the heel of her shoe and burned a neat little hole in them. "He won't get that cleaned out," she said viciously, and she was right.

Stukely blamed himself for his carelessness in dropping burning cigar ashes and was grieved, but he conceded that it was impossible to wear the trousers any longer and said that he would order a new pair at once. Mrs. Stukely breathed more freely. When he brought home some samples of cloth she helped him to make a selection from them.

"It was a most peculiar thing," said Stukely, that evening, smiling cheerfully at his wife across the dinner table. "I went to the tailor's this afternoon, you know, to get measured for my trousers and what do you think I saw there? Guess."

"I never could," said Mrs. Stukely. "Tell me what it was."

"A bolt of cloth of the very same check pattern of my old trousers," said Stukely, triumphantly. "The identical thing, material and everything. I didn't have an idea in the world that there was a piece of that cloth in Chicago, or I'd have had a new pair of them long ago. Wasn't it lucky?"

"Do you mean that you—?" began Mrs. Stukely, with tragic calmness.

"Yes," said Stukely, anticipating her. "I ordered two pairs."—Chicago News.

Julia and the Burglar

Of the two girls one would say Julia is by far the better protection against burglars. Cora is small and quiet and sweet to see and hear. Julia is five feet ten, generously built as to bony framework, and she was born with a dare against all the world. Cora has a nice conscience, Julia none. When Cora tells a lie it is not one, for a lie is a statement calculated to deceive, and no mortal was ever deceived by one of Cora's fibs. Julia, however, fibs by nature and tells the truth only for expediency. Julia has always taken care of herself and scorns men healthily. Cora has always been taken care of and is of a plastic temperament. Yet the two are bosom friends, despite their differences, and Cora admires Julia and Julia dominates over Cora.

The other night it happened that Julia stayed all night with Cora. It also happened that no one else was in the house save Cora's mother. The absence of masculine protection was bitterly bemoaned by Cora, who had received that day the pleasing little sum of $110, which was in cash and in the house. Julia sniffed scornfully as she deposited her two $10 bills in the tiny drawer of Cora's writing desk.

"What earthly account would a man be?" she demanded. "I'm not afraid of any burglar that ever drew a pistol. Put your money here and stop fussing."

But Cora fussed and grew exasperatingly nervous over the matter, and finally decided to keep it all where it was in the little chamois bag about her neck.

Two hours later Julia, roused by a slight noise, sat up in bed and looked squarely down the pleasing perspective of a revolver. Her gasp roused Cora, who also sat upright and viewed the spectacle. Instinctively the two girls grasped hands, and Julia drew in her breath as one breathes when about to expel it in one forcible yell. The grim figure before them seemed to recognize the sound!

"Don't you scream, lady," he said, warningly. "I ain't going to hurt you, but I want to know where your money and rings are."

"Take that horrible thing away," Julia said, in a voice that Cora did not recognize, it was so thin and quavery. "Here are my rings and my money's yonder in that desk—the little drawer." She held out her hands.

"Good," said the gentlemanly housebreaker, as he pocketed three rings and gained possession of the money, still keeping the girls carefully covered with the revolver. Then he came back to the bed. "Now you!" He was standing over Cora.

Julia turned sick with dread. That frail little thing beside her—what would be the effect, not so much the loss of the money she had but of the fright and shock?

"I'm staying all night with her," said Cora, calmly. "I haven't a single thing with me."

A slight gasp from Julia made the masked gentleman turn a threatening glance on her, but Julia had no spirit left for screaming. She sat up and listened to the conversation.

"No," said Cora, sweetly, in reply to a stern question, "not even a pocketbook."

"Give me your rings, then," growled the baffled burglar, convinced of the truth of her words by her utter confidence and lack of constraint.

"I don't wear rings at all," said Cora, frankly holding up her hands.

Julia gasped again as she thought of the two solitaires and the diamond and emerald one and the pearl one and the beautiful ruby that had gleamed on Cora's hands in the moonlight just as they went to sleep. Yet they were quite bare now.

"Anybody else here?" the burglar growled again in deep disgust.

"Just their man," said Cora, with a gesture toward the dumb and stricken Julia. "I wish you'd go now, please."

"Anything to oblige you," remarked the burglar. "Thanks to you, ma'am, for the two tens and the sparklers. Good night to you."

"Where had you put them all?" asked Julia, as the burglar vanished.

"Here with my money," said Cora, faintly touching the chamois bag.

"Oh, Julia, I'm perfectly sick with fright."

"Pshaw!" said Julia, grimly; "I'm cool as a cucumber."—Chicago News.

The Visit

Just a prince of royal line—
Just a pageant gay and fine—
Roll of drums to marching feet,
Waving banners, music sweet,
Laughing speech and outstretched hand,
Welcome over sea and land!

But in all this outward show
Deeper meaning we may know;
In the outstretched hand we see
Latest human victory;
Friendship that will bind the earth
In the only bond of worth.

In the soldier's tread, at last,
We may hear the bugle blast
Of "the piping times of peace,"
When, oh joy, all wars shall cease,
And man's steps it shall presage
Marching to his heritage.

In the laughing speech so fair,
As it thrills through all the air,
Speaks the warmth of human love
That our brotherhood shall prove,
And the martial drums keep time
To our heart-beats like sweet rhyme.

While our flag that is unfurled
Tells the nations of the world,
In each crimson stripe and fold,
In each star on azure scrolled,
That 'tis strong enough to shield
All who trust unto it yield.

So, fair prince of Saxon blood,
In our veins runs kindred flood,
And the clasp of our strong hands
Will be felt in other lands,
As the pledge of Saxon race,
To great justice in all place.

Neath its aegis shall live on
All that heroes ever won,
All that prophet and that sage
Gave to man in every age,
That could animate, inspire,
Touch his soul with heavenly fire.

Till the whole wide world shall be
From the reach of sea to sea,
From the set of sun to sun,
Promised Land redeemed and won—
Saxons' conquest, made by them
Holy New Jerusalem.

Chicago Fire
Chicago, July 16.—The Ridgland power house of the Consolidated Traction Co. was partly destroyed by fire early today. Forty street cars and the summer's supply of coal were destroyed. Loss, $100,000.

Stuclid by Proxy.
Chicago, July 12.—Sharing her husband's ambitions, toiling by day and by night to carry studies in the University of Chicago while he earned a living by teaching school, a young wife, Mrs. Robert Gordon Jeffrey, yielded her task to the husband, when he took up his work at the university, three months ahead of his class by reason of the devotion of the woman.

The student-wife registered under her husband's name at the beginning of the summer term at the university, and struggled with the intricate problems of the college course. At night she taught her husband who had spent the day in a Chicago school room as the family bread winner.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey are candidates for a bachelor's degree, but lack of means prohibited them from entering the university. Giving every moment of her time ungrudgingly, Mrs. Jeffrey began her studies under the name of "Robert Gordon Jeffrey." Day after day—ever since she assumed the double task as student and teacher—the other students have heard her answer "Here" when the husband's name was called.

Many of them wondered about this feminine "Robert Gordon Jeffrey," but they saw she was too busy to stop and explain, and none ever asked her to do so. They learned, however, that the real Robert Gordon Jeffrey was attending the university by proxy.

When the students assembled in one of the lecture rooms yesterday and the professor reached the name of Jeffrey in the roll call, the feminine voice did not answer, but, instead, in a deep base voice came the answer, "Here." The students turned and saw in the chair formerly occupied by the woman a studious and serious-looking man. They did not know the reason for the advent of the man under the name formerly borne by the quiet little woman. The faculty had kept sacredly guarded the story of the wife who gave her time and talent for her husband.

When the summer term at the university began Mrs. Jeffrey, who with her husband lives at 746 West Seventieth street, asked Dean James H. Tufts for permission to register under her husband's name, and it was granted. From that time on she attended the lectures and toiled in the laboratories, striving with the other students. She studied constantly, gave the closest attention to every demonstration in the class room, and took copious notes on every lecture. At night the two would study the notes while the wife would repeat the demonstrations she had watched at the university.

When the day's work was gone over she would begin her studies for the next day. Each morning at an early hour the husband and wife left home for their work.

Robert Gordon Jeffrey, school teacher, finished his work last week. Robert Gordon Jeffrey, college student, began his work yesterday. At the home on Seventieth street there is a tired little woman—tired, but willing to work on until she sees her husband's ambition realized. The plan was hers at first, and she never faltered for a moment while carrying it out.

When Jeffrey entered the university yesterday he surprised his fellow students by his proficiency. The "new" student seemed conversant with every question brought before the class, and he was familiar with every incident that had occurred during the period particular studies had been pursued.

He was three months ahead of the other students, and was allowed the advance credit by the faculty; who have watched the progress of the substitute student and knew of the advancement of the absent Robert Gordon Jeffrey, whose young wife is being pointed to as a living argument in favor of coeducation.

Supposed to Be Dead

Binghamton, N.Y., July 12.—The fact that George B. Mattice, of Elmira, was indicted on the charge of being responsible for the death of a man who is alive will necessitate a resubmission of his case to the grand jury. The case was to have been called for trial in the county court, but the discovery of this error puts it over.

Mattice is the Lackawanna engineer to whose negligence, it is charged, a wreck and dynamite explosion at Vestal were due a year ago. Five men were killed in the accident. The indictment names Martin Kelly as being one of the men killed. Kelly was one of the witnesses at the investigation before the grand jury.

Belgian Queen Ill
Spa, Belgium, July 15.—The Queen of the Belgians is suffering today from marked weakness of the heart, and her condition is arousing much anxiety.

Was Mob Fither Way.
Guthrie, O.T., July 22.—Governor Ferguson was forced tonight to withhold his decision on a requisition for the commutation sentence of death imposed on Cephus Bruner, a half-blood Seminole Indian negro boy, convicted of murdering, on December 24 last, a white boy, Martin West, near Violet Springs, O.T.

The governor was notified that if the sentence was commuted there was great danger of a mob taking Bruner from the Tecumseh jail and lynching him, and if not commuted that a party of Bruner's friends are ready to cross the Seminole line into Oklahoma and liberate him. It was a mob either way, so the governor sent a sealed verdict to the Pottawatomie county sheriff, and Bruner will be removed before either party can reach him. On account of the boy's extreme youth—only 14 years—the general opinion is that the sentence is to be commuted.

After the murder of West a mob, failing to find young Bruner, lynched his older brother, in the Seminole nation.

Patti Made His Reputation

Adelina Patti was not always such a "gold mine" to managers as some may suppose, says Leslie's Weekly. When she visited New York in 1880, her manager, Signor Lugo, overreached himself by starting out on a ten dollar admission basis, and the venture was a financial failure, with Patti's great artistic success. She sang to a fourteen hundred dollar house on the first night and on the second to $400. She was discouraged, as it was her own fault, and gave it up.

The late Henry E. Abbey, who was bold in his speculations, then engaged her and her company at $5,000 per concert. He began at Wallack's theater at Thirtieth street, giving scenes of opera, and the concert there averaged over $7,000 a performance, but he lost in the out of town concerts $20,000.

A little later, being asked by Patti to take Patti to San Francisco, Abbey replied, "My dear Dr. I have got enough of Patti. I had $20,000, but I made a reputation."

WHARFAGE FACILITIES

L. & C. Dock is Better Much Improved

Warehouse Raised Four Feet Extended Over Entire Dock.

The improvements now under the Lancaster & Calderhead completed will make it the best and most commodious along the water front. The new building has been bodily raised four feet higher thus bringing the dock up to the level of the docks adjoining. Workmen are now engaged in placing the solid foundation beneath which will support the superstructure and when that is finished the warehouse will be so extended as to have three, all of which will be laid and a new class of is to be put in. A new arrangement will also be made by the officers abutting the dock there is now but one track to be occupied by the Merchants Transportation Company. The street immediately in front of the property will be filled up so as to back in for a load will be door of the dock about 100 feet with their wagon boxes. A passageway will be left in the front to the rear. A walk will be constructed to that at the White Pass with a front of the Aurora. The street immediately in front of the dock like his steamers second to none on the river. The unloading of cargo and the loading of trucks greatly expedited by the new are being made, and the dock will afford a large storage capacity.

Freight Makes Good Time

P. F. Scharschmidt, manager of the river division, arrived yesterday and will remain several days in connection with business pertaining to this end. Freight is moving much more this season than ever. Shippers have but little complaint of delayed consignments as frequently happened in the past. In one instance a ship recently from the outside had a heavy shipment in. It left there on the 11th, made close both at Skagway and here and arrived here on the 18th, being a few days less than a week en route. Dr. Scharschmidt states that White Pass boats will remain this season until the moment they can run.

Baseball Tonight

Supposed to Be Dead

Binghamton, N.Y., July 12.—The fact that George B. Mattice, of Elmira, was indicted on the charge of being responsible for the death of a man who is alive will necessitate a resubmission of his case to the grand jury. The case was to have been called for trial in the county court, but the discovery of this error puts it over.

Mattice is the Lackawanna engineer to whose negligence, it is charged, a wreck and dynamite explosion at Vestal were due a year ago. Five men were killed in the accident. The indictment names Martin Kelly as being one of the men killed. Kelly was one of the witnesses at the investigation before the grand jury.

MARFAGE FACILITIES

C. Dock is Being Much Improved

House Raised Four Feet and Extended Over Entire Dock.

Improvements now under way at the Lancaster & Calderhead dock will make it one of the best and most commodious along the water front. The building has been bodily lifted four feet higher thus bringing the dock up to the level of the street adjoining. Workmen are presently engaged in placing in position the solid foundation beneath which will support the superstructure when that is finished the house will be so extended as to cover the entire wharf affording fully the present capacity. New floor will be laid and a new plate will be put in. A different arrangement will also be made of the offices abutting the street. There is now but one it is intended to have three, all of which will be occupied by the Merchants' Transportation Company. The side street immediately in front of property will be filled up so that backing in for a load will find the floor of the dock about on the level with their wagon boxes. Only a passageway will be left leading from the front to the rear and a walk will be constructed to connect that at the White Pass with the front of the Aurora dock. The Calderhead is determined that his dock like his steamers shall stand to none on the river. When completed, the unloading of cargoes also the loading of trucks will be greatly expedited by the changes now being made, and the extension of the warehouse the full width of the dock will afford a largely increased storage capacity.

Freight Makes Good Time

P. F. Scharschmidt, general manager of the river division of the Pass, arrived yesterday on the Aurora and will remain in the several days in connection with business pertaining to this end of the river. Freight is moving much more rapidly this season than ever before. Shippers have but little reason to complain of delayed consignments. It is frequently happened that boats have arrived ahead of the inland. In one instance a gentleman from the outside purchased a heavy shipment in Vancouver. It left there on the City of Seattle on July 11, made close contact both at Skagway and White Pass and arrived here on the morning of the 18th, being a few hours ahead of a week en route. The inland boats do not arrive until five days later. The White Pass boats will remain in the season until the last moment they can run.

Baseball Tonight

Settled Out of Court.

Spokane, July 22.—The lawsuit involving title to the Buffalo Hump group of mines, in Idaho county, Idaho, has been settled out of court. About three years ago the Buffalo Hump Mining Company purchased the group, the price being stated at $750,000. Later the claims were jumped, or relocated, by other parties, and when the company applied for a patent it was opposed by Dr. Braley, Attorney Gove and others, who claimed title on the relocation. Full details of the settlement are not known, but the chief result is that the Buffalo Hump Company secured full title to the group, now said to be worth a million dollars.

Difficult to Launch

Everett, July 22.—Another and a partially successful attempt was made this evening at 9 o'clock to launch the four-masted schooner J. H. Lunsman, which stuck on her ways Sunday evening at White's yard. This time she made a fair start, was duly christened by Mrs. George E. Raubinger, of San Francisco, daughter of Capt. White, manager of the yard, but on account of some obstruction on the ways she stopped short after running about half her length into the water. A tug is pulling at her and a force of men is at work with jacks and pulleys to get her off before the tide goes out.

Cecil Rhodes' Request

New York, July 22.—Delay in making arrangements for carrying out the Rhodes bequests for Oxford scholarships is caused by the difficulty of effecting a financial settlement under the will, cables the London correspondent of the Tribune, who learns that the scholarships will be in operation without doubt in the autumn of 1903, and that students from the United States, the British colonies and Germany will be admitted to the university in compliance with the conditions of the will. The educational work projected by Mr. Rhodes will be supervised by an Oxford man.

Notified to Leave

Whatcom, July 22.—"Leave town within forty-eight hours or abide by the consequences," is the mandate given in typewritten notices giving at length the reasons thereof and signed "Vigilance Committee." These notices, it is said, were posted all over the town of Everson last night and are directed to two men who persist in dispensing liquor after having been refused a license by the commissioners in compliance with the wishes of the people of Everson. It is said that great excitement prevails and that the offenders may be mobbed.

Died for Her Dog

La Salle, Ill., July 22.—Mrs. Ellen Wright, of this city, has lost her life here in an attempt to protect her pet dog. She, with her sister, Mrs. J. Madison, was walking along the New York Central tracks. A passenger train was almost upon the dog when Mrs. Wright leaped to its rescue. She tossed the animal to safety, but was unable to avoid the train, which crushed her to death.

Big Run

Blaine, July 22.—The big run of sockeye salmon that trap and cannerymen have been patiently waiting for the past two weeks, seems to be at hand. Canneries are all running today full blast with all the fish they can handle.

The traps at Birch bay are reported full of fish and large schools are also reported in the gulf.

TRANSIENT TRADERS

Again Occupy Time of Police Judge

Attempt Made to Show That City Bylaw is Discriminating and Prohibitive.

Another transient trader case was heard before Magistrate Wroughton this forenoon, the complainant being F. H. Worlock, city license inspector, while the defendants were Frank E. Skagerling, G. F. Mayhoad and J. A. Brown, who were charged with conducting transient trader's business on Third avenue, or "Aldermanic avenue," as it was referred to in court this morning. City Attorney Donaghy appeared for the city and Mr. H. E. Ridley for the defendants. Mr. Worlock was the first witness, the greater portion of the forenoon being consumed in his examination. During the course of his cross-examination a spirited controversy arose between the attorneys regarding the admissibility of certain evidence and in defense of his course Mr. Ridley stated that he intended to show to the court that the bylaw enacted by the city council requiring the payment of $500 for a license is illegal, discriminating and prohibitive; that its enforcement would drive from 40 to 50 legitimate business men from the city and that, aside from a few of the large concerns, there are none of the regular merchants of Dawson whose business would warrant the payment of $500 for the privilege of doing business from now until December 31st, a period of five months. City Tax Collector E. Ward Smith was present and testified that the name of the firm in question does not appear upon the tax rolls. Other witnesses, principally retail merchants, testified to having purchased goods from the defendants. The course mapped out by Mr. Ridley, namely that he proposed proving that the bylaw in question is illegal because discriminating and prohibitive, was somewhat of a stumper to the prosecution with the result that an enlargement of the case until tomorrow morning was requested by Mr. Donaghy. The request was granted by the court.

Inquest Held

New York, July 22.—The coroner's inquest called to investigate the shooting of Albert C. Latimer at his home in Brooklyn on the morning of July 2 was resumed today. Latimer died in a hospital. All he told of the shooting was that he was shot in bed, and that he did not believe it was done by a burglar.

To Defeat Henderson

Minneapolis, Minn., July 22.—H. S. Kennedy, secretary of the National Federation of Millers, tonight announced that the milling interests of the country are in league to procure the defeat of Speaker Henderson in his race for re-election to congress. The announcement was made prior to Mr. Kennedy's departure for Des Moines, Ia., to attend a meeting at which measures and means to encompass Speaker Henderson's political downfall will be discussed. The resentment of the millers arises from Speaker Henderson's action in holding up the London dock clause amendment to the harbor bill, designed to do away with what American exporters regard as unjust discrimination against United States flour in the unloading charges at London.

Hammond Company are at Hammond, Ind., South Omaha and Chicago, and the Hammond Packing Company's establishment is at St. Joseph, Mo.

statement that he had arrived at his home at 11:15.

Elias Kasindorf, who lives near the Latimers, said he heard loud voices in the Latimer house five minutes before the shooting. He could see the back yard of the Latimer house, and was sure that no one escaped that way.

Mrs. Albert C. Latimer, the widow, was recalled and asked to describe the man she said shot her husband. She said the man wore a mask, that she could not see his face, therefore she did not know the color of his eyes, nor whether he had a mustache. He was of medium height. He wore the peaked cap found in the house after the shooting. The hearing went over until tomorrow.

Latimer's will was filed today. It disposes of property worth $150,000. With the will was filed a codicil, written on a prescription blank, while Latimer lay on his deathbed in St. Mary's hospital. This codicil, which is incoherent, reads as follows: "Codicil: I desire all of my among my children only. (Signed) A. C. LATIMER."

The original will gave the widow one-tenth of the property and the income of one-third additional for life, the remainder of the estate to go to the children.

Question of Subsidies

London, July 22.—The house of commons committee appointed to inquire into the question of steamship subsidies was in session this morning and examined Senator G. A. Drummond, of Montreal. Mr. Drummond said he had arrived at the conclusion from recent developments of American combines that the land lines practically controlled the situation and the ocean lines were merely adjuncts. At first sight it would appear that the purchase of a number of old British steamers by American combines could be remedied by building new boats. But he believed that if this was done by a new organization it could be made unprofitable by the Americans, who, by means of through bills of lading from the producing centers, could control freights as well as a considerable portion of the passenger traffic. He believed that the only hope of escape from the control of the American shipping combine lay through Canada. Therefore he advocated a speedy, up-to-date service of 22-knot steamers between Great Britain and Halifax instead of New York. Such a line ought to be subsidized to the extent of $300,000 to $400,000 yearly for ten years, half payable by Great Britain and half by Canada. Thereafter he believed that the line, if judiciously managed, would be self-sustaining. It would be advantageous to both countries to stimulate the trade between Great Britain and Canada.

INTEREST IS CLAIMED

Suit Involving Portion of 59 Hunker

Miner's License Was Alleged to be Not Bona Fide.

Judgment is being anxiously awaited by several gentlemen in a case recently heard in the gold commissioner's court involving a quarter interest in 59 below Hunker. The interest in question was owned by Thos. Dolan, a well known character who resided in Dawson in '97 and '98, leaving in the spring of '99 for Nome where he has remained ever since. Prior to his departure for the lower country he gave Leroy Tozier power of attorney to handle his property as he thought best during his absence. The remaining three-quarters interest is held by J. G. McLaren and C. W. C. Tabor, who in the action that was begun alleged that Dolan or his agent has allowed his free miner's license to lapse by which act they are entitled to his interest. In the meantime the agent sold the Dolan interest to L. L. James for a price stated to be $850, and when he came to record the bill of sale it was refused upon the ground that Dolan had no license. Mr. James claimed the protection to which an innocent purchaser is entitled, procured a license for Dolan upon which the bill of sale was accepted. Messrs. McLaren and Tabor then made him party to the suit and asked that his grant be set aside, alleging that the transfer from Dolan by his attorney was not bona fide was only intended to preserve the Dolan interest from loss. Judgment will doubtless be rendered in a few days.

PETROLEUM FOR FUEL

Work on Supply Tanks Begins at Once

N. C. Co. Will Build Two Each at Circle City, Tanana and Andrafsky.

Manager Mizner of the N. C. Co. by the last mail, which arrived yesterday, received complete plans and specifications of the enormous storage tanks that are to be built this season along the lower river for the storage of crude petroleum, which hereafter will be exclusively used as fuel on the steamers of the N. C. fleet. By the same boat there also arrived Mr. G. D. Leonard direct from San Francisco, who will have charge of the construction work.

Several months ago the Nugget gave out the exclusive information in reference to this proposed change, stating that such a course had been determined upon by the company after the most exhaustive experiments had for the purpose of ascertaining whether the excessive cold of the far north would in any way impair the utility of the oil as fuel. During the course of these experiments the oil was exposed to a temperature of 80 degrees below zero, and the only change noted in its appearance was a slight thickening, which, however, disappeared upon the temperature being raised. Every one of the N. C. steamers will be equipped to burn oil but will be so arranged that should an emergency arise the grates can be changed to accommodate wood in a few moments.

The letter to Mr. Mizner states that the material for the construction of the tanks has all been shipped via St. Michael and it is presumed to be on the ground where it is to be used by the time Mr. Leonard reaches his destination. This season there will be but three supply stations built on the river, one at Circle City, one at Tanana and one at Andrafsky, but the probabilities are that one will be put up at Eagle early next spring, which will be the farthest station up the river. At Circle City there will be two tanks erected each with a capacity of 2500 barrels. The same number and of the same capacity will be put up at Tanana, but at Andrafsky there will be one of 5000 and one of 2500 barrel size. The tanks are to be made of California redwood staves, will have galvanized iron roofs and will be situated on the river bank convenient for the steamers at any stage of water. St. Michael will be the main supply point where ten tanks each of the capacity of 10,000 barrels will be erected. Three oil barges are now being built at the lower river port for use in transporting the oil from St. Michael to the supply stations. Unloading a cargo at one of the stations will require but a few moments as an 8-inch centrifugal pump on the steamer that does the towing will quickly pump a barge dry. Each of the freight and passenger steamers will be fitted with a 500-gallon tank in the hold of the vessel which will hold sufficient to carry the steamer between stations. The manner of taking on a load of fuel will be very simple. The inlet to and the discharge from the tank is eight inches in diameter and all that will be necessary will be to connect the hose from the tank to the tank aboard the steamer when the latter will quickly fill by gravity.

Mr. Leonard's orders are to rush the work so that it will be entirely completed before the arrival of winter. He proceeds from here to Circle where the first tanks will be put up, thence to Tanana and on to Andrafsky. He estimates each station will require about three weeks in which to do the work and after that at the last named is completed he will take his crew and go to St. Michael to assist those sent up from San Francisco to do the work at that point. The transportation of the oil from San Francisco to St. Michael will be done by means of a tank ship which is being built for that purpose.

Bakersfield county, California, is the source of supply from which the oil comes, a pipe line having been built from the oil fields direct to Point Richmond on San Francisco bay, where the ships may moor alongside the huge storage tanks and take on their cargoes with little or no effort. In speaking of the changes that may arise as the direct result of using cheaper fuel, Mr. Mizner said:

"The first boat that arrives from St. Michael next year will demonstrate the superiority of oil over any other fuel. The saving in the cost of operating our boats will in the aggregate be tremendous. On the large boats we can do with a crew of twenty-five less men and will save three days time in the trip from St. Michael to Dawson. The steamers will all be changed to oil burners this winter but I do not know whether the material will be shipped in and the alterations made here or not; the steamers may all winter at St. Michael this season. What will interest the people most in this respect, however, is that next year we can lay goods down in Dawson cheaper than ever before and what we save in freight rates we propose to give the consumers the benefit of."

F. H. AMES IN DAWSON

Head of Big Mercantile Company Arrives

Is Pleased With Business Outlook and Will Increase Facilities.

Mr. Frank H. Ames with his bride arrived on the Whitehorse yesterday and after remaining in Dawson for probably a week will proceed on down the river en route to Nome.

Mr. Ames is head of the wellknown and deservedly popular concern known as the Ames Mercantile Company, which, besides having a large business here, is also similarly interested at Nome. The head offices of the company are in San Francisco.

In a short conversation with a Nugget representative today Mr. Ames spoke quite enthusiastically of the present outlook for business in Dawson. He said he had come to Dawson with the view of looking over the field and if warranted by the outlook the company would arrange at once for a substantial expansion of its business by the addition of greater accommodation and larger importations of goods.

Since his arrival Mr. Ames says he finds that the outlook fully warrants all contemplated expansion and increase of the company's facilities for doing business in Dawson and such improvements will be made in time to accommodate the increased heavy importations to be made within the present season.

SHIRT SPECIAL

The business done by the Ames Mercantile Company in Dawson during the past year under the able management of Mr. W. H. Parsons, assisted by Mr. Gray, is so eminently satisfactory to the head of the company as to fully justify his decision to increase their facilities commensurate with the increased business growth and popularity of the company in Dawson.

In speaking of the Nome country Mr. Ames says it is growing better with each succeeding year and that the present season will be the best yet known. He says a mining syndicate is spending $250,000 in constructing a ditch 25 miles long which will conduct water from Hobson creek to Anvil and Dexter, both of which are very rich but have formerly been under the disadvantages incident to a scarcity of water.

Another evidence that the Nome country is yet in its infancy from a mining standpoint is that the Wild Goose Mining Company is this season installing a pumping plant at a cost of $400,000 to put water on its property on Anvil and other creeks. The same company is also constructing a railroad fifteen miles long to tap Council and Ophir creeks. The wild rush to Nome is over, the country has settled down on a solid working basis and its future for several years to come as a steady and substantial producer of gold is assured.

Mr. and Mrs. Ames will probably leave Dawson on the Sarah which is the next passenger steamer due from St. Michael. They will remain some weeks at Nome, returning to San Francisco before the close of navigation. They expect to spend next winter in Europe.
