Mrs. Olive Putnam, Phillipville, and Mr. Mrs. Fred Stowe and Mrs. McClenathan, Bouchville, N.Y., spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. Gibson, Mill St.

Mrs. G. W. Lee, Reid St., accompanied by her sister Mrs. A. E. Abbott of Sault Ste. Marie, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Lee's son, Mr. W. V. Lee of Almonte.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Given of Syracuse, who have been guests of the Misses Lee, Reid St., returned via motor car on Monday to their home.

Miss Anna George, Winchester, has returned home after spending two weeks at the home of her friends, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Dillabough.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cornell have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Taylor, at their summer home, "Villa Minerva," on the St. Lawrence. Mrs. Taylor is a sister of Mrs. Cornell.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Percival and son, Harry, and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Brown will visit Toronto and Western Ontario points the latter end of this week.

Mr. George Foley, Deseronto, was a guest at the home of his parents during the past week.

Mr. Emmett Covey has purchased a Chevrolet touring car from Percival and Brown.

F. W. Clarke, manager of the Merchants Bank in Athens the past few years, has been notified he is being moved to Montreal, and with Mr. Clarke is busy packing his household goods for shipment to the metropolis. Her mother, Mrs. A. E. McLean, of Gouverneur, N.Y., is in Athens this week with her.

On Thursday afternoon Erastus Livingston drove into the village with his pony and hitched it to a post on Elgin street. The animal became frightened by a passing car which was carrying some loose boards, and, breaking the halter, bolted, coming in contact with a tree. It was so badly injured that it was shot by the veterinary.

The high and public schools opened on Tuesday morning with a full attendance of pupils. There were no changes on the teaching staff of the public school, but two on the high school staff—Mr. Hartley, B.A., taking the place of Mr. Case, and Miss Sheridan, B.A., of Brockville, taking the place of Miss Lewis. There is such an influx of pupils in the high school that many are finding it hard to secure boarding places.

Mrs. V. O. Boyle received for the first time at the rectory Tuesday afternoon from four to six. The pleasant rooms were made very attractive with beautiful flowers, and the guests included several parishioners from Oak Leaf and Delta who motored in for the occasion. In the tea room at the charmingly pretty table, with its mums, were Mrs. A. W. Johnston pouring, and Mrs. M. C. Arnold cutting the ices, and the wants of the many guests were attended to by a bevy of young girls in dainty frocks. Mrs. Boyle was assisted in receiving her guests by Mr. Boyle, Mrs. E. Taylor introducing the ladies to the several out-of-town guests at the rectory, and Mrs. J. D. Johnston showing the ladies to the tea room. Little Miss Kathleen Taylor waited on the door; Irene Gifford was in charge of the Victrola, while Mary Duffield showed the guests through the rectory which had been recently re-painted and decorated by the Ladies' Guild of the church.

Harry Vollick and family, of Brockville, are guests in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hagerman.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Newton, of Cornwall, Mrs. W. T. Faulkner and daughter Greta, of Norwood, who have been on a motor trip to Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo, spent Monday and Tuesday of last week in Athens, guests of Rev. and Mrs. Newton at the parsonage.

Mrs. W. G. Parish, who has not been enjoying the best of health lately, is spending a couple of weeks in Brockville at the home of her son, A. G. Parish.

Mrs. W. H. Wilke, who has been in Toronto undergoing treatment for cancer under Specialist Dr. Glover, has returned home not very much improved in health, to the regret of her many friends.

Cecil Taber, of Brockville, was a week-end visitor at the home of Dr. H. M. Moore.

Miss Cora Grey has returned to Athens for the fall and winter millinery season.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Brown were in Gananoque recently attending the silver wedding anniversary of a relative.

F. J. Musgrove, of Montreal, has returned home after a pleasant holiday of a week or so spent in the Methodist parsonage, Church street.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Cole, of Ottawa, are spending a few weeks in Athens with the latter's mother, Mrs. A. H. Wilson, Mill street. Mr. Cole is recuperating from a recent severe illness.

Rev. V. O. Boyle and Mrs. Boyle and guests, Mrs. Greer, of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Beakie and Miss Clarke, of Montreal, and Miss Boyle and friend from near Belleville, are enjoying an outing at Charleston-Lake in one of the Johnston cottages on Bertha Island.

A pleasing little function took place at the Anglican rectory Tuesday evening when Mrs. J. F. Harte was presented with a beautiful cut-glass bowl and address by the members of the Anglican choir, of which she is a valued member. After the presentation, refreshments were served and a happy social evening was much enjoyed by the choir and several of their young friends.

If one would judge by the preparations in progress for the village school fair and concert on Saturday, the 18th inst., under the Women's Institute, it promises to be a splendid affair. The fair will be held during the day in the town hall, the sports taking place on the grounds, and the concert will be in the hall in the evening. The programme will embrace drills, choruses, recitations, musical numbers, and the play, "A Canadian Fairy Tale," given by the pupils of the public school.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Johnston and son, Leonard, arrived home Wednesday from an enjoyable holiday with friends at Rochester, N.Y.

Dr. J. W. Stevens, Mrs. Stevens and small girls, of Westport, are week-end visitors at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Scovill. Dr. Stevens enjoyed a duck hunt at the Lake on Monday with Dr. C. B. Lillie.

SUMMER RESIDENT AT CHARLESTON IS LOST IN THE WOODS

Search Party Found Him Exhausted and at Sea.

Charleston, Sept. 9.—Mr. Barnes, who spends his summers at the Green cottage, had an experience on Wednesday he will not soon forget. After breakfast he went to the woods back of the cranberry marsh to hunt all by himself. He was expected back to the cottage for dinner, but failed to appear. Supper time came and still no signs of Mr. Barnes. The family became uneasy and gave the alarm and soon a posse was out in search of him. They took with them some guns and fired shots in the air and were answered by a report from Mr. Barnes gun. The posse went in the direction whence the shot came and found Mr. Barnes completely lost, tired and hungry, but all prepared to spend the night in the woods.

FOR SALE.—Well drilling outfit in good condition, with extra tools. Can be inspected operating in the vicinity of Brockville. Apply to M. L. Wilson, Box 34, Athens.

LEARN TO DO WITHOUT

If you find yourself unable to live within your income, there are just two remedies; either you must increase your income, or reduce your standard of living. That proposition is so simple that a six-year-old child should grasp it, but it seems too much for a lot of us grown-ups, says Carl Marshall, in the Thrift Magazine. If we could examine the budgets of most of the people who are howling so lustily about the high cost of living and the difficulty of making both ends meet, you would find that the tap-root of their troubles is that they are buying too many things that they could get along without. The plain truth is that the standard of living that has been adopted by the vast majority of Americans is entirely too high for sound economics. The masses of our people insist upon having a great deal more in the way of expensive luxuries than can be supplied by any possible adjustment of the forces of production. It is simply not physically possible for everybody to have fresh laid eggs, the choicest cuts of steak and out-of-season fruits and vegetables. Neither can there be a piano in every home, or costly furs and fancies for every woman. There are not enough of these things to go around, and that is all there is to it.

Nor is the remedy to be found by the easy process of raising everybody's wages. That would not make diamonds more plentiful, add to the number of milk and eggs, or increase the percentage of porterhouse steak in a fat steer. Raising wages merely adds to production cost, and at the same time feeds the passion

A Witness Testifies SHE WAS WEAK AND NERVOUS

Brampton, Ont.—"About five years ago I began suffering with woman's trouble. I became all run-down, weak and nervous. I was so completely down and out that I did not do any thing, could scarcely dress myself. I had the doctor and took all medicines, but without any better result until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his Golden Medical Discovery. It was only necessary for me to take about three bottles when I was completely restored to health and strength and I have been in better health than I ever was before. I have had no use for medicine since, but should I need it I would take these same medicines, knowing them to be excellent."—MRS. HARRY KNIGHT, Jessie St.

OWES HER LIFE

St. Saskatchewan, Alta.—"It is with great pleasure that I write the following and I hope it will help many sufferers who do not know the good Dr. Pierce's medicine would do them if they would try them. "In regard to my condition, I will say that I suffered from childhood from a very weak back; I had the misfortune of having spinal meningitis when I was one year old and until I was 13 I did not see a well day, but a very kind lady told my mother about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and she got a bottle to try it. It did me so much good that mother got me 6 bottles. Recently I happened with a car accident and hurt my back badly. My doctor told me to get up until I could not live, but I still stick to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and to my surprise in three weeks I was out of bed and better. I owe my life to it and nothing else, and shall never be without it. "If any sufferer wishes to write I will answer with pleasure."—MRS. NOEL BARTHOLOMEW.

for over-buying. The real remedy, both for individual and for the nation, is diminished consumption of needless things. This will divert labor to the production of necessities, with a consequent reduction of cost, and at the same time, provide a margin of income over expenditures.

Of course, these are all very fundamental economies, but it will do us no good merely to know it; we must apply it. Failure to apply this doctrine is the cause of most of the economic discontent that hurts. People have got into their heads that they are entitled to more of the world's good things than they are able to earn. The man who is living beyond his income, is not "playing the game," as our English friends put it. No one has a right to more than he can pay for, and the fellow who tries to get it, is usually due for some hard bumps. The sensible thing to do is, first, find out the things you think you can get, then pick out from them the things you want most, then set about getting these things first. When nations adopt this policy, it is called political economy; when individuals adopt it, it is called thrift. It is simply the principle of the square deal, or trying to get the things we are entitled to, and no more.

In upper New York one day last summer, the writer paused on his way to watch some workers who were building a big factory. Nearby was a time-battered old gentleman seated in a big luxurious car who also seemed to be watching the job. He turned out to be the contractor who was putting out the building, and he gave us some information as to the details of the steel construction that was going on before us. Then he invited me to ride down to the city with him. "It must be a great pleasure to be able to ride about at will in a vehicle like this, but I got ready to enjoy it by serving my time behind a wheelbarrow."

Learn Facts of Laundry Work

When you get your washer be sure to insist that the demonstrator really demonstrates. You have a right to demand this, though of course sometimes they are in such haste after they are sure of their sale that they will not take much time to show you. And then follow instructions if you want the best and easiest results. Perhaps shaved soap is the most effective and harmless washing agent with the washing machine. But it takes time to shave time to shave laundry soap. As an alternative you may use soap chips of some sort, but be sure always to pour very hot water—boiling water, in fact—on the soap chips so that they dissolve thoroughly before putting them into the washer. Otherwise the action on the clothes may be too strong. This is a good precaution, either washing in a machine or in the good old fashioned way.

Ammonia used not too abundantly is as harmless as anything that you may use, and if you soak your clothes the night before a good plan is to mix a tub of water with the chill off. Add ammonia and let the clothes soak in this water all night. Then wring them out before putting them in the hot water and soap. Where you have a machine it is a simple matter to put them through the electric wringer. But wringers, electrical wringers, especially have their dangers. They simply have no consideration for buttons, so you must learn the trick of looking out for the buttons yourself when feeding the clothes.

Of course, you do not want to seek any woollens, stockings or knitted underthings. However, it helps to keep them for ten minutes in water in which you have mixed flannels or woollens of any sort with a wringer, preferring to have this done by hand. With the usual wash, remember that no matter how well the things are washed your clothes will not appear clean if they are not thoroughly rinsed in more than one rinse water. Remember, too, that even if you use a washer garments or table linen that are stained should be attended to before putting them in soap water. So the things to be laundered should be well sorted over. A good many stains will come out if you merely pour boiling water through them before they have been put into soap water. Also it is a good idea to check over clothes, they may be quite grimy, no matter how clean they have been, only a short time, and then to rub the specially soiled spots with soap before putting them in to wash. In this way you will not need to look out for the soiled spots later, nor will you have to wash the clothes so long if the specially soiled spots have already received attention.

You may know—and you may not,

CHILDLESS WOMEN

Please Read This Letter And See What Normal Health Will Do For You.

Berwick, Ont.—"I had organic trouble, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier all my troubles passed away. I was made strong and well and have been ever since. Now we have a fine baby boy six months old, and I know that I would not have this baby and would still be suffering if it had not been for your remedies. My husband and myself say that your remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I recommend them to my friends. One of my aunts is taking them now."—Mrs. NAPOLEON LAVIGNE, Berwick, Ontario, Canada.

Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its ability to correct sterility in many cases. This fact is well established as evidenced by the above letter and hundreds of others we have published in these columns. In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

for women of to-day really don't know much about laundry secrets—that of you have your clothes properly or have them hung properly and dried as they should be you can get along with less ironing and the ironing will be easier and will take less time. For instance, table linen and bed linen should be wrung and dried straight. If they are then it will be simpler to prepare them for ironing—

The Uses of Sphagnum Moss

(Experimental Farms Note.) These plants (for there are many species of Sphagnum) grow best in a climate that is moist and only moderately warm in summer. They are one of the chief forms of vegetation to be found growing in the swampy region known as "Muskeg." Sphagnum bogs occur principally in Newfoundland, the Maritime Provinces, Northeastern Quebec, Labrador and the western parts of British Columbia.

The Sphagnum plant consists of a stem and branches which are clothed with small, numerous, overlapping leaves. They differ from most other mosses in being entirely devoid of rootlets. Another peculiarity of the Sphagnum is that the leaf never has a central vein or midrib. The outer part of the stem as well as a considerable part of the leaf is composed of a large number of special "absorbent cells" which are able to take up and hold water like a sponge. The amount of water absorbed varies according to the species, but ranges from ten to twenty times the weight of the dry Sphagnum. Owing to the ability of these cells to absorb the water required by the plant for its development the presence of rootlets is unnecessary. Sphagnum usually grows in a situation where the soil underneath is permanently damp.

Sphagnum or Bog Moss has been used for a considerable period as a packing material for plants. Owing to its power of retaining moisture, it helps to keep rooted plants in a fresh condition until they arrive at their destination. It is also extremely useful when dried as bedding material for horses.

It is owing to its use since the beginning of the war in the form of absorbent pads for dressing wounds that Sphagnum has recently gained an importance hitherto unknown. Cotton is so largely in demand for the manufacture of explosives that in some cases cotton wool has been found in any case cotton wool has an absorbent power of only four to five times its own weight. Of the species of Sphagnum found growing on this continent four are used for this purpose. When collecting the moss great care should be taken to avoid any admixture of leaves, twigs or roots of other plants which may be growing in the immediate vicinity. Each handful should be squeezed gently to remove excessive moisture, but care should be taken not to break the main stem. The moss should be spread in thin layers to dry before the drying process is complete it should be gone over carefully and sorted, after which the dried moss may be packed into bags or light boxes for despatch to the depot where it is required. The final making up into pads of the sizes required should be left to be done by the experts of the War Department. At the present time Scotland is turning out these pads at the rate of four millions per month, while Canada during the year 1918 was asked to supply twenty millions of such pads.

FRITZ IN ALGERIAS.

Spanish City is Bridgehead to African Railways.

Fritz is waiting. For a golden opportunity. There are more fortunes to be made in Algeria, the city with a future, than even during the meteor rise of Berlin. Therefore Fritz is in Madrid. And there are others waiting in Algiers, the future bridge-head of the African railway system. Therefore Fritz, several of him, has taken up his abode in an inn opposite the dusty harbor station. Fourteen years ago the Kaiser's departure from Bobadilla junction by an English railway company and a resting place of many whose daily round for weeks on end is upon the rock opposite. Ronda of balcony fame, up in the hills, was perhaps never as good as it used to be. It is Tivoli without its trees, temple and (alas!) now tormented. But Algiers was never so good as this. A sundown great white birds settle in flocks upon one tall tree in the garden and turn it into a snow pillar, and at sunrise the faint scent comes up to my bedroom window from an orange tree in fruit and flower, the same that was brought here in fruit overnight to please an English lady who wanted to "wake among oranges."

Along the cliff edge towards "Sandy Cove" where adorable English children are paddling in the sun, there is a carpet of blue crocus, edged with scarlet and fringed with asphodel, while the flowers throw dashes of faintest violet gold into the color scheme. Down by the sleepy port dusty strings of donkeys nick their way over the embankments (donkeys are dainty steppers), laden and overlaid with piles of cork from the forest, while bobbies of 5 to 7 tanned, and tanned well, in the street to the drone of a barrel organ.

How on earth can they do it in the sun, and where do they pick up the "stems"—Charles Tower. In the London Mail.

POULTRY WORLD

GUIDING THE AMATEUR IN POULTRY RAISING

Herewith the Times presents the first article of a short series by a United States expert, T. F. McGrew, giving in a somewhat extended form the advice necessary to aid the backyard beginner in his start at poultry raising:

(ARTICLE I.)

It is quite possible to keep a few hens about every home provided there is ground space that may be devoted to them. The advantages of so doing are many. The most important, however, is that the keeping of the hens may become both a pleasure and profit. To assure both of these requires, first of all, a suitable house for the hens to roost, to lay and to live in. This house should be so constructed as to protect from all kinds of weather conditions and to protect the neighbors well.

Those who keep animals of any kind should remember that those who live near them or who live anywhere within the radius of migration possible to the animals should have fair consideration. Do not imagine that a license tag about the neck of a cat or a dog prevents depredations. Nor does a wire fence about an enclosure restrain the hens that can fly over; nor does the title to the land, either as owner or renter, permit of having a chicken pen or yard that is not sanitary.

There are two honest objections to poultry keeping. One objection is the crowing of the cock early in the morning under or near to where neighbors sleep, and the other is the bad odor that will arise from filth accumulations in or about the poultry houses. Neither of these is necessary, nor should either occur. Hens will lay quite as well without the presence of a male. The male is useful only to fertilize eggs for hatching, and the need need not be kept about at other times. Usually it is better for those who keep only a few to purchase pullets each fall when about ready to lay, or if the pleasure of caring for little chicks attracts, buy them from someone who sells baby chicks or buy eggs and hatch the chicks under a brood hen.

STANDARD BREEDS

Those who keep standard-bred fowls for the pleasure they derive from having and caring for them are fanciers, who would scarcely be included in the practical class, yet the more practical they may be the greater is their success. These are usually more directly interested in form and feather for exhibition than in food production. They are the pioneers in the making of breeds and varieties that are so valuable to those who keep a few hens. No other kind of hens can equal the well-bred kinds for both egg production and table poultry. When making a selection choose the ones that will produce the kind of eggs preferred or the kind preferred for meat.

No breed or variety is the best. All are best for the purpose intended. Some will prosper better in quarters that restrain them than will others. There are poor layers and layers of medium quality and splendid layers in nearly every kind. Having all good layers, who result in selection. Vigor is of the most importance; perfect health must be considered as a part of vigor. No hen ever has or ever will be a continuous layer that does not have both of these. No kind of care or feeding will make a good layer of a fowl lacking in constitutional vigor. One that is all right in every way will be apt to lay well, though fed and cared for in an indifferent manner. The prime factors for success with poultry, whether they are kept for the fancy or for general purpose or just a few in the backyard, are the same. The birds must be bred for the purpose intended. They must be selected

MISSION CIRCLE NOTES.

On the afternoon of Wednesday, Aug. 20, the girls of the Mission Circle met at the home of Mrs. Newton to bid farewell to Mrs. T. S. Kendrick, who has been their honorary president.

The honorary and active members were present, and after a sociable time Mrs. Kendrick was presented with a set of individual bread and butter spreads, and the following address was read:

To the Honorary President of the Bluebird Mission Circle—
Dear Mrs. Kendrick—As we owe our present existence to you, we, the members of the Bluebird Mission Circle, feel deep regret at your departure from our midst.

However, we feel assured that your kind motherly prayers will yet be ours when you have left us to take up your duties in your new home.

True to your motherly instincts, you have ever given us kind help in our Circle and the best of counsel.

We feel that mere words but futilely express our sense of appreciation because of your efforts. Therefore we ask you to accept this present from the girls as a slight token of our love and esteem.

Our lives can best repay you for your efforts on our behalf, and, so, we will ever labor for the Master.

(Signed)

Myrtle Cross, President,
Grace Conlon, Treasurer.

Mrs. Kendrick then replied, expressing her sorrow at leaving the girls; then luncheon was served on the lawn of the parsonage.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bluebird Mission Circle met at the home of Miss Marian Cornell on Tuesday evening, Sept. 7th. After the regular meeting, the girls presented Miss Selena Pritchard with a silver tray and read the following address:

Dear Selena,—As this is our last meeting together, we take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of your help.

We have always found you ready and willing to help us in our Circle work, and we are sure no president could be more faithful to her duties than you were while president of our Bluebird Mission Circle.

Your example, not only in your Circle work but in your daily life, is one that any girl would be proud to follow, and we are sure many have. We have never heard you say that you had done your share when you might well have pleaded that as an excuse for not helping others, but you were always ready to do more than your share.

We shall miss you in our work, but our loss is someone else's gain, and we know you will never be content unless doing something to carry on the good work.

Accept this gift, and with it our wish that all joy and happiness will be yours in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the Bluebird Mission Circle,

Marian Nash Cornell,
Martha L. Carl.

Miss Pritchard replied, thanking the girls and assuring them that she would always think of the Bluebird Mission Circle, of which she has been so long a member.

Refreshments were then served and a pleasant hour spent.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all the other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy; is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

IT'S SO EASY IT'S FUN!

It's the simplest sort of a job to take an old, time-worn chair, a small can of Glidden Jap-a-lac and a brush and in a few minutes' time bring out the beauty of that chair you've hidden for years.

And it's fun to see its youthfulness return under the magic of the brush; to see again through this clear, easy-flowing and double-durable finish stain; the original beauty of the wood work. You can find an old piece of furniture in your attic and any size can of Jap-a-Lac at our store. Bring them together. It won't cost you much, and you'll have a lot of fun getting some "brand new" furniture through the magic of Jap-a-Lac.

Sale - THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY - Sale

This ONE CENT SALE Plan was originated by the United Drug Company for the Rexall Drug Stores. The United Drug Company are the largest manufacturers and buyers of Toilet Articles, Remedies, Chocolates, Perfumes, Rubber Goods, Stationery and Drug Sundries in the world, and this is an advertising plan pure and simple, of which they bear most of the expense. Instead of spending money in the regular way, such as Free Samples, etc., it is their desire that we place full size packages, or articles, in your hands, giving you an opportunity to judge the real value of these goods, the cost of which they charge to advertising.

We will only be permitted to run this sale occasionally. Beware of imitations in other stores, and take advantage of this exceptional opportunity. We can not afford to charge or deliver goods during this sale. So please don't ask us to do it.

BLIND BABIES-- AN APPEAL

An Open Letter to the Generously Disposed.

A few weeks ago I came across in the London Spectator an appeal by Sir Arthur Pearson, in behalf of a specially hapless class of the community, in which he says:
"At Sunshine House, Chorley Wood, we have 25 babies who are being taught to be little human beings, so far as that is possible, from their earliest days until the age of five, when they are transferred to the residential schools for the blind. There are enough poor blind babies in the Kingdom to fill six Sunshine Houses, and I want money to enable me to start the other five."
From this it would appear that in England there is room and need for six homes for blind babies and only one in existence. But here, in this favored Canada, nothing has heretofore been done in this direction, except a movement commenced last year by the late Mr. T. Hope Churchill, of Toronto, who, after collecting between one and two thousand dollars, specially deposited in a local bank to the credit of the fund, asked me to aid him in raising a sufficient sum to purchase premises for the proposed home. Having warm sympathy with Mr. Churchill's praiseworthy enterprise, I promised to give him the necessary assistance, but circumstances prevented me undertaking the work until the present time, and meanwhile death suddenly removed Mr. Churchill. Now, in order that the money collected may be utilized for the purpose for which it was subscribed, a charter (without stock subscription) is being secured so that the incorporated company can legally and properly lay claim to the money in the bank, and proceed to carry out the objects for which the charter is sought, viz.:
"To provide a refuge for baby and infant blind, to provide free scientific care, training and maintenance, and to save the lives of even a few of the many such unfortunate who, for lack of such service, perish every year; and to return these little ones to their parents, at school age, with normal healthy bodies and sound minds."
Such, in brief, is the task before the promoters. Money is urgently required to carry it to successful completion. Canadians have never been known to turn their backs on any deserving cause, claiming their aid, and surely this appeal will meet with a generous response. Help now, without waiting to be called upon by a collector, so that the close of the year may see "The Blind Babies' Home, Nursery and Kindergarten" in successful operation in the Capital City of Canada. Cheques may be made payable to "Canadian Blind Babies' Home." All remittances will be promptly acknowledged.

CHILDREN OF ALL AGES

Children of all ages—whether it be the new-born babe or the growing child—have to be constantly guarded as to their health. Upon the good health of the little one largely depends his strength and usefulness in after years. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal home medicine for children of all ages. They are a gentle but thorough laxative which are absolutely guaranteed to be free from opiates or other harmful drugs and which may be given to the youngest child with perfect safety and beneficial results. Through their action on the bowels and stomach they banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and soothe itching. Mothers, you can make your little ones well and keep them well by just keeping a box of the Tablets at hand and by giving an occasional dose to the baby to keep his little bowels regular and his stomach sweet. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A CANDID WITNESS.

In the examination of an Irish case for assault, counsel of cross-examining one of the witnesses, asked him what they had at the first place they stopped at? He answered:

"What next?"
"Two glasses of wine."
"What next?"
"One glass of brandy."
"What next?"
"A fight, of course!"

Hades Seen in Malaysia

"Kuala Lipis is very near to one's visualization of Hades," writes William Beebe in the Atlantic Monthly (Federated Malay States). The American adventurer, naturalist describes the burning fever stricken remoteness of one of the most inaccessible parts of the world. Near his rose covered dark bungalow in Kuala Lipis, "close under the lofty jungled heights, deep within a blind, hanging valley, six white men wailed in the stifling heat and planned the impossible—the combatting of virulent cholera among superstitious Malays."
Mr. Beebe draws an impressive contrast between man and Nature in the Pahang hinterland—"Wild men of the mountains, Sakala, almost monkey-like in their life, and wandering lepers with dissolving surfaces which once were faces. And in the same country with all these people whose lives were so pitifully hopeless, threading the bamboos and the tree ferns, were wonderful pheasants, indescribable argus, and green peacocks in flocks."
He writes of floating in a government houseboat down the Pahang whose "banks teemed with bird life of glorious colors, monkeys who laughed in the night. As one wakes from slumber, so came the dawn, gradually, in these tropical lowlands. The glare of the sudden leap of the sun above the horizon was dimmed, delayed, diluted, by the thick morning mist—mist whose grayness I loved to think of as the exact shade of elephant's breath." He had himself struggled through an attack of cholera and adds, as a detail, that it was necessary to have his Malay servants boil the knives and forks and spoons instead of simply washing them in the river—"With dead cholera victims floating past, children and others, and a hundred cases dying down river out of every two hundred, I dared take no chances."

HORRIFIED BY LEPEERS.
Once the writer went ashore after peafowl—and was balancing my ammunition, when a face suddenly appeared, more horrible than any beast, more inhuman than the lowest monkey. It was but the memory of a face, and should have belonged to a corpse long since buried; but, instead, it surmounted a living, well made body. Then I saw three men, and realized that I had engaged, 'sight unseen, three lepers." He continues:
"This horrible shock, together with a brief but sharp return of fever, made that forenoon a nerve fashioned mirage. The heat and humidity pressed upon me like material substance. I listened, yet dreaded to hear sounds, fearing them only less than the endless silence which framed them. When I squatted on a log, the rhythm of the hosts of advancing leeches (a pest with which the Malay jungle is infested), would sometimes seem to merge into a thousand endless, undulating lines of vermin, closing in on all sides, and the feel of their measured loopings on neck or wrist or hat rim was almost unendurable. The windless shush, shush of leaves under their combined movement increased, until it became a veritable bellowing.

"I longed to return, but I knew I must not. I must not give in to this terror of jungle things which usually aroused only interest. Then came the climax. I had the chance of my life—ten peacocks at close range—and for a while was putting myself together when I fairly screamed and dropped my gun, leaping from the hiding place and climbing ten feet into a tree tenanted by fireants, in a trembling sweat of fear. A tiny squirrel—one of the little dwarfs scarcely as long as one's hand—had jumped on my back, and I had reacted as from the charge of a buffalo."
MEN IN EVENING CLOTHES.
There is a graphic description of a formal dinner Mr. Beebe attended in the wilderness of Kuala Lipis, its circumstances typical of the manners and customs of the world ranging Briton!
"I shall never forget that entertainment—because of its sincere hospitality, its discomfort and the element of tragedy which ever played and flickered near the surface. In breathless heat we donned full evening dress and * * * then had to walk through dense reeds to the house of the government agent.
The air was still and saturated. Crickets chirped, and once an elephant trumpeted far in the distance. The smoking lantern covered the narrow path with a tapestry of shooting lights and shadows.
"We dined on a full course English dinner, with heating alcoholic drinks, waited on by a quartette of turbaned Indians, with the vespertine pouring down their shining faces. The lamps were gratefully dim, the servants stood silent as ghosts. The atmosphere was tense with an undercurrent of racked nerves. We had heard rumors of four of the six white people to greet us. Searching, and, something petty and unreasonable, had kept the other man and woman away.

Forty-Eight Years in "Canada's Western Empire"

Colonel John S. Dennis, C. M. G., who rode the plains of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba 48 years ago, when Indians and buffalo were plentiful, knows more about "Canada's Western Empire" than any other man. He killed and ate the buffalo, narrowly escaped being scalped by Indians on at least one occasion, suggested and built in Alberta the largest irrigation system in North America, recruited thousands of British and Canadians in the United States during the recent war and not only volunteered for but saw service with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Siberia. Now the four western provinces of Canada have a population of 2,500,000, the buffalo are to be found only in parks in the Canadian Rockies and the Hudson Bay coast which can only be maintained by increasing her population and developing her vast natural resources which, while ample security for many times her war debt, must be made productive of wealth through development.

Between 1905 and 1914 about 2,500,000 people settled in Canada, the largest proportion in the four western provinces. They left Great Britain, the United States and other countries for their new home, and Col. Dennis believes that 500,000 each year may follow them until these provinces have a total population of 10,000,000. Canada, he further believes, is destined to be "the keystone in the arch of the British Empire."

course in first aid to the injured, the half-drowned, the stunned, those taken with cramp and so on, being given at rooms in East Thirty-fourth street. "According to the teaching of the Royal Society," said she, "any one knows even a little bit about swimming is perfectly well able to help anyone in the water, provided he is he knows how to avoid or break that drowning clutch, the fear of which scares off so many amateur helpers."
The final life-saving lecture will include life-saving tests given during the first week in June, probably at one of the baths, at which time members who have their skill will receive certificates that they are qualified to teach life-saving scientifically. More than one hundred girls have taken the lessons, and most of them will qualify for a certificate, the president thinks, although it is not likely that many will take up the work professionally.

If Breath Comes Hard If Nose is Plugged You Have Catarrh

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use—fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—utilizes that marvelous antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.
The name of this grand specific is Catarrhazone, and you can't find its equal on earth for coughs, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's no longer necessary to drug the stomach—the spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essences of Catarrhazone, which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.
For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, or la grippe, Catarrhazone is of inestimable value.
The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.
Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for two months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c; sample size, 25c. Sold by all storekeepers and druggists.

Squirrel a Pocket Pet.

Because A. A. Blum, a local artist, once ministered to a small squirrel when his foot was hurt, the animal, after five months, refuses to be parted from its benefactor, and now practically lives in one of the pockets of Blum's coat.
About five months ago, in Waltham the baby squirrel fell and was hurt. A friend of Blum's turned the little animal over to him in its injured state and he nursed it back to health.
Since that time the squirrel has been given frequent opportunities of returning to the haunts of its parents, but persistently declines to go. In Pullman cars, hotels, on the street, in fact, everywhere, the squirrel curls itself in Mr. Blum's pocket and nibbles away at the toothsome nuts always to be found there.—Boston Post.

LIFE SAVING.

Organizations of volunteer life savers must look to their laurels. Within a few days the National Women's Life Saving League will be an incorporated body. A little more than a year ago when about fifteen young women got together and with some mummings decided to organize the league they did not dream that twelve months later it would have a membership of 190 girls, a hundred of whom were good swimmers efficiently posted in the art of life saving, that incorporation papers would be all ready to sign, that plans to open local branches in Boston and New Jersey would be under way with the prospect eventually of starting similar branches all over the United States.
Most of the fifteen originators were good swimmers, two or three of them in fact holding certificates for helping to save life in the water and without exception each had spent much of her vacation time in the vicinity of one and another of the stations of the United States Voluntary Life Saving Corps.
The names of the officers and projectors given by Miss Mehrtens show that even at the start the league had some good material.
For instance Miss Florence West, who when about 17 years old swam from the Battery to Coney Island, was made vice-president; Miss Adeline Trapp, who then 10 years old swam through Hell Gate and was the first woman to do it and who before had earned a silver medal by rescuing a girl from drowning at Old Mill Fort, was elected secretary. Miss Sadie Marrin and Miss Teresa Daly, slated for treasurer and financial secretary respectively, had been like the other two officers at home in the water since the age of 6 or so. On the roll were Mrs. Clara Banton, holder of a medal for saving a man from drowning; Misses McClory, Cousins; Miss Rebecca Trapp and Miss Heckler, off of whom had proved over and over again their power of endurance and cool headedness in the water.
"The progress we made at the practice meetings," Miss Mehrtens continued, "was remarkable and the interest we excited in visitors to the baths and outsiders who learned what we were trying to do was almost incredible. Coming at first out of curiosity one and another would say, 'I should love to do that.'
"Come on in and learn,' we would suggest, and usually they did. The membership climbed fast, although we only accepted candidates who knew a little about swimming or at least were not timid in the water. One girl I remember who had never learned to swim because she never had a chance, when taken in hand by one of our members actually learned in one lesson, such was her fearlessness and enthusiasm. That is the sort of members we like to get. We admit no girl to membership under 15 years of age and not then unless she is normally strong and intelligent.
"Size doesn't count for much in life saving. Miss Trapp, for instance, is a little bit of a thing who doesn't weigh 175 pounds, but in an emergency her quickness, coolness and fearlessness count far higher than mere pounds would."

Referring to the training of the members of the National Women's Life Saving League, the president said that during the last six months they have had two courses of lectures given by an Englishman who was formerly a teacher in the Royal Life Saving Society of England, and by a New York physician, the first consisting of lessons in life-saving, taking place Monday and Friday evenings at the Twenty-third street bath, Manhattan, and the President street bath, Brooklyn; the second course in first aid to the injured, the half-drowned, the stunned, those taken with cramp and so on, being given at rooms in East Thirty-fourth street. The life-saving lectures have been conducted like conferences, Miss Mehrtens declared, English and American life-saving methods being compared and discussed and the best points in both selected for practice.

"According to the teaching of the Royal Society," said she, "any one knows even a little bit about swimming is perfectly well able to help anyone in the water, provided he is he knows how to avoid or break that drowning clutch, the fear of which scares off so many amateur helpers."

A JEWEL IN THE ROUGH

She came along humming behind her closed lips, and then suddenly turning a corner, stopped dead with a horrified stare in her eyes. Katrine had come round by one of the lowest dens in the city. Katrine knew it both inside and out, for there was no place from hut to hut in Dawson that she was afraid to enter. The door was standing open. It opened inward, and there was a group of men, some inside and some outside, and among them they were forcing into the street a drunken woman. The man to the place was beneath the level of the ground, and reached by a few uneven, mazy steps, and up these the unfortunate was blindly stumbling under a rain of blows, pushes and curses. She was old, and her hair streamed in ragged streaks across her forehead, and her tawdry skirt was long, and got under her unsteady feet. Just as she had managed to totter to the utmost step, a young man in the group behind her struck her a heavy blow between the shoulders. She tripped in the long skirt and trod on it, tearing it with a ripping sound from the waist, and fell forward, striking her face on the uneven frozen ground. Katrine sprung forward, but before she could reach her the woman had staggered to her feet and turned to face her tormentors, the blood streaming now from her cut lips, her trembling hands vaguely grasping at her torn skirt and trying to keep it to her waist. A roar of laughter burst from the men at the pitiful sight, and then died suddenly as they recognized Katrine. She stepped in front of the old woman, and faced them with a scorn in her eyes beyond all words. Then she turned in silence, put her arm around the helpless creature's waist, and supported her frail, tottering steps over the slippery, uneven ground. For an instant the men stood abashed and ashamed; then when the spell of those great fearless, scornful eyes was removed, their natures reasserted themselves, and a general laugh went round. "Birds of a feather!" shouted one, mockingly, as the two retreating figures disappeared in the gathering darkness. Katrine heard it, and winced; but she did not relax the hold of her supporting arm, and by gentle and repeated questioning managed to elicit from the helpless old being where she lived. Katrine turned her steps in the given direction, and drawing out her handkerchief wiped the blood from the old woman's face, and smoothed her straggling gray hair back behind her ears. When they reached her cabin at last, Katrine saw that the stove was black and empty. There was no light of any sort in the place, and the freezing darkness of the interior chilled her through. She would not leave the old woman until she had lighted a fire and candle for her and got her into bed; then, without waiting to listen to the mumbled and incoherent thanks showered upon her, she went out gently and on to her own place. She felt in a very serious mood as she made her cup of coffee and cooked herself a plate of bacon, and then sat in the red glow of her well-tended hearth to her solitary meal. "Birds of a feather!" that hateful sentence echoed round her, until the silent walls themselves seemed taunting her. Was she not, after all, really akin to that old woman, and might she not so? Day end like her? What was all her own drinking and card-playing and knocking about in the saloons to end in? The shivers and threw a frightened glance round her. This girl, who would have laughed at all sermons, advice and admonitions scornfully aside, was almost startled now into a sudden reformation by the chance object-lesson of this afternoon. She could not forget it, and in the silence the whole scene rose up vividly before her. She began to look for Stephen to come and break the silence, and glanced impatiently at the clock several times. He was coming in town that night, she knew. It was a relief such as she had never experienced when at last he arrived, and she had not her own company only any longer. She was unusually silent all the evening. Stephen did not try to force her into conversation; he was content to sit on the opposite side of the hearth and let his eyes rest upon her in silence. She was rather, he thought, as

Berwick, Ont.—"I had organic trouble, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Medicine all my troubles passed away. I was made strong and well and have been ever since. Now we have a fine baby boy six months old, and I know that I would still be suffering if it had not been for your remedies. My husband and myself say that your remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I recommend them to my friends. One of my aunts is taking them now."
—Mrs. NAPOLEON LAVIGNE, Berwick, Ontario, Canada.
Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its ability to correct sterility in many cases. This fact is well established as evidenced by the above letter and hundreds of others we have published in these columns.
In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.
If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

quickly. "Take me away from here, she said abruptly and suddenly. She had been thinking all evening how she should approach the subject with him, and that at last his leaving had started away all her cautious phrases and left her only the crudest words at her command to express her meaning. Stephen was startled and confused, but his voice was very tender as he took her hand in his, and said: "I don't understand, dear; what do you mean?" He took her hand tremble in his. She looked up at him appealingly. Her eyes seemed frightened and certain. She was more womanly at this moment than she had ever been. Accustomed to her bright, fearless independence, admire that as he might, in this weakness, whatever its cause, she was irresistible. "Well, I mean," she said, speaking nervously, but with an effort to control her excitement, "the other day you spoke of our being married, and I said I couldn't stand a quiet life. Stephen, I will marry you now, and go anywhere with you. I will be content with any life, any monotony—only take me from here at once. I loathe this place, this life." She stopped suddenly, and a wave of crimson blood swept over the white face. "I want to be taken away," she repeated. Stephen looked at her a moment in silence, with a sense of apprehension and alarm. He could not do as she asked as he was not free—his claim held him. "I don't know quite what you mean," he said, a little stiffly, though he felt he did know. "If you'd be quite impossible for me to go away now; my whole heart's in the work, and I've sunk all I had in it." "Yes, and your soul, too," said

Katrine, suddenly, looking at him with shining eyes and a calm face. "You're a brave man, and your soul, the same as we are here—a community of slaves," she said. Stephen grew red, and looked confused, alarmed, and angry, all at the same time. "I don't know what you mean," he said, "and leave ground like that. It would be insanity. Ask your doctor, ask anybody if you would." "I don't know what you mean," she said, "but then he never preached about his soul, and wanting to reform people." "No one can reform you if you won't reform yourself," replied Stephen, coldly; and there he spoke the truth. "Who was it who put in our prayer, 'Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil? Here I live in temptation; I am always thrown into evil. If I were not—'" Her voice was very quiet, and had a strange, pathetic note in it. It ceased, and then there was silence. Stephen felt as if a hand were laid on his lips, and crushed down the voice that kept struggling from his heart. A second more, and then the girl laughed suddenly. "Oh, I was stupid! I did not know what I was saying—did not mean it, anyway. It's quite right for you to stick to your calm and the idea you started with, and so on. You will make a great success if you do, and that is all you want!" Her tone was jesting and cynical as ever now—the usual hardness had come back to her face. The moment of submission, of confidence, of repentance, had passed—a moment when she could have been moved, and won to a better life he wished, and he had lost it. He felt it. Yet how could he have done otherwise? "Forget what I said—quite," she added; "and so now. It's getting late, and I want to get down to the saloons."

A thrill of horror went through Stephen, as she knew it would. He gazed at her blankly with horrible feelings, as if he were murdering somebody, clutching at his heart. "What are you waiting for?" she said, impatiently. "Why don't you hurry back to your claim?" "Katrine," he stammered, staring at her, but even as he spoke, a great wall of gold seemed to rise between them and shut her from him. "Forgive me," he muttered, brokenly; "I can't give it up now." "Good-night," said Katrine; and he turned and fumbled for the door handle and went out. When he was gone, Katrine turned to her small square of looking-glass that hung beneath the lamp on the wall. "What a fool I was to-night!" she said, looking at the sweet reflection and smiling lips. A few minutes after Stephen had gone, a slight figure, muffled up to the eyes, slipped out of No. 13 and hurried with quick steps down the uneven footway of Good Luck Row. That night Stephen climbed to his cabin with his head on fire and a singing in his ears. A terrific struggle was going on in his breast. He felt the path of duty was clear: to him now, and equally that he did not want to follow it. He had tried to shut his eyes to it; he had tried to believe that it was not clear, that he did not know what was right or necessary to do, and therefore that he might be excused if he did not do it; but he could close his eyes no longer. They had been dragged open to-night, and he could not willfully close them again. As he strode up the narrow little stair path leading to his cabin, he felt that he knew his duty, and he groaned out aloud in the silent icy night. To leave now meant to endanger, perhaps to sacrifice, the million dollars that he felt in a month or two he could take out of his claim; and to stay meant to endanger, perhaps to sacrifice, a human soul! A million dollars, a human soul! These two ideas possessed him. A million dollars, a human soul! The two thoughts rang alternately through his brain until it seemed as if voices were crying them out upon the soundless air. According to his religion, spirits combat for the soul of man, and it seemed to Stephen that night as he mounted the solitary path under the far-seeing eyes of the frosty stars above him, that spirits really fought around him, good and evil, for the victory. "A million dollars!" shouted the evil ones; "do not throw them away." "A human soul!" wailed the others; "do not let it fall into evil." His sensitive, excited mind trembled before the crisis. His own soul shuddered and sickened, for he seemed to see the host of greed of gold, and they were stronger than the hosts of light. And Stephen himself now was badly equipped for the conflict. He felt and recognized with dismay he had not the strength and the fervor now that had brought him through former battles. He was as a warrior that has fallen asleep and awakened to find his arms grown rusty while he has been sleeping. (To be continued.)

A Deadly Indian Weed That is Cheap and Can Easily be Smuggled.
(From the Hong Kong Telegraph.)
The Indian weed is being largely imported into Inso-China at the present moment, says our informant, who holds a high position in the military world. He has given us a recipe or two of the plant, which obviously lends itself to the trade of smuggling. With first hand knowledge of his subject, he declares that the weed, more pernicious than opium or tobacco, will in the near future take the place of opium in the Far East. It is of small bulk, this deadly weed, is cheap in comparison with its elder brother, and can be smuggled easily. The opium convention does not, as far as we know, take account of the danger which threatens from the importation of this drug. The French authorities in Indo-China absolutely prohibit the hemp plant, but in country in ever-increasing quantities. It can be used as a narcotic, and smoked or chewed; the physical and mental effects are deadly. We have not been able to ascertain as yet whether this noxious drug has made its appearance in Hong Kong, but we take this opportunity of calling the attention of the authorities to the danger of its doing so. It is a danger that should excite the thoughts of the legislative council. The noxious weed is smoked much by the lower class of natives in South Africa, where it is known under the name of dahga and causes many crimes, the women and Hottentots running amuck when saturated with the hellish effects.

If Your Food Ferments or Disagrees Just Read This!
Thousands of broken-down despondent dyspeptics have recently been given back their health. These happy people that endowed them with a new lease of life—it was simply their common sense in selecting a tried and proven medicine, one specially adapted to their particular ailment. All these splendid cures were effected by Dr. Hamilton's Pills which beyond all question have a strange power to restore a weak or ailing stomach. If your stomach is tired and overworked try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and note the prompt improvement. Pain before or after eating will disappear. You'll no longer have that nauseous, gassy, bad tasting sensation. You'll get a real vigorous appetite and digest what you eat. Lots of well digested food is bound to increase your strength, to make you brighter and more ambitious. In a week you'll feel like a different person. In a month you'll be permanently restored. For folks who are cut of sorts, not feeling just up to the scratch, perhaps bothered with headaches or constipation, to them Dr. Hamilton's Pills will prove a boon.

SUNDAY AT HOME
IT MIGHT BE WORSE.

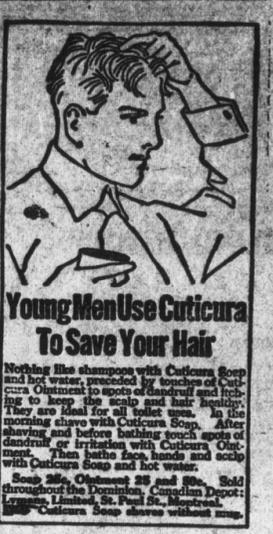

If everybody's misery was written in his face, There'd be but little pleasure here among the human race, The glow of cheerful happiness would fade away and die, And all the springs of joy and mirth would soon be running dry. So don't you grow discouraged then, if everything goes wrong, For if you wait, a streak of joy will surely come along. Don't keep a moping all the time as mournful as a hearse, But goup your trouble down and say, It might be worse. —Chicago Herald.

JOY IN SORROW.
The joy of Christ was not a thing apart from the rest of His experience; that is harsh and painful, but the joy of self-determination with humanity and the bearing of all its pains and sorrows. "He took not upon Him the nature of angels," remote from actual experience of life's reality. Still less did He take upon Himself the separateness of self-absorption. "But He took upon Him the seed of Abraham" (Heb. 2:16). He was so near to God in spirit, that He could not hold Himself apart from any man. All His life and action sprang directly from His abiding moral relation to the Father, and the character and quality of His joys were determined by the same fact. To Him even the sorrows He experienced being sacrificial sorrows, were the sources of joy, the never-falling fountains of ineffable gladness.

THE RAINBOW.
(Layman, in Sheffield, Eng., Independent.)
The little church was slowly emptying after Evensong. Through the open doors came the soothing harmony of the voluntary as the organist followed the benediction "Amen" with soft strains that fell on the ear like a veritable "Nug Dimittis," finding their way almost unconsciously into the very hearts of the departing congregation, and adding to the sense of spiritual peace already induced by the service. Outside in the little churchyard a group gathered around a lofty granite cross, whose base showed a number of names of "happy warriors" who had passed on after giving their young lives for the cause of humanity. The spirit of sadness lingered in the faces of some of those who contemplated the memorial erected to their own glorious dead; while in others there seemed a glow of pride surrounding the feeling of personal loss. A man of an undying hope and faith in reunion beyond the grave. And so we turned away, out into the still beauty of a Sabbath evening in summer. The setting sun still shone from a blue sky flecked with white cumulus clouds, and over in the southeast a glorious arch spanned the firmament—the rainbow, with all his orientament beauties. It was if Nature had worked its wondrous charm in order to distract our minds from memories of past sorrow, and to remind us that while there is life there is hope. God's "bow in the heavens," with its age-old message, must always appeal to men, if only from the material side, the admiration of His intricate mechanism, and His wondrous curve of span. Then again we recall the fact that it is emblematic of life's journey, with its varied experiences of joys and sorrows, sunshine and cloud. Were life one perpetual joy we should have no greater happiness, for we should have no comparisons. Even the continuous sun in tropic climes tries to fade from an unmix'd blessing, that a traveller has found when longing for the shadow of a rock in a thirsty land. It is well that life brings with it clouds, if only that we learn our lessons better.

I love the rainbow; from my earliest years it has always had a fascination for me. It gave me, I think, one of the things that gave me a glimmering of something that was far beyond man's power to compass; something that ranked with the thunder and lightning that awed us, without having quite the same mental or physical effect. Above all, it was, and is still to me, a never-failing reminder of the promise given in the beginning of the world's history, as told in Genesis. With the knowledge that they alone were the survivors of the more flood, Noah and his family doubtless stood in fear lest there might come a time when they might not have the good fortune to escape a similar visitation. With what relief then did they welcome the Voice that told them this: "This is the token of the covenant which I make between Me and you, and every living creature that is with you, for perpetual generations: I do set My bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between Me and the earth. And it shall come to pass, when I will remember My covenant which is between Me and you, and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh." There we have the Patriarch and his family starting life afresh with a new element infused into it—hope, bred of the faith in God which had not failed them.

So we turn from the memorials of our lost hopes and look ahead. What more fitting than the association of the rainbow with fresh hope? Composed of all the colors in creation's scheme, what could better indicate the qualities of hope? Before it can evolve its beautiful panorama there must be the clouds of adversity, dripping with the rain of circumstance; no cloudless sky can bring that glorious message. If we had no troubles, hope would be unnecessary. Yet hope is like the rainbow in that it is compounded of the finest materials, the most evanescent elements; but, spiritual in its essence, it is insusceptible in its value in our lives. It gives us a fresh outlook, a sanguine spur or incentive to our efforts to attain to the bright side of things. Intangible, yet most potent; it is one of the chief

THE INJURED FINGER.
How to Treat It When No Antiseptics Are To Be Had.
Every one knows that disfigurement and sometimes suppuration oftentimes follow the bruising of the fingers. Worse still, at times the injury results in an unsightly finger nail until the blackening disappears.

Now, the next time you squeeze your fingers in the door or hit them when you aim for the head of a tack seat yourself on a chair in front of a stationary wash-stand and hold your hand under the cold water faucet in as nearly an upright position as is possible and let the cold water run on the injured members for nearly an hour. If the water gets too cold turn it off or a few minutes, but be sure and keep the hand in the upright position, so that the blood will not run too freely into the bruised portions of the finger and discolor it.

Cold water is nature's own antiseptic. While away camping with a physician and his family where there were many campers in a lovely spot miles away from a drug store the doctor demonstrated the healing virtues of cold water in many ways. One day a member of the camp had the misfortune to get his hand poisoned by having it cut with the fins of a certain fish. When he came to the doctor for aid his arm was greatly swollen and darkly purple, even above the elbow. The physician washed the wound with small sponges of absorbent cotton saturated with cold spring water, and he also made him keep compresses made of absorbent cotton and cold water over the wound, changing them as soon as they became warm and fresh ones. It was one of the quickest and most satisfactory cures I ever witnessed.

FREQUENT HEADACHES

A Sure Sign That the Blood is Watery and Impure.
People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons and the form of anaemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headaches, together with disturbance of the digestive organs.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and pallor of the face, they show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed towards building up your blood. A fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will remove the headache. More disturbances to the health are caused by their blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment, and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are undernourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear. There are more people who owe their present state of good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine, and most of them do not hesitate to say so. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The bodies arrived Saturday night and the funerals took place from the McRae homestead to the Union church on Sunday. Services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Anderson, brother-in-law, assisted by the Rev. J. J. Falcher, Lansdowne. Funeral sermon taken from Deut. 28 and 29th verse. Interment took place in the Union cemetery. Mrs. McRae was Miss Frances Day, of Ottawa, and was a sister of Rev. John Day, and was engaged here several years ago in connection with the Holiness Movement church. Mr. McRae is survived by three brothers, Charles, Ottawa; William and Anderson, Lansdowne; three sisters, Mrs. Anderson, Houghton, N.Y.; Mrs. Anglin and Miss Amelia McRae, Iroquois.

The late Mr. McRae was born in this locality on the McRae homestead. He was highly esteemed. He was a school teacher and a minister till ill-health compelled him to resign his professions. He took up farming in Edmonton and at the time of his death was engaged in the real estate business.

Rev. Wilson and wife, Athens, Rev. J. C. Black, Smiths Falls, G. D. McLean, Miss Bertina Greene and others attended the funeral from here.

DONOVAN THE MAN FOR LEEDS, SAYS TRAVELLER

Could be Elected by the Largest Majority Ever Recorded, Says Traveller, After Covering Constituency.

Bellefleur Intelligencer, Aug. 30.
Sir Thomas White is expected to resign his parliamentary seat in the Leeds constituency on account of his appointment to the G.T.R. arbitration board. There is considerable speculation as to what will happen in Leeds after Sir Thomas retires, but a Scotch-Canadian commercial traveller who spent Sunday in Bellefleur says that he has just been all over Leeds constituency and made special enquiries as to the political feeling. The result of his enquiries, he says, was to establish the fact that from one end of the riding to the other the opinion was expressed that the strongest candidate possible would be Mr. A. E. Donovan, formerly of Athens, who recently represented Brockville constituency in the Legislature, but was swept aside by the anti-Hearst referendum vote which produced so many surprises. The traveller said that no stronger "come-back" than that of Mr. Donovan could be imagined. His defeat for the Provincial House was a disagreeable surprise to his hosts of friends, and the result was not pleasing either to Conservatives or Liberals, being one of those flukes which occasionally happens in abnormal times.

According to the observation and conclusions of the traveller in question, A. E. Donovan could win Leeds with the largest majority ever recorded, getting a generous measure of Liberal support as well as Conservative.

Harmony does not seem to prevail in Leeds Liberal ranks. Hon. Mackenzie King spoke at Brockville Saturday, the occasion being a Liberal political picnic. He was assisted by Hon. George P. Graham, who came all the way from his summer home on Station Island to take part in the big post-war in which he was featured as the big chief next to Sir Mackenzie King. Strange to relate, the defeated candidate, Mr. A. C. Hardy, who ran against Sir Thomas White, seems to have been entirely ignored in the picnic advertising, as his name did not appear in the newspaper displays. It was all King and Graham. It is alleged that there has been friction between Mr. Hardy and Mr. Graham dating from the last general election, and this may account for the apparently studied ignoring of Mr. Hardy in the presence of the Big Chief.

Leeds constituency is a combination of South Leeds and Brockville ridings. South Leeds was represented by Geo. Taylor (Conservative), of Gananoque; and Brockville by John Webster (Conservative), of Brockville. Both were translated to the Senate and Sir Thomas White is the present representative, being elected first by acclamation on the resignation of George Taylor and being returned at the last general election by a majority of 3,157 over Mr. A. C. Hardy, the Liberal candidate.

COUNTY W. C. T. U. HOLD CONVENTION

Leeds County W.C.T.U. held a successful convention at Gananoque on Wednesday and Thursday of last week meeting at the Methodist church. The sessions were presided over by Mrs. B. O. Britton, president.

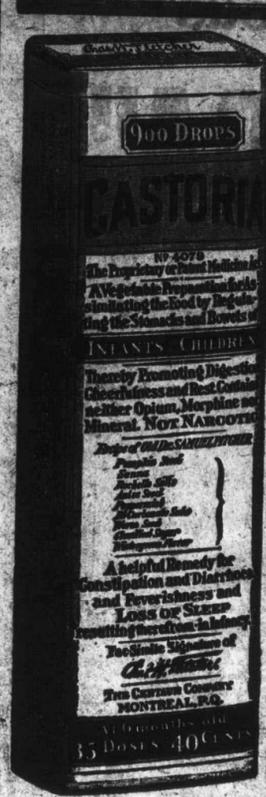

The reports of the various departments showed that good work had been done during the year. On Wednesday afternoon several excellent papers were read. Mrs. B. H. Brown, Athens, read a most interesting and helpful paper on W.C.T.U. work from its inception. Other papers were written by Miss Edith Giles, Brockville, Miss Drew, Brockville, and a very interesting talk by Mrs. W. J. Webster, recording secretary of the county.

The election of officers took place on Thursday morning. Mrs. I. N. Beckstedt, Lansdowne, was re-elected hon. president. Mrs. B. O. Britton, not wishing to continue in office as president, her place was taken by Mrs. E. H. Brown; first vice-president, Mrs. V. L. Mackie, Athens; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. H. Donevan, Lansdowne; recording secretary, Mrs. W. J. Webster, Lansdowne; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Slack, Athens.

A more detailed report will be given next week.
