with his dinner, and Constance, listening to Lord Norman, had almost forgotten the strange and unaccountable change in Rawson Fenton's expression when he turned to her and said:
"How seldom one sees a crest that is markedly appropriate to the house to which it belongs."
Constance looked at him with a cold
surprise.
"A strange remark, you think?" he said, with a smile. "Let me explain.
This crest now," and he pointed to the spoon, but swiftly, as if he did not want the gesture noticed, "this is the Brake-spare crest?"
"Yes," assented Constance.
"The Brake-spare crest," he repeated. "A spear, broken apparently, with an eagle hovering over it."
Constance waited in silence, feeling his eyes keen as a hawk's, not an eagle's fixed upon her.
"You see, of course! A broken spear—Brake-spare. I don't think I ever met with one more appropriate to the family name."
"No?" said Constance.
He turned to his plate with a smile,
but his acute brain was wonderful to relate, in a whirl. The dining-room of Brake-spare Castle vanished from his view, and instead, he saw himself in the lonely hut in the Australian wilds,
the log fire-burning brightly, and himself kneeling in front of it looking at a ring which he had picked up from the door-sill after the rangers had fled. And that ring bore, engraved upon it, this same crest—a broken spear and an eagle. The crest of the Marquis of Brake-spare! The man who had robbed him of the woman he loved, the woman
he had sworn to make his own.
Rawson Fenton was a clever man,
with a head as hard, a heart as cold—
and yet a man of the other millions, and yet at that moment his head
swam and his heart beat furiously.
What did it mean?
He looked up from his plate to the man who sat at the head of the table.
A song dies out, but a dream lives on.
The rose-tint of the rarest morning.
Are lingering yet in a distant dawn.
Somewhere, dim in the days to follow
And far away in the life to be,
Passing sweet, is a song of gladness—

for—
That never rise from the bars unstrung.

And listen silent for the songs unsung.

face paled.
"We shall be among the grouse at Glenlivet next year, I hope," the marquis was saying. "And I hope you and the duke will come, duchess. You must bring him by sheer force if necessary."
The duchess made some laughing
rejoinder.
Rawson Fenton leaned back, his eyes
fixed upon the crest on his fork.
The lady on his left spoke to him,
and he almost started. She was saying something about his chance of winning the seat. He replied almost at haphazard.
"You are sure to win, I think," she said. "Especially if the duke and the marquis are on your side."
He made a suitable reply, but spoke at random. A broken spear with an eagle! Yes, that was the crest engraved on the ring which he had picked up on the floor of the hat in the bush.
He turned to Constance.
"The marquis has been a great traveller, has he not?" he said.
"Looking straight before her she replied:
"Yes, I believe so."
"Well, you should know," he said,
with a significant smile.
Constance colored, but grew more impulsive.
"Yes, he has—I think."
"Has he ever been to Australia?" he said, carelessly.
She half turned her eyes upon him.
"To Australia?" she said.
He nodded carelessly.
"Yes, I rather think I heard somebody say that he had been there."
"I do not know," she replied curiously.
He turned his attention to his plate,
balked in this direction, but the crest stared him in the face, and he felt—he could, cold Rawson Fenton—that he could have seized the marquis by the throat, and cried: "This crest, the same is on the ring I found! Explain!"
The dinner proceeded.
To Constance it seemed as intermin-
able as it did to him.
At last the ladies rose. Rawson Fenton opened the door for them, and as Constance passed out he let his eyes dwell longingly, hungrily, on her face.
She had never seemed more lovely,
more worth winning to him than she did to-night.
"Draw your chairs closer," said the marquis, with the smile that was once so rare but was now so frequent, on his face. "We have an old port, if you care for it, Mr. Fenton, and he touched the rare wine lying snug in its wicker cradle.
Rawson Fenton poured out a glass
with due care.
"There is no wine like port," he said.
Lord Norman sipped and nodded.
"It will never be beaten," he said,
sententiously.
"And yet there are so many rivals in the field," said Rawson Fenton, holding the glass up to the light, and viewing it critically. "For instance, the Australian wine."
The marquis bent forward with courteous attention.
"You were saying," he said.
"I was going to say that the Australian wines were meeting with a great deal of notice," said Rawson Fenton.
He had moved up to the next seat to the marquis, and his keen eyes were fixed upon him, but with a veiled keenness.
"Yes, yes," assented the marquis,
"so I have heard."
"Then you have not tasted them?"
asked Rawson Fenton.
"Give me port before all the wines
in the world," remarked Lord Norman,
consistently sipping his glass.
"I take great interest in Australia,"
said Rawson Fenton, leaning back in his chair with an easeful smile. "I suppose it is because I began to make money there."
The marquis inclined his head with gracious attention.
"Were you ever there, Lord Brake-spare? I have heard that you are a great traveller."
The marquis raised his glass and drank his wine leisurely.
"Oh, yes," he said carelessly. "I have been to Australia."
Rawson Fenton lowered his lid to hide the flash of his eyes.
"Indeed! What part, may I ask?"
The marquis carelessly pushed the port to Lord Norman.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Fenton.
What part? Oh, I roamed about promiscuously. It is an interesting country."
"I envy your travelling experience," Brake-spare, said Lord Norman. "You seem to have been everywhere."
The marquis smiled, and shrugged
his shoulders.
"A rolling stone gathers no moss, Norman," he said.
"But he gains a great deal of knowledge of his fellow men," remarked Rawson Fenton. "But we were speaking of Australia. Did you penetrate into the wilds, marquis?"
"The wilds?" he replied. "It depends upon what you call the wilds. I did the usual tourist round. Finish the bottle, Norman. No? Mr. Fenton, you will have some more wine?"
Rawson Fenton shook his head, and the marquis rose.
"Shall we join the ladies?" he said.
Had he tried to talk him? was the question in Rawson Fenton's mind.
But the marquis's manner had been so natural, so unforced, that Fenton could not answer the question in the affirmative.
They went into the drawing room.
Constance was seated at the piano, and Rawson Fenton was moving in her direction when the marquis stepped pass-him. He stopped and looked at her.
His brain was still in a ferment, his question: How did it happen that the ring he picked up from the floor of the hut bore the Marquis of Brake-spare's crest? still unanswered.
Coffee was served, and he found himself surrounded and questioned about the coming election.
A few days ago it had been foremost in his thoughts. Now he could scarcely speak of it. His eyes kept wandering toward Constance at the piano. Her voice—for they had persuaded her to sing—rang in his ears. Her presence, the sight of her face, the sound of her voice, had awakened the old passion in his breast. She was betrothed to the Marquis of Brake-spare. No matter.
He would win her, match her from him.
She should be his!
He broke away from the circle surrounding him, and moved toward her.
She had just finished a song, and was leaving the piano, amid a murmur of applause.
"I have come to say, 'Good-night,'"
he said.
Constance extended her hand coldly,
and as he took it he bent forward and murmured, inaudibly, say but herself, 'I have kept my promise. You can trust me.'
"Good-night, Mr. Fenton," she said.
He made his adieux to the marchioness and the duchess.
"But your carriage," said the for-
mer. "You must let us send you home,
Mr. Fenton."
"Thank you, marchioness, he said.
"But my man assured me that the damage would be repaired long before this Good-night."
He went into the hall, and glanced round him. The Brake-spare crest on the stained window was invisible, but he felt rather than saw it there, and on the buttons of the footman's livery.
"Your carriage is out here, sir," said
the butler.
"No matter," he said, I will walk.
It is at the blacksmith's, in the village,
no doubt," and he passed out.
All the way down the avenue the strange coincidence of the crest filled his mind. He reached the lodge, still thinking of it as he "brow a coin to the lodge-keeper."
The village nestled out, "to the park,
and still buried in thought, he made his way toward it.
He had reached the dark turn of the road, when suddenly a dark figure stepped out of the darkness and touched his arm.
"Guv'nor, is that you," said the man
in a cautious voice.
Rawson Fenton's nerves were highly strung that night, and he started; but he recovered himself in a moment, and grasped the arm of the unseen man who had arrested him.
"Yes, it is I," he said. "What do
you want?"
At the sound of his voice the man uttered an exclamation and tried to free himself. But Rawson Fenton held him tight and dragged him into the faint light that flickered from the lamp
of the village inn.

A CAR-DRIVER'S STORY.
"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many remedies which gave me little relief, but when I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I felt better. I bought six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit,
because I had finished the fourth bottle,
my hands were as

CHAPTER XXV.

Rawson Fenton's keen eyes scanned
the man's face searchingly. He thought him a tramp at first sight, but after a moment's examination he saw that the figure had scarcely the tramp look about him, though he was poorly dressed in a long rough coat, which was stained with rain and mud; his face was unshaven, and still further concealed by a broad-brimmed slouch hat, which, at Rawson Fenton's strong grasp he had pulled over his eyes.

He could have wrenched himself from Rawson Fenton's hold easily enough, but he was held captive as much by the keen piercing eyes as by the smooth white hand.
"Let go, gov'nor!" he said, surlily.
"Not so fast, my friend," retorted Rawson Fenton. "Have the goodness to remember that it was you who accused me. May I ask what it is that you want?"

"Nothing of you."
"But of some one else, eh? And who might that be, pray?"
"That's no business of yours," the
man growled.
Rawson Fenton eyed him with a half smile.
"I wonder what you are, my friend,"
he thought; "and what you are lurking about Brake-spare Castle for?"
"Good-night," said the man, getting his arm free.

A Boy's Appearance.

Ruth Ashmore, addressing herself to
"That Boy of Mine," in March Ladies' Home Journal, writes that his personal appearance "should be good. You owe that to yourself. And whether it is the office or when you are out visiting you should be a clean, wholesome looking young man. Cleanliness does much to ward goodliness, and a clean body aids a clean soul. It may not be in your power to possess a dress suit, but if you do not not, don't borrow or hire one. Brush up the best clothes you have, make them immaculate, and then enjoy yourself and forget your clothes. Your linen can always be fresh and clean, and your tie
can be in good style and properly knotted. Never wear a loud coat, and never imitation jewelry. Gentlemen select plain gold buttons, and simple gold links
and carapins of the most modest pattern.
If you can afford dress clothes, remember
never to appear in them until after dark,
you may wear, as you like best, either a lawn tie or a black satin one, but the stiff little bow should be looped by yourself, and not bought ready made."

Basie—Ma and pa have been quarrelling, haven't they? Willie—Yes, Basie—Which one got the worst of it,
do you know? Willie—Not yet, I'm waiting to see which one of them slams
the door going out.
Willie—What does a still, small voice mean, papa? Willie's Father—That's what you're hearing, Willie, when they have done wrong. Willie—But when you've done wrong the voice you hear isn't still and small.

POETRY.
Songs Unsung.
Sweet the song of the thrush at dawn,
When the grass lies wet with dew;
Sweet the sound of the brook's low whisper
Mid roads and rushes wandering through
Clear and pure is the west wind's murmur
That croons in the branches all day long;
But the songs unsung are the sweetest
The soul's swift flight like a swallow
For the note unheard is the bird's true
And the bud unbloomed is the rosiest rose.
Dearest thoughts are the ones unsung,
That only the heart sees, listening,
hears;
Most great joys bring a touch of silence,
Greatest grief is in a hushed voice.
What we hear is the fleeting echo;
A song dies out, but a dream lives on.
The rose-tint of the rarest morning.
Are lingering yet in a distant dawn.
Somewhere, dim in the days to follow
And far away in the life to be,
Passing sweet, is a song of gladness—
The spirit-child of the soul's truest Chords untended are the ones we wait
for—
That never rise from the bars unstrung.
We turn our steps to the years beyond us,
And listen silent for the songs unsung.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued.
"I must say that I never can refrain from envying the man who wins—by birth, not purchase—one of the old English manor-houses," said Rawson Fenton,
with an air of frank candor.
"Ah, yes," said the duchess, with her genial smile. "But you have no idea what they cost in repairs, Mr.
Fenton. The duke often declares that he could have built the Towers over and over again with the money he has spent on tinkering it."
"Yes," he responded, bending forward, "a new house with the latest improvements, but unalloyed by time
and barren of associations."
"I didn't know you were a poet, Mr.
Fenton," exclaimed Lady Ruth.
He smiled, not at all discomfited.
"I have all an Englishman's reverence for antiquity, Lady Ruth."
"Soup, sir?" asked a footman at his elbow. "Clear or thick?"
Rawson Fenton replied at hazard,
and took up his spoon.
"I mortally offended an old man at a City dinner the other day by declining turtle soup," he said.
Constance could not continue through the whole evening looking straight in-front of her, and she turned her eyes upon him.
Suddenly the expression of his face changed, and his eyes grew fixed upon the innocent pieces of plate.
Constance could not help being startled by the change in his face, and she watched him. He looked down at the spoon for a moment, then raised his eyes and glanced round the table. Then he put down the spoon, and took up a fork,
and seemed to examine it with an affectation of aimless curiosity. Was it only fancy, or did she really see his hand tremble?
However, he said nothing, but went

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 17, 1896.

EDITORIAL CHAT.

A Liberal cabinet for the second time in the history of the Dominion has been formed. Mr Laurier has made some changes in the distribution of portfolios among the different provinces. Quebec which has hitherto filled second place to her larger sister province, Ontario, now holds the dominant power in the administration, seven of her representatives holding portfolios, the premier and minister of public works being among the number. British Columbia and New Brunswick each possess a portfolio. Kings County for the first time in its history is represented in the administration, Dr Borden, her representative of many years, taking the portfolio of militia. On the whole the new cabinet is composed of strong and tried men, many of its members having proved their worth in the narrower field of local politics.

The Democratic Convention held at Chicago was a notable one. The silver platform was adopted and President Cleveland censured. William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, a comparatively unknown man, having made an eloquent and stirring address to the convention, although not previously mentioned for presidential honors, was chosen as the Democratic nominee for president. The New York delegates indignant at the stand of the Convention on the silver question refused to take any part in the selection of a nominee. This vexed currency question has brought about a complete transformation of the two political parties in the U. S. In the election which takes place shortly, the majority of the voters, irrespective of party, will mark their ballots for "Sound Currency" or "Bi-metalism."

The life of the French president, M. Faure, has been attempted for the third time. The last attempt was made on Tuesday. The president had gone to Long Champs to review the troops. On entering the field a man stepped out from the crowd and fired a revolver at him. Luckily the shot did not take effect. The would-be assassin was immediately arrested. He claimed that he had only fired a blank cartridge. Scarcely two years have elapsed since the assassination of President Carnot by the anarchist, Sante. Evidently the French presidency is not the most desirable position imaginable, to fill.

The move of the British government in strengthening the navy of Great Britain, has met with the disapproval of Mr Gladstone. Despite the opinion of England's great ex-premier, we are inclined to believe that money spent in this direction is not wasted. On the strength of Britain's navy largely depends the peace of Europe. There are European powers which would attempt England's humiliation if they dared. The warning of the eminent Sir Charles Dill, that Great Britain would need, ere long, to meet the combined powers of France, Germany and Russia, may prove not untimely.

A gigantic monopoly has been formed in free trade England which may be of serious consequence to the entire civilized world. The four great thread manufacturing firms: J. & J. Coates, Clark & Co., James Brock & Bros., Huddersfield, Chadwick & Bolton, have amalgamated. With the world's thread markets completely at its disposal, the monopoly may be naturally expected to raise the price of thread.

In the international half-rater yacht contest the Canadian yacht Glencora has been successful, defeating her rival in two races out of three. Both mild and strong breezes were tried, but in neither did the American boat, El Herie prove a match for the Canadian flyer.

Hon. Jas. Mitchell is mentioned as the successor of Hon. A. G. Blair, as premier of New Brunswick. Mr Mitchell is a Conservative in politics, having worked in the interest of that party during the last federal campaign. At present he is seriously ill.

The vacancy in the Ontario government caused by the resignation of Premier Mowat, has been filled by the Hon. A. S. Hardy.

The Liberal Cabinet.

Following is the personnel of the Laurier administration: Premier and president of the council: Hon. Wilfrid Laurier. Minister of justice: Sir Oliver Mowat. Minister of trade and commerce: Sir Richard Cartwright. Minister of finance: Hon. W. S. Fielding. Minister of marine and fisheries: Hon. L. H. Davies. Minister of railways and canals: Hon. A. G. Blair. Minister of public works: Hon. J. I. Tarte. Postmaster general: Hon. Wm. Mackay. Minister of agriculture: Hon. A. S. Fisher. Minister of education: Hon. W. Pater-son. Minister of inland revenue: Sir Henry July de Lethbride. Minister of militia: Hon. F. W. Borden. Secretary of state: Hon. Senator Scott. Solicitor general: Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick. Without portfolio: Mr R. B. Dobbell and Mr C. A. Geoffrion. Mr J. D. Edgar will be nominated for the speakership of the house of commons and Senator Palliser will be appointed speaker of the senate, while Mr L. T. Boulton will be appointed deputy speaker of the house of commons.

Summer School of Science.

The Summer School of Science for the Atlantic Provinces meets this year at Parrboro, where the authorities have placed their fine new school building at their disposal. The school was formally welcomed on Thursday evening at a public meeting, by the mayor and others, to which Principal Cameron, of Yarmouth, the President of the school, made a suitable reply. Dr. T. H. Rand gave a very eloquent address, extolling the beauties and advantages of Parrboro. The regular work of the school has continued since Friday. About 50 are present, representing the three Provinces, and a very enthusiastic body of teachers they are. They come at considerable expense and self-denial to get instruction in Botany, Mineralogy, Chemistry, Physics, Zoology and other subjects, including Tomie Sol Fa, so that they may do better work in their several sections. It is to be regretted that only one teacher is present from Kings.

The first excursion was on Friday afternoon, to Partridge Island. The whole school went to this, under the leadership of the Supt. of Education, A. H. McKay, Prof. Caldwell in Mineralogy, Mr C. B. Robinson in Botany, and Mr Hickman in Zoology. A profitable afternoon was spent, and a good collection obtained. Friday evening was devoted to a round-table talk, or general discussion of Botany, introduced by Mr Robinson, and Monday evening was given to a similar discussion on Geology, in connection with Sir William Dawson, opened by Prof. Caldwell. Principal Cameron conducts a very interesting class in English Literature, and this year they are studying Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

A grand excursion to Wolfville and vicinity is planned for Tuesday, the 21st, and many are looking forward with pleasure to their first visit to this classic spot.

Grand Lodge I. O. G. T.

At the meeting of the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., at Truro last week, the following officers were elected: G. C. T., Rev. W. G. Lane, North Sydney; G. V. T., May Rogers, Stellarton; G. Con., Wm. Smith, New Glasgow; G. Chaplain, Rev. G. Whitney, Baddeck; G. Treas., J. McElhiney, Windsor; Grand Sec'y, A. B. Fletcher, Truro. The Order is said to be in a flourishing condition, and notwithstanding the recent complaints of hard times, there has been a most encouraging increase in membership and in the number of lodges. A marked advance has been made along the line of juvenile work under the efficient superintendency of J. A. Simpson, of Amherst. Miss Jessie A. Chisholm, of Hantsport, was among the delegates, also Mr and Mrs R. R. Duncan, of Grand Pre.

The appointed officers of the Lodge are: G. Chap., George Whaley; G. Mar., G. B. Thurston; G. D. Mar., Jessie A. Chisholm; G. O. S., J. C. Mc. Kinnon; G. G., M. McLeod; G. Sent., Owen W. Graves; G. Mess., A. W. Jackson.

At 6.30 the Grand Lodge closed one of the most encouraging sessions in its history, to meet again the first Tuesday of July, 1897, at Baddeck, C. B.

The Ideal Editor.

The real, genuine editor is a man of mental forces, who is constantly creating invisible edifices; who rears, by his brain, lofty ethereal palaces; who gives utterance to noble sentiments; and whose general quiet, unobtrusive, yet effective efforts will reach the confines of eternity; for, everything worldly perisheth, while everything invisible, unseen, lives forever.

The startling idea, the beautiful conception, the inventive genius of man, belong not to this but to another sphere, and he who builds with the mind builds for all time, while he who grovels among the material elements of life, dies with the elements that surround him.

And as mind has control over matter, so the editor, from his position above the ordinary elements of the world, sees upon the masses, not with the roar of cannon, or the glittering sword, or the movement of the plowshare; not with the rant and vigor incident to worldly strife or with the ponderous blows of our commercial utilitarian hammer, but by the silent powers of the brain, whose influence molds the elements of society and creates the ideal structures upon which the material house is built.

So he who lives, and moves, and acts, among the invisible forces, who seeks to exalt the human race by pure and noble sentiments, who yields his pen in defense of a higher and nobler purpose; whose ambition is to elevate the people above the groveling instincts born in ignorance and degradation, occupies the very highest pinnacle upon the intellectual mountain that lifts its lofty head far above the material world and its bustling, eager, money-getting and money-making proclivities. He who does this is the ideal editor, and his work lives forever.—Journalist.

We received last week a copy of the "Lantern," a bright little magazine published at Ottawa, and edited by Dr. McAdam Coupland. The contents include a poem by W. W. Campbell, an interesting sketch of the late Government Ball, and a seasonable story entitled "Young Love," by C. Gordon Rogers. The "New Woman" is dissected by G. R. Preston Robertson, M. D. The price of the magazine is only 5 cents, and it will compare very favorably with many of the 10 cent magazines.

The Collision.

CRASH! "The Bluenose and the freight have collided." On Tuesday afternoon last the citizens of Wolfville were started out of their after-dinner slumbers by hearing the crash of the locomotives of the westbound Bluenose and the eastbound freight as they came together at the Wharf Crossing, about two hundred yards east of the Wolfville station. The freight was in charge of Conductor Jacques and Driver Harry Ward, while the Bluenose was under the command of Conductor Corbett and Driver Copeland. The former was about an hour and a half late, and had been shunting about for some time preparatory to entering the siding, where she was to await the arrival of the Bluenose. But before this could be effected, along came the latter, a little ahead of time. Driver Copeland, however, had observed the freight when he was some little distance away, and reversed his engine and put on the air brakes, and at the time of the collision was going at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. The freight was at a standstill. Both drivers jumped when their engines were within a few yards of each other, and with the exception of a few scratches received by Driver Copeland, escaped unhurt. The tenders of both engines were considerably damaged, while the cowcatchers were shattered to atoms. The steam pipes of the freight were also badly strained. The wrecking train was at once telegraphed for, and arrived on the scene as soon as possible, bringing down a gang of men in charge of Mechanical Superintendent Yould, and the work of clearing up the track was proceeded with. In less than two hours from the time of the accident the disabled engine had been run into the siding and the Bluenose started on her journey. The freight cars were taken out later on. The townspeople took a half holiday, there being at least five hundred people about the scene of the disaster.

PHOTOGRAPHS of above Bluenose collision can be had at the Wolfville Drug Store. Two views, from north and south sides, sent post paid to any address—ordinary 25c.; platinum, (black and white) 35 cents each.

A Very Sad Accident.

Just as the Flying Bluenose from Halifax was pulling into the station at Middleton, Friday afternoon, Joseph C. Dodge, son of the proprietor of the Middleton Hotel (C. C. Dodge), attempted to jump or board one of the passenger cars to solicit business for the hotel. He slipped and fell beneath the car and several of the wheels passed over him before the train, which was moving very slowly, came to a stop. The body was found immovable beneath one of the wheels, and the train had to be moved slightly in order to extricate it. It was then found that the young man had been completely decapitated and his body horribly mangled. A coroner's jury exonerated the employees from all blame. Deceased was 20 years of age, and favorably known by the community in which he lived, and the travelling public along the line. The funeral on Sunday morning was largely attended. The father of the deceased was so affected that he could not attend the obsequies of his only son. The sad affair has evoked universal sympathy for the heart-broken parents.

The Modern Knight.

These are certainly not the days of chivalry and romance; of long haired poets and clinging females. The tendency is toward the practical, and even the inventions nowadays are mostly objects of utility, something which saves time and gives comfort and ease. We are quick to appreciate and use anything which increases our comfort, especially if it be in the way of clothing. Let any body once realize the magnificent, healthful warmth which Fibre Chamois will add to his clothing, and he will certainly be provided with this inexpensive equipment against all freaks of the weather. This interlining is made from pure spruce fibre and is a perfect non-conductor of both heat and cold, so that the layer of it through clothing, keeps out the fiercest winds and preserves the natural heat of the body.

The Boston Daily Standard, the New England organ of the A. F. A. movement, has suspended publication, after a brief illness, extending over a period of a year and a half. Robert Long, who formerly conducted a paper at Bridgewater, N. S., was managing editor, but his name did not seem to have been a synonym of the existence of his paper.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 17, 1896.

Local and Provincial.

The Band will play at Evangeline Beach to-day, from 4 to 8 p. m.

Rev. Dr. Higgins is filling the pulpit of the Baptist church, in the absence of the pastor, who is enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Rev. Arthur Borden, B. D., missionary elect for Japan, will preach in the Methodist church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

If you want to have an enjoyable outing, go to Evangeline Beach this afternoon. The Band will be there, from 4 to 8.

The Aymph conveyed a party of tourists to Evangeline Beach, on Wednesday afternoon last. The weather was perfect, and the trip much enjoyed by all on board.

We have seen this week some of the work of Mr. Wallace's new cutter, and can pronounce it first class in every respect. You will make no mistake by giving him a call.

A party of fifteen wheelmen from the U. S., who are doing the Valley on their "bikes" were in Wolfville on Wednesday last, and were entertained at the Royal Hotel. They went from here west.

Balcom's "Beach Express" now makes daily trips to Evangeline Beach and is well patronized, the large wagon usually being well filled. Mr. Balcom has good teams and obliging drivers and is getting the reward for his enterprise in abundance of business.

Grand discount sale at the Glasgow House—now on. Call and get bargains in all Summer Goods.

By referring to the adv. of Messrs. Lewis Rice & Co. in another column it will be seen that hereafter Mr. Robson will be in Wolfville on Monday and Tuesday of each week, beginning next Monday. This is an improvement over the old arrangement that will no doubt be appreciated by the people of Wolfville and vicinity. Mr. Robson is an artist of much ability, and the work he has turned out lately is of a high order.

Messrs Gray & Sanford, of the marriage-round which operated in Wolfville for several days lately, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Sanford had, it seems, invested about $1150 in the enterprise which secured him a half interest in the business and patent. Owing to lack of patronage, accidents, etc., Mr. Sanford became discouraged, and on Wednesday last sold out to his partner for $100—dropping a cool $1050. Mr. and Mrs. Gray left on Thursday for Bridgetown where the "Jolly Boats" will be next located, and Mr. Sanford returns to his home in Weston. Such is life.

Prof. A. E. Caldwell writes from Parrabrook that the members of the Summer School of Science, about forty, intend visiting Wolfville on Tuesday, July 21st, arriving by steamer at 9 a. m. He suggests that a lunch and drive be tendered them during the day, and every thing be done to make their visit enjoyable. We understand that arrangements are being made for giving the party a suitable reception. Lunch is to be served in Chipman Hall at 11 o'clock and in the afternoon the visitors will be driven around to points of interest. It is hoped that the townspeople generally will assist in whatever way in their power in this movement.

Beach Echoes.
Over one thousand persons have visited the Beach since July first. So many wish to bathe this season that Mr. Balcom has found it necessary to put on two express instead of one.

The Beach is visited every day by numbers of tourists who greatly enjoy the bathing and the scenery.
Picnic parties are very frequent at the Beach.
A neat little cottage has been erected for the convenience of families desiring to rusticize at the Beach.
Twenty new bathing houses have been added to those of last year, making forty in all. A new shed for horses has also been put up.

Arrangements are being made by the Exhibition Association of St. John to secure attractions of a high character for the coming Exhibition. Fireworks of a superior character will be exhibited six evenings, if weather permits. The hall in the Agricultural Building will be occupied every afternoon and evening by a splendid Variety Company, whose performances must secure crowded houses. A number of interesting and attractive outdoor performances are receiving the attention of the committee.

Mr. G. V. Rand has sent to this office a box of enormous strawberries of the Trempehe de Grand variety. Mr. Rand is the pioneer strawberry grower of this county, and he does not intend to be beaten by novices.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION ASSOCIATION

WOLFVILLE, N. S., JULY 17, 1896.

Local and Provincial.

The Band will play at Evangeline Beach to-day, from 4 to 8 p. m.

Rev. Dr. Higgins is filling the pulpit of the Baptist church, in the absence of the pastor, who is enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Rev. Arthur Borden, B. D., missionary elect for Japan, will preach in the Methodist church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

If you want to have an enjoyable outing, go to Evangeline Beach this afternoon. The Band will be there, from 4 to 8.

The Aymph conveyed a party of tourists to Evangeline Beach, on Wednesday afternoon last. The weather was perfect, and the trip much enjoyed by all on board.

We have seen this week some of the work of Mr. Wallace's new cutter, and can pronounce it first class in every respect. You will make no mistake by giving him a call.

A party of fifteen wheelmen from the U. S., who are doing the Valley on their "bikes" were in Wolfville on Wednesday last, and were entertained at the Royal Hotel. They went from here west.

Balcom's "Beach Express" now makes daily trips to Evangeline Beach and is well patronized, the large wagon usually being well filled. Mr. Balcom has good teams and obliging drivers and is getting the reward for his enterprise in abundance of business.

Grand discount sale at the Glasgow House—now on. Call and get bargains in all Summer Goods.

By referring to the adv. of Messrs. Lewis Rice & Co. in another column it will be seen that hereafter Mr. Robson will be in Wolfville on Monday and Tuesday of each week, beginning next Monday. This is an improvement over the old arrangement that will no doubt be appreciated by the people of Wolfville and vicinity. Mr. Robson is an artist of much ability, and the work he has turned out lately is of a high order.

Messrs Gray & Sanford, of the marriage-round which operated in Wolfville for several days lately, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Sanford had, it seems, invested about $1150 in the enterprise which secured him a half interest in the business and patent. Owing to lack of patronage, accidents, etc., Mr. Sanford became discouraged, and on Wednesday last sold out to his partner for $100—dropping a cool $1050. Mr. and Mrs. Gray left on Thursday for Bridgetown where the "Jolly Boats" will be next located, and Mr. Sanford returns to his home in Weston. Such is life.

Prof. A. E. Caldwell writes from Parrabrook that the members of the Summer School of Science, about forty, intend visiting Wolfville on Tuesday, July 21st, arriving by steamer at 9 a. m. He suggests that a lunch and drive be tendered them during the day, and every thing be done to make their visit enjoyable. We understand that arrangements are being made for giving the party a suitable reception. Lunch is to be served in Chipman Hall at 11 o'clock and in the afternoon the visitors will be driven around to points of interest. It is hoped that the townspeople generally will assist in whatever way in their power in this movement.
