Suffered More Than Tongue Can Tell From Liver Trouble.

A lazy, slow or torpid liver is a terrible affliction, as its influence permeates the whole system, causing Biliousness, Heartburn, Water Brash, Languor, Coated Tongue, Sick Headache, Yellow Eyes, Sallow Complexion, etc. It holds back the bile, which is required to move the bowels, and lets it get into the blood instead, thus causing Constipation.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile to act properly upon the bowels, and will tone, renovate and purify the liver. Mrs. J. C. Westberg, Grand River, Man., writes:—"I suffered for years, more than tongue can tell, from liver trouble. I tried several kinds of medicine, but could get no relief until I got Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I cannot praise them too highly for what they have done for me."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c. per vial, or 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Great Crowds Attend Binnings' Going-Out-of-Business Sale

DOING BUSINESS BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

Mr. Binning, of the Ladies' Store, put on a "going out of business" sale, beginning on Friday morning, advertising the same in liberal space in the local papers. On Friday afternoon it was quite evident by the crowded appearance of Fourth Avenue that there was something unusual doing. So great was the crush that the Ladies' Store was forced to lock its doors several times Mr. Binning states that the sale will continue until the entire stock is cleared out. His experience teaches the very evident lesson that if you have bargains to offer advertise them and the buyers will come your way.

Methodist Church Anniversary Services

Rev. E. J. Chegwin of Moose Jaw Preaches Eloquently to Large Congregations

October seems to be anniversary enough, we would see the burdens, month among the churches of Medicine Hat. On Sunday the congregation of Century Methodist church held their anniversary services, being the third local congregation to do so this month. The day was ideal, being a sample of what genuine Alberta autumn weather can be. The anniversary preacher was Rev. E. J. Chegwin, B.A. of Moose Jaw, who is classed as one of the leading preachers in western Canada. He has a clear musical voice and plenty of animation, which, with his clear-cut ideas and depth of thought holds his audience in his grip.

In the morning his text was Isa. 40, 31: "They shall mount up with wings as eagles." Mr Chegwin referred in opening to the fact that listening to W. J. Bryan's great lecture on "The Prince of Peace" a few days ago, had placed him in a meditative mood. Mr. Bryan is an illustration of how faith in God has produced the world's great men. Men of aspiration, men with wings, are the one's who accomplish the most. Man has conquered many things in connection with the earth and the sea. He is now trying to conquer the air. It is a God-given instinct, an expression of his desire to soar.

The man with wings has a faith which enables him to rise above the every-day cares of life. He must master the details instead of letting them master him. Sometimes parents worry themselves over some little non-essential details while a child (a great thing) is going astray.

The man with wings is one whom life's dissatisfactions spur to higher things. Perfect satisfaction is deadness. Defects and dissatisfactions are opportunities. Burke said "Show me a contented slave and I'll show you a degraded man."

The man with wings will take his view point from the highest vantage ground. John Morley who had built a magnificent country residence realized that it had one serious defect. There were no mountains near. "Our hope," he declared, "is beyond the hills." When we criticize the actions of others, if the ground were high enough, we would see the faults of the one we criticize. We would seek the positive, the affirmative, the constructive, rather than the opposite.

The man with wings realizes the sustaining power of aspiration. Dissatisfied is unsatisfied and only God can fully satisfy.

The choir acquitted itself creditably at both services. In the morning the anthem was "Show us Thy Mercy" (Finley Lyon); in the evening, "For God so Loved the World" (Chas. H. Gabriel); and "Praise Ye the Father" the latter of which particularly showed the careful training which had been undertaken.

In the evening the speaker was greeted with a crowded house and was listened to with rapt attention as he presented his message. The sermon was a masterful appeal to the young men of today to link themselves with the church of God in the work it is carrying on.

The subject was the call of Christ to the men of today, based on Mat. 4, 18-22. Christ in His day called disciples because of the natural support he would receive from them and because of the great work he had for them to do. Every period of history has a special call for men. To day it is being voiced by the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The preacher reviewed the great periods of history, showing how the occasion called forth the men, how Paul was the man who gathered up the Christian influence of his day and directed it against the nations of the Mediterranean; how the age of persecution produced the Apologists, Ignatius and Polycarp; how the low moral tone of the church called forth Savonarola.

There are characteristics today which constitute a call to discipleship. We should be identified with the cause of Christ because of the men who are in it. The world's best men are giving it their service. Also because of the tremendous forms of evil which call for the truest forms of manhood. Lastly, because of the magnitude and importance of the program of the church in moral reform, evangelization and education.

Hon. W. H. Motherwell Delivers Address at Men's Meeting

At the close of the evening services in the city churches on Sunday a men's meeting was held in the Y. M. C. when the Hon. W. H. Motherwell, minister of agriculture for Sasvatchewan, delivered a short address. In opening he explained that his remarks must necessarily be of a desultory character, since he had come into the city without thought of addressing a meeting, he had been called upon to do so at a moment's notice.

The men who occupied the highest positions in the world today, he said, were but common people, people of average abilities who had applied themselves with dilligence to their life work. Every young man should have an aim. Too much thought should not be given to the consideration of "the next step," but the ideal should ever be kept before the mind of the young man who would succeed. At the top of the ladder today there was no congestion and little competition.

One great problem to which the men of today should turn their attention was the temperance question. Difference of opinion there might be as to the best methods to adopt in coping with the evil of intemperance For himself, the speaker believed that he was only on safe ground when he abstained from liquor altogether. This, with all respect to moderate drinkers, he did not consider an unmanly attitude.

An evil of our present day religious life was the multiplicity of church denominations in our land. If any general were to go to battle with his cohorts divided, under several independant officers, defeat would be inevitable. Yet this was the method the churches had adopted in their warfare against the prince of the power of darkness of this world. The marvellous thing was that a campaign conducted on such lines had not led to irretrievable disaster.

The speaker touched upon another hindrance to our progress as a people, remarking that this had special application to the west. It was the disposition of men to be inconsiderate of the rights of others. There was a disposition in Canada for every profession to be jealous of its own rights and unmindful of the rights of others, for each class to imagine that the members of another class were intent upon the object of legal measures. This was especially true of agriculture, though the farmers, scattered throughout the country with few means of exchanging views were in no wise to blame. But newspapers and public men took advantage of the farmers to stir up bitterness against other classes.

One thing which the speaker desired to emphasize was the value and necessity of the Christian religion as a safeguard of our civilization. There were young men who thought the Christian religion of interest only to women, children and men ready to pass in their checks. But it was an essentially manly thing to acknowledge the creator of the universe Not until middle life had the speaker realized the living truths.

It was a mistake to imagine that city life was not conducive to morality. The young men of Medicine Hat were to be congratulated on their club which would exert a vast influence for the purification of the city life. Young men were governed far more by the example of their associates than were their sisters. The power of ridicule was greater among young men. The Y. M. C. was an intimation that there were citizens prepared to fight for a better and nobler life in Medicine Hat. It would exert a great influence on the city's affairs and as our community was built up would prove the seed of strong and virile citizenship.

Mr. Motherwell hoped and expected to see Medicine Hat grow from a city of 5,000 to a manufacturing city of 25,000 in his own time. With our wonderful natural advantages there was no reason why such development should not lie ahead, and in 5, 6, or 7 years time at most the whole of the country round would be dotted with the substantial homes of prosperous settlers. In bringing about the development of agriculture the splendid demonstration farm which we possessed would be of incalculable value.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Motherwell was moved by Ald. Spencer and seconded by Mr. Benson. After this had been carried by a hearty clap of the hands the minister of agriculture briefly responded, expressing a hope that in the near future he would again be able to visit Medicine Hat. After the singing of a rousing hymn by the men present the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. A. C. Farrell.

Mr. W. E. Porter Secures Good Position

W. E. Porter left last evening for St. Boniface where he has taken the position of superintendent of waterworks.

Carman, Oct. 14—Mr. W. E. Porter who has been here for the past three months as superintendent of relaying the water works system, has completed the work and the council are highly pleased. The system has stood a test of 100 pounds to the square inch, tank pressure, which is sufficient to put the water over any building in the town with a one inch nozzle. Mr. Porter has had nine years experience in this line of work as superintendent of works for the City of Medicine Hat, and he deserves credit for the work done at Carman. The town has now as good a water system as any town in the west. Before Mr. Porter left Carman for his home in the west, a number of his many friends entertained him at the Victoria Hotel.

New Dental Practitioner

Dr. Herbert Lake, Dental Specialist, has Located Here

Dr. Herbert Lake, formerly a resident and dental practitioner in Calgary, has bought out the practice of Dr. Ross in this city. One of the important factors in inducing Dr. Lake to locate here he stated to The Times last week, was the great convenience provided in our natural gas, of which he will make extensive use in this work. Dr. Lake is a specialist in certain branches of dentistry in which he has had many years of experience and mechanical training. He anticipates entering the competition held in Chicago at the end of December for the best original idea in crown and bridge work.

Dr. Lake states that it is his intention, should Medicine Hat prove a suitable centre to bring his two assistants down and permanently locate with his family in the city. He will secure and equip a large and modern surgery.

Settler Recovers Lost Horses

Rather less than a couple of weeks ago two white heavy draft horses were impounded by the local poundkeeper, Thos. Morrey. An exhaustive but fruitless search was made, for the owner of the animals, and on Tuesday an advertisement was placed in the Times want columns. On Wednesday the advertisement was read by a North Dakota man who was staying at Whitla, to whom the description appeared to be that of two unbranded horses lost by himself some considerable time ago. On Thursday the animals were claimed and obtained by their owner. The Times is the best advertising medium in Southeastern Alberta, as has been proved over and over again by those who have made use of our want columns.

The Roseries Greenhouses

Mr. Uberheim, who recently showed his faith in this district by the purchase of the Roseries greenhouses of which he has been manager for a couple of years, has already underway important extensions. A new house is being added, 22 x 200 feet, making five greenhouses in all with over 26,000 square feet of glass. Next year Mr. Uberheim plans further expansion.

At the present time he has one whole house devoted to chrysanthemums, and another to carnations which will be in full bloom in the course of another three weeks. Carnations are already on sale but only a limited number can as yet be obtained. Other cut flowers and ferns of every variety are also on sale.

The Roseries already do considerable wholesale trade, their clientele extending from Regina on the east as far west as Fernie. Next year Mr. Uberheim expects to handle a very large wholesale trade, Medicine Hat with its cheap power and external sunshine, is destined to hold in perpetuity the floral trade of Souther Alberta.

Miss Cruikshan poured the lemonade in the afternoon and Miss Bessie Millican in the evening. Mrs. Marshall was assisted by her mother, Mrs. White, and by the following young ladies: Misses Belle McLean, Ruby Patterson, Heather Hargrave, Gertie Dickerson, Sadie McCargar, Blanche Millican, Grace Wilson, Adeline Legh and Nellie Huckvale. Mrs. Carbert assisted in the drawing-room. The color scheme was in white and green.

Pennant Winners Receive Season's Trophy

At Meeting of Western Canada League Last Evening

The annual meeting of the Western Canada Baseball League was held here yesterday afternoon and evening in the American hotel.

The following delegates were in attendance:—J. Fleming, Medicine Hat, president; J. M. Lamb, Winnipeg, secretary; H. Acaster, Regina; Ralph Marply, Moose Jaw; P. Richardson, Calgary; J. Dewar, Edmonton; Benton Hatch, Lethbridge; C. S. Pingle, Medicine Hat. Brandon and Winnipeg were represented by proxy. C. J. Eckstorm, of Lethbridge, was also present.

The president in opening the meeting stated that in his opinion the season just closed was a particularly promising one. It was March before the organization was affected, and as only two months passed before the season opened he considered that the league had done remarkably well. Local organizations had to be made, managers appointed and players secured at a time when other leagues had already completed their lists and contracts had been signed. He was pleased to be able to say that every team finished the season, none had defaulted any of the liabilities of the league, and now he felt that every organization is in good shape to make an early start for next season. All clubs should be able to save money as they will now have time to engage the players at a time suitable men are available, and thus place good teams in the field.

Later in the meeting when Mr. Fleming was again nominated president, he stated that his loyality to the local club compelled him to decline the honor, as he wished to devote his services more actively to their interests.

The following officers were elected:

President—C. J. Eckstorm, Lethbridge.

Vice President—W. G. Weatherstone Brandon.

Secretary-Treasurer—J. M. Lamb, Winnipeg.

The board of control is composed of one member from each club who is appointed by the local organization. These appointments have not yet been made.

The pennant was awarded to the Medicine Hat team, and the secretary was instructed to see that a suitable pennant is secured. On it will be the title "Champions 1910."

A change was made in the salary limit for next season it being raised from $1,800 to $1,500.

After considerable discussion it was decided to leave the membership of the league as at present constituted.

A schedule committee was appointed consisting of one member from each club to arrange a schedule of games to be submitted at the next meeting of the league early in next year. They were also instructed to draw up a schedule to open the season on May 12th, the same date as last year.

The secretary's report showed that the teams had travelled an average of 4,843 miles during the season.

In attendance at the games Winnipeg naturally led, the order of the others being Regina, Moose Jaw, Brandon, Calgary, Lethbridge, Edmonton, Medicine Hat.

Secretary Lamb states that considering the size of our city we made the best showing in attendance at games.

After a lengthy general discussion on all points pertaining to the welfare of the league, the meeting adjourned. The delegates leave for their respective homes this evening. They desire to thank the local members for the excellent arrangements made for their entertainment while in the city.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Tonight the Medicine Hat delegation to the Provincial Sunday School Association Convention leaves for Edmonton. The delegation consists of the following officers and other delegates:—Rev. A. C. Farrell, president of the Association; Rev. J. W. Morrow, county representative; Jessop Nott, secretary-treasurer county Sunday School Association; Mrs. J. Nott, Miss Walton, W. J. Dimmick, T. H. Williams, Miss Marion Cochrane, Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Curry.

The delegates are showing commendable spirit in advertising the city as they are equipped with distinctive badges labelled "Gas City Delegate" which are secured with a neat pin, made of sterling silver and having embossed on it a burning gas well. This makes a particularly attractive badge and will doubtless attract attention at the convention.

THANKSGIVING DINNER

Last evening a dinner was served in the basement of Century church which was enjoyed by the large number which partook of it. Although dinner began at 6 p.m., it was considerably after 8 o'clock before the last banqueter was supplied. But the program began in the auditorium promptly on time. The pastor presided at the opening and explained that owing to the Epworth League Convention meeting in Edmonton on Tuesday evening, he had to leave on last night's train, and would be unable to remain for the program. He called Mr. J. Kennedy to the chair and the following program was rendered:

1. Hymn—"All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."
2. Prayer.
3. Chairman's address.
4. Girls' chorus.
5. Address—Chas. J. Wilson.
6. Solo—Mrs. McCarter.

ST. BARNABAS' BAZAAR

The attention of music lovers is called to the bazaar which St. Barnabas church purposes holding on Thursday evening, the 28th, in the church parish hall on Montreal St.

The Bazaar formerly opens at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the afternoon will be spent in viewing the efforts of those who have participated in this part of the event. In the late afternoon an appropriate repast has been arranged for and it is expected that at 6 p.m., when the gentlemen are at leisure from business they too will attend and participate in the "Bazaar Supper." In the evening at 8 a musical programme of unusual merit will be commenced. The management has been most fortunate in securing the best musical talent in the city among whom are: Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Burton, Miss Holmes, Mrs. W. E. Marshall, Miss Hargrave and Mrs. Crissell.

The meeting of those interested in the organization of a Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C., which was called for tomorrow evening has been postponed. Notice of the meeting will be given later.

Mr. Frank Wight of Salmon Arm, B.C., has returned to Medicine Hat to take up his permanent residence in this district. He has bought the Robert Russell claim, about five and a half miles up the Seven Persons Creek, and will run cattle there during the winter. Mr. Wight has been away from here nearly three years but found no place to suit him as well as Medicine Hat. He is accompanied by his brother George, who has also been absent some years but now returns for permanent residence.

The family of Mr. Wakelin has arrived from Salt Spring Island, B. C. to join Mr. Wakelin, who will take up land in this district. He has rented a house in town for the present.

Mr. W. R. Babington is making considerable stir in real estate circles these days. Town lots and farm property are both falling prey to his grasp.

Mr. Grant of Yellowgrass spent a few days in the city last week as the guest of Mr. R. A. Walker.

Messrs. Starks & Bragg spent Monday shooting at Many Island Lake.

The Many Island Lake shooting party which lost its bearings has returned to the city after a most exciting outing. The party was not conducted by the Horseshoe Lake explorer, J—k T—d.

HON. W. T. FINLAY RETIRES

Edmonton, Oct. 20—By the official enactment of the Lieutenant Governor in Council this afternoon a change in the cabinet representation of the province is to be made, which will doubtless prove of much interest to the Alberta electors.

Owing to continued ill-health, the Hon. W. T. Finlay, M.P.P. for Medicine Hat, who has been minister of agriculture since the inauguration of the Alberta government, has handed in his resignation to the Premier and Duncan Marshall, M.P.P. for Olds, will be called to accept a position in the cabinet as minister of agriculture and provincial secretary.

Other cabinet appointments which will be made provide for the appointment of two other members who will be ministers without portfolios. These members are W. A. Buchanan, M.P.P. for Lethbridge, and P. E. Lessard, M.P.P. for Pakan.

HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL

The Hon. Duncan Marshall, the new Minister of Agriculture and provincial secretary, was born September 24th, 1872, on a brush farm in the township of Elderslie, in the County of Bruce, Ontario, and is consequently only 37 years old. His father the late John Marshall, was one of the pioneers of the township and was Scotch, and, characteristic of the type of Scottish immigrants who have contributed so much to the development of Canada.

He was educated in the high schools of Walkerton and Owen Sound, and first became identified with politics through the Patron of Industry movement for which organization he acted as organizer. After a few years of newspaper experience which followed his connection with the Patron movement, he moved west. When Hon. Frank Oliver was appointed Minister of the Interior Mr. Marshall became manager of the Edmonton Bulletin, which position he has since held. He is also proprietor of the Old Gazette and farms 800 acres of land in the Old district.

MR. DOOLEY ON THE NORTH POLE

"Dye think," asked Mr. Hennessy, "that both these lads discovered the North Pole?"

"Faith, I don't know," said Mr. Dooley. "Ayether they have discovered it, or they've invented it. It don't make much diff'rance which. I ain't an Arctic explorer. All the polar observations I ever took has been at a point about a foot and a half from a base-burnin' stove on a winter's night. But I've me theories, an I'm glad to see them verified. Wan of them was that th' North Pole was in a northerly direction. Another was that if ever discovered, a careful observer wud find ice in the neighborhood. Both contributions to science have been established. The scientific wurruld is no longer in doubt. Th' North Pole is sartinly in the north. It is not so far north as I thought to go but it is further to come away from. You go up in the afternoon on the publick sledge that meets the two-thirty at Upper Navick, an' ye come back in from two to five years. As f'r the ice, it was not necessary to bring back specimens. Both explorers agree that they noted distinct traces of this precious mineral, indicatin' that there are valyable deposits near by. Why, thin, ask me when these here two gots of knowledge have been added to the wurruld's store of information? We know now all there is to be known iv th' North Pole."

Work on the plant of the Alberta Clay Products Company was continued last week. Over 1,700 feet of trench work has been completed and the concreting of this will be finished this week. All the machinery which will be used for the present has already arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell of Kincorth, Sask., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs C. S. Pingle.

A class for the study of political economy was formed last night.

W. J. Ansley of Rouleau, Sask., has disposed of his property there and has invested in the Medicine Hat district. He will move here in the spring and engage in mixed farming.

Extension of H. Morrow's General Store

Made Necessary by Business Expansion

Merchants throughout the city are reporting business expansion these days, and everything points to the fact that the era of comparatively quiet times has passed and that for the future Medicine Hat must be prepared for an ever-increasing activity. One of the best examples of business building is provided in H. Morrow's general store across the track. During the summer and fall of the present year the expansion was enormous and Mr. Morrow found it imperative to make an extension to his building to provide for the large stock which he finds it necessary to keep on hand. Recently an addition of 15 feet has been made to the rear of the store making it possible to add a gents' furnishings and boots and shoes department, and placing Mr. Morrow in a better position than ever to supply the needs of his customers in first-class groceries and other lines. A confectionery department has been put in, with one silent salesman to which a second will be added in the near future. The total length of the store is now 50 feet.

American Families Locating in this District in Large Numbers

Mr. H. C. Menge, the Dominion homestead locator for this district, reports an unprecedented number of applications from settlers across the line who wish to locate in the Medicine Hat district. This week no fewer than fifty families will come up from the States, to locate in the country to the northward of this city.

COMMITTED AT MAPLE CREEK

Henry Abbott, the young man who was arrested in this city on the 7th inst. on a charge of forging a railroad ticket, and was sent up to Maple Creek for the preliminary hearing, has been committed for trial.

SATURDAY MORNING'S FIRE

A fire broke out on Saturday morning in the basement of Enderby & Hamilton's liquor store. It was noticed by Mr. Hamilton almost immediately after the outbreak and an alarm rung in to the firehall brought a quick response, the boys turning out in remarkably short time. The fire was extinguished before any serious damage had been done, only the fire of straw which was first ignited being burnt. The cause of the outbreak is unknown.

W. Cousins is one of the most enthusiastic fans Medicine Hat ever produced. When the baseball season was over in the West he hiked down east to see the Tigers and the White Sox fight it out for the championship. "Bill" writes enthusiastically of the games, and what he doesn't know about the respective teams when he returns to the Hat won't be worth knowing. Writing recently to Manager Hamilton from Detroit, he speaks of "the whole city being given over to the ball game," and he himself no less than the rest.

The baseball season is over and forgotten. The man in the street has other yarns to tell than baseball yarns, and the exploits of champion twirlers and willow-wielders, whether their sphere of activity was in the Western League or in the White Sox-Tigers aggregation, are dim memories in the minds of most. And dim memories they will remain until the ice begins to break up in the river, until the spring when again the young man's fancy will lightly—nay with a fierce earnestness—turn again to thoughts of ball.

At the present time, however, our thoughts are turned again to the game by the meeting of baseball officials held in the American hotel yesterday, when the affairs of the past season were discussed. And perhaps it may be of interest to some of our readers to hear of the whereabouts and doings of the boys who so nobly upheld the honor of Medicine Hat on the diamond and gave the Gas City a baseball reputation which extends from coast to coast.

Harper is in Los Angeles, playing with the winter league. We hope to give some account of his work there in a later issue.

Davidson has taken a job for the winter as expressman on the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Co's line ...ween Spokane and Portland.

...on is doing the counter-jumping ...unt in Edmonds, Washington, ... he has a job in a grocery store ...rkman is wielding the two-pound hammer in machine shops at Great Falls, Idaho, and keeping his muscles in trim for the time when he will again wield the willow for the fence busters and home runs.

Dunn and Campbell are wintering in Seattle living the cheerful live. Si Belmont is also in the exposition city or was until a few days ago. It is anticipated that he will pass through Medicine Hat sometime this week, probably laying off here for a few days.

Chilly is, of course, is at Brooks, at the present time working for W. R. Mar... as expert. We should imagine Chilly will make a great success in the gas business, if the line of "big talk" can be used to spiel on in the backyard, to the encouragement of the boys and the delight of the fans, anything to go by.

Zwicker has adopted the "life on the ocean wave" and is now engaged in business on a boat plying between Seattle and Portland.

Whisman will winter in Spokane where he has become a popular idol. Whis has been playing outfield and the Spokane papers crack him up.

W. Campbell has not been heard from since the close of the season, but Manager Billy Hamilton thinks he is probably doing the pedagogue stunt again in the state of Iowa.

Nelson is the only one of the bunch of whom all trace has been lost. Nobody knows what his plans were, and he hasn't communicated with any of the boys so far as is known, since the end of the season.

HOCKEY

Nelson is to enter the field for the Stanley Cup. By winning the championship of the Kootenay league last year she is entitled to compete for the national trophy. Among the boys who have been picked for the team are Phillips who captained Kenora last year, Griffiths, Newsy La Londe, Leslie and Frank Patrick and the Bishop brothers. The last named are both local men who played star hockey in the Nelson team last year.

Mounted Police

Theodre Amadahl, engineer on the Schmelzer threshing outfit, appeared before Inspector Parker on the 18th inst., charged with setting a prairie fire. The case was dismissed without costs.

Wm. Tray and J. Juprey appeared before the magistrate on the 23rd inst, charged with vagrancy. Each was sentenced to a month's imprisonment in the Lethbridge guardroom and left under escort of Constable Read the same night.

Comptroller Col. Frederick White and Commissioner Perry passed through the city on Tuesday last on their way to Lethbridge. Sup. Constantine, commanding the Maple Creek division, was in the city on Wednesday last.

This year the number of licenses for big game taken out locally, exceeds all previous records. Over 20 have been taken out from the Mounted Police, besides a large number of others issued by Mr. Bray.

Thefts of drawings of military plans are not infrequent but a corporal in the French army has gone several better by getting clear off from Chalons with a new machine gun, the secret of whose manufacture was ardently sought by a foreign power. This gun had only just been manufactured, and was jealously guarded. When it was taken out of barracks for manoeuvres three soldiers slept beside it, and when not inuse it was stored on the second floor of the clothing shed. Though they guarded the gun the authorities apparently did not look after the artillerymen so closely, one of them a corporal, had anything but the best of reputations, and an anonymous letter was received warning the officers against the man who had been spending money freely, and boasted that there was money to be made by a single daring stroke. In the face of all this, the only "precaution" the authorities took was to give the corporal charge of the clothing shed, where they thought there would be nothing to tempt him. A day or two later the corporal disappeared, taking the keys of the building with him. At once all the locks were changed, but that availed nothing, for two weeks after the corporal vanished the gun followed suit. The thief broke into the clothing shed, took the gun to pieces carried the parts to a waiting motor car, and got clear away.

The race for life of a blazing vessel 150 miles to port was narrated recently by Capt. Sampson, of the S.S Londonderry, at a Belfast Board of Trade inquiry. Cap. Sampson said he had on board 3,400 tons of sulphur ore from Spain to Georgia. On the second day out the sulphur was found to be on fire from bottom to top. Had they poured water on the ore it would have burst like lime and scattered fire all over the ship. They endeavored to smother the fire and headed for Lisbon, intending to beach the vessel and flood the hold.

President Tory Adresses Meeting in City Hall

Considering the extremely short notice given, a fair-sized audience greeted President Tory at the city hall on Wednesday evening last. The chair was occupied by Mayor Milne who in a few well-chosen words introduced the lecturer.

Dr. Tory opened his remarks by recalling his visit here nearly two years ago and referred to its pleasant associations. He announced that the main purpose of his visit was to arrange for a course of extension lectures in connection with the university's work. Last year, such a course was given at Edmonton, Calgary and a few other cities, and had been found very successful. No place south of Calgary, however, had been touched and the plan this year is to include the southern portion of Medicine Hat, Lethbridge and Macleod.

Proceeding to deal with university problems in general the president stated that the aim of the university is to make its benefits as widespread as possible, and to come into close contact with the needs of the people This ideal of a university's work has taken root in England and also in the United States. The great centers of learning are becoming more democratic every year. Because of some antiquated traditions regarding a university's work, Dr. Tory considered that that work was not fully understood and appreciated. During the last 50 years a decided forward movement had been inaugurated. The reason for the establishment of a university is because people are not content to stand still. Man has a desire to know. Three conditions are necessary for the establishment of a university:—

1. A body of knowledge.
2. Men who desire to impart it.
3. Someone who wants to learn.

The Aryan race has always had some type of teacher at work. A community without these conditions is a community without progress. With every progressive people practical problems have pressed for solution and thus the work of the university is demanded.

At first universities arose in order to make teachers for the church. The problems of theology and the after life were considered of such importance that teachers were provided to study and teach them. As society became better organized laws were made and became complex. This necessitated experts to interpret them. Hence arose the need for instruction in law, and the university widened its scope to meet this. Side by side with law grew the practice in medicine, and it was included also. With the discovery of new forces, such as steam and electricity, the body of technical knowledge grew until it was necessary to have schools to teach this. At first it was handled by purely technical schools, but finally the science of mathematics was applied to it, and they became part of the university. State universities arose as soon as the state began to lay down conditions under which professional men could practice. The state must make the conditions possible for professional men to qualify. The last of the scientific professions to find its place in the university is agriculture. Fifty years ago instruction on agriculture was unknown. Twenty-five years ago the farmers of Ontario refused to recognize that the teaching of agriculture could be of benefit to them. Now this condition has passed away. A definite body of scientific knowledge has now grown up around agriculture which is just as technical as any other. It was at first thought that the university would not handle the subject sympathetically, but this distrust is being overcome. The true university must handle everything of a technical nature. Hence the senate of the university of Alberta decided to found an Agricultural college.

The work of agricultural colleges in other centers was reviewed at length by the speaker, that of Cambridge, Wisconsin and Florida being dwelt on. In the former institution, a variety of wheat which will withstand the rust of the English climate, give a yield twenty per cent. greater and of a ten per cent. better quality than any former variety has been produced. It has thus earned for the nation millions of dollars per year.

The agricultural college and the university should not be seperated because of their closely allied interests. Both economy and efficiency demand this. Where tried apart they have in several cases later been united, and at a great cost. The contention that farmers' sons will not come to a university is not true. A large percentage of every profession is recruited from them. "It is the glory of our American democracy," declared the speaker, "that we have brought our leaders from the houses of the poor." He protested against any class being restricted. The greatest good results where all classes mix together and understand each others problems.

At the close of the address Dr. Tory invited any interested in the formation of a university extension course of lectures to remain and discuss it. A large proportion of the audience did so and the following committee was appointed to arrange the necessary details and find out how many could be enrolled for such a course:—Dr. Boyd, convenor; Dr. Smyth, secretary; Miss Morrison, C. Sansom, Rev. J. W. Morrow, Rev. A. C. Farrell, Mayor Milne.

If a sufficient number can be enrolled, the course will likely begin next month and comprise eight or ten lectures. All appearances would indicate that Medicine Hat will rise to the opportunity and form a class.

The Wonders of Electricity

We are in a position to confirm the report that the king is to open a new medical institution in Montreal by means of an electric device which will allow his majesty to perform the ceremony from Buckingham palace. The institution is the new Royal Edward Tuberculosis institute at Belmont Park, and as his majesty is unable to be present personally a scheme has been devised whereby, on the king pressing a button at Buckingham palace, the doors of the institute will be thrown open, the lights turned on, and a flag hoisted over the building.

That such a project is possible at all speaks well for the wonders of electricity. We understand that the details are being arranged from Montreal, but that eventually the arrangements will be known in London. The electrical ceremony is possible owing to a combination of the land wires in England, Ireland, Canada and the Atlantic cable. By this means the new Royal Edward Tuberculosis institute, some three thousand miles away, will be placed in direct communication with Buckingham palace.

The first step will be to connect the palace with the postoffice, which will carry communication as far as Ireland; there communication will be taken up by one of the Atlantic cables. At Nova Scotia the final step will be to link the cable with the land line of either the Canadian Pacific or the Great Northern company. The only difficulty will be in regard to the cable. At the busiest hours of the day there is enormous pressure of work on the Atlantic cables and great inconvenience would be caused to commercial communities if it became necessary during this period to suspend the despatch of messages. The ceremony, however, will take place, no doubt in the afternoon in Montreal, and, English time being five hours later, it would mean that the cable would not be required until the evening on this side when business is slack.

On both the land wires and the cable the order, "Keep clear of all messages" will be given. The King sitting in Buckingham palace, will press a button. This will start an electric current that will flash across the land wires to Ireland, along the cable to Nova Scotia and on the land wires again to Montreal. At the new medical institution the current will be caught up by an electric device that will at the contact release a weight. The release of the weight will cause the doors to fly back, the lights to be turned on, and the flag to run up the mast.

This latter part of the ceremony is not difficult to arrange. In London every day an electric current at a well-known Strand clock-maker's causes a flag to be hoisted over the shop. The whole ceremony will occupy less than a minute. Indeed an official of one of the big cable companies went so far as to say that the whole affair will be practically similtaneous. At any rate, he added, in less than ten seconds from the time the king presses the button the new institution in Montreal will have been opened, with the flag flying and lights lit.

Correspondence

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Dear Sir,—

I notice in the columns of your paper, under the heading of "District Court News" re Lentz vs Crewe and Crewe vs. Lentz, a report which I consider, is very misleading. I consider the writer is either prejudiced or got it from some one else who has a spite against me. I wish to say that if that advertisement was given by the R. N. W. M. Police it is a pity they cannot give a better description than to advertise a plainly branded heifer as unbranded, when she has a plain brand on her; and also to advertise an earmark that is not the earmark that is really on the heifer; also, a yearling as a two-year-old. The heifer was a calf when she went to Lentz's place, so she must have been a yearling when he advertised her. She is only a two-year-old now. Why should I be expected to pay for an advertisement like that? Then Mr. Hepper, of Walsh, told Mr. Lentz that the heifer was branded, and to prove it, clipped the brand last Christmas, 1908, yet, about the last of June or first of July, Mr. Lentz applied to a J. P. for an order to sell her on his false advertisement.

Now, as regards the remark that I refused to pay Mr. Lentz, I will say, that also is false. The whole article is very unjust, and I think His Honor Judge Mitchell gave a very just summing-up of the evidence and I did not think anyone who was in the court-room thought otherwise. If the reporter who wrote the article was really in the court-room, and heard what Judge Mitchell said, he must know what the others who were in and heard it, will think. No doubt he will hardly like to sign his name to it. I would like very much to know who he really is for certain, but I think I can make a very good guess. I believe him to be one who would like to shield himself.

FRED CREWE.

The Times

The presence of mind of a young comedian averted what might have been a serious panic at the Middlesex Music Hall, Drury Lane, London, one night recently. Preparations were being made for a cinematography exhibition when suddenly the film caught fire. A dense cloud of smoke poured into the auditorium, and flames shot out of the operating box at the back of the pit. A woman rose to her feet and screamed. This was the signal for a general rush to the doors from all parts of the house, which was about three parts full. Mr. Charles Liburn, who was on the stage at the time, however, continued singing, began a dance and called other performers in the wings on to the stage to join in the chorus. This had the effect of diverting attention of a part of the audience, and meanwhile the fire inside the box was extinguished. Many were knocked down and trampled on in the first rush for the doors but no fatalities resulted.

To steal a safe in broad daylight in one of the busiest thoroughfares of London, and escape capture, would seem impossible, but it was done recently. The premises of a watchmaker and jeweller situated in Percival street, Clerkenwell, were entered early one Sunday night, and the contents of the safe rifled. The thieves appear to have forced the door of the room containing the safe and removed that repository, weighing two hundred pounds, to the top of the stairs and then slid it down. Upon arriving on the ground floor the thieves must have carried the safe into the street, put it in a vehicle and driven away. How they managed to do so without being observed is a mystery, the street being by no means quiet, and having a constable on duty not many yards away. The empty safe, containing receipts and bills, was found by a constable in another street some distance away.

A daring post-office robbery, carried out by a gang of masked men, took place recently in the south-east of Russia, the scen of the outrage being a little wayside station in the province of Orenburg. The robbers carried bombs and revolvers. The place was guarded by police but the precaution proved insufficient. Three of the constables were either shot or deliberately murdered with the explosives, as was also the watchman on duty at the station. A desperate fight must have raged, for it is positively known that no less than ten other men were left wounded in the affray. The robbers subsequently cut the telegraph lines and escaped on an engine. Halfway from the station to Syrostan, they got off the locomotive and left it to run without a driver.

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes:—"For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail and tried liniments and plasters, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was about to give up in despair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial."

Thanksgiving

Yesterday was celebrated as Thanksgiving Day throughout Canada and Canadians had much for which to be thankful. Now that we have recovered from the rude jolt which tradition received when the change was made from Thursday to Monday, we are prepared to admit that the change has some advantages. There is no argument 'save tradition in favor of Thursday, and it would seem as if we had now settled down to accept the new day and enjoy its advantages.

Thanksgiving Day is a day set apart as a day of national thankfulness. It is no degradation of its spirit for us to recount the material blessings which we have received. Indeed such is its primary purpose; and having done so, let us devoutly thank the All-Father for His goodness. Peace has been our portion as a nation. So accustomed are we to this blessing that we are prone to lose sight of its advantages. Most of us have never lived in a land cursed with the burdens of militarism. We have only to compare our conditions with those who are so situated to realize how much we have for which to be thankful.

After a lapse of a couple of quiet years, trade conditions have experienced a distinct revival. The soil has yielded a big return and prices are firm. This soon makes itself felt in realms of trade. The soil is the basis of our prosperity. But climatic conditions are beyond our control and we may fittingly express our thankfulness to God for the conditions which have been granted us.

Comparative freedom from industrial strife has been a characteristic of the year. Good times tends to produce this but a better understanding by capital and labor of each other's problems has more. Quietly the influence of Christianity is being exerted on the problem and in the spirit of the Man of Nazareth the two factions are coming closer together. Each has still much to learn, but the trend is in the right direction

Cabinet Changes

The announcement made last week that the member for Medicine Hat had resigned the portfolio of Minister of Agriculture came as a distinct surprise to his constituents. While The Times has in no way altered its opinion as expressed in last week's columns in regard to the failure of the construction of the telephone line it is not of the opinion that the late minister has not accomplished anything. Mr. Finlay may have had his short-comings (and who is there who has not) but he has also his virtues. No one doubts his straightforward honesty or his sincerity. These are valuable qualities in a public man.

Though he has seen fit to retire from the responsibilities of administration his services to his constituency need not, doubtless will not, be at an end. Relieved of the heavier duty, he will now have more time to devote to local needs. His service to his constituency need in no way be diminished by the change.

The Liberal press is loud in its praises of his successor. That he has ability, no one will question. In the use of Billingsgate he is a "past-master." That the government is strengthened by the acquisition of a man with such an uncertain reputation is questionable. If he applies the same zeal to the administration of the department over which he is called to preside as he does to the demolishing of his opponents, the departmental headquarters will be a hive of industry henceforth and things will hum in agricultural circles. Mr. Marshall has ability and energy which we trust he will use wisely.

The announcement that a portfolio will be created for Mr. Buchanan, will meet with general approval. The cabinet will not be too large even for a young provinc with another minister in active service. Mr. Buchanan's record leads one to expect things from him in his new sphere.

TheAgricultural College

Those who listened to President Tory's discussion of university problems last Wednesday night will feel convinced that the head of the provincial university is a man who goes carefully into a subject before coming to a conclusion, and who decides no question without first mastering its details. The local press showed its good judgment in refraining from criticizing the action of the senate in placing the college at Strathcona until the senate had been heard from through its head, the president. We now see that the senate has not acted hastily nor unwisely but in a broad public spirit. We pred ct great things for the university under so capable a management.

The Toronto Globe says that "the Conservative press is at sixes and sevens on the naval policy. One section decries any expenditure on the navy, another after having blown the patriotic horn with hysterical fervor is now declaring that the whole purpose of the government in undertaking a share of Imperial defence is to win the next elections. A third frankly supports the action of the government." All of which goes to show that the Conservative press, like some Conservative members, has opinions of its own, and does not repeat parrot like what the party declares it must say.

Press Comment.

NO HOG RAISING FOR THIS EDITOR

(Hartney Star)

J. Y. Griffin & Co., of Winnipeg, have written country papers asking them to advise farmers to raise more hogs. Other city dealers have done the same thing. The Commercial says it has been advising farmers all along to raise more hogs. It is quite evident the city does not understand Manitoba farmers. If the city people want hogs they can raise them for themselves just as the farmers do. It is pleasant work raising wheat. Wheat does not grunt. No use telling farmers how to run their show. If city folks are hungry, they had better place their jewelry on the dresser and get a spade and dig. There is money in it. A'so, contentment.

UNLIKE SIR FREDERICK IN SOME THINGS

(Moosimin World)

A Winnipeg man, it is stated, is the very image of Sir Frederick Borden. He has no other vices.

CO-OPERATION ON THE BROADEST LINES.

(Free Press)

In a recent issue of the Free Press attention was called to the far-sighted action of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads in providing funds for the operation by the State Agricultural College of North Dakota of a number of demonstration farms in order that the farmers of the state might be instructed in the most convincing manner possible as to the value and profitableness of practising a system of crop rotation. The inducement to the railroads in this work was the fact that increased business would result from greater diversity in the farming operations of the State.

Now comes word that President B. F. Yoakum, of the Rock Island-Frisco lines is interesting himself in a movement for the improvement of the rural highways through the districts tributary to his system, believing that increased railroad traffic will result from better means of travel between the farm and railroad. To this end he is arranging personally conducted tours of the leading farmers from the districts of the west where the roads are most primitive to the east where good roads already exist. Highway commissioners and engineers accompany the farmers and instruct them in the various qualities, costs and advantages of the roads they inspect.

This is co-operation along the broadest lines. Not the co-operation of one class of workers in a fight against capital or another class, but the co-operation of large capital with small, and of capital with labor to the mutual advantage of all. War industrial no less than international, is waste, and strikes, lock-outs and such like disturbances are stern exemplifications of this truth. The railroads of Canada have shown, and are showing, much of this broad spirit of co-operation of class with class, though the effects and importance of such work are often obscured by spectacular fights with shippers or employees. Evidence of this spirit is shown in the treatment accorded the pure-bred live-stock interests by the railroads, the arrangement annually of harvest excursions to the wheat fields at very low rates, the granting of cheap to and from educational gatherings, the establishment of welfare work among employees and in many other ways.

There is room for a greater recognition of this work by the public and for an enlargement of its scope on the part of great corporations which have it in their power to conduct such efforts. Corporations have come to stay, and labor will endure. The ultimate settlement of our great industrial class problems will not be reached by strife, but by the steady growth of co-operation along interclass rather than class lines.

DUKES AND DREADNOUGHTS

(Moose Jaw News)

There has been a great slump in dukes. A fully equipped duke costs as much to keep as a Dreadnought. They are just as great a terror and they last longer.—Lloyd-George at Newcastle.

This grouping of dukes and Dreadnoughts is exceedingly clever; clever from the point of alliteration, and clever from the point of destructiveness and expense.

And indeed dukes and Dreadnoughts have many things in common. The appearance of the Dreadnought marked the beginning of the attack upon the dukes. The leviathans cost much more than theordinary battleships, and were so generally adopted that the consequent heavy expenditure made necessary an increase in taxation. How to raise it was the perplexing question.

The English Tories proposed to broaden the basis of taxation; that is to make every person pay something instead of throwing the greater pare of the burden, as now is and has been the case for some time, on a wealthy minority. The Liberals took measures to throw the increased charge upon those best able to bear, which for the most part has fallen upon the dukes.

Both dukes and Dreadnought when in action make a loud noise. The Lloyd-George budget has been the cause of the most furious oratorical engagement in Britain during the last half century. Among the dukes Lord Roseberry ranks in effectiveness with the 13-inch gun of a Dreadnought. As furious as has been the fight the end is not yet. Naval experts agree that in future naval supremacy will depend upon a decisive battle and political experts seem unanimous in the opinion that the future of the dukes will depenpend chiefly upon the result of the budget controversy.

There are some who contend that the future of Britain depends upon the continued existence of the dukes in all plentitude of their powers and splendor of their living; while others say that Britain's supremacy is contingent upon the number of Dreadnoughts. Events show that power is rarely dependent upon any one thing. Already the ordinary Dreadnought is being superseded by the super-Dreadnought, and there are not wanting indications that British society will survive the decline of the Cure That Obstinate Sore.

Where Ordinary Salves Fail Zam-Buk Succeeds

Chronic sores which cause trouble by "breaking open," may be cured by Zam-Buk as well as recent injuries and diseases. If you suffer from some old sore—hidden, perhaps, but none the less painful for that—don't dally, apply Nature's healing essences as prandied in Zam-Buk. Mrs. I. E. Ashton of 111 Vickers Street, Fort William, tells how valuable Zam-Buk is as a family balm. She says:—"We first used Zam-Buk for cuts and bruises, etc., and found it so satisfactory that my husband started using it for a chronic sore. For a long time he had been bothered with an old sore on his leg, and had used various preparations, yet nothing had permanentlh cured it. He began applying Zam-Buk balm, and was very soon agreeably surprised to notice a great improvement.

"It was only a matter of a short time before Zam-Buk had thoroughly cleansed the sore of all foul matter and healing commenced. It is now some months since the sore was completely closed, and there is no likelihood of it breaking out again.

"Since then my baby, eighteen months old, has been cured of eczema on the scalp by Zam-Buk. This eczema came in red pimples, and if rubbed or scratched formed into sores. The child was very fretful from the irritation of the scalp, but whenever Zam-Buk was applied it seemed to bring the greatest relief. Frequent applications were effective in clearing all traces of the disease from the baby's scalp in a short space of time. I feel it my duty to give the credit where due, and I cheerfully recommend Zam-Buk to all sufferers from chronic sores, bad leg or eczema."

Zam-Buk is Nature's own healing balm, being composed of pure herbal essences. It is a sure cure for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, poisoned sores, chronic wounds, bad leg, piles, festering sores, chapped hands, cold-sores, frost-bite and all skin injuries and diseases. Druggists and stores everywhere sell at 50c. a box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 3 boxes for $1.25. You are warned against harmful imitations represented to be "just as good."

"Bronchitis."

THE SYMPTOMS ARE

Tightness across the Chest, Sharp Pains and a Difficulty in Breathing, a Secretion of Thick Phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color coming from the bronchial tubes when coughing, especially the first thing in the morning.

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather and when neglected will become chronic.

Chronic Bronchitis is one of the most general causes of Consumption. Cure the first symptoms of Bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

Bronchitis Cured.

Miss Martha Bourget, Little Pates, Que., writes: "Last spring I was very poorly, had a bad cough, sick headache, could not sleep, and was tired all the time. I consulted two doctors, and both told me I had bronchitis, and advised me to give up teaching. I tried almost everything but none of the medicines gave me any relief. One of my friends advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I had scarcely taken the first bottle when I began to get better and when I had taken the fourth bottle I felt as well as ever, my cough had left me and I could sleep well."

Dr. Wood's is the original Pine Syrup. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents. There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" so be sure you receive the genuine when you ask for it.

The extraordinary case of a woman talking to a dead man was related at the Shoreditch Coroner's court recently. An inquest was held on the body of Harry Beale, and his mother said that when she returned home from shopping one evening, she saw her son in an upright position close to the ceiling. She chatted to him and talked of everyday events, thinking he was doing something to the ceiling, as they were going to have it whitewashed. Then as he did not answer, she said, "What's the matter with you?" and looking round was horrified to find that the man was hanging from a lamp hook by a rope. She immediately cut him down, but he was dead.

An owl flying with a rabbit in its talons, by getting entangled in the electric wires, threw every town in the Sacremento Valley from Willows and Vina on the south, to Kinnett on the north, in darkness for fifteen minutes one night recently. The owl with the rabbit hanging beneath it flew against two power wires two miles north of Palo Cedro, creating a short circuit that upset 200 miles of light wires and threw a score of towns into darkness. The owl and its prey were found soon after. Nearly every feather was burned to a finish off the bird. The rabbit was roasted to a turn. About two years ago an owl and a rabbit in the same manner played havoc with the lighting system of Northern California.

Medicine Hat,
October 19th, 1909.

THIS AGREEMENT made in triplicate this Twelfth day of October, 1909. Between:—

THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MEDICINE HAT, in the Province of Alberta, of the first part.

—AND—

THE ALBERTA CLAY PRODUCTS COMPANY, LIMITED, incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota, and whose Officers are JAMES CAMPBELL, Brick and Tile Manufacturer, of Lehigh, Iowa, President; and WARREN OVERPACK of Webster City, Ohio, Sewer Pipe Manufacturer; of the second part.

WITNESSETH THAT WHEREAS certain inducements have been offered to the parties of the second part to have them erect their plant in the City of Medicine Hat instead of at Coleridge.

AND WHEREAS the City of Medicine Hat and the Citizens thereof desire the parties of the second part to locate their Sewer Pipe Plant and construct their buildings more specifically described, in the City of Medicine Hat and as an inducement to that end are willing to grant and convey to the parties of the second part the property known as the 'Athletic Park' or 'Athletic Grounds,' containing five acres more or less and to secure an additional parcel of land from the surveyed portion adjoining on the South and East, commencing at the apex where the C.P.R fence adjoins the fence surrounding the Athletic Park and running easterly to the most southerly angle of the Bray property and then running southerly to a point where it intersects the railroad at right angles with the northerly limit of the property, and containing seven acres, more or less.

NOW THEREFORE the parties have agreed as follows:

The party of the first part, in consideration of the sum of One Dollar paid to it by the parties of the second part (the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged) and the further consideration of the covenants and agreements of the parties of the second part herein contained, agree to convey or cause to be conveyed to the parties of the second part, their heirs or assigns, a clear and perfect title to the above mentioned properties, upon the completion of the buildings hereinafter specifically described and after the plant has been completed and in operation for one month.

The party of the first part also agrees to turn over to the parties of the second part at the same time as the said property is transferred as aforesaid, the gas well recently sunk by the party of the first part on the property known as the 'Nuisance Grounds' and to construct an adequate pipe line to convey the Gas from the said Well to said lands and should the said well not furnish sufficient gas to meet the requirements of the industries which may be constructed and operated on said lands, the party of the first part agrees to furnish to the said industries hereafter located on said lands, the necessary gas in addition to the gas which shall be supplied by the well as aforesaid to hereafter meet all said requirements at a cost not to exceed five cents per thousand feet. Provided however that this agreement to furnish additional gas shall not be in force during such periods (if any) as the supply of gas owned or controlled by the parties of the first part may be insufficient to permit of the use of the same for industrial purposes, but whenever the supply of such gas is sufficient to permit of its use for any industrial purposes it shall then be furnished to the industries located on said lands as aforesaid in as large a proportion to their needs as it is furnished to any other industry in the said City of Medicine Hat subject to existing contracts. The provision in this paragraph that the price of said gas shall not exceed five cents per thousand cubic feet shall be in force only for a period of ten years from the date the necessary bylaws to carryout the terms of this contract are carried by the burgesses, but at no time shall the party of the first part charge the parties of the second part a greater price for gas than it shall at the same time charge its most favored customers for similar services. Provided also that if during the winter of 1910 and 1911 there should be a shortage of gas in the said City for domestic purposes the parties of the second part agree to allow the City the use of all gas from said well for domestic use only during such shortage.

The party of the first part agrees to furnish free of charge when required by the parties of the second part all gas which the parties of the second part may desire to use in connection with the construction, maintenance and operation of their industrial plants on said lands until the said gas well is turned over to the parties of the second part and connected with the said works.

The party of the first part agrees to submit all necessary by-laws and to endeavor to have them carried by the burgesses of the City of Medicine Hat fully authorizing the carrying out of the matters herein provided for at as early a date as possible.

The party of the first part further agrees to exempt all improvements that may be made upon the aforesaid lands by the parties of the second part and covered by this agreement from any and all taxation under its control except school taxes, for ten years from the date the necessary by-laws to carry out the terms of this contract are carried by the burgesses.

The party of the first part agrees subject to the Water Works by-laws now in force in the City of Medicine Hat and subject also to any Water Works by-law which may hereafter be in force in said City, to lay and thereafter maintain and operate sufficient water mains, pipes, hydrants and other facilities and appurtenances necessary to furnish ample and adequate water supply for fire protection to all structures which may hereafter be constructed upon the said lands and to have such water mains, pipes, hydrants and other facilities completed and in operation not later than the 1st day of December 1910 (ten).

The party of the first part agrees to furnish the parties of the second part on said lands all water required for operation of said plant and all industries that may hereafter be operated on said lands for a reasonable compensation to be paid therefor. Nothing in this paragraph contained shall obligate the party of the first part to lay any pipes or mains or construct any hydrants or other facilities or apurtenances upon the above mentioned lands which will become the property of the Alberta Clay Products Company Limited upon the fulfilment of all the terms of this agreement.

IN CONSIDERATION OF THE PREMISES the parties of the second part covenant, undertake and agree to and with the party of the first part as follows:—

(a) To cause to be erected and operate a Sewer Pipe Manufacturing Plant upon the aforesaid lands, which will consist of the following amongst other buildings: Main drying building, about 256 x 80 feet, four stories including basement. Building for clay and part machinery about 256 x 56 feet, the portion for machinery to be one story high and the balance three stories high. These buildings to be connected by another building about 30 x 60 feet, three stories without basement. Battery of twelve kilns, 28 feet in diameter, inside measurement. These dimensions are approximately correct as to the capacity of the buildings to be erected but the parties of the second part reserve the right to make changes to conform to the most approved plans that may be secured for the construction of its plant.

The parties of the second part agree not to sell or supply gas from the said well for use off the said lands which will become the property of the Alberta Clay Products Company, Limited upon the fulfilment of this agreement.

If from any cause whatever the said plant shall cease operation or be shut down and the said gas well shall not be used for one month, the City shall be at liberty after serving ten days notice in writing on the parties of the second part to take peaceable possession of the said gas well and all necessary rights of way thereto and therefrom and use the gas therefrom until such time as the parties of the second part shall again commence operations on said lands.

If the necessary by-laws to carry out this agreement are not carried out by the burgesses of said City on or before the 15th day of November, 1909, then this agreement shall be void at the option of the parties of the second part.

The plant will be a thoroughly substantial and up-to-date Sewer Pipe Manufacturing Plant equipped through out with the most modern machinery, employing from 60 to 100 men continuously and using from 80 to 200 tons of clay per day when the plant is in full operation. The estimated total value of the plant as proposed to be erected including the clay lands, railway tracks and appurtenances and its other property is $150,000.00.

The party of the second part also hereby agrees to proceed with the construction of their said plant immediately and to have same completed before the last day of December 1910. Provided however, that should said plant be not complete on said date as aforesaid and if the parties of the second part show reasonable cause of delay or that such delay is due to any reason beyond their control the parties of the first part agree to extend the time for the completion of said plant.

The party of the second part agrees that the above mentioned lands and gas well which will be deeded to th Alberta Clay Products Company, Limited, upon the fulfilment of the terms contained in the agreement shall be used strictly for manufacturing purposes.

This agreement and everything here in contained shall respectively enure to the benefit of and be binding upon the parties hereto its and their assigns, heirs, administrators, executors and successors respectively.

IN WITNESS whereof the said corporation has affixed its corporate seal and the hands of its Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer and the said company of the second part has affixed its corporate seal and the hands of its President and Secretary-Treasurer thereof respectively.

Pure and elevating indeed is the beautiful picture entitled "The Soul's Awakening," offered this season to readers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. No parent can look upon "The Soul's Awakening" without feeling it must have a place in the home.

"The Soul's Awakening" will touch the heart of mankind. It will soften the sentiments of the wayward, the cruel, the indifferent, the wanton. Religious men and women will feel an ecstasy, the indifferent will be brought to stop and ponder, the hardened will admire its beauty, even if they feel no companionship with it, and all will agree that it is a beautiful picture for the home, the home of poor and rich alike.

One wonders how the publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal can afford to give such a beautiful picture to all subscribers. The paper alone is big value at one dollar a year, and the picture is easily worth double the amount. The price of the year's subscription to the Family Herald and Weekly Star is one dollar and every subscriber gets a copy of "The Soul's Awakening," size 19 x 24 inches, just as soon as the subscription is received. No Canadian home can afford to be without it.

To fall 500 feet and be still alive was the exper ence of a Glasgow man on Ben Nevis recently. He was descending the mountain, accompanied by a lady, and when near the bridge over the gully adjoining the half-way house, he fell over a declivity from a height of about 500 feet. The lady was left alone on the bleak hillside in the darkness, and was powerless to render any assistance. She told the story early next morning to another lady making the ascent, who at length discovered the injured man. He sustained one or two fractures, and some severe cuts, but is expected to recover.

A Glasgow fox terrier was lent by its owner recently to a relative in Campbeltown who was suffering from the burglary scare. A simple method of transit was adopted by placing the dog on board the steamer at the Bromielaw and tying it up to the rail. The animal developed a strong aversion for the trans-shipment. It had the cord chewed to pulp and torn apart before the ship was five miles on its journey, when it jumped overboard and swam ashore, and in the course of the day was at it master's place of business in the heart of Glasgow.

Parliamentary Reflections.

PLUNDER BY PUBLIC WORKS

How voters were bribed out of the public treasury:

Ottawa, Oct. 23—Attention has been drawn to the way in which Mr. Girard, M. P. for Chicoutimi-Saguenay, obtained Dominion money for expenditures in his constituency which should have been purely municipal. One example is that of the road known as La Savane. This road, which runs from St. Alphonse to Chicoutimi, carries the Dominion Telegraph line, and was a very bad one. Sand was needed for it. But the municipality did not pay for its improvement. Evidence was adduced at the Tache-Lapoint libel suit to show that the Federal Public Works department was informed that the telegraph poles were a source of danger to persons passing along, and that sand was needed to put around the bases of the poles to prevent them from falling. A report was required from Mr. Tache, the Dominion resident engineer, whose duty it was to protect the interests of the taxpayer. He confirmed the statement made by Mr. Girard. The sum of $1,200 was taken from the voters for telegraph repairs and spent on this road. It was purely municipal work; yet the department expended the money.

A CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

Ottawa, Oct. 23—The movement for a Conservative Convention is gaining strength. The Kingston Standard, for example, has endorsed the proposal. Among other things it says:—

"Yet a Convention was bound to come—of that there could be no doubt; and the wonder is, that it was not recognized sooner. Times have changed; conditions have changed; thoughts have changed in the last dozen years, and what was Conservatism a decade ago is not necessarily Converatism now. For instance, the Conservative party was at one time wedded to the idol of High Protection. We doubt if it is now. Rather, we believe it will be found that Western Conservative sentiment inclines more and more to a purely protective tariff as such, and that the Conservatives will let the Liberals, who latterly have adopted the one-time Conservative protective policy, coddle the trusts as they will, while the Conservatives will consider not the trusts nor the protected manufacturers, but the consumers—the masses."

Another paper which joins in the movement is the Moose Jaw News. Discussing the fact of the remarkable development of the newer parts of the Dominion in recent years! this journal says:—

"In this circumstance lies the opportunity of the Conservative party. This is not the Canada of twenty years ago. Not only has its industrial life undergone remarkable change; but the change in the character of the population has hardly been less marked. Not only are there two new provinces Alberta and Saskatchewan; but there is a new Ontario, the potentialities of which cannot be realized until its resources are seen. The building of the Grand Trunk Pacific will also open a new British Columbia.

"If there is one fact which more than another should be realized by those now in opposition, it is that in its present state the public mind is not likely to be much influenced by negative criticism. Today a pound of success will buy pardon, for a ton of inconsistency. There was a time not long ago in our history when a political leader who stole another's clothes would be punished for the mere act. But Canadians have ceased to consider political larceny as a punishable offence. The question now is: How does the other fellow wear them? Laurier stole the Conservative tariff policy; but there is no thought of punishing him for the offence, because the policy has been conducive to progress.

"A Dominion convention would almost certainly be productive of many needed changes in the federal system of organization. At present what organization there is is of a provincial character. There is no federal bureau or committee which gathers information on the actual state of the party throughout the Dominion. Such must be brought into existence, upon the model of the Republican and Democratic National committees in the United States. There must be one plan of campaign in all the provinces, and one man at the head of the campaign organizations. This will cost money, and oppositions are proverbially poor. Now, money is hard to get without enthusiasm; but enthusiasm in turn is engendered by numbers. Both will be found at a Dominion convention."

Dealing with the same subject the Toronto News says:—

"The face of the country is changing. Into the west has come a great new population with special needs and special ideals. The time has gone when Ontario and Quebec meant Canada. The political party which is to win support must have a policy free from sectionalism, a policy which will be clearly defined and logical, a policy upon which the western farmer and the Ontario manufacturer can agree. That means a moderate tariff, for one thing. Excessive duties would be no more acceptable to the people than free trade country, lying beside a protectionist It is practically settled that in this neighbor, tariff for revenue only, would be nothing short of industrial suicide. Our industries must be protected, not excessively but sufficiently. 'Adequately' if you like the word better.

"The government professes admiration of free trade principles, but it is thoroughly protectionist in act and deed. By its professions, by its murmurs of 'Historic Liberalism,' it gains votes from free traders. By its acts it commands the support of the manufacturers. Its leading organs curse the British Unionist because he thinks that tariff reform in Britain would settle the unemployed problem. At the same time the Canadian tariff which wins the enthusiastic upport of these journals has prevented an unemployed problem in Canada. John Bunyan knew this type of politician and editor. He called him Mr. Facing-Both-Ways, and a poor creature he was.

"There is no low tariff in Canada. There cannot be. Geography has settled that point. There are low tariff advocates, but the best they can ever get from either parliamentary party is a compromise. The national existence cannot be imperilled to accommodate them. Neither can there be a high tariff party. The western farmers will come into the conflict with the Canadian Manufacturers' association, which by the way, has very close relations with the Liberal party as at present constituted."

"The marked stand taken by the Canadian manufacturers at their recent meeting in favor of increased protection for their output, has drawn attention to the fact that a majority of the members of the association are supporters of the Liberal government at Ottawa. It was a mystery that puzzled many people at the time of the general election in 1896 why so many manufacturers were supporting Sir Wilfrid Laurier's candidates. All their newspapers and party leaders were at the time active advocates of free trade and throughout Ontario especially people were led to believe that an immediate drop in prices would follow the success of the Liberal party. The manufacturers supporting the party, however, know better. They had satisfactory assurances from their political leaders that their interests would not be disturbed. And no disturbance took place. Prices remained the same. A few small changes were made in the tariff for appearance sake, but in the general it was leveled down in the same way that the Republican party recently lowered their tariff at Washington. The manufacturers meeting drew attention to the change of attitude that is going on among the members of the association towards the policy of protection. A majority of the Liberals want the tariff raised whilst many of the Conservatives are rather inclined to stay where they are or indeed might possibly agree to a lowering of the rates on a number of lines in which they consider themstrong enough to compete with their American opponents. In the meantime the public who buy the goods consider the tariff high enough, and the manufacturers may be assured that they will not support either the made-in-Canada campaign, or agree to raising the tariff beyond its present rates."

THE COMING FEDERAL SESSION

Ottawa, Oct. 23—Parliament is to meet on November 11th and it is understood that the programme of the government will be somewhat as follows:—The naval defence legislation; some Militia legislation designed to give effect to the decisions of the Imperial Defence Conference; the Insurance Bill, now nearly old enough to vote; the Decennial revision of the bank act; a consolidation of the Immigration legislation and some railway commission legislation. It is more doubtfully suggested that there may be legislation for cheaper cable tolls and for ratification of the French treaty.

The mystery of the government's intentions with regard to naval defence has not been wholly dispelled but the story is that a fleet of commerce protection cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers is to be built, the capital expenditure being $20,000,000 and the annual outlay about $3,000,000. The story also has it that the measure will be of a peacemeal nature, the provision of so necessary a feature of a naval organization as dry docks being left over. Whether this forecast is accurate or not, it is apparent that Mr. Brodeur is to have control of the new service. This will be a bad start; the Marine and Fisheries department as described by the Courtney and Cassels commissions is surely the last branch of the government to be given such a task, and Mr. Brodeur has neither the intelligence, the firmness of character, nor the high view of public life requisite for the work.

The French treaty will be a very difficult subject for the government to handle. If the treaty is allowed to lapse, the government in general and Mr. Fielding in particular will lose face. If it is ratified, the United States Government will have every reason to apply the maximum rate of the tariff to Canada. It is a matter now for argument whether the preference does or does not bring us under the retaliatory clause. There can be no doubt about the French treaty.

With regard to the proposal for cheaper cable rates, Mr. Lemieux so far has failed to deny the charge publicly made that the cabinet has refused to endorse his plan, and that the scheme has been burked.

More or less comment is finding its way into the press on the subject of the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba; on this the course of the government has been extremely mysterious. Elaborate preparations were made for dividing Keewatin between Ontario and Manitoba, and then last session the government suddenly weakened. It was corridor gossip that a bill had actually been prepared and had been abandoned at the last minute.

The Manitoba government showed itself reasonable, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused even to discuss the matter with them and treated the ministers who came from Winnipeg to see him on the subject with the utmost brusqueness. The bill was shelved for the session only the lamest explanation being vouchsafed. Strangely enough not a word is said by the government press to indicate that it will be brought up again.

Another subject upon which the government said nothing but upon which strong suspicions are entertained is that an attempt will be made to lease the Intercolonial to a private railway.

A non-political measure which really should be passed this session is the Insurance Bill. The government has been struggling with it for years and should get it through this year. The bank act also will come up for its decennial revision.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR

At the last Federal election the Liberals made great capital of the fact that a champhlet had been published entitled "The Duty of the Hour." Originally an article which appeared in the Orange Sentinel, calling upon Protestants to resist Roman Catholic aggression, the Liberals insisted it was circulated by the Conservative campaign management and as part of their campaign literature, The Conservative denials were jeered at. In the trial of the election petition in Queen's County Prince Edward Island, Thomas B. Riley, vice-president of the Liberal Association of Queen's County, while under cross-examination on the witness stand, reluctantly acknowledged that he was responsible for the printing and distribution in Queen's County of the pamphlets. The printing was done by one Mitchell, and the distribution was effected from Riley's residence, Riley admitted these facts under oath. It is recalled that in the adjoining county, King's, the Liberals were obliged to confess that there also they had printed and distributed the same pamphlet.

THE REVENUE

During September last the Dominion government received $8,858,659 in revenue, and during the half year just closed its receipts were $47,353,819, and the revenue during the first half of 1908-9 was $40,727,522. The increase has been almost wholly in customs; the customs taxation during September, 1909, exceeded that during September 1908, by $1,518,336, or 38 per cent. For September of 1909 the revenue of the Intercolonial showed a positive falling off, and there has also been a steady decrease in excise. The current expenditure for the half-year just closed has been $31,563,393 and the capital expenditure $18,218,063, or a total of $288,116,288, so that the increase was $37,582,176 or over 13 per cent in the year.

Grain and Root Crops

Report for September 30th, 1904:—Quality is the feature of the field crops of Canada as indicated by the reports of correspondents of the census and Statistics office at the end of September. Compared with reports at thesame date last year, the average quality of spring wheat is 92.58 to 75 per cent of a standard, of oats 88.97 to 75, of barley 81.22 to 71, of rye 81.29 to 78, of peas 81.84 to 68, of beans 92.32 to 75, of buckwheat 86.01 to 74, of mixed grains 89.28 to 75, of flax 86.97 to 68 and of corn for husking 86.77 to 80.

In the Northwest provinces, where the bulk of the field grain is produced, the averages of quality are uniformly high. Compared with last year, spring wheat in Manitoba is 87.28 to 81 per cent. of a standard, oats 86.07 to 73 and barley 85.89 to 68. In Saskatchewan wheat is 92.95 to 61, oats 94.01 to 67 and barley 91.28 to to 58. In Alberta spring wheat is 89.05 tos 77, oats 90.20 to 84 and barley 84.80 to 80.

These high qualities put to an output of 850,000,000 bushels at the highest market prices realized in a quarter of a century are an indication of the country's fortune reaped from the prairies this year. But in all the provinces as well as in the northwest the records of grain crops are satisfactory, and the September weather has been very favorable for threshing operations.

The condition of potatoes and root crops is nearly the same as at the end of August. The report for potatoes is 90.87 per cent, of turnips 83.84, of mangolds, carrots, etc., 84.40, of corn for fodder 87.18 and of sugar beets 71.02.

Rust, the joint worm and hail storms did some injury in parts of Prince Edward Island; drouth retarded plant growth in the Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia; heavy rains caught the grain of New Brunswick and early frosts and grasshoppers have lowered the averages of oats and barley in Quebec. But loss from these causes will not be seriously felt anywhere. The reports for Ontario are better than those for the end of August, and except for a plague of grasshoppers in the regions adjoining Lake Huron and Georgian Bay and an unusual visitation of frost in the corn-growing counties of the south, the farmers of this province have had a good year. The hot and drying winds in the last ripening days of late-sown wheat in the northwest provinces have probably lowered the average yield there, but correspondents hesitate yet to make an estimate on the extent of it.

The final report on the field crops in all the provinces will be given in December.

A desperate attempt to break prison was made recently by the Russian prisoners at Schlunelburg, when a fierce attack was made on two of the prison jailers. They had come into one of the court yards for their usual work, when suddenly on of them seized a hammer and with all his force, struck the jailer, Ravd, a blow on the head, felling him to the ground, the other prisoners then surrounded Smirnoff, the other jailer, and attempted to disarm him. He managed to draw his revolver and fired, wounding one of his assailants. The sound of shooting brought the guard to the scene. The prisoners were quickly overpowered and removed to their cells. Ravd and the wounded prisoner were taken to the hospital. Their condition is serious but they are expected to recover.

In one of the busiest thoroughfares of Edinburgh recently a lady's hat was responsible for stopping a tram car. The millinery had blown off, got among the wheels and jammed the machinery. The car had to be stopped till the hat was pokered out of the jam. The car was able to proceed but the h[illegible] wreck.

Could Not Sleep In The Dark.

Doctor Said Heart and Nerves Were Responsible.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Mrs. Calvin Stark, Rossmore, Ont., writes:—"About two years ago I began to be troubled with a smothering sensation at night, when I would lie down. I got so bad I could not sleep in the dark, and would have to sit up and rub my limbs, they would become so numb. My doctor said my heart and nerves were responsible. I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised and got a box to try them. I took three boxes and can now lie down and sleep without the light burning and can rest well. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women."

Miss Marjorie Carle who has been on the sick-list for some time has now recovered.

H. Gobbett spent a few days in the city last week.

This district was visited by a fall of snow during the recent cold spell. The feathery visitor fell in such quantities that many of the settlers used their sleighs for the first time this season.

J. B. Murray was down to Lethbridge and filed on a half-section north of town. He contemplates building a cottage.

Mr. McLeod, the liveryman, is building a new barn and making an addition to his stock of horses. Campbell Bros. have the contract for the new building.

Seven cars of settlers effects arrived last Wednesday. They are the class of settlers we like to see as they are well equipped for farming.

Mr. Murray, manager of McLeod's livery barn, is contemplating a trip east. It is rumored that he will not return alone.

Mr. J. Rearstad made a trip to Medicine Hat of Friday.

Geddes and Tyler are operating a coal mine at Little Plume. They are doing a large trade and turning out a good sample. They are now prepared to handle all orders.

Those of us who have been patiently waiting for the weather man to send something in the shape of rain or snow to aid us in the potato digging, have given up in despair We have decided not to dig them at all. We shall plough them out.

Mr. Houver is building a house on Braemar Street, in the "Hat."

It is reported that T. W. Follis is about to dispose of his dairy, if he has not already done so.

There is some talk of the Schmelzar family moving out to their home near Seven Persons for the winter.

J. J. Mahaffy and family have moved into the city for the winter months.

Mr. Irwin Follis is building on his homestead near the nine-mile coulee, evidently Doc. means business.

Mr. John Evans and Mr. Page will do the slaughtering in this district and Mr. Evans will dispose of the meat at the market place. Nothing but the choicest meats will be handled.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Follis have moved into the city. Mr. Follis is engaged in teaming coal at present.

Few of us will be lucky enough to bag a goose for Thanksgiving as they are unusually scarce this season.

Life and Labor

Washington, Oct. 22—The industrial welfare of the country will be advanced by the introduction of vocational manual training in the public school system of the United States. This was the keynote of many of the speeches made to day before the meeting of the industrial education committee of the American Federation of Labor. John Mitchell, vice-president of the federation, presided at the meeting which was attended by prominent industrial educators and leaders in labor circles from all over the United States.

The plan upon which most emphasis was placed and which ultimately may form one of the committee's recommendations is that the public school pupil after attaining the age of 14 years should have advantage of such training as will fit him for his life work. It was declared that the public school system equips the pupil along professional lines to the detriment of his economic value. The introduction of manual labor training in public schools, it was contended, was in general in line with the labor union movement and in thorough sympathy with the progressive ideas advanced by leaders.

The big automobile jarred slightly as it went over the crossing, and the woman, tucked in one corner of the cushioned seat which would have held three comfortably, frowned. Little things had a wonderful power to annoy Marcia Weatherby.

Always she had had more than she wanted, and the deprivation of having nothing to wish for is a far greater one than the ordinary person imagines. From a girlhood home of luxury she had gone to one even richer in the comforts of life when she married Jack Weatherby five years before.

Her path was hedged by people patiently waiting to do her will, to smooth all roughnesses, to anticipate her very thoughts. Yet her latent irritability had grown, fed by a weariness which was becoming chronic.

And Jack himself was no less bound and hampered. She realized dimly that he, too, was helpless through duties and demands custom had fastened on him.

Today as she rolled swiftly along she was overwhelmed with a sudden swift vision of the emptiness of it all. They were forever doing things about which they cared nothing at all simply because it was expected of them to do so. And further and further apart would they grow, even as the last five years had shown her. Marcia Weatherby bit her lip to keep back the tears, for she had cared deeply for Jack when they were married. Perhaps she will now, but she never had the leisure to even wonder about it. And he—his kindness seemed abstracted, secondary.

The machine turned noiselessly into the drive leading up to the big pile she called home. She knew just the process of entering it. First the chauffeur would open the door of the car and help her to descend, the huge front door would swing open, disclosing the footman with his chin at the correct angle, and at the door of the tiny gold and white elevator leading to her rooms Felice, her maid, would be waiting to take her wraps and hand bag and conduct her to the tiresome mysteries of another toilet.

The chauffeur and the footman performed their expected duties, but the program was varied when she stepped from the elevator. Instead of Felice, Jack stood waiting for her.

Marcia's surprise died away when she saw his face. That face, with its look of haggard trouble, silenced her. Without a word she swiftly followed to her sitting room, and the door closed behind them.

"What is it?" she demanded breathlessly, terror clutching her heart as she looked at him.

Jack Weatherby had good stuff in him and could dare much, but his throat contracted as he took in her beauty, her fragileness, her costly array. Helpless, sheltered—that was what Marcia was. Then he spoke almost curtly.

"I'll make it short," he said. "Listen, Marcia, and see if you can comprehend. It doesn't seem possible a man could take a fortune the size of mine and drop it into the middle of the ocean, but that's what I've done. Stocks. It's all gone. We haven't a penny to our name. Even this house is gone. Maybe the grocer 'll trust us, but likely not! How many meals do your think your pearls would buy?"

He flung himself into a chair, with a laugh bitter and hopeless, and waited, just what for he hardly knew—hysterics probably.

The woman before him bent forward, with lips parted. "I can't quite realize"— she gasped. Then she straightened out and walked to the window, gazing out over the lake. When she turned and came to him she was smiling. Besides the smile, there was a look he had never seen on her face before, an expression of interest, of energy.

"Jack," she said, slipping down beside him, her arms about him, "I don't know why, but somehow the only thing I can feel is relief. I believe I'm glad. Why, it leaves us—only each other. Do you see? I'm so deadly tired of all this, of this life! Do you remember the Colorado ranch my father left me? How he held it when the crash came I'm sure I don't know, but he did. Well, we'll go there."

Jack Weatherby laughed even as his heart warmed with joy at the way Marcia had met the blow. "You," he cried, "on a ranch, and a small, insignificant one at that—in a calico dress possibly, and one servant, maybe none, and neighbors ten miles away! Oh, no, Marcia; you don't know what you are talking about! I'll begin again here!"

Marcia Weatherby got to her feet, with an excited little laugh. It was novel to have something to do. "You will not," she declared. "It is the ranch for us!"

And, much to his surprise, Jack Weatherby found it was indeed the Colorado ranch. Never had Marcia been so animated, so busy. Her sympathizing friends went away indignant because she had laughed at their condolences.

"This is the happiest day of my life," she told her husband when the train pulled out of the Chicago station and they were bound for the west with only a few hundred dollars to their names, but with life and health and work before them.

One year later Jack Weatherby, coming home at a gallop, swung from his horse at the door to the rough but comfortable house that was home. His face was brown, his eye keen, his dress negligee.

On the porch stood a woman lithe, graceful, in a linen shirt waist suit that had the air Marcia's clothes could not avoid having. There was color in her cheeks, a sparkle in her eyes, and she laughed like a girl as she ran down to meet him. Arms about one another, they turned to watch the sunset across the distant mountains and were silent before the glory of it.

As the chill of coming evening made itself felt they turned toward the house, a peace enveloping them which needed no words.

"And you thought," Marcia said proudly, "I couldn't do it, Jack! That I didn't mean it! I love the life!"

"You are a wonder, Marcia! And so am I, if you did but know it!" he said half seriously. "The best of it all, dear, is that we've found how much we really are to each other. There's time for that out here in this space!"

Why She Learned French.

"I had a new type of pupil last week," said a high priced French teacher, who has the reputation of taking infinite pains in the matter of pronunciation. "A young woman came in and wanted to arrange for a few lessons which would drill her into repeating a few phrases to absolute perfection. I thought it a strange request, but presumed she was going to take part in some theatricals and that the part required some short French phrases. What was my surprise when she quite frankly told me that she was a music teacher and almost all of her pupils spoke French fluently and that their pet dogs understood nothing else. To her pupils she could speak English, but to the pet dog it was impossible. She had her own list of phrases she wanted to learn. I drilled her on 'Good morning, dear little dog,' and 'Goodby, darling Bijou,' and several other expressions of equal importance until she spoke like a native. She also learned how to say 'Lie down' and 'Good dog' and a few endearing pleasantries. She was an apt pupil, and we had good times over the lessons, as we both saw the absurd side. It was the first time I'd ever heard of pet dogs to whom French was, as one might say, a 'native tongue,' but I've inquired since and find it's so."—New York Sun.

Cupid and the Cook.

When a stately cook showed up at the same employment agency for the sixth time on the lookout for a new situation the manager lost patience. Said she:

"What is the matter? That was a good place I found for you last time. Why are you leaving?"

The cook looked sheepish for a moment, then tossed her head, prepared to brazen it out.

"I'm going away," she said, "because I have no chance there. I've got acquainted with every clerk and every delivery man in the neighborhood, and it's plain that none of them means business. I can't afford to waste any more time there. I want to go into a neighborhood where I can get acquainted with a new set, where there may be something doing. I'm all alone in the world, you see, and I've got to look out for my chances the same as yourself."

The manager gasped, but promised to find a situation on more promising ground.—New York Globe.

Sneeze Without Winking.

Bobby came home one day covered with dirt and bruises and trundling a broken bicycle.

"What on earth have you been doing, my child?" exclaimed his terrified mother.

"I ran over a big dog and took a fall," explained Bobby.

"Couldn't you see him and give him the road?"

"Yes; I saw him and was turning out, but when I got within about ten feet of him I shut my eyes, and before I got 'em open again I'd run into him."

"For the land's sake, what did you shut your eyes for?"

"Couldn't help it. Had to sneeze. If you think you can hold your eyes open when the sneeze comes you just try it some day."

If the reader thinks Bobby's excuse was not a valid one let him try it some day "when the sneeze comes."—Youth's Companion.

Council Will Provide for Athletic Park

Athletic Company Submit Statement as to Delicit

At the regular meeting of the council held in the city hall last evening there were present the mayor and Aldermen Robertson, McKay, Spencer, Adsit, Howson and Huckvale.

The secretary of the Prince Albert board of trade wrote expressing commendation of the council's action in endorsing a resolution calling for the immediate construction of the Hudson Bay railroad.

E. Roberts, secretary-treasurer of Wetaskiwin wrote in regard to certain specifications as to a gas well contract let by the Medicine Hat council, and sent to the Wetaskiwin board. The writer pointed out that inconsistencies existed between two of the clauses of the contract. Referred to the gas commissioners who were empowered to make a reply.

A communication was received from the Robert Fulton Manufacturing Co in regard to the payment of the balance of the account due for the plant supplied by them. Referred to water commissioners.

Superintendent Maharg of the C. P. R. wrote submitting a proposition in accordance with a suggestion made by the city for supplying the company with water. The mayor pointed out that the acceptance of the company's offer would bring a monthly revenue to the city of nearly $320. On motion of Alderman Spencer the latter was referred to the water commissioners with power to act.

C. S. Pingle, president of the Athletic Co., wrote anent the city's guarantee of the company's deficit up to $1000. He stated that deficit was a large one and that the company were compelled to pay something like $8 per month to the banks as interest until the council came through with the promised grant. Speaking on this matter the mayor stated that the city's guarantee was to cover any deficit which might accrue between the first of July and the end of the season. He had asked Mr. Pingle for a full statement of the company's finances covering the period between July 1st and the end of the season. He had since received a statement which was however unsigned. On motion of Alderman Spencer and Adsit the secretary-treasurer was instructed to write to Mr. Pingle asking for a complete statement to be submitted to the auditor, who is at present in the city.

The Canadian Brick Co. wrote that as their kiln of brick was hypothecated to the Union Bank they were unable to supply the brick to the city to offset the latter's counter account. Alderman Howson explained that he had suggested to the company that they should supply the brick for the machine shop and allow the value of the brick supplied to stand against the city's account for gas. The letter was filed.

Ald. Spencer stated that an account of $73.80 had been received for plank sidewalk on the lane by the Alberta hotel. The expenditure had not apparently been authorized, and the public works committee did not know anything about the work. The committee recommended that the bill of $2 for music at the convention of municipalities banquet be paid and that the account for cleaning out of the opera house ($20) be not paid. It was also recommended that the secretary-treasurer write to the Dominion government giving certain information as to the taxation assessment as requested. Report adopted.

Alderman Howson read the report of the public works committee regarding the curling club's request for a rink site. A letter from W. A. Begg had been received in which it was stated that Porter Bros would oppose the closing of their avenue for any purpose, as depreciation of their property would follow such a proceeding. If only thirty feet were taken from the width of the avenue no objection would be raised. Alderman Howson stated that the curlers had asked 48 feet for their purposes and in order to grant their request and to satisfy Messrs. Porter it would be necessary to encroach on the park, which the city had no legal right to do. The committee, therefore, could not see their way clear to grant the request. Report adopted.

Ald. Robertson stated that Fire Chief Hatcher had requested that a buggy be purchased for his use as building inspector, plumbing inspector and fire brigade chief. There was a spare horse which might be used by the chief. Under present conditions it was impossible for him to adequately perform his duties. After some discussion the council decided to leave the matter over for the next council to deal with.

On Alderman McKay's recommendation as chairman of the health committee it was decided to purchase a milk tester for the use of the medical officer of health.

Ald. Huckvale presented a report which showed the remarkable growth in the amount of business done on the local market since the opening day. From the time of opening until June 31st the receipts were $1.30, for July receipts totalled $13.55, for August $23.70, for September $35.95 and for October $52.45. Mr. Shunk, the market clerk, was getting into touch with the farmers and it was anticipated that the country people would make much greater use of the institution.

Messrs. McF. Evans and Patmore, as Methodist church trustees, waited on the council to ask advice as to Special on Main Line of C. P. R.

60 Miles an hour Between Calgary and Med. Hat

On Friday evening a special train left Calgary having on board the directors of the Edmonton and Yukon railway who have been conferring with Alberta ministers in regard to their bonds. The directors had to be in New York city by Monday morning and consequently it was necessary to put on unusual speeds on the western division to accomplish the trip within the time limit. Leaving Calgary at 19.30 the train, which consisted of two special coaches, made an average run of 60 miles an hour between that city and Medicine Hat. There was a lay over of an hour's duration on the road, which does not however count on the run and the speed attained during a portion of the trip was nearly seventy miles an hour. Medicine Hat was reached at 23.20. Engineer Geo Bailey and Conductor Smart were in charge of the train until this city was reached and here were relieved by Engineer Tom Penhale and Conductor Ransom. The trip from Medicine Hat to Maple Creek, a distance of 64 miles, was made in 62 minutes, and on the whole trip between Calgary and North Portal an average speed of 55 miles an hour was maintained. Locomotives 1198 and 1184 both of the modern type with link valve gear were in use on the Calgary and Medicine Hat sections respectively.

On the train were Mr. James an ex-C. P. R. despatcher and ex-superintendent at Winnipeg who will be manager of the Edmonton-Yukon road. Clark Bros., of Indiana, promoters of the company were also on board and Trainmaster A. Hobkirk, Roadmaster Desharnais and B. and B. Master W. M. Gordon.

That such speeds may be maintained on the western division goes far to bear out the contention of Sir Thos. Shaughnessy that the C. P. R. possesses as fine a roadbed as any transcontinental railroad in America or in the world.

BUSINESS ACTIVITY

Today the Alberta Realty and Brokerage Co. remove from Toronto St. to the office lately occupied by E. J. Fowings at 379 Main St., where they will continue their real estate business as heretofore. The Times was surprised to learn that since July this firm have affected real estate sales aggregating in the neighborhood of $125,000. This indicates condition in the real estate market corresponding to the general increase in business activity.

Mr. Maharg Honored

The officers of the western division of the C. P. R. held a supper in the Royal Hotel on Saturday evening for the discussion of railway matters and in honor of Mr. Maharg who was about to leave the city for the Calgary district. Among those present were Supt. Taylor, who succeeds Mr. Maharg here, Dr. Smith, Trainmaster A. Hobkirk, District Master Mechanic, R. D. Smith, Chief Train Dispatcher C. E. Mansfield, Divisional Engineer H. W. McLeod, B and B. Master W. H. Gordon, Roadmaster A. Olson, E. Desharnais, M. Lynch and C. Haggbloom, Locomotive Foreman A. Mallinson, Road Foreman E. Lemieux, Car Foreman J. R. Allan, Chief Clerk M. T. Berto, Yardmaster J. H. Cameron of Medicine Hat, W. Garland of Lethbridge, Agent C. Strong of Medicine Hat.

An enjoyable evening was spent with music and speeches and the meeting broke up about 11.30, everyone wishing Mr. Maharg success in his new district, and the guest of the evening briefly responding to the expressions of appreciation.

IRRIGATION MACHINERY

Andrew Gordon, who farms 1,700 acres of land 65 miles straight north of Stair, is going in extensively for irrigation. He has now five miles of ditches on his land and has on order an 80 horse power boiler and 70 horse power engine, and a centrifugal pump of a capacity of 1,750,000 gallons of water in 24 hours. A portion of the machinery, which was ordered through Jas. Rae, has already arrived.

EXTRA GANG MAN KILLED ON FREIGHT SIDING

L. Wingfield, a C. P. R. extra gang man form Bowell, was fatally injured in the C. P. R. yards on Wednesday night. Wingfield's visit to Medicine Hat was ostensibly for the purpose of seeing the doctor, but he stayed around the city all day and at night went to the freight shed platform, under which he lay with the intention of sleeping there for the night.

At 20.20 a number of cars were being kicked back on the siding and as the man lay with his feet over the inner rail, the wheels passed over both legs. First aid was rendered by Mr. Mullin, the night locomotive foreman and later Dr. Smith's arrival. Wingfield died in the general hospital early on Thursday morning.

Mr. Chas. Horn of Eagle Butte district was in the city on Friday.

The Canadian Foresters of Irvine will hold their annual ball on Thursday the 25th inst.

M. M. and Mrs. Downey returned from Toronto last week.

Gas System Never in Better Condition

Ald. Morrow, chairman of the gas committee and Mr. Craft, superintendent of the department, recently completed an inspection of the gas system in the city. Every regulator was examined and in every case there was a pressure of 300 to 400 pounds On the regulator at the new well, which can be connected up with the system at a moment's notice, the pressure is nearly 600 pounds. As yet, however, the pressure on the old wells has maintained a high level and except in the event of exceptionally cold weather it will be unnecessary to draw on the new supply All dead ends have been eliminated and altogether Medicine Hat never possessed a better gas system than she has today.

WESTERN SUPERINTENDENTS TRANSFERRED

A general transfer of western superintendents has resulted from the superannuation of Supt. Niblock, which took effect yesterday. Supt. Maharg is transferred from Medicine Hat to Calgary, taking Mr. Niblock's place. He is succeeded here by J. G. Taylor who comes from Moose Jaw. W. Uren goes from Brandon to Moose Jaw; J. H. McGregor from Souris to Brandon; T. R. Flett from Saskatoon to Souris. E. L. Chudleigh is promoted to the Superintendence o fthe Saskatoon division.

RIFLE SCORES

L. C. Brown and C. A. Krauss caught an exceptionally fine shooting day on the police point range on Wednesday afternoon, October 27th, both light and wind were just about all that could be desired, so that the prospects for some high scores were in sight. Krauss succeeded in beating two of the range records, making 106 on the three ranges and making the first possible for the 600 yard range, following the possible with two more bulls and an taper or 49 points out of 50 points.

Conservatives Hold Enthusiastic Rally

Endorse Magrath's Stand on Naval Policy

A largely attended and enthusiastic meeting of the Medicine Hat Conservative association was held last evening in Doty's Hall. It is regretable that a larger hall was not available as the number who got no further than the door had doubtless a burning desire to enter the sacred precincts. It is to be hoped that a large enough hall will be provided for the next meeting even if one has to be built for the occasion.

Owing to unforseen circumstances over which he claims to have no control, Mr. James Bine was unable to be present, and the "love feast" consequently lost much of its charm.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted and the secretary-treasurer presented the financial statement which showed enough funds on hand to meet all outstanding liabilities and leave a surplus.

The election of officers was then proceeded with. Mr. C. A. Magrath was given another term as Honorary President. Mr. F. F. Fatt and Mr. A. C. Hawthorne were nominated for the position of president. The election was by acclamation owing to the withdrawal of Archie from the field. It is to be noted that for some unexplainable reason at this juncture Mahaffy forsook the comforts of the association cigars for his more democratic pipe. He will be given space next week to explain such a revolutionary action. Mr. Jas. Armstrong of Woolchester was unanimously elected as first vice-president, as was Mr. Wilson as second vice-president. Just why Mr. Wilson is no one explained at length, and as there are several of that name in the city, the Times will endeavor to discover who the elect is. Jas. Atchison of Colonsay was made third vice-president. For the position of secretary-treasurer a name had to this article unfortunately was selected for this important office. His name is Mahaffy, and the Times fears that a mistake has been made in relegating to the Conservative [illegible] honor. But our fears may be groundless, perhaps he will make good.

The following with the officers, constitute an executive committee—J. Colley, W. H. Niblock, Col. Sissons, Harry Trodd, Ike Bullivant, J. L. Talmage, Jakie (or is it J. K.?) Drinnan, Bill Cousins, Alderman Spencer (think of it! an alderman on the executive of a party association) Mr. Cohen, Mort Fulton, and his team mate at a former election also Mr. Andy Patterson, T. C. Blatchford, Hank Morrow, Edward Lynch, Bull Springs, G. H. Macdonnell, Little Plume, John Cooper, Felman's Lake, John Day, Little Plume, John Huston, (some had doubts about John being a Conservative) Gros Ventre, Mr. Simmers, Newburg; Hezekiah Garlough, Eagle Butte, Dr. Stoner, Red Cliffe, Fred Bohnet, Jr. Newburg, Carl Koenig, Josephburg; Thos. McFadden, Medicine Hat; John Schmidt (a bunch like this can carry any election not excepting a provincial one.

The meeting was then favored with an address from John Herron, member for Pincher Creek, who with Mr. C. A. Magrath is on his way to Ottawa. Mr. Herron referred to the independent stand taken by Mr. Magrath on many subjects and declared that the member for Medcine Hat was the biggest man in the house of commons in more senses than one. He predicted a shorter life for the present parliament than is usual. There are questions which the country ought to decide. One of them is the naval question. The party in power had no mandate from the people on that great question and should not proceed without one. His policy he declared to be "One King, one army, one navy."

Mr. Magrath, who next addressed the meeting said that he had unwillingly been brought into the limelight of late because of some supposed utterance he had made on the naval situation. He had been quoted and misquoted; but he claimed he had not yet defined his position as he was not yet ready to give a final word on such a large question. However he consented to outline in a general way the trend of his thought on that issue. There should be no question of party politics on such a great issue but solely a question of patriotism. "What do we want a navy for?" asked the speaker. "Is it to ward off pirates from our commerce?" There are at least five million people in Europe today, who go to bed without knowing what a full stomach means, because of the militarism of that continent. It is the masses who pay the taxes even if they do not sign the cheques. He contended that the time had arrived when no country should be allowed to have both the leading navy and army. England has a navy and Germany has an army. Give either of them both and some militarist will get in power and make trouble. So far as the speaker is concerned, he did not care where his taxes go provided it gave England the greatest navy in the world. Destroy British power today and the clock of the world is turned back a century. If at the present time we give England financial assistance in the building of her navy it is because some do cided that we owe some of our own. England could cease, and would, give back in battleships something as good as we could poss bly build now. England would also keep an open door for any Canadians who

DEATH OF MRS. THOS P. BELL

The death occurred on Saturday last at the general hospital of Pearl Leder, beloved wife of Mr. Thos. P. Bell o fthe J. T. Bell & Sons firm. Shortly after returning from the wedding tour Mrs. Bell complained of being unwell and the next week was removed to the hospital, her sickness being diagnosed as typhoid fever. Rutherford's Sawmill Sold

The sale took place recently of the mill buildings, stock, equipment and all the furniture of the William Rutherford sawmills out at the hills, and ranchers and farmers of the district were present in very large numbers.

The history of the sawmill industry at the Cypress hills throws an interesting light on the condition of the country in the old days when the pioneers in the development of the Canadian west laid the foundations of the unparalleled prosperity of today.

It was in the year 1882 that Louis Sands purchased five miles of timber limits, three sections of which he bought outright from the C. P. R. Timber limit scandals were not unknown even in those days, and in this case it was the final purchasers who suffered. The original limit had first been bought by Rykert from the government. Sands sent an agent up to report on the timber, but the agent did not proceed further west than Winnipeg, from which point he sent in a highly favorable report. Upon this report the purchase was made and Sands bought the limit for $200,000 and shipped west the following year, 1883, the whole of his large plant. He paid the C. P. R. $10,000 for the three sections of land. Abraham Adsit, Mr. W. N. Adsit's father, was sent out to look over the timber and immediately sent in a report advising Sands to ship his mill back east. Sands, however, disregarded the advice and the erection of the plant was proceeded with, on the north shore of Elkwater lake and in a few months time 40,000 feet of lumber per day were being turned out, a total of 30 men being employed in and around the mill. The total value of the plant, which was 112 feet long and had a capacity of 40,000 feet of lumber per day, was $25,000.

The timber was much too young to be cut for commercial purposes and the plant was run at a loss in 1884, '85, '86. In 1887-'88 it remained idle and in 1889 W. N. Adsit took over the mill and engaged in cutting for shipment logs which had been previously floated across the lake. Mr. Adsit remembers one occasion on which it took forty logs to make 1,000 feet of lumber, and this he states, was probably true of the average case. About 1,000,000 feet of lumber were cut and in 1890-'91 the plant was again idle. In the winter of 1892-'93 the mill was shipped back to Michigan.

During the years of operation a complete equipment of teams, and heavy wagons with five inch tyres and capable of carrying 3,000 feet of lumber, were in use between the mill and Irvine, the point of shipment. There was also a complete outfit of lumber sleighs, and several feet of 8-ft. logging wheels. In the graveyard by the lake shore the remains of several of the employees were interred. Access to the only market was by rail and from Irvine the lumber was carried to Maple Creek, Calgary and Medicine Hat. Lethbridge also was supplied for a time by the Elkwater lake mill. In the winter of 1886-'7, 60 men living in two camps were employed in the woods. Mr. W. N. Adsit was there during this time and remained out at the hills until 1892. When the railway line was completed through the mountains the firm found it impossible to compete with the British Columbia mills.

From 1893 to 1896 no lumbering was carried on at the hills, but in the latter year Wm. Smibert put in a portable mill on the top of the mountain, and carried on a very successful business. Two or three years later Smibert sold out to William and John Rutherford. Since that time until the sale last week William Rutherford has managed the concern which has proved a very profitable one.

Sands still owns the site of the old plant by the lake and the three sections of C. P. R. land.

During the years when the Sands' mill was in operation, Mr. William Adsit informed The Times, not a solitary settler was to be found between the mill and Irvine and Dunmore. One or two settlers were located in the vicinity of Walsh. The Medicine Hat ranch, thirty or forty miles to the north-west, was the nearest settlers home in that direction. On the east the nearest was ten miles from the spot on which Maple Creek of today stands. To the south as far as the International boundary line not a white man's dwelling could be found.

Met Death in a Well

A sad fatality took place last Thursday morning when Hugh Moore a well driller, engaged on a well on Mrs. Bassett's property, met death by asphyxiation.

Since Friday of the previous week boring operations had been carried on by the Ginther well-boring gang, and a hole two feet in diameter at the shrface had been sunk to a depth of some 120 feet. At the bottom there was a depth of 8 feet of water and about 30 feet of casing. The men engaged on the job were Hugh Moore, G. Prizer and C. A. O'Neil, the last named being in charge.

On Wednesday Moore had been working in the well and had not detected the presence of gas nor felt any ill effects. At 7.40 on Thursday morning he again descended the well and on nearing the bottom shouted to his companions that all was well. A few moments later Prizer hailed him but got no response. Prizer then descended the well and was able to bring his companion a portion of the way up when the gas began to take effect on himself and he was compelled to let the unconsciousman go.

About this time Fred Scott, R. A. Walker and C. Merry arrived at the scene of the disaster and Scott immediately descended the hole but was overcome with gas and had to return to the surface almost immediately. Later Ald. Morrow and Wm. Jackson, foreman of the public works department of the city, came up with grappling irons and a cable. Three times it was thought that the prostrated man had been secured by this means, but each time the irons slipped. Drs. Smith and Boyd were now present. Dr. Smith decided to connect up a storage battery for the purpose of providing light by which the rescuers could work. The light obtained by this means proved, however, quite inadequate and the use of a mirror reflecting the sun's rays was again resorted to and Messrs. Ed. Shaw, T. Bassett, W. J. Lemon and two constables of the mounted police were by this time on the scene. Foreman Jackson and P. Garnett took up 120 feet of ¾-inch gas pipe from the city stores, and, fastening a large hook on the end, endeavored to secure a hold on Moore's clothes. Their repeated attempts however, proved futile. A length of 2-inch pipe reduced to 1-inch at the end was their requisition, and about half past four in the afternoon a grip on the clothes of the dead man was secured and the body brought to the surface.

The gas which caused Moore's death was carbon dioxide, which is quite commonly found in deep wells. The gas is heavier than atmosphere air and while always present in the atmosphere in some degree, forms the lowest strata. It is a non-inflamable gas and a lamp lowered into the well in which carbon dioxide is present, will be immediately extinguished. The lowering of a burning lamp is the test usually adopted by well-diggers before descending to their work and should never be neglected. Moore was not secured to the cable by which he descended the well, but this precaution was taken in the case of each of the would be rescuers who descended the hole. If this had not been done they too would probably have been met with a similar fate.

Moore served in the South African war, afterwards coming to Canada, where he entered Mr. Ginther's service. He was thirty years of age and an Irishman by birth.

Sale of Government Land at Point Grey, Vancouver, B.C.

ON MONDAY NOVEMBER 15TH

we will place on sale for the Provincial Government by public auction at the Horse Show Building in this City a certain parcel of land situated at Point Grey, containing seven hundred acres, more or less. Point Grey is to be Vancouver's most fashionable and beautiful residential district. This property is uniquely situated with a splendid elevation facing the Gulf of Georgia and Howe Sound, and in a few years will be the most beautiful residential district in any city in North America. The land will be put on in parcels of from one-half acre up to four acre blocks, on terms of one-quarter cash, balance in one, two and three years at 6 per cent. interest. This will undoubtedly be one of the most important sales of land that has ever taken place in this city, and any person interested in Vancouver real estate should not overlook an opportunity to be present.

Life and Labor

Revelations of a revolting character in connection with the slums of Toronto were recently disclosed at the annual conference of charities and correction held in the Queen city. As these revelations are but indicative of the undoubted tendency in the poorer districts of all our large cities, it may be of interest to quote extensively from the report. Winnipeg has a problem of her own, and in prairie cities of only a few years' standing have already been sown the seeds of a slum problem which must grow as the years go by.

In the west there is a tendency to concentrate on commercial growth to the neglect of the social problems which must eventually assume menacing proportions. But the truest progress can only be made when the means of a healthy life are provided for all. "You cannot" said Lord Rosebery in a new historic speech, "breed an Imperial race in the slums," and western Canada if it is to realize its ambition to become the home of the most virile section of the British race, must avoid from the outset the importation of the insidious evils of old-world and American commercial civilization.

Below we print in part an account of the condition of Toronto's poorer quarters given by Miss Cook before the conference:

"We are told," said Miss Cook, "that we have no slum district in Toronto and that we know nothing of the tenement house. But we have nevertheless, great overcrowding, and this is having a marked effect on the children. If we do not solve the problem we are going to turn out a terrible brand of criminal."

Then Miss Cook related stories of the secret sufferings and horrors of Toronto's "Ward."

"I know," she said, "where a baby was born the other day, where the mother was in the advanced stage of tuberculosis, and where that baby would be reared among the other children in just two rooms. What chance would that baby have to escape the dread disease?

"I know again, of a place where there is a father, a mother, and two children living in a small house with seventeen men. There was only one accommodation. What privacy could there be there?

"The worst thing is the way that the girls have to live. A little girl grows up without privacy, without self-respect. I know another case in which the parents have three large grown girls. Now in the basement of that little house twenty men sleep. There there is only one accommodation. What chance have those girls?

"Again a boy and a girl were adopted many years ago by certain poor parents. Everyone slept in the same room. There was no privacy for the girl and the result is that she is one of the hardest problems we have to deal with today.

"That is not all. There is a widow living in two tiny rooms in the Ward who keeps a child as companion in her vice. She does everything that is evil. There are always two or three women of ill-repute in that little place. One of them, a boon companion of the widow, has a disease so dangerous that the doctor in our mission has forbidden the nurse to dress the wounds.

"The rich do not believe that conditions are as they are. They do not see how their interests are touched. Let me point out that many of the children of "the Ward" go out as maids into the homes of the other classes.

"We are told that the Jews are the most virtuous, but I tell you that vice and crime is spreading among them too. There is more wife-desertion among our Jews than among any others. I can tell you of places where four or five families live in one house. The women have no privacy, even in the most trying and delicate times of their lives.

"There was a pair of houses recently torn down on the General Hospital's new site. These houses had been made into one. Between them there were fifteen rooms and in them two hundred men lived."

Mr. John King of Ottawa, said that he thought there should be legislation regulating the size of rooms in houses, the ventilation, and the provincial and local boards of health sanitary accommodation.

Mr. John Ross Robertson said that he thought legislation should be obtained giving more power to the to regulate these matters.

James A. Allan, who has just retired from the directorate of the Allan steamship line, has been for some years an active worker in the Socialist cause. As a member of the Fabian society whose influence has been felt in the official Liberal party to such a degree as to lead to the introduction by a Liberal government of the first Socialistic budget, Mr. Allan has been an active worker. Two years ago he made an unsuccessful attempt to enter the Glasgow city council, and this year he has again been adopted as a candidate by the Independent Labor party.

The fact that Mr. Allan is a millionaire and that the progressive taxation which the budget will inaugurate will eventually injure his financial interests, does not serve to dampen his ardor in the cause of a fairer and more rational system of wealth distribution. While realizing that to divest himself of his wealth at this stage could accomplish no useful social aim, he is prepared to support any measures having in view the realization of the co-operative ideal. The philanthropics of men of wealth are all too frequently designed as a means of blinding the public to the means by which great fortunes have been acquired.

It is indeed a promising sign that year by year men of high financial standing are turning in increasing numbers to the solution of the problems of poverty.

LAURIER ON A FEDERATED EMPIRE.

Montreal, Oct. 27—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking before the Women's Club this afternoon, outlined the leading principles of British and American constitutions, presenting the comparison between the two. The premier outlined the history of the British constitution and dwelt upon the spirit of liberty which the British had always possessed to an extent unequalled by any other race. Laurier said one point in which the American constitution appeared superior to the British was that the American was a federated union, and the British a legislative union. It seems astonishing to me, he said that Gladstone had not hit on the federated principle, which I believe is the remedy for the Irish question. Imperial parliament ought not to have its progress impeded by discussing such petty details as roads, or a piece of bog in Ireland or ditches but perhaps some day we sha'l see the federation principle applied in a new form of the constitution for the British empire for experience has shown that the federated principle is a powerful instrument for unity, despite ethnological and geographical divisions.

FIRST TRAIN OVER YORKTON-SHEHO-LANGAN BRANCH

Winnipeg, Ott. 26—The first passenger train that ever pulled out of the C. P. R. depot in Winnipeg to go over the new main line of the C. P. R. to Wetaskiwin, in northern Alberta, left the city today. It carried William Whyte, second vice-president and J. E. Schwitzer, chief engineer of the road. The train is proceeding via Yorkton and Saskatoon, and will go out across the last section of the line which was completed into Wetaskiwin. The trip marks an epoch in passenger traffic in the west, and fast passenger trains will soon be run over the new main line from Edmonton to Winnipeg. Already large quantities of grain are being taken out over the new line, and it is dotted with new towns all along its route.

A REGINA HOLDUP

Regina, Sask., Oct. 27—A bold holdup took place last evening, about 9.30 when J. F. L. Coggeshall a real estate man of Moose Jaw was forced at the point of the revolver to see $130 of his good money appropriated by two strangers. While passing an alley at the rear of the Baptist church, on 12th Avenue, Coggeshall was accosted by a man who pointed a revolver at him and ordered him to step a few paces up the lane. There the robber was joined by a companion who went into Coggeshall's pockets while the other kept him covered. The men got away with their booty and though every policeman in the city is working on the case no trace has been so far discovered of the robbers.

HEAL that OBSTINATE SORE!

CUTS and bruises are often very obstinate in refusing to heal. The edges of the wound remain inflamed and sore, and there is a daily danger of disease-germs settling on the raw flesh and giving rise to serious complications. Thus, neglect or improper treatment of an injury, be it a cut, burn, scald, or even a simple scratch, is a menace to life.

In cases where wounds refuse to heal quickly, nothing but Zam-Buk will suffice if the skin is to be made to grow naturally and perfectly once again. Zam-Buk rubbed gently over a wound has the remarkable effect, not only of rendering the wound proof against disease-germs, but of growing new skin-tissues.

Thus Zam-Buk heals wounds in a perfectly natural manner, and the possibilities of eczema and other torturing skin-diseases are entirely prevented. Possessing rare medicinal properties, Zam-Buk accomplishes what ordinary ointments and salves never can do and its ever-ready character, constant reliability, and absolute purity, render it distinct from all other preparations. If you dress your cuts and sores with Zam-Buk you will never be troubled with "the wound that would not heal."

Of all Druggists and Stores at 50 cents a box, or three for $1.25.

FREE.

Send this coupon (with 1c. stamp to cover return postage) to the Zam-Buk Co., Colborne Street, Toronto, and a free trial box will be mailed at once.

Have you tried Zam-Buk Soap?

AND NOW IN THE HIGH SCHOOL

There are still some people who refuse to take the talking machine at it's true value as a factor in education, or even to consider it seriously in it's capacity of an entertainer.

The following clipping from the Trade journal might serve to create a more respectful feeling of mind towards an invention which is only on the borders of it's usefulness:

Windsor Locks, Conn., Sept. 5, 1909 — The Board of Education, through Superintendent of Schools Daniel Howard, will introduce into the High School course this fall the teaching of languages by the phonograph. This is the first High School in this part of the country to adopt the phonograph in instruction. The course has been rearranged and in connection with the grammar course this year French and German will be taught."

It is bound to come, because of all the ways to study German, French or Spanish there are none that touch the phonograph method.

For one who cannot spend the time to attend a school or classes, the phonograph can be used to the very best advantage. It has always been our opinion, based upon considerable knowledge of both methods of tuition that a course of lessons on the phonograph is away ahead of the ordinary language course in any of our schools. That is for all practical purposes, and the expense of the phonograph course is only a tithe of the school course.

A letter to any phonograph dealer will bring you all desired information.

The reply of the Saskatchewan government to the Centennial Exposition committee has been made public and indicates that the authorities of our sister province take the same view of the situation as the Alberta government, viz. that public works are so much in demand as to require all available finances.

Southern Alberta scored a great triumph at the Dry Farming Congress at Billings, Montana last week Wheat from the Lethbridge district took first prize; and from Macleod district third. Medicine Hat district was not represented at the Congress.

The Mayoralty Contest

Although the municipal elections are some distance off speculation as to whom the various candidates will be has already begun. Should the present mayor elect to offer himself again the city will be turning down a good man if it lets him go. It is well known that Ald. Penhale has aspirations to fill the chief magistrate's chair. While the Times cannot see its way clear to favor his candidature, it must be admitted that his long municipal experience gives him some claim and one which would have weight with some of the electors. Ald Huckvale is also spoken of as a possibility. He would fill the position with dignity and ability. It would seem as if the electors need have no fear but that suitable men will offer themselves.

The Bylaw

In our advertising columns is found a copy of a bylaw referring to the Alberta Clay Products Company on which the burgesses are asked to express an opinion on Nov. 23rd. The bonus proposed in this case is a large one, the land is worth upward of $12,000, the gas we $8000 more, tax exemption $7,500 as a minimum. When looked at from this standpoint, the bonus looks large and the question naturally arises: Is the cost too great?

The Times is opposed to the granting of a bonus of any kind to any company, but until legislation is passed making it illegal one municipality must do as another or suffer for it. Doubtless there are other places which make just as attractive offers, and we must follow suit or take the consequences. Undoubtedly the industry will be an immense advantage to the city. The site is a much more desirable one than the original not only from the standpoint of the company, but also from the standpoint of the city. It is beside the railway and the extensive buildings which will be erected there will command attention. It has frequently happened that the development of a manufacturing center has depended on getting a few live industries started. The city has already two up-to-date and growing concerns in that locality viz. the J. H. Preston Planing Mills and the Medicine Hat Milling Co.'s works. Another one will make that section a prominent industrial one.

There is no necessity however for going into details as there is practically no opposition to the bylaw. The council seems to have safeguarded the people's interests by the terms of the agreement, and the bylaw will doubtless carry with a substantial majority on Nov. 23rd.

The removal of Supt. Maharg from Medicine Hat will be regretted by the business men and citizens generally. Mr. Maharg has had only a brief tenure of office here, and his promotion in such a short space of time is a tribute by the company to his ability and faithfulness. By his courteous manner and consideration he has won a place with all with whom he had dealings. We bespeak for him a successful career in his new sphere of labor.

This week for the first time the union label appears on the Times. It means that henceforth this office will be run as a union shop. This means a small increase in the cost of producing the paper as our workmen now work 48 hours a week instead of 52.

The only difference which will be made in advertising charges is that advertisers will be asked to pay pro rata rates for the fifth issue when such occurs in any month. Formerly this was issued free so far as monthly advertisers were concerned. Owing to the increased cost of production the payment for all space used is an extremely reasonable one and will, we feel, be readily accepted by our large nnmber of constant advertisers.

Press Comment.

The Regina West which is regarded as one of the leading Conservative papers of western Canada comments on the proposed Conservative Convention as follows:—

The decision of Hon. R. L. Borden to call a national Liberal-Conservative convention is very gratifying to the members of the party in this province, who took the initiative in this matter at their last convention when they suggested the advisability of such a gathering. At the time some thought the action ill-advised, but the unanimity with which all parts of the country has welcomed the announcement of the convention amply justifies those who advocated such a course.

The convention is a necessity. The Liberal-Conservative party is rich in glorious traditions but the spirit of Canada demands progress not traditions. The success of the Liberal party since 1896 shows that the electorate of Canada prefer even disreputable authors to able critics. Progress has created new conditions. To meet these conditions the Liberal-Conservative party must present to the electorate their policy—a policy of the party for its representatives, not of the representatives for the party. In addition to formulating a policy it will settle the question of leadership and will place the Hon. R L. Borden at the head of a united, progressive party.

The organization of such a convention requires a great deal of earnest work and considerable time which precludes the possibility of its being convened this year, which is to be regretted as many matters of vital interest must be discussed this coming session. The earliest period that can be chosen will be June which would be a very satisfactory time for the western delegates and would also be suitable for those in the east. Either June or July would allow many to utilize a portion of their vacation in attendance at the convention, and would give an opportunity for a great nnmber of representative men to take part in the deliberations.

It must be a National Convention. With inadequate representation from either east or west it would be worse than useless. To secure a national convention the place of meeting must be carefully selected. If the east will guarantee adequate representation, not only from Ontario, but Quebec and the Maritime provinces as well, we believe that Winnipeg should have the honor. We doubt very much whether they will, and to secure any national convention for many years to come it must be held east of the Great Lakes. We prefer Winnipeg, but believe the most successful and truly representative convention would be one convened in the nat onal capital.

As the convention must be national so must the policy accepted be national; not an eastern policy nor a western policy, but a national policy. Temporary success might result from appeals to provincialism and racialism, Laurier's stock-in-trade, but the Liberal-Conservative party will respond to and encourage the steady robust growth of a national spirit with a national platform—one for all Canada not one for each province.

Advocated by the Liberal-Conservatives and essential to the growth of the west are three planks that will meet with the approval of the whole party—the construction of the Hudson's Bay Railroad, a sane revision of the tariff, and the placing of the prairie provinces upon an equal footing with the others. The Conservatives recognize that these are essential to the prosperity of western Canada, and therefore all Canada, and are steady and consistent advocates of them.

Sir Wilfrid's "immediate construction" of the Hudson's Bay Railway is a joke. The Grand Trunk Pacific Company own the government and they will not permit the building of such a dangerous rival. The only result of Sir Wilfrid's "immediate construction" policy is the discovery that Port Nelson is south of Fort Churchill about two hundred miles. The Hudson's Bay Railway pledge is a near relative of the tariff plank in the 1893 platform.

The West is a unit in demanding control of the public domain and in the demand is supported by the Liberal-Conservative party of Canada. Whatever division there may have been, the united demand of the premiers of the prairie provinces for control of the school lands shows the spirit of the people. Sir Wilfrid succeeded in 1905 in depriving Alberta and Saskatchewan of their rightful heritage by a wholesale debauching of the electorate through his creatures, whose consciences were salved by offices and emoluments, but today the people of the west have awakened to the fact that their provinces have been deprived of their greatest sources of revenue and have been financially crippled.

The Liberal-Conservative party inaugurated the protective tariff to secure the Canadian market for Canadians, but realizing that many of the manufacturers were using the tariff as a means of mulcting the consumer snbstantial reductions were made during the last few years of their administration. The Liberal party, despite their free trade pledges with which they fooled the electorate have become so closely associated with the manufacturers that any sane revision of the tariff from them is impossible to expect. To relieve the western farmer from the position of leading taxpayer in the Dominion will be the work of the Liberal-Conservative party in a tariff revision already advocated by its leading men and journals in all parts of the country.

What's in a name? The Conservatives of the west have found that many of the new electors judge by names not knowing the deeds. The terms Conservative and Liberal have no significance except as designations for two parties. The Toryism of Canada today finds its exponents in the Liberal cabinet. Sir John A. Macdonald recognized the weakness in the term Conservative and always demanded that the party be designated Liberal-Conservative. We can assure the members of the party in the east that National or Progressive would be a more attractive and intelligent name to the new settler whether from the United States or Europe.

Names under Liberal rule have not indicated policy or secured redemption of pledges, as has been seen in the attitude of that party towards the 1893 platform, and in their treatment of Alberta and Saskatchewan, but to the new settler, who knew not our political history, the term "Liberal" has certainly been attractive. The adoption of a progressive, national platform by our party should result in the adoption of a significant designation and above all, in the redemption of each and every pledge when the opportunity occurs.

BRUTAL ART OF FIGHTING

(Strathcona Plaindealer)

Men who have the boast sufficiently developed in their brains to enjoy a prize-fight are accustomed to speak of the slugging accomplished as "the manly art of self-defence." On his recent arrival in New York, Jeffries, known at the present time among ring-followers as "the hope of the white race" is reported to have said in a newspaper intervisw, "Jack Johnson? If I don't whale that coon within an inch of his life, I'll bury my face again as long as I live." What gentlemanly talk for one of the heroes of the day! What fine sentiment to come from the champion bulldog of the white race! Yet thousands of men will get together from all parts of the continent to witness the bloody scene and thousands more will watch the press from now until the fight is over with the keenest interest and bet their money on white or black. Yet we boast of our civilization and hold up our hands in horror over tales of ancient Roman gladiators. If man rose from the beast it is apparent that some of the race have not got very far above the brute creation yet.

TEMPERANCE AND FINANCE

(Montreal Star)

By no means one of the worst results of Chancellor Lloyd-George's new taxes will be the falling off in the consumption of spirits because of the higher prices which his taxes rendered necessary. If these spirits taxes succeed in preventing the British people from drinking too much "fire water," they will constitute a temperance reform of no mean magnitude and will probably do the mother country more good in this way than by pouring easy revenue into the war chest. This development of the budget ought to make a hit with the government's "blue ribbon" supporters.

Caught Cold By Working In Water.

A Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes:—"In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting what you ask for. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents.

Medicine Hat,
October 19th, 1909.

THIS AGREEMENT made in triplicate this Twelfth day of October, 1909. Between:—

The MUNICIPAL COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MEDICINE HAT, in the Province of Alberta, of the first part.

—AND—

THE ALBERTA CLAY PRODUCTS COMPANY, LIMITED, incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota, and whose Officers are JAMES CAMPBELL, Brick and Tile Manufacturer, of Lehigh, Iowa, President; and WARREN OVERPACK of Webster City, Ohio, Sewer Pipe Manufacturer, of the second part.

WITNESSETH THAT WHEREAS certain inducements have been offered to the parties of the second part to have them erect their plant in the City of Medicine Hat instead of at Coleridge.

AND WHEREAS the City of Medicine Hat and the Citizens thereof desire the parties of the second part to locate their Sewer Pipe Plant and construct their buildings more specifically described, in the City of Medicine Hat and as an inducement to that end are willing to grant and convey to the parties of the second part the property known as the 'Athletic Park' or 'Athletic Grounds,' containing five acres more or less and to secure an additional parcel of land from the surveyed portion adjoining on the South and East, commencing at the apex where the C.P.R fence adjoins the fence surrounding the Athletic Park and running easterly to the most southerly angle of the Bray property and then running southerly to a point where it intersects the railroad at right angles with the northerly limit of the property, and containing seven acres, more or less.

NOW THEREFORE the parties have agreed as follows:

The party of the first part in consideration of the sum of One Dollar paid to it by the parties of the second part (the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged) and the further consideration of the covenants and agreements of the parties of the second part herein contained, agree to convey or cause to be conveyed to the parties of the second part, their heirs or assigns, a clear and perfect title to the above mentioned properties, upon the completion of the buildings hereinafter specifically described and after the plant has been completed and in operation for one month.

The party of the first part also agrees to turn over to the parties of the second part at the same time as the said property is transferred as aforesaid, the gas well recently sunk by the party of the first part on the property known as the 'Nuisance Grounds' and to construct an adequate pipe line to convey the Gas from the said Well to said lands and should the said well not furnish sufficient gas to meet the requirements of the industries which may be constructed and operated on said lands, the party of the first part agrees to furnish to the said industries hereafter located on said lands, the necessary gas in addition to the gas which shall be supplied by the well as aforesaid to hereafter meet all said requirements at a cost not to exceed five cents per thousand feet. Provided however that this agreement to furnish additional gas shall not be in force during such periods (if any) as the supply of gas owned or controlled by the parties of the first part may be insufficient to permit of the use of the same for industrial purposes, but whenever the supply of such gas is sufficient to permit of its use for any industrial purposes it shall then be furnished to the industries located on said lands as aforesaid in as large a proportion to their needs as it is furnished to any other industry in the said City of Medicine Hat subject to existing contracts. The provision in this paragraph that the price of said gas shall not exceed five cents per thousand cubic feet shall be in force only for a period of ten years from the date the necessary bylaws to carryout the terms of this contract are carried by the burgesses, but at no time shall the party of the first part charge the parties of the second part a greater price for gas than it shall at the same time charge its most favored customers for similar services. Provided also that if during the winter of 1910 and 1911 there should be a shortage of gas in the said City for domestic purposes the parties of the second part agree to allow the City the use of all gas from said well for domestic use only during such shortage.

The party of the first part agrees to furnish free of charge when required by the parties of the second part all gas which the parties of the second part may desire to use in connection with the construction, maintenance and operation of their industrial plants on said lands until the said gas well is turned over to the parties of the second part and connected with the said works.

The party of the first part agrees to submit all necessary by-laws and to endeavor to have them carried by the burgesses of the City of Medicine Hat fully authorizing the carrying out of the matters herein provided for at as early a date as possible.

The party of the first part further agrees to exempt all improvements that may be made upon the aforesaid lands by the parties of the second part and covered by this agreement from any and all taxation under its control except school taxes, for ten years from the date the necessary by-laws to carry out the terms of this contract are carried by the burgesses.

The party of the first part agrees subject to the Water Works by-laws now in force in the City of Medicine Hat, and subject also to any Water Works by-law which may hereafter be in force in said City, to lay and thereafter maintain and operate sufficient water mains, pipes, hydrants and other facilities and appurtenances necessary to furnish ample and adequate water supply for fire protection to all structures which may hereafter be constructed upon the said lands and to have such water mains, pipes, hydrants and other facilities completed and in operation not later than the 1st day of December 1910 (ten).

The party of the first part agrees to furnish the parties of the second part on said lands, all water required for operation of said plant and all industries that may hereafter be operated on said lands for a reasonable compensation to be paid therefor. Nothing in this paragraph contained shall obligate the party of the first part to lay any pipes or mains or construct any hydrants or other facilities or apurtenances upon the above mentioned lands which will become the property of the Alberta Clay Products Company Limited upon the fulfilment of all the terms of this agreement.

IN CONSIDERATION OF THE PREMISES the parties of the second part covenant, undertake and agree to and with the party of the first part as follows:—

(a) To cause to be erected and operate a Sewer Pipe Manufacturing Plant upon the aforesaid lands, which will consist of the following amongst other buildings: Main drying building, about 256 x 80 feet, four stories including basement. Building for clay and part machinery about 256 x 56 feet, the portion for machinery to be one story high and the balance three stories high. These buildings to be connected by another building about 90 x 60 feet, three stories without basement. Battery of twelve kilns, 28 feet in diameter, inside measurement. These dimensions are approximately correct as to the capacity of the buildings to be erected but the parties of the second part reserve the right to make changes to conform to the most approved plans that may be secured for the construction of its plant.

The parties of the second part agree not to sell or supply gas from the said well for use off the said lands which will become the property of the Alberta Clay Products Company, Limited upon the fulfilment of this agreement.

If from any cause whatever the said plant shall cease operation or be shut down and the said gas well shall not be used for one month, the City shall be at liberty after serving ten days notice in writing on the parties of the second part to take peaceable possession of the said gas well and all necessary rights of way thereto and therefrom and use the gas therefrom until such time as the parties of the second part shall again commence operations on said lands.

If the necessary by-laws to carry out this agreement are not carried out by the burgesses of said City on or before the 15th day of November, 1909, then this agreement shall be void at the option of the parties of the second part.

The plant will be a thoroughly substantial and up-to-date Sewer Pipe Manufacturing Plant equipped through out with the most modern machinery, employing from 60 to 100 men continuously and using from 80 to 200 tons of clay per day when the plant is in full operation. The estimated total value of the plant as proposed to be erected including the clay lands, railway tracks and appurtenances and its other property is $150,000.00.

The party of the second part also hereby agrees to proceed with the construction of their said plant immediately and to have same completed before the last day of December, 1910. Provided however, that should said plant be not complete on said date as aforesaid and if the parties of the second part show reasonable cause of delay or that such delay is due to any reason beyond their control the parties of the first part agree to extend the time for the completion of said plant.

The party of the second part agrees that the above mentioned lands and gas well which will be deeded to th Alberta Clay Products Company, Limited, upon the fulfilment of the terms contained in the agreement shall be used strictly for manufacturing purposes.

This agreement and everything here in contained shall respectively enure to the benefit of and be binding upon the parties hereto its and their assigns, heirs, administrators, executors and successors respectively.

IN WITNESS whereof the said corporation has affixed its corporate seal and the hands of its Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer and the said company of the second part has affixed its corporate seal and the hands of its President and Secretary-Treasurer thereof respectively.

(Sgd.) D. MILNE, Mayor.
(Sgd.) A. R. PERRY, Sec.Treas.
(Sgd.) JAMES CAMPBELL, President.
(Sgd.) WARREN OVERPACK, Secretary-Treasurer.

Signed, Sealed and Delivered in the presence of

INSPECTION OF MEDICINE HAT CADET CORPS

District Officer commanding military district No. 18, Lt.-Col Cruikshanks, inspected the Medicine Hat cadet corps on Thanksgiving Day, and was greatly pleased with the boys, theis smartness in dress and also the drill. He gave Capt. Reid the very highest praise for the way he has handled the boys and the interest he has taken in the military work at this station. He also spoke strongly in favor of the schools taking up the work thereby providing a thorough physical training collaterally with their general education. He also recommended that the city should help to provide a suitable uniform for the boys, as it would add greatly to the interest in attending the drills.

The drill hall will be open for the boys, A class of boys between the ages of 12 and 18 will be held every Thursday night during the winter months, for physical training.

HABITS

Could the young but realize how soon they will become mere bundles of habits, they would give more heed to their conduct while in the plastic state. We are spinning our own fates, good or evil, and never to be undone. Every smallest stroke of virtue or of vice leaves its never-so little scar. The drunken Rip Van Winkle, in Jefferson's play, excuses himself for every fresh dereliction by saying, "I won't count this time!" Well he may not count it, and a kind heaven may not count it; but it is being counted none the less. Down among his nerve cells and fibres the molecules are counting it registering and storing it up to be used against him when the next temptation comes. Nothing we ever do is, in strict literalness, wiped out.

Of course this has its good side as well as its bad one. As we become permanent drunkards by so many separate drinks, so we become saints in the moral, and authorities and experts in the practical and scientific spheres, by so many separate acts and hours of work. Let no youth have any anxiety about the upshot of his education, whatever the line of it may be. If he keep faithfully busy each hour of the working day, he may safely leave the final result to itself. He can with perfect certainty count on waking up some fine morning to find himself one of the competent ones of his generation in whatever pursuit he may have singled out. Silently, between all the details of his business, the power of judging in all that class of matter will have built itself up within him as a possession that will never pass away. Young people should know this truth in advance. The ignorance of it has probably engendered more discouragement and faint-heartedness in youths embarking in arduous careers than all other causes put together.

Parliamentary Reflections.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION

Ottawa, Oct. 30—Mr. Borden's announcement that a National Conservative convention is to be held has created widespread and favorable comment. The result is that the convention be held in Winnipeg. The Toronto News took this ground at once, saying:—

"The next step to take is to decide on the place for holding the convention. The News has no hesitation in urging that this should be Winnipeg.

"Already powerful, the west will increase in influence year by year. Canada owes it to the west to give it a sight of the men who are concerned with the framing of the policy of a great party. Eastern Canada will do well to send her leaders to study western conditions on the spot. The west should feel that the Conservative party is alive to its importance and to its interests.

"American parties have held their national conventions in Chicago. Winnipeg is the Chicago of Canada."

In a later issue the News returned to the subject saying:—

"The opinion of the News is that the convention should be held at Winnipeg, and if, in conjunction with the event, arrangements could be made for carrying the bulk of the Eastern delegates across the continent to Victoria, still greater advantages would accrue to the Conservative party and to the Dominion. The east, as yet, has an imperfect comprehension of the extent, the wealth and the promise of the western country, and aside from all party considerations it is of the first consequence that representative Canadians of all classes should know at first hand the characteristics and potentialities of the western provinces."

A dispatch from Winnipeg to an eastern paper voices the same opinion advancing the following reasons:

1. Winnipeg is the centre of Canada. It will arouse more enthusiasm if it is held in the west.

2. All constructive legislation for the next decade is bound to be more or less western. The development of the country makes this natural. The convention should be held on the ground.

3. The next fight is going to be a fight for the west. The party which can win the west which will have a policy which will appeal to the west, is the party of the future.

The Regina West says:—

"As has been pointed out by several influential Conservative journals there are many new questions consequent upon the recent remarkable development of the Dominion which press for consideration, and on which a declaration from the Conservative party as a body is awaited with interest. There has also been a shifting of the balance of power which must be recognized. The centre of the country is not now at Montreal. It is farther west, but an impression that this fact has been overlooked, has caused some irritation in quarters where the Conservative party must look for its chief support. The west is the hope of the party. That notwithstanding the enormous influence the government was enabled to exert in the newest province the opposition broke even, inspires us with strong hope. It must have been a disappointment to the Laurier following."

The feeling that the election act has broken down with regard to the prevention and punishment of corruption seems to be growing. Following are a number of press observations—In view of the failure of the election trials the St. John Standard says that notwithstanding the large sums of money expended in corruption at the last election nothing will be done about the bribery evil. This is true enough. Elections are held, electors are bought, and the law is too weak to reach the wrong-doers. The trouble is the fact that the punishment of election crime is left to private individuals. It is difficult to get the money with which to pursue the bribers, especially when it is felt that the result will be the exposure of a few underlings, and the escape of the bigger men who are really guilty. Mr. Borden long ago advocated the employment of public prosecutors, and this seems to be the only remedy in sight. —Toronto Mail and Empire. Unless the state creates an election commission, to hear election trials, and bears the coast of probing to the uttermost every protested case corruption will spread and the man or party which can command the biggest campaign fund will rule the country.—Berlin News Record. The election trial at Peterboro for the unseating of Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P., charged with having carried the seat by fraud at the last general election again calls attention to the necessity for a sweeping change in the machinery of our election trials. There used to be a great outcry against the old system of trying election protests by parliament. It was of course an outrageous farce. The parliamentary majority always seated their own supporters. Out of this scandalous condition arose the remission of election trials to the courts. It is a little better but not much. Sometimes the injured party catches up to justice, but always at heavy expense to himself and usually with serious delay. If he is not financially strong he is not able to take proceedings to unseat his opponent and this fact frequently has left men in parliament who have not been elected by the people.—Bruce Herald.

THE ORIENTAL LABOR SITUATION

Ottawa, Oct. 30—The feeling here is that the Oriental labor situation on the Grand Trunk Pacific enterprise is far from having been cleared up. The company expressly admits that it desires to import laborers from across the Pacific for the mountain section, and its influence is powerful with the government. Mr. Collingwood Schrieber's out-spoken advocacy of the principle is regarded in Ottawa as extremely significant, he being the officer expressly appointed by the government to represent it in all dealings with regard to the actual building of the road. It also is noted that in his speech to the Trades and Labor congress Mr. Mackenzie King, the minister of labor, did not clearly define the government's position. Against these circumstances is only to be set Sir Wilfrid's furious statement that no application for the use of the Oriental labor has been made to the government, and this is so carefully worded as to be of little value as any indication of the intention of the government.

The position of the Conservative party on this issue is clear enough. Years ago when the Grand Trunk Pacific bargain was being made it endeavored in vain to induce the government to insert a white labor clause in the contract. Mr. Borden has declared himself unequivocally in favor of keeping this a white man's country. The feeling of the Conservatives is strongly against the introduction of Asiatics. Gangs of coolies should not be admitted, even under indentures with assurance of deportation when their work is done. The labor market of the Dominion belongs to white workingmen and it is hard to see why the authorities at Ottawa should find it hard to decide on the matter or necessary to be cautious and mysterious in their utterances.

THE HALIFAX PLATFORM

Some of the government organs, says the St. John Standard, wish to know what has become of Mr. Borden's Halifax platform. They will find a part of it in the civil service act, a third plank, mitigated to taste, in the amendments to the railway commission act, a third plank, whittled down, in the rural mail delivery experiment. So far as the national ports idea has been adopted the Borden platform has been used. If the intercolonial had been taken out of politics, as is falsely pretended, another part of the platform would have gone to that. The policy of honest expenditure, honest elections, appointments by merit, reform of the Senate, the abolition of bonus for immigrants, public lands for the people instead of the grafter, Imperial preference and provincial rights, are still available but have not been appropriated.

THE TWO-FACED CAMPAIGN

The two-faced campaign of the Liberal party on the subject of the tariff has undergone a further development. That party long has been denouncing the Conservative party all through the west, and to some extent in Ontario, as advocates of high tariff; and has been representing the Liberals as low tariff, and almost as the free trade party.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Manufacturer's Association for years has been a Liberal institution and has got nearly everything it desired out of the Liberal government. To make the hypocrisy of the situation complete we now find Mr. Ames in the extreme east the Liberal party is denouncing the Conservatives on the ground that they are favorable to "tariff revision downward." In Cape Breton the object of the Liberal party is to consolidate the coal and iron industries for the Laurier government. Accordingly we find the Sydney, N.S., Record, denouncing the Conservative party for its low tariff tendencies. After saying that the position of the Conservatives is clearly defined as being in favor of low tariff, it goes on to say that "this position is taken in order to carry favor with western Canada." The commodities upon which western Canada desires a lower tariff, it says, are lumber, iron and coal. It continues:—"In so far as we are concerned iron and coal may well be regarded as our staple products. The only hope for further development that the Conservative party holds out to these industries is a threat to reduce the tariff if entrusted with power. Not an alluring prospect surely . . . We invite the serious consideration of all our readers to the declared policy of the Conservative party to revise the tariff."

Thus we have a threefold situation

1. In Nova Scotia the Conservatives are denounced by the Liberals on the ground that they are in favor of low tariff.

2. The Canadian Manufacturers' association, in which the Liberals are numerically the stronger, gets what it wants from the Laurier government.

3. In the west the Liberal party denounces the Conservative party on the ground that they are high protectionists.

The truth is there is no Free Trade party in Canada. The truth also is that the Liberal party has become a thoroughly protectionist party. And the truth still further is that the one party in Canada which is not tied up with the Canadian Manufacturers' association and from which a just and equitable revision of the tariff can be expected is the Conservative party.

THE WESTERN LAND QUESTION

The remarkable alliance of the governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta in demanding control of the Provincial school lands now administered by the federal authorities is an event of much political significance. Two of the three provinces are under Liberal and the other under Conservative administrations. Manitoba long has been demanding this reasonable reform, and Ottawa has remained obdurate; how Alberta and Saskatchewan come into the situation.

In 1905 the Conservative party advocated the turning over of the whole public domain and not the school lands alone, to the new provinces. In 1907 Mr. Borden's speech at Hamiota, Manitoba, distinctly declared this to be his policy. The Conservative party already occupies advanced ground on the subject, and it may be expected that the subject will be discussed and firm ground taken upon it at the coming National Convention of the party.

Eastern Conservative opinion on lowing extruct from a prominent the subject is indicated in the fol- Conservative paper:—"Eventually not only the school lands, but all the public lands of the west must be surrendered by the Federal government. We are treating the west exactly as Downing Street treated Canada seventy years ago. We have set up an inferior and a superior order of provinces. The older provinces control their natural resources, and from these derive the bulk of their revenues. No subsidy that Ottawa could grant would compensate Ontario and Quebec for federal ownership of their lands, timber and minerals. We believe that these resources can be more wisely and economically handled by the local governments than by a remote federal authority. And all experience proves the soundness of this condition.

"Who believes that the people of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are not competent to manage their own affairs as do the politicans of older Canada. They are bound, sooner or later, to resent the presence of the horde of federal officials, who in most cases are simply political agents of the governing party supported out of the public taxes. It is no secret that these officials set aside every consideration of political decency and exercise something like a rule of terrorism over the new settlers who have necessary dealings with the Ottawa government. They are hired caioriers, informers and task masters of a set of governing partizans. When they cannot persuade they coerce and bully. Knowing that they must go bag and baggage when there is a change of government, they hes tate at nothing to maintain the rule and authority of their Ottawa masters.

"We have no doubt that Mr. Borden and the Opposition will support the petition of the western provinces to secure control over their school lands It is particularly undesirable that the federal authorities should have even an indirect control over education or the revenues which support the Provincial school systems. Such a situation would not be tolerated in Ontario and Quebec, and it is inl conceivable that the western settlers should continue to be treated as a with the Ottawa government They subject population."

CHIN---CHIN

What is it? Where is it?

Chin is the new town on the main line of the C. P. R. in the center of 200,000 acres of the famous "Sunny Southern Alberta" Farm Lands. The only market within 13 to 18 miles for that hustling class of Canadian American Farmers all of whom are independent and many of whom are wealthy.

We are more largely responsible for the rapid development of this famous wheat country than any one else, having sold over 300,000 acres, and we are now establishing this new town of Chin—a market for our customers. They need it. They ask for it and will help to build it.

No town was ever platted with such a large and prosperous agricultural backing.

Business and Residence lots in Chin are guaranteed by us to increase 50% in value within four months and we predict 200% in two years.

Warner was started by us four years ago when the country around was not half as thoroughly developed and its real estate values have increased three or four times.

Chin real estate is a good, sound, profitable investment and its business openings and possibilities are many and large. Residence lots range from $25 to $200; Business lots from $100 to $500.

Chin is not to be simply a good business town. We have planned to make it a comfortable place in which to live by donating sites for a School, Church, Parsonage, City Market and we are going to put in a city well. There are openings for many lines of business.

Three Lots Free

To stimulate immediate sales we are going to give away three lots. Every purchaser of a lot regardless of price, will stand a chance of getting a present of a lot, by guessing the nearest number of lots sold up to the time the fifty per cent increase takes place.

The first purchaser to guess the exact number, or nearest to the exact number of lots sold will receive a $500.00 lot, the second nearest in number will receive the $300.00 and the third one the $100.00 lot.

A Fifty Per Cent Increase Assured

Four months from the date of the first payment registered, the prices of lots throughout the town of Chin will be advanced one half regardless of any condition that may exist at that time. This fact assures every purchaser a profit of at least fifty per cent as he can at once re-list his lots for sale by our company.

There is no chance to lose and absolutely 50 per cent to gain and possibly considerably more.

Remember the positive 50% increase in four months and write at once for full descriptive literature and plat.

A. C. Hawthorne

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hobkirk of St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., are spending a few weeks in the city as the guests of their son, Mr. A. Hobkirk. Mr. A. J. Hobkirk's first visit to the west was twenty three years ago when the construction of the C. P. R line to the coast was still incomplete. In the old days he prophesied that the northwest would one day become the home of millions, and was considered a dreamer, but today he sees his prophecy rapidly nearing fulfillment. He was one of the first to realize the enormous possibilities of the Bourbon king's "arpents of snow," and has lived to witness the wonderful opening up of the west.

A 50 horse power steam Flory hoist for the Red Cliff Brick Co. is now in the C. P. R. yards. This was supplied by a firm in the state of Maine and shipped from their works thirteen days ago. It was ordered through Jas. Rae's hardware establishment.

Mr Sewell is well known at Medicine Hat where he was stationed some time ago. R. R. Smart has been transferred to Moose Jaw.

After a long delay, occasioned by the non-arrival of casing and other material for the new city gas well, work commenced over a week ago on the new gas well and has since been pushed vigorously ahead.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by the Knox Young People's Club, at the home of Mrs. Cousley, on Wednesday evening last a large number being present, who listened with much interest and pleasure to a presentation of the life and works of the poet Wordsworth, ably given by Miss Rorke. Owing to the rapid increase in attendance at these gatherings, it has been considered advisable to hold the next meeting in Knox church. At this meeting C. J. Wilson will speak on the subject 'Consecration and what it means.' All young people are cordially invited to attend. Don't forget the date, Wednesday, Nov. 3rd, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bridgeman returned from their Seattle trip on Saturday last. They were absent about 5 weeks, three of which were spent in Seattle and the remainder in Vancouver and Calgary. The going trip was made by way of the Crow's Nest and Arrowhead Lakes to Revelstoke. Thence by rail to Seattle. Returning they came by boat to Vancouver, thence home by the main line. They report a very pleasant outing and a good fair at Seattle. Mr. Bridgeman says the fair management will have a surplus after paying all expenses.

the carrying out of a connection between the down pipes of the church building and the sewer system. Referred to the public works committee to confer with the trustees.

Ald. Spencer gave notice of introduction of a bylaw to appoint returning officers for the impending municipal elections.

A discussion took place on the bad state of the streets in certain parts of the city. Ald. Howson suggested that debentures should be issued for a sufficient sum to carry out the necessary repairs.

Ald. Huckvale thought that the time had arrived when steps should be taken to secure a park for athletic purposes in place of the property to be turned over to the sewer pipe people. The time would come when the city would feel the need of these air spaces. Action should be taken now. Ald. Huckvale recommended that the city advertise for tenders for land suitable for park purposes. The suggestion was adopted and December 1st fixed as the date by which tenders must be in. Ald. Spencer believed that the time to buy was the present. There was no fear of property depreciating in value and if action were delayed we might be compelled to pay the fabulous prices that other cities had done.

wanted to serve in the navy. If we give a money grant we know exactly what our obligations will be, but if we built a navy we might expend ten or twenty millions and no one could say where it would end. There is plenty to do with the money. Millions could be used in putting the water which flows in our western streams, wasted, on the land which needs it. He is persuaded that we have not enough water for intensive farming.

At the conclusion of this able address a vote of confidence in the stand taken by our member was moved by J. H. Collier, seconded by W. G. Niblock and unanimously carried. Also a vote of confidence in R. L. Borden as leader of the Conservative party.

The question of holding a party convention was also discussed and it was moved by Mr. Spencer, seconded by J. H. Collier and carried, that in the opinion of this association a convention of the party should be held to discuss the problems of the party. The question of time and place was left for the party leaders to decide. And thus ended a gathering conspicuous for its attendance, enthusiasm, and unity of purpose.

Old Days in the Canadian Northwest

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hobkirk who have been for some time in the city as the guests of their son Mr. A. N. Hobkirk, the C. P. R. trainmaster here, left last night for the east. They will spend two or three days in Winnipeg, afterwards returning to their home at Lisbon, St. Lawrence Co., New York State.

Mr. Hobkirk has made two previous vis-ta to western Canada, first in 1886 and again in 1906 and has been greatly struck by the progress which has been made especially in the last decade. In conversation with the Times yesterday he spoke in a most interesting manner of the changes which have been brought about.

Mr. Hobkirk had from the first the greatest faith in the future of the northwest, and in the days when the man in the street regarded the west as a vast wilderness, he prophesied for it a great agricultural future, and forecasted the day when our fertile plains would be the homes of millions of prosperous settlers. Each visit has gone to confirm his former impression and today he sees his prophesy in course of fulfillment, and even in a large measure fulfilled. And it is not without some regret that he thinks of the opportunities which he lost in his younger days, to settle here, and "grow up with the country," this in spite of the good measure of success with which he has met in his eastern home county.

In reminiscent mood Mr. Hobkirk spoke of the early days of the first western tour. It was in 1886 that young Wm. Whyte first came to Winnipeg, beginning the western railroading career which has led to h s present eminence in the world of empire builders. In that year the C. P. R. main line was completed as far as Fort Moody, some 12 miles from the site of the present city of Vancouver. The road from Fort Moody to Vancouver was just being graded at that time. On the site of the great ocean port of today were to be seen a custom house and a few rough frame dwellings. The place was not large enough even to merit the title of village. Victoria was the chief city, which found that a town of considerable size, Victoria being in fact one of the oldest cities on the Pacific Coast.

Medicine Hat in 1886 was a small hamlet, consisting of a few buildings close in to where the C. P. R. station now stands.

Nine years ago the town was a fair small and towards evening, just as a single house had been built. It was election day at the time of Mr. Hobkirk's visit to Regina which had even then a large mixed population, and the thing which impressed him most was the orderliness of the crowds. He did not see one of the boys the worse for liquor.

On the present trip it appeared most strange to Mr. Hobkirk that such a fine looking country as is to be found between here and Calgary is not already under cultivation. He is sure that it is well adapted for agriculture, and a sample of fall wheat grown at a point between the two cities seemed to him as fine a specimen as could be desired. As Medicine Hat becomes a bright farming country, Mr. Hobkirk is of the opinion that a great development must inevitably follow in the city itself which he believes must soon double in population. If the farmers of the district would devote attention to the cultivation of groves of trees not only would the shelter belts prove of great economic advantage, but they would add much to the homelike appearance of the farms.

"I have always had a good word to say for the northwest," said Mr. Hobkirk in conclusion, "and if I were still a young man I would come across from the States to make a permanent home here even yet. Boys whom I remember leaving for North Dakota twenty and twenty five years ago with but a few hundred dollars, are today worth in many cases from $75,000 to $100,000." For the young man of energy and ambition the same bright future was in store in the northwest today.

Winnipeg Exposition

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 22, 1909—The opening of the Dominion parliamentment at Ottawa will bring exposition affairs to a point of decision. The executive committee has been engaged, for some weeks, in getting its information together for presenting to the Dominion government, and it is now ready to lay the case for the exposition before Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues of the government. To this end a delegation was appointed last week to go to Ottawa and make a complete presentation of the exposition facts and prospects to the government and to obtain a definite answer as to what is the attitude of Sir Wilfrid and his cabinet toward the project which has taken so firm a hold upon the public of Canada.

Results of work done by the exposition committee and its delegates throughout the Dominion show plainly that the proposal to hold a great Canadian exposition is approved by the people, and that thoughtful men everywhere realize the practical value of the exposition as a means of placing Canada in her rightful place among the nations of the world, and the splendid effect such an exposition will have in crystalizing and intensifying the national spirit of the country. The exposition clearly has made a strong appeal to practical and sentimental elements of character among the people of Canada and generous treatment of the project by the Dominion government will receive commendation irrespective of partisan lines.

Delegates who have recently returned from the east made their reports to the executive committee of the exposition last week and set forth the splendid reception they met in the eastern provinces. Particularly sound and sane was the view taken of the exposition by leading men of the maritime provinces. These men with little or no trade interests in the west, are yet moved by their patriotic desire to do that which will make for the greatness of Canada as a nation, to take the heartiest interest in the exposition and to stamp the project with their sincere approval. Living by the great waterway of nations, and with a strong nation at their very doors, the kith of the maritime provinces strongly appreciate the value and need of national individuality for Canada, a need which the west is apt to overlook in the rush of great enterprises and among the multitude of diverse people who are pouring into the western provinces. strongly intent upon gathering as much as possible of that great wealth of the country with small time or inclination.

Reports of the gentlemen who acted upon the Outside and Canadian committees as delegates from the exposition committee show that these two important provinces are alive for the exposition. Sir James P. Whitney and his cabinet sent a letter of endorsation to the exposition by its delegation and personally from land their hearty co-operation. Premier Gouin of Quebec although unable to assemble his cabinet for the purpose of taking official evidence of the exposition project, gave the delegates who waited upon him the assurance that he will call such a meeting at the earliest possible date and that he personally is favorably disposed toward the exposition. This assurance was also given by others who are in close touch with the Quebec government, and by a number of leading business men of Montreal as well.

Thus equipped with the hearty endorsation of practically the whole Dominion, the executive committee of the exposition feels that its position is particularly strong and the delegation that goes to Ottawa will go prepared to lay the exposition case before the government in the last detail. The corporation charter for the company that is to raise half a million dollars in Winnipeg besides the half million that will be given by the civic government has been granted and this company is now legally equipped to sell stock. No trouble is anticipated in the sale of the full amount of stock named in the charter and the company's capital stock probably will have to be increased. In its present status, the exposition is in the hands of the Dominion government or will be when the delegates from the executive committee shall have presented their case in full.

Improvement of Alberta's Roads

J. A. Trimble Elected Vice President of Roads Convention

Strathcona, Nov. 19th—With the formation last night in the opera house of an organization known as the Alberta Local Improvement association there lived one of the most important conventions held in the province this year. In the two days conference which closed last night there were fully seventy-five delegates present from various Local Improvement districts throughout the province and the resolutions passed show with what knowledge and ability the road-makers can place their requirements before the government. In the entire session the speakers dealt remarkably well with the subject of road making and the business accomplished yesterday was comprehensive and to the point.

The following officers were elected:
President—W. Mason, Don Accord.
Vice-President—J. A. Trimble, of Medicine Hat.
Secretary—James McNichol, Blackfalls.

The executive committee was formed of the following gentlemen: Walter Sharpe, Sedgewick; W. Lang of Strathcona; H. Greenfields, Edison; Jos. Rye, Daagh and F. L. Moore-house, Calgary. The hearty invitation of Mr. Trimble for the next annual convention to take place at Medicine Hat, was turned down by the majority, who favored Red Deer as the point more easily reached from all parts of the province. The executive council will draft a set of governing rules and will decide upon a date for the next meeting. The entrance fee to the association was placed at five dollars, and it was resolved to urge all local improvement districts in the province to join before the next convention.

ADDRESSES YESTERDAY MORNING

After the committee had dealt with the many resolutions yesterday morning and reported to the convention the proposition of R. T. Telford, M. P. P., for Ledue, in the form of a resolution was taken up and supported by the member and Mr. A. L. Marks. The resolution in effect requested the convention to approve of the original and now well-known proposition which Mr. Telford offers as a solution of the problem of rural improvements. He would have the federal house to set aside two sections of land in every township to be sold for road purposes in the manner in which the school lands now assist in financing the cause of education in the province. In placing the proposal before the convention, Mr. Telford made decided impression with the apparent knowledge he has of the broad question of road building and he quoted interesting figures relative to the cost of building highways for travel and what amount might be expected to be derived from the sale of these lands which he suggested being placed at the disposal of the province.

PREMIER DOUBTFUL

Premier Rutherford followed Mr. Telford and said that he considered the convention such a good thing that he regretted more delegates were not in attendance as there must be many places not represented. He could see many difficulties in the way of the suggestion of Mr. Telford's but for it could be brought into effect. For one thing it would be impossible to allot land in portions of the land were roads are needed. With the large immigration this year practically all the homestead lands south of the North Saskatchewan will be taken and the sections chosen as proposed would have to be set aside in the north and undeveloped districts. Again the opposition from the eastern politicians of both parties would likely hold the matter off for perhaps an indefinite time. While not really opposed to the suggestion, the Premier thought it would be difficult to make it work out in practice. The system of reserving school lands in this way has proven very successful and the liberal grants to the districts from this on will be possible through the revenue derived from the sale of these lands this last summer. He thought the older districts would have to prepare for their own salvation very soon in the matter of road construction as the new settlements demand far more attention from the government. At present there is half a million dollars spent by the department on provincial roads each year and this amount will not be decreased. Muddy roads cannot be avoided at present, but the premier thought the leading districts should now begin making roads on a permanent basis. The mistakes of the older provinces should be avoided in the west. While the farmers in many districts have accomplished good results in road making it was a well-known fact that many councillors have made poor use of their opportunities. He was pleased to say that next year the matter of taxing the C. P. R. lands will be dealt with by the privy council and then will be known definitely when the company must begin paying taxes on their holdings.

Mr. A. L. Marks, Lf L. B., of Ledue spoke in favor of Mr. Telford's proposition.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The session of the convention yesterday afternoon was devoted to discussion of and passing upon resolutions, the business being punctuated with addresses from the Hon. W. H. Cushing, minister of public works and Messrs. J. R. Boyle and J. B. Holden, members for the provincial parliament for Sturgeon and Vermilion, respectively.

The minister expressed his pleasure at the representatives of the local improvement districts coming together to discuss the rural municipal law of the province, and to suggest from their experience, amendments that should be made. He believed Alberta had as democratic a government as there is in any place, and they were anxious to know what the people want in the matter of legislation. While the government have in view placing before the legislature at its next session a new municipal bill it has not yet been drafted and he could not say what would be the character of it. He would, however, give his own views of some changes he thought should be made in the present law. He favored extension of the system at present in vogue rather than a change to the county system of the eastern provinces. The present system gives the minimum of taxation for the maximum value in road improvements. He was in favor of larger districts with a comparatively small council and thought the chairman of the council should be elected by the whole district. He did not like the ward system. He thinks taxes should be allowed. A good law might give poor results without good men to administer it. Councillors must be men with broad outlook.

Discussion of the resolutions was animated and much variety of opinion was expressed on several of them. The whole drift of sentiment was in favor of large powers for local improvement districts. Following are the resolutions finally adopted by the convention:

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

WHEREAS this convention is of the opinion that in order to secure the rapid and uniform development of the west through the construction of trade highways, it is essential that the several interests to be benefitted by such development should contribute something thereto, and,

WHEREAS the following are considered to be the benefitted parties, that is to say, 1st, the Dominion, 2nd, the Province, and 3rd, the proposed municipalities, and,

WHEREAS, the province and the municipalities have in the past, both contributed toward this end,

THEREFORE be it resolved that this convention is of the opinion that the Dominion government, in order to do its part in securing the development of the west, should set aside two sections of land in each township (say 9 and 27, where available) to be sold, and the proceeds of such sales to be devoted to the building of roads and bridges within the province, such funds to be under provincial supervision. Carried.

That this convention of delegates of Local Improvement Districts do hereby recommend that the minimum rate of taxation be placed at five cents per acre, and the maximum rate at ten cents per acre. Carried.

Resolved that no provincial monies be granted to any Local Improvement District for the building of highways unless their tax levy be not less than 5 cents per acre. Carried.

Be it resolved that the Local Improvement Act be amended so that councillors be allowed more time in which to perform the required duties in laying out and overseeing the necessary work on roads. Carried.

Resolved that the legislature be requested to pass legislation for the collecting more expeditiously arrears of taxes. Carried.

Resolved that the legislature be petitioned to grant Local Improvement Districts power to deal with devintions in the roads.

Resolved that this convention form a permanent organization to meet annually to deal with matters pertaining to Local Improvement Districts or rural municipalities as the case may be, and provision to be made by the government for the expenses of the same. Carried.

Resolved that we, the Local Improvement District Councillors, in convention assembled at Strathcona, would ask that the department amend the Local Improvement Act so as to permit all Local Improvement Councillors to work out their own personal land tax under a foreman. Carried.

Resolved that this convention of Local Improvement Districts recommend that arrangements be made whereby a surtax of not less than two cents per acre can be charged on all lands held by non-residents of speculators, such surtax to be used for permanent road improvements. Carried.

That in the opinion of this convention the Local Improvement Districts be retained with the following increased powers, viz.:

Legislative authority to borrow money on debentures to a limited extent for permanent improvements on same principle as in school districts.

To deal with prairie fires and regulations on fire-guards.

To control noxious weeds act, pound ordinance, entire animals ordinance, and all matter of a local nature.

Resolved that any monies granted by the provincial government to a Local Improvement District for the purpose of building bridges, be paid to the councillors of the local improvement district receiving said grant. Carried.

Resolved that the area of the local improvement districts should remain as at present with the same representation.

Resolved that attention of local legislature be called to Form H, wherein it reads: "All persons paying taxes before July 1st, SHALL be entitled to a reduction of ten per cent." Whereas in Sub-section 2 Sec. 58, it states they MAY be allowed a reduction of ten per cent., and that this convention request the government to change the word "shall" in Form H, to "may." carried.

That provincial legislation be requested to change Sec. 53 of L. I. Ordinance to read in lines 8 and 11, one dollar instead of 50c. and 25c., respectively.

PRESENTATION TO MR. BIETTE

An interesting presentation took place on Friday evening in the parlors of Brougha & O'Hara, when Mr. M. T. Biette was the recipient of a nicely worded address and a gold locket the gift of his old associates on the C. P. R. baseball team. Mr. Biette briefly expressed his thanks and his sense of appreciation of the good wishes extended to him. Afterwards the manager, Mr. O'Hara, made a short speech wishing Mr. and Mrs. Biette every success and prosperity in their new home in Calgary. Major A. R. B. Richmond.

Death of Mr. R. E. Walton

Word was received by Mr. E. J. R. Walton of the death in the hospital at Vancouver of his son Mr. R. E. Walton. The deceased had been in indifferent health for some time and three or four months ago he removed to Vancouver to recuperate. Apparently the change proved beneficial and less than a month ago he was joined at the coast by Mrs. Walton and his two children. The sad news received this morning was quite unexpected.

The deceased was born in Peterboro, Ont., on the 26th of November 1878. He came west at an early age with his parents and had been for many years resident in Medicine Hat, where he was engaged in the building and contracting business and later for some 18 months in the hardware business. Retiring on account of ill health he sold out to Mr. J. J. Hewitt in the spring of the present year. Mr. Walton was for years associated with St. John's Presbyterian church in this city. He is survived by a widow (formerly Miss McCallum) and two young children, Margaret, aged 2½ years and Elizabeth aged 5 months.

WARNING

The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal in this week's issue are warning their present subscribers to renew earlier than usual this season, as there is an enormous demand from new subscribers and there is apt to be a congestion at the close of the year. The new premium picture, "The Soul's Awakening," is causing a perfect furore of enthusiasm in all parts of the Dominion. It is certainly a beautiful picture and is appreciated more and more the oftener one sees it. It is 19 x 24 inches, ready for framing. A copy is sent to every subscriber for 1910, and along with such a paper as The Family Herald and Weekly Star at one dollar a year certainly is the best bargain of the year. Clergymen of all denominations are urging parents to become possessors of a copy of this interesting picture.

Young Men's Club

Successful Social Evening

One of the best concert programs that has ever been given in the city was rendered on Friday evening by the local ladies and gentlemen who provided the entertainment features of the Y. M. C. ıocial. The evening was a stormy one, but in spite of the inclement weather the gymnasium was well filled, had weather conditions been more propitious it would doubtless have been impossible to accommodate the large crowd which have sought admission.

In the absence of the president of the club, Mr. M. A. Brown, the chair was occupied by Dr. C. Smythe who made a pleasing master of ceremonies. In his opening remarks Dr. Smyth referred to the fourfold object of the club—development along spiritual, moral, mental and physical lines — an object, he said, which should commend itself to all right-thinking people. One department which made a special appeal to the speaker, was that of the boys' and girls' classes. "We old fellows," he said, "are pretty much what we are and will be." It was from those who came under the influence of the club at the most impressionable period of life that the workers might expect the best results.

The following enjoyable concert programme was then rendered. Al. most every number brought the demand for an encore, but recalls were not allowed by the chairman.

Orchestral Selection — "Satellite,": Mrs. Smith, Miss Holmes, Messrs. C. Sansom, Leonard, Morris, Wood, and Hodges.

Male Quartette—"Poor Old Joe," Messrs. Craig, Forster, Simmonds and Ingle.

Pianoforte solo — Mr. H. S. Craig

Humorous Reading — "Aunt Maria in New York," Miss MacBean.

Pianoforte Duet — Mrs. Farrell and Miss Walton.

Pianoforte Solo — Miss Ella Rae.

Orchestra Selection—Shadow Land.

The orchestra was under the able direction of Dr. Smith.

A brief address was given by the Rev. A. C. Farrell, who spoke of the work of the Y. M. C., during the coming seasonf The club library he said, was free to any man or woman who was a subscriber, and the reading room was open to all. The physical department of the club was equal to any and better than many towns of similar size in the west possessed. In the physical instructors who had been secured the club was extremely fortunate. Mr. Ingle had more than fulfilled the expectations of him, and he had had wide experience in Y. M. C. A. work, before coming to this city. Mr. Woosey's unusual capability as an instructor and the splendid work of Dr. Smith were well known to all who had undergone physical training with them.

The highest mission which any generation could fulfil was the bequeathing of something good, something which would make for the highest benefit of the generation to follow. It was gratifying to see present so appreciative an audience, for no greater educational factor existed in the world today than that of music. He extended a hearty welcome to all the guests to avail themselves of the privileges of the institution.

A vote of thanks to the orchestra, to the other ladies and gentlemen who had contributed to the success of the programme, and to the chairman for his services, was moved by A. G. Trotman seconded by Mr. De Pencier and carried by a hearty clap of the hands.

The concert features of the program having been brought to a conclusion, the chairs in the hall were rearranged and the visitors served with a light repast by the young men and ladies of the club. After the dishes were cleared away promenades were the order of the evening.

A Scientific Wonder

The Secret of a Famous Healing Balm

The re-discovery of a secret that has lain hidden in the dust of 20 centuries is an event full of fascinating interest, and the story of Zam-Buk, the world famed first-aid and skin-cure will always enlist attention Za -Buk is the virtual descendant of those wonderful and mysterious herbal balms by the use of which the manly athletes of Ancient Greece and the stalwart gladiators of Rome ensured the healthiness and ready-healing of their skin.

Many are the attempts that were made to produce a perfect balm for the skin, but only in Zam-buk has the ideal been realized. Since its discovery Zam-Buk has been welcomed in mansion and cottage, and the people of two hemispheres realized that they have been placed in possession of an absolutely unique cure for skin complaints.

The reason for this triumph of science are simple and few. Taving a lesson from the Ancients, the proprietors of Zam-Buk first of all wisely decided that the ideal balm must be purely herbal and contain not the slightest trace of rancid animal fats or poisonous minerals. Thus Zam-Buk is made solely from rich and pure essences obtained from certain rare medicinal herbs. These juices and extracts are prepared and refined by ingenious scientific processes and then so skilfully blended that a unique, effective, and yet perfectly natural preparation for dispelling skin-disease is secured.

Zam-Buk has an affinity for the human skin such as no ordinary ointment or linament can possibly possess. Besides soothing pain and allaying irritation, it possesses unique antiseptic and germicidal qualities which virtually chase disease germs out of their hiding places in the skin tissues; at the same time it purifies the pores and invigorates the natural functions of the skin in a way that no other preparation can.

Zam-Buk solves in a perfect manner the problem of always having handy at home or at one's work an ever-ready and reliable first-aid for cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, lacerations, scratches, etc. Zam-Buk is without equal for eczema, ulcers, bad leg, piles, ringworm, scalp sores, festering sores, sprains, stiffness, poisoned wounds of all kinds, face sores, chafing, chapped hands, cold sores, frost bites, sore feet, diseased ankles, and all itching, irritation, and inflamation.

Zam-Buk is a daily need in every household and is sold by all druggists and stores at fifty cents a box. Refuse harmful and dangerous substitutes sometimes "pushed" as being "just as good."

Development in North-west Country

Mr. C. E. Neff was in from the ranch last week purchasing lumber and stock for his general store. During his stay here he was interviewed by a Times' representeative, who enquired as to the progress of the new communities which are springing up along the Goose Lake survey of the C. N. R.

The homestead land, it appears, has been taken up right along the new survey, six miles on either side of the line. Considerable land is still open for entry, however, just south of Sounding Creek. The grading of the road has been completed to ranges 1 and 2, township 28 in Alberta, this point being some 42 miles east of Mr. Neff's own place. He anticipates that during the summer of next year the steel will be laid past his homestead. Steel is now laid to the prosperous new town near the provincial boundary which sprang up almost literally in one night, and which will be a divisional center on the new line. It is 85 miles east of Mr. Neff's quarter which is in township 19-2-7 west of the 5th.

The fire which crossed the country north of the Red Deer river about a month ago has caused considerable inconvenience to the settlers along the line. Mr. Neff's neighbors in ranges 7 and 8 turned out and fought the fire successfullyl saving a strip of country 15 miles wide. The large area which was burnt over is over fifty miles wide and presents a very desolate appearance. Great difficulty will be experienced by the settlers during the coming spring.

THE INLAY SYSTEM OF DENTISTRY

is the latest and best in the Dental art. I have proved it before Conventions, Associations and have won honors on more than one occasion.

It eliminates the dread of the dental chair.

Its results are absolutely exact and complete.

It calls for the highest class of Mechanical Skill.

It has never had an opponent in theory or practice.

I came into Medicine Hat to do something in better, higher class dentistry, believing that the people would appreciate it. One brother, and a professional ethical (?) one at that, laughed at me me and said the people of this city were too conservative to have the higher class of dentistry done.

In three weeks time I have put in the mouths of Medicine Hat people over $500.00 worth of Inlay Dentistry.

I have demonstrated to committees of your people the truth of my claims.

I have satisfied every person who has called on me.

I will go before any committee my professional brothers (the ethical one's) care to name, and if I cannot prove that my work, methods and results are not what I claim for them, I will donate $100 to your General Hospital.

New Settlement in Township 13 Range 9

Southern Alberta in general has been most fortunate in the character of the settlers who have located on her fertile lands. Our soil and climate are very similar to those of the most prosperous wheat states across the international boundry line, and this circumstance has effectively appealed to the farmer of capital and experience in search of a new home. Many parts of the West will be developed by immigrants, who, however thrifty and industrious they may be, as yet lack the experience essential to successful farming. Our own district is becoming the home of farmers who have already made good elsewhere.

The settlers who have taken up land in Southern Alberta during the present year are almost without exception, owners of considerable capital both in cash and implements and stock. They are men of the calibre essential to the development of the highest type of citizenship. They are prepared to adapt themselves to Canadian institutions, and they appreciate the absence of trust rule, and the high standard of law observance maintained in Canada.

A settlement which will mean much to this district, and much to this city, is now being formed on a township to the north west of Medicine Hat. The arrangements were carried out in the first place by Mr. F. M. Gunther of this city, and now Mr. C. H. Philput of New York State, who organized the settlers' party, is arranging for the preliminary work of purchasing lumber to enable the newcomers to build during the present fall.

In the summer the heads of the families who will take up residence in township 13 range 9, filed on the homesteads, and returned to the States to carry through the work of the harvest season. The whole township was taken up and in all there will be some thirty-six or thirty-seven families, representing well over a hundred souls, who will settle in our midst. They will put up their houses and barns this fall, and be ready to get to work on the land as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring. Among the members of the party are: John Pelton and family, M. H. Pelton and family, Ray Pelton and mother, Mrs. Kate Roberts, Mr. Carver and family, Mr. Ditmore and family, E. J. Capwell and family, Bert Capwell and family, Charles Hobus and family, Henry Rosier, E. Young and family, B. B. Burk and family, J. G. Burk and family, W. W. Burk and family, H. S. Glover and family, Mike Foth and family, E. W. Philput and family, J. R. Collinson and family, Mr. Thomas, J. Daniel and family.

It will be noted that there are one or two bachelors in the party. This regretable state of affairs is, it is understood, shortly to be remedied.

A glance at the various occupations of the settlers who will form this new community, will, perhaps, be found interesting. There are among their number: merchants, a telephone manager, one or two lumber dealers, four grain buyers and nine stock buyers, one wholesale grocer, while the balance are farmers. All, however, are farmers sons, and the majority hail originally from New York State, and have been settled for some time in North Dakota.

Among the members of the party who have already arrived are Messrs Ray and M. H. Pelton, Henry Rosier Chas. Hobous, Mike Foth, John Daniel and all the Burks and Glovers and their families. Mr Philputs also has been here for some time. His first visit was in August, but two weeks ago he came out to purchase necessaries for the community — horses, provisions, potatoes and lumber in carlots. A few days ago he bought on the local market over a hundred bushels of potatoes and several good teams in behalf of his friends who are now packing their goods for shipment across the line. The carpenters among them will soon be engaged on the buildings, which will be of a substantial type. Mr. Philput and others of the new settlers plan to erect brick dwellings in the spring. It is hoped that a school and church will soon be secured and papers have been sent to Ottawa urging the postal authorities to establish a post office at Suffield.

In conversation with The Times Mr Philputs expressed himself as being delighted with the prospects of our district. He regarded this as one of the most desirable localities for settlers who appreciate the conveniences and amenities of life. When first he came to Medicine Hat he was greatly surprised to note the conditions in the stores, which are of as fine a type as he has seen anywhere in a town of our size. The way in which the people do business here strongly appealed to him, and he remarked that the merchants of the city have more thorough methods and are quicker in attending to the needs of their customers, than are the business people in most Dakota cities. As a wholesaler himself, Mr. Philput was struck by the large stock of high quality goods carried by the Medicine Hat merchants. Of Mr. Ginther, Mr. Philput spoke with enthusiasm. "We were all located by him, he said, and all join in the highest praises of his fair and honest dealings with us."

Incidentally Mr. Philput spoke appreciatively of The Times, which he regards as the best weekly paper in Alberta. Frequently, he said, he sent copies to his friends down east whom he wished to keep in touch with Medicine Hat affairs, and all the newcomers had determined to make The Times their family paper. They were interested he said, not only in the city and district news columns, but also in the advertisements, which were a splendid index to the prosperity of the district and gave a good idea of the class of goods and reasonable prices to be obtained here.

Real Agricultural Colleges

The Calgary Albertan has the following editorial on the above subject. The Albertan makes some good points in the article, the most of which we endorse. We beg to take issue with it however on the question of "tacking on an agricultural department to the provincial university, to make the university swell out and look big and massive." An agricultural college should be part of the provincial university because agricultural education does not differ from any other kind of education in aim or method. If the provincial university cannot handle agricultural education to the best advantage, it is not a true university:

"The rapid advance that the consumption of food in the United States is making upon its production is a source of more than ordinary alarm in that country. That sage old empire builder J. C. Hill, never speaks publicly that he does not refer to it. Like a prophet of old he points to the danger ahead. His words are of wisdom and are beginning to command the utmost attention.

And other great men in the United Staces are viewing with some concern. W. C. Brown, superintendent of the New York Central railway, has drawn attention to the same problem. Here is something which he has said:

"'I would make our agricultural colleges in fact what they are in name, to the end that graduates of these colleges should be first class farmers, thoroughly equipped and vitally interested.

"'I would double our rural population by more than doubling the product per acre of the nation's farm.'

"He places his hope of the future in the agricultural college, which is now looked upon as the saviour of the country. The agricultural college has become a factor in the United States, and the numbers of these excellent institutions are gradually increasing. In the United States there are now 60 agricultural high schools There are 346 public schools teaching agriculture, 119 state or normal schools, 16 agricultural colleges training young men and women to teach agriculture. In addition there are institutions giving secondary education in agriculture.

"The agricultural college has a mission of its own. It has a special work to perform and in a new country like Alberta, that work is an enormous one, indeed. And to do that work the agriculturalist must not be impeded or handicapped. He must have the center of the stage. This idea of tacking on an agricultural department to the provincial university to make the university swell out and look big and massive is a childish one. The agricultural college must do the work itself, and it must not be brought under subjection or placed in close affiliation with any other institution. It must be independent and free to do its best work."

250 GOOD STORIES

The Youth's Companion abounds in stirring stories of adventure and heroism. One may describe an escape from accidental peril, another a strange encounter with wild creatures —man or beast.

Many of these stories are true as to facts, and only disguised as to names and places. A score or more of such stories will be published during 1910 in addition to nearly 200 others—250 good stories in all, and no two alike. And this is not counting the serial stories, which it is believed will be considered by old Companion readers as the best The Companion has ever published.

Every new Canadian subscriber will find it of special advantage to send at once the $2.00 for the new 1910 Volume. Not only does he get the beautiful "Venetian" Calendar for 1910, lithographed in thirteen colors and gold, but all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1909 from the time the subscription is received.

The Polmatier Sisters will appear at the Opera House Friday, Dec. 3rd under the auspices of the hospital board. This is no doubt the most famous lady organization which ever visited the northwest. There are five ladies in the company (positively all sisters) and each an artist in her particular line. It seems nothing short of a miracle that each of these sisters should be so well adapted for the various parts they take in the program of the evening. The appearance of the handsome young ladies is in itself a refreshing treat and the beautiful costumes, scenic and electric equipment helps to beautify a program that is well nigh perfect. Everything new and up-to-date is the verdict of all who have had the pleasure of hearing these artists this season. The programs are of such a wide range, and so full of up-to-date novelties, humor and wit that they never fail to hold the audience spellbound the entire evening. Those missing this grand treat will be made to regret by those who attend for it will be the event of the season. Get your tickets early, enjoy a good evening and help a most worthy cause.

In Great Britain the adoption of the new budget will depend on the result of a general election which will be held shortly. The house of lords has decided that it would not be justified in consenting to the bill until it has been submitted to the people.

Municipal Situation

As the date for the municipal elections draws nearer, greater uncertainty seems to prevail as to who the candidates will be. Alderman Huckvale in Ward one and Alderman Morrow in Ward four both have declared their intention of retiring from the council. No names have as yet been mentioned as candidates in these wards. In Ward three, S. T. Fawcett, as previously stated, will likely be a candidate. We have not heard of any opposition. In Ward 2 there are several aspirants for municipal honors none of whom have as yet declared themselves. If the present representative will consent to stand he should be elected. None who have been suggested will render the city as efficient service as the present member. He has given much valuable time to the consideration of civic problems and being as yet a young man his usefulness ought to grow with service. Any opposition to his election by acclamation should be discouraged.

In the retirement of Alderman Morrow and Huckvale, the city loses two valuable public servants. The latter as chairman of the water committee has placed the water-work system on a substantial basis. It was a much needed reform and one which excited little enthusiasm in some quarters, but the wisdom of the move is now being generally recognized. Alderman Morrow has been chairman of the gas committee and under his direction steps have been taken to provide an adequate supply of gas for the coming season as well as provision made for our growing needs. The Times is of the opinion that he and the other members of the police committee missed an opportunity of doing the city a real service during the past season, but we give the committee credit for being sincere n their course of action; and it is a point upon which opinions differ.

It is a noteworthy thing that in connection with the retirement of these aldermen, the reason given for their course is the pressure of private business, and the large amount of time demanded for attention to public affairs. The mayor and other aldermen complain of the same thing Does not this point to some change in the method of civic administration? Circumstances require the change now, but in view of the proposed legislation during the next session of the legislature our wisest plan is to wait for a while. The council should be a legislative body only not an administrative one. When the change is made, it will likely be along these lines.

The objection has been made that the present years' council has been to a large extent a one-man or at best a two-man affair. Nothing is farther from the truth. The council has had no "boss." The men who compose it are not of the class which can be made to do the bidding of anyone irrespective of the merits of a question. From that point of view whatever the failures of some of them may have been, there is not a weak man in the body. They are men of exceptionally strong personality, and have shown themselves to be such in their attitudes to various questions. There are doubtless faults which can be found, but such a contention is clearly not one of them.

A Wholesale Centre

The time has come when the business men of the city who do business with outside points should be no longer handicapped by unfavorable rates. From Medicine Hat to any point with which we do business our rate is higher than for corresponding distances from Calgary or Lethbridge. The reason given for this by the C. P. R. is that we have as yet no wholesalers rates from this point. Our merchants and manufacturers are handicapped because of this discrimination, and their customers complain of the greater cost to them when purchases are made from here, not because the price quoted is higher but because the freight is greater. The board of trade can do a real service to the city by going into this question with the railway company and using its influence toward getting as favorable rate as other cities. There is no inherent reason why the rate from here to Lethbridge should be higher than the rate from Lethbridge here. Similarly between here and any other point compared with Lethbridge to that point, distance considered. We are just entitled to wholesale center rates as Lethbridge is. Let us make a concerted action and see that the disability under which our jobbers and manufacturers rest is soon removed.

Press Comment

"WORK WILL REFORM ANYONE"

(Strathcona Plaindealer)

Samuel A. Mann, police magistrate of Spokane, formerly a newspapes writer and theatrical performer in the east believes he has solved the problem of dealing with hardened criminals, habitual drunkards and hop fiends, wife-beaters, drones and juvenile offenders. The panacea:

"Give them work—work that tires the body and rests the mind; give them wholesome food and frequent baths. The rock pile is a suitable place in the absence of an established workhouse."

Judge Mann handles from 45 to 60 cases daily during the six days a week the court is in session, thus giving him opportunity to see the result of sending prisoners to the city jail. He says they invariably return to answer to some other if not the same charge and the fall is from bad to worse, the climax as a rule, being the penitentiary for life or long periods. He added:

"Speaking from a strictly humanitarian standpoint. I believe it is wrong to keep a criminal in absolute idleness for 30, 60 or 90 days, while the result of incarcerating a normal human being, who has committed no crime, for a similar period will either make him a criminal or drive him insane.

"I have watched the result of sentences on the rock pile. Even the confirmed drunkard, who comes here after a knock-out fight with John Barleycorn goes forth a new man after 30 days' treatment, as I have outlined. I have seen boys who became desperate criminals after associating with bad men in jail a similar period, and again I have known them to become respected citizens as a result of being segregated from the other classes and given work to occupy their minds. The rock pile will solve the problem."

A WINTER DANGER

(Regina Leader)

With the advent of winter, which brings with it the screwing on of storm windows, the erection of storm porches and the utilization of other devices tending to turn the average Canadian house into something very nearly approaching an hermetically sealed living box, it is perhaps as well to sound once again the oft repeated warning of the danger which exists in permitting the question of warmth to overshadow if not to entirely exclude the equally important one of ventilation.

The number of people who die annually of cold is infinitesimal, while the yearly death roll of victims of improper and insufficient ventilation totals into the ten of thousands.

Cold weather does not directly cause pneumonia, but it is an indirect cause. It causes injudicious people to shut themselves up indoors closing windows and doors, so that they may be comfortably warm. Closed windows mean lack of proper ventilation, the indoor air soon becoming foul. When this indoor air is taken into the lungs it fails to impart the necessary health-sustaining elements that inhaled air should; rather it poisons the body, lowers the natural resisting powers and creates fertile soil for the invasion and development of the pneumonia germ.

Dealing with this subject the Chicago Health department urges that "The thing to do is to stop lowering your resisting power. Quit poisoning yourself with foul air. Breath good, pure air all the time—especially while sleeping. Keep your windows open day and night. Don't be afraid of cold air. Pure cold air does not cause pneumonia. It's dirty, foul air that causes the trouble."

But where pneumonia claims its tens in the victims of improper ventilation, the dread white plague claims its hundreds. No more fruitful source of consumption exists than that provided by the unaired house the vitiated atmosphere of whose rooms is breathed and rebreathed by the dwellers therein, regardless of the fact that death lurks in every intake of its poison-laden elements.

The open window idea may perhaps be carried to excess, but even so very little harm is likely to ensue; while on the contrary, the prevalent custom of excluding all fresh air from the outside is a direct invitation to ill health and too often death.

Perhaps when hygiene becomes a recognized subject in the curricula of our public schools the importance to the race of pure, fresh air will be more generally appreciated; meanwhile we can only hope that the insistent preaching of the press and the health authorities will at least tend to lessen the heavy toll in life, paid yearly as the result of the widespread popularity of the warmth at any price policy, which governs in the majority of homes at winter time.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(Moosomin World)

In the bye-election for North Essex held last Thursday, Oliver J. Wilcox the Conservative candidate, was elected by a majority of 75. At the general elections last year the constituency went Liberal by 551. As a rule, in Canada, bye elections go in favor of the government, and the result of this election demonstrates that the Liberal party in Canada has lost considerable ground during the past year.

In an open letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the editor of the Toronto Saturday Night (himself a Liberal) calls for the resignation of a certain cabinet minister "whose morals—or lack of morals—outrages every sense of public decency. If this cabinet officer can by any trick of conscience consider himself vindicated," says the writer, "so much the better for him, but by the same token this seeming vindication does not satisfy the public conscience. The people of Canada demand more than this; they demand his resignation." Can this bad man be Sir Frederick of the gallant air and sunny side whiskers?

A Personally Conducted Rebellion

"Thunder and tarnation!" David Scott growled, crushing the letter in his veined hand. "What's the matter?" inquired his wife nervously, as she paused in the doorway, with dough clinging to her thin fingers.

"Matter enough," snarled her husband in impotent rage. "Here I am helpless as a new-born babe, and the man that buyin' horses for that New York van company 'll be at Gabe Mitchell's stable today noon, and I ain't got a soul to send in with my string."

Jim, his eldest born, who had been sitting on the edge of the rocker twirling his big straw hat, rose suddenly and stalked from the room.

"Oh you needn't get you back up! It's true," shouted Scott. "You have not as much horse sense as your five year old brother, an'—"

"Maybe I could look after it for you father," interrupted Mrs. Scott. "I know everyone of those horses, and some men's mighty nice in dealing with women folk, Besides there's Gabe. I don't believe he stand by and see me get the worst of it."

A cunning gleam shone in David Scott's clod-gray eyes. It was not a bad idea. He had forgotten Gabe.

"Well, if you're set on trying it, get ready quick. Bill and Charlie can lead the roans and the blacks and Jim can ride with you in the buggy an' lead the grays."

Mrs. Scott dressed under a running fire of instructions, and her thoughts ran together in a hopeless jumble.

Her black alpaca certainly did look rusty, but she musn't let the roans go for less than $500. If only she had a few violets to freshen up her bonnet! Certainly she'd be sure to bank the money. Was there time to crimp her hair a little? Yes she had the bank book, and she wouldn't forget the doors closed at three!

Just here little Dave, dish-towel in hand, ran into the room.

"Beth says I wiped the dishes awful nice, mother, and will you bring me some fire-crackers. Next Tuesday's the Fourth—"

Scott sat up in bed and shook a long bony finger at his wife.

"Don't you dare, Sarah. I'm sending you to Dumport to take in money not to spead it. Fire-crackers! Bosh. I never had 'em. That's burning money for sure."

Little Dave fled but as his mother was climbing into the buggy he clutched her skirt and whispered as if his voice might travel around the L to the spare-room window:

"Just bring me one cracker, mother and I'll go away round to the woods to set it off. Think of setting a match to it and hearing it go sizz-boom."

"Be a good boy, Davy," replied his mother, bending to kiss the pleading face, "and don't forget to feed the turkeys."

"But ain't you going to bring me one?" the boy sobbed, running along side the buggy. "Just one, mother?"

"Oh, go back before you'r hurt," exclaimed Jim gruffly, but averting his gaze from the little figure.

"Good-by, dear," said Mrs. Scott, waving a stiffly gloved hand. "Maybe I might find one!"

Her eyes were moist and tender as she caught the last glimpse of the boy, who had stopped short in the grassy lane to toss his ragged hat in the air. She turned apologetically to her oldest born.

"I've got fifty cents Mis' Wentworth paid me yesterday for eggs—"

"Father must have been asleep when she came," remarked the young man dryly.

The delicate face so near his stalwart shoulder burned redly.

"Well, I thought he wouldn't miss it—an—and I'm just going to let Davy take a couple of packs over to Bidwell's the morning of the Fourth and have some fun with the other boys."

"It would be strange if we did things like other boys, would it?" inquired Jim bitterly.

For a few minutes both were silent. Mrs. Scott thought how fine it must be to drive to town once a week in a comfortable spring buggy. Come to think of it, she hadn't been to Danport for more than two years She was always busy when David went in on Saturdays.

Evidently Jim's thoughts had fared father afield, for he burst forth abruptly:

"I'm planning to go back to Missouri with Frank Nelson, mother."

The reins fell from Mrs. Scott's hands and her son replaced them gently.

"I'd oughtn't to give you such a start, but I was just thinkin' and spoke out. Frank's doing fine with his fruit, and he says he'll back me to rent a strip of land close to his."

"Going to Missouri!" echoed his mother dully.

"Yes; me and father had some words the day he twisted his ankle.

I rather 'low he wouldn't have twisted it at all if he hadn't stamped his foot so hard at me. I asked him to let me have the south slope on shares. I've always wanted to raise garden truck, and I don't care much for stock breeding. I told him I could make some money at it, and he said I wasn't hired to think for him, but to work. And I said that as near as I could make out I wasn't even hired—I just gave my time, and then—well, it don't matter!"

Mrs. Scott looked back on her husband's broad acres. All this, and money in the bank, yet her son was going to strangers!

"But, what does Kate Bidwell say?" The young man's face softened.

"Kate's set on my going. She knows that as long as I hang 'round here, we'll never be able to marry. I tell, you mother, there ain't many girls would stick to a fellow who never has a cent to take them to socables or buy 'em presents. If father would even give me wages as he gives his other hands, I'd stick it out—for—for your sake. But we're just dirt under his feet—wheels to grind gold for him."

So Jimmy would leave her—as Sal had done. Sally, who had fought inch by inch for the education which had finally placed her on the eligible list in the district schools!

How they had smuggled candles for night study in the attic! How the tired mother had shouldered extra burdens when the father was away that the ambitious girl might snatch an extra hour at her books.

And only a few days before a letter had come from Newton Center, where Sally was teaching this year. Part of it had run:

"Don't think I am deserting you, mother dear, but I'm only coming home over the Fourth. I'm going to a summer college, and some day I will get a city school and take you away from that awful farm."

Yes, that was what they all wanted to do—leave the farm, with its rolling, fruitful acres, its purling streams, and its magnificent stretches of pasture and woodland. Why? The answer was the square-jawed, thin-lipped man, cursing impotently from the depths of her best feather bed in the spare chamber.

II.

"Glad to see you, I'm sure, Sarah," said Gabe Mitchell, as he helped her from the buggy. "Yes, the boys got here all right with the other horses. Won't you step into my office? Yes, that's it, on your right. I'll be with you in a minute."

She walked away briskly, little thinking that Gabe Mitchell was watching her with a dreamy look in his soft brown eyes.

"Remarkable how your mother carries her years," he said abruptly as he caught Jim's eye. "It don't seem any time since I used to see her home from singing school."

"She can still sing," replied the boy proudly, as he led his team to the barn.

Then it suddenly struck him as curious that he had never heard his mother sing over her work when his father was around.

They found Mrs. Scott sitting on the edge of Mitchell's swivel chair, nervously picking at the finger tips of her coarse cotton gloves.

"Father says he must have five hundred for the roans, four for the greys, and the blacks ought to bring three hundred," she said with the air of one repeating a well-learned lesson "They all come from good draft draft stock—"

"Certainly, certainly, Sarah," replied Mitchell. "Don't you give it a minute's thought. Everyone knows David Scott's stock is A-1. There ain't the least bit of need in your hanging 'round this dusty office. Jim here, and I can look after the sale. You just drop around before bank closes and deposit the money. Maybe you have some trading to do?"

Mrs. Scott felt her color rising. David always did the trading. It wouldn't take long to spend fifty cents!

"Tell you what, Sarah," exclaimed Mitchell, "I'll just have Jim take you over to my sister's. There's going to be some sort of a woman's rights meeting at the court-house. You'd ought to go with her to hear the speaking."

Half an hour later, Mrs Scott sat with Gabe's sister watching the Danport women gather for the meeting. The speaker had arrived on the same train as the New York horse-buyer.

It must be fine to travel around thus and live at hotels and have every one applaud you, thought Sarah Scott; then her thoughts wandered toward comparisons between the raiment worn by her old Danport friends and her own rusty dress and bonnet.

That was a lovely dress Gabe's sister had on—looked just like old-fashioned delaine, only more silky.

"My friends, we women are just what we allow the men to make us—queens or slaves. Don't blame the men if you are downtrodden. Look back over your history. Have you placed the true value on your gifts, your talents, your powers?"

After that the speaker talked hard and fast for forty minutes, urging her audience to demand the right of franchise, but her eloquence was lost on one woman. Sarah Scott was living her married life over again.

What had she allowed David to make of her? Why was she not queen in her home instead of its slave and his?

Because from the first it had been easier to yield than to struggle against his iron will!

The meeting was over, and Sarah Scott, still like one in a dream went back to the livery stable. Jim was leaning against the door smoking a cigar! Gabe sat on an upturned box whittling. He had always been a great hand with a jack-knife she remembered.

"Well, Sarah," he said cordially, as he rose to greet her, "He's gone and your horses with him."

"Did you get five hundred for the roans?" she asked mechanically.

"Five fifty," answered Gabe watching her curiously.

She started.

Why, David allowed I hadn't sense enough to get even four hundred," she exclaimed impulsively.

"Well that gives you a commission of fifty dollars," continued Gabe in his smooth even tones.

"Me—fifty dollars?"

"Sure," said Gabe. "When you sell anything for a man and get a good price you are always allowed a commission."

She looked anxiously at Jim. His expression was inscrutable. His gaze was fixed on the smoke curling from the end of his cigar.

"Now, here's the money for deposit in the b g roll, and your commission in the other," continued Gabe, laying the two packages of money before astonished eyes. "You'd better count it while I'm hitching up."

As he left the office, Mrs. Scott unrolled the smaller package and counted the bills. Tears came to her eyes.

"It don't seem right. Seems as if this really belonged to your father."

The boy cleared his throat.

"It's yours all right. Father could not have got five hundred for the roans in a hundred years! Mr. Mitchell did it for you, and he'll be hurt if you don't keep the money!"

She fingered the notes. So Gabe had done it for her!

Her thoughts reverted back to other days before David Scott, the masterful, had swept the more gentle and quiet lover from his path. And she might have been a queen instead of a slave!

A tremor passed through her slender figure, and suddenly she straightened back her shoulders. She laid a firm hand on her son's arm.

"Jimmy" she said, and the boy realized that her very voice had changed, "if you children 'll stand by me, I'm going to buy my Declaration of Independence with this fifty. Come on; we'll get the fire-crackers for Dave first."

She thrust the commission into the palm of her glove and started for the door. Jim flung his cigar through the open window and gathered up the money which was to be deposited 'in his father's name.

His mother had forgotten it!

III.

Boom—Boom—Boom—Boom!

"Ki-yi! Ki-yi!"

"C-r-rack-rack! Cr-rack! Chang!"

David Scott started up from a heavy doze and stared about him in bewildered fashion.

C-r-rack! C-r-rack! Chang!

"Sarah! Mother! Sarah!" yelled Scott.

The only reply was a fresh blast followed by exultant shouts. Scott leaned over the side of the bed and pounded the floor with his cane, shouting like mad for every member of the family, from his wife to little Davy.

Presently the door opened a few inches to admit the long lean face of Mary Ann Jenkins a "trusty" at the poor-farm. He gasped and his shouts died away in a gurgle of rage.

"Ready for your breakfast Mr. Scott," she asked.

"What's that infernal noise?" yelled the disgruntled man by way of reply.

"It's Davy and the Bilwell boys celebrating down by the creek. Mis' Scott she thought t'd be safer near the water. Shall I bring your breakfast?"

"No!" thundered the man. "Bring me Davy. I'll teach him!" he added grimly, as the door closed.

That was the first work at hand. Afterward—well, he'd find out what "poor-farm truck" was doing in his kitchen and what his family meant by stealing away without his consent His long, lean fingers twitched nervously as he waited.

"Davy says he can't come. His mother told him 'mos' particular he was not to come near the house an' bother you."

Again Scott gasped for breath.

Before he fully recovered his power of speech. Mary Ann was back with his breakfast, which included only such dishes as had always been his favorites.

He ate in grim silence, which was more than the garrulous woman could stand.

"It's a pity you couldn't seen 'em start," she said finally. "But, Mis' Scott she 'lowed you'd had a bad night an' needed the sleep."

"She did eh?" replied Scott, peering oddly from under his bushy brows "They must have started early."

"Yes, Mis' Scott she said nothin' fretted her so much as bein' shoved 'round in a crowd! She seemed awful anxious to get away."

"They were mighty quiet about it" commented the man dryly as he turned a thick stream of cream into the rich brown coffee.

"Yes, they tip-toed 'round as easy. But I think 'twas a shame you did not see Mis' Scott in her new dress. Blue becomes her so well, an' them pink roses in her hat takes ten years off her age," continued the old woman, delighted at the interest betrayed by her listener.

So Sarah had a new dress—an!—

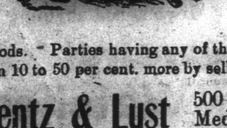
"Sally was that proud of her mother she kissed her every few minutes an' oncet they hung on each other's necks like two girls."

"Humph! 'Let's see! Who's the speaker at Danport this year?"

"Oh, they wasn't going to Danport; leastwise, Mis' Scott and the girls wasn't. They were just goin' over to Crimmin' Corner to hear the speakin' at the school house."

Scott stirred his coffee deliberately Not for the world would he allow this "poor-farm trash" to realize his ignorance of his family's plans and whereabouts.

Mr. Jim he and Kate Bidwell's gone to Danport, though, in the single buggy. That was a han'some tie his mother gave him, wasn't it?"



Scott nodded his head mechanically, and the woman rattled on.

"The gold horse-shoe was a bit sporty to my mind, but them things is all a matter of taste, I reckon."

Scott scowled as he poured fresh maple syrup over his hot biscuits. A gold pin! Yet he had seen the deposit, one thousand two hundred dollars, entered in his bank book.

Perhaps Sally had given her mother money. Well more fool she!

"Mis' Scott, she 'lowed she'd have to get back in time to set out lunch for the folks that are coming from Danport."

Again Scott stared but as quickly bent his gaze on his food.

"I tell you David Scott, there ain't many men has as clever a wife as you have. The things she's cooked all by herself these past two days! I wanted to come over and help, but she said she's used to gettin' long fast by herself. The cakes is iced something lovely, an' she frose the cream in the night, down in the spring house. There's get-up and git for you!" the old woman concluded admiringly.

Scott shoved aside his tray and tried to keep the interested note out of his voice.

"I suppose there's quite a few coming out from town."

"Oh, yes," said Mary Ann, as she gathered up the dishes. "Gabe Mitchell's bringin' part of 'em in his 'bus an' it holds a dozen easy. The young folks 'll likely come in single buggies It's nice to be young, Mr. Scott, ain't it?"

The man grunted, and it was with great effort only that he was able to suppress his anger.

"What's that?" said the wizen creature, fixing her brown, bird-like eyes on him.

"Nothing, nothing," he said testily. "My ankle gave me a turn, tarnation on it."

VI.

The long sunlit morning melted into noon, and still David Scott sat propped against the pillows, his arms folded grimly across his chest. After a time he did not even notice the desultory reports from the boyish celebration by the creek. He was thinking only of himself.

So this was how they left him in his helplessness—as if he were a hateful thing. Then came a sense of exultation. At least they were afraid of him! They had been forced to slip away by stealth. And there would be a day of reckoning.

Tomorrow! Tomorrow! Perhaps then Sally, the little fool, would wish that she had not loaned her mother the money for she would never get it back, He would see to that.

And as for that new blue dress, Sarah, the rebellious would baptize it with tears of repentance.

He had just reached these decisions when heavy footsteps sounded on the porch.

"Hello Scott! Think we were never coming?"

He looked up in amazement. What was Gabe Mitchell talking about? And there was Squire Crimmins and Bill Freeman hovering in the background.

"Oh, no, no," answered Scott, blinking rapidly. "I wasn't thinking that."

"We got the thing all right," continued Mitchell, and Freeman shoved forward an invalid's rolling chair. Lucky the squire here didn't sell it after his wife's sister back-healed. We'll have you down in the grove before you can say Jack Robinson."

"Mis' Scott she said you'd find his Sunday clothes all laid out on the settin' room sofy," interrupted Mary Ann, her pleased face beaming with good natured anxiety.

"Now you be careful and don't let him stand on that foot," she urged. "Mis' Scott she says mos' particular about that. She wouldn't have no harm come to her husband out of this jaunt for nothin'."

When the men reached the grove, David Scott saw neither the patriotic paper garlands nor the tables loaded with good things filched from his store house, nor yet the festive guests who crowded about his chair to express their sympathy for his accident and congratulations on his ability to join them on this auspicious occasion.

He saw only a slender figure clad in porcelain-blue lawn, powdered with sprigs of white flowers and trimmed with quantities of white lace.

A sudden revulsion of feeling swept over him. Resentment yielded to pride. That was the girl he had married twenty years before. And she had dared. Why, he hadn't thought she had it in her!

It was almost a dream afternoon to David Scott. His old neighbors paused beside his chair to compliment him on his wife and children.

How young Mrs. Scott was looking and what a marvellous cook she was. They had never tasted such cakes. And Sally! How she had changed during the winter.

"Right smart and stidied," Squire Crimmins pronounced her.

Yes, Jim did look better in that new suit of clothes. Perhaps there was something in him after all. He carried himself quite like a man. Anyhow, his taste in girls was good. There wasn't a better looker on the grounds than Kate Bidwell.

But somehow he caught himself wishing that Davy would come and tell him how much powder they had blown up down by the creek, instead of skirting his chair at the greatest possible distance compatible with reaching the tub of lemonade. And he thought Sarah actually avoided him.

She aught to know he was too proud to make any scene before all these folks. Not for worlds would he let one of them suspect that he had not been in the secret of this celebration.

The gloaming melted into deep blue night, and the young couples came back slowly from the twilight trysts. By the light of Chinese lanterns, Jim was unpacking a big box of fireworks, pin wheels, sky-rockets, Roman candles and flower pots.

"Here Scott," said Mitchell heartily, "lean on my shoulder and send up the first rocket. The honr's yours as master of the house."

There was an almost imperceptible pause, then David Scott waved the toy aside.

"Let Sarah do it; she's carrying on the honors today."

V.

Mrs. Scott with a great apron to protect her pretty frock, was packing what was left of the celebration cakes into stone crocks. Her eldest born followed her into the pantry.

"I've got father in bed, and he thinks a cup of your tea would rest him considerable."

"All right Jimmy."

"And mother" continued the boy, laying a loving hand on her shoulder "he says Kate was the likeliest girl in the grove today, and I can have the south slope on shares next year."

Sarah Scott laid her head on the boy's shoulder.

"Jimmy, wasn't it worth the fifty dollars?" Then she straightened up. "That you Sally? Put on the kettle. Your father wants a cup of tea."

WALSH ITEMS

Farmers are coming in in large numbers, with great quantities of wheat. Cattle are also being shipped, in almost record consignments. The local stores are very busy, in fact, this is the busiest fall Walsh has known.

The outlook for spring is also very good. A large influx of farmers is promised. Nearly all available land has been taken up, and everything points to the district settling up in a marvellous manner.

Mrs. Francis Robinson left here this week to spend some little time in Carstairs and neighborhood, where she will pay a round of visits to relatives and old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Schroder have decided to come to town for winter and have rented the Methodist parsonage. Their daughter, Mrs. J. D. McDonald, accompanied by her two daughters, have been staying with them for about ten days. Mrs. McDonald has recently been on a short trip to Medicine Hat where she renewed acquaintance with quite a host of old friends.

Rev Gerald, the Anglican clergyman resident at Irvine, was in town last week paying a pastoral visit to his parishoners in Walsh. He was observed walking down from the post office to the town with the new Methodist pastor, Mr. Stead. They were engaged in earnest conversation for quite a while.

Mr. M. Stirling Schroder, recently made a trip to Lethbridge, combining business and pleasure, for, while he made many business calls he also looked up a number of old acquaintances.

Just at present Walsh is in the throes of a disorder, which is attacking people in the form of a severe influenza cold. Many of the townspeople are affected by its malignant influence.

As a counter-balance we have had a visit from a travelling optician who has been almost giving us new sight—free.

Was All Run Down.

Weighed 125 Lbs Now Weighs 185

Mrs. M. McGann, Debec Junction, N.B., writes:—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

The price of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Parliamentary Reflections

One of the most interesting studies at the beginning of every parliament is to discover who the oldest members are, for the number of those who were returned to parliament in 1896 when Sir Wilfrid Laurier came to power is now very rapidly diminishing. The following is the list of the thirty who remain: Conservatives:—Major Thomas Beattie, London; R. L. Borden, Halifax; Andrew Broder, Dundas; George E. Foster, North Toronto; John G. Haggart, South Lanark; David Henderson, of Halton; Col. Samuel Hughes, Victoria and Haliburton; E. D. Monk, Jacques Cartier; William B. Northrup, East Hastings; E. B. Osler, West Toronto; Dr. John D. Reid, Grenville; Dr. W. J. Roche, Marquette; Dr. T. S. Sproule, East Grey; George Taylor, Leeds; Urish Wilson, Lennox and Addington; W. F. Maclean, South York—16.

Liberals:—Sir Frederick Bordon, Kingston; L. P. Brodeur, Rouville; J. P. Brown, Chateauguay; Joseph C. Ethier, Two Mountains; Hon. W. S. Fielding, Shelburne and Queen's; S. A. Fisher, Brome; Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Quebec East; Rodolphe Lemieux, Gaspe; D. B. Meigs, Missizquoi; Hon Frank Oliver, Edmonton; William Patterson, Brant; Clifford Sifton, Brandon; Of E. Talbot, Bellechasse; J. Tolmie, North Bruce.—14.

The father of the house is the Hon. Mr. Haggart who was born in 1838 and is thus 73 years of age. He has been in public life since 1867 when he became mayor of Perth. He was elected to Parliament in 1872 and has held his seat without defeat ever since. He was appointed postmaster-general by Sir John A. Macdonald, in 1888.

An international commission composed of seven representatives from the United States and five from Canada under the chairmanship of Mr. J. G. Rutherford, live stock commissioner and veterinary director general for Canada, has been established, to consider means for securing the control and eradication of bovine tuberculosis in Canada and the United States. The commission, which will co-operate with the government of each country, is the outcome of a suggestion made at the annual meeting of the American Veterinary Association in Chicago recently.

"An Old Roman Squire."

Interesting Lecture by Prof. Alexander

If it could only be brought home to the citizens generally how splendid an opportunity for the study of the humanities lies at their door, a much larger attendance at the University Extension lectures would be assured. The lecture on "An Old Roman squire" given by Prof. Alexander on Saturday evening, was a real intellectual treat, and in addition, by projecting upon the problems of our own times the light of the history of the ancient world, provided from the lessons of a bygone civilization, a guide for the present and the future.

In his opening words Prof. Alexander referred to the healthy infancy of the extension movement in Alberta. It was the ambition of those under whose charge the provincial university was placed, to make it truly a university, whose function should be to go to the people, and not depend entirely upon the people coming to it. The time would doubtless come when regular university work would be carried on at the extension centers.

Passing on to deal with the subject of his lecture, Prof. Alexander said that through all the centuries which had intervened between the days of Ancient Rome and the present era, Human nature was in essentials the same today as in any former age. The difference in social structure and in type of civilization were in the main due to scientific and industrial development. The English people of the 15th century when mechanical progress had barely begun, were thus is a far better position to understand the life of the Romans than we. The difference between Imperial Rome and New York today was in essentials a difference due to steam and electric transportation, the electric telegraph, modern machinery and so forth. In sentiment and feeling there was no radical change. The right way to approach the study of ancient history, was to devote attention to men rather than policies. Policies changed, but men were much the same today as ever.

In an interesting manner the lecturer then went on to compare the careers and characters of Sir Robert Walpole, the British parliamentarian of the first part of the Hanoverian dynasty, and of the elder Cato, whose times were cast some 185 years before Christ. Two dates in England's history marked the progress towards the political structure of the present time—1688, the year of the so-styled "Glorious Revolution," and 1832, when for the first time real democracy was ushered in. In the century and a half which intervened between these two dates, England was really ruled, not by a democracy but by an oligarchy, in which only the possessors of blue blood held political power. During this time Robert Walpole arose, a man of the squire class, a small land owner who was not welcome in the ranks of the great aristocracy. Walpole, however, by virtue of his personality and talents, held in his own hands the reins of power between 1720 and 1742, during which years he was prime minister. He was of a

YOUNG PEOPLES ASSOCIATION

There was a good attendance at the regular meeting of the Knox church Young People's Association last Wednesday evening. Considerable business was transacted and the social committee announced that all arrangements had been made for a social evening to be held on Wednesday evening of this week at the home of Mrs. Levique, 718 Princess avenue. An enjoyable time is assured and all young people are invited to attend.

Rev. C. C. McLaurin, superintendent of missions for Alberta, will preach in the Baptist church next Lord's Day, Dec. 14th, at both services.

Opening of Rink

Large Crowds on Opening Day and Last Night

On Saturday the skating rink was opened, and the large attendance both in the afternoon and evening and also yesterday augures well for the success of the rink during the present season. Last night the band was in attendance and hencefoward will play every Wednesday evening throughout the winter on which skating is possible.

Mr. Jack Peard has carried out a number of important alterations in the building. The hockey stand which was six feet in width and extended down the whole of one side of the building, has been removed, thus considerably increasing the area of the ice. A new band stand has also been erected at the end of the rink nearest the entrance. Independent gas connections have been made for the heating and lighting and the rink is now brilliantly lighted.

The skating season in Medicine Hat opened earlier this year than in any year since the old-timers' days. Last year it was not until after Christmas that the local rink opened and the season was of comparatively short duration.

Plans are on foot for the holding of a great carnival in the Christmas season, and Mr. Peard hopes to make racing a feature of the rink season.

Mr. R. F. Collins returned from a short visit to Winnipeg on Wednesday. The trip was made principally for business purposes, but when Mr. Collins reached the Gateway City he found a state of things bordering on industrial chaos. Street cars were out of commission, and most of the factories were closed down, while only such of the theatres as have generating plants of their own were able to continue the nightly performances. In the hotels the guests had to grope their way to their rooms by the feeble light of candles, and Winnipeggers kept good hours. The condition of things was as first treated lightly by the citizens, who bore the inconveniences cheerfully enough, but before the supply of power was again adequate to keep in motion the wheels of industry, serious financial loss had been sustained by the business community, and especially by the small merchants whose Christmas trade was at a standstill. The cause of the trouble was, of course, the breakdown at the Lac du Bonnet plant of the power company.

Mr. Collins found the greatest enthusiasm among the farmers he met during the trip, almost all of whom had had a season of big crops, resulting in a feeling of optimism and happiness traceable to the possession of a full pockets book. The farmers of Manitoba and Saskatchewan have not, however, in Mr. Collins' opinion had as success as have the farmers of Southern Alberta who seem to have reaped the richest rewards for the year of all western farmers.

In real estate circles in Winnipeg the activity is more apparent than real, the dealers having resorted to the expedient of transferring property among themselves and so lending an appearance of prosperity. Speculation is not being carried on to any extent but the city is going through a period of quiet and for that reason all the more genuine development.

R. H. Mode, M.A., P.H.D., professor in Brandon College, will lecture in the Baptist church, on Friday evening, Dec. 10th, at 8 o'clock. His subject will be "Explorations in Bible Lands." During the past year Dr. Mode has, under the auspices of Chicago University, been doing research work in Eastern lands. He has a collection of very fine pictures taken by himself which he will use in his lecture. A collection will be taken.

MAYOR MILNE, UNANIMOUSLY RE-ELECTED

Permanent Assessor Will Be Appointed

Another Action Against City

At the regular meeting of the council held in the city hall last evening there were present: the mayor, Aldermen Robertson, McKay, Spencer, Adair, Howson, Huckvale and Penhale. The chief of police wrote forwarding a petition which urged the enaction of the curfew bylaw. The petition was signed by Mistresses J. S. Daum and W. G. Rowe for the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the following ministers of religion: Rev. J. S. Daum, W. Wilhelm, A. C. Farrell, A. A. Bertrand, E. Cox Clarke, J. W. Morrow, A. McLaren and H. Bryant. The petitioners pointed out the necessity of some measure being enacted to protect the boys and girls of the city from the degrading influences of evening street loungine. Supt. Chadwick enclosed a communication explaining the Lethbridge bylaw, as a result of its passage, he said, juvenile delinquency had been greatly reduced. Ald. Huckvale expressed himself as personally in favor of a curfew bylaw and the letters were referred to the license and police committee for a report.

D. G. White wrote in behalf of his client, W. B. Martin, stating that the latter would sue the city for wrongful dismissal unless his claim were granted before Dec. 27th. Referred to the solicitor for a report.

A lengthy communication was received from the secretary-treasurer of the Alberta Motor Co., Dr. C. F. Smith, in regard to the city machine shop and the work recently carried out by the company as to which complaints had been made in council. The writer stated that about a year ago he had called on Mayor Milne, who had promised to instruct the engineer to get such work as the city required done at the company's works. Either the mayor had forgotten to give instructions or the engineer had disregarded them for in the twelve months past only $50 worth of work had been received. Dr. Smith then went on to discuss the statement made in council recently that the company had taken two days to carry out a ewo hour job. This statement had been reported in the local and Calgary papers creating an entirely false impression. The nature of the job was described in detail, and the difficulties experienced due to the fact that it was too large a piece of work to be done in the ordinary lathe without special appliances. From a piece of piping 30 feet in length and 10 feet in diameter 16 feet were to be cut off and threaded and certain flange work was also to be done. A special steady rest had to be made to support the pipe end. Altogether the job was in the company's hands 13 hours. The locomotive foreman of the C. P. R. had expressed the opinion that the price charged, $15, was not excessive. In conclusion the writer regretted that the city were purchasing their gas engine from a Winnipeg firm, when agents for gas engines were to be found in the city. The shareholders of the Alberta Motor Co. were all taxpayers who asked no bonus or other favors from the city. If the council could not support local industry they might at least refrain from spreading entirely false and injurious reports. The mayor explained that he had told Dr. Smith that the Alberta Motor Co would be the proper place at which the city repairs should be carried out, but their lathe had been found not large enough for much of the work. It appeared that Doctor Smith's letter provided ample justification for the course the city had taken. Ald. Huckvale pointed out that it was not merely the question of cost that had influenced the committee in arriving at their decision it was important that in case of any breakdown repair work might be done on the spot and immediately. The letter was filed.

Chief Land Commissioner Griffin of the C. P. R. wrote stating that no objection would be raised to the lease of a site for a curling rink in Block E at the location proposed. Ald Penhale spoke eloquently in behalf of the preservation of the city's park land for park purposes only. He did not think that sites should have been given for an armory or for any other similar purpose. Ald. Spencer expressed his substantial agreement with this view. The letter was filed and may be taken up again when the question of the lease comes up for consideration.

D. R. Ware wrote enclosing a letter he had written to Mr. Andrew Carnegie some time ago in his capacity as president of the literary club in this city. In this he had requested the gift of a public library. Mr. Carnegie's secretary had referred him to the city authorities to get their authorization of any proposal that might be made. Ald. Spencer said that Mr. Sansom was now taking the matter up. He thought it desirable that a public library should be obtained and moved that the committee of which Mr. Sansom is a member be authorized to write to Mr Carnegie and obtain all information as to the conditions upon which a library might be given.

A. E. Forrester wrote stating that the plank sidewalk which he had constructed by the Alberta hotel had been authorized from the engineer's office, and that Aldermen Penhale and Spencer were present when the instructions were given. Ald. Penhale rose to explain. He averred that this plank sidewalk was the most discussed thing in the city and had proved good copy for the newspapers for several weeks. When the market was opened there was no proper approach to it and the public works committee took no steps to provide any approach. The speaker had then decided that he must get the work done himself. Ald. Spencer had advised him to go to the council first but he (Ald. Penhale) thought the council would turn the proposition down if he did so. He didn't understand why there should be so much trouble about a "little old 3-foot sidewalk," and vehemently asserted that if the council would not hand out the shekels in payment for the job, he would certainly not do so. Ald. Adair as a member of the public works committee said he had noticed the walk and wondered why he had not been consulted. He at first thought that the hotel might be building it themselves. He had never taken the view that a sidewalk should not be built but held that it should have been authorized by the proper authorities. Ald. Spencer said he was in the engineer's office when Mr. Forester came in to issue about the sidewalk and he had advised Ald. Penhale to see the council before going ahead. As things were now the sidewalk only went the length of the Alberta hotel and there was still no proper access to the market. It was illegal for the parks and markets committee to get work done in this way and he could not vote for the account ($75) until the public works committee's authorization had been obtained. The account was passed, Ald. Spencer alone opposing.

A complaint from W. D. Cavan as to alleged starvation of his cows while in the city pound was referred to the license and police committee. The writer claimed that the brands of the animals had not been properly advertised. He estimated his loss at $158.00.

Colin C. Lamb wrote urging the necessity of providing proper fire protection for the west end of Montreal street, Ottawa street and Braemar street. Referred to fire, water and light committee.

An account for hay in favor of H. C. Cooper was referred to the fire, water and light committee. An account of the Canadian Foundry Co was referred to the water committee for a report. W. A. Henderson & Co who have sent in a bill for $25 for auditing books of the Athletic Association, will be instructed that the council regard this work as part of their general contract for the auditing of the city's books.

After a number of minor reports had been presented Ald. Howson read a letter from acting-Chief Macgonald in regard to Mr. Kealy's recent complaint that he could not obtain grades for the streets which bounded his property. Mr. Macdonald thought the complaint unfair, as levels had been given on three previous occasions and the pegs lost. It was only a few hours' work, however, and the grades would be again obtained. Mr. Macdonald's letter was adopted as the report of the committee.

The gas committee presented the report of Superintendent Croft to the following effect: Two additional street lights had been put in on Montreal street, one on 6th Avenue and one on 7th Avenue. Ald Spencer had advised the installation of two lights on the corner of Toronto St. and 8th Avenue, near to Mr. Kealy's house, and another on the corner of Roy street and 5th Avenue. Geo Worthy and others on 4th Avenue were in need of street lights. Extra connections had been put in to the Cypress club and the Alberta hotel, which were now both well heated. Alterations in the furnaces at Toronto street school had been carried out by Mr. Arnot in his own time and with the exception of the right boiler which still leaked badly, everything was [illegible] share, and the school was more comfortable than it ever had been previously. Alterations were being made in the pump house gas service and the regulator for the public works department. The report was adopted and a resolution passed in accordance with Mr. Craft's recommendation to the effect that all gas fittings shall be reported to the gas inspector immediately on the completion of any job. In no case will the gas service be turned on until inspection has been made. In the past much plumbing work has been covered with lath and plaster before inspection could take place.

Ald. Penhale reported market receipts for November $67, which was regarded as eminently satisfactory.

In behalf of the committee appointed to look into the matter of the assessorship, Ald. McKay recommended that a permanent assessor be appointed at a salary of $85 a month and that he have charge of building and plumbing inspection. Report adopted.

Poll tax collectors reported $1249 collected to date. Of this the city receives $1,056.70 when commission has been deducted.

W. H. Henderson & Co., auditors, reported the completion of the audit for the third quarter.

The report was received and filed.

The tenders owing to lack of space are crowded out but will be given in full in next week's issue.

An exceedingly comprehensive report of the engineering department was presented by the mayor. The space at our disposal allows us to give only a synopsis of this report, but the report ought to be published by the city in full and an examination of it will reveal the careful record which has been kept under Mayor Milne's direction during the year.

The total amount expended by the engineering department for the year ending October 31st last is $95,360.29. Of this amount $3,752.48 has been expended on street repairs, 2.6 miles of sewers were laid, the total now being 8.8. Over twice as much sewer was laid this year as we had before. The cost of laying this 2.6 miles was $13,161.86, or about 95 cents a foot. 46 sewer connections were made during the year, 35 having been made previously. One mile of concrete sidewalk has been laid at a cost of $11,979.04. We have now 5.38 miles in all. 1,150 feet of plank sidewalk has been laid. New gas mains to the extent of 2.88 miles have been laid making a total of 18.68 miles. 62 gas connections were installed, mains and connections costing $6,588.68. In the water works department 2 miles of water mains have been laid, a steam pump installed at the pumping station, 2 new filter beds added to the filtering plant. Water mains and connections cost $12,612.59, being about $1.20 per foot. We have now 12.7 miles of water mains. 68 water connections were made during the year.

A bylaw to regulate bakeries was read [illegible] to the committee [illegible] committee reporting [illegible] bylaw [illegible] Alberta Clay Products Co. bylaw recently authorized at the polls was given a third reading and finally passed.

The mayor brought up the matter of the 60 days' option on the property owned by Mr. F. F. Fatt given on Oct. 11 in connection with the Alberta Clay Products site. On motion of Ald. Spencer, the mayor and secretary-treasurer were authorized to complete the transfer and to pay Mr. Fatt from capital account.

Mr. Baker was appointed acting secretary-treasurer with authority to sign all cheques, etc., during Mr. Perry's absence in the east.

The secretary-treasurer was instructed to advertise for applications for the position of auditor at a salary of $600 per year.

Tenders for the new athletic park site were then opened and referred to a special committee appointed by the Mayor and consisting of Aldermen Huckvale, Spencer and McKay.

Mr. E. R. Hubbell was in from the Day ranch on Sunday.

Messrs. H. Johnson, D. McColl and H. Knudson of Seven Persons were in the city yesterday.

The following Medicine Hat Shriners took in the Shriners' Ball at Calgary last night: Dr and Mrs. Smyth, Mr. and Mrs. Doty, H. W. Ireland and Miss Margaret Ireland, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Elliott, Conductor and Mrs. Milligan, Jas. Rae, Misses Katie and Ella Rae.

Nominations for Mayor, Alderman and School Trustees

No Election for the Council

Yesterday was an exceedingly quiet day at the council chamber of the city hall. The aspirants for municipal honors were conspicuous by their absence. Some of them were, possibly doing some quiet work elsewhere but if they kept a close tab on how things were going at the hall they did it by proxy.

Promptly at 11 o'clock the secretary-treasurer declared the nominations open and the Times' scribe was the only individual present to testify to the fact. He however was not looking for municipal honors and he did not shove in his paper. He wanted only news. Vanity did he wait for any and 15 long minutes passed before any nominations came. Then things began to move a little and in half an hour all the nominations were to hand. When the hour for receiving nominations had expired the following had been duly nominated

For Mayor—

D. Milne, nominated by Henry Stewart, C. S. Pingle and others.

For Aldermen—

Ward I.—F. G. Forster, nominated by W. H. Turpin, Henry Stewart and others.

Ward II.—N. Spencer, nominated by S. T. Hopper, W. Cousins and others.

Ward III.—S. T. Fawcett, nominated by P. Robertson, T. Penhale and others.

Ward IV.—F. McKay, nominated by H. Morrow, R. Millar and others

Ward IV.—W. H. Bridgeman, nominated by T. H. Tinney, C. Loan and others.

This means that there is no election for mayor or aldermen this year as both representatives for Ward 4 were retiring by expiration of term.

For the position of school trustees the following were nominated:—

D. G. White by Jas. Wilson, D. Milne and others.

Jas. Wilson by B. F. Souch, F. G. Forster and others.

S. T. Hopper by John Kennedy, T. Penhale and others.

B. F. Souch by D. Milne, C. J. Wilson and others.

Of these D. G. White is elected by proclamation, [illegible] man Brotherton [illegible] and there are only two other positions on the school board to fill this means that there will be an election for school trustees. It is highly probable however that one of these will retire and that no election will be necessary. The nominees have till Wednesday noon to decide whether they will be candidates.

Next year's council will be somewhat of an old boys' reunion with the same mayor, five of last year's aldermen and Brer Forster to tell them how council meetings "used to was."

SALVATION ARMY

Brigadier Burditt, krovincial commander of Salvation Army forces in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, will visit Medicine Hat on Wednesday, Dec. 8th.

He will conduct a service in the hall, Montreal Street, beginning at 8 p.m.

The Brigadier is both widely known and deeply respected in this city as in every other in the province. Medicine Hat can "take the lead" in showing by a good representative audience how highly his work is appreciated. By years of active service in India and the Dominion the Brigadier has acquired valuable experience which gives force and effect to every address. An intensely interesting time is expected.

Alberta Butter Yields Are Large

Alberta dairymen are so pleased with the results from importing a carload of pure-bred dairy cattle last year that they intend to carry out the same plan this year, according to Provincial Dairy Commissioner Marker. The carload of stock brought in last year was auctioned off and brought high prices. The dairymen are anxious to improve the quality of their herds. Mr. Marker says:

"For a good many years stockmen have been trying to breed what has been termed a general purpose cow, that is one that will not only produce butter fat and milk in large quantities, but also a large amount of meat. It appears to have been a hopeless quest, however, and now the breeders are going in more for special cows for a special purpose, with much more profit to themselves.

"The output of butter in Alberta last year was 2,107,485 pounds, valued at $526,871, and while all our returns are not yet in, I am sure that the output this year will be much greater than that. Last year's production was nearly twice as great as that of the year before. There are now twenty-one creameries in the province under government supervision and 85 individual creameries.

"The demand for dairy products could not be better. The Yukon country consumed 400,000 pounds of our butter last year and British Columbia also furnishes a good market. The western provinces supply British Columbia only one-half as much of the dairy products consumed there as that province imports from the eastern provinces and the state of Washington. There is no reason why the western provinces should not supply all of the requirements of British Columbia.

"Most of the dairying is carried on now in the country north of Calgary, but it will gradually increase in the wheat growing belt."

Tortured by Piles

Could Not Rest! Could Not Work! Could Not Play!

How Zam-Buk Brought Relief.

Zam-Buk—as he truly says—is "something different" to the ordinary ointments and salves. It is a powerful combination of healing and soothing essences. No mineral astringents or poisons; no impure animal fats.

It is a proved cure for inflamed areas (as in piles) erysipelas, eczema, ulcers, sores, abscesses, cold cracks, chapped hands, burns, cuts, scalp sores and for children's rashes. All druggists and stores at 50c. box or post-free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Mr. Julius Glacier of Denbigh, Ont says:—"I was so tortured by piles that I could not get ease whether lying down, sitting or standing. The ailment robbed me of strength, of appetite, and of all desire to live! I had suffered so long and so acutely that I came to think there was no case for me, but one day I found out that I was wrong!

"I was told that Zam-Buk cured piles, and that this balm was altogether different to ordinary ointments, scores of which I had proved useless for so bad a case as mine was. I got a supply of Zam-Buk and began to use it regularly.

"Without going into unnecessary detail in a few weeks I found myself cured. I owe my cure to Zam-Buk entirely, and I trust my experience will be the means of leading other sufferers to try this great herbal balm."

Nothing need be added to this plain powerful testimony save one question—if you suffer like Mr. Glacier did, why not get relief from the same source as he did?

BRYAN SHOOTS IN WESTERN CANADA

From "Roosevelt's Rival," by "Nympo," in "Canada Monthly (formerly Canada-West) December.

Mr. Bryan wanted to know all about duck shooting. He said to Tip Helliwell, than whom there is no greater hunter in Manitoba, "Tip, I'm going to devote more time to hunting. I don't believe in a man hunting for big game, for that involves a risk of human life, but I want more outdoor life, and I am beginning to believe duck shooting is the real thing."

"Bet your life, Mr. Bryan. There's nothing like it. Why, look at me I've passed a good many milestones, but if what they say about a man being as old as he feels, I'm just thirty today. I tell you medicine has no place in a man's kit if he gets out and becomes a part of nature. God Almighty never intended a man to be shut up in houses all the time."

Breakfast over, the party got busy. The hired man came around with his wheel-barrow, and into it was piled all the shooting paraphernalia of the party.

"All right, Mr. Bryan," called Minister Coldwell, and off the two started.

"Wait a minute, please," called out Consul-General Jones. "I want to get a picture of the two greatest snorts in the world."

With that he posed Mr. Bryan with "Tip" Helliwell and snapped them.

"Better not let Teddy hear of your calling me a great sport," laughed Mr. Bryan as they started off. "Why, I'm a crank on conservation. I'm a regular Gifford Pinchot. I'm going to shoot only what I need for food, and I'm going to see that my guide gets his share of the game. Why, I'm a regular Audubon."

Mr. Bryan evinced the greatest interest in decoys and pitched in with the rest of the boys to help load up. Meanwhile he was the target for a perfect fusillade of shots. But he seemed to enjoy the fun. Later in the day, while in the blind, he caught up his gun and pointing at an imaginary duck called out,—

"Here's where I make Roosevelt jealous."

When the evening shadows began to fall, the canoes started for home. Everybody was anxious to learn of the other fellow's luck. Mr. Bryan had done well, but the Republican party as reflected in Consul-General Jones had a large majority.

That night at supper Mr. Bryan said he couldn't help but recall that beautiful couplet from William Cullen Bryant, whenever he missed,—

"Vainly doth the fowler's eye mark thy distant flight to do thee harm."

And then it came time to say good bye. Mr. Bryan took occasion to say how much he had enjoyed the outing how thoroughly at home the members of the club had made him, and how he would return to his home in Nebraska with still another argument for the brotherhood of man. Before he left Mr. Bryan wrote in the club's register the following:

"None better, is an alias for Buffalo Lodge, and it applies to the members of the gun club as well."

LEGISLATORS WILL MEET ON FEBRUARY 10.

The first session of the second legislature of Alberta will open on Thursday, February 10th. This information was given out last week by Premier Rutherford. The date was decided at a meeting of the cabinet on Saturday, and it is supposed that the preparation of matters which are to come before the legislature at this session has postponed the date of the meeting longer than was expected. The opening last year was in the last week of January.

There will sit in the legislature this session forty-one members, in place of twenty-five under the first legislature. Of these, thirty-eight will be straight government supporters. R. B. Bennett, M. P. P., of Calgary, E. D. Michener, M. P. P., of Red Deer, will be Conservatives and C. M. O'Brien will be the Leader and sole representative of Socialism. It is expected that J. R. Boyle, M. P. P., will take the speaker's chair, in the place of Hon. C. W. Fisher member for Cochrane, who acted in that capacity last session.

Sons of England

Constable Bruce and Mr. G. Crowe, president and treasurer respectively of Prairie Rose lodge of the Sons of England paid a fraternal visit to the Lethbridge lodge last week while the annual meeting for the election of officers was in session. In comparing the two lodges, the delegates say, that in organization the Medicine Hat lodge has nothing to learn from Lethbridge, and it is only in respect to numbers that the latter is in a better condition. The total in Lethbridge is 190, while locally there are over 100 members of the order.

Lethbridge Sons of England plan to erect a $10,000 building in the spring. As yet no definite scheme has been adopted here, but it is quite possible that before the close of 1910 the members will find themselves lodged in their own building.

The annual meeting for the election of officers of Prairie Rose Lodge will be held on [illegible] evening, when it will also be necessary to appoint a district deputy for the new district which embraces Medicine Hat to Swift Current.

The annual smoker will be held in the Eagle's Hall on December 2[illegible].

Match Making

A statement of the number of cubic feet of wood which actually are converted into matches each year would convey only an inadequate idea of the number of trees required for this industry.

For the manufacture of the match the best grade of wood is necessary. Sapwood, knotty or cross-grained timber will not do. This makes it necessary to search the best forests and pick out the choice trees only, and nothing but the choice portions of the choice trees go to match machines. It may be seen that the lumberman sweeps over a wide area in search of suitable timber to feed into the match machines.

Seldom is the little splinter tipped with sulphur, or some other substance to be ignited by friction, given even scant mention in the consideration of the depletion of the finest forests of the world, yet the manufacturer of these little fire sticks are as much concerned over the timber supply question as any other class of men engaged in an industry whose welfare depends on the use of forest products.

It might be supposed that to make matches are small the makers of them would utilize scraps and left overs. This is never the case, matches are not by-products. The match machine takes the finest timber and what it rejects goes to the by-product yard and the by-product end of the match business becomes the large[illegible]

YOUNG GAMBLER PLEADS FOR MERCY

(Swift Current Sun)

Sympathetic justice was handed out to T. McJimsay on Tuesday when he was sentenced by Judge Ousley to six months in the Regina jail, two months of which he has spent awaiting trial to apply on the term. The prisoner was a well dressed young man of about 25 years of age and of good appearance. He and a companion named Entwhistle had enticed a young Englishman into a poker game on the C. P. R. train and took from him $150. The partner however, escaped, but McJimsay was held and convicted and recently at Maple Creek, Paddy Nolan, K. C. defending him. He came up for sentence here and pleaded with the court that he was married only five months ago to an orphan girl who was depending upon him for support. He promised if let off on suspended sentence to "walk the straight and narrow path." He was sorry for having started the life of a gambler but he was too old to reform.

Strange Story of Dr. Guillotin

(T. P. O'Connor in T. P.'s Weekly)

Another of the interesting sidelights of the revolution is the story of Dr. Guillotin. It is one of the most ironical chapters in human history. Dr. Guillotin was one of the most benevolent of men. He belonged to that great school of philanthropic dreamers who rushed into the the revolution in the full faith that it was bringing to oppressed and suffering humanity auroral dawns of new hopes, new happiness, new life. He was chiefly concerned in the reform of the prison system and of the treatment of prisoners. One of the many evils that belonged to the old regime was the power given to the judges—who were part and parcel of the corrupt and tyrannical aristocracy which ruled everything in France before the revolution—of inflicting all kinds of tortures upon prisoners belonging to the poorer classes, when they were brought up for judgment. Their crime was no greater perhaps than that of having uttered some word of protest against the villainous system which was starving millions of Frenchmen in order that a few wretched degenerates on the throne and around it might scatter millions on the frail and greedy beauties who were then supreme. But the judges themselves, a part of the machine, should not be interrupted by these vulgar and racuous cries of the starving rebels, and inflicted upon them no end of torture. This was the system which Dr. Guillotin wanted to bring to an end. Filled with this noble purpose, Dr. Guillotin rushed to the tribune shortly after the opening of the constituent assembly and proposed his tremendous resolution.

The motion was at once and unanimously accepted. Since the fourth of the preceding August the people had ceased to be taillable and corveable, i.e., taxable and ratable—at the mercy of the upper classes, and on this first of December they ceased to be tortuable at the mercy of venal judges. Dr. Guillotin had suggested and brought about the absolute equality of prisoners irrespective of rank, position or crime. Henceforward decapitation ceased to be as much of an hereditary privilege as that of grade in the army, or the entry to Versailles.

As a matter of fact, Dr. Guillotin had not even the merit—such as it was of designing the dreadful instrument of death. The actual designer of the guillotine was another physician, Dr. Antoine Louis, who was invested with the task of devising a method of painless and instaneous execution. Dr. Louis was painstaking and conscientious in his task, as the following extract will show:

"It is in the highest degree desired that defective means, inexperience or other agencies should be avoided, by which the death penalty is rendered more horrible to the criminal and the person of the executioner infamous to the people." Louis then designed a machine, and his designs were executed by a skilled mechanic named Schmidt. The machine was first known as the Louisette, but the prevalence in France of the names Louis and Louise led to the substitution of Guillotine after the name of the man who had first proposed a more humane instrument of execution.

The story does not end here. Dr. Guillotin must have been in many ways a very exceptionable man. When some of the very great figures of the revolution survived to quieter times were asked how they lived through the terror, they summed up their careers at that dreadful epoch by saying: "We managed to keep our heads on our necks." It might well have been possible for Dr. Guillotin to have lost his head through the very instrument he had himself suggested. And when reaction triumphed equally he might have been sacrificed because of the unconscious part he had played in helping the massacre of so many of the ancient nobility. Or he might have had another fate. He might have died of the ridicule which in France is said to kill. But he suffered none of these things. When his brief, but memorable political career came to an end, he settled down to the practice of his profession, was a tranquil, philosophical kind of a man, and knew his business. He took no notice either of the hatred or the raillery by which his name was assailed. So he lived through the consulate, he lived through the empire and did not die till 1814, a few days before Napoleon abdicated at Fontainebleau for the first time. But though he managed to survive everything, monarchy, the terror, Napoleon, ridicule, hatred, Dr. Guillotin never entirely lost his sense of grief and shame that he, the best intentioned of men, gave his name to the most terrible of human instruments. There is a picture of him in his old age, which is pathetic: "M. Guillotin," writes a friend, "could never console himself for what he called the involuntary blot on his career. His venerable features wore an expression of great sadness, his hair had been bleached by anxiety. In endeavoring to mitigate the suffering of humanity, he felt that he had unwittingly been the means of destroying many lives." And he had nothing to do after all with the guillotine. How lucky for Dr. Antoine Louis that he had a name too uncommon, or that the honest German mechanic Schmidt, had a name too unusual in France, to be perpetuated. And people of modern times and of the days of the guillotine forgot that it was a substitute for breakings on the wheel, mutilations, burning and the other unutterable tortures of the days before the revolution.

HOW TO USE BROOMS

A broom should be hung up and not allowed to stand on the floor as this latter treatment will shorten its life materially. Again, it should be used in sweeping with a brisk, brushing motion and should not be pushed before one so that the work must all be done by one side of the broom. Nothing so quickly breaks the corn and shortens the life of a broom as this. It pays too, to buy a good broom. They last longer and are so much more satisfactory in the end that it more than makes up for the little difference in price.

Free Business Lots AT CHIN

Chin needs a

Hotel and General Store

The first applicant who will contract to provide either a hotel or a general store that will meet the requirements of this new town will be presented with two regular lots right in the center of the town absolutely free.

This advertisement is published in only a few towns near Chin, where no argument is necessary to show the opportunity offered. Somebody will grab up both chances quickly.

Remember! The first man to sign up with us gets the free lots. Your chance is as good as the next man's if you act at once.

The sale of business and residence lots is now on in earnest.

Chin has as good prospects for growth and increase in value as Warner which we started years ago and which has had over 300% increase on real estate values. The surrounding farming community is demanding this town of Chin. They are anxious to have a nearer market than Lethbridge 18½ miles and Taber 13½ miles away.

Two lumber yards are established. An elevator is assured and the immediate success of the town is certain.

Don't Delay if you want a good business lot free for a hotel or a general store. First man to qualify and sign contract for each to be the lucky fellow.

Three Lots Free

To stimulate immediate sales we are going to give away three lots. Every purchaser of a lot, regardless of price, will stand a chance of getting a present of a lot, by guessing the nearest number of lots sold up to the time the fifty per cent increase takes place.

The first purchaser to guess the exact number, or nearest to the exact number of lots sold will receive a $500.00 lot, the second nearest in number will receive the $300.00 and the third one the $100.00 lot.

A Fifty Per Cent Increase Assured

Four months from the date of the first payment registered, the prices of lots throughout the town of Chin will be advanced one half regardless of any condition that may exist at that time. This fact assures every purchaser a profit of at least fifty per cent as he can at once re-list his lots for sale by our company.

There is no chance to lose and absolutely 50 per cent to gain and possibly considerably more.

If you want a good investment or a good business opening sign the coupon. Residence lots $25.00 to $200.00; business lots, $100.00 to $500.00.

Good Roads

The public meeting to be held this evening is of vital importance to citizens of Medicine Hat, and will doubtless draw a large number of ratepayers to the city hall. While we believe the chairmen of the various committees will have a good report to mak? of their year's work, it is well for us to examine their record carefully and be sure that they have been good stewards. Several of them are seeking re-election and should be re-elected on their merits or not at all. The past year has been an important one in the development of the city. A school building, "greater than has been", so far as Medicine Hat is concerned has been begun. More than twice as much sewer pipe has been laid this year than we had at the beginning of it. Sewer construction is expensive work. Two miles of water mains have been laid, and it will be interesting to know the cost per foot of sewer construction and water mains compared with previous years. The financial report will be of interest in showing the financial standing of the city. The water works system has been put on a self-sustaining basis, and we want to know the detailt of the scheme. A new gas well was bored and the public work is not without an interesting history. Let us show an interest in the city's welfare by our attendance at the meeting.

Public Meeting

The condition of the roads leading to the city is one in which the city has considerable interest. While primarily it is the business of the local improvement districts concerned it is also the city's interest if not the city's business, as business interests suffer from bad roads. The main road leading to the city from the south-east over Porter's Hill, is in a deplorable condition and the trade of the south-east country is being driven to Irvine because of this. We are not in such an enviable position as to be able to afford to drive trade from our doors. City street grading will be an important public work next year; and a policy which will do something for the public highways leading to the city ought to be incorporated into our street grading policy. Very often the local improvement districts concerned do not act promptly enough to meet the situation as their interests are not so vitally affected as are those of the city. Let us co-operate wich them in securing better highways and let us not wait for them to act but begin the agitation at this end.

The nominations yesterday brought no great surprise to any who followed the municipal doings closely. It was evident some time ago that there was no great scramble for municipal honors. F. G. Forster's nomination for Ward I and W. H. Bridgeman's for Ward IV were not widely expected, but neither will they bring regrets from many. The personnel of the council insures us good business ability for the management of next year's business.

Wooden vs. Cast Iron Pipes

The water supply of the Alberta Clay Products Co. has been turned on. Eleven hundred feet of pipe have been used in the extension of which 450 feet are cast iron pipe, the rest being of wood. The commissioners are seriously contemplating the adoption of cast iron pipe alone for future use, as it is found that the latter can be laid as cheaply if not more so than wooden pipe, when the amount of labor and time spent in the repairing of leaks is taken into consideration.

CHRISTMAS MAILS

(Winnipeg Telegram)

With each recurring Christmas season the postoffice is called upon to do a vast amount of extra work in the distribution of mail. The employees upon whom this labor falls do it conscientiously and cheerfully enough but the public nevertheless would do well to get their Christmas parcels into the post office as soon as possible. If this is done the labor is spread over four or five weeks instead of being concentrated into two. This means not only greater comfort for the employees but greater security against the danger of delay.

Especially should a warning on this point be heeded at Winnipeg where the postoffice is called upon to handle an almost uncountable number of parcels to Great Britain and Europe, as well as an almost equally large number received here from the same sources. No other postoffice in Canada has anything like the quantity of foreign mail in proportion to population.

With each succeeding year the work here gets larger. It is pleasing to know that the immigrants from other lands remember the loved ones at home. The tokens of regard which pass to and fro, each of them bearing a fond memory, are things which from one point of view are almost sacred in their nature, but the prosaic fact remains that, if they are to be delivered in time they must be posted in time. Get your Christmas mailing done early, like your Christmas shopping.

OUR PROPOSED NAVY

(The Mail and Empire)

The solem assurance given us by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that our navy is not to take part in Empire defence until parliament has decided upon the merits of the war suggests many interesting situations. It is probable for example, that the war may come at a time when parliament is not sitting. We cannot expect the enemy to wait for the verdict of our assembled wisdom before going on with the fight, although of course a really polite antagonist would pursue such a course towards us. The chances are then, that our Bristols, unless hauled ashore to keep them out of the way of harm, will have to surrender in which event they will add to the force on the other side. That this will be a very effective contribution to the defence of the empire cannot surely be maintained.

Perchance, however, Parliament may get into session in time to make a pronouncement upon the issue which brings the British Empire into conflict with another power. Should it decide not to let the navy participate, it will at once be said that Britain's premier dominion has declared against her, and there can be little doubt that the moral effect of such a position will be considerable. After determining not to help because the war is unjust, can we continue to fly the flag? It would not be prudent to do so on the high seas, where ships of the enemy are numerous and powerful. The enemy would of course capture every undefended vessel flying the Union Jack, and ours would be undefended, because we could not honestly expect Britain to protect them after we had formally asserted that we were not prepared to help protect her. Nor could we use the flag in our harbors Canadian ports would not be exempt from attack so long as that flag was flying. It would be necessary then to get some other flag—and everybody knows what that means. But there is another view of this question, which an expert treats of in a letter to the Halifax Herald. The Imperial government asked us to make a direct contribution—money or a ship—to the navy, or, if that should not be agreeable, to have a little fleet of our own, with an Indomitable, a battleship of the cruiser type, as the principal factor. The fleet it was suggested, should work harmonously with the Royal navy, and be at the call of the crown if trouble should come. We are not following either of these recommendations, but, on the contrary, are arranging to get two or three small armored cruisers and some torpedo boat defenders to patrol our coasts, and to be loaned to the Empire if we happen to approve of the war. Now the expert says, naval warfare has undergone a change in recent years. No longer is the small vessel of use, except as a sort of auxiliary or helper in a large fleet, or as a police vessel in times of peace. Were there to be war a large vessel of the enemy could stand ten miles outside of Halifax and shell the city and our Bristols could not make the slightest impression upon that one ship. In fact, the best thing to do with the Bristols, under such circumstances, would be to scuttle them and thus keep them out of reach of the enemy until the war is over.

But what is the use of having a navy that has to take refuge under water if trouble comes? These considerations must be looked into by the country before the matter is finally settled. What we are faced with a view to perfecting imperial defence. Is the acquisition of three unarmoured ships with a few defenders—none of which are to be used unless Parliament has decided that the war is just—a reasonable response to that proposition? Is a scheme which the Admiralty does not want the proper scheme for us to embark upon? May we not be be more selective and yet not spend any such sum as that which the policy of Bristols that are not to be used unless parliament so orders, imposes upon the people?

Bronchitis Cured.

Miss Martha Fourget, Little Falls, Que., writes: "Last spring I was very poorly, had a bad cough, sick headache, could not sleep, and was tired all the time. I consulted two doctors, and both told me I had bronchitis, and advised me to give up teaching. I tried almost everything but none of the medicines gave me any relief. One of my friends advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I had scarcely taken the first bottle when I began to get better and when I had taken the fourth bottle I felt as well as ever my cough had left me and I could sleep well."

Dr. Wood's is the original Pine Syrup. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents. There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" so be sure you receive the genuine when you ask for it.

"The Gate To Ruin"

Royal Templars Achieve Another Success in Moral Drama

On Tuesday of last week when the Royal Templars of Temperance presented the Temperance drama "The Gate to Ruin," the house was crowded to the doors, the audience being in fact the largest that has gathered in the opera house since the spring of the year, when the first amateur performance in Medicine Hat, the production of "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" was given by them. On both occasions they made a signal triumph. Last Tuesday a number of the leading characters in "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" again took strong roles, and although many actors of the former play could not again be secured their parts were ably filled, and altogether the production was a highly creditable one. If in the acting itself the standard of the original play were not surpassed it was because the standard then set was an uncommonly high one.

Only three or four rehearsals with a full company had been possible before the night of the performance, and three members of the company had to be replaced at the last minute, but in spite of the unusual difficulties encountered the performance passed off without a hitch.

During the past decade a notable change has taken place in the character of the theatre both in Britain and in America. The influence of the realistic school has been widely felt, and the discussion of social problems on the stage is a characteristic of the serious plays of today. While the play of a purely realistic character still finds the greatest favor with the public, there is a demand, greater perhaps than ever before, for drama whose appeal is intellectual or moral. In introducing amateur dramatic art to this city the Royal Templars have performed a signal service which local playgoers have not been slow to appreciate. One could wish that in future productions they might cover a larger field, basing their appeal on a somewhat wider ground than has yet been attempted.

On Tuesday the Royal Templars had again secured a number of talented specialty artistes who kept the audience in a continuous state of enjoyment between the acts, so that not a dull moment was experienced. The orchestra, under the able management of Dr. Smith, gave their services, being strengthened by many additions. It is no affectation to say that, for a local orchestra, it would be hard to surpass this company of talented musicians in the Canadian West. Mr. C. S. Pingle conducted and the following were the instrumentalists:

2nd Violins—Mrs. W. B. Marshall, Mr. Morris, Mr. E. S. Hodges.
Cello—Dr. C. F. Smith.
1st Cornet—J. W. McCulla.
Euphonium—Mr. Thomas Wood.
Piano—Mrs. C. F. Smith.

Mr. C. G. Milne rendered Harry Lauder songs with admirable skill of characterization and the enthusiastic applause he received was well deserved.

The delightfully clever dance (a sailor's hornpipe) by Professor Gilray brought a demand for a repeat to which a response was gracefully given. Prof. Gilray, who is now paying a visit to his sister, Mrs. W. J. Johnson, spent the summer and fall in carrying out an engagement at the Seattle exposition.

Mr. Gray gave a banjo specialty which was highly appreciated.

The casts in the play itself was well selected, and in several cases quite unusual dramatic talent was shown.

The character of John Farley, the tavern keeper, was portrayed by Mr. E. S. Frost, with all the strength and skill which he displayed in a similar role in the play of last spring. Like Slade of "Ten Nights in a Bar-Room," Farley was of the type of complacent citizens, who cannot imagine that there is anything wrong with either themselves or their world. But disillusionment came and the consequences of his conduce recoiled upon him, it was against the world that his spirit rose in revolt, and his remorse was as sordid as his former complacency. As Mrs. Farley, Miss Jean Dunham had not a role giving very wide scope but the part was excellently performed.

In the role of Thornley, the weak fall in carrying out an engagement but well-intentioned young man, leads him to the verge of ruin, Mr. W. G. Raby showed real ability of portraiture. As the drunkard's wife Miss Mabyl Bellamy proved herself an actress of high merit, and in the bar room scenes where she makes powerful appeals to the latent manhood of her husband, there was a suggestion of underlying depths of emotion.

Mr. B. W. Bellamy played with his usual ability the part of the serio-comic rustic with high theatrical aspirations, and more than sustained his reputation as a highly accomplished comedian. The local hits were irresistibly funny. Mrs. Bellamy's Nettie Nettleby, the gossiping damsel with a propensity for "making folks happy," could scarcely have been better. She treated the part freshly with a good deal of humorous invention.

Mr. Ed. Forbes again took the villain role—a very heavy part which he performed most creditably through out. Another heavy part was that of Dr. Slater, the man of the world, who while responsible in large measure for the degradation of his weaker and less sophisticated friend, yet took a course in obedience to his higher instincts which ultimately led to Thornley's reclamation. Mr. J. D Snowdon appeared in the character and proved himself admirably suited to the part.

To Mr. S. Bannon's lot fell the role of moralist—surely the most thankless task of all—he played with restraint and escaped the usual fate of the stage moralist—degeneration into a stage prig.

The scenery for the production was purchased from the Allan players at the close of their recent run here, and no pains or expense had been spared to make the setting complete in every way. The numerous costumes were well selected.

The Royal Templars are considering the production of another play in the spring, in behalf of some public object. While the play has not yet been decided upon it is understood that they will not in this case confine themselves to a temperance subject.

An Open Letter from Santa Claus to the People of Medicine Hat and Southern Alberta

My Dear People,—

As Christmas approaches I decided to take a run to Southern Alberta, and see how you were provided for Christmas. After taking a good look at all the stores, I decided to make my headquarters again. As you know I have been there for the past several years, and am very glad they still make it possible for me to stay.

I find this year they have a better stock than ever selected and collected from all parts of the world. The children are particularly well looked after; in fact, you can find something for everyone young and old. Now my advice is—

Go to the Home Goods Store (Toronto Street) as quickly as possible make your selection while the stock is complete, and if you do not want it at once have it delivered later

Wishing you all a very Merry Xmas,

Santa Claus

Life and Labor

Illustrations drawn from literature of the political situation in England are numerous in the present great fight for the liberation of the common people from the chains of an outworn feudalism. One of the best of Anatole France the story of is drawn from that exquisite satire "Penguin Society" which is translated from the French for the Manchester Guardian. The first parliament of the Penguins has assembled. It is the eve of an important division on a national issue. Greatank hobiest of the Penguin aristocracy has taken his seat on the biggest stone. The question concerns national taxation and the distribution of the burden. It is suggested by the venerable monk who was the originator of the idea of a Penguin state that each should contribute according to his wealth. "A man who owns 100 oxen will give ten; he who owns 10 will give one." At this point Morio a Penguin of great wealth rises to address the assembly:

"O my father," he begins, "I hold it to be just for everyone to contribute to the public expenses and to those of the church. For my own part I am willing to strip myself of all I possess in the interest of my brother Penguins, if need be down to my very shirt. All the Elders of the people are ready, like myself, to offer up their goods; and their absolute devotion to their country and their religion is beyond question. We have therefore only to consider the public interest, and to do what it ordains. Now what it ordains, my father, what it requires, is not to ask much of those who possess a great deal; for then the rich would be less rich and the poor poorer. The poor live on the wealth of the rich; that is why the wealth is sacred. Do not lay a finger on it! You would commit a wanton crime. If you took from the rich you would gain little, for their numbers are few; and you would strip yourselves of all resources by plunging the country in misery. Whereas if you require a trifle from every inhabitant, without reference to the amount of his property, you will collect enough for public needs, and you will not have to inquire into the extent of the possessions of the citizens, who would regard any inquisition of this nature as odiously vexatious. By laying a light and equal burden upon all you will spare the poor, since you will leave them the wealth of the rich. And how can a tax possibly be proportioned to wealth? Yesterday I had 200 oxen, today I have 60, tomorrow I may have one hundred. Clunic has three cows but they are lean; Nicclu has only two, but they are fat. Which is the richer man? The signs of wealth are delusive The one certain thing is that everybody eats and drinks. Tax people according to what they consume! That will be the wise course, and that the just."

The grave Peguin Elders applaud. "I move that this speech be engraved on bronze tablets," cried one. "It is spoken for the future; 1,500 years hence the best people among the Peguins will use these identical arguments."

While the applause still continues Greatauk, his hand on his sword hilt, briefly declares:

"Being noble, I shall not contribute, for to contribute it ignoble. It is the business of the mob to pay."

And the concourse of great Elders separate in silence.

The parable is applicable to the present day, when noble lords prophesy the "destruction of the Empire, and the End of All Things," as the result of the greatest attempt in British history to cope with the problem of poverty and to distribute the burden of taxation according to Adam Smith's principle of relative "ability to bear" among the various classes of the community.

Distribution of Information

There is no dispute in our time in regard to the amount of information that is being circulated in regard to agriculture for a mass of information lies stored up in books, bulletins, offices and in other various ways, which if it could be thoroughly and expeditiously carried to the most useful points, would do a vast amount of good.

It has been said that the capacity of the human being for keeping out knowledge is tremendous, and there is little doubt that there is some truth in this; but the capacity of all humans for absorbing knowledge is not equal always so that in many cases the results of discoveries and experiment are often placed before many in such highly technical form that it is beyond their capacity to comprehend them.

When studying certain questions we push along bit by bit often being long in the dark as to the real reason of things we are trying to understand, and it may be only after careful observation extending over weeks, months or years that we arrive at some measure of daylight. It is impossible to impart a lucid exposition of our discoveries in a one or two hour lecture, to those who have never attempted to go over the preliminary ground that we may have gone over. So that what seems to be at present lacking in our methods of imparting farm knowledge, are simple and direct means of placing rapidly before the farmers the results of benefits of discoveries of better methods of culture.

We find that the majority of the human race do not study much beyond a certain point and few progress much beyond learning enough to just carry them along and then read novels or go to the theatre for relaxation or wander about the streets. Others are anxious to learn but cannot spare the time to go away from home, but which may sometimes be necessary in order to acquire extra knowledge. But there is nothing to prevent us in the future from carrying advanced and higher education into the districts where this can be of practical use to our farmers.

The greatest fault in our agricultural education of the past has been isolation, its too great remoteness from where it was needed in daily work all over the countries where it should have been available. The agricultural knowledge stored up has been so far very much like the water in a reservoir, that has been stored up but with little or no means supplied of running it out through supply pipes to where it was most needed. The continuance of investigation, elaborating research and propounding dogmas might almost as well stop if the results of discoveries and object lessons of better methods cannot be placed in a practical way before those who should benefit by them.

Only a limited number of our farmers would use highly specialized formulae, or any very elaborate meant of bettering conditions and most of these can hunt up what information they require, but it is in order to help the rank and file, the ones that start in a small way, that have many cares on them and to whom every minute of time is precious in the struggle for existence. So that we need simple, direct methods of instruction in better modes of agriculture.

A jaunt around an experimental farm is intensely interesting to many of but it takes some training and study, and a good deal of acquired experience before going on such a visit to enable a man to grasp the meaning of many of the problems or to form a really solid idea of the value of the success or failure of tests. Unless the average man can afford to stay some time at the experimental farm, he cannot absorb enough in one visit to do him very much good, though if he keeps his eyes and ears open, he can, of course learn something. Another thing to be considered, the experimental farms are only within easy reach of a certain number.

The results of experiments, made at the experiment stations, will have to be further exploited at trial farms scattered much more profusely throughout our provinces, where the trial plots or fields shall be confined to the trying out of not more than a few different methods with each crop in any one year, and where the crops harvested would pay the expenses or nearly so of running such farms.

One or two farmers institute meetings per year in any one district, and which, perhaps, ten per cent. of the resident farmers attend, are not nearly enough to do us any good. We need also competent advisory instructors during the working part of the year, that could travel about and give demonstrations in the fields of cultivating land or could gather a few farmers together and go over their trials and troubles with them in a personal way; at the same time distributing as much as possible of the accumulated agricultural knowledge as farmers could absorb.

Our neighbors to the south of us have been going into this matter and they find that:

"The failure of our institutions to make a perceptible impression upon the increase in bushels per acre is not due to incapacity in dealing with the lines of work in which they are engaged, but in their insufficient number and inadequate equipment and means of support. For instance in a State like Pennsylvania, what can one institution do in the education of six millions people in agriculture when its efforts are confined to the students in its class rooms and are limited to a few thousand dollars for equipment and employment of instruction force.

It has been found that to secure an intelligent citizenship education must be general. In like manner to secure an efficient agriculture, accurate information respecting it must be put in possession of the masses of farmers and not confined to the fraction of less than one ten thousandth of one per cent. who are able to leave home and attend an agricultural college. The instruction, to be effective in increasing crop production, will have to be extended beyond the college walls to the people out at work, and be fitted for their use.

If, also, anything like rapid improvement in our agriculture is to be made it will have to be through a more substantial form of instruction than our present farmers' institutes provide, which meet only a small number of farmers for a day or two each year, and then furnish them only one or two periods of instruction of forty minutes each upon any single topic. If the mass of the farmers is to be instructed in the science and mystery of agriculture the information will have to be given scattering broadcast bulletins and in some more effective way than by reports upon agricultural subjects which only the already well-to-do and educated read.

If we are to have better agriculture, one that will expand and meet the needs of all of the generations yet to come, we must do more than increase superficial acreage; we must make each acre increase its product as the needs of mankind require. In short, we must extend our acres downward.

How far this may be done is illustrated by well-authenticated instances of maximum crop production in the United States. Sixty bushels of wheat have been grown per acre; 71 buthels of barley; 254 bushels of shelled corn; 800 bushels of potatoes 900 bushels of strawberries and 12 tons of hay. While these are exceptional harvests, yet they illustrate possibilities of agriculture in these several directions.

What can be done and has been done upon a large scale in crop production by the use of proper methods is illustrated by reports from foreign countries.

If the averages therefore are selected from the most productive years of the seven foreign countries, France, Germany, Great Britain, Ireland, Sweden, Belgium and the Netherlands, out of three years, 1903, 1904 and 1905, the increase is applied to the five crops in the United States, wheat, oats, rye, barley and potatoes, as reported in the census of 1900 would represent an additional value of $812,253,344, or 109.86 per cent., and if this percentage is applied to the entire crop production of this country it would amount to an increase of $3,197,078,835, over the reported aggregate yield for that year.

This increased average production by foreign countries over the United States is not because of any inherent or naturally superior properties of the soil or climate abroad, but is due to the systematic methods pursued in carrying information respecting improved agricultural operations directly to the farming people.

It is a matter worthy of special note that most of the information given in these countries to farmers is through personal teaching, advice and instruction, and not through bulletins and books. This fact is the more significant in that it is a radical departure from the methods pursued in the United States which has thus far depended almost solely in the dissemination of agricultural information upon the printed page, and the slow progress that has been made in agricultural improvement in the United States has no doubt been largely due to the fact that the information that the bulletins, pamphlets and other printed matter has not been brought through living, personal teachers directly to the attention of those whom it is specially intended to benefit.

The movement therefore, that looks towards the placing of the living teacher in direct contact with the tiller of the soil through the farmers' institutes, the movable school of agriculture, and the itinerant advisory professor, as well as the teaching of agricultural subjects in the public schools is in the right direction, and is in conformity with the best practice and most successful results secured after many years of experiment in foreign countries.—Alberta Homestead.

On Friday last the first through train from the coast for about a week came into the city bringing the long-delayed coast mail. Several trains which had been stalled were started on their eastern journey after a long delay. Mudslides and washouts due to heavy rains caused the delay in traffic.

England Seeks Our Trade

D. M. Coughlin of Montreal, spent some weeks in London with the English manufacturers, and exporters, and in an interview, given to the Montreal Star on his return, said:

"Last year Great Britain sold to Canada merchandise to the value of £19,062,748, while the United States sold £42,957,453 worth, notwithstanding the preferential tariff which allows British merchandise to enter Canada with 33 1-3 per cent less duty than the merchandise of any other country. This striking contrast between the trade of the two countries with Canada is beginning to be brought home to the British people.

The British manufacturer and merchant are becoming more and more interested in the Canadian market every day. A few years ago it was almost impossible to get an interview with one of them while today the Canadian with something to say receives a warm welcome from the head of the house.

While in England I called on several of the larger manufacturers and discussed with them plans for the promotion of their businesses in Canada. Where on the former occasions I met with indifference, this time there was an eagerness to learn about our trade prospects, and in more than one instance I found large firms with elaborate plans drawn up for an invasion of Canada with their products.

The difference to the Canadian market is fast disappearing, and the change is due largely to the persistent and hard work done amongst the British manufacturers by the advertising men from Canada, who have been trying to awaken in them a realization of the splendid opportunities that have in this country.

For years they have been trying to do business in Canada the way they do in Australia without taking into account the difference in location between the two countries. The Australian, having no United States beside him, finds England his most convenient source of supply, and the British manufacturer has only to send out his address and await results. He has, as more than one of them told me, tried the same thing in Canada, but while he was sitting in his office awaiting results, the Yankee drummer, backed by an advertising campaign to the consumer, came in and took the orders.

As I have said the Canadian advertising men have been hard at work setting the Britisher on the right track, and their labors are ginning to bear fruit. I might say I found the trail of the Montreal Star well marked through the business centres of London, where it has been doing good work, in placing before the English manufacturers facts concerning Canada, and the opportunities this country offers to them for trade expansions.

During the next year several new English firms will be exploiting this market in a vigorous way, and they will be forging out goods better suited to Canadian trade than we have been accustomed to in the past.

At the Canadian emigration office I was told that the bookings for this year's flood of settlers is the greatest they have ever had, and that the people who are coming are all of a superior class and many of them have considerable means.

The popular impression that the Britisher is slow-going and conservative in the exercise is soon dispelled when one gets an opportunity to meet the men who have built up the enormous trade of England. For my part I have found them just as alert as the best we have in America, and when it comes to doing a real stunt the Englishman can give the most of us yards and beat us at the finish. We had an instance of this on leaving New York, which is worth recording.

A young Englishman anxious to go home, where he had only a few days to spend after some years absence, arrived in New York late the night 10 before the Caronia sailed. As soon as he could next morning, he made his way to the steamship office to find that the ship had just left the dock, and was on her way down the harbor. Most of us would have cursed our luck and let it go at that, but the 'slow' Britisher could not be outdone so easily. Jumping into a taxicab he speeded down to the dock chartered an idle tug, and gave us chase. Coming in as close as possible he waved his hat and called to the captain to stop the ship till he got on board. Not knowing what was the matter, the engines were shut down, the ship brought to, and the young Englishman boarded the great liner, scaling the ladder like a pirate king. As soon as he reached the deck he coolly lighted a cigarette, and having neither money or ticket convenient paid for his passage with a cheque.

As the captain very aptly put it, no one but an Englishman would have the nerve to hold up a steamship. Such a thing has never been done before within his knowledge for there were few people who regarded ocean liners as on a level with trolley cars, to be stopped at the will of a passenger. To all of which the Englishman replied that his leave of absence allowed him only ten days at home, and he was bound to get there even if he had to swim.

It is this utter disregard of the apparently impossible that has been getting the Britisher there every 9 out of 10 times. Now that he is turning towards Canada in earnest, it will not be surprising if in a few years there is a complete reversal of the trade returns as they stand today.

tions. The Toronto news referring to one of the Ontario agricultural colleges, says that no money spent by the Ontario government yields better returns. So varied and elective are the activities of such an institution that it vitally touches the agricultural industry in every phase of its existence. New knowledge of immense economic value to the country is continually acquired. The science of chemistry and bacteriology are practically applied to every department of agricultural development. A perpetual war is waged against the multifarious pests and diseases which attack the fruit, grain, vegetables and live stock. The best methods of preparing dairy products and fruit for market are explained. Progress is being made in the beautification of school yards and homesteads, and altogether a great deal is being done to advance economic, social and aesthetic conditions throughout the entire community. Intensive farming is encouraged to the exclusion of cheap, wasteful, extensive farming, and thereby the general prosperity is materially increased. The farmers are stimulated to engage in fruit-growing, dairying, and in the production of bacon and poultry, because these enable a given area of country to yield more revenue and support a large population than do mere beef-grazing and wheat growing.

TO DECIDE THE NAVAL QUESTION

The Canadian Courier makes the following suggestion as to the best way of testing the feeling of the country in regard to the naval issue. The result so far as Alberta and the west are concerned is not for the moment in doubt, and were Mr. Magrath to contest this constituency on that question alone the result would be overwhelmingly in favor of a contribution to the British navy. The people of the west prefer the arts of peace to those of war, but they do not wish to shirk the duty of Imperial defence.

The article in the Courier reads as follows:

"While the opinion of the writer is strongly in favor of a Canadian navy, he sympathises with those who think that the Canadian people, not Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. R. L. Borden, should have decided the question. This is the method which the Britisher adopts. For example, let Mr. C. A. Magrath, member for the constituency of Medicine Hat, offer to resign his seat and contest the constituency with a man, Liberal or Conservative, who is in favor of a Canadian navy rather than a cash contribution to the British naval fund. Let them agree beforehand that this is to be the main topic for argument, and that no other is to be discussed. It would be a pretty fight, and the result would give a fair idea of the feeling of the people of Alberta. Let the same be done in Quebec, and others in the Maritime Provinces, Ontario and Manitoba.

It is hardly necessary to add a referendum on the question, although if the House of Commons thought it advisable such a proposal would be quite possible. The question is the largest and most important that has been up for decision in recent years and a referendum to the people would create much discussion and interest. The objection to it is that it would be expensive and would relieve members of a responsibility which they are, under acknowledged practice, entitled to assume. On the whole, we would prefer to see a few by-elections in representative constituencies. The educative effect would be almost as great as the expense would be bagatelle."

COLONIAL SENTIMENT IS AGAINST LORDS

The Earl of Crewe, winding up the debate in the house of lords, asked what their lordships thought their fellow citizens all over the empire would think of what they were doing that night. Their action would be absolutely unintelligible to men of all parties in the self-governing colonies of the crown. (Ministerial cheers). It was so alien to the spirit of their constitutions, and so foreign to their universal practice that if their lordships were right and the country condoned what they were doing, their fellow subjects would not look to the mother of parliaments, but they would ask if citizens of the old country were altogether fitted for the exercise of responsible government. (Ministerial cheers and opposition laughter).

The Portland Oregonian, of Portland, Oregon, published the following in its issue of Oct. 5th, 1909:

LOSING AMERICAN CITIZENS

The exodus of American farmers to Canada continues to be a phenomenon of the first importance. More of them are crossing the border this fall than ever before, and they are flocking thither from all parts of the country. Formerly it was the Middle West alone which thus lost the heart of its citizenship. Now all sections of the Union suffer alike. The 70,000 farmers who will go to Canada to live this fall will take with them some $70,000,000 in cash and effects. This is by no means a needless sum. But, of course, the most serious loss is the men themselves and their families, who have forsaken the land of the free and the home of the brave to dwell under the rule of a monarch.

Why do they go? Naturally the cheap and fereile land of western Canada attracts them. Each emigrant goes with a reasonable expectation of bettering his fortune. Indeed, in a few years he may grow rich through abundant crops that he can raise and the increase of land values. But perhaps this is not the only reason for this astonishing migration. There is a common notion abroad that in Canada life and property are appreciably safer than they are here. Murders are not so frequent, and are more speedily and surely punished. Mobs and the so-called 'unwritten law' are virtually unknown in Canada. Again, the law is a vastly more ascertainable entity there. Canada does not permit its judges to veto acts of the legislative bodies. When a statute has been enacted it is known to be the law of the land until it is repealed. This naturally imparts to Canadian civilization a security and stability which we have not yet attained.

We must remember, in the same connection, that the Canadian protective tariff is far less exorbitant than ours, and much less boldly arranged for the benefit of special favorites. Hence there is an impression very widely diffused, that the Canadians are not so wickedly robbed by trusts as we are in this country. Reasons like these sufficiently account for the exodus of a body of citizens, whom we can ill afford to lose, but they do not much assuage our regret that they cannot be retained in the United States.

GRADING STOPS

The grading crew on the Weyburn-Lethbridge line have concluded their work for this season. On Saturday, the outfits were brought in and loaded on cars for shipment to a point north where a little work will be done before the season closes. The job which they go to is a small rush job which the C. P. R. must complete this fall. The work has progressed finely on the western extension and it is the intention of the company to begin as early as possible next spring in rushing the line through to Lethbridge. The bridge gang are still busy and will continue at work until all bridge work is done. The farmers in the district through which the road has already been built are being benefited as much grain has been shipped from the new towns which have sprung up along the line. They report that good prices are being paid for grain and they are saved a long haul to market. Early in the season it was thought that a portion of the grading crew and outfit would remain during winter months. Since it is necessary to move to another point the entire gang will be taken and will go into winter quarters else-

WIRELESS ON GREAT LAKES

Fort William, Dec. 1—Wireless telegraphy was in full operation in Fort William last night between 8 and 10 o'clock when Operator Howard Fenning of the United Wireless company, demonstrated the ability of the system on the steamer Bope, which is tied up at the coal dock awaiting orders to load a cargo of grain. For two hours the operator sent messages, received them, and gave a general idea of how the wireless system is worked. The first message to be sent from Fort William was sent to the Evening Herald, Duluth by the Morning Herald.

Had Weak Back.

Would Often Lie in Bed For Days, Scarcely Able To Turn Herself.

Mrs. Arch. Schnare, Black Point, N.B., writes:—"For years I was troubled with weak back. Oftentimes I have lain in bed for days, being scarcely able to turn myself, and I have also been a great sufferer while trying to perform my household duties. I had doctors attending me without avail and tried liniments and plasters, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was about to give up in despair when my husband induced me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after using two boxes I am now well and able to do my work. I am positive Doan's Kidney Pills are all that you claim for them, and I would advise all kidney sufferers to give them a fair trial."

The Good Old Fashion.

An Essay in the Direction of the Better Enjoyment of Yuletide Festivities by F. Raymond Coulson

(From the Busy Man's Magazine)

"Give everybody's love to everybody so that nobody may be aggrieved by anybody being forgotten by somebody." Those are my sentiments about Christmas. For I am an astonishing old-fashioned person. And in spite of repeated assurances that Christmas is decaying, I am convinced that the entire populace of the British Isles (and of the Britains beyond the seas) are astonishingly old-fashioned persons too.

It is one of the little affectations of this foolish young century that Christmas is played out, that its sentiment has departed, and that it has become a nuisance and a bore. But if that is the case, how is it that at this season we expend ten million golden sovereigns in Good Cheer? How is it that eighteen million Christmas puddings steam on festive boards, and that the mistoe bough is still thoughtfully suspended in convenient situations?

"Do you know that you are dying fast?" demands the New Age, addressing Father Christmas.

"Am I?" exclaims that surprised old gentleman—a remarkably hale hale old gentleman, with a twinkle in his eye. "Then what is the meaning of these gay decorations, these happy throngs, these crowded toy shops, and this magnificent display of turkeys?" And Father Christmas laughs—a good natured, robustious laugh, the goes rousing responsive echoes all round the world.

We know that make believe cynic, that ineffectual pretender, who actively employs himself at this time of year in proclaiming that Christmas is a depressing nuisance, and that he will be profoundly glad when it is over. But cast an observant eye on the doings of this supercilious person. Do you find them supporting his protestations? Do you find him holding haughtily aloof, treating Christmas and its merry-making with disdain? Do you find him on Christmas Day austerely sitting down to a mutton chop or a frugal repast of cold meat and pickles?

No! You find him boisterously sending up his plate for a second helping of turkey, and exhibiting special gusto in regard to the accompanying sausages. You find him hilariously merry, with a paper cap on his head, pulling crackers smoking big cigars, pledging everybody in wassail, and making strenuous efforts to entice the prettiest young lady in the company under the mistletoe. And later on you will find him the life and soul soul of the party, lustily singing songs, playing hunt the slipper, propounding ingenious conundrums, and superintending the snap-dragon.

We know those sombre misanthropes who dispise Christmas, and assure us contemptuously that it is obsolete. We meet them going home on Christmas Eve, veritable Father Christmasses themselves, with bulging pockets, bulky parcels, and beaming countenances. We meet them at the toy emporium, absorbed in the mechanism of talking dolls and the clock trains. We meet them intently gazing into the windows of jewelers' shops at nice little gold lockets and chains and pendants bearing the intimation "Suitable for Christmas Presents." We meet them at the poulterer's pointing at the largest goose on the hook, and inquiring—"What does that weigh?" We meet them at the wine merchan's ordering mellow port, and ginger wine, and Benedictine from the monastery. And these are the people who call the Christmas festival humbug!

Oh, the humbugs.

It is often said, with doleful shaking of heads, that if Dickens could come back he would be sorely hurt and disappointed at the change that has developed in the spirit of Christmas. But I don't think that he would We have discarded some of the old customs, but we have adopted new. And Dickens would discover as much warmth of heart and charity and kindness, and good humor as when he was enthusiastically preaching the gospel of Kind Hearts and Merry Souls.

Indeed, I think that instead of disappointment, Dickens would experience gladness in his coming back. He would find fewer Scrooges and more Fezziwigs—though the Fezziwigs might at first try to assume disguises and delude him into the belief that they were cynics. He would find a prodigious packing of Christmas hampers to rejoice the hearts of Tiny Tims. He would find gigantic conspiracies at work for the wholesale diffusion of dolls, toys, chocolates, creams, oranges and mince pies. He would find bustling gentlemen and sweet-faced ladies tying up parcels of crackers and puddings, and firing them off with such precision of aim as to lend them on the doorsteps of the very people who wanted them most and didn't expect to get them—the little people in the alleys and the mean streets.

He would find happiness and laughter agencies flourishing—agencies of good will that were undreamt of in the days when he heard the Chimes and sang his Christmas carol. He would find that above all things Mrs Britannia has determined to look after the children; that national bodies, public bodies, private bodies, and in fact everybody's concern is to sweeten the lives of the children not only at Christmas, but all the year round.

He would find that Bumble had vanished, and that the workhouse was by no means such a forbidding institution to reside in nowadays as it was in his day. He would find that not only the young folk, but the old folk and the sick, are cared for as he never had the happiness of seeing them cared for. He would find a thousand generous streams of charity brightly flowing in every direction through a distinctly improved world. And when he had surveyed all these things with delight in his eyes and gladness in his heart and a glow of satisfaction on his kind, sympathetic face, imagine our twentieth century cynic approaching him with the remark, "We have outgrown that sentimental stuff of yours, you know, Mr. Dickens. Christmas is out of date. We think it a nuisance and a bore. The Dickens Christmas is altogether a thing of the past."

Mr. Dickens, like Father Christmas himself, would respond with a genial laugh, and gently patting our cynic on the shoulder, he would exclaim in his most joyous and emphatic tones, "My dear sir, I don't believe it."

Being an old-fashioned person, I confess that there are some Christmas institutions, once cherished, that I now miss. I deplore the disappearance of the terrifying but popular Christmas ghost. I miss the weird stories of haunted beltries and lonely granges; and the wondrous yarns about snowed up travellers who went through the most appalling vicissitudes on Christmas Eve, and emerged triumphantly out of them into perfect security and joy on Christmas morning. I miss the mysterious hampers that used to arrive from nowhere, and the benevolent uncles who came from the ends of the earth staggering under loads of riches, and arrived just in the nick of time to make suffering heroes and heroines happy.

Poor old clown and pantaloon, too, have gone, with their red-hot pokers and strings of sausages. And the waits are under the ban of the New Age. It is now the fashion to sneer at the waits—and in some cases even to greet them with active hostility. Last Christmas four of these pathetic survivals of a bygone day were actually hauled before a magistrate for singing and playing instruments with the object of gathering alms! What would our dear old grandfathers of thought of that?

The magistrate, however, after hearing these slightod performers warble "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" to cornet and fiddle accompaniment, honorably acquitted them with his compliments, and a Christmas box. And I hope that the kind gentleman enjoyed a particularly merry Christmas.

I confess with shameless assurance that I like the waits. When at 3 a.m they issue the summons, "Christians awake!" I obediently do so. I assuredly harbor no resentment against them for arousing me. On the contrary, their visitation diffuses a genial glow of satisfaction throughout my being; for nestling comfortably among the blankets, I chuckle to think how much pleasanter their performance is for me inside than for them outside. I would much rather be in bed at 3 a.m. on a cold, raw, dark, foggy December morning than stand ng out there in the road with cold nose and frozen fingers, blowing a cornet or fiddling "The Misletoe Bough"—in order to earn an honest six pence.

There is something very Christmassy n "The Misletoe Bough" that old familiar tune, "stretched measure of an antique song." It is undeniably doleful, but it awakens echoes of old Christmasses and memories of old friend, And when their music is done and they have tramped off into the darkness I am grateful to the waits for giving me a more exquisite pleasure still—the fresh settling down to sleep. I know of no greater luxury than to wake up in the middle of the night in winter, to enjoy the consciousness of warmth and repose, and then to sink off blissfully again to sleep.

And however bitterly the twentieth century may sneer at the Christmas waits they are far preferable to those other Christmas waits that you get in excursion trains.

Our cynics tell us that Christmas cards also have lost their charm and become a Here hollow convention, but this too, I deny. Most people live lives too crowded and busy to keep up correspondence with their numerous friends; and the Christmas card flashes brightly across the silence like a ray of sunshine in a shady place. It says to the distant friend, "You see, although I don't write I haven't forgotten you."

Some people of grimly practical minds declare that the wish, "A happy Christmas," whether conveyed by oral greeting or by card, can really make no difference to your happiness. But I affirm that it does make a difference. This can easily be demonstrated by taking the negative view. Suppose everybody carefully refrained from uttering a seasonable compliment, and not a single soul wished us a Happy Christmas.

Again it is affirmed that scarcely anybody reads the verses on Christmas cards. People, we are assured, have grown accustomed to all the seasonable wishes and poesical sentiments, that they are "taken as read."

This might be so, though I don't admit it. But perhaps a concession might be made. This is an age of alert intelligence—of keen eagerness to acquire instructive facts and useful knowledge in the briefest form; and it might propitiate the sneering objectors to Christmas cards if something useful were embodied in them—something that would plead for their continuance on the ground of stern utility. For example, the inscription might run:

May Christmas Day be Glad and Bright,
And Fill your Heart with Pure Delight
A Bar of Iron worth £1,
Worked into Horseshoes is worth £2.

There are great possibilities in this idea. But on the whole, I incline to the belief that the sentimental will still prevail over the matter-of-fact, and that we shall unrepentantly continue to follow the good old fashion.—Busy Man's Magazine.

Could Not Sleep In The Dark.

Doctor Said Heart and Nerves Were Responsible.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Mrs. Calvin Stark, Rossmore, Ont., writes:—"About two years ago I began to be troubled with a smothering sensation at night, when I would lie down. I got so bad I could not sleep in the dark, and would have to sit up and rub my limbs, they would become so numb. My doctor said my heart and nerves were responsible. I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised and got a box to try them. I took three boxes and can now lie down and sleep without the light burning and can rest well. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women."

BOWELL

On Friday evening the 3rd inst., a farewell dance was given in honor of Mrs. Chas. Richardson, who left on Saturday, Dec. 4th, on an extended visit to the Old Country. The weather was well below the zero mark, but as this lady is very popular a goodly number attended and one of the most successful and enjoyable dances of the season was the result, and dancing was kept up well into the early hours of morning. Among those present we noticed Mesdames Richardson, Mansfield (2), Woolven, Walker, Butler, and Dixon; Misses Mansfield, Woolven, Dixon, Butler, Richardson, Blythe, Belton, Augur, Meyers (2), Joe De Links and others

Joe De Links acted as M. C. in his usual good style and the success of the dance was largely due to his efforts.

After the fine warm days of last week a cold snap set in and although not much snow has fallen the temperature must have been well below the zero mark, nevertheless home seekers with their goods and chattels are still arriving. Bowell will be a busy center in the spring, especially as every homestead in the neighborhood has been taken up, the stretch of land that has so long been open south of this should be a veritable beehive when all the homesteaders roll up in the spring. One thing is lacking in this district, and is very noticeable by settlers from older districts, that is, that we have no organization of any descript on to further the interests of the farmers, and it is time the farmers of Bowell formed themselves into an association, when meetings could be held during these winter months, and matters pertaining to the suitable cultivation of our soil, of any experiments of individuals who have been in the district some years, and a general exchange of ideas in all matters in our interest could be discussed. It is our duty to organize and co-operate as greater cognisance will be given us by the government and men of business than by individual effort. I am sure it only requires someone to take the initiative in this matter," re calling a meeting, etc., when the matter can be discussed, and success will follow. One thing in an organization of farmers especially, everyone must go in whole heartedly and unselfishly as unless members go on in these lines the association will be a failure, as the interests of your district must always be in the forefront, as it is only by these means that Denmark today leads the world in co-operation etc., and if others can organize surely we are not so unprogressive as not to see the advantages to be derived. There are so many subjects that could be discussed, principally the cultivation of our land, as with thorough cultivation there is no reason why our land should be second to any in the country and it would be the duty of the association to see that members followed on the most approved lines. Then there are the neglected subjects of dairying, poultry and hog raising, though requiring closer attention, will have to be resorted to by all farmers in the near future, and there is certainly money in these. Hope someone will move in the matter.

type far different from the placemen of the period, and gave honest and devoted service to his country, dying, after all his years of power, a comparatively poor man. He had many faults, the faults typical of the century in which he lived—to use Sir Walter Beasant's words "the most sodden era in the world's history." Coarseness and cynicism and loose morality characterized the age, and Warpole in these respects was in no sense in advance of his period. His best fault was his greed for power. Had he not possessed an inordinate ambition, he might have spent his whole life in hunting and given the affairs of his country no thought. But the greed of power which is some men's destruction, was his lure to greatness.

Walpole's excise policy was largely influenced by his desire to relieve his class, the small landed class, of taxation and throughout he kept its interests in view.

The elder Cato, like Walpole, was a "homines novel" a parvenue for whom the aristocracy had profound contempt. Like Walpole, Cato was a man of great common sense and honesty, and uncommon strength. In appearance Walpole was plain, Cato was ugly. War the latter accounted the chiefest of virtues, while the English statesman was a man of peace. Cato was abstemious, omitting wine during campaign days, while Walpole was ever self indulgent. If no foreign foe could be found, Cato would discover some political enemy at home and throughout the days of peace in Rome he was so to speak, a "self-constituted moral reform league." He was litigious and possessed the same feud-spirit which in America has been shown by the wild peoples of Kentucky. The great Roman had a gift of caustic humor, and his opponents frequently felt the lash of his satire. Walpole, until his later days, treated friends and foes alike with unruffled good humor, and by him parliamentary debate was never gagged.

While Cato was given to a kind of boastfulness, it was a boastfulness founded on his supreme self-confidence and knowledge of his worth to the state. His was the spirit of the Elder Pitt who exclaimed in Britain's hour of peril, "I know that I can save England, and no one else can."

Three regrets were expressed by Cato in his old age. He was sorry that he had ever trusted a woman with a secret; that he had ever gone by water when he might have gone by land; and that he had ever passed a day without making his will. The Romans hated the sea as intensely as the Saxons loved it, and whenever they were compelled to fight on the water they were at a disadvantage.

In both of the great periods under consideration, the lecturer went on, hatred of foreigners was a national characteristic. Cato despised the Greeks, and all Grecian learning and culture, The English of the 18th century regarded all foreigners as inferiors. Typical of the spirit of the age was the expression of an English nobleman in 1783, "I wish we were all safe and at war again;" or again the proud boast of a lady of the period, "No foreigners dine with us" Perhaps, said Prof. Alexander, even in our own day we were not entirely free from this prejudice, which was deeply ingrained in the English character.

Ancient Rome was in no degree behind the modern world in its knowledge of political expedients. Every form of expedient was employed to defeat Cato at the polls when he sought supreme political power. The Roman Senate was not only a house of lords, but it was the only chamber in all affairs of state it was supreme, and against its decisions there was no appeal. If our modern sense of justice revolts against the frequent tyranny and extortion which was practiced, a study of conditions in India before the Sepoy rebellion would save us from Pharasaic pride in our moral superiority. Extortion fully as base as any Roman senator over practiced, was quite normal in our Indian empire even in the enlightened and humane nineteenth century.

Cato introduced a budget which was democratic in the extreme, socialistic, almost anarchistic in those days. No Lloyd George ever raised a bigger storm in the ranks of the privileged rich than did Cato by his first finance bill. It was in all history, the first scheme of a graduated income tax, based on the obviously just principle that the poor man should contribute less proportionately than the inormately rich. By the poor man taxation to the tune of $20 was far more heavily felt, than $20,000 by the millionaire. Cato's taxes fell most lightly on those least able to bear. It was significant to us said the lecturer, living at a time when another great scheme of tax graduation was attracting the interest of the civilized world, that Cato succeeded in carrying his proposals in spite of all opposition.

Another reform which the great Roman introduced was bitterly fought by the senators. This reform, revolutionary at that time, simply consisted in substituting the system of accepting the lowest tenders in contract work, instead of allowing the work to go to the capitalist who had the greatest influence.

Although Cato was a hard man both in his public and domestic life, in the light of his own times he would be leniently judged. In his day slavery, the unspeakable crime, was a recognized institution. But it was only in quite recent times that slavery had been abolished throughout Christendom, and the time was within the memory of some living to day when divines of the churches in America defended the owning of slaves as a God-ordained institution, which to tamper with were sacrilege. In Roman times, however, the slaves were frequently of the same degree of culture as their masters. They were the chance captives of war, driven into a bondage even more terrible than that of the negro slaves of a later day. For although great progress had been made and would continue to be made by the colored races, there was still a great gulf fixed between them and the Caucasians of the world.

Cato held his slaves in a tight rein. He established quarrels among them, his idea being that so long as they were fighting among themselves they would not unite against him—a principle upon which the peace of Europe was maintained today. He treated his slaves in a far better manner than did the average master this, not on humane but business grounds. With slave labor he worked his farms and carried out the work of his draining contracts.

It was curious to note that many of the ideas with which the Romans of his time were imbued, were still, embodied in English law. Cato held that "a husband stands to his wife in the relation of a judge." Strictly interpreted the English law gave almost unlimited rights to the husband. He was opposed to woman's suffrage, holding that "as soon as they (women) begin to be our equals they will become our superiors." It would be curious to know whether any such fear were entertained by opponents of the female suffrage today.

To posterity Cato left his work on agriculture, a book which was strictly speaking a combined manual of agriculture, cookery and medicine.

To sum up the character of the Grand Old Man of Ancient Rome: Cato, possessed high moral worth and persistency of purpose (cardinal virtues to the Romans). In an age marked for the exchange of the old moral Standards for money values, he stood out as a type of the old school, and was sincerely devoted to his country. Of the blots on his character, vindictiveness and bitter intolerance were two which even by the lower standards of those times would be accounted to him as faults. His contempt for culture, his arrogance to foreigners, his cruelty to his slaves, could only be regarded as failings in the light of more modern times.

ALBERTA FARMS

"Yes, sir" resumed the Alberta man, as the crowd of agriculturalists seated themselves around the little table; "yes sir, we do things on rather a sizable scale. I've seen a man on one of our big farms start out in the spring and plow a straight furrow until fall. Then he turned around and harvested back. We have some big farms up there gentlemen. A friend of mine owned one on which he had to give a mortgage and the mortgage was due on one end before they could get it recorded at the other. You see, it was laid off in counties."

There was a murmur of astonishment and the westerner continued. "I got a letter from a man who lives in my orchard, just before I left home, and it had been three weeks getting to the dwelling house, although it had travelled night and day."

"Distances are pretty wide up there ain't they?" inquired one.

"Reasonably, reasonably," replied the Westerner. "And the worst of it is, it breaks up families so. Two years ago I saw a whole family prostrated with grief. Women yelling, children howling and dogs barking. One of my men had his camp truck packed on seven four-team mules, and he was around bidding everybody good-bye."

"Where was he going?" asked an easterner.

"He was going half-way across the farm to feed the pigs," replied the Alberta man.

"Did he ever get back to his family?"

"It isn't time for him yet." returned the gentleman. "Up there we send young married couples to milk the cows, and the children bring home the milk."

Plant of the Alberta Clay Products Company, Medicine Hat

The Alberta Clay Products Co. will purchase the entire equipment for the sewer pipe plant on the 5th of January next at Webster City, Iowa. Mr. Overpack left the city last night and will return after the contracts for the machinery have been let. The equipment will include:—8 high pressure boilers, each 150 horse power and working at a pressure of 150 lbs to the square inch; and the suitable settings; one Corliss' engine, 20 x 48; 1 generator, complete, for the illumination of the buildings by 800, 16 candle power electric incandescent lamps; 2 large pumps; 3 dry wet pans; line shafting; 4 elevators; belting; structural steel for the elevated tracks; steel posts and caps and other minor supplies. Bids for brick work and carpentry and lumber, doors and windows, concrete work and excavations will be received by the company on the 10th of January. A contract for the Coleridge spur track was let a little over a week ago, to Wilson & Black for one and a half miles of grading. The survey for the spur track to the plant in the city has been made, and it is expected that the work of construction may be put under way in a very short time. The W. B. Marshall Co. have secured a contract for three carloads of bond iron the price being about $5,000. The contract for lumber for the plant was let yesterday. 31 carloads of material including 350,000 shingles. The Gas City Lumber Co. was the successful tenderer.

The plant will be constructed exactly according to the design of the cut shown above, so that a photograph taken after completion, will resemble this in almost every particular.

School Board

The regular meeting of the school board was held last evening in the office in the Fact Block. There were present: Chairman Brotherton, Trustees White, Mc[illegible]ers and Hawthorne.

The committee appointed to but desks reported that 48 Preston standard single school desks had been purchased. In regard to high school fees Principal Sansom reported that the sum of $254.00 had been received. A list of supplies required by the primary department was received and laid on the table.

Mr. White reported that the committee which was appointed to look into the contracts for temperature control plant in the Alexandra school had gone thoroughly into the matter interviewing two contractors concerned, and had found the two systems almost identical. They recommended that the tender of Walsh & Charles be accepted and that for the present the piping only be installed. This will cost $265.

Mr. A. M. Mensely wrote anent his application for $100 increase in salary sent in in June last. At that time Mr. Mensely was advised that the board were not in a position to grant an increase, and he was asked to call their attention to the matter at Christmas. The application was laid on the table to be taken up at the adjourned meeting of the board on the 28th inst.

Oakes and Everard applied for a three months' extension of time on the contract for the Alexandra school. They stated that owing to the difficulty experienced in getting Calgary [illegible] they had been delayed at least two months in the work and had expected to get the roof on the building by the end of November and to be enabled to go on with the inside work during the cold weather. The communication was laid on the table until the adjourned meeting of the board.

Alberta Debating League May be Formed

A debating league has been formed in the neighboring province of Saskatchewan, with a membership of six cities. Two districts have been formed. In district A are Regina, Saskatoon and Moose Jaw, in district B Indian Head, Wolseley and Grenfell. The league executive has completed the schedule for the season's debates, which are of an intensely interesting character, most of the subjects being live issues in Canadian or world politics today. Among them we note the following. The first will take place on December 2[illegible] the subject:

Resolved that the defence of Canada would be better assured by one navy for the empire than by a system under which the several colonial navies co-operate with the navy of Great Britain.

Resolved that immigration should not be restricted by discrimination based on race or color.

Resolved that in its operation the constitution of Great Britain is more democratic than that of the United States.

Resolved that Canada should acquire and operate all railways within her boundaries.

Resolved that it would be in the best interests of Great Britain to adopt a protective tariff.

On each night of debate the towns concerned will put up two teams. The home team will in each case take the affirmative and the visiting team the negative. That team will be the winner the sum of whose majority of points shall be the greatest in the two debates. The advantages of this system are obvious. A final debate will be held between the winners in districts A and B for the provincial championship.

This is the first league of this kind that has been formed in the west and the question is now under consideration "Shall Alberta follow suit?" There would seem to be no valid reason why at least Southern Alberta should not do so. The matter is engaging the attention of the Y. M. C. in Medicine Hat and it is possible that it may be taken up by the Mock Parliamentarians. Mr. M. A. Brown who is at present in Calgary, will discuss with the organizers of the Calgary Mock Parliament, the possibilities of forming a league.

This drill is for the betterment of every boy that will come and put his whole energy into it, they will become strong, smart and obedient to all with whom they deal; never tell lies to these parents and will be good citizens when they grow up to be men. Banquet to Railroad Pioneer

A banquet was given in Calgary on Thursday last in honor of John Niblock who a few weeks ago retired from the C. P. R. after 29 years of [illegible]ed work with that company. As noted Mr. Niblock worked on the Grand Trunk Railway at the switches. Later, he became a trainman on the main line of the G. T. P. between Sarnia and Stratford. In 1880 Mr. Niblock felt the call of the west, and came to Winnipeg, where he worked on the Pembina branch of the government railway. Mr. Niblock was the first conductor to take a train across the Red river at Winnipeg, where is now one of the highways of commerce. Mr. Niblock was also the first passenger conductor to have charge of train west of Winnipeg. In 1882 when the C. P. R. syndicate took over the government railway, Mr. Niblock was appointed transmaster at Winnipeg and after one year of service was promoted to be superintendent at Port Arthur. In this position he proved successful and in May of 1887 was transferred to Medicine Hat. It was during his superintendency at the Hat that the C & E. lines north and south from Calgary were built. His headquarters were removed to Calgary in 1899 and that city was then made the chief divisional point of the western system. During the latter years of Mr. Niblock's railway activity he has been closely identified with much of the religious life of the city. He has been particularly interested in his endeavors to improve the condition of the children of the city through the Children's Aid.

At the banquet on Thursday every branch of the service was represented nearly one hundred and fifty persons being present and all of these directly connected with the company in some capacity.

Mr. Niblock is a brother of Mr. W. G. Niblock of this city.

Sons of England

There was a large gathering of the members of Prairie Rose Lodge in the Eagles Hall on Thursday last at the annual election of officers. This lodge has had a most successful year, and is in perfectly sound condition, and there can be no doubt that under the capable guidance of our able and genial Asst-Sec.-Treas. Mr. Herbert Baker, who has been appointed president for 1910 (by acclamation), the lodge will continue on its successful course, and remain what the members have always aimed to make it a credit to the city of Medicine Hat. Mr. Baker has been most fortunate in retaining the services of a secretary who stands second to none, and it would be almost impossible for the lodge to take a downward turn, with such an able man in charge of lodge affairs, as our well-known and respected brother Mr. H. O. Knowles.

The following were the officers elected for 1910:

Nominated to Supreme Lodge for election as District Deputy, Supreme President—Bro. J. Bruce, P.P.

President—H. Baker.
Vice Pres.—R. Sharp.
Chaplain—G. Freeman.
Secretary—H. O. Knowles.
Treasurer—H. Porter.
Committee Men:—
1st—W. Hooper.
2nd—H. Hobbs.
3rd—T. Wood.
4th—B. Randall.
5th—W. R. Ilses.
6th—H. Noddings.
Inner Guard—G. Crowe.
Outer Guard—W. F. Evans.
Examining Physician—Dr. O. Boyd.
Auditors—C. Prince and W. R. H. Ilses.
Finance Committee—C. Prince, W. R. H. Ilses, H. Bristow.
Delegate to Supreme Lodge—J. Bruce, P.P.

This concluded the business of the largest and most harmonious meeting the Sons of England have held during the past year.

It is the wish of the officers of this lodge, that all respectable English men will interest themselves in the Prairie Rose Lodge with a view to becoming members in the New Year and any information needed will be cheerfully given by any of the members or the same may be obtained from the Secretary, Mr. H. O Knowles.

Receive New Minister

The Knox Young People's Club have been enjoying a series of successful evenings, not the least interesting of which was the last devotional meeting held at the church, at which Rev. Mr. Prosser gave a strong and inspiring address on the subject of "A Common Salvation," and the last social evening held at the home of Mrs. Levique on Princess Ave. A large number were present and spent a very happy evening. A feature of the programme was a monologue and tableau entitled "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," in which quite a number took part.

Arrangements are being made for a reception to be held in Knox church next Thursday evening 16th inst. when the young people will unite with the other members and adherents in welcoming the new pastor and his wife, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hench of Washington. The ministers of the city churches are expected and good music will be provided. Refreshments will be served.

Mounted Police Notes

A Walsh temperance hotel of which Mrs. Katie Buechler is the proprietress, was visited on Thursday of last week by H. E. Rudd the provincial license inspector. Mr. Rudd seized a quart of liquor at the hotel which was searched and on the same evening Mrs. Buechler was brought before Inspector Parker charged with selling liquor without a license. The accused pleaded guilty and was fined $50 and the costs, being warned by the magistrate that in the event of a second offence she will meet with less lenient treatment.

On the 10th inst. Helen Matthews and Rose Smith appeared before Mr. D. Milne, J.P., charged with selling liquor without a license. As this was a first offence a fine of $50 and costs was imposed. The law provides severe penalties for these offenses and in the future those guilty of infractions are liable to meet with much heavier punishment.

Winnifred Man Loses Cattle

A. A. Lindquist of Winnifred had the misfortune last week to lose 29 head of cattle by drowning. The animals had wandered far on to the ice for water when suddenly the thin shell gave way and they were all precipitated into the water. As the river is deep at this point they were unable to free themselves. Luckily Mr. Lindquist's son Andrew was close and immediately getting to work with his team he was enabled to rescue five of the animals, but 29 had been carried under the ice before assistance could be rendered.

Local Rancher Visits Great Chicago Stock Show

Mr. Ezra Pearson, who has been in attendance during the past two weeks at the International Live Stock Exposition returned to Medicine Hat on Sunday. Yesterday he was seen by a representative of the Times to whom he described his visit to what was undoubtedly the biggest live-stock fair ever held in North America. As such it was described by Mr. Pearson, who has attended most of the big fairs for many years past. The exposition lasted from November 27th to December 10th and during that period over 12,000 head of stock, the pick of the continent, were on Exhibition In the large amphitheatre of which the Times' man was shown a photograph there was seating accommodation for 12,000 people, and great crowds of people gathered there every day. In spite of the immensity of the undertaking, the exposition passed off without a hitch, and Mr. Pearson states that although he attended every day of the fair he did not see a man the worse for liquor during the whole fortnight.

Mr. Pearson himself is most directly interested in Clydesdale horses and Hereford cattle, and it was of these he chiefly spoke.

The Canadian stock gained high honors. In the aged stallion class Gartly Pride and Royal Choice took first and second respectively. Both animals are owned by Graham Bros of Claremont, Ont. Mr. Pearson himself possesses Baron's Sceptre, a half brother of the first prize-winner, the sire of both being Baron's Pride. Referring to the first and second prize winners the Chicago Live Stock World says:

"Fourteen were lined up for inspection of the judges, and so far as size is concerned, there was no fault to be found with most of the individuals. Gartly Pride with his honors won in Scotland, and his championships at Toronto, Ottawa and New York thick upon him was an outstanding winner. He is far and away the best Baron's Pride ever shown here, and good judges pronounced him the best that ever headed the aged lot here. He is a rich seal brown in color, beautiful at the ground fore and aft, strong in his loin, short of back and nearly risen in neck and crest. He goes straight and true and later bore off the championship in gallant style. Royal Choice has come out finely since he was first in the 3-year-old class in 1907. He is a big one, scaling a little over 2200 lbs and his quality and feet are undoubtable. Despite his massiveness he moves well and but for a little plainness over the back would be a terribly hard nut to crack.

In addition to obtaining the first in Clydes, Graham Bros., won the sweepstakes for the best bred horse in America.

The statement of assets and liabilities was as follows:

Promisory notes	1,400.00
Due Treasurer	225.33
	$3,125.33

The land was valued at $25 an acre.

The government grant, Mr. Rae stated, would just about wipe out the liability at the bank.

Mr. Howson questioned whether the $615 owing for subscriptions for 1908 and 1909 could be considered a good asset. He thought that men who had not paid their subscriptions for two years could hardly be relied upon to pay at all. Mr. Rae took the view that the bulk of the money all except some $75 or so owing by men who had left town, was collectable if the society cared to take arbitrary measures. Mr. Fawcett mentioned two cases in which he knew money to be owing by two of the best firms in town, who would eventually pay when in a better financial position. Mr. Fisher thought all arrears should be wiped off the books, and a start made for 1910 with a clean slate. He believed that if this course were followed the subscription list for the coming year would be more than doubled. If an attempt were made to compel members who were in arrears to pay up, they would probably become disgruntled. Mr. Rae held that their were few members that held any grievance against the society. Many of them were short of funds. They had wished to take advertising in the prize list, but had afterwards found themselves hard up. The matter might well be left in the hands of the directorate. Mr. Fisher suggested that a committee might be appointed to go round to those who were in arrears and strike off such of them as wished to repudiate the debt. Mr. Fawcett moved the adoption of the report, remarking that the statement showed the affairs of the society in good shape. Mr. Fisher seconded and the motion was carried.

Medicine Hat, Dec. 10, 1909.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

In presenting you with this, the twenty-fourth annual report of the society, we feel that during the last year we have made some progress. At our last annual meeting you expressed yourselves as being in favor of a spring fair. This we carried out and held a very successful fair, paying out some three hundred and fifty dollars in cash prizes. The number of horses exhibited and the quality were very creditable.

Last year (1908) we purchased 80 acres of land from the Turf club and this year we requested the city council of Medicine Hat to assist us in raising ten thousand dollars, with which to fence the property, or at any rate forty acres of it, and erect buildings, necessary for the purpose of holding our exhibition. The city council submitted a bylaw to the burgesses to raise this amount but it was defeated by some five votes. However we succeeded in fencing 40 acres, erecting one stable 36 x 80 and putting up permanent pens for young horses and cattle, sheep and swine at an expense of $4,234.42, besides paying off the balance due on the land $435.00. The financial statement shows in detail the amounts paid in prizes under different heads.

Although we increased the prizes in most of the classes, we did not have as many entries as we have had in some years which might be accounted for by the fact that this year we have had in this district the best crop of grain that we have ever had and the farmers were too busy to attend the fair while very many of them have not succeeded up to the present time in getting their grain threshed!

In ladies' fancy work, we cut down the number of articles for which prizes were offered, but offered double the amount in cash for each article. This was cutting out a great many which have been exhibited for many years.

We also imposed a small entry fee on nearly all exhibits which had the effect of leaving some inferior animals and articles at home. This entry fee is being imposed by a great number of agricultural societies throughout the province. As will be seen by our financial statement, out gate and grand stand receipts were very much better than in former years.

During the year your directors held sixteen meetings with an average attendance of five and one-half members at each meeting. This, considering the fact that we have a directorate of nineteen members is a very small attendance and shows the necessity of electing a board of directors who will take active interest in the welfare of the society.

The statement of assets and liabilities shows the condition of the society and when compared with its statement of 1907 must be gratifying to you.

Trusting you will elect a good board and go on prospering in the future as in years to come, we as in duty bound will ever humbly pray.

(Sgd.) JAMES RAE,
President.
(Sgd.) JOHN T. HALL,
Secretary.

In the discussion which followed Mr. Black expressed the opinion that this year the foundation for a good agricultural fair had been laid. Comparing the gate receipts of this year and 1907 the president said that last year only $156 had been taken in this year the receipts were between $500 and $600. The society possessed the most beautiful fair grounds in the three western provinces. The prize list this year was the best in the society's history, bds on account of the splendid crops the farmers had been too busy to come in and bring their stock. The number of entries in the cattle and horse classes were, notwithstanding, the largest ever known here. In fancy work a number of changes had been made on the recommendation of the ladies' committee. In previous years many exhibitors had gathered from their friends fancy work for exhibition, and exhibits had been shown year after year until they had became threadbare. A number of the old classes had been cut out and replaced by new. In awarding prizes for children's work it was hoped that the parents would be attracted to the fair. The sum of $34 had been awarded in these classes for prize money. In the penmanship there was a very marked improvement on former years.

The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year:

1st Vice-Pres.—Jas. Fleming.
President—Jas. Rae,
1st Vice-Pres.—Jas. Fleming.
2nd. Vice-Pres.—J. Howson.

Eighteen nominations for the board of directors were made, and a ballot taken on these resulted in the election of the following fifteen—J. Fisher, S. T. Fawcett, F. G. Forster, David Milne, Alex Middleton, D. Cargill, W. N. Adsit, John Ellis, Ezra Pearson, H. W. Ireland, C. S. Pingle Dr. Hargrave, A. J. Matthews, R. E. Starkes, C. Sansom.

Messrs. C. Krauss and H. T. W. Forster were elected auditors.

Why the Reporter Cannot Keep it Out

"Nobody but a newspaper man who has actively played the game can realize how many times the reporter hears the request, 'Please keep this out of the paper,'" says the Galveston News.

It may come from a young fellow who has been out for a time and wound up with his name upon the blotter at the police station; it may come from a mother whose daughter has committed suicide; it may come from a wife whose husband has defaulted; it may come from the lady who captured the booby prize at a card party; or it may come from a young father whose first born swallowed a button and for a time alarmed the neighborhood.

Any one of the thousand unceasing comedies or tragedies of life may serve as a cause for the request, but be it grave or gay, the reporter must listen to it many times each week.

And generally the reporter must decline, and almost as certainly as he does he is misunderstood. He is considered a heartless brute, a most callous and indifferent young man, hardened to the world and devoid of the principles of common humanity.

And he knows too, that a paper never goes to press that many fluttering hearts do not dread the crying of the sheets upon the streets, that many trembling hands will not grasp the paper, fearing and dreading to read that, which they know must be there. One man's head may be bowed upon the story of his financial shame and of the imprisonment and disgrace which confronts him. Another may scan with ashen, drawn face the headlines which proclaim his political grief to the world. A mother's tears may fall upon the pitiless lines which depict her daughter's degradation. Another daughter may steal from a scene of music and glitter and press her pained cheek upon the simple obituary notice of her aged mother.

The man who hung from the gallows until he was dead, paying a just penalty for a bloody crime, you reader, who scanned the story at the table, did you pause to reflect that the murderer probably had a father and a mother somewhere or brothers and sisters and may be a wife and children? Don't you suppose their hearts turned sick as they cowered beneath the bold lash of the headlines? Was the story kept out of the paper because of this?

The expose you saw in the paper of the statesman high in national affairs who was found to be wallowing in corruption. Don't you suppose his wife and daughter, who had adorned the society circles in the capital would have given their life to have suppressed the news?

Pick up the paper some day and as you read the various lines try to consider yourself the principal character in each. Decide how many of them you would have preferred the reporter to "Please keep out of the paper." Then perhaps you may reach the understanding of the gatherer of news. You may comprehend that he is a human being capable of pity and with a distinct realization that the old world is chock full of both tears and smiles and puppets who laugh or cry as the strings are pulled and he himself as powerless a puppet as the rest.

BONNIE BRAE

Once again we welcome the Chinook but we hope it will stay with us longer this time than last.

Owing to the scarcity of help Mr. John Evans has about five acres of potatoes yet in the ground, if there are any of them untouched by frost, it is more than he hopes for.

Mr. A. McGillivray, who has recently returned from Weyburn where he has completed a season's threshing, shipped several teams of horses and equipment to British Columbia, where they will be used in the lumber woods.

Mr. Houver has had the telephone system installed in his house, this will be a great convenience to him as he can now receive orders for his garden produce at home, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harrop and children, and Mr. James Marsh recently from Manitoba, have been stopping with Mr. John Evans for several days awaiting accommodation in the Hat. Some of the party moved in on Tuesday last.

Mr. Chris Nelson is going to run Mr. Babington's engine for the sewer pipe company until they make sufficient brick for their purpose.

There will be no more sleigh parties until the next time.

Remuneration of Public Service

The resolution introduced by Ald. Huckvale at the public meeting last Thursday night is a step in the right direction. If a citizen gives a municipality valuable public service there is every reason why he should receive remuneration for it. Brains pay in this age as never before and it pays municipalities to be served by capable men just as well as it pays business firms and corporations. There is no inherent reason why a man should serve the public for nothing any more than he should serve an individual gratis. A business firm gets no free labor, and the kind of service that a municipality in this growing part of our Dominion requires is the very best type of business acumen. Not every business man can afford to give it. The mayor is not the only one who has given such service during the past year, but because of his position he has been called upon to give more than any other; and it is a moderate statement to make that the business-like methods introduced this year have saved the city ten thousand dollars. If a grant of say $1,000 were made to the mayor in recognition of this would be it not be a fitting thing? Does not a saving of at least $10,000 warrant some recognition? By an illustration of where this saving comes in take sewer construction. In 1907, the last year in which sewers were laid, the cost per foot for the work was $3.25. This year sewer construction cost the city $1.24 per foot. This $1,000 grant could be divided as follows: $240 from general revenue, $200 from each of the following departments: water, gas, sewers, sidewalks. Nearly all of these have a surplus after doing all the work provided in the estimates. The proposed municipal act which provides such remuneration is along the right lines.

If there be a danger that some time-server will occasionally reap the reward, the responsibility rests on the ratepayers. Men of business ability can better afford to offer themselves if the time spent in public service is not "dead loss," and with good men to choose from there will be no need to choose the valueless kind.

The vote of the council on the now famous market sidewalk, or Alberta Hotel sidewalk as it would be more fittingly called, is a vote for a return to the old happy-go-lucky, hit and miss methods employed in city administration in the past, when any city official or representative of the people could order anything and the city paid the bill. It is no reflection upon the Alberta Hotel that the sidewalk is there. If an alderman offered to build a sidewalk as long any piece of private property there are few property owners who would strenuously object. The only object the walk can possibly serve is the interests of the Alberta Hotel. Why not build a walk along the south-west side of the Cosmopolitan hotel too and stop at the end of the building. The proprietor would appreciate it, and it would serve the market interests just as well, if not better. Or let Ald. Robertson pave the lane leading to his stable so that his favorite driver could not be led noiselessly away. The contention that the work was sanctioned by the then city-engineer and consequently the city is liable is not well founded. If the city-engineer ordered without authority let him pay for it, or if the alderman wanted to make a present to his favorite hotelman, let him pay for it. To finish up a splendid year's business with a piece of public work like the one in question is like putting a mud bank on a splendid piece of bronze statuary.

VANCOUVER SHOULD DO IT.

(Edmonton Bulletin)

Hon. W. H. Cushing is trying to persuade Premier McBride that as British Columbia wants Alberta grain shipped from its ports it is in order for British Columbia to provide the ports with the facilities necessary for carrying on the business. The proposition looks reasonable, the more reasonable because of the great things British Columbia cities seem to expect from the development of this trade. If all that Vancouver hopes, or one-tenth that her newspapers and real estate men have prophesied, is to come to that city from the trade, it would be a splendid business for Vancouver to provide terminal facilities herself.

Annual Meeting of Ratepayers

Not a solitary representative of the ratepayers was on hand on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, the hour at which the annual ratepayers' meeting was announced to commence. Fifteen minutes later ex-Mayor Cousins arrived. When he was followed by Mr. John Watson the mayor decided that the meeting might commence, and just before 8.30 such of the Aldermen, Aldermen-elect and School Trustees elect as were present took their seats in the municipal legislature. On the platform were the mayor, Aldermen Robertson, Adsit, Howson, Spencer and Huckvale. The mayor was elected chairman of the meeting on motion of Messrs Cousins and Benson and W. R. Perry was elected secretary on motion of Messrs Benson and Cousins. Throughout the evening ratepayers continued to file in, until, before the motion for adjournment was put there were fully two dozen present.

MAYOR'S REPORT

The mayor presented a comprehensive report of the year's work which, however, we are only able to give in abridged form. In opening he explained that this year the reports would cover only 10 months instead of 11 as formerly. This course was adopted in order that the aldermen might give complete statements as to their departments, which in former years they had been unable to do. As far as possible they have kept well within their estimates and spent the money entrusted to their care judiciously, avoiding as far as possible municipal waste and extravagance. The year would finish up with the city's accounts in good shape and the city's credit A 1. Improvements had cost $100,000, and had demanded a great deal of time and attention from the committees concerned, more than some of the aldermen could spare without loss to themselves. This service, however, had been cheerfully rendered, with the single object of the city's interests in view. With few exceptions the debates and discussions in council and committee had been in a gentlemanly and becoming manner, making the duties of presiding officer light and pleasant. The council's sins of omission and commission had been closely watched by the newspaper reporters during the year and very fully reported in the newspapers. "We are assured" the speaker continued, "that such information is the sort of stuff the people want, so I take it for granted that you are all familiar with our actions during the year." Reference was made to the water schedules, the mayor holding that the position taken up was that indicated in his election card last fall—to place the waterworks system on a self-sustaining basis, and run it as a commercial undertaking, delivering an abundant supply of water to citizens at actual cost. The cost must be determined by the fixed charges, maintenance and operating expenses, so that if money were injudiciously spent the water users would have to pay accordingly. When rates revision was undertaken it was found that there was only one class of water users—the householders. At the time the rate was made the rate met the town's requirements, but under changed conditions a new basis had to be arrived at. By levying a tax of 5 cents a foot on property served by the water mains the council had avoided increasing the rates for house and lawn service, and made vacant property pay reasonably for the enhanced value resulting from the laying of the water mains. On a $2,000 property the rates would be—domestic rate $12, lawn $3, frontage tax $2.50, or a total of $17.50—$3.50 less than on the same basis last year. Vacant property would pay $2.50 as against 90 cents an increase of $1.60.

While the schedule was barely sufficient to meet expenses, the plant was in good shape, and as water services increased it was hoped to make a reduction in the rates. The city was assessed to the limit of values and it was difficult to make a reduction without showing up the city unfairly to the outside public. But so long as the assessment was equitable, it mattered little, for to decrease the assessment meant to increase the mills on the dollar. If a man invested money in a home for his family or built a block in a city that house or block should not be assessed for more than 50 per cent. of its actual cost, but all lands should be assessed at their full value "Indeed, I would go a little further" said his worship, "and say that all improvements should be exempt from taxation, but I do not think the time has arrived for such a radical change, but I hope to see it before many years."

The mayor also made reference to the question of electric power, stating his belief that with the resources at our hand we could develop electric power and sell it at such an attractive figure that it would do a great deal towards building up the city. He suggested that a committee be appointed to deal with this matter.

The question of street grading and boulevarding was touched upon, it being suggested that these matters be taken up by the new council and a bylaw submitted to the burgesses to raise sufficient money by debentures to meet the cost of a general scheme.

Steady progress had been made by the city during the past year; the development of agricultural resources would be the basis of our future prosperity. In showing the fertility of the soil under proper cultivation the demonstration farm would be of great benefit. The Alberta Clay Products Co. were going ahead with their plant with an energy that looked like success. In the development that was taking place all along the line greater railway terminal

Caught Cold By Working In Water.

A Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes:—"In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting what you ask for. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents.

Life and Labor

In the course of political evolution it may be many years before it be comes apparent in Canada that the interests and the cause of labor are essentially the interests and cause of the great mass of the population and ultimately, of humanity as a whole. In the industrial countries of Europe this truth has long been known, and in England has gained recognition in a wonderful manner during the last decade. Today perhaps the greatest political conflict known to this generation is being waged on a scheme of taxation which originated in the Labor party and was adopted by a democratic chancellor of exchequer.

For the present the duty of Canadian workingmen is to return to the legislative halls men, if possible members of their own class, who will not recognize the orthodox party whips. If in the period of development to come Canada is to be spared the blighting commercialism and trust rule which today pervades the life of our great neighbor to the south, the nucleus must be formed of a new party, a party whose ideals shall be social, a party which shall be prepared to fight to the last ditch the feudalism of privileged wealth which is springing to life in our midst.

Settler Passes Away en route to His New Home.

The death occurred on board a C. P. R. train on Monday 7th inst., of John Edward Nichols a settler, who was coming west with his car of settlers effects. The deceased had filed on a homestead about 18 miles south of Seven Persons where his son-in-law, John Bonseman resides. The family arrived at Seven Persons on the day of the father's death, and were waiting the car of effects to come to hand. Instead of the father arriving with his car word was received that he had passed away on the train.

The train had stopped at Piapot station and Mr. Nichols descended from his car as did several others. When the train was about to proceed he started to return to it, but before he reached the car he fell to the ground. He was carried into the caboose and everything possible done to keep heart action up, and a telegram sent to Maple Creek for a doctor, but before that station was reached life was extinct, death being due to heart failure.

The deceased who was born in Monte Cello, Minn., and was 52years of age at the time of death, leaves a family of 6 sons and 3 daughters. Two of these are at Kenmare, N.D., from which place the family are moving, and the others were waiting the father's arrival at Seven Persons.

Interment took place in the R. C. cemetery at Medicine Hat on Saturday, 11th inst.

IN EARLY DAYS

(E. M. B. in Edmonton Saturday News)

When we lived on the ranch in the early days, when there were no white ladies, curious, as it may seem, to townsfolk now, we rose early in the morning. Days are long in Alberta and we were young so wished to get through a good deal. Though she's young it took lots of work to start Alberta. In summer it was up at 4 o'clock, breakfast at 5 a.m. dinner at 12 and supper at 6; and to bed at any time we happened to get through, or, according to the work that was doing. Now the people that make the most money go to their offices about 9 a.m. or perhaps later.

The first man up was supposed to cook the breakfast and, in consideration of his heroism, he was a privileged character. So when he said anything raw no one answered him back. Thus we in the early days learned that there are and may be, reasons why the housekeeper often give us some hot air, and why it is better for a man as a rule not to talk back to the one at the wheel and let her do the house warming.

The most serious question of the camp was bread. Of this there was seldom a steady supply, but the gaps were filled in with flapjacks and as the stores were anywhere from thirty to forty m les away, and the railways 170, there was no room for argument, and the best way was always to eat what was set before you. Breakfast usually consisted of oatmeal porridge with or w thout milk, and it is quite an art to learn how to swallow porridge without milk. Butter helps it down, but that was not always available. Without milk or butter you have to do a lot of swellering to swaller it.

Next came oatmeal porridge with sugar which sometimes had to be used to flush the oatmeal down. After that it was probably bacon and slap-jacks until you filled up and filling a lot of young and healthy men is no slight matter.

Everything tasted more or less of bacon grease, because it was more or less used in cookery, and was usually present in greater or less quantity in the dishpan, when washing up, so impregnated the cups and the tin spoons. If we had tried vanilla ice-cream it would have tasted of bacon grease. After the grub came a smoke while somebody washed up, then the shack was brushed out and it was in order to scatter out to the day's work. I say smoke because we did not always have tobacco. So we often had to smoke tea. As long as the nicotine impregnated the pipe, it was a fair smoke, but when the tobacco taste was gone, it was a poor smoke.

Sometimes one man was left behind to cook dinner, and in that case we usually obtained a fair dinner, but as often as not, the whole crew went out to work in the bush, or to set fence posts or some went out to ride. In that case, when we came home, one man rushed at the fire, while the others put the horses away, or brought water, or loafed, watching the cook. It is seldom two men can cook together, so if your partner seizes the spider and puts it on the fire leave him alone, and let him finish the job, then eat what is cooked without remark. And, above all, do not stand around a man when he is cooking and watch him, for it makes him hot and is liable to lead to trouble.

I do not know why it it so many men hate being watched when they are cooking, but they do, and perhaps it is because they do things that they don't want us to see that they do. Possibly some of these things happen in the basement now, or far away out in the kitchen, which we do not go to. But I do know we were never quite as badin the west as I believe they were in the east, for once we had to fire a hired lady down east for blowing her nose on the dish rag.

All kinds of work had to be done in early days and we kept sewing materials of all sorts, even surgical needles and silk which sometimes came in handy. The three cornered needle was the favorite with the early rancher because it penetrated anything, even hides, and was easy to force through serious obstacles. Sometimes the thrust was so lively that the needle went right through a thum or a finger. Then we could quote St. James about the tongue being an unruly member.

All sorts of exreriments were made with all sorts of things and iverse were the results, many of which settlers are now reaping the benefit. But the loudest that we can remember was of a celebrated English baronet who acquired a big estate in Alberta, ploughed up a lot of it and put it into grain. Then came a dry season, so he organized a water-cart brigade and tried to water the grain with water carts, which had about as much effect as one spit in a sandbank. After one trial they say it was not tried again, and later the estate was sold cheap. The dry farmers and others made money out of the deal, lots of it; and now they run water down ditches, and put enough of it on at a time to do some good. Just imagine the Calgary electrically run sprinkler in comparison to the past.

It is hard to sit at a window in one of our fi e ci ies now and, looking out of the window, imagine it is the same land; and do we realize what a lot we have now in contradistinction. We cannot even work for an hour or two now in a quiet office without someone coming in to sell us something, a typewriter or a wireless telephone or what not or to talk our heads off. The greatest of dreamers might have dreamed a lot of what was to come, but he could not have formulated any definite idea of how, when or where. In fact places that were spotted to be big in the future, have stayed just so, or a little more so; and others have out-distanced them. Some of the likely looking spots, from their geographical situat on, will come later. The thing to do is to hang on even if the dinner bell does ring.

It's a long look back to the time when we would look at the larder and say, "Well someone has got to go out and shoot something or there is nothing for dinner." When this was the case the hunter tried, with exaggerated care to shoot straight, and if very hungry, and a long stalk was made on some ducks, they were potted sitting when the larder was low. It is bad, but no use to deny it oh! what excitement it caused, how the heart would beat the moment of the near approach. Then the fatal second after the explosion to see if the belt would have to be buttoned tighter or whether it meant real roast duck and a comfortable restful and full feeling after a meal. We feel so much better towards the world when we are full, i.e., of grub, when full otherwise we may have our fighting clothes on and get into trouble or have a headache after. Whenever you saw grub in the old days it was always better to tackle it for it might be a long time before the next chance.

Did you ever shoot a duck and want to put it in the pot very badly and then have that duck stay out in the water just a few feet further out than you could reach; or where you in the position of having no retriever and the water cold or the ice so thin you could not reach it and did not dare go after it? The story of Tantalus must have been manufactured out of such occasions. How often we can remember sitting and looking at a fine brace of ducks out on the water that ought to havebeen in the pan and yet the mountain would not come to Mahomet, and Mahomet could not get to the mountain. So we had to pull the belt a hole tighter and take a chew of tobacco to ward off the pangs.

Thus history repeats itself with a very unhistorical people. And in the old days you dare not turn up your trousers at the bottom on the range for fear some one might shoot you, as it was not the fashion and we had fashions of our own.

It all looks so smooth now in the far away past, when the radiator's blowing off steam in the corner and we turn on the electric light, read a bit and go round to the hotel for dinner. We used to come in from a thirty mile drive, fingers frozen, feet stone cold, stomach empty and chilled right through. There was the horses to put away first, the fire was out, the shack cold. A hole had to be cut in the river before we could get any water to cook. Everything had to be done single-handed and perhaps everything in the shack except the tea and coffe were frozen. It might be an hour or two before supper was ready. And oh! how those fingers and toes ached, as we walked the floor ti l they ramé back to life, and prayed one minute and swore the next, piling on the wood then walking up and down again Till at last the pain ceased and the fingers were blown up twice their size.

In the middle we hear the cow bawling to her calf and she has to be milked and put away. Then later we got to bed probably alone, and, if supper disagreed with the infernal regions it was grin and bear it or get a little baking soda and water and pour it down. An amateur sedlitz powder is made with some vinegar and soda and a little sugar and water.

If it had not been for the dogs and the cats around the shack we might have forgotten what folks were like, but we could always talk to them and they were most responsive, but did not answer back.

It was a great lone land, far from the maddening crowd so the only things that suggested dress and clothes, and the gay giddy world, were the pictures cut out of the Graphic or Illustrated. We would gaze at those depicting ladies on a slippery floor and gents in dress clothes or uniforms whirling around and wonder if we really were ever there or was it a dream. Sometimes we fancied we could hear the band and see the glass glitter.

Many a lone man has fallen in love with a picture on the wall and has had a horrible mash on a Graphic or Illustrated News girl. He might not confess it. I wonder if the girls they did marry remind them of their early loves and pricked out with four tacks on the walls of a log shack far away off and practically nowhere.

Every lone rancher thought he was able to sing, at any rate some, and ignorance was real bliss, except to the listeners. The tune that lasted longest on the range was "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By" and they were interminable. We can hear them rolling now, though many are gone by never to return. We rolled a lot of the clouds by, but soon shall be forgotten, and, after the early ones had gone, someone called it "Sunny Alberta" and it stuck.

Having failed to secure larger premises, our present inadequate space compels us to clear out immediately our stock of

OVERCOATS, WINTER UNDERCLOTHING, GLOVES, CAPS, &c.

We now offer these at practically cost price. Rarely, at this season of the year, does such an opportunity present itself, therefore we invite an early visit to obtain the best selection. Remember we do not fix our prices on a basis of 50 per cent. or 75 per cent profit and then trim these prices by 25 per cent or so. We are prepared to prove our sale prices to be what we state "practically cost."

RATEPAYERS ANNUAL MEETING

facilities would be required, and Medicine Hat as a natural centre would not be overlooked. The speaker was assured, on the very best authority, that Medicine Hat would be maintained as a railway center, and our abundant supply of cheap fuel would have a decided influence when the question of shop accommodation came up.

After expressing his thanks to the aldermen for their support during the year, the mayor reminded his auditors that the city had invested over $600,000. Constant care and attention was required, and it seemed that the time had arrived when the aldermen should be remunerated for their services, which should be of a legislative character only, and the administration of affairs left in the hands of a commission. A good basis for a commission system had been evolved during the year. Whatever system was adopted depended for failure or success on the ability of the men who operated it.

The need of establishing a land agency in Medicine Hat was also touched upon.

In conclusion his worship also expressed his appreciation of the honor which had been conferred upon him in reelecting him as mayor by acclamation, and promised the same care and attention to the city's affairs that he had given in the past.

In presenting the financial report Alderman Spencer said the past year had been a highly favorable one for the city. The expenditure in none of the departments had exceeded the estimates, up to the end of October last. The report included only ten months of the financial year. The speaker was convinced that the remarkable success in the carrying on of the city's affairs in 1909 was due very largely to the energetic and painstaking care of the mayor. Since Mayor Milne assumed office it had become a habit for citizens to look for him at the city hall rather than at his own place of business. Referring to the proposed provincial legislation to regulate salaries payable to aldermen, the speaker said he thought it was a mistake in a city of this kind to have any man devoting so much of his time to public affairs to the neglect of his own business, without some remuneration being given. Passing on to deal with the sales of debentures during the year, Ald. Spencer said that bonds to the value of $137,000 had been sold and that the prices obtained were the top notch figure obtained by any city in either western or eastern Canada. In a financial statement for Medicine Hat prepared by the Ontario Securities Co., the tax-rate was described as being 11¼ mills for general purposes and 4½ mills for school purposes. The population was given as 5,000 and the net debenture debt nil.

The reason why the city was described as having no bond endebtedness was explained in the following way: At the last convention of Alberta municipalities, the city of Lethbridge representatives stated that although it was desired to establish a street railway as a municipal undertaking, the city were prevented from taking this course because they had already overstepped the tax rate which they were supposed to levy. This raised the question, in what does a city's endebtedness consist? The question was asked why should the acquirement of a revenue producing public utility be considered as indebtedness in the case of a city when, were a private corporation to take the same enterprise in hand, there would be no increase in debt figuring on the city's books, but on the other hand there would be a considerable addition to the assessable property of the municipality. In Edmonton when capital invested in public utilities of a revenue producing character the value of the property was added to the assessment roll. And in Medicine Hat we had valuable assets which totally offset our indebtedness. The statement of revenue and expenditures was as follows:

As near as could be arrived at the surplus at the end of the year might be estimated at $5,000 to $6,000. The chartered accountant reported the accounts for the third quarter in good order and everything neatly and accurately kept.

WATER

The report of the water commissioners was presented by Ald. Huckvale, chairman of the department. There had been laid during the year two miles of water mains, making a total of 12 miles in the city to-da. A new pump had been installed with a capacity of 1,000 gals of water per minute. Owing to shortage of labor and the early winter it had not been found possible to install a number of hydrants which are now on hand. Sixty-five new connections had been made during the year. While this deparement had exceeded its appropriation for the year, this was largely due to the expenses of repairs, stopping leakages and other things which could hardly be foreseen. The speaker was glad that it had been possible to give such a good service of pure water during the year. While he himself had been complimented on the service, it was to the veteran Ald. Penhale, that he owed a suggestion which had made it possible for a time in the spring to give a good pure water service. While an expected gas engine failed to arrive, and the old gas engine was still inadequate for the city's needs, Ald. Penhale had made a suggestion which had enabled the department to tide over the difficulty.

He was glad to say that on the current quarter there was only an amount of $5 uncollected on the rates.

The report was adopted on motion of Messrs Cousins and Forster. Mr. Forster enquired as to the filtration plant: Was the system regarded as satisfactory? Ald. Huckvale replied that on the whole it gave very good satisfaction, although in the very muddy season it was possible that the plant would not filter up to the contract standard. In the bad season it would probably filter 1½ million instead of two million gallons per day. An expert had declared that he had never seen anything to compare with the mud in the waters of the Saskatchewan at certain seasons of the year. When the guarantee was given he was sure the Roberts Co. did not know what they were up against.

The following is the statement for the year.

Water maintenance:

Repairs to pumping station $309.37; to pumping engine and connections $1152.72; to filter plant $465.45; to water mains $1620.61; to hydrants $485.32; to services $99.50; wages pumping station $2906.77; filter plant maintenance, $114.97; filter plant wages $27.95; oil and waste $294.01; water sundries $56.55 power expense $253.21; office expenses $1025.11. Total $8815.54.

Water permanent:

Water mains and connections laid 1909, $12,612.59; power house well and breakwater, $7985.21; filtration plant $8769.76; engineer's house $306.37; water meters 67.84; new hydrants $1846.64. Total $26,588.41.

After congratulating Ald. Huckvale on the quality of the water supplied since midsummer (speaking as a hill-climber who had gone through the trials of the previous season), Mr. Brotherton asked whether the plant was now being used to its full capacity. Ald. Huckvale replied that the pump-house engineer considered that at the muddiest season of the year, one and a half million gallons per day could be pumped. At the present time not more than 250,000 gallons were being used by the city and 850,000 by the C. P. R., or a total of 600,000 gallons. In the summer the city used 600,000 gallons per day and the C. P. R. much less than they were now using, so that at the very worst season of the year the plant was not taxed to more than two-thirds of its capacity.

Mr. Cousins enquired as to the rate for water charged to the C. P. R. He was informed that a rate of 6½ cents per 1000 gallons had formerly been charged. Under a new arrangement the company agreed to pay $325 per month for water up to 250,000 gallons per day. This came to 4½ cents per 1000 gallons. If more than 200,000 gallons were used, 4 cents per 1000 would be charged for the additional supply.

Mr. Benson wished to know what it cost the city per 1000 gallons to pump water, and why it was possible to supply it to the C. P. R. 40 times cheaper than to the speaker. Mr. Brotherton thought some injustice was done to the householder to whom an excessive rate was charged if it were possible to pump so cheaply to sell to a big consumer at the price named. In B. C. the speaker had found domestic rates much lower than here, and where he paid $27 per annum a man in the coast province paid only $18 for a similar or better service. The mayor asked how, if the rate were reduced, the deficit on the department could be made up. Ald. Huckvale pointed out that the revenue derived from the C. P. R. would enable a reduction to be made to the ordinary consumer. While the domestic rate was higher here than elsewhere, the business rate was much lower and it was from the business people that all the kicks came. Taking the cost of water and gas together there was no town in the west where domestic services could be obtained so cheaply. Mr. Brotherton thought an injustice was being done to the people of New Edinburgh, who had been unable to obtain either water or gas. As a final word Mr. Benson expressed the opinion that until the council knew exactly what it cost to pump a gallon of water, they would be at sea in the fixing of rates. He also regarded it as unfair that Mr. Brotherton, who had a family living at home, should be taxed no more heavily for water than himself, with a family of two. Ald. Huckvale: "Quite right; he ought to pay less." (laughter). A meter, Ald Huckvale continued, had been procured, and it would now be possible to ascertain by its use the exact cost of pumping water.

In the unavoidable absence of Ald. Morrow the report of the gas commissioners was presented by Ald. Spencer. The statement was as follows:

Gas permanent expenditure—

Mains and connections $6538.68; wells $6178.19 regulators and stations $333.28; street lamps $116.09; meters $724.36. Total $18,890.60.

Gas maintenance expenditure—

Repairs to the gas well $77.47, to regulator stations $326.50, to mains $45.66, to meters $847.91; office expenses $1524.07; sundries $456.80; repairs to street lamps $875.88. Total $4754.29.

A depth of 200 feet had been reached in the work on the new well, which would be rushed to completion in the spring. Many new regulators had been put in, and the schools are better equipped than ever before. No complaints of shortage had been received during the cold weather this year. The report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Cousins and Bridgeman.

Ald Howson presented the report of the public works committee, which was to the following effect. During ten months of 1909, the department had expended $7,954.07. 1.3 miles of sidewalks had been laid, there being 4.3 miles in the city at the beginning of the year. In addition 650 feet of plank sidewalk had been laid and debentur? money would be raised for these. There were in the city before 1909, 1.2 miles of sewers; during the current year 2.6 miles had been added. There were now 81 sewer connections, 46 of these having been made this year. Nearly 5,000 was spent in new culverts, street crossing repairs, etc. The speaker was of the opinion that debenture money should be raised for the purpose of building cement culverts and fixing up the streets permanently. A road grader and steam roller should be bought.

In moving the adoption of the report Mr. Cousins quoted the words of a Chicago man whom he had met during his eastern tour. This man had recently visited Medicine Hat and he declared that he had never been in a town where the streets were so well kept as in Medicine Hat. Mr. Cousins thought this condition was due largely to the efforts of Ald. Howson. Mr Benson seconded the motion. He thought that Medicine Hat ought to be too big a place to allow her streets to remain in bad condition. He was convinced that it would cost less to have the city's streets well laid out and boulevarded than to pay continually for the cutting of weeds.

Ald. Huckvale presented the parks and markets committee's report, Ald Penhale not being present. The results from the new market had been far better than expected and the city and the farmers were benefiting greatly. From a revenue of $15 for the first month there had been a continuous increase, until last month $67 was the figure reached. A market could not be established in a day or a year, but the prospects for the future were most promising. 546 trees from the local nursery had been given out during the year. Altogether $7,823.24 had been expended during the year.

Mr. Forster referred to the plank sidewalk by the Alberta hotel, having seen something about it in a local paper that day. While Ald. Penhale had had this work done "off his own bat," in the past several aldermen had overstepped the work of their own departments. The walk was certainly needed, and he thought this should be overlooked.

Alderman Spencer said that it was he that had held up the account for this sidewalk, and he felt perfectly justified in doing so. He had advised Ald Penhale to bring the matter before the council, but the alderman had gone right ahead and ordered it himself. The plank walk now laid was really of no benefit to the market, and if this were allowed to become a precedent, any man who had property cornering on a lane would have the right to demand a sidewalk The mayor pointed out that the price was exorbitant. There was only some 1,040 feet of lumber in the job and this was worth about $25 and less than a keg of nails, and there was only a few hours labor for a couple of men, yet the price charged was $78!

LICENSE AND POLICE

The license and police report was presented by Ald. Adsit. The total expenditure in the department was $4016.26, the estimates at the beginning of the year was 4,720.00; so that at the end of the year the surplus would be a little short of $700. The report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Forster and Wilson, the former remarking that the police department reflected as much credit on the city as any other department.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT

Ald. Robertson read the report of the fire, water and light committee. This showed total expenditure of $5,035.02; estimate at beginning of the year $10,472.00. The brigade had received 21 calls, travelling in all 19½ miles to and from fires. In the extinguishing of fires water from the waterworks system had been used on eight occasions, chemicals on four and nets on four. The value of the buildings at risk was $72,635; of the contents $20,425; making a total of $93,060. The loss on buildings was 2,460 and on contents $1,465; total $3,925. During the period there had been a paid chief appointed and three regular firemen, besides the volunteers. There were five splendid horses in the department and a good equipment of fire fighting appliances.

Mr. Brotherton moved the adoption of the report giving much praise to the brigade for the small fire loss during the year. He thought the city should go into the fire insurance business and save premiums which were given out of town. The motion was seconded by Mr. Benson and carried.

HEALTH AND RELIEF

The health and relief committee's report was presented by the mayor. The total amount expended during the ten months was divided as follows:

Wages and salaries	$ 570.00
Scavenger work	1147.00
Nuisance ground expense	819.14
Paid on account relief	580.10
Sundries	36.67
Grant to Hospital	1,000.00
Total	4,153.41

The total amount estimated for the year was $5,880.

The medical health officer's report for the period Dec. 1, 1908 to Dec. 1, 1909, was read and showed the city singularly free from infectious and contagious diseases during the year. There was altogether during the year, one case of smallpox, 5 of chicken pox, 7 of diptheria, 6 of scarlet fever, 2 of measles, 43 of typhoid fever and of these 12 cases of typhoid 2 of diptheria and 1 of scarlet fever came from points outside the city. The greatest number of typhoid cases occurred in August, September and October, there being only one case in November. Thirteen houses were fumigated. It was gratifying to note that the council were taking steps to erect an isolation hospital, which it was hoped would be completed before the end of next year.

Mr. Foster enquired as to the source from which money could be obtained for the isolation hospital. Alderman Spencer stated that money was in the general fund and included in this year's estimates. The report was adopted on motion of Messrs. Esplen and Forster.

REMUNERATION OF ALDERMEN

The following resolution was then introduced by Ald. Huckvale, who moved its adoption:

WHEREAS by a bill to be cited as "The City Act" now under consideration by the legislative assembly of the Province of Alberta, it is provided that the Mayors of cities shall be paid such remuneration as shall be fixed by the council and that each of the aldermen shall as remuneration be paid the sum of three dollars per meeting provided that the total sum per year paid to any alderman shall not exceed one hundred and fifty dollars;

AND WHEREAS in the opinion of this general meeting of the ratepayers of the City of Medicine Hat that the mayor and aldermen should receive some remuneration for their services.

BE IT RESOLVED THEREFORE that the council be requested, in the event of the legislature not finally passing said bill, to apply to the legislature to amend the Medicine Hat charter to make the same to comply with said bill, in accordance with the above provisions.

Ald. Huckvale pointed out how great had been the loss of valuable time to the Mayor and to the aldermen who had devoted themselves to the city's affairs. The resolution was unanimously carried on motion of Messrs. Cousins and Esplen. Mr. Brotherton, Mr. F. G. Forester and Mr. W. Stewart were among those who also spoke in favor of the resolution.

Mr. Forster then expressed his belief that the ratepayers of Medicine Hat should extend their thanks to Ald. Penhale who retires this year after having served on the council since the charter was first granted, and also Ald. Huckvale and the other retiring aldermen. Mr. Cousins signified his willingness to second the resolution if it were made a vote of thanks to all the members of this year's council for their services. The change was accordingly made and the motion carried. Thanking the meeting on behalf the council the mayor said he thought it was the first time a motion of that kind had been carried for five or six years.

The meeting was then brought to a conclusion and the annual meeting for the discussion of school affairs was held.

Oakes & Everard's contract price was $89,820.00 and extras to date $1,221.50, making a total of $41,041.50.

James Rae's contract price is $9,200.00.

The installation of a temperature control system has been discussed by the board and will cost about $900.

The expense per pupil was $37.50 per annum, $30 of which came from the city and $7.50 from the government and other sources (school fees, etc.). This said Mr. Brotherton was a very small cost when it was considered that for a child to take to music lessons a week would cost more than for the whole of his year's public school education.

The speaker was sorry to be obliged to resign, for he had enjoyed the work and felt the wrench keenly. It had been easier during the last few years because he had learnt the work and was thus spared the earlier difficulties. During the last year he had not been able to give to the schools the time which he should have given.

Larger accommodation would have to be added next year, as although a new school had been built the extra room would soon be taken up.

Before long the eight rooms of the Alexandra school would be required. Already three rooms were wanted and a teacher had been engaged. As the city grew it would be necessary to secure additional sites, and the best plan would be to secure them now before prices became unduly enhanced. In the opinion of the speaker one site should be secured in the neighborhood of the standpipe for that part of the town demanded a school and the time was coming when Toronto Street school might be sold and the money used for the building of another school. The Toronto Street school was too small and too close in. A school near the standpipe would satisfy the people of this part of the town and at the same time not be too far out for those living in the lower part of the city.

Across the river another site should be secured, as in the course of time population would grow there and a school be required.

Across the track the temporary frame building might be used until other accommodation were provided. Mr. Brotherton then explained that the frame annex to the Toronto Street school had really cost the city nothing. At the time when the building was erected school board debentures, like all other debentures, would bring only a low figure as the market. By the erection of the temporary structure, the time of selling had been delayed until a price was obtained so much higher than what had been formerly obtainable, that it more than covered the cost of the annex.

At the convention of British Columbia school trustees, a motion favoring the payment of trustees was voted down, as the members were afraid that the introduction of this system might lead to a lowering of the standard of men engaged in the work. This argument against the payment of trustees did not apply to the council, where a mere $150 a year could hardly be considered remuneration. It by no means payed adequately for the service rendered.

On motion of Mr. Cousins and Ald. Huckvale the report was adopted and a vote carried expressing appreciation of Mr. Brotherton's long services in the council, and of the work of the other members of the board. The results achieved, said Ald. Huckvale showed well how wisely the money had been spent. And it was the speaker believed, hardly possible to spend too much money in the cause of education.

THE PRICE OF REAL ESTATE

Possibly no fairer idea of the real market value of city property at the present time can be gained than by a careful perusal of the tenders for an athletic park which were submitted to the council last week. Much property changed hands a few years ago at boom prices, but in no city in Canada have prices remained so firm after a boom as in Medicine Hat. A close examination of the list will give the reader an idea of present values compared with those of a few years ago and also of comparative values in different parts of the city.

W. R. Ratington, block 15, plan 838 M, the Herald estate, $4,950.

J. W. Hamilton, in behalf of owners, all of block 12, being lots 1-40 inclusive, Riverside Park, Plan 726 M, $3,000.

J. W. Hamilton, in behalf of owners, all of block 3, Riverside Park, plan 726 M, $3,500.

H. K. Oakes, Island property now known as Strathcona Park, containing 54 acres, at $850 per acre, and for further sum of $3,000 tenderer will agree to erect a light traffic bridge and guarantee the same for ten years, bridge to connect Island with Dominion street.

O. W. Keely in behalf E. M. Powell blocks 5 and 7 for sum of $1225.

John Todd, lots 15 to 21, block 8 Yuill survey south on north side of King street, $2,500.

LITTLE PLUME

The Little Plume school closed and will not be re-opened until next April.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Carle is getting along so nicely, but sorry to know that she is still a convalescent.

By the looks of thing the Little Plume coal miners are doing quite a rushing business these days.

Miss G. Sprague went back to the city a week ago. Miss Sprague was teaching out here all summer and we were all sorry to see her go back to the city as she was to go.

Miss Marjorie Carle won the prize in the day school for the best, progressive girl in the primary class, and Master Angus Dickson the boy's prize.

Mr. Wm. Dickson has sold his part of the ranch on the Little Plume, known as the property of the Dickson Bros., to his brother Mr. A. Dickson.

Miss Adelaine Carle received the prize, a lovely book, for best attendance at the Little Plume School, for the summer term. Miss Adelaine never missed a day the whole summer nor was she late at all.

Three of the men of this and the Willow Creek district who have grown tired of waiting for the threshing machine to come to this part of the country have not only decided to keep their own grain from going to destruction but also that pr their neighbors by buying a threshing machine. The machine has not as yet arrived but you will soon hear the thresher throughout this and the Willow Creek district.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickson of Woodstock, Ont., passed through a short time ago on their way to their with the boys and young men in the turs home in British Columbia. Mr. county.

and Mrs. Dickson stopped over with their two sons, W. and A. Dickson, of this district for a few days.

Mrs. A. Shaw paid a few visits to some of her Up-the-creek friends a few days ago.

Mr. A. Carle got his thum badly crushed while working on his new barn, but we are glad to know that it is improving.

LISTEN TO US

"We are only little ones, but we know Zam-Buk eased our pain and cured our sores. Perhaps it would cure you, too, if you tried it?"

Isn't this sound advice from "babes and sucklings?" Take it! The speakers are the children of Mrs. L. Webster, of Seymour St., Montreal, and the mother adds weight to their appeal. She says: "My little girl contracted scalp disease at school. Bad gatherings formed all over her head, and not only caused the child acute pain but made her very ill. The sores discharged, and occurring on the scalp we feared she would lose all her hair. She was in a pitiable plight when we tried Zam-Buk, but a few days' treatment with this balm gave her ease. Then the sores began to heal, and we continued the Zam-Buk treatment. In a short time she was quite healed.

"My little boy sustained a serious scald on the neck. It set up a bad sore, and quite a few things we tried failed to heal it or give him ease. Once more we turned to Zam-Buk, and we were not disappointed. It acted like a charm in drawing away the pain, and soon healed the wound."

Zam-Buk is "something different" in the way of balms. It contains powerful healing herbal essences, which, as soon as applied to skin diseases, kill off the germs and end the painful smarting. Other essences contained there so stimulate the cells that new healthy tissue is speedily formed. Eczema, itch, ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, festering sores, blood poisoning, chronic wounds, cold cracks, etc., are healed and cured in this way. Use it for all skin injuries and diseases. It is also of great service for piles. All druggists and stores at 50 cents box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

HEALTH AND RELIEF

The health and relief committee's report was presented by the mayor. The total amount expended during the ten months was divided as follows:

Wages and salaries	$ 570.00
Scavenger work	1147.00
Nuisance ground expense	819.14
Paid on account relief	580.10
Sundries	36.67
Grant to Hospital	1,000.00
Total	4,153.41

The total amount estimated for the year was $5,830.

The medical health officer's report for the period Dec. 1, 1908 to Dec. 1, 1909, was read and showed the city singularly free from infectious and contagious diseases during the year. There was altogether during the year, one case of smallpox, 5 of chicken pox, 7 of diptheria, 6 of scarlet fever, 2 of measles, 43 of typhoid fever and of these 12 cases of typhoid 2 of diptheria and 1 of scarlet fever came from points outside the city. The greatest number of typhoid cases occurred in August, September and October, there being only one case in November. Thirteen houses were fumugated. It was gratifying to note that the council were taking steps to erect an isolation hospital, which it was hoped would be completed before the end of next year.

Mr. Foster enquired as to the source from which money could be obtained for the isolation hospital. Alderman Spencer stated that money was in the general fund and included

When the Cowboy Bought the Club.

Medicine Hat has some charming chaps, and also gas. It also has prospects. It is the town that was born lucky, so said Kipling. Kip was thinking about the infernal element that is under the ground. I am thinking about the eternal humor of the ex-mayor. I don't know his successor well enough to pass judgment, but they say he is doing the mayor stunt exceedingly beautifully; that his smile and his whiskers light up the town equally with the gas.

They also have a club down there, a delightful place, conducted on metropolitan club lines, an institution that does really great credit to the townsmen. It is no country club. It is run with regard for decoroum. Some of the members are rich cattle men who employ cowpunchers by the dozen. Along about holiday time the cow-punchers go to town to annihilato the year's accumulation and the way they do it is a very fancy way.

There is always a certain amount of toleration on festive dates, and so, when Mayor Cousins walked into the club one night, direct from a council meeting, he was greeted by a man in corduroys, with a red bandana tie and hat far back, revealing an unkempt shock of wool.

"Hellow pard!" said he to the mayor, as he came forward to offer an hospitable hand. His step was uncertain but his starved and smothered hospitable instinct was flaming hot. For a long dreary year he had punched cattle over the parched plain. For a hundred nights he had sat alone and drear, astride his wrangler nag. For unending days he had followed the leads along the endless quest for strays and never had he in all that time been privileged to buy a pard a drink. He was consumed with hospitable desire. He had come in and taken over the town and now he was owner of the Cyprus Club. "Wat'ch goin' to have to drink?" he asked as he clasped the mayor's hand. And, as he observed the mayoralty smile of good natured indulgence, his over-full heart burst and he threw his rugged arms about the mayor's yielding shoulders and in a cooing voice begged to know, — "Wat'ch goin' to have to drink pard? What ever 'tis you want is your'n for the whole dang lay-out's mine, and I'm goin' to give it to youse," and he drew back and slammed the worshipful shoulders a mighty bang that would have felled a maverick, and insisted upon knowing what it was to be.

The mayor smiled and explained that as it was a bit early he would have a cigar, which the cowboy bought with gusto quite as large as the denomination of the bill. Another gentleman, who had been looking on cautioned the cowboy to go a bit easy as the man with whom he was making so familar was the mayor. But, instead of being whithered the cowboy stepped back and sized the mayor up from head to foot, and then he took his hat and slammed it in the corner, and did a jig-step to the tune of his own warbling. And then he descended upon the mayor without stretched arms. "The may'r" he cried. "Gad blast my lodigo, now who'd a thunk it! The may'r! Jist the man I'm lookin' fer. I've been readin' the papers and I seen yer name, and now I'm talkin' to youse yerself. By gum, it can't be true." and he laid a brawny hand upon the mayor's shoulder and peered grinning down into his face. "Is it right or are they kiddin' me?" asked he, and upon being assured by no one's denial, of the fact, he realized his opportunity had come. Medicine Hat was the centre of the ranching life the magnetic pole to which all eyes turned longingly. And now he was in it, in its swellest "hang-out," and square afront the mayor. He reached deep down into the recesses of his pockets and hauled up a wad of bills which he scattered all about the place. "I'm it," he said. "And you're it, and w'at's t goin' to be? No smoke fer you'rn, nor for the may'r. Here, pard"—this to the servant— "This is the may'r. D'you know him He's my frien'. And I want him to have the best gol-durn sample of booze you've got in your joint. D' you understand? Now, May'r, name the poison. This is a drink with me" Well of course there was nothing to it, the mayor had to fall to. He said what it would be and so did all the rest. But it was a matter of no consequence what the others took; the mayor was the man that he was buying for and he watched the details of the service with a critic's eye until the thing was done.

After the drink was taken the cowboy buttoned up his coat, assumed a posture in the middle of the room, and to every one's surprise, repeated with a memory remarkable, the local paper's accounts of the recent council meetings. Alderman so-and-so said that and the cowboy knew it all by heart. A neat touch of human interest it was to which they listened. The local paper had been the only literature to which the cowboy, for the long, long time in camp, had had access, and it he had devoured with an interest that had retained its details in his memory. No doubt ambition stirred within his breast, and he thought of the time when he would be the owner of a herd of cattle and live in town and be an alderman.

So unusual was the incident, so amusing his recital of the stories of the council business, such clumsy cleverness found their way into his jokes that the mayor bought. A game of life pool was proposed for the cowboy's entertainment, at which the latter lost regularly, with observations on his luck and their manner of "doin'" him, so amusing as to keep the house in continuous uproar. Abruptly, in the middle of the game, the cowboy took his cue, and with all the dignity at his command, walked out. And doubtless to this day the lone cowboy recalls with pride the night he bought the Cyprus Club from Mayor Cox.—Calgary Optimist.

The King in Private Life

No European sovereign is so much a man of the open air as the king and since he came to the throne he has seemed to live even more and more out of doors. His Majesty's health is excellent as evidence of the good results which follow abundant exercise and much fresh air. He is sixty-eight years old, but with increasing years he retains his surprising vigor of mind and body. He is singularly energetic, though not as active in the sense of one who walks rapidly and far. When there is nothing better available for an out-of-door occupation he does not despise the gentle game of croquet, though he has never fallen a victim to golf.

He is not afraid of rain, and my observation leads me to the belief that he actually revels in the brisk freshness of a heavy shower. He hardly ever uses an umbrella, or at least, I cannot remember having seen him do so. For life out of doors he prefers clothes which will resist the rain, but he does not seem to like a mackintosh. Clad in a long cloth coat, which completely covers his other clothes, he scorns to take shelter from even a tropical downpour. He likes the sea not only in its fairer moods, as when he is yachting in pleasant weather on the Solent, but also when he can watch it in a storm. Often I have seen him out on a small terrace overlooking the Bay of Biscay when the waves were rolling savagely in towards the shore. The rocks throw up the spray in fine clouds as the King stood watching the sunset beyond the Cote Des Basques, and enjoying the salt wind that came in from the stormy Atlantic. On his tour abroad this year the King was perpetually out of doors, in the royal yacht, or ashore in motor-cars or carriages. He picnicked wherever he could, even at Girgenti and Pompeii. Malta was entirely traversed in the Duke of Connaught's motor-car.

His Majesty, is indeed, at his best when he is at home in Norfolk. Then he becomes as one of the Norfolk farmers, and the people of King's Lynn delight to name him the "Squire of Sandringham." Those of us who most highly appreciate His Majesty for his great gifts of statesmanship, for his illustrous position among European rulers, for his power, as M. Delcesse put it, of doing the right thing in the right way at the right time in the right place, have only a slight idea of the deep affectation which is entertained for the King as Squire. He is best of landlords, of course, but he is also a strict one. No public house is allowed on his Majesty's property. Instead he has provided club-houses in every village on the estate.

The King is not in the least selfish in the enjoyment of his Norfolk estate. Even on days when big shoots are toward, with perhaps the famous Horseshoe covert to wind up the day there are few restrictions imposed. Not only is Sandringham one of the most perfectly managed properties in England, but it is one of the most open. Wide highways intersect it. Just now on the broad main road, which sweeps round by the beautiful gates, presented on their marriage to the Prince and Princess of Wales by the city of Norwich—gates from which the King has not removed the arms of the many titles he bore as Prince of Wales@the graceful pheasants strut on leisurely or lift themselves over the fences into the wood. Never a keeper is in sight. November usually finds a damp wind blowing from the Wash, an unpleasant product of the North Sea but for the wayfarer the sturdy pines break its force, and even in winter give a fresh wholesome aroma to the air. From the end of the avenue the Wash may be seen on a fine day glittering in the sunshine, but normally when frost is absent, it is dull brown stretch of shallows. The avenue is open to anyone, bent on an autumn walk, and all the ravages of the storm of two years ago have been repaired.

Since His Majesty went to Marlenbad he has lived in the open. He will continue to lead an open-air life till the turn of the year. He has been shooting grouse and deer in Scotland. After that in the south, he has been busy among partridge and pheasant at friends' houses such as West Dean park, Moulton paddocks and elsewhere. There are still to come the busy, happy days when he is always out of doors, no matter how the weather is, at Sandringham, and the more formal but still largely out of doors at Windsor.

His Majesty has not attempted to be a crack shot like his friend and cousin the late Don Carlos or his lively nephew, the King of Spain. King Alfonso likes to take off his coat and cap when he gets in a hot corner and make the most of it. With His Majesty, I fancy, shooting is a means to an end. He likes the sport for its own sake, but more because it takes him among the healthy delight of the field and wood.

Few are more skilled in the management of a sporting estate than the king. His head keeper, Mr. Jackson, constantly consults him, and the King takes no more surface interest in the intricacies of game preservation with due regards to the rights of others. He arranges the beats personally and with much skill, and he enjoins a rather strict observance of all the rules. At Windsor, when foreign sportsmen are in the train of one or other of the monarchs the king overlooks many quaint performances. For himself, he is a good clean shot. He has a sure eye and if he does not perhaps welcome a spring of rocketers he does not refuse a hard shot when it comes his way. His favorite shooting kit consists of tweed, often grey in tint, in knickerbocker suit with a long loose shooting cape. Thus clad he is regardless of rain, dripping branches, and wet undergrowth. Between the beats he invariably lights a cigar, and when he has mounted one or other of his two favorite shooting ponies often discusses the bag before moving off to the next beat. Sometimes when he sees some old tenant or retainer or other friend he halts on his way and enjoys a chat in the most unaffected way. But Sandringham to me has always a pleasing suggestion of Bracebridge hall and that perfect English gentleman whom Washington Irving mirrored. Whimsically enough the quotation seems apt: "The ancientest house, and the best for housekeeping in this county or next, and though the master of it writ but squire, I know no lord like him."

The King lives in the midst of a hunting district, but not for many years have hounds cast off at Sandringham. They never "found" there by any chance, and the chaffing remark is still made that this was due to the king being a game preserver. It was one of the things that really amused the king when he attended a meet near-by a year ago that the hounds found no fox and Lord Rosmy had a blank day.

Motoring the King has made an art. It meant much to him in ease and comfort with which he can spend hours in fresh air and all the time in open country. He has robbed ceremonial of half its tiresomness by recognition of the capabilities of a perfectly organized motor stable.—W. F. Grey in the Daily Mail.

"Explorations in Bible Lands"

Lecture in Baptist Church

A lecture of an intensely interesting character was given in the Baptist church on Friday evening by R. H. Mode, M.A., P.H.D., who has recently returned from the Holy Land where he has been engaged in research work for the University of Chicago. The lecture was illustrated by nearly a hundred lantern views.

Taking as his subject, "Explorations in Bible Lands," Dr. Mode conducted his hearers on an imaginary tour through the cities of Palestine, giving the history of the ruins left by the once powerful nations of Israel, as monuments of its greatness to succeeding ages. The slides were all made from photographs taken by Dr. Mode himself, many of them as recently as last May. The Temple of Jerusalem was thrown upon the screen, showing the beautiful gate which is an object of never ending wonder and delight to visitors to the Holy Land. The Temple is now held and very closely guarded by the Moslems, and to attempt entrance without first gaining the consent of the Turkish authorities is to court almost certain death. Other beautiful churches were shown, built by the Emperor Justinian, and containing inlaid marble and fretwork, than which nothing finer may be seen anywhere. A slide was shown of a building of exquisite design carved out of the solid rock by the work of many thousands of slaves.

The excavations of archaeologists have revealed the fact that under the ground on which the cities of today stand are the ruins of many cities of bygone times, dating back as far as the dim ages before history was written. The inhabitants lived in huts made of mud, and when dwellings fell into disrepair and finally collapsed, a new city was erected on the ruins. Under one site has been discovered the ruins of no fewer than ten former cities, the lowest being seventy-one feet below the ground level of today.

Very interesting side-lights were thrown by the lecturer on the social life of the people who inhabit the Holy Land in our time. Civilization under the rule of Abdul Hamid has remained at a very low ebb and superstition and race hatred are rife among the populace. Dr. Mode himself narrowly escaped death by stoning while a sojourner in Jerusalem. As in almost all countries but those of western Europe and the new world scant respect is paid to woman-hood and almost all the druddery is done by the women. There was a large attendance at Friday's meeting and all spoke in terms of highest appreciation of the lecture by one who has had more than common facilities for learning of the country of the nativity of Our Lord. During the course of the evening Dr. Mode exhibited a number of relics of Palestine, including the quaint costume worn by its people of today.

Parliamentary Reflections

Ottawa, December 18th—Before the last general election Sir Wilfrid Laurier appealed to the people to give him four years more to finish his work. Everybody knew that this would end the Liberal regime, but it was hardly thought that with three whole years to run, trouble within the party would break out so soon. The Liberal party at Ottawa are showing the process of dismemberment begun. Three bolts in one day, and three showing their teeth the next is somewhat serious. Six malcontents with the courage to express themselves, and two of them amongst the very oldest men in the party is more than a mere handful.

The story of the troubles is worth recording. Incidentally on a party division in the house the government secured the smallest majority since it came into office in 1896. Twenty-two within one of the fatal number of 28, were all it could roll up, and the opposition was hilarious in its enthusiasm when the figures were announced. And a more dumfounded band of men never sat on the government benches when the significance of the vote became apparent and those to the left of the Speaker roared their delight. And the man on whose shoulders the blame lies is the infant member of the cabinet, W. L. Mackenzie King, minister of labor. He had an easy task before him, but in his very first venture as spokesman for the government he fell at the first hurdle.

The question which occupied the attention of the house for the whole day was that of technical education Mr. Guthrie, who for three sessions has asked for a commission of enquiry to investigate Canadian needs in respect thereto, brought up the matter again in the old-time form of resolution, and the house settled down to listen with varying degrees of attention to a series of academic addresses on the subject. All went well until Mr. Mackenzie King bounded into the arena. Up to that time Liberals as well as Conservatives had favored Mr. Guthrie's resolution and the old well-worn arguments were trotted forth, as in previous sessions. Ralph Smith and Alphonse Verville, the two pseudo labor representatives in the house, long since submerged in the tide of votes they have given for the Laurier cause, expressed their strong approval of the proposed commission of enquiry, and all went merrily as the proverbial marriage bell.

Then up came Mackenzie King. This was the new minister's maiden speech and he spoke for the government. He treated the house to the extraordinary spectacle of a man strongly advocating technical education, and then treading down the resolution which would bring nearer a better system, by raising the bogey that it would interfere with provincial autonomy in regard to educational matters, and until the government was assured on this point its hands were tied. The chief point of Mr. Guthrie's speech was that it did not call for anything except commission enquiry, but Mr. King would not even agree to this, and after indulging in an ecstatic dream of the advantages to be gained by technical education, moved the adjournment of the debate, which was tantamount to shelving the subject again.

This however did not suit the house, and Mr. Borden gave the new minister some practical pointers on practical statesmanship he pointed out that the phantom of interference with provincial rights was nothing but a phantom. Then came the deluge. Messrs Currie, Prince Edward Ontario; Thoburn, Lanark; Samuel Hughes and Dr. Sproule, voiced their sympathy with Mr. Guthrie's motion and Mr. Guthrie sat tight. Mr. Fielding tried to come to the rescue of Mr King and asserted that if the debate was postponed that did not necessarily mean the shelving of the whole question. The Dominion Government might properly legislate regarding technical education, but might find difficulty in controlling the system. He moved the debate adjourned.

Then it was Mr. Guthrie's turn to move, and while he accepted the assurance of Mr. Fielding that the postponement of the subject did not mean its shelving, he pointed out that it could hardly be thought he should vote against his own motion. And so the division bells rang out, through the lobbies, and it was seen at once that the division would be a close one. Messrs Guthrie, Powko and Verville voted against the Fielding motion for adjournment and were greeted by loud cheers by the opposition.

Mr. Currie, of Prince Edward who had made a strong speech in favor of the Guthrie resolution was greeted with ironical cheers when he voted against it. Mr. Wilcox of North Essex who redeemed the riding for the Conservatives was given an ovation by the opposition when he rose to record his vote. He took his seat only today. Then came the voice of Dr. Flint, the clerk, announcing the figures, and tumult reigned for a brief space. Mr. Fielding promptly moved the adjournment of the house and members of both sides trooped into the lobbies, eagerly discussing the closing scenes of a debate which had cut a normal majority by more than half, all due to the lack of diplomacy on the part of a new minister who has been heralded far and wide as a rising Canadian diplomat. R. Smith stayed away.

But more was to come, next day there was further trouble for the government. Dr. J. B. Black told the government that he must have more light on the bill to acquire branch lines for the Intercolonial railway and freely voiced his suspicions regarding the measure. He intimated that he might vote against the bill but the premier was present when the opportunity arrived and he sat tight.

Col. Talbot of Belchasse, who all along has been considered nothing if not a blind supporter frankly told the government that he would oppose the bill. As remarked above when the time came the premier was present and he also preserved silence.

But the worst blow of all fell from E. M. Macdonald of Pictou, one of the ablest lawyers on the Liberal side and certainly a more capable man than half a dozen or more of the cabinet. He boldly accused the government of the introduction of an "unfortunate principle" by applying the Industrial Disputes Act to the trouble between the I.C.E and its employees. In unmeasured tones he condemned the government for resorting to such an act.

Six malcontents in two days and a low water majority of 22 requires some explanation.

Ottawa, December 13—The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto World describes Mr. C. A. Magrath, M.P. for Medicine Hat, as a man who is destined to become a prominent figure in the public life of Canada. This is true. Mr. Magrath is strong enough to be no mere partisan. While he is Conservative he holds independent views on a good many things, and he is always fair. He never speaks in the house unless he has something of moment to talk about, and he always rises to the high standard of discussing policy.

Last week he proposed a new departure which will appeal to most thinking people. At present the public works department is managed in the most hopelessly unbusinesslike manner. For instance a vote has gone through to establish a post office at Marieville, Que., costing $25,000. Now in Marieville there are only 1300 inhabitants and the post office department made no request for a post office. It was simply a question of vulgar party patronage. Other places for which a post office was asked for by the post office department have been neglected. The most notable case is that of Lethbridge. The postmaster general asked for the establishment of an adequate building there, but it was refused.

Mr. Magrath suggested, and he will probably take some steps to endeavor to bring it about, that the erection of public buildings should be at the request and endorsation of the department primarily responsible. A new post office should only be erected on a request from the post office department, which has a direct interest in serving the whole country to the best of its ability and judgment. This would help to remove the influence of politicians who are after more political graft for their constituences.

KEEP OUT OF THE RUT

"See that sharp-eyed individual, over there by the window?" asked my companion, as we took seats in a cafe which prides itself in the number of live ones who take luncheon at its tables.

"He's worth half a million, and he made it mighty easy."

"How?" I enquired.

"Just keeping out of the ruts," was the quick answer.

"He's the whole works up in the northern town where his factory and shops are located. There's only one thing in the world he's afraid of and that's a rut. Honest, he's so touchy on that point that his teamsters actually have instructions: 'To never drive in the same rut twice. This business would be dead if it didn't keep out of the ruts.' Up there they call him Keep-Out-of-the-Rut.

"Some say that he got his crank ideas when he was working as a teamster and had a wagon break under him because he got in a rut.

"Anyhow, something just soaked in all through this young man's system that the plan of salvation for the twentieth century was focused in the words 'keep out of the rut.' On that basis he began business in a dinky little shed as big as a villager cobbler's shop. It was hard sledding at first, but the men who bought off him found that he always had something new, that he invariably kept as far a head of his competitors as the marshal of the day rides in advance of the marching column in grand parade. And he not only made new things but he made the old standard things in new ways and of new materials.

"His little cubby hole shop grew and grew until now he's worth half a million. He's pounded it into every man who works for him that the thing to do is to 'keep out of the rut.'"

The farm hand, the preacher, the mechanic, the artist, the college professor who sticks to the rut of tradition is the one who is left behind. No matter what your task, see if you can't get out of your rut and do it better. And if you can't do it better do it differently. So long as that doesn't involve actual loss of efficiency, simply to do it differently is a gain in itself.—Chicago Tribune.

THE TREES

(E. H. in December Ladies (Home Journal)

"Summer is gone!" said the Trees "The fall of the year is come and it is time for us to dress up and be gay."

"I shall wear red!" said a Maple. "Sunset red is my color."

"Yellow for me!" said another. "My dress shall be like pure gold."

"I choose purple!" said the Ash. "It is the color of kings, and suits me very well."

"What will you wear? they all said to the little Fir.

"I have no other dress," said the Fir sadly. "I must wear my plain green frock."

"Te hee!" laughed the Maples and Birches and Ash trees rustling their leaves and nodding their heads, "She has but one dress. What a poor thing she is!"

But the old Pine waved his dark branches and said: "Hush! hush! I know what I know!"

"We know too," cried the Maples. "We know that in snow time Santa Claus comes and chooses the finest tree, and dresses it in gold and silver and hangs stars all over it. That is why we wish to be fine and gay."

"Hush! hush!" said the old Pine "I know what I know."

So the trees put on their fine robes gold and red and purple, and each one was finer than the rest, only the little Fir and the great old Pine stayed just as they were, in their green dresses.

Now it grew cold and a bleak wind blew through the forest. The Trees shivered and drew their bright robes close around them. Colder still it grew and snow fell, and the wind moaned; and one day Jack Frost came in his silver coat and touched the bright leaves with his shimmy brush, and they curled up and turned brown, and one by one, fell rustling, to the ground. Soon the poor Maples and Birches and the purple Ash who thought he looked like a king, stood all bare, and the wind blew through their branches, and they shook with the cold. They looked at the Fir and wished they had her warm green dress.

Now came Santa Claus, driving his reindeer team through the forest cracking his whip, and ringing his bells. He looked at the Trees with his bright eyes.

"Ho! ho!" he said as he saw the Maples and Birches. "What a beggarly set. Why they have not a cloak among them to keep them warm. These will never do for me."

But now he saw the little Fir and a smile came over his face.

"This is the tree for me!" he cried "Will you come with me little Fir and be the children's tree and make many hearts glad?"

"That I will!" said the little Fir gladly.

So Santa Claus took her away and dressed her in gold and silver and hung stars all over her, and she became the Xmas Tree and many hearts were glad because of her.

"Hush! Hush!" said the old Pine, "I knew what I knew."

The Saskatchewan government will make a reduction in the grant to schools throughout the province.

At the annual convention of the Lord's Day Alliance held in Edmonton last week a resolution was passed favoring the closing of all post-offices on the Lord's Day. Mr. W. J. Brotherton of this city was elected as a member of the executive.

The second number of Calgary's new paper, The Optimist, is to hand; and being quite unlike anything Calgary has at present in the line of newspaper, will no doubt find a welcome in many a home. It has the usual departments of a city weekly—society, sport, theatres, etc., all in good form. Also a couple of articles illustrative of its name, full of optimism. The liberal advertising patronage the new venture has received will be a source of strength to it.

The Home Coming

A Christmas Story by Jean Blewett

They are mother and daughter one mean feeling," she says. "I never can see at a glance. The girl is fair had it."
the mother has been; the girls hair is a shiny brown, the woman's has been; the girl's eyes are a deep blue, full of fun and gladness, the woman's have been; the girl is plump and soft and good to see, the woman has been. There is something pathetic in the sight of them sitting side by side in the car.

They are objects of special interest from the time they get on the train at Chicago until they get off at a Canadian country town. There seems a perfect sympathy between them. They are friends and good comrades. You gather from these and other facts that they have lived much by themselves. The girl's childishness shows in the faded woman, the woman's quaintness lends itself to the girl. When they speak their words can be heard above the rumble of the train. They are from the big prairie homestead and have plenty of space for themselves. I doubt if the girl knows how to whisper.

There is not a man in the car but is ready to tell them the name of every town and city we pass. The drummer stumbles over his grip in his eagerness to be of service in opening a window; the tall college lad leads them out to lunch; the burly old fellow in the black silk skull cap hovers over them like a homely old guardian angel; the asthmatic old lady offers thim peppermints; the gruff Englishman who keeps his newspaper and a wall of reserve between himself and his fellow passengers in general, thaws enough to listen at times to their gossip.

The woman grows nerveus as the day wears on, she fidgets, she looks at her watch, she wonders if the train is not behind time.

"Fifteen years is a long time to be away from kin and country—a long, long time Janie." Her voice has a tremble in it. Somehow you feel the homesickness of all those years touch you. "Oh, Janie, if you knew how I have longed to have someone about me who would talk of home."

The girl pats her hand lovingly. "Homesickness must be a mortal

"Mean! I'll tell you what it is. It's being starved and famished for some thing you know in your heart you can't get; it's wishing and waiting for what's out of reach; it's—" She breaks off suddenly and looks out of the window. The Englishman rustles his paper noisily; a husky cough escapes the old gentleman in the skull cap.

"It all comes back to me today," she goes on. "We've done well out West, and everybody allows it was the best move your pa ever made when he sold his fifty acres in Ontario and got five hundred in the West. But it was awful hard on me. There wasn't a woman within fifteen miles—nobody to talk to but your pa—and you can imagine how much company he'd be with all that work on his hands. Oh, how tiresome it was! I used to fancy I heard the maples fluttering in the wind, and saw the old house with the windows covered with jessamine and morning glories. No other spot is ever quite so dear as the place you are born and brought up in. And when I'd break down and cry for father, mother and Tom, and everybody, your pa used to tell me there was no use worrying over trifles. Trifles!"

"Pa didn't understand," says the girl apologetically.

"No, he meant all right. Fifteen years is a long time," with a weary sigh. "I was young and bright, and —yes, pretty when I said good-bye, and I'm coming back an old woman. Loneliness and work are hard things on women, Janie."

The Englishman throws down his paper and gives his coat collar an impatient twist. "Deuce take these women and their sentiment," this twist says as plainly as words.

The little faded woman from the prairie is not thinking of her audience at all. She is going home, home and exhilaration and nervousness render her garrulous. She kep the secret old memories locked in her heart for a long while, and now, with the welcome and gladness so near, it is a perfect joy to pour them out to Janie.

"You never knew anybody like mother. They don't grow such women out West. 'Make the best of it, dearie,' she said at parting, but I just couldn't at first. I was homesick for the old folks and the old places, for the creeks, for the hill we climbed on our way to the village, for the very hedge along the road, for the creaking gate, for everything. I couldn't get the ache out of my throat, and I fairly hated the miles and miles of prairie—got it into my head the sky didn't come down as close to the earth as it did in Ontario."

"You poor little mammie"

"One night I nearly scared your pa to death. You were so sick I thought you were dying, and I couldn't stand to see your little face growing whiter and whiter. My heart was breaking and I rushed outdoors and called 'Mother! mother! mother!' as hard as I could. The cows lifted their sleepy faces over the bars to look at me, I remember, and your pa came running out bareheaded. I went back as quiet as could be, so quiet that I've often thought that God hearing me cry out for her took is as a sort of prayer and answered it right away."

There are big tears in Janie's eyes and in my own. The man in the skull cap blows his nose noisily; the asthmatic old lady, in an ungovernable fit of generosity, empties the whole bag of peppermints into the little woman's lap; the Englishman turns his back on the whole sentimental lot of us and looks out of the window."

It is sunset of a spring day when we leave the Detroit river behind and go flying through Canadian territory. She grows more excited. "Look, Janie," she says, "you never saw such a sky in my life; look how it bends over the trees yonder. Nobody need tell me it doesn't come closer here than it does in the West"

As the dark comes on she grows quieter, and after a long silence we hear the girl telling her not to cry.

"I'm not crying, at least not much," comes the broken answer. "I'm just thinking. When I saw my parents last I looked like you look now, and—oh, Janie, I've got so old and homely they may not know me. Your pa used to say I was vain of my looks, but I wasn't only it's hard to know I'm so changed. See the grey hair and the wrinkles, dear."

The faded blue eyes, wet and wistful, seek the girl's bright face. The girl looks lovingly back. "You're the prettiest woman in the world, that's what you are," she cries emphatically.

The brakesman calls their station. We all bustle forward to help them off. "Allow me," says the Englishman, and fairly carries them both to the platform where a fine old couple stand waiting. The light shines on them. We all share in the joy of the home coming. We hear a glad cry, a smothered sob. It is the girl with the wild rose cheeks and the soft brown hair that the father clasps first. Why not?? She is more familar than the grey faced woman, more like his girl, the pretty girl who went away. But a mother makes no such mistakes. Her eyes change not nor note a change, and the faded little woman is gathered close to the bosom where she rested as a child. The tra n moves on and all of us are very still.

Lecture on French History

On Saturday evening Prof. Kerr of the University of Alberta delivered the first of four extension lectures on "The Age of Louis XIV," a series which promises to be one of the most intensely interesting in the course. the lecturer proposes to deal with the great political activities of France under the reign of the grand monarch, w eh the court life of the period, and with the progress of literature and arts. On Saturday he traced the history of France from the earl est times when Gaul was inhabited by wHd Celtic tribes, down through the era of Roman occupation to the age of Louis. An impartial view of history, the lecturer held would give to France the palm of having been the greatest civilizing influence in the history of the modern world. It was France which earliest became a national entity and attained to a distinctive national l fe. For many centuries she remained the leader in Europe in politics, in literature and in art. In the reign of Louis XIV the climax was reached, and France never attained to greater heights. It was true that under Napoleonic tyranny France for a time dominated Europe, but this was due to Napoleon's personal genius, and to the republican fanaticism of the time. Since the age of Pericles probably during no period had so many great thinkers, artists, poets, and statesmen been gathered on the stage of the national life of a people at one period, as during the years when Louit Quator ze was king.

From the time of the Roman conquest France gradually became a centre of culture. Roman customs, manners and religion and language had gradually supplanted those of the savage trites, and it became the fashion to send youths from Rome to Gaul to complte their education.

Prof. Kerr then traced the history of France from the time when Roman occupation was withdrawn, through the reigns of the earlier Frankish kings. Gradually the power of the barons was destroyed, until under Philip the Fair with the prosecution of the Knights Templars (who had become a powerful monied class) and the confiscation of their property, the throne became the centre of all authority. The nobles ceased to be the more or less independent rulers of provinces and became court gentlemen.

At the close of the Hundred Years' war, the English king, who had held as a French noble the province of Anjou, was driven from France and the modern epoch began. The kings created large standing armies, with which the populace could be subdued in times of peace and in times of war the borders of France enlarged and her international prestige enhanced. Then came the great internal struggle between the Catholic and the Protestant faiths. The Edict of Nantes, 1598, gave the country ten years of good government and peace in which wealth grew a pace, and in 1610 Henry IV. had in the treasury 20,000,000 francs. Richelieu, who was the greatest power in France apart from the throne from 1624 until his death in 1642, did much to make the monarchy an absolutism. With the persecution of Huguenot nobles came war and the victory of Richelieu at Rochelle over the English — he was able to dictate his own terms. The end of the Thirty Years' war by the treaty of Westphal a gave France a large addition of her territory. Louis XIV came to the throne at the height of France's glory. The explorations of Cartier in Quebec of the great west Indian adventures, gave lustre to the name of France throughout the world. In the East Indies the French did not meet with as great success as the English and Dutch.

Louis XIV did much to foster the industries of France in fact many of these were created by him. Glass workers were brought from Venice in 1665 and lace workers at a later period. Many of the foreign lace-workers were made school mistresses the hope of the king being that by this means the peasantry would become trained in the new industry.

Canada the lecturer said had not been the first country to have a transportation problem. In France in the seventeenth century the first scientific roadbuilding began. Travel was slow and dangerous, and until after the middle of the century there were no great highways to form the arteries of trade. But from the time of Louis onwards there has been no country better served by roads. Attempts were made to navigate rivers which had hitherto proved unnavigable. In 1681 it was possible to travel by water from Toulouse to the Bay of Biscay, by means of the rivers and canals. The French, ever a people of industry and ability and national spirit incarnate came to realize, under this reign, a prosperity such as had never been known before.

Concluding Lectures in Fiction Series

Dr. Broadus Condemns the Short Story

Scores Modern Methods of Education

Last week Dr. Broadus was to have delivered three lectures, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. He was unable, however, to reach the city on Monday, and consequently found it necessary to condense the subject matter of three lectures in such a fashion as to cover the course in the two remaining nights at his disposal.

On Tuesday he lectured on "Romantic Fiction." Romance he said was the love of the remote and different and otherworldly. To the adult it was what play is to a child. No better example of romantic spirit could be given than that furnished by R. L. Stevenson in describing a band of his youthful associates and their means of enjoyment. In the city of Edinburgh a group of boys of whom he was one, formed among themselves a society. The Lantern Bearers. Every evening after nightfall, these youths would roam through the streets of the city in the drizzle and mist, armed with bull's eye lanterns, concealed under their greatcoats. As they passed each other they would for a moment uncover the lanterns revealing themselves one to the other as members of their order. All this seemed nonsense. The lanterns were of no use, they shed no light on the way. The bearers passed from place to place. But to the imagination of the boys the rooting of all the glamour of the remote, and in their play they were transported to another world, the world of the ideal. Romance and the spirit of romantic desire, was the hunger that could only be satisfied by the things of the imaginary world.

In its earlier development the romance was loosely constructed and plotted, a mere tale, to be superseded later by a higher type of the Elizabethan world, full of rich fancies the age of discovery, when each day brought tidings of some new land and the English continually roamed the seas in search of adventure, was pre-eminently adapted for the production of romance. It was then that Lyly, and the zenith of her power, and the world seemed boundless to the English of that day. In the days of Queen Bess, the lives of literary men centred round the court, with all its glitter and intrigue. Rural England they did not know. And their romances were purely pastoral, their characters shepherds and shepherdesses, idealized and most poetic. Lodge's "Rosalind," from which the plot of "As You Like It" was drawn was typical of those days. While the great novelists of the 19th century were restrained and careful in their use of language, those of the 16th were florid and extravagant. All the heroines of the old romances were paragons of beauty; their hair was compared to gold wire, their eyes to stars. Writers spent all their adjectives and metaphors until there was nothing left for further comparison. Every female character, even if she were not the heroine, had lavished upon all her the superlatives of which the writer could conceive. The descriptions palled by over-comparison. It was left for a great critic, who was also a great poet—Shakespere—to ridicule this school of romance writers.

After reading from the works of one of the 16th century novelists a passage of highly colored discriptive writing, the lecturer contrasted this with the restraint and avoidance of exaggeration which characterizes the romantic fiction of the great writers who have lived in our own day. Meredith's description of Lucy in "Richard Feverel" was read, illustrating the air of aloofness, and the sincerity with which the modern author described his heroine.

"She was indeed sweetly fair, and would have been held fair among rival damsels. On the magic shore, and to a youth educated by a system, strung like an arrow drawn to the head, he, it might be guessed, could fly fast and far with her. The soft rose in her cheeks, the clearness of her eyes, bore witness to the body's virtue; and health and happy blood were in her bearing. Had she stood before Sir Austin among rival damsels, that Scientific Humanist, for the consummation of his System, would have thrown her the handkerchief for his son. The wide sunbrown hat, nodding over her forehead to her brows, seemed to flow with the flowing heavy curls, and those fire-threaded mellow curls, only half curls, waves of hair call them, rippling at the ends, went like a sunny red-veined torrent down her back almost to her waist: a glorious vision to the youth, who embraced it as a flower of beauty, and read not a feature. There were curious features of color in her face for him to have read. Her brows, thick and brownish against a soft skin showing the action of the blood, met in the bend of a bow, extending to the temples long and level: you saw that she was fashioned to peruse the sights of earth, and by the pliability of her brows that the wonderful creature used her faculty, and was not going to be a statue to the gazer. Under the dark thick brows an arch of lashes shot out, giving a wealth of darkness in the full frank blue eyes, a mystery of meaning—more than brain was ever meant to fathom: richer, henceforth, than all mortal wisdom to Prince Ferdinand. For when nature turns artist, and produces contrasts of soft or on a fair face, where is the Sage or what the Oracle, shall match the depth of its lightest look?"

Here was poetry far more exquisite than that of the pastoral writers of Elizabethan times, in a book which, in its earlier chapters at least, was as entertaining a romance as one could desire.

Among the courtiers of Queen Bess was one, Sir Philip Sidney, at the same time a diplomatist, a fine critic and novelist, a poet, and a patriot who bore arms with the most valiant and was in the end to die on the field of battle, chivalrously and nobly as he had lived. His works stood our preeminently in his age. "Arcadia," founded on the story of the old province of Arcadia in Greece was one of the greatest of these, and its influence was widely felt both in England and in France. In the seventeenth century his imitators were many, the figures of Alexander the Great and of Cleopatra, and others outstanding in the history of the ancient world, were idealized by romance authors and many other imaginary characters introduced. In this way historical romance began.

In the earlier part of the 18th century, the people of England were devoted to very serious practical problems, and romance was eclipsed for a time as the best one in thought turned their attention to criticism and the meting out of justice. But when the middle period of the century had been turned, a reaction came. In 1762 Thomas Leished "Longsword, the History of the Earl of Salisbury," an historical novel in which the characters were knights and ladies of chivalric times, fine courtiers, true lovers. But it was not until the dawn of the nineteenth century that the great master of the historical novel, Sir Walter Scott, appeared, and put into practice the methods of the older school, adding his own great genius. Taking from the pages of history names enrolled on the scroll of fame, he idealized them. History for him was merely the material background for his characters, and mere historic accuracy was not considered of importance. The characters he cared for in his novels were not as a rule the historical figures, but the wondrous things created from his own imagination.

With Scott the historical novel reached its zenith. In later years chiefly one historical novelist of note arose—George Eliot, and of this type, though she had spent the best years of her life in Florence gathering material and color, was not a great novel. It lacked the divine fire of the great master, who, though he wrote at great pressure and often carelessly, infused into his work the glow of genius.

Romance writing, scorned by many down to our own day, and the only claim to recognition of the modern writer of this kind of fiction was historic accuracy. This accuracy was emphasized by the critics, for it was the only virtue of the new novel. It could never be said, "This book realizes character,"—the true ideal of the novelist, and the only hall mark of true art.

Another type of romantic fiction had its genesis in the later eighteenth century. Its appeal was based on the love of mystery and of terror. Horace Walpole was its creator. Its scenes were laid in old gothic castles: ghosts appeared in dark corners of crannies, maidens fainted. The reader was thrilled with sensations of horror. It remained for a woman to this girl to perform the work which Cervantes had performed for the Arcadian fallen and by her subtle satire to destroy the exaggerated fiction of this school. No romantic fiction could survive her attack. Many years passed while the great realists—George Eliot, Dickens and others held the field. But again the great human heart-hunger was to assert itself; the imagination again sought the steller spaces, following the gleam of wild fancy, and with Robert Louis Stevenson modern romantic fiction was born. This generation had produced two past-masters of the art—Stevenson, and Anthony Hope. Stevenson, in the "New Arabian Nights" and "Treasure Island" and others, and Anthony Hope in such books as "The Prisoner of Zenda," were, par excellence, novelists of the remote and other-worldly. Their books breathed with the spirit of youthful adventure and high spirits. This perhaps, was not the highest type of fiction. It did not plumb the depths of the human soul or touch the profounder things of life. But while serious theories could claim attention only on moral grounds, in fiction there was room for that which might be termed "immoral," the treatment of class, open air adventure and the vast wonderland of the non-real.

The masterly lecture on Wednesday evening brought Dr. Broadus' series on English fiction to a close, and perhaps this, the closing lecture, was the most interesting and profitable of all. Primarily speaking two lectures were delivered by Dr. Broadus' topic in the earlier part of the evening being "Realistic Fiction," and in the latter part, "The relative importance of poetry and fiction in our mental life."

In opening the lecturer divided realistic fiction under three heads. First, the realism of the plain people, the turning away from the fiction which treats of lords and kings, the subject matter of romantic fiction, to deal with the lives of the people of the ordinary work-a-day world which the artist sees around him; secondly, realism in the human comedy, the treatment of the comic aspect of human life and conduct; and thirdly, scientific realism, in which the mind trained in psychology seeks to reveal through fiction the realities of life.

While the romance novel is a success just in so far as it is true to life as we see it around us, the realistic novel is a success only in so far as it is true to life as we see everywhere around. With the vision of genius the artist sees in common ways of life, things we can have no conception of. A most remarkable tribute to the genius of Robert Herrick was paid quite unconsciously by a Chicago business man. A book, "The Common Lot," had been published some years ago, dealing with the life of the commercial community in Chicago. To a successful contractor in that city, Dr Broadus had lent the book with a request for the reader's opinion as to the quality of the work. "I do not consider the author a man of genius at all," was the verdict. "All those things happen in real life." Therein lay the spark of genius. What the ordinary man experienced in everyday life, but could not vitalise, Herrick could portray in artistic form, revealing to the reader its deeper meaning.

For a long period after the birth of fiction it was not realized that the story of common life was worthy of artistic treatment. Little by little the realistic tale was evolved, as the stories of chivalry were satirized out of existence. The first literature of this character came to birth in Spain It was the story of the adventures of a boy adopted by a wandering gypsy. Both were rogues, both unscrupulous and ever plotting each to outwit the other and both engaged in cheating the world. But the story was intensely interesting, treating in a half artistic way the life and adventures of these vulgar folk. Upon this model the fiction of many succeeding authors was constructed, and even some of the greatest fiction of our own day. It was called "picaresque," from the Spanish word for

Proposed Smelter for Medicine Hat

At the mining convention recently held at Nelson, B. C., it was suggested that an investigation be made into the practicability of establishing a smelter at Medicine Hat for the use of gas in treating silver ores containing zinc. At present such ore is shipped to Kansas for treatment.

A committee was then formed and another meeting will be held next Sunday. It is proposed by means of appropriate literature to spread knowledge of the true laws of health, and to combat the pernicious ideas so widely prevalent today.

Ald. Penhale Honored By Colleagues

Council Would Take Steps to Secure Breathing Spaces

The last regular meeting of the council of 1909 was held in the city hall last evening there being present the mayor and Aldermen Robertson, McKay, Morrow, Spencer, Howson, and Penhale—a full council.

A communication was received from Secretary Fewings regarding the inadequacy of the gas service at the hospital. The writer pointed out that considerable inconveniences and discomfort had been caused both to the patients and the members of the staff and asked that a separate connection be made to the nurses' home and another to the general building. Ald. Morrow stated that Mr. Fewings had spoken to him about the matter and as it was urgent that it should have immediate attention the speaker had ordered a connection to be made to the nurses' home and that now everything was in a satisfactory condition.

Jas. Malcolm wrote in regard to a claim for rebate on water account. He had, he said, asked to have his service shut off by June 1st and had made known his desire in good time and received promise of a rebate. Mr. Baker said that the date on which the connection was shut off was June 1, so that Mr. Malcolm would be entitled to a rebate of 3 weeks. The matter was left in the hands of the water commissioners.

G. L. King wrote complaining that he had been wrongly assessed on income. Ald Morrow said that Mrs. Malcolm had spoken to him anent the matter and that he had pointed out that under this assessment he had only to pay $2 whereas were he taxed from other taxation he would have to pay $3 as poll tax. The communication was filed.

F. L. Crawford wrote from Victoria regarding a balance at the bank in Medicine Hat of money collected for the purchase of the ambulance. The ambulance had been turned over to the city and this balance should be devoted to its repairs, to painting it and to getting it fitted up with a brake. Mr. O. W. Kealy had been good enough to interest himself in the matter. Ald. Hyck-ale moved that this balance be handed over to the Ambulance Association and that Mr. Crawford be thanked for the trouble he has gone to in the matter. The question of handling the money will be left in the hands of the committee concerned.

Henderson & Co. wrote that they could not agree that such work as the auditing of the books of the Athletic Co., was included in their general contract. The account which the council had refused to pay was so small ($25), that they would not insist on payment.

Ald. Adsit presented a report to the effect that the license and police committee could not see their way clear to make a recommendation regarding Mr. Cavan's letter. With reference to the closing of the pound they recommended that a little money be spent in making the building more comfortable for impounded cattle, and keep the pound law in force throughout the winter. With regard to the curfew bylaw they did not feel justified in bringing in a report at the present time. Ald Spencer enquired as to the committee's reason for maintaining the pound. Under present conditions it was costing the city $48 a month and the cattle impounded were compelled to suffer great hardships. Ald Adsit replied that there was a general opinion that the cattle if left at large would do much damage. If a wall were built to shelter the pound from the north and west the hardship would be largely eliminated. Ald. Penhale thought that it was useless to try to build up a presentable city with trees and gardens if the cattle were to be allowed to roam around at will. It was important, however, that when animals were impounded they should be properly taken care of.

Ald. Robertson had seen three impounded animals in a disgraceful condition, without so much as straw to eat. He thought these animals should be impounded, but that they should be sufficiently fed and looked after. The report was adopted.

Regarding the request of C. C. Lamb for installation of hydrants at the west end of the city, Ald Robertson reported the committee's recommendation that no action be taken. Ald Robertson also recommended payment of the account of H. C. Cooper ($7.70) for hay. Ald. Huckvale enquired as to the reason why the dealer to whom the city contract had been let had not been compelled to supply the city's needs. Ald. Robertson in reply stated that much of the hay supplied by Mr. McNeely who secured the contract was not fit even for bedding. He also pointed out that late the city had been able to buy hay on the market cheaper than the contract price. The report was adopted.

Ald. Huckvale in behalf of the special committee appointed to look over the lands tendered to the city for park purposes:

"After looking into and discussing the situation at considerable length we have come to the conclusion that, owing to the steady growth of the city and its probable rapid expansion in the near future, it is highly desirable not only to purchase land suitable for an athletic park at once, but to also take steps to acquire land for general park purposes not necessarily as centrally situated as it is desirable for an athletic park to be, feeling that land within or near the city limits will never be obtained at a less price than it can be now and also feeling that in the very near future it will be held at considerable above the present figures." The committee recommended that options be obtained on the following properties pending the time when a bylaw can be submitted to the burgesses to raise the necessary money for their purchase.

First, the second proposition of J. Hargrave, seven acres on the north side of the river bounded on the north by the C. P. R. right of way, on the west by the road allowance between ranges 5 and 6 and on the south side of Broadway. Price $1,200 per acre.

The committee further recommended that the proposition of Mr. F. F. Eett which was described in detail in a recent issue be accepted. This property is quite near to the eastern portion of the city and within a stone's throw of the water and gas mains. Price $6,000.

Also the proposition of W. R. Babington (Block 15 Plan M, in the Herald estate). This is described as being suitable for a playground for the rapidly increasing population on the hill. Price $4,958.

The committee recommended that the bylaw should be so submitted that the people can vote on one, two or all three of the propositions. The report is concluded as follows:

"They (the committee) would also suggest that as the purchase of these lands is rather a different proposition to borrowing money for municipal undertakings where there is necessarily considerable wear and tear and hence a gradually diminishing security, that the charter be examined to see if it is necessary to either form a sinking fund or repay by annual installments money borrowed for said purposes, they holding that such land being always worth the purchase price, it would always be a valuable security, and that the interest would form a very small burden to one present generation of ratepayers. Walter Huckvale, Nelson Spencer, T. McKay." The report was adopted.

The business of the council being concluded the Mayor rose and in a few well chosen words expressed the pleasure it had given him during the year to preside over the meetings of the council. There had been differences of opinion but every member of the council had been man enough to rise above petty ill-feeling. In view of these things and of the long service of Ald Penhale in the council and of the esteem in which he was held by his fellow members of the council for sterling worth of character it became the pleasurable duty of the speaker to present the veteran alderman with a token of regard, esteem from his colleagues. The Mayor then then presented to Ald Penhale a handsome gold locket and chain and the following address:

Ald. Thomas Penhale,

Medicine Hat, Alberta.

Dear Mr. Penhale,—We your associates on the council of the City of Medicine Hat for the year of 1909, recognizing your stirling worth as a citizen and your devotion to the interests of the city during the seven years which you have served upon its council, cannot allow you to retire without some special mark of favor to show our respect and our esteem. We trust you will long be spared to wear this locket and chain and when looking back over your work of the past you will forget the disagreeable incidents and remember only the bright spots in your municipal career.

Wishing you and your family the season's greatings and a happy and prosperous New Year,

D. MILNE.

T. McKAY
J. E. HOWSON
W. HUCKVALE
H. MORROW

Ald. Penhale, who was visibly affected said that he could hardly find words to express his appreciation of the kindness shown him by his colleagues. He had tried to serve the city to the best of his ability and felt he had had his day and was quite willing to stand back. He had been severely criticised, but it seemed when he was elected by the people that they were quite willing to abide by his decisions. In view of this he felt that the people had no right to comment on his actions when the people were satisfied and the council were satisfied. There were people who came to the town—new people who didn't know the first thing about affairs in Medicine Hat, except by hearsay, who had criticised him. It had always been a pleasure to serve the city and in view of the appreciation that had been shown the speaker might volunteer his services again at some future time. He wished the council all success in the coming year.

Ald. Spencer referred to the reputation which Ald. Penhale had among his fellow engineers as a man who always spoke frankly what he thought. If he had anything he felt he should say, he was man enough to say it always, and for this his fellow-engineers respected him highly. The speaker wished Ald. Penhale success and continued prosperity.

On motion of Aldermen Huckvale and Penhale a resolution of condolence with the relatives of the late Major Henderson, of Lethbridge, was passed. The council sent a wreath to the late major's funeral.

Successful School Concert

The school concert which met with such remarkable success on Friday evening was undoubtedly the best entertainment of its kind that has ever been given in the city. After the splendid sports and other events which have been carried out by the schools, the public had anticipated a first-rate performance, but the expectations of all were surpassed and throughout the long and varied programme the audience were kept in a state of eager interest and enjoyment. Those who were privileged to attend the concert will find it hard to believe that the whole affair had been organised since the commencement exercises, practically, in May, within the past three weeks. Yet such was the case. There was not a hitch during the whole evening, and the success reflects great credit both on the principal and staff of the schools for their hard work in training the pupils, and also on the pupils themselves, who entered into the work in such a whole-souled manner. The opera house was crowded to its capacity, every seat in fact having been disposed of within a few days of the opening of the plan, and a very large audience was present last evening when the performance was repeated.

The opening chorus, "Three Merry Travellers," by the girl pupils of Standard 3, Sr., and Standard 4 of the Toronto Street school, was rendered excellently well, and this and the two choruses which followed—"The Students' Song," by the high school students, and the Canadian Flag Song" by the pupils of Toronto Street school, were among the most highly enjoyed features of the evening. A delightful feature also was the solo and chorus, "What would you take for me papa?" by Miss Eva Bridges and the pupils of St. Barnabas church school; in this the little singer who had a voice of singular sweetness, captured the hearts of all by her simple artlessness.

Another clever and ingenious little performer was Miss Mildred Lussier, who made a great hit in her humorous recitation "When your ma and me got tied."

To the great majority, if not all the members of the audience, the "Scarf Drill," was entirely new, and its symbolism was very cleverly represented. It was carried out by the pupils of Standard 4, Sr., and Standard 5 of Toronto Street school.

Much time and painstaking care and training must have been spent before the "Alberta Drill," arranged and adapted by Mr. Mencely and carried out by the pupils of Standard 5 and 6, Toronto Street school, could be presented with such perfection in every detail. The spectacle was a truly beautiful one, and the refrain which the students sang as each phase of the patriotic symbolism was presented was most effective, finishing up of the immense Union Jack by the crosses of St. Andrew, St. Patrick and St. George was a fit out piece of work skilfully done, and its completion called forth enthusiastic applause.

The pianoforte duets, "The Sunflower Dance" in the first part of the programme by Misses Annie and Dorothy Wilson, and in the third part, "Queen of the Fairies," by Miss Jean Nicholson and Miss Anita McLean, were very pleasingly rendered, as was also the pianoforte solo, Chopin's Polonaise by Miss Gladys McDougall. All were in keeping with the high musical standard which has become characteristic of amateur concerts in Medicine Hat.

Master Noel J. Pearce sustained his reputation as an uncommonly clever young violinist, his solo—"Pierrot and Pierette" being received with hearty applause.

The exhibition of ventriloquism by Prof. Ezekiel Hezekiah Burr, provided a very amusing interlude, and the delightful foolery of the barber pantomime was irresistible. The clowns played their parts well and provided a continuous vein of comedy throughout the evening.

One has acquired the habit of expecting a high standard of excellence in any exhibition of gymnastic work by the Y. M. C. and in this instance the audience was not disappointed, the eleven boys who took part in the pyramid building proving themselves gifted with uncommon strength and agility.

In the second part of the program there was one item, the cantata, "Is Santa Claus a Fake?" in which the Christmas spirit is treated in allegory. The audience was carried back in imagination to the days when the wonderland of nursery fable was real to us all, and we would not exchange our world of Jack O'Lantern and the fairies for all the foolish things about which grown up people cared. We were carried back to the story book days of Old English revelry and good cheer and the cantata, glistening with the bright thoughts and wit of elfland, the whole effect heightened by the quaint and brilliant costumes, was a kaleidescope of ever-varying delights. Never was verdict more popular than that by which, after the cackilage of Dame Rumor had been discounted by the witnesses good and true—History, Tradition, Folk Lore, Poetry—the patron saint of the little people was acquitted of the infamous charge. If the judge showed partiality and the jury prejudice in the prisoner's favor we did not feel disposed to complain and would have condoned a packed jury had such been deemed necessary to secure an acquittal. But who that has ever known the bounty of the kindly Santa could pose as an unbiased juryman in such a case?

The following were the participants in the cantata, the majority of whom dressed in fantastic costumes of allegorical figures, could not be recognized by the unitiated among the spectators:

Judge—Robert Towhey. (Second performance, Ralph Satterthwaight).
Crier—Stephen Bathe.
Usher—Bert Beaumont.

Jury—
Father Time—Roy McIntyre.
Mother Goose—Cassie Sharp.
The Sand Man—Norman Evans.

Santa Claus—The Real Thing.
Witnesses—
Dame Rumor—Gertrude McCutcheon
History—Gwendolyn Evans.
Tradition—Evelyn Hulbert.
Folk Lore—Adeline Legh.
Poetry—Ivy Sinclair.

Owing to the fact that Ivy Towhey who took the difficult role of Judge on Friday evening, accompanied his family to Ontario on Saturday, the part had to be taken, on short notice, Monday evening by Master R. Satterthwaight.

The following took part in the Pantomime "The Barber who Kept his Customers:"

Barber—Myron Marshall.
Customers—Albert Johnstone, John Curry, Lucien Desharnais, Robert Sharp, Paul Page.

Just before the last item of the entertainment, Principal Sansom spoke briefly in expression of his gratitude to the pupils of the public and high schools for the spirit of zeal in which they had entered into the work involved; to the orchestra for their splendid services to the parents and others who had gone to much trouble and in some cases expense in preparation for the entertainment, and to all who had by their generous patronage contributed to the success of the evening.

He announced that the concert would be repeated on Monday evening for the benefit of that large section of the public who were unable to take advantage of Friday's performance.

Alberta and Sugar Beet Growing

Interesting Interview With Mr. Jas. D. McGregor.

On Tuesday of last week Mr. J. D. McGregor returned to the city after a month's business tour through American cities. The greater portion of his time was spent in Denver and the other cities in the irrigated belt of Colorado. The object of the tour was primarily to investigate the conditions there with the conditions of our own country, the climates of the two countries being very similar. On Saturday Mr. McGregor was interviewed by the Times on the subject of his tour, with which he expressed himself as highly satisfied. After looking very carefully into Colorado conditions he is convinced that we can grow just as fine crops in southern Alberta and the Medicine Hat district, as anything that will grow there will grow here also.

"Sugar beets," he said "are the principal crops in the Colorado irrigated districts and factories are established about every ten miles for the purpose of turning the raw product into sugar. Each factory consumes from 1,200 to 1,800 tons of sugar beets per day, and runs on an average 100 days in the year. A factory consuming 1800 tons pays out in cash to the farmers in the neighborhood of $10,000 a day. An average of 17 tons to the acre is grown, and as the price paid by the factories is $6 per ton, this works out at $102 per acre from land devoted to beet growing. The work is largely done by families who take contracts for the hand labor at $20 an acre.

"Among the other principal crops are alfalfa, potatoes and peas in order to grow sugar beets, and these latter crops successfully rotation has been found necessary, and beets are generally sown on land which has been in Alfalfa for some years.

"Nearly every town has its canning factory, and from this source the farmers derive a very considerable revenue.

"The crops of the orchards are principally hardy apples, and soft fruits such as can be grown here with great success. The prospects this year were very prosperous, in fact I may say they are the best farming towns I have ever visited."

Summarizing his impressions gained on the tour, Mr. McGregor said that he could see no reason why in our district we should not produce crops as good or even better than those of Denver and its environs.

While they have a longer season than ours, the season in Southern Alberta is quite long enough for the production of all the above named crops.

The S. A. L. Co.'s season has been a very successful one. Fifty-two miles of main canal have been practically completed, with the exception of the steam shovel and flume work. The construction of both of the dams and the work on the reservoir is finished, and sixteen miles of the outlet along the Little Bow river, is almost completed. The work has now been carried to within 18 miles of the company's own tract. Construction will be again carried on energetically as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring.

L. O. L. GRAND MASTER TALKS OF THE NAVY

The Calgary branch of the L. O. L. tendered a banquet in honor of Grand Master W. G. Niblock, of Medicine Hat, last week. Bro P. G. M. Niblock was the principal speaker of the evening. He said a great many people did not understand what the L.O.L. stood for. It was for loyalty and upheld purity in politics and religion, also the British empire. The order had been accused of being opposed to Roman Catholics and being a lot of drunkards. He denied any animosity to Roman Catholics. "We may have some drunkards amongst us," said the speaker, "but you can not go into any church or congregation without finding black sheep. The order was not to cast down or out, but to lift up. We are agitators to a certain extent, when we see others getting what they are not entitled to.

Referring to the Canadian navy he said the British navy was good enough for him. The appeal sent out from Halifax for a Canadian navy, for Canadian men, with Canadian money and Canadian material did not appeal to him either. This was a matter of patriotism and not of dollars and cents.

The speaker then dealt with the separate schools in Ontario and Quebec. The separate schools in Ontario were only subsidized little Roman Catholic churches.

More Settlers

Our district could have no better advertisement than is provided by settlers who, knowing the country well, are prepared to sink their capital in its development. Such instances ha[illegible]merous in the past fall, and the settlers who have flocked to the Medicine Hat district have been in almost every case farmers who have made good in a country similar to ours in soil and climate. Last week two Calgary farmers, Ezra Fuzzle and A. Callbeck came into the city to file on scrips in this locality and make arrangements for fourteen others who will be here in less than two weeks to take up land also. All expect to settle in township 15, range 4. A. Robinson, of Oslo, Minn., filed last week on ¼ of section 4, township 13, range 4. M. Ginther has located the parties above referred to.

ROBLIN GOVERNMENT DECLARES FOR GOVERNMENT OWNED ELEVATORS IN MANITOBA

Brandon, Man., Dec. 16—The Manitoba government declared today for government ownership of all grain elevators.

The anaouncement was made by Hon. Geo. R. Coldwell at the grain growers' convention.

Ottawa, Dec. 17—The house adjourned at 6 o'clock this evening without concluding the debate on the budget. There will in all probability, be two or three days more talk after parliament resumes its sittings in January. The only speakers today were J. H. Sinclair, Liberal of Guysboro, and Major Currie, of North Simcoe, both of which made references to the naval question. Mr. Sinclair said there was a division of opinion in the ranks of the opposition but the government members, to a man, would support a policy based on the unanimous resolution of last session.

Major Currie in reply said the opposition would announce its policy after the government had been heard from and not before. He declared that the policy would become which would meet with the approval of a majority of the people of Canada. M. M. Schnell of North Oxford, moved the adjournment of the debate.

Before the house rose the second readings were given to a number of bills, which were sent to various committees.

VETERANS' LAND

J. G. Turiff, of East Assiniboia, introduced a bill to amend the act authorizing a bounty to the volunteers who served in South Africa. The object of the bill is to enable either a veteran or his substitute who has been unfortunati enough o apply a warrant to land which is worthless to get another half-section Mr. Turiff said that in a few cases veterans, or their substitutes, had secured land of no value. The bill was given a first reading. Mr. Turiff also introduced a bill to enable second homesteaders who have paid their fee and on dollars an acre on quarter-sections which are worthless to get a credit of $160 to be applied on another quarter-section.

Major Currie objected to the bill on the ground that as it would affect the revenue, it should be preceded as a resolution. The speaker was not prepared to give an immediate decision to its standing over.

Major Currie introduced a bill to amend the Grain Inspection act. The object of the bill is to prevent shortages in grain shipments. He said that grain weighed into terminal elevators at Fort William was often found to be short when it reached lower lake ports! The bill would provide for the weighing of it both when taken in and taken out of the terminal elevators.

Mr. Sinclair, resuming the budget debate, entered into a general defence of the governments policy and expenditure. Touching on the naval question, he declared that the following of the government to a man would stand firmly back of Wilfrid Laurier in carrying out the terms of the joint resolution of last session.

Mr. Jack Snowdon has left the city for the east where he will spend the Christmas holidays.

A striking evidence of the transformation of the district from ranching to farming was the purchase last week by a south country farmer of a 20 horse-power gasoline traction engine for plowing purposes. The engine will draw 4 plows working any desired depth on breaking or 6 plows in stubble. It is equipped with the P & O plows, the sale of engine and plows being made by S. T. Fawcett, who is handling the above lines in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bending left an extended visit to Burrows, Indiana, where they will visit the latter's father who is ill. Mr. Bending will also make a business trip through the Southern States while away.

WORLD-FAMED CHEMIST PASSES AWAY

Dr. Ludwig mond, the chemist who was interested in Sudbury and all the big nickel and copper concerns of the world, died in London, England, according to a private telegram received here. Dr. Mond was an inventor of the process of treating nickel which made this metal more generally available for commercial use.

Dr. Mond was one of the world's most famous chemists and built up a great fortune out of the successful manner in which his several discoveries were applied to commercial use. He was mainly instrumental in the building of the great nickel plant at Sudbury, and had a great deal of capital invested in that property. Although comparatively little is heard of this plant it has been a very profitable concern for its owners.

Dr. Mond was a German by birth and laid the educational foundation for his great success in the chemical world in that country. He was born at Cassel, Germany, in 1839, and was the son of Moritz B. Mond, a merchant of that town. He was educated at the Polytechnic school at Cassel, and at the universities of Marburg and Heidelberg and in 1892 he was granted the much coveted honorary degree of Ph.D. by Padua university, and four years later was accorded a similar honor by Heidelberg.

It was in 1862 that he went to England to engage in the chemical manufacturing business, and when engaged in the Leblanc soda industry introduced his process for recovering soda from Alkali waste. He established in 1873, with J. T., now the Right Hon. Sir John Brunner, at Winnington, Northwich, Cheshire, the manufacture of Ammonia Soda by the Solvay process, which he greatly perfected and which are now the largest Alkali works in the world.

He made and patented many inventions of great scientific and commercial importance, notably a process for the manufacture of chlorine in conjunction with the ammonia soda process; a new method of producing gas for power and heating purposes with the recovery of ammonia as by-product; a new form of gas battery; and a new process for manufacturing pure nickel based upon the formation of Nickel Carbonyl, one of a series of new chemical compounds which he discovered and investigated in conjunction with Langer and Quincke.

He founded and endowed the Davy Faraday Research laboratory of the Royal Institution in 1896. He was made an honory doctor of science of Oxford University. He was a member of many learned societies and held high offices in such organizations as the Royal Institution, Chemical Society of Chemical industry, Chemical Section of the British Association, and he was managing director of Brunner, Mond and Co., Ltd.

He published numerous papers of a scientific nature which are preserved by the societies of which he was prominent member and he was a notable collector of works of art chiefly of the early Italian school of painters.

Testimony of Great Men to Jesus of Nazareth

Christ's character grows more pure, sacred and lovely, the better we know Him. The whole range of history and fiction furnishes no parallel to it. Christ is the glory of the past, the life of the present, the hope of the future. We cannot even understand ourselves without Him.—Peter Schaff.

Do you think He came, the true and perfect King, only to go away again and leave this world as it was before, without a law, a ruler, a heavenly kingdom? God forbid! Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever. What He was then, when He rode in triumph into Jerusalem, that is He now to us this day—a King meek and lowly, and having salvation, the head and founder of a kingdom which can never be moved.—Charles Kingsley.

Beyond doubt, Christ is the founder of the first true Church; that is, that Church, which, purified from the folly of superstition and the meanness of fanaticism, exhibits the moral kingdom of God upon earth, as far as it can be done by man.—Immanuel Kent.

Nothing that is here said can apply, even with the most distant disrespect, to the real character of Jesus Christ. He was virtuous and an amiable man. The morality that he preached and practised was of the most benevolent kind; and though similar systems of morality had been preached by Confucius and by some of the Greek philosophers many years before, by the Quakers since, and by many good men in all ages, it has not been exceeded by any.—Thomas Paine.

Highest of all religious symbols are those wherein the artist or poet has risen into a prophet; and all men can recognize a present God, and worship the same. If thou ask to what length man has carried it in this manner, look on our divinest symbol Jesus of Nazareth, and His life and His biography, and what followed therefrom. Higher has the human thought not yet reached; this Christianity and Christendom—a symbol of quite perennial, infinite character, whose significance will ever demand to be anew inquired into, and anew made manifest.—Thomas Carlyle.

The question of the justice of Jesus condemnation depends upon is the judgment which is formed of His character. If He had been only a Galilean Rabbi, the trinunal of history could not rightfully reverse that of Caiaphas. In the mausoleum of the noble dead, there is no place to erect, by the side of Confucius of Buddha of India, and Socrates of Greece, a statue to the memory of Jesus of Nazareth. He is either the Son of God or He was a false prophet. He was either more than a philosopher, or less than a true man.—Lyman Abbott.

Jesus Christ belonged to the true race of prophets. He saw with open eye the mystery of the soul. Drawn by its severe harmony, ravished with its beauty, He lived in it, and had His being there. Alone in all history, He estimated the greatness of man. One man was true to what is in you and me. He saw that God incarnates Himself in man, and evermore goes forth anew to take possession of His World.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Everything in Christ astonishes me. His spirit overawes me, and his will confounds me. Between Him and whoever else in the world, there is no possible term of comparison. His ideas and His sentiments, the truths which He announces, His manner of convincing, are not explained either by human organization or by the nature of things.—Napoleon Bonaparte.

If we attempt to discover what it is in the personal character of Jesus Christ, as shown in His life, that thus attracts such permanent admiration, it is not difficult to do so. In an age when the ideal of religious life was realized in the Baptist's withdrawing from men, and burying himself in the ascetic solitudes of the desert, Christ came, bringing religion into the hearts and homes of everyday life of men. For the mortifications of the hermit, He substituted the labors of active benevolence; for the fears and gloom from which men shrank, he brought the light of a cheerful piety, which made every act of a daily life religious. He found the domain of religion fenced off as something distinct from common duties; and He threw down the wall of separation and consecrated the whole sweep of existence.—Cunningham Geikie.

It appears, as respects the person of our Lord that its ordinary exhibition to ordinary hearers and spectators was that of a man engaged in the best and holiest and tenderest ministries, among all the saddest of human miseries and trials; of one teaching in word, too, the best and holiest and tenderest lessons, and claiming unequivocally and without appeal, a paramount authority for what He said and did, but beyond this asserting respecting Himself nothing, and leaving Himself to be freely judged by the character of His words and deeds. . . . Through the fair gloss of His manhood we perceive the rich bloom of His divinity. If He is not now without an assailant, at least He is without a rival. If He be not the Son of Righteousness, the Friend that gives His life for His friends and that sticketh closer than a brother, the unfailing Consoler, the constant Guide, the everlasting Priest and King, at least, as all must confess, there is no other to come into His room.—William E. Gladstone.

FARMERS TO SELL MEAT PRODUCTS

The formation of a joint stock company along the lines of the grain growers company, for the purpose of establishing public markets, abattoirs and cold storage is the remedy suggested by the special committee of the Manitoba Grain Growers' association for the improvement of the conditions of marketing beef and other farm products. The report was keenly debated this afternoon, the alternative offered being government ownership of storage plants and markets.

The navy question was also a subject of keen debate. The resolution submitted was simply the endorsation of that presented by the dominion government, asking that the question be submitted to the people, but the discussion took a much wider scope, the convention being addressed by the advocates of three policies of doing nothing. There was no vote and the resolution favoring a referendum was carried without dissent. The discussion was, however, heated some extreme views being presented, while the accusation was made that the resolution if passed would be used for party purposes.

Christmas

The Christmas celebration is the one distinctly Christian festival which has taken a hold wherever Christianity hal been proclaimed. Other Christian observances are recognized by those who have taken Christ as an ideal and to some extent as an example, but the Christmas festival is observed by all civilized people, irrespective of religious experience. Nor is the observance of it a merely formal affair. The spirit of it is very faithfully observed from year to year. It is distinctively a period of generosity and one in which we seek to show our good-will to our fellow-men, particularly to those with whom we are more intimately connected. But even the needy and oppressed, though absolute strangers are not forgotten; and through various channels our gifts flow towards these. The hard and fast rules of business life are for the time being laid aside, and our hard-earned money is parted with on another basis than value for value. The idea is to give, not thinking of returns. It may well be questioned, however, whether in this giving we do not get the very greatest returns. The things of most value in life cannot be bought and if we sent to purchase that which comes to us as a result of Christmas giving, we would find it impossible to find the commodity on sale. More genuine heart-culture is experienced by Christmas giving than by any exercise in which we engage. Preeminently the Christ-nature was to give. His life was a continued series of givings. He is noteworthy as being a minister, rather than as being ministered unto. Nor did His giving seem to improvish Him. It is also remarkable how few it has ever improvished. "There is that which giveth and yet increaseth and there is that which withholdeth more than is meet and it tendereth to poverty."

Let us endeavor to see to it that our celebration of the event this year is in no way superficial. Let us not go through the act of giving mechanically and fail to catch a breath of the real Christ-spirit, whose very nature it is to give. The more we have of the spirit of Him in whose name the festival is held, the more genuine will be our observance of it. And if in that observance we get into our nature something which money cannot buy, we have observed it with all the more purpose.

The Question of Auditing

In these times of development when practically every municipality in Western Canada is going to the money markets of the world for the wherewithal to make municipal improvements, it is very important that the financial statements of the various municipalities shall have some weight with those who critically examine them. The past year is the first in which Medicine Hat has taken such a course and the high price obtained for her debentures is ample evidence of the wisdom of the course. The money expended for the special audit has been returned to us a hundred fold. During 1909 our debentures sold for the high figure of 107.8 while the lowest received was 103.9. We note by the advertisement appearing elsewhere in our columns that the same course is to be pursued next year and that the work is to be done by a chartered accountant.

There are some western cities which have not yet learned the wisdom of this course. The City of Moose Jaw has evidently not seen its way clear as yet to invest in a special audit which will bring its records for the time prior to when a chartered accountant took charge up-to-date. That the financial standing of Moose Jaw is seriously impaired by this course is the opinion of no less an expert in the financial world than John Appleton, financial editor of the Free Press (Winnipeg). After examining the financial records of the growing Saskatchewan city Mr. Appleton expressed himself to a Moose Jaw newspaper man in these terms:

"I have kept in touch with the finances of all the cities, and have examined the financial statement of the auditors, Messrs. Edwards and Ronald, just published. I have no doubt whatever but that your city will grow very rapidly and that during the next five years you will have to go to the money markets for at least $1,500,000 to provide yourselves with sufficient water mains, electric light and power, and sewers. There is one thing, however, that will be against you unless in the meantime the records of the city are put into better shape. I refer to the qualified statement of the auditor respecting the bonded indebtedness of the city as against assets, which shows only the approximate cost and not the "exact" cost. From reading your paper I notice that you take a keen interest in the municipal welfare of your city so I need not point out to you that when such a statement which shows so well and so clearly the unsatisfactory state of your city records before the wise step of employing chartered accountants was taken, comes to the attention of the financial houses they will be unfavorably affected towards your city."

"What steps would you recommend to rectify this?"

"What ought to be done, so far as I can judge from the auditor's standpoint, which seems to be very clear, is to have the records respecting all outlays upon your municipal undertakings thoroughly investigated by your chartered accountant. Whatever may be the result it would establish beyond question the desire of the citizens to have a record that will commend itself to themselves as well as to those who will be looked to to provide money for your large outlays in the future."

The Eight Hour Day

Mr. Magrath's stand on the bill before Parliament to reduce the hours of labor on public works frrom 10 hours to 8 hours will commend itself to the labor unions. Our member came out squarely in favor of the bill. It has long been recognized that an ideal division of the 24 hours is 8 hours for work, 8 hours for sleep and 8 hours for spending as the individual chooses—for the family life, for recreation, amusement, study, etc. For the government to constitute itself the model employer and adopt the principle without compulsion, would be lending a powerful influence in favor of its universal adoption. There are higher considerations in national life than the profits of employers, and while doubtless in many cases the privilege would be abused, and the hours gained by the workman worse than wasted, that is the workman's own business, and it gives the progressive workman an opportunity to improve himself.

Press Comment.

(Toronto Star)

The Toronto Press Club honored itself in honoring the grand old man of Canadian journalism. Ever since his arrival in Canada Dr. Goldwin Smith has been the champion of independence in journalism as well as in politics. In allying himself with the Canadaan First party many years ago he was on the side of independence in both these aspects and he also showed sympathy with the fresh and generous enthusiasm of the members of that party. It included in its ranks Imperial Federationists and advocates of Canadian independence, but its members were held together by a common love of country, impatience of party restraint and hospitality to new ideas. The movement left its mark upon Canadian history. Dr. Goldwin Smith's staunch friendship for this movement is typical of his career in Canada. He not only fearlessly expressed his opinions, however, unpopular but by all means in his power he aided in the free expression of the opinions of others. He was and is the typical journalist interested not only in opinions, but in news, and ready to extend help and sympathy to all his younger brothers in journalism. The resolution adopted by the Press Club expresses the hope that a recent announcement refers only to the form in which Dr. Goldwin Smith's contributions to journalism will henceforth appear. Since that announcement articles and letters from his pen have appeared in the Toronto Sun, the New York Sun and the London Spectator, and we hope to read many more.

The Christmas Horse

(By Herbert Coolidge)

I traded for the Bad Black, said the old horseman. Before that trade and until about three weeks after, I had the idea that I could handle anything that wore hoofs and hair. I lost these three fingers off my right hand finding that I couldn't.

Joe just came to me. He limped up the trail to my cabin one evening, and wanted something to eat and some place to sleep. He was an ugly fellow to look at, and his ugliness, too, was more in the look of him than in his features, although the features themselves were a hard composition.

After he had hung around about a week, I met a cow-man from San Diego who gave me Joe's pedigree and record. His father was a noted and notorious Arizona bronco-rider, his mother was an Italian woman, a full-blooded Apache. He had just served a six months' sentence in the country jail for stealing a saddle. Joe was only sixteen, but he had a reputation around San Diego as a rider, a drinker, and a fighter.

A neighbor of mine, five miles away, thought that Joe was a scout for some horse thieves, and that he ought to be run out of the country.

"After moping round a few days, Joe came to me and made this speech:

"Mr. Carson, I want a job. I ain't any good except to ride, and I have no saddle. But I wan't a job and—and—I'd kind of like to work for you."

I told Joe then just what I had heard about him.

"Now," said I, "if you want to ride for me, the sooner you get at it the better. But before you straddle a horse of mine you have got to get rid of this idea that you're no good except to ride; get that notion clear out of your system. Here's two months pay in advance. Buy yourself a good saddle and bridle, and hurry back here and get busy. I have stock that's suffering to be looked after."

If Joe was surprised or impressed by what I had said, he didn't show it. Colson, my neighbor, came up as he loped off to town on a bareback-ed horse with the money in his pocket. Colson threatened to lasso me, and drag me off to the asylum. I will admit that I was just a little relieved when along about midnight I was awakened by the sound of hoofs and the creaking of a new saddle.

The next evening Colson stepped in again on his way home from town. Joe, armed with a pitch fork was watering the Bad Black just as he rode up to the cabin.

"Huh!" snorted Colson. "That's a mighty fine pair you've got there—a pair of blacks."

"They're both working pretty hard for me at present," I replied. "Joe has been chasing cattle since daylight, and the Black—you know what his job is."

"No, I don't," returned Colson, grumpily, "I thought he'd retired since he chewed you up. What does he do? Sharpen his teeth on the corral?"

"Yes," said I, "he does chew the corral a good deal in the daytime, but he works for me at night all right. I have five brood-mares and a saddle-horse that I think more of than all the rest of my stock on the ranch. At night I run them into the barn and tie Bad Black in the stall next the door. If any horse-thief wants those animals bad enough to get them out past Bad Black's heels he's welcome to them."

Colson shook his head gloomily.

"They're a bad pair," said he "they will do you up."

Whatever else Joe might be he was a good worker. That was a good sign, and I saw to it that he had plenty of riding. Some of the signs weren't so good. He would take offense at nothing, and he was as obstinate as a mule. He had black, moody spells that would last for a week. These moody spells I found a cure for by giving him an extra hard mustang to break. He had never been to school, and I taught him to read out of an illustrated book, called—Stories of Missionary Adventure. Between lots of hard riding and unraveling stories of missionaries and of the power of God at work among all sorts of strange wild people, Joe began to lose that ugly look.

I was much encouraged over the lad, but one Christmas Eve he went to town and came home a howling, drunken fury. In the morning he was sick, but all the bad Indian and bad white man showed in his face.

"Joe," said I, when he finally appeared for breakfast, "this is Christmas. You cursed me last night, and if I wasn't that this is Christmas, I should be tempted to get a board and run you off this ranch. But this is Christmas, and it shall be Christmas such as I had planned."

I had a couple of gift books for him, and I told him to go out and pick out the best three-year-old on the ranch for his own to ride.

I saw no more of Joe that day. Late that night I heard him come to the cabin and go to bed. Sometime before midnight I was awakened again. Something was wrong at the barn. Rousing Joe, I hurried out to see what was the matter. Everything was quiet as I approached the stable then, as I was climbing up into the corral, someone shot me from the shadow of the lean-to shed. The bullet went through my left shoulder and knocked me off backward upon the ground. I discinctly remember hearing the trampling of hoofs and more shooting. Then Joe's voice roused me fully:

"Mr. Carson! Mr. Carson! Speak to me! It's me—Joe!" I remember just his words because of the way he said them. "I can't stop it at all, Mr. Carson. Tell me how to plug it."

"Let me lie quiet," said I. "Wrap it up as well as you can, and ride for Colson." Colson was something of a doctor.

Without a word, Joe ran to the house. He came back in a minute or two with some blankets.

"Mr. Carson," he said as he spread them over me, "I wanted whisky so bad that I came within one of going to town again last night. I would have come back drunk and found you dead. That would have been just like me, wouldn't it, Mr. Carson?"

I never would have guessed that Joe could say anything like that—and he said it as soft as a woman. Then he shot for the barn, without giving me a chance to answer.

A little later he came into the corral, pitchfork in hand leading the Bad Black at the end of a riata.

"I've got to ride the Black," he said. "They sawed boards out of the end of the barn, and ran off everything in sight. There's no show of catching up anything else this time of night."

I wondered at the boy, not that he dared to ride the Bad Black, for he was fearless, but that he or anyone could have so much nerve in the cowardly time that follows being drunk. I knew his hands were still shaking.

"Man alive," I yelled, "stay away from that horse!"

"No time to walk," said Joe.

"He was a genius with horses. If there had been daylight and plenty of time, I would have almost backed him against the Bad Black.

The moon was full and I could look under the lower board of the fence from where I lay and see all that was going on in the corral. I watched Joe anxiously as he drew the Black up to within four feet of the snubbing post and made him fast. Still guarding himself with the pitch-fork, he twisted his coat around his left arm and wrapped it firmly with a piece of wire. Then I thought of something that scared me worse than ever.

"Joe," I called, "did you wash your hands?"

I knew that the smell of blood would make even a gentle horse crazy. While I spoke Joe threw his pitch fork away. I didn't have time to do that, Mr. Carson," he said.

A sleek horse shines in the moonlight and the Bad Black loomed up big. I saw Joe hold only a four-foot switch, which he had made, as I afterward learned, by twisting three lengths of baling wire together. To me it seemed as if the boy was crazy.

The Black didn't make any move, so Joe stepped to his side of the post. Then the fight began. The brute laid back his ears and made a dive at Joe, throwing his head to one side and skinning his teeth like a shark. I remember how those teeth had champed on my hand a few months ago, and it made me feel weak at the pit of my stomach. Quick as a cat, Joe ducked around the post, dodging the teeth, and at the same time reaching under and flecking the Black on the shins with his twist of wire. The brute gave a sudden snort and flew back to the end of his rope.

That snort sounded good to me. It was the horses snort of fear over something he doesn't understand.

Joe advanced cautiously along the taut rope toward the Black. The next moment the horse made another dive for him, this time rearing and striking. Joe ducked to the left. I heard the quick wh e-ep of his switch, heard the twisted wire rap sharply across the Black's shins, heard the Black snort again, saw him fly back to the end of his rope and hang there quivering.

Twice more this was repeated. Each time Joe worked farther down the rope before the Black made his attack; each time he avoided the hoofs and teeth by a narrower margin. After the second time the Black stood sulking, his rope slack. Joe approached from the side and put his hand on the horse's shoulder.

"Don't you trust him, Joe!" I called.

"Just as I spoke, the Black made a side snap and grabbed the lad's left arm—the left arm was the one Joe had wrapped up so carefully. Three times while the Black shook him Joe rapped the brute's fore legs with his iron switch. The black, snorting, let go, and stood holding his head high and rinning out his tongue as a horse does when conquered.

"Stand up there, will you?" said Joe, in the low, stern voice he had with conquered horses.

"Swiftly then he ran his hand over Black's glossy shoulder, he rubbed his ears, slapped him under the belly and round the flanks. The Black squatted and winced but he made no move to attack. In a little while he stood quietly. Joe slipped a blindfold over h s eyes and ran for his saddle.

It had been quick work. I feel shaky yet when I think of the chances the boy had taken to gain time. When he came back across the coral, dragging the saddle, I said to him:

"You've done wonders, Joe, but you slow down a bit and have a little more care for your hide."

"How's your bleeding?" he demanded.

I admitted that the bleeding had not checked that I could notice.

"Then I haven't any time to waste," he said.

In a trice that Black was saddled and bridled and Joe was on him. As he mounted. I noticed with some sense of relief that he legs were well swathed with sacking.

I half-hoped that Joe's fight was over; but as soon as he leaned forward and pull d the blind off, I saw there was more war coming. The Black didn't attempt to Buck; he sulked, braced his legs and stood there. Joe tried to start him ahead, tried to pull him to the right, then to th eleft. Joe prided himself in breaking horses gently. I had known him to work for half a day to get a horse off without bucking. But this time he was in a hurry.

Whack! went h s quirt, down went the Black's head, he threw a hump into his back, and jumped straight up. When he hit the ground it was stiff-legged and all four hoofs close together. He did it again, and when he h t the ground he was shaking his ugly hammer head and letting out squeals. That Black wasn't made right! He should have been fitted out with a set of claws and a coat of fur.

"Stay with him Joe!" I yelled as loud as my faintness would let me.

"I'm staying right on boss," said Joe, giving me a flourish with his quirt as he flew upward.

He was a rider that boy. He was the son of a rider and the son of an Apache, and about all the education he had ever had was how to stay on a horse. Anyone but a rider would have been flopped the first jump—and when the Black flopped, a man, it was his custom to trample and bite him.

I have seen many a fight between cowboys and horses, but this was the fiercest of them all—and the shortest. The Black was bucking like a fury; Joe stuck on somehow, trying all the while to punish him into a run with his quirt. Then the brute let out that awful squeal again, reared—he was a sight, that Black horse, rearing in the moonlight,—and threw himself over backward.

That is the test of horsemanship. If a man can't ride—and sometimes when he can—he gets killed when a horse throws himself backward. Joe chose just the right moment for slipping off. When the Black was scarm-

Was All Run Down.
Weighed 125 Lbs.
Now Weighs 185.

Mrs. M. McGann, Debec Junction, N.B., writes:—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

The price of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

bing up, he slid back into the saddle. Three times hand-running they repeated this.

The third time Joe gave him a slash over the fore legs. This seemed to remind the Black of something and brought him up with a scared snort.

Then the Black brought out his last trick—it was his teeth again. So far they had never failed him. He reached around and grabbed Joe's leg. Joe knew he would never get the brute into a run if he struck him on the head—he let him have the leg to chew. It was the nerviest thing I have ever seen done, even though the leg was wrapped with sacking. The Black chewed and snapped at the slack of the sacking, took one try at the other leg. Then he could stand Joe's punishing no longer, and with a greyhound leap he started to run.

"I saw him go like a streak to the gate, heard Joe shout, "So long, Mr Carson! We'll be right back!" heard the rush of hoofs and the breaking of brush on the rough slope down the road. Then I felt weak, and everything turned dark.

The next thing I knew I was in the house. The sun was streaming into the room, and Joe and Colson were standing over me. There was a new light in Joe's face. He was radiant. But it would not have been like a cowboy or an Apache to make a talk about things religious. All he said was, when he saw me looking at him so earnestly, "I guess I'll take the Bad Black for my horse, Mr. Carson, and I guess I'll change his name. I will call him Christmas."

Local Option was voted on in several Saskatchewan municipalities last week. It carried in Indian Head (rural municipality), Milestone Yellow Grass and Mossmin. It was defeated in Wolseley, Hanley and Sintaluta. The majorities in all cases were small.

Stanford Hainer was sentenced at Yorkton, Sask., to hang on Feb. 17, for the murder of A. D. Frazer of Margo last July.

Life and Labor

That the earnings of all British laborers in the last three years have gradually decreased is disclosed by the recent report of the board of trade. After a number of lean years culminating with 1904, in which wages were constantly falling, and upward tendency was manifested which reached its climax in 1907.

Conditions of labor are clearly seen by statistics, which show that the wages of 464,000 persons were reduced in 1908, while only 119,000 received an increase. Of the number receiving the increase, 57,000 were employees of the government or of the various municipalities; 12,000 were textile workers, 11,000 were employed in the printing and allied trades and 9,000 were engaged in the building trades.

Of those receiving diminished wages 83,500 were in the engineering and shipbuilding trades, 69,000 were employed in the manufacture of pig iron and iron and steel, and 283,000 were coal miners. In the first six months of 1909, 1,081,278 persons suffered a decline in wages as against 6,439 who were benefited by an increase.

Stated in money values the wage earners of Great Britain were paid on an average, $287,956 less in wages a week for the last nine months of 1908 than in the same period of 1907, and in the first six months of 1909 there was a weekly diminution of wages of $329,676.

The coal miners were the principal sufferers in 1908, and continued so in 1909. In the first six months of the current year 846,750 employees in coal mines were compelled to work for a reduced wage. With the exception of those employed in the clothing and printing trades and the employes of local authorities and of the government, it may be broadly stated that all British industrial wage-earners were receiving smaller compensation on July 1, 1909, than on the same date in 1908.

In the United States, where labor unions are growing stronger every day each labor union representing certain industrial work, has its own fixed wages for its earners, and employers are compelled to pay that fixed rate. The situation in the United Kingdom is growing more serious for the wage-earners, and although their are labor unions, they have not become as yet, a practical aid to wage matters.

If a bill called the Trade Boards bill, now before parliament should become a law, the board of trade will be authorized to establish a minimum rate in wages in all trades where there is a satisfactory scale of wages paid is unusually low in comparison with the compensation received for similar work in other industries.

If this bill does become a law, which the wage earners are building their hopes on, labor in the United Kingdom, in comparison with the United States, labor, will be in a stronger position than if they had effective labor unions.

Notwithstanding the suffrage movement for women to receive equal payment for equal work, the rule here is for the women to receive the lowest wages. One of the English newspapers states as its opinion that independent existence on wages paid to at least 20 per cent of the women workers would be impossible.

The encouraging feature of the British labor situat on is the subsidence of the number of strikes, boycots and lockouts, and the settlement of disputes between employers and employees on the principle of give and take, with a view of reaching with the least friction and the smallest delay a workable conclusion.

WILLIAM WATSON POET AND CAD

William Watson's amazing attack on the Asquith family has made the poet the topic of the hour. When "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue" appeared, it was no mystery to most people that Mrs. Asquith was referred to. It was recalled that she was Miss Tennant the lady figured in Benson's popular Dodo, as the inspiration of this stunning character. Mr. Benson did not make the lady much more of a compliment than did Watson; but there was no suggestion on the part of the novelist that Dodo was a record of the words and deeds of Miss Tennant. In "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," definite infamous charges are made; but as long as Watson insisted that the verses referred to no one in particular Mrs. Asquith and her friends could have no quarrel with him. Nor would the status of the verses, as poetry, have been affected. Now, the lines will not be reckoned as poetry at all, but as a deadly insult set to metre.

When the verses were written they were understood to have been inspired in a moment of indignation with certain unnamed persons who influenced the British government not to grant a pension to that ill-starred poet John Davidson. A couple of burning letters which Watson wrote to the London Times last summer were replied to by Mr. Asquith. Then appeared the "Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," which ended the controversy. Now it appears that wrath on account of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman's refusal to serve "The Poet With the Serpent's Pen." Undoubtedly the most shocking incident in the Watson interview, in which he gives tongue to what passed between him and Mrs and Miss Asquith at an intimate private interview. It is the publication of this that has been unanimously condemned as blackguardly. On behalf of Watson it has been hinted that he is subject to mental aberrations, in short that he is demented. On behalf of the Asquiths it is hinted that he was maddened because he failed to get a title.

An odd feature of the affair is that Watson is now and has been for some years a pensioner of the British government. He has drawn £800 a year since 1892, the year of Tennyson's death. His famous "Wordsworth's Grave" had been published a couple of years before, and had lifted him to the front rank among English poets; and he became a candidate for the vacant laureateship. It seems likely that he would have received the appointment but for his comparative youth. He was but 34 at the time; and the British government remained unmoved by the fact that much of the world's best poetry has been written by men who were as young as Watson. After the post had remained unoccupied for three years it was given to Alfred Austin, a really grotesque appointment. Swinburne, Meridith and Kipling easily outranked Austin; and Watson also is a finer poet. Indeed with Austin growing old, with Swinburne and Meredith and Kipling a propagandist it seemed very likely six months ago that Watson would have been laureate yet.

Some of his stuff is extremely republican in tone, not to say anarchistic, for in one case he hints at assassination as a useful means of abating royal tyrants; and he has sung approvingly of many revolts against constituted authority. However, in the eyes of a modern Liberal government this tendency would not be an obstacle to his appointment. His poetry is good, sound English poetry, as a rule. He thinks, like Tennyson, that "there is no land like England," and "no hearts like English hearts." But though he has fought the battles of the Liberal party in the press on many occasions, his chance of ever getting an appointment from any British government, Liberal or Conservative, has gone glimmering with "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue."

Those who have an admiration for Watson's poetry—and his admirers must include everyone who likes good verse—will try to forget this deplorable Asquith incident, and will conclude themselves with thoughts of the beautiful elegy on Tennyson beginning:—

Low, like another's Has the laureled head:
The life that seemed a perfect song is o'er;
Carry the last great bard to his last bed.
Land that he loved, thy noblest voice is mute
Land that he loved, that loved him! nevermore
Meadow of thine, smooth lawn, or wild seashore,
Gardens of odorous bloom and tremulous fruit,
Or woodlands old, like Druid couches spread.
Thy master's feet shall tread.
Death's little rift hath rent the faultless lute!
The singer of undying songs is dead.

Cowboy is Vanishing Rapidly

The story of that conquest is the story of the west as it has been—the wild, free west of yesterday. The work is done; the cowboy is a vanished type. We boast of him in stories, and we draw his picture to remind ourselves of a splendid past. In the halo of the picturesque his economic value has been lost sight of. Like many other men who have found life's keenest pleasures close to death, he was a constructive soldier. Probably he was the finest that the world has known.

He was a product of conditions in the East, says a writer in Collier's. He was lured westward by the hazards which the country offered to him. It seems to be the case always that when industry needs a large body of men for some such special duty as this civilization has just brought about conditions which supply the recruits. The hard times in the North, the ravaged farm lands in the South, the tameness of the Mississippi Valley, whose elder generations of pioneers had transmitted fighting spirits to their sons—these things had brought restlessness. Also there was common then a certain well-known, hard to describe spirit, which makes boys rowdies when they stay at home and men of action when they go away. The west called and the east stood ready with a few thousand lean, hard-boned young men, endowed, above all things with that fine quality of moral courage known as sand. They straggled to the cattle ranges, some with shoulders damp from the tears of fond good-byes, others hard-eyed with memories of what had driven them from home.

And they got their trynigs out. Sometimes it was a vicious horse, sometimes a pistoled bully taking fine delight in the baiting of a tenderfoot; again a circle of unshaven ruffians round a campfire, keen-tongued, searching the home-sick soul's last depths with caustic draughts of wit. Always the east examined him with care to find his weakest, sorest spot, then tested his endurance to the utmost by probing this. And when the east gathered his bruised frame from the sagebrush to remount the bucking animal, or clenched his whitened jaw before the ugly revolver muzzle, or wanly smiled back at the jeering faces—when he did this for the tenth time, perhaps—he found himself no longer east but west, accepted suddenly and among his fellows. By such rude, thorough processes they made cowboys from the best and strongest of the men whose restless spirit had led them to the range. Those who were too weak or vicious or small were winnowed out, rejected, to drift away to gambling hells, to cattle-stealing or to highway robbery. A few went back home.

These cowboys soon became a race apart, distinct in dress and speech from all of those classes from which they had sprung. Their garb—from high-heeled boots to wide-brimmed sombreros, adapted to their work's peculiar needs—has become symbolic of the country where they rode. Ages yet to come will know it as the drapping on a coat-of-arms proclaiming the new West. Their speech is nearly obsolete. The soft drawl of the south lurked in their vowels and slurred [illegible] consonants. It borrowed idioms frgin the Indian and the Mexican. Some of its words—as latigo, pinto, pasear and broncho—will linger as long as men use lariats and two-cinched saddles. Others in the regalia of the range, with their long, single action Colt revolvers swinging by their thighs, they spoke this dialect from north to south. As a rule they [illegible] after 30 one begins to lose that toughness of bone essential to riding such as theirs.

Their life was hard, it developed high qualities of courage, quick minds and iron bodies. It needed these. Their swift, civilizing movement across half a continent was a march replete with stern endurance, testing periods, full of fierce emergencies.—Vancouver Saturday Sunset

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

The Times, Medicine Hat, Alta.

Mr. Editor,—If you will kindly grant me a little space in your valuable paper I would like to present the view of a non-resident regarding a resolution passed by the Alberta Local Improvement District Association, recently in session at Strathcona, viz:

"Resolved that this convention of Local Improvement Districts recommend that arrangements be made whereby a surtax of not less than two cents per acre can be charged on all lands held by non-residents or speculators, such surtax to be used for permanent road improvements."

I hold that such a tax in addition to the present high tax on improved land in Alberta is unjust and confiscatory and will work a detriment to Alberta instead of a benefit. I am a non-resident and own 1,600 acres in Township 43-19 and 43-20 and pay from 18c. to 15c. per acre taxes, and since the C. N. R. have assured us of a line through there I have started to break some of my land and will continue to improve the balance as fast as money and men can do it, and as a non-resident I will probably spend more money and develop it faster, than would many local residents who might succeed in becoming owners of my land through a forced sale because of a confiscatory tax law.

Every improved acre is of equal value to Alberta whether improved by a local resident or a non-resident and every farmer in Alberta is more or less of a speculator, as much as a non-resident by owning and holding acreage not actually under cultivation.

Every non-resident owning land in Alberta is worth more to your country than he is given credit for, because he is an everlasting "booster" for Alberta and thereby assists materially in getting actual settlers into your country, which you need.

Under the present system of taxing land in Alberta the non-resident already pays much more per valuation of property than the local farmer by the latter being exempt on all stock and buildings. If a surtax is levied on land owned by non-residents it should at least be limited to only those non-residents and speculators who do not improve their holdings, and the minimum improvements required should be to cultivate not less than one-tenth or one-eighth of their holdings, although I am firmly of the opinion that such a tax requirement which will force away from you outsiders who are interested in your country will work a much greater harm to you than the tax can benefit you.

Thanking you, I remain

Yours truly,

Dr. F. N. OHM

Concluding Lectures

rogue. Thomas Nash, a contemporary of Shakespears, was one of the limitators of the Spanish writer, and his book, "Jack Wilton," was the story of the adventures of a rogue. But the first of the English writers of this type of fiction, worthy of serious note, was Daniel Defoe, who wrote three picaresque novels, the first, "The Adventures of Captain Jack," being a tale of vagabond life, and the second of a similar character, while the third dealt with the life of an adventuress. Fielding developed a greater type of picaresque fiction in his "Adventures of Jonathan Wild the Great," great because a great villain, because of the success of his badness, the word being used satirically. Even today there was a curious survival of this novel of rogues in the works of such writers as Conan Doyle. From the time of Edgar Allan Poe onward the picaresque novel had become a detective story—the story of low or criminal life, turned the other way, and the hero the detective instead of the criminal. The writers of this class of story have demonstrated that much that is interesting can be written about people who are not "respectable."

Another source of the realistic fiction of the plain people had arisen in later years of the Seventeenth Century, when for the first time in English history biographers began to be written. Diaries, letters, became of professional importance. Private correspondence was published and found a market, and a new kind of interest was aroused. It was in the early Eighteenth Century that Samuel Richardson, the father of the English novel, arose. A half-educated man, a printer, role receiving and not meeting much respect—not bad at all, oppressively good rather—a man of no initiative, it was strange that he should be destined to write the first of the English realistic novels. Richardson had an overpowering desire for writing letters. In his teens he had become a professional love letter writer carrying on correspondence in affairs of the heart for love sick maidens. In this way he got his training and continued to write daily letters until his fiftieth year. He was doing a good business as a printer in London, when it was suggested that a book should be published giving "model" letters for use in all kinds of emergencies. While engaged on this undertaking the idea struck him that it would make the book much more interesting, and able to command a readier sale, if he put it into a story connecting the various model letters by a kind of plot. The heroine was a servant girl, and the book treated of an affair between the maid and a man who originally intending to compromise her, yet on discovering her virtue and true womanliness, elevates her at last to social distinction. A book of this kind appealed so a wide public—alike to the polite reader above stairs and to the impolite reader below stairs. From this first success Richardson went on to greater things, his purpose being to establish a form of literature different from the pompous and improbable romances in vogue before his day. He dismissed the improbable and the marvellous by his simple stories about plain and simple people. His fault lay in painting all his heroines as too sentimental. They were always ready to faint on the most trifling grounds. Another flaw was in the conventional morality which pervaded his novels—the writer "not going" capable of comprehending a deeper and nobler morality. Because, after having made improper advances to the heroine, his hero at last decides to marry her, she is expected to look up to him as a paragon of goodness and nobility of character.

"Fielding in the next generation, banished this false sentiment, presenting life truly as he saw it. Tom Jones, a novel of crude, coarse life, because of the vital glimpse it gives of the world of his day will always remain great fiction.

Fielding had many imitators, and while he had confined himself to the portrayal of the lives of country squires and their servants, subsequent writers began to treat in literature the London Cockney. In "Tom and Jerry," Cockney slang was first introduced, and the familiar mispronunciations of the Cockney. The way was prepared for Dickens, the great master who was to come.

Turning naturally to the realism of the city, Dickens created for this class of literature a new epoch. His first novel, Pickwick Papers, came to be written, as Richardson's first book was written, in a purely accidental way. The Papers were written to illustrate, to furnish a text for a series of sporting prints by one Seymour. When the great vogue of the Pickwick Papers led Dickens to write his subsequent novels, he was not content with the merely satirical. He turned to humanitarianism, painting the plain folk under the heel of injustice, and revealing the unfairness of much in the social life of his day. One hero, Oliver Twist, was brought up among rogues and pickpockets, yet the novel was not merely picaresque. With all his effort to make his character real, however, Dickens was seriously hampered by his own mental make-up—and he was a realist who seldom told the truth. By his theatrical temperament he was handicapped and his characters never acted as would people in real life. His sentiment tended to sentimentality. Sentiment was heightened until it ceased to be truthful. Nothing more unreal could be imagined than his death of Little Nell. No child ever died like that. In this one scene was concentrated all the pathos of a score of tragedies. Though at the first reading he might be deeply affected, any rational and wise reader on turning back in a later moment would realize that this was not great art after all. Dickens was not so much a master of realism as of a certain exaggerated treatment of the great world of plain people. But though the critics still discredited his art on this account, he was still widely imitated by modern writers. William De Morgan, of flying novelists, treated life from precisely the Dickens viewpoint in such books as "Somehow Good" and "Joseph Vance."

Leaving the realists of "the plain people," Dr. Broadus passed on to idea, with the second kind of realistic fiction, the fiction of writers who view life as the human comedy. This attitude was late in development. Although in Shakspere's day comedy was treated in dramatic form, it was not until later that the human comedy was given artistic treatment by writers of fiction. The comedy of realistic fiction is not merely grotesque, it is not vaudeville or burlesque, not even humor. It consists in the portrayal of life in such a way that the reader may perceive its follies, with a certain grave and thoughtful laughter, smiling gently it sheds a light on human conduct, revealing its inconsistency and its shams. In Meredeth's words "Comedy is a game played to throw reflections on social life . . . She it is who proposes the correctness of pretentiousness, of inflation, of dullness, and of the vestiges of rawness and grossness to be found among us. . . . In comedy is the singular scene of charity issuing of disdain under the stroke of honorable laughter: an Ariel released by Prospero's wand from the fetters of the damned witch Sycorax."

Masters of this type of fiction were Jane Austin, W. M. Thackeray, Geo. Meredeth. Jane Austin, the first of these, with a quiet sly humor exposed the follies of the social life she knew. As an example of her style the lecturer read a short selection from the opening chapters of "Pride and Prejudice," whose exquisite satire can hardly be surpassed.

In "Vanity Fair" Thackeray realized his ambition of throwing off the veil from the life of certain classes of society who had hitherto been greatly misrepresented, and presenting a set of people living without God, and absolutely satisfied with themselves and their world. He revealed life disillusioned. George Meredeth's idea differed somewhat from that of his predecessors. In his masterpiece, "The Egoist," and in his work on "The Idea of Comedy and the Uses of the Comic Spirit," an understanding of his method might be gained. He pointed out the inconsistences of human nature and method was essentially intellectual.

Of the scientific realists, two great masters, George Eliot and Thomas Hardy were referred to by the lecturer. George Eliot was a sympathetic psychologist. The great theme of her fiction was the revealing of the means by which external circumstances create a type of mind. By the influence of environment the minds of her characters were moulded and shaped into a larger wisdom. Her treatment was sympathetic always, and her fiction was characterized by intellectual restraint. But while such was her method, other writers of the scientific school, of whom our contemporary, Thomas Hardy is the most notable, portrayed their creatures as the mere playthings of circumstance. Their analysis was cold, and as painted by Hardy life is a cruel, hard, holpless thing, humanity utterly ineffective. His treatment of Tess, the heroine of his best known novel was one of grim fatalism. By writers of this school scientific realism has been carried to a point at which it is known by the French novelists as "naturalism."

Bringing to a close his lecture on realistic fiction, Dr. Broadus passed on to discuss the part which novels play in our daily life, and the part which poetry should play. Within the last twelve months Swinburne, England's greatest poet of this generation, and Meredeth, her greatest novelist, passed away—two giants who had alone saved our age from mediocrity. It was worth our while to take pause. Today where one reader of poetry might be found, there were a hundred who read fiction and nothing else. And we lived in a period of cheap fiction. Present day novelists wrote "books;" one never heard of a novelist's "works," as in the days of great fiction. Most writers were actuated by two motives—to keep the pot boiling, and to entertain the public, making a bid to be among the six best sellers. There was a glut of magazine fiction—your Red Books and All Story magazines—and the Ladies' Home Journal. These were for the most part mere collections of short stories, masses of unrelated "spurts." A vast section of the reading public today would invest 15 cents in a 10 cent magazine, and devour cagerly stories than which nothing is so flat, and stale. They were all last year's stories told over again. No habit was more absolutely wasteful than the confining of oneself to this class of reading. The Ladies' Home Journal was far more respectable than most. It contained much that was really useful and valuable—patterns for the housewife and recipes. The Journal had a legitimate reason for existence on this account, but there was a kind of fatality about all the short stories that found their way into its pages. Mrs. Humphrey Ward, said the lecturer, used to write good fiction, but the last novel of hers which appeared in serial form was such as might shame any respectable amateur. The psychological explanation was that this novel was written to cater for the tastes of the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. Kipling's better art had been destroyed by the insiduous influence of this publication. Just as an overdose of poison produced a reaction in which the drug was robbed of its harmfulness, so the reading of too great a variety of these short stories, blurred the impression and produced a kind of mental inertia. Nothing could be more hurtful to the intelligence. Our age needed a kind of mental discipline, before it could be brought to an appreciation either of great fiction or of poetry. While the novel was declining, poetry was scarcely ever read.

The undeniable modern tendency, Dr. Broadus attributed to our modern methods of education. It was a time of fads and frills. People did not stop to make a child think as he should. School children were expected to understand Wordsworth's lyrics!—strong meat for the adult readers of our age. So many subjects were placed upon the modern curriculum that there was no time for thoroughness in anything. The boy who had been compelled to study Wordsworth, when he left school discarded poetry for life. He was deprived of the zest of discovery, for him there was no east window of divine surprise through which in after years he might gaze with ecstacy. If he hadn't had Wordsworth drummed into him a "subject," there might have been some hope of his discovering poetry later in life. Instead he grew up without the intellectual courage to read a novel which struck the profound philospher of life.

To effect a cure for this disease of modern society, and to restore poetry and great fiction to their own, the lecturer emphasized the importance of proper methods of approach. The reader should keep constantly in view three things,—the plot, the characters and the setting. He should ask himself, "when did this author do this thing in this particular way?" "Does he give his characters catch phrases?" "Is he restrained or does he characterize?" In reading poetry the question should be, "Why is such a word, and no other, used in this particular case?"

The disposition today was to make fiction a mere entertainment for the leisure hour. For its proper appreciation it must be approached with all the reverence due to a great art.

At the close of the lecture in a few well chosen words Mr. Sansom expressed the appreciation felt by all of the inspiring and scholarly lectures delivered by Dr. Broadus in this city. To the speaker the lecturer's suggestions along educational lines were of especial interest. Why Wordsworth was retained in the curriculum appeared to be a mystery. One question he would like to ask. Was it not possible that the tendency of fads and frills which had been deplored might be necessary under present conditions, when the complexities of civilization were so greatly intensified over any former age? In the times when fiction of a deepr type was read, England and America were two or three months apart. Today we were in touch with the whole world, and it appeared that as reading necessarily became much more extensive, it must also become less intensive. Might not the failure of the modern mind to grapple with great poetry and fiction be due to progress along other lines?

Replying, Dr. Broadus held that such a view of the matter amounted to this: that you must do the thing that you are expected to do. For himself he would prefer to do what he was not expected to do. Many things fashionable were not necessarily well worth knowing. Today we crammed all kinds of information "helter skelter into the squirming brain of the child," trying to hasten into a multiplicity of matters. To the speaker's mind, the real meaning of the three R's was that one should learn to do a few things well. He who was first taught to do a few things thoroughly well, would learn to do everything else which was demanded of him, thoroughly well too.

CANADIAN FOOTBALL IN THE STATES

Now that it is all over it is doubtful if the Canadian game made any great hit with the American football enthusiasts who had an opportunity to witness the game. To Canadians many of the critics spoke favorably of the game, but the cold manner in which they talked generally showed that they were not particularly struck with it. There is a reason for the failure to become enthused which is not hard to guess. In the United States the coaches all receive big salaries, and the leading college coaches receive a larger stipend than many of the learned professors in the institutions of knowledge. They would be knocking their own game to even suggest that the Canadian game be adopted, for that would mean that some Canadian football authorities would jump into prominence across the border, and the men drawing the fat salaries would jump out of their jobs. But it is a good bet that the rules committee, which meets at New York next month will modify the American rules along the lines of ideas received on Saturday, and it is only a matter of time until the games will be similar enough to permit of international competition in football the same as in other sports.

The main difference between the games today is the interference which is allowed in the American game. Many times during the game on Saturday such remarks as "Why don't they make a hole for him?" or "Why don't some one run ahead of him?" were heard, the spectators evidently not realizing that offside interference was not allowed in the Canadian game.

The New York Herald certainly entertained the teams in good style. The Tigers were quartered at the King Edward and the Ottawas at the Knickerbocker. A member of the Herald staff was quartered with each team for the purpose of seeing that everybody had a good time, and it was a case of being on the go all the time. The teams arr ved in New York about 8.30 on Saturday, and during the morning were escorted around the city and shown some of the interesting points. Taxicabs carried them to Van Courtland park, where lunch was served in the golf clubhouse before the game. At night the teams attended the Hippodrome in a body, and after the show were tendered a beefsteak dinner at Keene's restaurant on Thirty-Eighth street. Dr. Nagle, president of the Ottawa Football club, presided at the banquet, and speeches were made by members of both teams; Mr. Burke, managing editor of the New York Herald; T. Evans, one of the leading football referees in the United States who was not at all backward in telling them what he thought of the Canadian game, but his argument was knocked on the head when King Clancy of Ottawa, got up and told how the Canadian game was superior to the American in many ways. Clancy gave a clever address on the technical part of the play, and did much to show the Americans present that Canadian football was far from being a pink tea affair, as some of them called it. Some of the members of the team arrived home next morning, but the majority stayed in New York for Sunday.

The spectators did not begin to understand the game well until the third quarter. In that period the teams played good football and had the spectators yelling so loud that on several occasions that the cheers could almost be heard at the Flatiron building.

Some of the spectators were pleased with the manner in which the teams tackled, but unless it was really necessary there was little severe tackling. The players showed a good spirit throughout and did not resort to any more strenuous work than they had to. In fact if the game had been a little more strenuous it might have created a better impression with some Americans.

"Huckle" Bramer was all stuck on New York and has formed an idea that he would like to get a job on the police force in the big city. A policeman has it much easier than we do in Hamilton said Huckle.

Ottawas made no attempt to play Jack Ryan and the scare about him going to play was unfounded.

Many of the old Hamilton boys now living in New York were at the game and were tickled at the victory Among them were Harry and Billy Taylor, Alec and Jim McIntosh, C. Harrison, W. McFarlane, J. McFarlane and W. Pitman.

The members of both teams created a good impression with every person they met in New York. Some of the most prominent men in the city viewed the game and the boys were complimented on all sides for the good exhibition.

It cost one member of the Hamilton delegation fifteen cold, cold dollars to see some of the downtown district of the big city. He wandered into Tom Sharkey's and bought a drink for a fair damsel, and when he left he found that he had been touched. He was a newspaper man at that.

Judge Burke who officiates at the Hamilton Jockey club mestings, was on hand and met many of his Canadian friends.

The performance at the Hippodrome made a big hit with the players, and some of the other big attractions will get a slice of their money.

The New York Herald was congratulated on all sides on the manner in which the game was conducted.

Store Improvement

During the past week Hartley's Confectionary Works have carried out an important improvement of their premises. A new front has been put in with side window, and the installation of additional lighting gives a very brilliant display by night. Since Wednesday, when the alterations were completed, there have been many callers at the store to congratulate Mr. Lively on the improvement. The firm carry almost everything in the candy line, from the plain mollasses candies to the finest qualities of bon-bons, and all are made on the premises by the manager himself. Since Mr. Lively over the management of the business he has equipped it in the most up-to-date fashion, and the attractive display, combined with the rare quality of the goods sold, is responsible for the daily increasing turnover. The Christmas shopper could not do better than to give this firm a call.

CAR OF ORANGES CATCHES FIRE

At about half past three on Friday afternoon Mr. F. G. Lynds was engaged in unloading a car of oranges when fire suddenly broke out near the heater. The fire had evidently been smouldering for some time, and the draught of air which was let in when the car was opened up fanned the flames into activity. The alarm was given and the fire brigade made a smart turnout, extinguishing the fire before [illegible] had been done The car contained $1,000 worth of oranges for the Christmas trade.

WANT MAIL SERVICE

The settlers of the petrified coulee district are agitating for a mail service and it is understood that a petition will be sent in to the authorities largely signed. The settlers along the Woolchester, Little Plume and Eagle Butte mail route have long been eager for a bi-weekly mail service, and there can be no reasonable objection to the removal of the injustice from which they suffer. By means of a circular route, starting from the Woolchester end on one day of the week, and another starting later and taking in the western country, it would be possible to remove both these grievances, and it is to be hoped that the government will see their way to take some action along these lines in the near future.

SASKATCHEWAN EXPRESS DERAILED NEAR BRANDON

Brandon, Dec. 14—The Saskatchewan Express No. 18, was derailed four miles east of this point, and fortunately it proved not very serious. The train was running about fifteen miles an hour when the day, dining and Pullman cars derailed, slid down a four foot embankment, and turned over on their sides. No one was very seriously hurt and the passengers after extricating themselves and rendering first aid to each other, took refuge in the baggage car, which was derailed but not upset. The engine did not leave the ra ls and the cause of the derailment is unknown. The majority of the passengers are American seetlers going home for Christmas. The injured are Mrs. C. H. Begg, Bethune, Sask., blackened eyes, bruises and shock; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Humphery, aged couple, travelling from Craik to Hudson, Mich., bruised and shaken; S. R. Lester, wife and son, of Harris, Sask., bruises; Wm. Rathume, broken nose; L. H. Ellsworth, bruises; Mrs. Paul Warner, bruises; Mrs. Hartley Ritter and child bruised, all from Craik, Sask.; Mrs. H. B. Hampton, Prince Albert, bruises; D. H. Jenkins, cuts and bruises; R. H. Graham bruises, both from Elmyra, N. Y.; R. G. Holmes, Simcoe, Ont., brusies; L. Young, Winnipeg, injured arm.

SHAKESPEARE'S GREATEST COMEDY

"As You Like It," To Be Given Here By Splendid Company.

To all lovers of the best in drama it will indeed be a welcome announcement which has just been made by the manager of the opera house to the effect the Mr. C. P. Walker of Winnipeg, will send this elaborate production of "As You Like It," the most delightful of all Shakespeare's comedies to Medicine Hat. The company presenting the play is composed almost entirely of English players, and a really intellectual and finished performance is assured. Mr. Walker has had two sets of scenery constructed for the play, one to be used in such theatres as his own beautiful in Winnipeg, and the other an exact reproduction of the larger set, to be used for the smaller stages, so that we can be assured of a perfect scen c equipment. The costumes are new and rich and add greatly to the beauty of the performance. William Yule, a comedian well known to the theatre-goers of the west has been especially engaged for the role of "Touchstone", a part in which he has no superior among the comedians of today.

Mounted Police

On Friday the 10th inst., one, J. Travis, was arrested at Grassy Lake by Constable Coleridge charged with a number of offenses. The same day Inspector Parker left for the southern town, where he was joined on the bench by Mr. W. R. Fletcher, J.P. of Burdette, and the case was proceeded with immediately. As to the first charge the evidence went to show that the accused had stolen $2.50 worth of beef from J. Franks of Grassy Lake, and sentence of one month's imprisonment in the guard room at Lethbridge was given. The second charge was that of obtaining the sum of $6.40 under false pretenses and for which another month's hard labor was imposed. To the third charge, of obtaining $14.40 by false pretenses, the prisoner pleaded guilty. He was given one month, the sentence to run concurrently with one of the others. He left under escort of Const. Coleridge the same night for Lethbridge. Corporal Ashe conducted the prosecution throughout.

Two vagrants were arrested by Corporal Ashe on the 14th inst. and appeared before Inspector Parker on the same day. One a negro named Joe Williams, was given a sentence of 6 weeks with hard labor. Pat Lyons, who had also being doing the hobo stunt, was sentenced to a term of one month.

Robert McCauley, whom the police have been on the look-out for the past twelve months, was arrested in Calgary, last week by the city police and on the 18th inst. handed over to the Medicine Hat city police by Constable Holbrook of the R. N. W. M. Police. The accused was brought before Mr. O. W. Kealy on the 14th, and committed for trial on a charge of stealing a watch from the residence of Mr. Wm. Craft. The theft of which McCauley is accused occurred in September, 1908. The prisoner is an old offender, and recently be served a term for theft from Mrs. C. Allen's residence on Esplanade. While being brought up to Medicine Hat after serving his sentence to answer the present charge, McCauley jumped from the window of the train on the way from Lethbridge, and it was long before the police again obtained information as to his whereabouts.

WRECK ON THE CROW LINE

A wreck which occurred on the Crow line last week was the cause of the holding up of traffic for over half a day. On Wednesday the crew of a freight train were riding caboose bounce going east, expecting to cross two trains at the Crow's Nest. Only one train was crossed, however, and the craw pulled out. Three miles east, close to the Old Man's Cave, they met the second train in a head-on collision. A fireman and brakeman were slightly hurt, the former having his knee-cap knocked out, and the latter sustaining severe bruises. One of the engines was badly crippled, and a number of cars piled on the scrap heap.

How to Keep Christmas

But there is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day, and that is, keeping Christmas.

Are you willing to forget what you have done for other people, and to remember what other people have done for you; to ignore what the world owes you, and to think what you owe the world; to put your rights in the background, and your duties in the middle distance, and your chances to do a little more than your duty in the foreground; to see that your fellow men are just as real as you are, and try to look behind their faces to the hearts, hunger for joy; to own that probably the only good reason for your existence is not what you are going to get out of life, but what you are going to give to life; to close your book of complaints against the management of the universe, and look around you for a place where you can sow a few seeds of happiness—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas.

Are you willing to stoop down and consider the needs of little children; to remember the weakness and loneliness of people who are growing old to stop asking how much your friends love you, and ask yourself whether you love them enough; to bear in mind the things that other people have to bear on their hearts; to try to understand what those who live in the same house with you really want without waiting for them to tell you to trim your lamp so that it will give more light and less smoke, and to carry it in front so that your shadow will fall behind you to make a grave for your ugly thoughts, and a garden for your kindly thoughts, with a gate open—are you willing to do these things even for a day? Then you can keep Christmas. Are you willing to believe that love is the strongest thing in the world—stronger than hate, stronger than evil, stronger than death—and that the blessed life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image and brightness of the Eternal Love? Then you can keep Christmas.

And if you keep it for a day, why not always?

But you can never keep it alone.—Van Dyke.

If it is anything in the Fruit or Confectionery line you'll find it at Hemeon's.

A full attendance is requested at the Medicine Hat Poultry association to be held in the Board of Trade building this evening. A report will be presented by the show committee in connection with the exhibition which it is proposed should be held next month.

Messrs. G. Sinclair and F. G. Lynd have disposed of a block of land in Calgary which they purchased some time ago from Y. S. Shepard of the foothills city. The regular meeting of Medicine Hat Lodge No. 2, A.F. & A.M., will be held tonight at 7.30 o'clock. Election of officers takes place at this meeting. The new officers will be installed on St. John's Day, 27th inst., at 2 p.m. In the evening a concert and an At Home takes place in the Temple.

The Masons attended divine service at the Methodist church on Sunday evening, when a special sermon was delivered by the Rev. A. C. Farrell.

Mr. E. D. Bennett leaves the city in the morning on a business tour through the States. He will probably visit Mexico during his tour, in which event he will be away from the city for almost two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Pincee were in Medicine Hat for a time last winter and came down again, from Carstairs, last week. They will reside here during the winter, and Mr. Pincee plans to go into business in the city as he considers that there is no city in Alberta which has before it a greater business future. He believes that the temporary reverse which Medicine Hat has suffered but which has now fully passed, has been rather beneficial than otherwise, as the city is now on a thoroughly sound basis and will no doubt be enjoying a wave of unexampled prosperity when other cities are feeling the development aftermath.

J. J. Mahaffy was on the sick list last week but was able to resume his duties yesterday.

The Board of Railway Commissioners has sent out a draft of an order re Flag station shipments which will be considered at a meeting of the board on Jan. 4th next. The draft if ordered, will mean the construction of proper shelters for freight shipments and passengers at flag stations, and at points where the business amounts to $15,000 per year, the railways must erect suitable stations and appoint agents.

VOL. 7 No. 13. MEDICINE HAT, ALTA., CANADA, TUESDAY, JANUARY 11, 1910 $1.50 PER ANNUM

A CHANCE FOR EVERYBODY TO-MORROW.---Mr. Raffles' contract ends Wednesday night; and in order that someone will get the prize, The Times will pay $10 to any non-subscriber who brings Mr. Raffles in. The only condition is that the captor have the latest copy of The Times. This does not bar any paid up subscriber from winning the $50.00 prize.

Mr. Raffles Still at Large

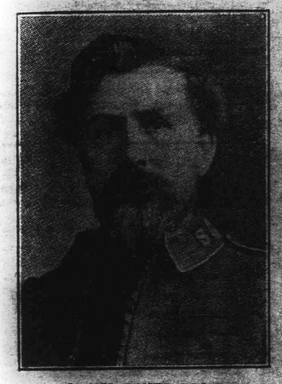
Whew! but my breath came in short pants yesterday and that's no joke either.

It seemed if all the female detectives in town were right after me for all they were worth. Some of them a little timid and others not so much so, and if it was one of these last so much so" that nearly put an end to this Raffles' mystery of mine, and it was only due to her own excitement that she lost out, and it came about in this way.

I I did not leave my room at all yesterday morning. Guess I had a little lazy spell on me, but about one o'clock after a little breakfast and the smoking of a fine Valley Club Special cigar, I began to arrange my disguise and outfit for my afternoon call at D. Milne's big departmental store on Toronto street. Finishing my make-up by the addition of a little Martin-Seymour pure paint and Mennen's Talcum powder. I was with some loose coins I had in my pocket in exchange for some of Doty's famous chocolates. Now chocolates are not the only things Doty handles, but they are my favorites. He makes candy, chocolates, bon bons, cream goods, butter scotch and taffy of all kinds each day, and say if you have never tried his sodas, I only say that you have missed something. Now you boys, before you go to see your girls don't fail to take a box of chocolates along with you, it will make the evening pleasanter.

ENTER THE HUB POOL ROOM

And now after candy comes my favorite cigar the Valien's Club Special which I managed to get at the Hub Cigar and Pool Room on Toronto street. There was a large number of people present when I went in, who seemed to be doing their best to keep the manager and his assistants busy. However, I sat down smoking my cigar while a young man, who said he was a Dominion detective, related to me his adventures and hair-breadth escapes. I could have told him a few things myself, but bah, what's the use.



MARSHALL'S HARDWARE STORE

I shook hands with this Sherlock Holmes saying that he should hear from me again, and then buttoning up my coat, I went out through the back door, and into Marshall's Hard ware Store, where I found several customers being attended to, and being in no hurry I thought I would take time and look over some of McClary's celebrated stoves for I intend to start housekeeping some day (oh yes, after I get caught, of course) and these are just the things in stoves. You will find they vary in sizes to suit the family and their appetites, and in buying a stove don't forget that these people also carry the very latest in fixtures for the house. No matter what they are you are sure to get them here, and now remember to have a crack at that $40.00 Eldridge Sewing Machine.

EXAMINES FUR COAT AT TURPIN'S

I then walked over to Turpin Bros. great store on Main Street where I recognized my friend Mr. Turpin, whom I have given at least one good chance to capture me. As I neared the entrance I noticed a fine suit of clothes of the 20th Century brand. I was well disguised, but still I feared clear of Turpin at this time. My last cloth, shoes, Slater shoes are alright, but I'll not take a risk, I'll have but will come back for it later. This store certainly does a big business and since my acquaintance with the store I can see why it is. This place also has the most extensive lines of fur coats, hats and gloves, etc., that I have seen since coming to this section and here's were I come in, for I know a good fur coat when I see one, and therefore am not talking through my hat. Sure, Turpin's the place.

On leaving this place I walked on to the post office with a Times in my pocket just like a few of the other would be sleuths. Now right here is where I outwit you a great many times, for I may be found any old time, the busiest one in the bunch looking for myself. Later in the afternoon after making a slight on chance in my attire, I was walking along on Toronto St. opposite Elliott's when a young lady stopped up to me and in a timid voice and an apology said "Pardon me, but aren't you Mr. Raffles of the Times" I was expecting it but I was compelled to tell her that "I guess you've made a mistake," and the walked away and later found me at ready for the call that came proving my last. Arriving at D. Milne's I was confronted by a number of lady shoppers, all armed with a Times and most of them from what I learnt a little later had still more ammunition in the form of Valien's Club Special cigars and receipted counter-slips for the extra rewards. While in this store many customers were taking advantage of the many bargains advertised and I fancied that several had me spotted but one lady, more bold than the rest, accosted me very bravely, but seemed quite excited and nervous saying: "You are the Mysterio is—" but here she left off and seemed confused, and my heart took on new hope, and in a seemingly indignant manner I said, "Do I look like a man." Then she wilted and at the first opportunity I made myself scarce. But I shall call at D. Milne's deparement store again, so keep your eyes open and remember the correct salutation.

VISITS DOTY'S CONFECTIONERY STORE.

I arrived here straight from D. Milne's and proceeded at once to part

MILNE'S PHOTOGRAPHIC PARLOURS

Canada's leading photographer, Milne, certainly has the right to be such, for he "makes pictures" that are certainly great, and I am very proud of the ones that he took of me and now that his new studio on Main street is almost completed, you people will see something of the latest in photography. Here you get the best work done and done cheaply. You can't miss the place. No other can compare with Milne.

VISITS IRELAND'S GROCERY

I then went to Ireland's Grocery Store on Main Street, and may say that this is one of the finest stores that I've seen in the country for the place is so clean and stocked up with the best line of groceries that one can get. I have visited this store several times and I do not believe I was recognized once. If I get a chance though, when nobody's looking I shall smuggle a few packages of the noted Red Rose tea away with me, so that Mr. Ireland & Co. will know that I've been there, and then I suppose you'll call the sheriff to aid you in my capture. I don't care but I'm getting desperate now and if I'm not caught soon I shall tie myself to the telegraph pole by the postoffice.

MUSIC AGAIN

Well I know where to spend some of my time and that's at the Assiniboia Music Store on Main Street, for I found that you only have to ask, and they will set the machinery going and you will have the fun of a lifetime while listening to some of the Edison or Victor phonographs. This is undoubtedly the only music store in Canada and you will get better terms and satisfaction when buying your goods here, than you will in ordering from an Eastern mail order house. Without going any further you will see here the celebrated Willis & Co. pianos besides the well-known Gerhard Heintzman and others that I need not mention and you will find that prompt attention is given to mail orders.

AT ELLIOTT'S JEWELLRY STORE

I was very glad when a little later I found my self at G. W. Elliott's jewellry store, and here I bought a very pretty article an the French pattern which I intend to wear when disguised as a lady. Last time I was there I noticed that they had a fine assortment of cut glass and I confidently fancied that was the place for my friend Elliott and thought the jig was up, but, however, I was not molested, and was allowed to inspect some very nifty watches and chains. I would like to have taken with me. Say, about that sparkler, "Oh you pearl" my wife but oh you 14 ct. diamond" and I regret to say that I was not able to take it away with me.

DROPS INTO IRELAND'S

Now you people I want you to get busy, and don't be afraid to speak when you meet me for I am getting tired of walking around with a bunch of rewards on my head, which is a pretty heavy load to carry anyway. I was walking along railway street this afternoon and was stopping close to H. S. Ireland's store when one of the carpenters working there asked me if I was Raffles. Well I don't blame him, for what he is trying to do is to look after the interest of his customers. I shall call in here again this afternoon and tomorrow.

SKATES AGAIN

Well sir, I had a great time again Saturday night at the rink. As I was going in I heard Mr. Peard humming "Some day when dreams come true," and I was wondering about that $50 reward. Honest now, weren't you? Now I am going to tell you people something. If I am not caught by Wednesday I shall give all of you a chance to capture me on the ice. I shall make my identity known and give you 30 seconds time in which to capture me on the ice, and if not caught in that time I am to be allowed to go out unmolested, and start the chase again—So don't forget and practice.

VISITS HOME GOOD STORE

According to arrangements I made a call at the popular rendezvous the Home Goods Store. While here I noticed what they are now making a successful attempt to clear out their stock of dolls. They are offering any doll in stock irrespective of price for $2.00. The fur season being soon over, they are now clearing Men's Ladies' and children's fur caps at cost. This is an opportunity to supply your needs for next year. The large stock of dishes displayed convinced me that this is the leading house for dishes. Anything you want in this line will be found here.

BELL BROS., BUTCHERS

Now boys I don't want you to forget our old friends the Bell Brothers on Main street for this is a store if you once patronize you will never go anywhere else, for everything the handle is of the very best and it is just the kind of a store that the good house wife delights to do business with and you are sure to get the politest attention from the fine staff that attend to your wants. Do not forget that this firm is offering an extra reward.

AT THE THEATRE FRIDAY NIGHT

Now according to arrangements I paid another visit to the Star theatre on Friday night under the guidance of my manager for the look out that is being kept up for me keeps both of us busy. We worked a little ruse that had succeeded well on my

Leaving the man I went into H. S Ireland's store and was impressed with the well-filled stock of every kind of clothing and wearing apparel that would be needed by an ordinary individual and with prices that are absolutely right, so I don't wonder at them doing such a big business. And you workers here's room to enjoy the fine entertainment which this house provides for its patrons and I am sure the moving pictures and the song were fine. The different feats of strength performed by young Samson have to be seen to be believed and the Gans-Nelson was swell. I was afraid that on making my departure I should get into trouble but all went well, so I slipped away and made for my hotel.

former visits and again it got me inside safely. When once there I kind of felt more at ease until I overheard the conversation close by me to the effect that Raffles was most likely there, and then they began to look around but nothing about me seemed to strike them so I settled down to enjoy the entertainment

DEATH OF REV. A. J. DARROCH

At an early hour this morning, there passed away Rev. A. J. Darroch, B. A., a minister of the Baptist church, who has been a resident here for about 4 years. He has been low for some days and the end was not unexpected. Service will be held tomorrow afternoon at 213 Main Street. It is not yet decided whether interment will be here.

Landseekers Invade City

Yesterday morning a number of townships south of Whitla and along the line of the Weyburn-Lethbridge line of the C. P. R. were thrown open for settlement. The choicest of the land lies in Townships 6 and 7; Range 10 and there was keen competition for homesteads in these townships.

Jeannie Russel Coming

Miss Jeanne Russell and the greater Jeanne Russel Co. return to Medicine Hat on week of Jan 17th and will produce some of their strongest and best productions, varying from music and drama to comedy.

The Jeanne Russell Co. is [illegible] with the [illegible] to the [illegible] by Mr. Nowell [illegible] is leaving [illegible] Roberts. Mr MacGregor [illegible] the Russell Co. He is known as the greatest Shakesperian actor of the present day, and carries with him the praises of the press from the four corners of the globe, having played in almost every prominent city in the world. It was with considerable difficulty that manager Brand was able to secure the services of such a high class man as Mr. MacGregor and fee's proud in offering him to the public as a member of the Jeanne Russell Co. Many other new faces will be seen during their stay here in the greatest productions ever witnessed in the city of Medicine Hat during the week of Jan. 17.

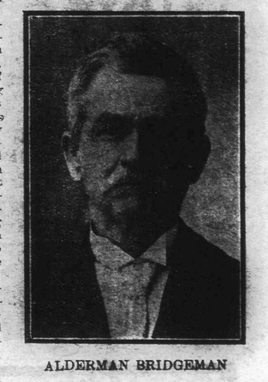
With a greatly augumented company, entirely new scenery and specially for each production and each scene, with their peerless orchestra, and absolutely the highest class of refined specialties, among them being singing, dancing, comedy and music specialties on different instruments and all that is combined in the very best and latest up-to-date productions. It can truthfully be stated that the Jeanne Russell Co. return to Medicine Hat with the greatest and best equipped company presenting the best and highest class productions of any company visiting Canada barring none, carrying with them every possible item used to present the best productions in the best possible manner.

Reports from Lethbridge and Calgary verify the above and from persons who have witnessed the performances in these cities reported crowded houses nightly and the Russel Company, the best ever seen in Canada.

The opening bill—"Polly Primrose"—the greatest Southern Comedy Drama ever written around the Great Civil War of 61-65, in the United States, is indeed the greatest bill that could be presented. Afford the new casts in all their glory with the superb gowns worn, the beautiful scenery, the setting of the stage, etc., and without a doubt the greatest and grandest production ever presented in Canada, and yes—the States. An English traveller remarked at Lethbridge the other evening—"By Jove—that play compares with any I ever witnessed at the Drury Lane and the prices only 25c., 50c., and 75c., they should be tripled." It is indeed the best ever.

Extra Special—

"BOBBY BURNS NIGHT"



Elaborate preparations are under way for a great and grand celebration of "Bobby Burns Night," at the Opera House—Friday, January 21st, by the Presbyterian church in conjunction with the ever popular Jeanne Russell Company in the form of a benefit. ALDERMAN BRIDGEMAN

W. H. Bridgeman is one of the old-timers of the city. He came here in 1884 from the county of Halton, Ont of which district he is a native. There was not much of Medicine Hat in those days but Mr. Bridgeman had a considerable hand in making the city what it is for he followed the occupation of builder and contractor for a number of years. In 1890 he started in business as an undertaker on Main Street, and for the next 18 years he was one of Medicine Hat's business men. In 1903 this business was disposed of to C. Johnson who has since conducted it. Since that time Mr. Bridgeman has lived retired.

Alderman Bridgeman will not be true to his early environment if he does not make things lively on the council, for he was born in 1837—the time of the rebellion—and was near the seat of much of the military activity. His father was engaged in many of the skirmishes while the son and heir, who is the oldest of the family of twelve, was engaged in skirmishes of a different nature being arrayed in long dresses at that time.

Mr. Bridgeman has done much toward the building up of the city as he owns considerable property, and instead of letting it lie idle and wait for an advance by someone else improving the neighborhood, he has improved it by building on it.

A sketch of Alderman Fawcett will appear in next week's Times.

The Mock Parliament will be opened on Friday evening. The public is cordially invited to attend the opening ceremony.

Inventory Sale of Winter Merchandise

STARTLING REDUCTIONS ON FINE GOODS IN ORDER TO EASE THE BURDEN OF OUR ANNUAL STOCK TAKING.

The entire month of January we devote to a listing of our store stocks. The task is a gigantic one and in order to make it lighter and to clean up the odd lots which it reveals, we sacrifice them at next to nothing prices.

All over the store, in every department stirring underpricings are the rule. A store's stocks must be clean and fresh if it is to serve its clientele well, and these inventory prices are our method of sweeping out the old season's goods in order to prepare for the new.

Especially strong are the price cuts on Dry Goods, Remnants and Small Lots, Boots, Shoes, and Suits for Men and Boys. The Cream of Winter Stocks which go out before our rule of Absolute Clearance.

Though this month ends Winter from a Store standpoint, it has only begun for the Consumer. Consequently these price prunings are doubly welcome, because they are on wanted things for which you will have plenty of need for months to come. We have never offered equal opportunities for savings and the values are the greatest in the history of this home of good merchandise at modest prices. Here are savings in abundance.

Sport and Play

Thomas M. Chivington, of Louisville was recently elected president of the American association of baseball clubs over J. D. O'Brien, of Milwaukee, incumbent, at the annual meeting of the association. Chivington won the office for one year on the first ballot by five votes to three. He announced that the association headquarters would be removed from Milwaukee to Chicago about February 1. O'Brien received the votes of Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The association decided to play 168 games in 1910, elected W. R. Armour of Toledo vice president, and decided to hold the schedule meeting in Chicago at the time of the American League meeting, about the middle of February.

A rule was passed requiring all clubs to provide dressing rooms at the various parks for the players.

George Tebeau of Kansas City was re-elected chairman of the Board of Directors, but there may be a contest on his right to serve. The directors are elected by clubs, and Louisville, not Kansas City, is entitled to a diricter. At one time Tebeau was owner of both the Louisville and Kansas city clubs, but last year he sold the Louisville club to William Grayson.

SECREATRY LAMB REMOVES TO THE COAST

All the Medicine Hat fans will be sorry to hear that J. M. Lamb the energetic secretary of the Western Canada Baseball league, has removed from Winnipeg to the coast. He has been actively associated with professional baseball here ever since Winnipeg entered the old northern league He has never lost an opportunity to boost baseball and has been the life of the game almost even when enthusiasm seemed to be on the wane generally, and his departure will mean a loss to sport and to the Winnipeg club that will be difficdlt to counteract.

Mr. Lamb will engage in the commission and brokerage business at the coast, and leaves for Vancouver about Jan 15th. Someone will be needed who can spare lots of time and take lots of abuse to fill Mr. Lamb's place in western baseball.

His successor as secretary of the Western Canada league has not yet been named, of course, but it is likely some one in Lethbridge will be appointed, as that is where the president is located.

Poultry Association.

At the meeting of the Pet Stock and Poultry Association which was held in the Board of Trade building on Tuesday evening, it was decided to hold an exhibition on February 15th and 16th (Tuesday and Wednesday). There was a variety of opinion among the members as to whether the exhibition should be purely local or provincial in its scope. It was finally decided to hold an exhibition which will be open to anyone residing in the provincial constituency of Medicine Hat. This will include all the surrounding country and should ensure a successful exhibition.

The exhibition will most probably be held in the former Masonic Hall in the News block. No entry fee will be charged exhibitors the only conditions being that they be members of the association. The awards will be purely honorary, i.e., no prize money is being offered.

The secretary. Mr. V. Morrison, was instructed to communicate with the provincial government requesting the services of a judge for the occasion. Also to ask for two lecturers to deliver addresses on such topics as the exhibition is concerned with these to be delivered on the afternoon of the first day.

Entry forms can be obtained from any of the following: V. Morrison, W. Worth, L. W. McBean, A. J. Mathews, W. Satterthwaite, Robt. Irwin, A. N. Terrill or A Uberheim. These should be returned to the secretary not later than Saturday, February 12th. All exhibits must be in place by noon of the first day, as judging will start about 1 p.m.

Exhibitors are requested to furnish their own coops for the exhibition, and in order that a uniformity may be maintained, these must be 2 feet square and should be made of wooden frame, covered with cotton, with the exception of the front which should be of wire.

The election of officers for the association will take place at the next meeting on January 18th.

IRVINE NOTES

The election of mayor took place at the Irvine School House on Thursday the 6th, three candidates being nominated. J. F. O. Barschal, returning officer, Wm. Dakin, poll clerk and R. C. Jerrold and Wm. Benny, scrutineers.

The result was as follows:

John Pollock	17
Fred Weiss, Sr.	11
John Koenig	2

The junior branch of the W. A. have presented St. George's church with a fine brass cross and brass curtain rods for the curtain behind the altar.

The Eastern Alberta Land and Investment Co. Ltd., have just been incorporated. This company promoted by local gentlemen intends to loan money, and do their utmost to develop this district, bringing in settlers and locating parties desirous of purchasing farms in the west, but especially around Irvine, the head office of the company.

Lieutenants E. G. Benwell and W. Armstrong left on Sunday for Winnipeg to undergo a course of military training.

Quite a few people went from here to the officers ball of the C. M. R., at Mehicine Hat, and enjoyed a very good time.

The Rev. Henderson of Josephburg and Mr. H. S. Newby went down to Maple Creek to the opening of the new church (Church of England).

A BENEFICIAL HOLIDAY

A. R. Perry and wife returned on Friday last from their eastern trip. It is reported that Mr. Perry gained 44 pounds in weight during his three weeks' vacation. The tall slight form of the secretary-treasurer will no longer be a familiar figure on our streets if such be the case. All of which goes to show that the work of the secretary-treasurer is no sinecure the strenuous life keeping the encumbrance (beg pardon, we mean incumbent) without any superfluous avoirdupois. Has any one heard how much the former secretary-treasurer gained per week after leaving the city hall offices?

Inspector Davidson has accepted an adjutantcy in the 59th Cameron Highlanders, Winnipeg. He left the city yesterday morning for Winnipeg. Mrs. Davidson and family willremain in Medicine Hat until the spring and they will then go east to join him.

Conditions Governing The Chase and Capture of The Mysterious Mr. Raffles

1. The first person who identifies and captures Mr Raffles, having in his or her possession the latest copy of the Medicine Hat Times and having a paid up subscription till December 31st, 1910, and repeating to Raffles the correct salutation will receive a reward of $50.

2. If the successful captor has a subscription paid till June 30th only, he or she will receive $25.

3. SPECIAL—The person approaching Mr. Raffles should lay his hand on his arm, showing him the latest copy of the Medicine Hat Times, and say these exact words—"You are the Mysterious Mr. Raffles of the Medicine Hat Times." Then request and bring your captive to the Times Office for positive identification, and if correct the reward will be paid you. Don't say "are you" or "ain't you," or "I believe you are the Mysterious Mr. Raffles," or anything but the exact words as stated above.

4. As Mr. Raffles must, of course, have some place of undisturbed sleep and rest, he will positively be exempt from capture at either of the 5 places he has now engaged to occupy as his place of residence, and all persons connected with, or staying at, such places are barred from this contest; as well as all attachees or employees of the Times; and also the hotel attachees, the photo studio and attachees, and the Star Theatre attachees, and any physician who may be called to attend Mr. Raffles in case of sickness and he is exempt from capture at the Times office.

This is done to protect the interest of the general people of Medicine Hat and visitors for whose interest and entertainment this contest was arranged.

5. Mr. Wilson of the Times office and C. G. Milne who photographed him are the only two persons who are capable of identifying Raffles positively against any argument, and their decision on any capture is absolutely final.

6. Mr. Raffles will never deny his identity, or refuse to go with a captor if given the correct salutation, but he will pay no attention whatever RIGHT IN THE DOORWAY of any place he is scheduled to appear. This is done to give those INSIDE an equal chance with those on the outside.

7. Mr. Raffles will be off duty and uncapturable after the conclusion of his LAST CALL at night until his FIRST CALL the following day, but he may be captured ANY TIME during the day — Going or Coming — after he has once made his first call until he makes his last call.

Debating League

The movement which was started some time ago to organize a Southern Alberta debating league along the lines of the Saskatchewan league formed during the present winter, will in all likelihood culminated in the formation of a league consisting of five teams. These will be the Y. M. C. A., the Y. M. C., and St. Mary's club, all of Calgary, the Y. M. C. of Lethbridge and the Y. M. C. of Medicine Hat. To complete the organization of the league a meeting of the representatives of these clubs will probably be held on Wednesday or Thursday of the present week in this city.

Mr. C. B. Knudson and Mr. J. Engler of Carlstadt were in the city yesterday.

City Council

At the first meeting of the council of 1910, held on Monday last, the new aldermen, Fawcett, Forster and Bridgeman, took their seats. There was a full attendance.

At the outset Mayor Mingaye rose to present his address, outlining the work which will require the attention of the council during the year. The splendid crops, he pointed out, had attracted attention to Medicine Hat as a farming district and created a great settlement wave. It would be the work of the council to stimulate and encourage legitimate enterprise and maintain a high standard of loyality to the city and district.

It was desirable that the committees should get to work as soon as possible. The public works committee would be called upon to consider applications for sewer and sidewalk extensions, street grading, the construct on of permanent culverts, boulevarding and tree planting, etc. They would find it advisable to provide a yard for storage of material and also a storehouse.

The water committee would find the work of their department incomplete. There were a number of hydrants to install, changes of the system to be made between the powerhouse and the stand pipe, to give better service and fire protection on the hill. The committee also would need to provide a place for the storage of materials.

The work of the gas department would be found pretty well in hand.

The parks and markets committee might consider laying out parks on River Street as suggested last year.

Health and relief committee should go into the matter of the isolation hospital.

It was desirable also to appoint an electric power committee to investigate and report on the subject to the council at as early a date as possible.

In closing the mayor announced that he had gone into the matter of committees carefully and had decided that the city's best interests would be served by division of labor along the following lines. He submitted the list for the approval or otherwise of the council:

The first named on each committee will act as chairman:

Finance—Ald. Spencer, Howson and Fawcett.

Water Commissioners—Ald. McKay, Howson and Fawcett.

Gas commissioners—Ald. Robertson Spencer and Adsit.

Public Works—Ald Howson, Fawcett anh Robertson.

Parks and Markets—Ald Fawcett, Bridgman and Forster.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald Forster Robertson and Adsit.

License and Police—Ald. Adsit, McKay and Bridgmen.

Health and Relief—Ald. Bridgman, Forster and McKay.

Ald. Adsit moved that the mayor's report be adopted with the exception of the portion of it referring to the year's committees. He thought each committee should consist of four members, one for each ward. Ald. Howson took the view that if three men could not handle the work of a department in a city of this size, half a dozen men could not do so. Ald. Forster expressed agreement with Ald. Adsit. There were three committees of great importance—finance committee or the water comance committee or the water committee the speaker believed that he could give as good service as any other man on the council, as he had the time and ability to give these departments proper attention. He would like to be on one of the important committees.

Ald. Howson expressed his willingness to resign from the public works committee in Ald. Forster's favor.

The mayor said he had, in forming the committees, looked into the matter at the time of the disposal of the members, and the good work which they had done last year. The committees suggested were the result of his considered judgment.

Ald. Spencer and Howson moved the adoption of the report, Ald. Adsit and Forster moving an amendment which left the question open for reconsideration. Ald. Forster again expressed his desire to be placed on either the finance or waterworks committee, stating that he was prepared to give all the time necessary. The amendment was lost on a tie vote. Alderman Adsit, Forster, Bridgeman and McKay voting in its favor.

Mr. Cavan wrote asking the council to reconsider his application for reimbursement for loss sustained through his cattle being improperly cared for while in the pound. He showed that the animals had never been advertised as the law required. Mr. Cavan was present and was requested to address the council. This he did and the matter was referred to a special committee consisting of Aldermen Fawcett, Robertson and Bridgeman.

C. J. Bristah wrote asking for a refund on his gas account contracted while in business on Toronto street. It appeared that Mr. Nott's meter had been attached after the gas had passed through Mr. Bristah's, and the latter had thus been called upon to pay the amount of Mr. Nott's bills in addition to his own. He asked for a refund of $21.55. Referred to gas committee with power to act.

G. W. Robinson, secretary-treasurer for the city of Lethbridge, wrote in behalf of Mrs. Wm. Henderson, expressing the deep appreciation felt by herself and her family of the sympathy and the floral tribute which had been received at the time of the death of her husband, Mayor Henderson.

The Colonial Engineering Co. of Montreal wrote in regard to the installation of a combined lighting and pumping station in the city. Filed.

Dr. Boyd submitted the plans for an isolation hospital prepared by Dr. T. E. W. Irving, provincial medical officer of health. Dr. Boyd also advised the passage of a number of bylaws, including one compelling laundries to locate on streets where a sewer connection can be secured. A bylaw governing slaughter houses and bakeshops was also required. Referred to health committee.

Ald. Adsit presented the report of the license and police committee. The report was adopted, the mayor commenting on the fact that there were only two drunks during the New Year season (laughter). Ald. Howson stated that in Medicine Hat the interdiction law was enforced as well as in any place he ever saw.

A lengthy report prepared by Superintendent Craft on various matters in connection with the gas department was presented by Ald. Robertson and referred to the gas committee to report back to the council. In the report it was stated that the second hand meters now in use were a source of danger and cost more than they were worth. They should be replaced by a Canadian meter, which had been found the most satisfactory of all. Among other changes Mr. Craft advised the replacing of the line 2 inch pipe on East Allowance, with 3 inch pipe, as this would now be the main line from the new well.

Ald. Adsit reported on alterations at the pound to make it more comfortable for impounded animals. The cost was $35. It was suggested that the poundkeeper's salary might be increased, and that in future he be allowed to retain only the fee for driving animals to the pound. The report was adopted.

Mr. Chas. Lentz waited on the council, requesting an increase in the license fee for traders in hides and furs. The matter will be taken up by the licens; and police committee.

The mayor brought up the question of salaries for aldermen. Even if the proposed bill dealing with salaries for municipal workers were to go through it would not apply to cities which had special charters. It was therefore advisable to appoint a committee to deal with the desired changes in the charter. Aldermen Forster, Howson and Spencer were appointed, and will report back to the council.

On motion of Ald. Spencer, the mayor and Aldermen Adsit, Forster and Fawcett were appointed a committee to investigate the possibilities of establishing a municipal electric light and power plant.

Ald. Spencer reported that options had been taken for 90 days on the properties which it is proposed to acquire for park purposes. Ald Forster suggested that an option should also be secured on the site offered by the Church of England, and it was decided to take this course on the site of 8 acres. A bylaw will be submitted in such form that the burgesses can vote on any one or number of the sites on which options have been secured.

Ald. Forster brought up the matter of revising the basis of assessment in the city the mayor outlined that the legislative committee should take this matter up and report to the council. Ald. Howson thought there was room for improvement upon the present system. Many city authorities took the view that the assessment should be placed on the land. A man who put up valuable premises on his property was now taxed for the improvement which he himself had made.

Applications for the position of assessor, building and plumbing inspector were then opened, the following seven names being considered: Geo. A. Luno, J. G. Ferrier, Geo. Martin, W. E. Porter, J. T. Hall, A. Jackson, Duncan Campbell. Ald Forster thought it a mistake to combine the offices of assessor and plumbing and building inspector. A man might be a capable plumber and yet not know the first thing about assessing, and the converse was also true. The mayor stated that the whole situation had been considered by the committee and it was decided that Medicine Hat was not yet large enough for special officers to be appointed for each of the departments. After a short discussion a vote was taken on the applicants resulting in the appointment of Geo A. Luno.

Percy Blythe of Edmonton and the Henderson Co. of Winnipeg, were the only applicants for the position of auditor, the latter being appointed at a salary of $600 all expenses to be borne by Messrs. Henderson, the same terms as last year.

F. F. Fait was elected to fill the vacancy on the health board.

It was decided on Ald. Spencer's suggestion to take up the question of the salaries paid to city officials. Whatever revision may be made will stand throughout the year.

The Naval Question

The Canadian Gazette, published in London, Eng., evidently is not enamoured of Laurier's Canadian navy program. In the latest issue to hand it says:

"The man who pictures Great Britain engaged in a great naval struggle and Canadians sitting contentedly at home watching the contest from the national bleachers, knows very litele about the people he is living amongst. He is a freak." So we read in the Toronto Globe, and it is pleasant reading. But to many Canadians it would be even more pleasant if they knew that in the event of that "great naval struggle" which some of the best and sanest British observers fear in the next few years, Canada's help would be of any immediate use. You can't fight Dreadnoughts with cheers, however, loyal, and an enemy intent on sea supremacy and European dominance will not wait for baby navies to become effective units of a central defensive force.

With men of weight declaring that the German war scare is a dream, and others of equal authority urging the seriousness af it, the government has no enviable task to shoulder in framing an adequate naval policy.

The Visit of Commissioner Coombs

The comming of Commissioner Coombs to this city is an event of outstanding importance in the affairs of Medicine Hat. Those who were privileged to hear the Commissioner on his last visit here a couple of years ago will welcome the announcement made in our news columns last week that he has arranged to favor us with another visit. The army officials are justified in arranging for the use of the largest auditorium for the city viz. the Opera House, for the occasion. The subject of the address, "Canada in the Making," is one on which the Commissioner is an authority, having been here in the early days of the Salvation Army work in this country. There are some phases of a nation's development which trade returns and government statistics can express; but there are other phases of it which only those who help to mould it can tell. Commissioner Coombs will most probably give us an insight into some of the phases which statistics cannot touch. That the Salvation Army has had a considerable share in this kind of national development no one will question. Medicine Hat will be honored by a visit from an official who has had a large hand in moulding her higher life.

IT'S A SHADOW

All photographs are shadows, but some shadows are better than others. It takes experience and careful study to get shadows that look right. Good shadows please you; if they are not good your friends don't want them, neither do you; poor stuff is dear no matter how cheap. We don't sell the poor kind of photograph—it is not how cheap, but how good we can do the work for you.

CANADA'S FIRST WARSHIP

(Mail and Empire)

Our first warship is a discarded hulk, but, of course, it will adequately represent Laurierite affection for the Empire. It is gratifying to know that it will fight in no British war, to cite the language of Sir Wilfrid, unless ordered to do so by Parliament. A humane parliament will see to it that its crew is not endangered by being sent to sea, especially when the enemy is at large. If war should come we will have to ask the royal navy to take our war vessel under its protection. Failing that, it will be necessary to scuttle her or to send her inland.

LABOR AND THE SALOON

(Regina Standard)

War upon the saloon has been declared by labor. This was evident in the utterances of prominent labor leaders at the convention of the American Federation of Labor when it met at Toronto, Canada. At that meeting Samuel Gompers declared that the "time has come when the saloon and the labor movement must be divorced." John Mitchell, ex-president of the United Mine Workers, said:

"Poverey has driven many a strong man to drink, and drink has driven many a strong man to poverty. I am not at all impressed with the argument that if you close down the liquor traffic you bring about a calamity. Rather the contrary. There is a readjustment of society. Nothing has done more to bring misery upon innocent women and children than the money spent in drink. No man has a right to spend a cent upon himself until he has provided for his family. The average workingman does not yet earn enough to give his family all the comforts they deserve."

Mr. John B. Lennon, treasurer of the Federation, declared that "there is no redeeming feature in the saloon," he discussed its relation to wages and the standard of living, and maintained that the saloon had decreased wages, rendered workmen less skillful, and driven them to lower scales of employment. He said:

"What is the effect of the liquor traffic on the standard of the living of the people? Is there any influence gone out from the saloon that has helped to make men and women better? The labor movement is essentially a moral movement. It stands for equal opportunity for men and women, though it believes that it should be made more easily possible for women to become home-makers. Who could deny that the liquor traffic was driving women to work in factories, in workshops, and at washtubs, who ought not to be there? The trade-union movement was opposed to child labor, yet who would deny that the liquor traffic was driving into industrial life boys and girls who should be in the school or on the play ground? The liquor traffic tended to decrease wages, never to increase them. The use of alcohol made workmen less skillful, and drove men to lower scales of employment and reward. Every cent spent in the liquor business was wasted, bringing no social benefit or moral uplift."

Another speaker who proclaimed war upon the saloon was Thomas L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers. He said that there is a clause in the constitution of the organization, forbidding any member to sell intoxicants even at a picnic. He added that he did not regard the saloon as a necessary evil, and closed as follows:

"Because the liquor traffic tends to enslave the people, to make them satisfied with improper conditions, and keep them ignorant, the leaders of the trade union movement are called on to fight the saloon."

Friends of good government of the purification of public morals, and the betterment of the conditions of laborers, will hail these official declarations of war, by prominent labor leaders upon the liquor traffic, with joy and satisfaction. If this policy is carried out, labor will rise to importance and power, never before attained. It will add a tremendous moral force to physical power.

Exciting Wolf Hunt

A most thrilling and exciting wolf hunt was experienced recently by Geo Marshall of Bonnie Brae.

Shortly after the sun begun its descent into the west, Geo threw the saddle on his Arabian pony, and, securing his Winchester, strated in pursuit of the wily quadruped which had been seen lurking dangerously near the young stock, for some time back After a sharp ride of 3 miles through the southern part of Bonnie Brae district a pack of five, seemingly, coyotes, were located in the distance, but on closer observation one appeared to be much larger than its fellows and evidently preferred its own company for it calmly held its ground while the rest of the pack dashed off on a loping trot to the southeast at the approach of the horsemen. When within about two hundred yards off Mr. Grey Wolf (which it turned out to be), George suddenly checked the speed of the horse, which was not at all slow, and drawing a hasty bead upon the defiant animal fired, instantly there was a general confusion of legs, head and tail, but only for an instant, and it was off on a three legged lope with its nose pointed towards the Hat, and George in hot pursuit. The bullet had shattered the right hind thigh bone thereby rendering the leg useless. ...

At the beginning of the pursuit little hope was entertained of over taking the fleeting animal but when a mile or more ground was covered and the distance of pursuer and pursued was lessened by half. Well! if you are a sportsman nothing more need be said. The chase continued until the distance was again cut in two and another shot was fired but owing to the motion of the galloping horse went wide of the mark. By this time the coulee which leads to the foot of old Dunmore Hill was reached. The wold scenting refuge swung off the high prairie and with a fresh burst of speed dashed about half way to the bottom then sank upon his haunches facing its pursuer with open mouth and blazing eyes. Horse and wolf were now abreast the rifle was again leveled. This was the finish sure, but alas! when the trigger was pressed no report followed save a snarl from the wolf as it made a break for liberty disappearing around the thick brush at the bottom. After a hasty investigation the magazine was found to be empty, and worse luck, no more shells could be produced.

For some few minutes George remained stationary, cudgeling his brains for a scheme of how to dispose of a wolf that wouldn't stay in one place long enough to get acquainted with the butt end of a rifle. When to his surprise and joy two collie dogs suddenly appeared over the bank of the coulee, with their noses close to the ground, they being faithful dogs and keen on the hunt, had no doubt been attracted by the shooting and catching the scent which ran close to the home place had followed it up, now they were coming to the rescue. In a few seconds they had rounded up Mr. Wolf and commenced a vigorous barking around him. At tais juncture Geo. spurred his horse and rode straight for the scene of conflict, thereby causing the enemy to try for liberty once again, but this time he caused his undoing, for he scurried up the opposite slope and out onto the open prairie, where there were no sooner reached the top than the dogs were at him again and quickly drove him at bay.

Now was the time for action, and George quickly slid out of the saddle and grasping the rifle by the barrel entered the fray. Time and again the heavy butt came down on the ferocious brute but with seemingly no effect. One of the dogs was badly bitten and whinning pitifully, but still game, the other being but a pup, kept pretty well out of harms way, however, it was tugging and snapping at the tail and hind legs to some effect.

The old dog who was much fatigued was beginning to lag, but after a little encouragement made at the wolf with renewed energy. In the onset their jaws became interlocked and a fierce struggle began for supremacy. Now was the time to make a final hit, the gun swung in the air and came down upon the temples of the victim, crushing them.

Automatic Telephones

We quote below an article from the Strathcona Plaindealer which describes the success of the Strowger automatic 'phone in Strathcona. Anyone who has had any experience with it can testify to its many advantages. With Medicine Hat's antiquated system you call up "Central" and after you have waited so long that you forget what number you wanted and what you wanted to say you get a reply. Not so with the automatic. If the government wants its business in this city to grow, it must not pass us by in favor of smaller places and leave us with the antiquated system, with all its vexatious delays which we now enjoy (?).

"So rapidly has the telephone system grown since the installation of the Strowger Automatic Service some months ago that it requires the attention of gangs of workmen every few weeks to keep the lines of the city equal to the demands of the subscribers. This week several linemen were employed stretching lines along the business section paralleling Whyte Avenue and the improvement is also being extended in other parts of the city.

In spite of the disadvantage attending the inauguration of a new system in a city the size of Strathcona, the excellent satisfaction given by the automatic service since it was started by the provincial government a little over a year ago, has been little short of remarkable. Even the phones most heavily used are seldom out of order and the trouble linemen report the system working smoothly. With the improvements being made constantly it is safe to say that no city in the west or in many other parts of the world has better telephone service than is afforded in Strathcona with the Strowger automatic.

THE BROKEN TRAIL

The latest book which has come to the editor's desk is "The Broken Trail," by G. W. Kirby, of Calgary. It is published by Wm. Briggs in the usual faultless workmanship of that house.

From a literary point of view the series of stories from real life is not of the highest class, but is sufficiently well told to hold the attention of the reader throughout. The worst literary fault is the writer's tendency to pause in the story to moralize. If a tale is well told, the reader can do his own moralizing. The first of the series, "A Son of Holland," would be much stronger without the short dessertation on the problem of the foreigner. It is a distinct break in the narrative and spoils its literary effect.

The sermon at the end of "The Desparado" is an unnecessary appendage. The story is sufficiently well told for the reader to see the moral. Occasionally the preacher gains possession of the story-teller, and the result is a marring of the literary effect. But the book leaves a good taste in the reader's mouth and its influence is wholesome. It will be read with interest by a wide circle of readers.

To the Editor,
Medicine Hat Times.

Dear Sir,—Permit me to call attention to the scandalous manner which real estate dealers and others are trafficing in the warrants issued by the government to the South African veterans. In a recent issue of a western daily paper, there appeared an advertisement of one of these persons, wherein he brazenly announced that he had no less than nine warrants for sale, while in the same column were a large number of similar notices, some cantankerous offers to buy any number of warrants at the market price.

Notwithstanding this shameful state of affairs, a deputation, purporting to be acting in the interests of the South African veterans, had the audacity to wait on Sir Wilfrid Laurier some time ago, urging that an extension of time be given to holders of these warrants. This deputation must be as well aware of this trafficking as I am, and I know that their motives in the matter have given the most searching investigation as they have recently issued circulars of a most compromising nature to every veteran, wherein they ask for natures to a certain petition, for which the sum of $2 to aid them in carrying on their work. I would suggest in the interest of the country that someone would publish this circular and also if the deputation would again wait upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier and present him with a copy of both their petition, also giving the number of veterans who would go on the land, assuming an extension be granted and how many certificates are in the hands of speculators.

And, sir, permit me further, to direct your attention to the anarchistic spirit displayed by the press in this matter. Not one journal, of any importance, in the Dominion has uncovered a word of protest against this atrocious scandal which is being enacted under their very noses.

I think, sir, you will agree with me, when I say this is scarcely in keeping with the influential position demanded by the press in this country, who, in their dignified moments delight to allude to themselves as being "The Silent Police of Society," and "The Moulders of Public Thought."

However, it has been my painful duty to draw Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attention to the whole shameful business, and all right thinking persons will be pleased to learn that the government have the matter under consideration, and while they have not yet decided upon the advisability of granting an extension to the veteran who still holds a warrant, and would take up

Stringent measures, too, are about to be taken to prevent further dealing in this class of scrip, and efforts immediately taken to render null and void all warrants which have changed hands more than once.

As many persons have been induced by wily brokers, to buy these certificates for speculative purposes, not knowing the terms upon which they were issued, this letter is written in the hope that it may be the means of protecting the public, and also drawing the attention of the press to the matter.

Believe me, Sir,
Yours most sincerely,

Women's Hospital Aid

The annual meeting of the W. H. A. was held in the city hall on Thursday last. The reports for the yearyear were submitted by the various officers and adopted by the society. Plans were discussed for the annual entertainmant, which takes place on or about February 14th. No definite program was decided on for this year's entertainment, but it is probable that a sale of work will be held. Definite information will be given later.

The report of the president was as follows:

I have much pleasure in submitting to you our seventeenth annual report. Our meetings have been fairly well attended during the year, but we need more workers, and would like to see the members at our meetings in the city hall council chamber the first Thursday in each month.

The proceeds from our February 14th "Free Will Offering," envelopes amounted to $108.75, the only money raised except by dues. This year we hope to raise considerably above that amount, as the demands for linen, etc., increase each year, which means a greater amount of work being done in our hospitals.

Our society desires to thank the Board of Management of the Medicine hospital for their generous donation of $200.

Mrs. McWhirter has been ill most of the year, and a great portion of the time in the hospital, yet has added 40 new names to our membership roll.

Thanking both officers and members for courtesy and kindness.

J. E. NICHOLSON,
President.

The following report was presented by the secretary:

On January 1st, 1909 this society started with a membership of 546. We lost by death, 8; resignations, 12; members leaving town, 26; total 41. Forty new members were added. We start on the year 1900 with a total membership of 545.

Ten regular meeting were held with an average attendance of 9.1.

The following articles were supplied the hospital during the year: 250 yards cotton, 12 yards dish toweling, 8 dozen spreads, 4 dozen womens night gowns, 1 dozen pillows, 9 dozen sheets, 8 dozen pillow slips, 7 dozen mens night shirts, 6 dozen table napkins, 15 yards table linen for tray cloths, 4 dozen baby napkins, 8 yards white flannel for baby binders, 4 dozen draw sheets, 6 dozen towels, 6 pairs mens slippers, 6 pairs womens slippers, 34 yards plain toweling for operating room, 24 yards check toweling for operating room, flannels for old men, 2 table cloths for nurses' home, 30 spool thread, 40 yards grey flannelette for old men.

MABEL CUNLIFFE,
Secretary.

The auditors reported as follows:

We, the undersigned, have examined the books of the Women's Hospital Aid for the year 1909 and compared them with the vouchers and find them correct and the work neatly kept.

CHARLOTTE KRAUSS,
MAGGIE TRIMBLE,
Auditors.

The treasurer submitted her report as follows:

AERIAL FOOTBALL

The aeroplane football match that took place last week between Harvard and Yale was largely attended, the air around the contesting teams being packed. The goals, which consisted of gas bags connected by chains, were kept apart by the Aerospace Co., with their magnetic controllers. The ball itself, an armored balloon, had a tendency to get away and mount upwards, but didn't leave the players hands long enough to get far.

Smith, of Harvard, won the toss and sprinted the ball through a fog bank, where it was received by Jones of Yale, who had only just started ballasted properly and got the broad to fly when he was tackled by the Harvard half back. Robinson had his wings torn off in a jiffy. His winghokder was on hand, however, and he was held up and new wings adjusted before elapsed time.

A flying wedge was then formed by Yale but without effect, as it wasn't long before they were given a tredendous ovation.

Black of Harvard, grabbed the ball and flapped through straight to goal —score for Harvard.

When the Harvard team parachuted back to earth they were given a tre-

An Adventure on the St. Lawrence in 1885

In what shape I struck the water, or how deep I went I cannot say, but when I came to the surface fightingfor air and life, the lights of the steamer seemed far away; and I knew it was useless to shout, even had I breath to spare in the effort, which I certainly did not have.

I have said that I could swim, and now I thanked God for it, even if it would only prolong my agony a few minutes. Treading water for a time, and then turning on my back I gradually recovered my wind, and I wondered how far I could be from the shore, and in what direction the shore was. The lightning was still lighting up the heavens at intervals and I soon began timing the flashes to get a view of my surroundings, but the shore was beyond my view, whether on account of my low position in the water, or the waves that the strong winds threw up I cannot say, but for both of these reasons likely. In any case I could not get sight of it after repeated efforts, but in my last attempt I thought I saw something on the water near me, and in a last desperate effort I made for it. My heavy clothes and boots were at this time dragging me down, and it was with a grope of utter exhaustion that I reached and grasped—a boat. Oh! the thrill of relief and joy that surged through me. A boat it was, and right side up, though half full of water.

I hung to her for a time while my breath and strength came slowly back to me, and then with great care and much painful efforts I managed to climb into her, sitting down in the water in the center of her for a further rest and collection of my wits. The wind was now blowing half a gale, but my boat was making fair weather of it, even half full as she was. But I soon roused to action, and the thought of some means of bailing her out. Boylike, I thought of my glazed peak cap, and on feeling for it found it pulled down hard over my head, and proceeded to use it as a bailer. That the cap should be on my head after all I had gone through did not at the time, strike me as being at all wonderful, but it did afterwards, and the only explanation I can give is that when I went onto the top deck to see the storm I had pulled it down tightly, and there it had stuck.

But the fact that it was there made all the difference to me, as it answered the purpose of a bailer very well, and after some hard work with spaces of rest beeween, I had the boat almost free of water, and she was riding the swells like a duck.

While bailing I came in contact with articles under her seats, and watching for lightning flashes I made out a mast, with sails attached, and a rudder. The rudder I got out, and by feeling, after repeated efforts, I managed to ship it. This may sound easy, but I know it cost many and great efforts in the dark, with the boat tossing over the waves. The rudder in place, I went forward in my little vessel to feel for a place to set up the mast, and I found a block in the heel just forward of the front seat, with a clump on the board to hold it. The setting up of the mast did not give me half the trouble the shipping of the rudder did; and when I had all secure, as I hoped, I took the sheet back to the stern, and taking hold of the rudder I pulled gently, yes, and even prayerfully, on the sail. But nothing gave way, and in a few moments I could feel that the boat was slipping through the water at a great rate.

The rain had stopped and the cloud was breaking behind me, but the wind had, if anything, increased, but this did not worry me as my boat was behaving well, and I wanted to get somewhere as quickly as possible In what direction I was going I had not the faintest idea, but I thought if I only kept going I would sooner or later strike land, and dry land was what I wanted at that time.

The weather was, fortunately for me, quite warm, but even so in my wet clothes I suffered with cold and longed for shelter and fire. But the boat sped on in the darkness until I felt that I had travelled a distance much more than equal to the width of the river at that point, and I finally made up my mind that the wind was taking me directly up the stream in the wake of the steamer from which I had been ejected, so I concluded that I could not do better than to keep on as I was, as even if the boat would sail across the wind it would not help me much to land I know not where, and so far I had seen no light or other sign to guide me. I had by this time begun to feel every confidence in my boat, so I pulled the sheet home, fastened it, and with rudder in hand settled down to wait for daylight and what it might bring me.

As soon as I was quite comfortable in my mind, boylike, I became sleeky and would doze off until the pitching of the boat would bring me back to full wakefulness and realization of my danger, when I would get her fair before the wind again and determine to remain awake, but only to repeat the performance again in a short time.

How many times I escaped upsetting during that long night I will never know, and I must have slept more or less before the light of morning came slowly out of the east and showed me the tossing waves of the river, that my little boat was skipping over as if half flying, and then the shore so far away and uninviting. I must confess to a sinking at the pit of my stomach when this scene became plain to me, but I reasoned that if I had managed in the dark I could surely hold on during daylight, though the water did seem so much more rough and dangerous, and there was so much of it I could not see in the dark.

But I was so badly frightened that I could not feel hunger, and I wanted my breakfast. Once I thought of it I wanted it badly and watched the river banks anxiously for a break in the forest that might indicate a settlement. I now knew which was my own side of the river, and because it was my side I coaxed the boat over.

Slowly but surely, and about two hours after daybreak I was skimming along a few hundred yards from the right hand bank, when I saw houses and a small church not far ahead.

In a short time, and with much careful handling of the sail and rudder, I had the boat in the shelter of the landing, when I took down the mast, pulled the skiff upon the shore and walked up into the village. The first person I met was coming out of a building that bore the sign of a hotel, and I asked him, much to his surprise evidently, what place this was. He wiped his hand across his face to remove all traces of his morning eyeopener, and remarked "Des place Three Rivers, where you come from?" I pointed to the river, and asked where I could get breakfast, and he pointed to the hotel he had just come from, and stood and watched me enter the same as if he were not quite sure of things. I found the proprietor in the bar, and asked him for breakfast and the privilege of drying my feet at the kitchen stove while it was being got ready. This was readily granted, and I proceeded to remove my boots and socks to dry them, as of course, I had no dry ones with which to change. My clothes, beyond my trousers below the knees, were by this time sufficiently dry to afford me no discomfort, so by the time breakfast was ready I was more than ready for it, and the oatmeal porridge, with plenty of good milk tasted a little better than I ever remember of them tasting before, and with fried pork, bread and butter, and a cup of green tea added, I made a breakfast that somewhat surprised mine host's good wife, and it certainly made a new man, a boy, of me.

Fortunately, I had money enough to pay for all I got, as my would-be murderers did not attempt to take anything from me when they discovered I had not the large roll of money on me, and when I had finished my breakfast, and settled my account, I was ready for some information as to how I could reach Montreal.

I told the hotelkeeper as much of my story as I thought proper, and was satisfied that I had told him enough, as he did not believe me anyway. But I learned that I could not get to Montreal by water until the Jacques Cartier went down to Quebec and came back again. This would delay me some days, and I was anxious to get to Montreal before word of my disappearance reached my people. To go by land was next to impossible, as I knew; so there remained for me nothing but my little boat. The wind still blew strong up the river, and I determined to make the attempt. I first secured a basket of provisions from the hotel, and with them safely stowed, put the skiff in the water, hoisted the sail, and started on my seventy-five mile journey for Montreal. The water was rough, the waves thrown up by the wind meeting the current were quite large enough for a small vessel, but I now had such confidence in my boat, and in my ability to handle her, that I would have ventured almost anywhere in her. I do not suppose conditions could have been more favorable for me than they were on that day. The wind blew strong and steady, lifting the skiff along at a great rate of speed, so that the miles slipped behind me very quickly, so that by the time I was ready for something to eat about 11 o'clock I figured that I must have gone about forty miles, and being cramped from sitting so long in the boat I determined to land on the next point of land running out into the river and dine in comfort.

The landing was made safely by running past the point and turning in on the upper side, where I was protected from the full flow of the wind, and leaving the boat tied to a tree, I took my basket and went up the bank to find a comfortable spot to sit down and enjoy my lunch. This I found not a hundred feet from the boat, and quickly proceeded to satisfy a healthy boy's appetite. When I managed this to my satisfaction I started back from the water, picking some late blueberries that were scattered through the open spots of the woods, and had gone fifty yards or so when I was startled by a loud whoop, and there, about ten feet away, stood a huge black bear on his hind legs, regarding me with simple wonder, large in his face. I don't suppose he was actually any bigger than a bear usually is, but he seemed to me to be as big as an elephant.

I guess we, the bear and I, looked into each other's eyes for some seconds—it seemed like hours to me—before I recovered from my surprise, but when I did I wheeled and ran for the boat at a rate that I had never equalled before, and not likely ever did again. I don't think the bear ever started after me, but of that I am not sure, I did not wait to see. But, according to my feelings he was only ten feet behind me all the way. Once I tripped and fell about thirty feet, right ahead, turned over, and was running again before I was up. How I got the boat untied, and was in her twenty feet from the shore is not quite clear to me, but there I was, and then I looked for the bear, but he certainly was not in sight, and as my uncle told me afterwards he was likely as far on the opposite side of where I met him as I was on this, as badly scared as I was. And I like to think that such was the case, for it is said that bears can laugh, and really do enjoy a good joke, and I hate to think of that chap laughing at me and then enjoying the coning at me and then enjoying the conquite a lot of good grub in it when I saw it last.

As soon as I got my breathing under control I got the boat before the wind and once more started up the river, and now my troubles were over. The wind held strong, and at four o'clock in the afternoon I ran the skiff alongside of the old Jacques Cartier, at Montreal dock, right under Captain Cote's nose, as he leaned over the side and swore great French oaths of wonder and delight at my appearance, but he declared that it was not me he was so glad to see, but his boat, and he patted me on the back and told me of all the things he would have done to me if I had lost her.

I told my story as shortly as possible, and the captain ordered me to bed at once, while he hastened to notify the authorities and start the hunt for the scoundrels who had made such an earnest effort to put me out of the way.

Once in bed I was dead to the world until called for breakfast the next morning, during which I gave Captain Cote a more detailed account of my adventures, and he informed me that he had not yet reported my disappearance to my uncle, giving as his reason that he knew very well that I would turn up all right, though I could tell of another reason having to do with a big soft heart, that would not, until all hope was gone, carry the bad news to his old friend.

Dear old captain, how proud he was of me. Though he took pains to explain that is was the boat that deserved all the credit. And how he took me to see all his friends to show me off, and told them they could come down and see the skiff whenever they liked, as he was going to keep her as long as he lived. Last of all he took me to the newspaper office, where he made me tell my story once more. I did not understand at the time why, and then with the money once more in my pockets he started me for home.

I arrived there safely and delivered the cash to my uncle, and once more told my story. He was not much impressed by it seemingly, and told me for my comfort, that I was evidently born to be hanged, as I could not be drowned, but when his copy of the newspaper, the old Chronicle, came up in a day or two and he saw the whole thing in print, he chaffed me more than ever. But I remember he did not fail to show the paper to all and sundry, and I guessed that at heart he was rather proud of the whole business.

The scoundrels that attacked me were never caught, nor did the authorities succeed in capturing them in anyway with the parties in Quebec.

Caught Cold By Working In Water.

A Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes:—"In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

Beware of imitations of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Ask for it and insist on getting what you ask for. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cts.

HEAR WHY

WE SPEAK FOR

Zam-Buk

THE GREAT HERBAL BALM

INJURED FOOT CURED.

"I speak for Zam-Buk because it cured me of a terribly bad foot," says Mrs. Alice Berryman of 100 John St. North, Hamilton. She adds: "The injury was caused by a wagon wheel, and the sore was on my right foot. It became very inflamed and swollen and so painful that I fainted away. In spite of treatment, the wound got no better and the foot became more and more swollen until it was several times its usual size. The flesh was terribly bruised and blackened and it was quite impossible for me to walk. My husband's mother at last brought me a box of Zam-Buk. This was applied to the foot and it was surprising how soon I found relief from the severe pain. A further supply of Zam-Buk was obtained and I persevered in using this balm alone. In a couple of days the swelling had gone down considerably, the discoloration was less distinct and the pain was banished. In four days I could go about as usual; the bruised and injured foot had been thoroughly cured by the timely use of Zam-Buk."

Did you ever ask yourself: "How is it that Zam-Buk is so popular?" It is because it is superior and different to other salves. Contrast them! Most salves are nine-tenths animal oil or fat. Zam-Buk hasn't a trace of animal fat in it. Most salves contain mineral coloring matter. Zam-Buk is absolutely without! Many salves contain poisonous astringents. Zam-Buk doesn't.

Zam-Buk is actually more powerfully antiseptic than crude carbolic acid. Yet it stops instead of causing pain and smarting when put on a wound.

It heals more quickly than any known substance, glasses, ulcers, eczema, blood-poisoning, cuts, scalp sores, chaps and all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

POISONED FINGER HEALED.

Mrs. Frank St. Denis of 305 Thompson St., Winnipeg, speaks for Zam-Buk because it cured her of a poisoned finger, which had caused her days of agony. Hear her experience. She says:

"One morning, while washing, I felt a slight pain in the end of my finger. This gradually got more acute until by the evening of the next day the end of the finger had become swollen and hard and so blue I became alarmed.

"The pain from it was almost too much to bear. It made me turn quite sick! Poultices of first one kind and then another were applied, but seemed to give me no relief. My daughter-in-law, who had had some previous experience with Zam-Buk obtained a box for me. I anointed the sore place liberally with this balm, and in a few hours, the throbbing aching pains were subdued."

Further applications of Zam-Buk gave me more ease, so that I could get a little sleep. In a few days the nail came off, but after that Zam-Buk seemed to reduce the inflammation considerably. I continued the use until in the end I had brought about a complete cure.

Mr. Hamilton has sold the remainder of his horses down here to Mr. H. Gobbett; and has also sold his place at Creston for some property about one hundred miles north of Edmonton, part of a new town site. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton were being driven about by their son, Mr. David Hamilton, of the Woolchester district. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton have the good wishes of all their old friends of this district for their welfare at their new home.

Santa Claus certainly visited this district in good style at Christmas time.

Mr. Ralph Golff has taken a position with Mr. A. B. Carle during the threshing time.

Moonlight walks must be very much enjoyed by the young people of this district.

Wishing everybody a happy and prosperous New Year.

Lots of winter and snow in this district, which makes the roads bad.

GROS VENTRE

Everything is very quiet here this winter. Some of the people are away.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Putman and family are visiting there relatives in Nova Scotia.

Mrs. L. C. Fleming and son, Don, are visiting at her parents in western Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Huston expect to start soon on a three months' tour to California and other south-western States.

John Andrew and Jack Dovey are batching in Chas Putnam's house on his homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Markle entertained lately; giving a dance which was well attended.

We are all pleased to see the twice a week mail which is run from Coleridge on Tuesdays, and Fridays. R. McEwen of Coleridge has the contract.

Farmers look pleased to see so much snow; hopes are entertained for a good crop again this year. This will be a good field to sell threshing outfits if the crop prospects hold out.

There is lots of grain to be threshed yet, Putnam Bros. are the only ones threshed on this creek this side of Norton's. There is an abundance of grain here in stack. Some of the farmers here are trying to overcome the inconvenience among whom are: Messrs J. and G. Lait; R. and Wm. Grayson; and L. Fleming, who have ordered an eight horse-power thresher from Massey and Sawyer in Winnipeg

SEVEN PERSONS

Geo Patterson lost a good horse last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Crowley, Mrs. McCarthy and Messrs. Ryan, Sullivan, Diss and Gunther spent an evening with Mr. and Mrs Walter Barber.

A very enjoyable dance was given in the Vosen building on Tuesday of last week about seventy-five being present, and they danced until 4 a.m. A fine time is reported by all who attended.

In trying to get on Wednesday's west-bound local a man slipped and fell. The train was stopped in time for him to arise and get on the rear end. He was uninjured.

A young man on his way to the dance on Tuesday, stopped to water his horse at the opening in the ice south of town. The horse was evidently from a local option district as it refused to drink. The rider insisted and pulled so hard on the animal that it slid into twelve feet of water after a cold bath the horse was rescued, but the rider's ball-room suit, which was attached to the saddle was thoroughly soaked. He attended the dance. On Wednesday a cow was taken from the same opening.

Campbell Bros. are erecting a dwelling for Sam Carlson.

Frank Vosen has the agency for McCormick machinery and expects 2 car loads shortly. He will be pleased to meet anyone desiring anything in this line.

Messrs. Diss, Patterson and Barber are digging up the earth with the hopes of getting water.

A surprise party was given at the home of Mr. Nesting a large crowd attended.

BONNIE BRAE

At present the trails are very icy, making it somewhat treacherous for the horse that is not prepared for them.

Mr. John Evans is contemplating the raising of ducks on a large scale. He certainly has all the facilities required in that line.

The Follis boys have erected an excellent windmill at their home place. It is well equipped with the latest improvements and will be a great labor saving as they have considerable stock.

Mr. Roy Fleming formerly of Nova Scotia is attending Mr. Corbett's interests on the ranch here. Mr. Corbett who is visiting in the Maritime provinces reports unusually wet weather in that locality.

We, the many friends of Mr. Harry Tenbrook, are pleased to welcome him back to our district once again. Harry has recently come from the Holy Cross hospital, Calgary, where he has been for several weeks recovering from an accident.

The outfit of Mr. A. MacGillivray's which went to lumber woods a few weeks ago, seem to have met with considerable misfortune. One of the party is sick in the hospital at Calgary; one of the best of the horses broke its leg and had to be disposed of; seemingly little work is being accomplished.

Mr. T. W. Follis has gone on a trip to eastern Canada.

The Schmelzer boys are living on their homesteads near Seven Persons.

Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Follis are enjoying a visit to Montreal.

Owing to the thick crust of ice and snow on the prairie the stock have some difficulty in feeding.

Machinery Arrives for Power House Workshop

Last week the whole of the machinery and equipment arrived for the new repair shop which is being fitted up at the power house at a total cost of $1,489. The plant includes a London gap lathe, Barnes drill, and Champion forge and a 7 horse-power gas engine to generate power for the above. There is also a complete outfit of necessary smaller tools. Mr McAffer, the pump-house engineer has hitherto been at a great disadvantage in cases of breakdown of any kind, as it has been necessary for him to send out emergency work and often to leave the power house himself at times when his whole attention has been required there.

The filter beds are now being thoroughly overhauled and cleaned in preparation for the spring. This year a heavier kind of gravel than formerly will be used the beds. It is anticipated that no difficulty will be experienced in coping with any situation which may arise during the coming muddy season. Additional shafting is being put in, to make it possible to run the pumps independently by either of the centrifugal pumps.

The following is the schedule of the lectures to be given after the holidays:

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

City Fathers Discuss Woman Suffrage

Ald. Forster Objects to C. P. R. Agreement

At the regular meeting of the city council held last evening in the city hall there were present the mayor, Aldermen Spencer, Bridgeman, McKay, Adsit, Howson, Forster and Fawcett.

A communication was read from the provincial board of health stating that the descretionary powers exercised by the board terminated with 1910, and that henceforth the law relating to the disposal of sewage must be complied with. Referred to the board of health.

Letter from Mr. Ansley was read in connection with being stopped hauling coal through the streets of the city of Medicine Hat, until he had first paid a license for each team that was drawing coal.

The chief of police advised that Mr Ansley had never been asked to pay a license, but that his teamsters were asked to pay a license.

Mr. Ansley stated that three years ago was a poor winter, men coming for thirty miles in Saskatchewan could not get any coal, and their families were freezing, and he told them he would get them coal.

He came to Medicine Hat and made arrangements with Mr. Crawford for the output of his mine. He had men hauling and as soon as these men saw that he had a market for his coal, and there was a good demand for his coal the teamsters got together and combined themselves and would not work unless they were paid $1.75.

"If I get a license for these men and their teams they will not pay. If these men that are hauling the coal are going to run me in that way, they would soon be dictating to me how to run my mine," said the speaker.

I wrote the chief of police at Taber to find out if the mine owners at Taber were paying a license. He wrote me advising that the mine owners had no license for their teams to draw coal to the collieries. The dray license only applies to those teams exclusively in the city limits.

I also wrote to the clerk of the city of Lethbridge, he also wrote along the same lines.

Mr. A. Nichol, proprietor of the City Stables, stated that he did not think it was right for people coming into the city and hauling coal without a license.

Mr. Forster was of the opinion that it was not right to put a license on so young a business of this kind. Instead of charging them a yearly license it would be well to charge a quarterly or half yearly license.

Mr. Spencer asked if it would not be well to ask the police to withhold this matter. It seems to be a very hard question if a man is doing his best to start a good industry that he should be made pay a license, when such was detrimental to the business.

Moved by Mr. Spencer that the matter be referred to the license committee to look into the matter, and in the mean time the fee would not be collected. Seconded by Alderman Bridgeman.

Moved by Alderman Adsit that the matter be referred to the license committee, and in the meantime that the fee be collected from the teamsters and refunded later on if the report recommended such. Seconded by Ald. Fawcett.

Letter from Mr. H. S. Ireland in connection with the building inspector refusing to issue permit for new store front upon the ground of its not being in accordance with bylaw.

Alderman Adsit moved that on account of the building not complying with the bylaw that the request be not granted. Seconded by Ald. McKay.

Letter from the Canadian Fairbanks Company, Alta., dated Jan. 14th, 1910, in connection with the style of rock-crusher. Received and filed.

Letter from W. A. Henderson Company at Regina thanking the council for the appointment of City Auditor for 1910. Filed.

Letter from the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Victoria in connection with cheque for $40.95, for Ambulance Fund. Received and filed.

A petition was received from A. W. Perry asking for an increase in salary to $1,800, on the ground that he was handling the city stores in addition to his work as secretary-treasurer. On motion motion of Ald. Forster, seconded by Spencer, this was laid on the table till the report of the committee on salaries be received.

This committee then reported that the salaries of last year be paid this year with the following changes:—that the salary of Mr. Finlayson (policeman) be raised from $70 to $75 per month; Thos. Murray (pound keeper) reduced from $40 to $25 per month and the privilege of retaining fees; that the position of 3rd assistant in the secretary-treasurer's office be raised from $40 to $50; that that of A. Eddy at the power house be raised from $60 to $70; that of Foreman Jackson from $100 to $110 and that of J. T. Shunk be $50 per month and whatever remuneration he receives as band master.

That portion of the report referring to Assistant Secretary Baker's salary was amended to read $100 per month instead of $90, it having been pointed out that this amount was promised him last year if his services were satisfactory.

On motion of Ald. McKay, Mr. Perry's letter was taken from the table and filed.

Ald Fawcett reported on behalf of the committee, that the request of W. D. Cavan for refund of amount paid to poundkeeper be granted.

Also, a report of parks and market committee that the ground south of the track be laid out as a park and that the tennis club be notified that it will not be available for other purposes this year; that $600 be granted to the band, $25 per month to go to the bandmaster and the balance to the band itself at the rate of $10 for each concert given. Carried.

Ald. Forster presented the report of the fire, water and light committee recommending that certain changes be made at the fire hall toward improving the floors for the fire horses' feet, cleaning the walls of the gymnasium and providing new mattresses and springs for the firemen's beds, that city solicitor prepare an amendment to the building bylaw re fire scarifies, and that the fire chief be allowed the use of the extra horse at the fire hall provided he supply his own buggy.

Certain changes in reference to better fire protection were referred to the waterworks committee.

Alderman Spencer called attention to the wear on the fire equipment caused by it being used in exercising the horses. In many places this was done without using the equipment.

The license and police committee reported that no license be imposed upon parties dealing in hides and furs within the city.

The special committee on legislation recommended that title 21 of the charter be amended to give the city power to remunerate the mayor and aldermen for their services; that the mayor be empowered to employ special constables in emergencies; and that authority be obtained to exempt from taxation building improvements for the year in which they were carried on, and that the assessor be given authority to examine the plant of concerns granted a fixed rate of taxation or exemption from taxation to see that the conditions are complied with.

At this point the mayor drew attention to the fact that a delegation from the W. C. T. U. had waited on him that afternoon with a petition asking that married women holding property in their own name be given a right to vote on money bylaws. They also presented a petition from the provincial organization requesting his signature to a petition to the legislature for this privilege throughout the province. In the discussion on this it was pointed out that widows and spinsters have this privilege now, and none of the aldermen could see why married ladies should not have it. On motion of Ald. Adsit and Spencer this request was ordered to be added to the amendments to be asked for in the city charter. Carried unanimously.

On motion of Ald. Howson and Adsit, it was ordered that the Canadian Fairbanks Co. be compelled to deliver cranes to the city in accordance with their tender.

In reference to the proposed public works for the year Ald. Forster drew attention to the condition of some of the roads leading to the city. That at Dunmore Junction was a detriment to the city's trade and he suggested that the council might co-operate with the local improvement district and the provincial government in getting the road in better condition.

Ald. Fawcett asked for fuller information in reference to the tenders for park purposes. He was of the opinion that the best piece of ground for an athletic park was not included in those which are to be submitted to the people. He moved that the Hargrave property at the end of the bridge be also included. It was finally decided to leave over till next meeting the decision of how the bylaw should read.

Ald. Howson called attention to the slippery condition of many of the city streets. It was suggested by the mayor that the council might experiment with sand in improving them.

Ald. Forster drew attention to the discrepancy between the price water is being sold at to the C. P. R. and the actual cost of pumping it. From figures taken from the city books he showed that to pump 700,000 gals. of water per day costs us 10c. a gallon, and we are selling it to one customer for 4c. This constitutes a bonus to said company, which the council has no right to give without the consent of the people. The company is using as much as the citizens and each should be paying $85 per day, instead of one $14 and the other $56.

The mayor pointed out that by selling to the C. P. R. we are reducing the cost to the citizens. The trouble is that the plant cost too much and we cannot make the company pay for the city's mistake. The company can pump it for themselves at 4 cents, and if we cut them off our water will cost us more.

Ald. Forster still contended that it is not a business proposition to sell for 4c. what cost 10c.

Alderman Spencer considered it good business since the extra pumping costs us practically nothing. With this Ald. Howson agreed as the power plant could not be run with any less help in any case. The big cost of delivering water is the water mains and these do not wear out with use. Ald. McKay contended that since no men could be dispensed with we are selling for $4,000 what costs us practically nothing.

To this contention Ald. Forster replied that we are wearing out the machinery as was done once before in fulfilling a bad contract.

The mayor thought the machinery wore out through lack of care.

Ald. Fawcett thought that to leave out connections and hydrants we could easily pump water through our mains at 4c.

Alderman Howson favored the committee bringing in a report to the next council as to the cost of pumping water. This was carried.

Raffles Prize

The great Raffles contest came to a close on Wednesday last at 4 p.m. Dressed as a carpenter, Raffles was parading on Toronto street and was about to enter Marshall's Hardware Store, when he aroused the suspicion of M. C. Sackrider. Accosting him, Raffles admitted his identity and came to The Times office where Mr. Sackrider claimed the $50, he having taken out a year's subscription the previous week.

Mr. Sackrider was also fortunate in securing the $6.00 prize offered by the Marshall Hardware Co., as he had just made a purchase at that store. Many are the anxious ones who though successful in accosting Mr. Raffles yet failed to qualify for the prize.

HYMENEAL

On Tuesday last at the home of the groom, Otto Doering, of Josephburg, the marriage ceremony was solemnized which made Otto Doering and Carrie Helman, Irvine, man and wife. The ceremon was performed by Rev. J. S. Burn of Medicine Hat, in the presence of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Many congratulations and well wishes for the future were tendered the happy couple on the occasion.

CONSOLIDATION

A deal has been closed recently whereby the bottling industry in Medicine Hat has become consolidated under one management. The Standard Bottling Co. have taken over the plant and good-will of the Hartley Bottling Works. The industry will be carried on in the Pruitt block.

ACCIDENT AT VANCOUVER

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Moore received word last evening of an accident in Vancouver in which their son Edgar and family had a very close call for life. The accident was due to street repairs being carried on and thus not leaving a wide enough space for the vehicle in which Mr. and Mrs. Moore and child were driving to pass. At last report all are doing well and are being cared for by the Oddfellows' Lodge.

The British Elections

LATEST RETURNS

Special to The Times—Jan. 18th—The following is the standing of the parties according to reports received up to midnight, Jan. 17th: Unionists 99, Liberals 78, Labor members 15, Nationalists 13. The showing at present indicates that all prospects of the Conservatives forming the next administration are gone; and it is expected that the Liberals will have a majority over all combinations. London, the Conservative stronghold gave the Liberals better support than anticipated. Joseph Martin secures a seat with good majority. Hamar Greenwork lost his seat at York, while Sir Gilbert Parker is again returned. Bonar Law is also returned. Sir Richard Jebb secured little support in Marylebone East, where he ran as Independent Unionists against Barton, official candidate and Noon the Liberal. Though prominent Canadians had urged Balfour to make Jebbs' election possible the influences of the Cecil family was used against him and he figured at the bottom of the poll. No Socialist has yet been returned as such though members of the Labor party who hold Socialistic beliefs have been elected, including Philip Snowdon, regarded in some quarters as the real author of the budget. Most Scottish and Welsh constituencies have not yet been heard from but it is expected that they will be almost solid against the peers. Lords will have to pay their share of taxation and lose much of their present power. Food will remain untaxed and Lloyd-George financial scheme will be given a trial.

School Board

The regular meeting of the school board was held last evening in the secretary-treasurer's office. All the members were present and Chairman White in the chair. On motion of A. Hawthorne, the chairman nominated the following committees for the year:

Building—Wilson, Hawthorne and White.

Schools and grounds—Hopper, and White.

Teachers—Hawthorne and White.

Supplies and purchasing—Miers and Hopper.

The first named in each case to be the chairman.

Seven communications from Principal Sansom and one from A. H. Manely were taken from the table and referred to the committee on supply.

H. Isaac, caretaker of Montreal St. school, made application for an increase in salary. This was referred to the school and grounds committee.

The secretary was instructed to write the architect requesting him to notify the contractors that no brick-laying must be done when the thermometer stands 8 below freezing.

J. E. Miers was appointed a delegate, in addition to D. G. White, to attend the trustees' convention at Lethbridge.

ALDERMAN FAWCETT

Mr. S. T. Fawcett, the representative of Ward 3, in this year's council, is a more recent arrival than Alderman Bridgeman, having arrived in Medicine Hat in Sept. 1890. Since then he has been connected in some way with the city. He is a native of Sackville, N. B., the old university town, and it will be strange if some academic tendencies do not reveal themselves in the gatherings of the city fathers. We hope however that he has forgotten the college yell, for if in an outburst of enthusiasm he breaks forth in a zip-rah boom-rah, the Times will not undertake to print it.

Sam is the only one of a family of six who has tried his fortune in the West, and if he is as successful in managing the city's business as he has been in his own, the city will profit from his term of office.

He was the organizer and manager of the Lost and West Ranching Company, which controlled about 20,000 acres in the Graburn district where the ranching operations were carried on. Medicine Hat being the market town. In 1907 the company sold out its interests in the ranch, having at the time 1,000 cattle and 200 horses. Since 1907 he has been engaged in the Flour and Feed business formerly on Main Street and South Railway Street and lately on Toronto Street, where he has a building admirably suited to his growing requirements. During the last year he has extended his business by adding machinery and harness. His business abilities commended themselves to the ratepayers of Medicine Hat, and he was consequently chosen to represent Ward 3 in the council.

Mr. A. B. Carle has just finished his threshing and he reports that his grain turned out remarkably well his wheat going over 33 bushels per acre, and his oats a little over sixty-five bushels per acre. His grain is also a splendid grade. Mr. Carle spent yesterday in the city and left this morning on a business trip to Rouleau, Sask.

Mr. Jack Fenton spent last Saturday in town.

On Friday evening Miss McEwan entertained, at the home of her parents, a large number of friends. Dancing was indulged in until a late hour.

Invitations are out for a dance to be given by the N. C. O.'s and men of the 21st Alberta Hussars, on Friday next. These hosts understand their business thoroughly, and a good time is assured all who can accept.

Here's a Canadian letterhead:—"Medicine Hat Steam Laundry. When you want a new shirt see Turpin Bros., Men's Outfitters." Now why can't Chicago laundries be as frank?—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. W. C. Quinlan left Saturday for the coast where he will join a party of friends on a trip south.

Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Butler of Weymouth, Nova Scotia, who have been visiting at Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Patterson for the past few weeks intend leaving for Victoria, B. C., on Wednesday. They are very favorably impressed with the mildness of the climate and the wonderful possibilities of our prairie country.

The Misses Quinlan have returned from Calgary.

Through an error it was announced in last week's issue that the Jeanne Russell Co. would give a benefit in favor of St. John's Presbyterian church. The company will give a benefit performance on Friday, Jan. 21, at a "Bobby Burns Night Celebration" presenting J. M. Barrie's famous Scotch creation, "The Little Minister" and will donate a percentage of the gross receipts to the General Hospital fund.

On Wednesday last a number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Nichol and spent a most enjoyable time dancing.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Are Overcome By Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

The kidneys have a very important work to perform in preserving health. All the blood passes through them over and over again and they filter it, removing all the impurities and worn-out muscle and tissue which the blood gathers up, in microscopic particles, in its flow through the body. These impurities are then expelled through the urinary system.

When the kidneys for any reason fail to perform this function, and the impurities are left in the blood, about the most distressing series of ailments which afflict mankind follow. First there is the aching back and a feeling of weariness, and then, as conditions grow worse, comes Rheumatism, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones, Inflammation of the Bladder or the dreaded Bright's Disease.

The man or woman who allows kidney trouble to develop into any of these diseases is doing himself or herself a grave injustice, particularly when a cure can be had so readily. One of the constituents of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills is a Diuretic, which strengthens and stimulates the kidneys, enabling them to do their work thoroughly and with ease. These Pills also increase the action of the bowels and the pores of the skin, which remove some of the impurities, thus lightening the work of the kidneys.

Mr. Geo Whitney, of Buffalo, N.Y., says they worked wonders for him. He writes:

"Your Doctor Morse's Indian Root Pills have worked wonders in my case. I suffered for six years from liver trouble and kidney ailment. If I tried one medicine I tried a dozen, but without good results. Your pills were recommended and they cured me after using four boxes."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills should be taken at the first sign of back-ache, of rheumatism, or of any difficulty in urinating.

Sport and Play

Interviewed at Winnipeg, on his way east, Mr. C. S. Pingle, president of the local baseball club, expressed himself thus on the situation here:

Medicine Hat, the home of the champions, is still on the baseball map, according to Mr. Pingle. He admitted that an offer had been made for the Hat franchise by a larger western city (presumably Saskatoon), but he felt satisfied that Medicine Hat would not leave the same old circuit next season. If not, the franchise would be well taken care of, so any move that might be made as far as Medicine Hat was concerned, should not worry any of the other cities in the league.

Mr. Pingle is confident that the 1910 season should be a good one for the W. C. league. It was somewhat of a costly experience last year for most of the clubs, but much of the initial and unnecessary expense incurred would be obviated, and he felt sure a bright future is in store for the league.

One point he emphasized was that Medicine Hat would not leave the league in the lurch.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Baseball in Western Canada is again coming to the fore, and the different clubs around the circuit are getting busy with more than the usual energy, which should mean that the 1910 league is assured of success. Last year the Western Canada league was organized by Jack Lamb inside of a month, and considering the poor start and the short time the clubs had to get together, the baseball dished up around the circuit was more than was anticipated at the opening of the league. This year the league will be better than ever. All the clubs are getting away to a good start, and with the salary limit increased the brand of ball will be of the very best.

Frank Lohr will manage the Winnipeg baseball team again this year. Arrangements were completed this week, whereby the little outfielder will again be in charge of the pennant chasers. As a player, Lohr was of little benefit to the club last season. In the first week's play Frank sustained a severe fracture of the leg while sliding into a base at Brandon. It was no more baseball for him in 1909. After several weeks in the hospital, Lohr was able to get around on crutches and so acted as bench manager. He is desirous of another opportunity of making good in a more active way. He made a good impression in the few games he played, and also displayed ability as a leader. Personally Frank Lohr is a quiet, gentlemanly chap who made a good impression on all who met him. Lohr is spending the winter at Rapid City, South Dakota and will immediately get busy signing up a team. He has fully recovered from his accident.

Lethbridge is in line for a good team. Chesty Cox is expected to manage the team. Chesty was about the best all round player in the league last year; he was among the leaders in batting. He can play any position, and is even a good change pitcher. What Chesty does not know about baseball will not be included on a manager's map.

Under Deacon White's management Edmonton will sit quiet and let him do the work and worry, resting assured he will have a team by the time the season opens equal to any on the circuit.

Brandon or Moose Jaw have not yet decided upon their managers, but they have out the hooks and expect to land good ones.

Bill Carney, the newly elected manager of the Calgary baseball team is a man who knows baseball from start to finish. Manager Crist and Chandler have both played with Carney, and they speak in glowing terms of his ability as a manager of ball-players. From his letters written to the local directors, Carney is in a position to land a bunch of big ones, and that he will give Calgary a winning team, the directors feel assured. He already has some twenty players in view, including those who made good last year with the Calgary team.—The Optimist, Calgary.

THE JEANNE RUSSELL WEEK AT MEDICINE HAT

Four Big Nights of Wholsome Amusement Promised.

Special Benefit Performance in behalf of the General Hospital Fund. A Worthy Movement by a Generous Company.

Starting Wednesday evening, January 19th, The Jeanne Russell Co., appear at the Opera House with a greatly augumented company for an engagement of four nights and a Saturday matinee—opening in that most beautiful southern comedy drama "Polly Primrose"—which will be without a doubt the most stupendous production ever witnessed on the local stage. Practically the entire company are seen to advantage in this play, and with the elaborate scenery and stage setting, the sweet music and the absorbing, interesting story connected with the play, the theatregoers of Medicine Hat are offerred the grandest treat of the season in this production of Polly Primrose—the best ever offered in Canada.

On Thursday "The Thief" will be the offering—it was in this play that George Alexander, London's greatest actor, scored such an overwhelming success during the unprecedented run at the Drury Lane theatre, London. The action, taking place near Paris, affords an opportunity of seing life at the French capital. The gowns seen in this production are the most expensive used by any company travelling Canada having been imported from Worth's, the world renowned costumer, specially for this play.

On Friday evening, through the courtesy of the ever popular Miss Jeanne Russell and Mr. Marshall, manager, the company will celebrate "Bobbie Burns Night" with the production of J. M. Barrie's masterpiece "The Little Minister" and donate a percentage of the gross receipts to the General Hospital Fund. This is a worthy movement by a generous company, and well worthy of the patronage of every citizen of Medicine Hat—and the board of managers trust that the Opera House will be packed to the doors to greet the Russell company on this occasion.

On Saturday—Matinee and Evening—The climax is promised in the production "The Heart of Kentucky"—the most thrilling melodrama of the Blue Grass State, which will afford us an opportunity of witnessing the moonshiners, the unlawful makers of the demon rum. Their trials and tribulations—also the revenue officers'—the big still scene, and the great climax—the fight of the brothers—and besides all the above there is plenty of comedy, good cheer, sweet music, splendid scenery and numerous amusing incidents to please both old and young. The most realistic production ever presented. Four performances of this play were given in Calgary, every time to crowded houses, and there it was received with deafening applause and numerous curtain calls.

At the matinee performance two grand prizes will be drawn for consisting of a Free Season Pass—one good for adults and one for children—an opportunity never before offered—will you be the lucky one?

The citizens of Medicine Hat should be alive to the issue; if we are to be up-to-date and have attractions, as the above offered us—we must do our share and turn out and boost, be happy, be gay, be neighborly—acquaint ourselves with the fact that we are alive and be up and doing—remember Friday night—and the General Hospital, with a debt of $8,000. Let us make this week "One Grand At Home Week"—Everybody join in the merriment at the Opera House.

Clinton N. Howard, one of the most noted platform speakers in America, will visit Medicine Hat on Sunday next under the auspices of the Moral and Social Reform league of Alberta. Mr. Howard has been classed with such speakers as W. J. Bryan, and the opportunity to hear him is one which no one should allow to pass by.

Two addresses will be delivered while here—one at 3 p.m. in the city hall and another at 7.30 in St. Johns church. Standing room will doubtless be at a premium on both of these occasions. A liberal offering is asked by the local branch as the expense of securing Mr. Howard is necessarily large.

School Board

The first regular meeting of the school board of 1910 was held on on Monday evening the 10th inst, in the board room. There were present, Messrs. A. C. Hawthorne, J. E. Miers, Jas. Wilson and S. T. Hopper. On motion of Mr. Wilson, Mr. Hawthorne took the chair; and Mr. D. G. White was elected chairman for the year. Mr. E. J. Fewings was reappointed treasurer at a salary of $360 per annum. Applications from Misses G. E. Sprague and Cora Trimble for positions on the staff were placed on file to be referred to in case of vacancies.

Principal Sansom submitted a report for the month of December. This showed a total attendance during that month of 678 pupils, an increase over the corresponding month of the previous year of 66. So far the Christmas influx had brought in 27 new pupils (beginners), and the number would be much greater if the names of those who were admitted to the higher standards were included. It was pointed out that serious inconvenience had been caused by the re-arranging of the classification in some of the standards, owing to the lack of proper accommodation. There were now 58 high school pupils, and this work was being carried on in all its branches. In concluding the report Mr. Sansom wrote: "A stranger in town who was enquiring recently into our school facilities was informed by a business man that we had no high school at present, but that it was likely that one would be ready in about a year. It would seem that even some residents have something to learn about our schools."

A communication from Miss Caldwell was received, thanking the board for the increase in salary recently granted.

Mr. Meneely wrote that the school concert had left funds at the disposal of the Montreal street school teachers. A meeting had been held on Jan. 5th, to decide as to the best way of expending the money.

While it was felt that a fair share should be divided among the classrooms for the direct benefit of the pupils, the teachers came to the conclusion that they could offer the board $20 to assist in furnishing the teachers' room. Some steps had been taken to prepare the room, which had not, however, as yet been put into use. The communication was laid on the table.

On Mr. Hawthorne's motion, Mr. White was appointed the delegate to the convention of the Alberta Association of School Trustees, to be held in Lethbridge during the present month.

The chairman and the secretary-treasurer were authorized to use the funds at the credit of the building and savings bank account, for the purpose of carrying out the expenses of the school district until such time as a bylaw is passed to borrow money from the bank.

Payment of the following accounts was authorized:

J. C. Beveridge, $18; City of Medicine Hat, $47.50; Jas Rae, $8.95; Medicine Hat News, $7.50.

The board then adjourned until last night, the 17th inst.

Suffered Terrible Pains

From Her Kidneys For Nine Months.

For Backache, Lame or Weak Back—one of the commonest and most distressing symptoms of kidney inaction, there is no remedy equal to Doan's Kidney Pills for taking out the stitches, twitches and twinges, limbering up the stiff back, and giving perfect comfort.

A medicine that strengthens the kidneys so that they are enabled to extract the poisonous uric acid from the blood and prevent the chief cause of Rheumatism.

Mr. Dougald A. McIsaac, Broad Cove Banks, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for nine months, and suffered with such terrible pains across the small of my back all the time that I could hardly get around. After taking two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I began to feel better, and by the time I had taken three I was completely cured."

Wireless Telephone

A complete chain of long distance wireless telephone towers which will connect the Pacific coast stations of the Pacific Radio Company with those now doing a commercial business in the cities along the Great Lakes will be erected during the coming summer in cities in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and in Kenora and Port Arthur.

The prairie cities will thus become part of the first transcontinental radiophone service ever inaugurated. This city will be provided with one of the radio towers as soon as the company's engineers can make the necessary arrangements.

The opening of communication between New York and Chicago last November indicates that the radiophone works as well over land as over water, so no trouble is anticipated with a service reaching from the mountains to the Great Lakes.

Agricultural Society Directors Meet

Secretary-Treasurer Resigns

A meeting of the directors of the Agricultural Society was held in the Board of Trade building on Friday afternoon last. There were present: Jas. Rae, president; John T. Hall, secretary-treasurer; and the following directors: Jas. Fleming, W. N. Adsit, Ezra Pearson, R. P. Starks, Jas. Fisher, and F. G. Forster.

The following letter was read from the secretary-treasurer, resigning his position:—

Medicine Hat.
Jan. 14th, 1910

James Rae, Esq.,
President of Agricultural Society.

Dear Sir,—I beg to tender my resignation as Secretary-Treasurer of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society, and in doing so, desire to express my thorough appreciation of the pleasant relationship that has always existed between you, as President, your fellow directors on the board and myself, and I cannot speak too highly of the time and attention which you have given to the affairs of the Society in practically bringing it out of a state of chaos and placing it upon a secure, prosperous and business-like foundation. I express to you personally my sincere thanks for the great assistance you have always given me in placing your long experience in matters pertaining to the management of Agricultural Societies, at my disposal. I will always have a kind remembrance of the two years that I had the honor of being your secretary, and close by expressing the hope that the affairs of the Society may continue to grow and prosper under your experienced management and that its educational results may be a strong factor in the future agricultural development of the district.

Again, thanking you and your directors, for the many curtesies extended to me during my term of office, W

I beg to remain,
Yours very respectfully,

JOHN T. HALL,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Moved by Jas. Fleming, seconded by Jas. Fisher, that the resignation be accepted with regrets, and that the thanks of the society be tendered him. Carried. The directors felt that in losing the services of Mr. Hall they were losing a pains-taking and efficient officer. Mr. W. N. Adsit was elected to fill the vacancy. It was also decided that the remuneration for the services of the secretary treasurer for 1910 shall be $100, and that he shall be bonded to the extent of $2,000 at the expense of the society.

The question of holding a seed grain fair was discussed at some length and the secretary was instructed to communicate with the Dominion Seed Grain Commissioner at Calgary on the subject. The date will not be decided till his reply is received.

The president was appointed a delegate to the convention at Edmonton on February 2nd and 3rd, at which, dates for the various fairs throughout the province will be arranged.

A change of some importance, the result of which time alone will reveal, was made in the date of holding the annual exhibition. It was decided that the event would take place some time in August, most probably early in the month. This means that a change is made to a summer fair—an institution which seems to be growing in the west. As this year's crop will not then be harvested, 1909 grain will be eligible to exhibition purposes, 1910 grain may be exhibited in the sheaf.

Arrangements were also made for the 2nd annual stallion show, which will be held on March 30th. The following changes were made in last year's prize list:

Class 1, to consist of Clydes—Imported; Class 2, to consist of Clydes—Canadian, where only one of the parents has been imported. If both sire and dam have been imported the animal must be entered in Class 1. Any entry in Class 2 may also be entered in Class 1 if the exhibitor so desires.

A Sweepstake will be given for each breed, for the best stallion of any age. The prize for this exhibit shall be a ribbon only. This avoids the objection to sweepstake prizes as being only additional prize-money to the 1st prize-animall

Strong Stroke Against Mail Order Houses

In a North Dakota town the merchants became tired of selling goods on credit while their customers or many of them were sending their cash away to catalogue houses. After careful consideration they decided to adopt radical means to enforce cash payments. A man was sent to the railway station to make a list each day of the names of those receiving goods from the catalogue houses. A copy of this list was placed n each store and when one of these customers attempted to purchase on time he was courteously refused.

Again any of such customers bringing produce to town were directed to ship to the catalogue houses with which they dealt. The customers, finding they could no longer get credit at home in order to be able to purchase the articles for which it would not pay them to send away.

School for Military Instruction

A school of Instruction for Cavalry, in drill and other military duties will be held in Calgary, commencing February 1st, and continuing until March 31st, 1910.

The school is for the benefit of officers and non-comissioned officers, who have not qualified for their various ranks, and for qualifying officers for appointments.

Officers commanding regiments and independent squadrons have been requested to forward to the District Officer Commanding Military District No. 13, Calgary, applications of all officers and non-comm ssioned officers wishing to take advantage of the course. All applications should be in the office of the D. O. C., not later than the 20th inst.

Officers in charge of the units in course of organization may send in their own applications, and thote of the provisional officers and noncommissioned officers, for the course, to the district officer commanding, direct. These will be accepted pending authority, and the officers will be duly notified.

Officers who have not yet provided themselves with officers' uniforms, will be permitted to draw a private's uniform and equipment from the squadron stores of their own unit, for use at the school.

The following articles of clothing, arms, equipment and saddlery must be brought by all attending the school:

From squadron stores—Cap, naval pattern, great-coat, serge frock, pantaloons blue, black leather leggings, blue duck trousers and shirt, bandolier, waist belt, rifle with oil bottle and pull-through, bayonet and scabbard, saddlery complete.

The following personal outfit should also be in [illegible] of each candidate:

Boots black, grooming kit, change of underclothing, necessary articles of toilet, boot brushes, clothes-brush, note book and foolcap paper, indelible pencil, fountain pen.

The school will have its head-quarters at the fair grounds, Victoria Park, Calgary (by kind permission of the mayor and city commissioners), and will open at 9 a.m. on February the 1st, proximo, at which time and place all candidates will report themselves to the District Staff Adjutant, Military District No. 13.

At about 8.45 on Thursday evening an alarm was rung in to the fire hall from box 14, which is in the neighborhood of the Rosedes. The brigade turned out, but arrived on the scene of the supposed fire only to find that the alarm was a false one, a joke played on the brigade by some individual with a perverted sense of humor. Fortunately for the fool-jester, his identity could not be discovered and he escaped the severe punishment which the law imposes for a most reprehensible offence.

Value of a Land Agency

Mr. F. M. Ginther paid a business visit to Lethbridge on Monday and Tuesday of last week. Mr. Ginther was present during the great land rush when over 900 homesteads were taken up in territory tributary to Medicine Hat, in the 21 townships opened for settlement. Mr. Ginther was greatly impressed with the advertising possibilities of a head land office at Medicine Hat. Although all the land in the new townships is nearer this city than to Lethbridge, and the needs of the settlers will be better served from here, the great majority of them appeared to have little or no knowledge of this city, and its facilities for the farmer. It would appear to be a mere matter of fairness for the government to establish a land agency here, as under the present conditions Medicine Hat suffers a very real grievance.

In spite of unfair competition the prospects are that Medicine Hat will experience in the spring one of the greatest land rushes ever known in the Canadian west. All of the available land in the Lethbridge district has been taken up and these bridge will be located near to our city. Medicine Hat is the last portion of southern Alberta which the homesteader will have the opportunity to secure and in the course of a year or so every farmer who comes west to take up land will have to purchase at the full market value.

Mrs. R. B. Bellamy of Medicine Hat was in town this week in the interests of the Amateur Comedy Troupe who will put on "The Gate to Ruin," in the Magic, on Saturday January 29th. Miss Mabel Bellamy, of the local telephone company, who now resides in the Hat, is with the troupe. They have been favorably criticised by the press. One of the comments will be published in our next issue.—Swift Current Sun.

Mr. W. A. Bragg has been transferred from the accountancy of the Merchants Bank in this city to a similar position in Edmonton.

Miss Marion Cochran entertained on Thursday evening in honor of her guest, Miss Farquhar, of Nova Scotia.

Mr. L. W. McBean left on Tuesday on a business trip to Calgary, Macleod and Lethbridge.

The Agricultural Society

The letter from Grain-Grower in another column of our paper requires certain information from the editor which is not altogether within the editor's sphere. However, as we have access to the Society's books and possess a copy of the report, we are enabled to furnish the enquirer with the information he desires.

The names of the five farmers who are on the board of the directors are: Ezra Pearson, R. E. Starks, Alex Middleton, John Ellis, David Cargill. These are men who have large agricultural interests, and can safely be depended upon to present the claims of the farming community. An agricultural society, like anything else, must be run on business principles and with an eye to the finances. It cannot have ideal conditions in every line, but must shape a prize-list to suit the conditions. It should not be forgotten that the society exists for the farmers, and if the latter wish a larger representation on the directorate there is scarcely a member on it who would not gladly resign and give place to a farmer who will give the work the necessary attention.

In reference to the seed fair, Grain Grower will note by our news column in this week's issue, that a seed fair will be held this year. This was decided at a meeting of the directors held last week. It is quite evident that the society realize the need of such, and Grain-Grower's point would would have been well taken, had they failed to make this provision. Enquiry among the directors reveals the fact that no one seems to know exactly why a seed grain fair was not held during the past year or so. It was not a question of dropping it and substituting a stallion show. This year we are to have both. But in the many changes in the officers, the matter seems to have been overlooked.

It is to be hoped that the discussion which has now perhaps gone as far as is profitable, has served a useful purpose in removing misunderstanding between the society and a section of the farming community. Misunderstandings are generally removed when the causes for them are sought after, and explanations given. There is nothing that can take the place of a good agricultural exposition and it is for the farming community to realize its value and lend its assistance without which no exhibition can amount to much.

BANQUET REFORM
(Montreal Star)

A correspondent points out, very clearly, how public banquets have become an unmitigated nuisance and a frightful nightmare to many of the guests. He evidently knows what he is writing about. His complaints, which are well founded, are that almost invariably public functions of this kind do not commence on scheduled time, and instead of dinner being served at 7.30 or 8 o'clock, there is an hour or more of tedious delay; that instead of there being a few bright, carefully-prepared speeches, with several unencored songs, the list of orators usually includes a score or more, some of whom are painful to listen to; and that everybody who gets up to respond to a toast is a "Jolly Good Fellow" and is greeted with time-worn songs intimating that he is a convival individual, and drawing attention to the fact that he is a daisy, etc. etc. etc., with the result that the affair is prolonged until the early hours.

There is much of truth in all this. Banquest have become somewhat of a nuisance, because of the idea that everyone present who wants to (or doesn't want to) talk should be given a chance, and that when he rises to speak, he should be told that he is a jolly good fellow.

There is no reason in the world, why public banquets should not commence at the advertised hour, and the participants be ready for home at midnight. There is less reason why one who is compelled by his position or by force of circumstances to be present should be bored to death in listening to prolix speakers, dwelling at unconscionable length in not particularly interesting speeches.

Nor should the encore fiend who insists on the recal of the musicians and reciters be left unquelched. A round of applause would be a happier greeting than that everlasting: "For he's a Jolly Good Fellow," and the inane "He's a Daisy," should be prohibited—even if he is one.

In some places in the United States the practice prevails of the toasts running concurrently with the courses so that when the coffee is served, its time for "Auld Lang Syne." The courses are served at intervals of about twenty minutes or less—by prearrangement with the kitchen—and prolix speakers, unless under special circumstances, are forced to cut their eloquence short.

We do not know how our post-dinner "orators" would take to this innovation. Anything, however, would be preferable to the present style of banqueting which makes what should be a pleasant, enjoyable evening something to be dreaded and shunned.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION
(Moosomin World)

THE railway to Hudson's Bay is being rapidly pushed ahead. Already 600,000 miles have been built, and the prospects are that as many more will be constructed during the 1910. On to the Bay!

In her speech on woman suffrage, at Toronto some weeks ago, Mrs. Pankhurst is quoted as saying:—"The day will come when women will sit in your Canadian Parliament." And as long as this inducement is held out, Sir Frederick Borden will not resign his seat.

THE "MOST UNKINDEST CUT OF ALL."
(Calgary Albertan)

The mayor of Calgary was in Medicine Hat last week and the Hat paper says that he was on private business, just as if it can get any person to believe that there is any business in Medicine Hat, private or otherwise.

PRAISE FOR BORDEN

London, Jan. 13—The Times this morning says the lively sense of Imperial responsibility which Laurier d splayed in a recent speech at Toronto gave deep satisfaction to thousands of good citizens at home. The satisfaction, says The Times, will be doubled by the language used by Mr. Borden in parliament yesterday. The knowledge and breadth of judgment with which Mr. Borden treated the subject of the navy was worthy of one of the leading statesmen of the greatest daughter of the nations. The Times praised the generous patriotism which glows in passage after passage of the speech.

Mr. W. Cousins returned on Wednesday after an extended tour through American cities, including New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Buffalo. He reports a great business revival across the line and everything pointing to a period of development such as even America has seldom known. While he found the trip a thoroughly enjoyable one Mr. Cousins says he has a decided objection to eastern weather. Toronto has gone through a period of 16 below weather during his visit, and from the time that he left Medicine Hat in December unti, his arrival in Winnipeg last week he had not been able to catch a glimpse of the sun. On Saturday Mr. Cousins left with the Inland Empire Excursion party for Los Angeles.

Canada's New Navy

On the re-assembling of parliament on Wednesday last the government fulfilled the promise made before the Xmas vacation to bring in the naval bill on the re-assembling of the house. Despite the illness of Hon. L. P. Brodeur, minister of marine and fisheries, the minister directly concerned, the bill was presented, the task being unertaken by the premier. He announced that the government had decided that Canada's initial navy shall consist of 11 vessels to cost upwards of $11,000,000 dollars instead of seven vessels as semi-officially announced some weeks ago.

Eleven vessels will be made up of four cruisers of Bristol class (armored) one of Boadicea (smaller protected cruiser) class and six destroyers of improved river class. It is explained that the destroyers are not good sea-craft as a rule, and the improved river class is esteemed for their sea going capabilities.

Cost $1,000,000 a year

The annual expenditure for maintenance will be about $ 1,000,000. In expressing the hope that it would be possible to construct the navy in Canada, Sir Wilfrid explained that it would probably cost 85 per cent. more to build ships this side of the Atlantic.

Hon. R. L. Borden in a long speech laid much stress on Germany's prepared efforts to outstrip Britain in naval construction. He declared that Britain's crisis would come within three years and that in view of the circumstances the government's proposals were inadequate. He argued that a joint resolution passed by parliament last session authorized an emergency contribution under such circumstances as exist today. He thought it would be better to turn over to the imperial authorities an amount which it is proposed to spend and then to proceed along careful lines in the construction of a navy. Borden did not favor the idea of an annual contribution.

F. D. Monk vigorously opposed the proposal to build a navy on the ground that Canada was not fit at that moment to build it. He stuck to the views outlined by him in a speech delivered at Lachine shortly before parliament opened, emphasizing in pointed manner his objections to the entire proposal.

The bill was given a first reading.

Positive Guarantee

There will be a demand for years to come for the beautiful picture—"The Soul's Awakening," issued by The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. There will also be many sorely disappointed when very soon they are told that not another copy can be had. It is a wonderfully charming picture. It touches the heart of mankind. If placed in a show-window almost every passer-by will stop at first sight of it, study it and go away feeling better for having seen it. But there is no reason for being without a copy in your own home. The publishers positively guarantee that for some weeks yet they will mail a copy to every person who remits a dollar for a year's subscription to The Family Herald and Weekly Star. Those who have already subscribed are sure of it. Those who have not should do so now and be sure, for they will certainly want a copy if they ever see it.

Debating League

At a meeting held in the office of the Y. M. C. in this city on Thursday evening the Southern Alberta Debating league came into being, and during the remainder of the season a new and interesting feature will be added to the city life.

The idea of forming a league emanated from Medicine Hat and it was as the results of proposals made by M. A. Brown, president of the Y. M. C. in this city, that the meeting was called. Those present were H. Ballantyne, representing the Y. M. C A. and the Y. M. C. of Calgary, J. D. Reilly, representing the Calgary St. Mary's club; D. R. Ware, delegate from the Y. M. C. of Lethbridge, and P. R. Bryenton, representing the Medicine Hat Y. M., C., together with the executive of the latter club. Mr. Brown was elected chairman of the meeting and Mr. Reilly secretary.

A request for membership in the league was received from the Y. M. C. A. of High River. This was accepted and the business of organization proceeded with.

It was decided to form a league to be called the Southern Alberta Debating League, and to consist of the following six clubs:

First section:—Y. M. C. A. of Calgary, Y. M. C. of Lethbridge and Y. M. C. of Medicine Hat.

Second section:—Y. M. C. and St. Mary's Club of Calgary, and Y. M. C. A. of High River.

Officers were elected as follows:
President—M. A. Brown.
Vice-Pres.—H. Ballantyne.
Sec.-Treas.—D. R. Ware.

These gentlemen, together with a representative of each club in the league will form an executive committee. The president and secretary-treasurer were appointed a committee to draft a constitution of which the following articles were agreed upon at Thursday's meeting:

The funds of the league will be pooled, the expense entailed and the proceeds of debates being divided equally among the clubs.

Each team will consist of two debaters, " "

Return debates will be held between, the teams in each division.

Debates will be held every three weeks and the visiting team must announce the subject for debate at least three weeks before the event. The home team will have the choice of sides.

The judges will be chosen by the home team. Sixty per cent will be allowed for argument and forty per cent for style.

The winners in each division will meet at the end of the season to debate for the championship of the league.

The first debate will take place on February 4th, in this city between the Y. M. C. A. of Calgary and the Y. M. C. of Medicine Hat. The subject will be announced later.

NEW AVIATION RECORD

At Los Angeles, Cal., Thursday, Jan. 4, a pink-faced little Frenchman riding on a flimsy frame of wood and metal covered with white silk, mounted nearly a mile above the grounds at the International Mid-Winter Aviation tournament, and before a madly cheering multitude of 40,000 flying machine enthusiasts broke the world's record for altitude, attained in an aeroplane.

It was Louis Paulham, of France. He reached a height of between 4,600 and 5,000 feet. The exact official figures have not yet been made out, as it will take some time to make out the measurement from the records of the various instruments, used in an effort to secure the exact height, but the judges last evening declared that they expected the official figures to show that Paulham, in his Farman bi-plane, rose nearer 5,000 than 4,600 feet from the grounds

FARMERS INSTITUTE MEETINGS

The Department of Agriculture of the province of Alberta has arranged to hold two Farmers' Institute meetings in this city during the month of February. The dates selected are February 4th at 8 p.m., and Feb. 11th at 2 p.m. These meetings will be held in the city hall. It is regrettable that both meetings cannot be held in the afternoon as a much larger number of farmers could avail themselves of the opportunity, but the department has doubtless done the best it could under the circumstances.

If you want a snap in good furniture, almost new; call at 530 Montreal Street. Terms of payment can be arranged.

HEADACHE AND Burdock Blood Bitters.

The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence, and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and if you will only give it a trial we are sure it will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

Headache and Constipation Cured.

Mrs. John Connors, Burlington, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for a long time. After trying different doctors' medicine a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after having taken three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all."

Correspondence

(The Times does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents, nor does it necessarily agree with them.)

Gros Ventre, Alta.

To the Editor of The Times.

Dear Sir,—A few weeks ago there was a communication published in your paper, signed by Farmer, criticizing the Agricultural Society. By failing to answer a fair criticism such as Farmer offered, seems an admission that Farmer was right, or probably they thought "silence was golden, or they may have thought anything signed "Farmer" as beneath their notice. However, they have left us to draw our own conclusions and under the circumstances our conclusions could not be otherwise than against the society. Now, as a grain-grower, I wish to make a kick, and there are many othert willing to help me kick. If the president and directors wish to give us a square deal. I would like to ask them why, for the last two years, has a seed fair been dropped at Medicine Hat, and a stallion show been substituted. Why could we not have bad both? Now this is an assertion of a fact, and an answer is asked to a direct question. A satisfactory answer to this question may remove some of the prejudice felt by the farmers toward the society.

Now, Mr. Editor, there is no use beating about the bush; there is a strong prejudice among the farmers against the society. This should not be so and ignoring our communications and refusing to answer fair questions is a poor way for the society to heal the difference between us. We are willing to do our part in building up a society second to none in the province, but we would ask them to come down a little and quit talking Hoss all the time and talk farm once in a while.

We would like before closing, to ask you another question? Who are the five farmers on the executive of the society, and where do they reside? In your answer to Farmer we admire your ability, but question judgment. Would it not look much better for the society to have answered? Since you were kind enough to publish Farmer's letter, I trust this will receive the same kind consideration on your part. I am not writing this to rake up any ill-feeling but trust it will have the reverse effect. It is the better way to come honestly to the front and state our grievance, and if the society wish to meet us in a friendly way we may become friends and work together for the development and upbuilding of our community. There is room for all of us. Let us all pull together and all boost, and we will soon have the finest locality under the canopy of heaven.

Yours respectfully,
GRAIN GROWER

"Ease for Piles"

"I Used to Suffer but———"

This is the experience of a lady who used to suffer from this terrible ailment, but found a cure. The writer is Mrs. E. Boxall, of 97 Scott St., St. Thomas. She says: "I consider it my duty to write of the benefits derived from using Zam-Buk. For some months I was a constant sufferer from bleeding piles. I used a great many ointments, but got no relief until I tried Zam-Buk. It cured me, and I have had no return of the trouble. Since my cure I have advised several others suffering from piles to use Zam-Buk, and in each instance they have had satisfactory results."

If you suffer from this ailment apply Zam-Buk at night before retiring and you will be satisfied with the trial! A contributory cause of piles is often constipation, and a mild laxative will greatly aid the operation of Zam-Buk. For fistula, inflamed patches, and sores due to blood poisoning, etc., Zam-Buk is equally effective. It is a soothing, cooling balm which stimulates the cells beneath the epidermis and epithelium to natural action. It relieves the tension which in the case of piles causes such acute agony, and in all respects will be found eminently satisfactory.

Zam-Buk is also a cure for eczema, ulcers, cuts, burns, bruises, rashes, chapped hands, frost bite, cold sores, bad leg, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

C. P. R. MAIN LINE TO EDMONTON COMPLETED

The remaining link in the C. P. R. main line between Winnipeg and Edmonton has been completed and it is now possible to travel between these two cities on the road of this company. A circular issued by the company about a week ago calls attention to the inauguration of a service between Wilkie and Hardisty, the two points which the contractors have been rushing to connect up since the fall. A train leaves Wilkie on Monday and Wednesday of each week from Hardisty, and returns from the latter point to Wilkie on Wednesday. During the summer a through passenger service will be inaugurated, putting the C. P. R. on the same footing as the C. N. R. and the G. T. P. as one of the main lines to Edmonton.

The following are the new towns which are served by the Hardisty to Wilkie line: Phippen, Adenac, Swinbourne, Buccleugh, Pentland, Sevlac, Evesham, MacKlin, Haytoe.

Commissioner Coombs Visits City

Splendid Public Meeting Held Held

On Friday last Medicine Hat was honored by a visit from Commissioner Coombs, head of the Salvation Army in Canada. Through preparations had been made by the local officers for a big meeting and they were not disappointed in their anticipations. The Commissioner was met at the depot by a deputation of the officers of the Army, members of the city council, ex-Mayor Cousins and ex-Ald. H. L. Tweed. He was entertained while in the city at the palatial home of Mrs. T. Tweed.

In the evening a full house greeted the visitor in the opera house.

Mayor Milne was to have presided, but owing to an impossibility to fulfil the honored place, Alderman Spencer took the chair. A solo was rendered by Lt.-Col. J. S. Pugmire, of Toronto, after which Alderman Spencer spoke a short time on the Salvation Army. Commissioner Coombs then arose amid hearty applause, spoke of the sympathy the Army had been given and which they needed in their work.

Canada, said the Commissioner, has an area of one third of the British Empire, and eighty per cent. of it, lies west of Lake Superior, it is as large as eighteen Germanies. Canada has a coast line of 13,000 miles, and a population of seven million people. Last year her crops amounted to one hundred million dollars, and of that Saskatchewan grew some seventy-five millions. Canada's greatness will shortly lie in the fields of the glorious West. Ten years ago she had only some four hundred elevators, now she has some eighteen hundred with a capacity of holding one hundred million bushels of grain. Ten years ago one half a car pulled the mail at Christmas time into Winnipeg this year it took eight cars on one train, carrying thousands of letters and packages, saying nothing of the plum puddings from the old land.

Canada is a heritage given to us to develop, and we must be careful to guard against the evils which beset older countries as well as ours. Apartment houses, said Mr. Coombs, are one of the great hindrances to health and progress. He also spoke of the gas here in the Gas City being such an accommodation. A good plain line of living. Mr. Coombs dwelt long upon, insisting that if we would follow the porridge bowl more we would be a healthier people. Gambling and drink evils, the Commissioner also tried to impress upon the audience, as being two of the greatest evils and the Salvation Army were trying to fight them down, but they are fighting sin and not individuals.

The duty of the state and also of the municipalities is to enforce our good laws, and we should be very careful of the people we allow to come into the country.

Work is what makes wealth, said the speaker. Many a man is of no use to his country until he loses his money, then he goes to work. He spoke of his first trip across Canada on one of the first trains from Winnipeg to the coast. We have not enough railroads, we must have more to develop our country.

Commissioner Coombs spoke of the excursions which are being run west and the boys from the east coming out for a trip, but seldom going back to stay. They become fascinated with the west and the old farm at home is worked by father and the hired man. It is a sacrifice, but it is for the nation and it is what is building up the Great West.

Mock Parliament Opens Its Season's Work

Presentation to W. N. Smith

P. R. Bryenton, leader of the government and M. A. Brown of the opposition, Mr. John Benson was elected speaker. Tom Cosens, acted as usher of the Black Rod and announced the arrival of the Governor General (Mayor Milne). His was escorted by a corps of cadets under the direction of Capt. Gordon T. Cunliffe, while Jessop Nott was in attendance on his excellancy. The governor-General read the following speech from the throne:—

The first session of the Mock Parliament opened auspiciously on Friday evening last, with all the pomp and ceremony fitting to the occasion. The hall was elaborately decorated for the occasion and the governor-general had the usual body-guard to escort him to the legislative chamber. Shortly after eight o'clock the members took their seats on either side of the house and on motion of the

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE:
GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS:

In again assembling you after the lapse of another year, it is with feelings of lively satisfaction that I congratulate you on the universal prosperity of the country.

The speedy recovery of business and trade since the recent depression is gratifying indeed.

The year that has just closed has been one in which we have been favored with most bountiful crops, the beneficial influence of which will, we believe, act powerfully to accelerate our present rapid progress. Standing as we do upon the threshold of a new year and under the influence of its bright prospects, we are caused to fore-feel the close advent of yet unexampled development and prosperity, in view of which you will be asked to consider various measures to facilitate this coming expansion.

Two members of my government attended the Imperial Conference called by His Majesty's government on the matter of naval defence. A plan for the organization of a Canadian naval service was unanimously adopted by this conference, and will be duly submitted for your consideration.

Realizing the great need for cheaper cable service between the different parts of the Empire, and the unifying influence such service would exert upon these parts, a resolution will be submitted by my government for the purpose of indicating its willingness to co-operate with the various parts of the Empire in the establishment of such a service.

In view of the potential power and value of the drama as a teacher of sound morals, and as a corrector of social and political iniquities; and in view of the manner in which this power is abused by theatrical companies in the production of low standards of dramas, and in other ways, it has been deemed advisable by my government to submit legislation that will make provision for the establishment, maintenance and operation of national theatres in all cities of this Dominion whose population is four thousand people or over.

Owing to the present congested traffic at the Soo canal, and the consequent expensive delays to the Great Lakes shipping, a bill will be submitted providing for the construction of a second Soo canal.

A bill will be duly laid before you providing for the establishment of a sanitarium at the North Pole. Tuberculosis sufferers will be the principal beneficiaries of this project.

In view of the remarkable advance of aerial navigation during the past year, and its potential importance in the event of war, a sufficient grant of money will be requested by my government to carry on extensive experiments in aerial flight.

A universal wave of prohibition is now moving across the whole American Continent, you will therefore be asked to consider a measure placing some further restrictions upon the liquor traffic of this country.

You will be asked to consider some important labor legislation.

A bill will be submitted providing for the imposition of a penalty on all ladies the circumference and altitude of whose hats are not within certain prescribed limitations. The beneficent effect of which will be the keeping of the vagaries of Parisian dreamers from being translated to the view of the general public, and the eradication of a most prolific source of allurement to the young men of our land.

My government views with the gravest apprehension the militant policy recently adopted by the suffragette leaders of this Dominion, which policy was inspired, it is rumored, by a recent visit of a certain emmisary of the powers of darkness. You will therefore be asked to consider a measure which will provide for the rigorous punishment of any and every woman who attempts any violence upon the person of any of the members of parliament, or who chances to express any unorthodox sentiments regarding her political status at any public meeting.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS:

The accounts of the past year, showing how every dollar of the public was expended, will be laid before you in due time.

It is a matter of congratulation that the revenue has greatly exceeded the expenditure, and that a substantial surplus, after paying all accounts, is the result.

The estimated expenditures for the ensuing year have been carefully compiled, having in view the development of the vast natural resources of our Dominion consistent with the most rigid economy. My government has in contemplation a readjustment of fiscal policy, which will substitute a single tax on land values for the present protective tariff on imports, retaining import duties on luxuries only.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE:
GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS:

I commend to your earnest consideration the measures to be submitted to you, invoking the Divine blessing upon the important labors on which you are again entering.

The address in reply to the speech whereever you may go, and we have from the throne was moved by C. strong faith in your future.
Sansom and J. L. Ingle and discussed by W. N. Smith and A. Patterson. After the business of the house had been concluded an interesting change in the programme was introduced and M. A. Brown, on behalf of the members of the Mock Parliament presented W. N. Smith of The Times, who has been a diligent booster of the Mock Parliament, but who is removing to Edmonton, with an address and a gold locket.

Mr. W. Norman Smith,—

We the members of the Young Men's Club and Mock Parliament learn, with feelings of sincere regret, that you are about to move from our midst to continue your journalistic calling in another field.

While we trust that the place for which you are leaving will afford a wider scope for the exercise of your abilities, yet the Young Mens' Club here, and we severally, will be at a distinctly loss by your departure.

During your stay with us you have made many lasting acquaintances whose best wishes will accompany you into the future.

You have been a constant friend and advocate of our club in the way of keeping it work and object persistently before the community in the paper which you represent, besides in many ways you have put forth ready and effectual efforts in making the club a success, particularly unremitting have you been in your support and work in our Mock Parliament from which place we shall miss you greatly.

We believe you are made up of the elements that will achieve success

As a trifling token of our personal esteem and of our appreciation of your work in our Young Mens' Club, we wish to present you with this locket, which, we ask you to accept in no way as a compensation for your services but merely as an indication of our friendship.

With hearty good wishes for your success;

(Sgd.)—M. A. Brown, S. G. Ranan, J. L. Ingle, C. J. Bristah, Nelson Spencer, A. C. Farrell, Charles Pratt, A. Macdonald, A. Meneely, C. Sansom, A. McCarter, D. Milne, B. F. Souch, A. Patterson, P. R. Bryenton.

Mr. Smith made a suitable reply, and referred to the value the training had been to him.

Mr. C. Sansom was elected representative of the club on the executive of the Southern Alberta Debating league, the formation of which is announced elsewhere in our columns. The choice of debaters for the firse debate was left to the literary committee of the Y. M. C.

OF INTEREST TO SPORTSMEN

Every sportsman in Canada should be interested in the splendidly written and lavishly illustrated article on the Montreal Amateur Athletic association which appears in Outdoor Canada for January. The number has just come to hand and this one article will do a great deal towards the formation of other clubs, with the purpose of encouraging all clean athletics. This article is only one of many which appeal to the outdoor man, as the issue is replete with the writings of men who are authorities in their particular line. The number is particularly well illustrated, and with a very striking cover design, makes one of the very best issues ever published by the Outdoor Canada company.

Mounted Police

On Thursday last Sergeant Harper of the mounted police, arrested W. Dakin of Irvine, on serious charges of immorality. The accused appeared before Inspector Parker on the same day, and at the preliminary hearing on the 14th, was committed for trial at the supreme court on all four charges.

Commissioner Coombes

The brotherhood which exists between the east and the west should be joined not separated from each other, by the rock along the north shore. Here we have some of our nation's greatest wealth in precious metals. The growth which is going to take place in the future in the west is going to command authority, and in a short time it will be an authority of itself. Nations are made by men and the Salvation Army are making men, therefore helping the nation.

At the close of the address a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the Commissioner, the moves being Dr. Smyth, and the seconder ex-Mayor Cousins, and he left on the evening train for points west to deliver addresses to thousands of others, trying to raise the standard of good citizenship.

Timber Limits Again

Mr. Wm. Cousins returned on Wednesday last from a business trip to New York and Philadelphia. He reports a large number of westerners visiting in the east this year, and western Canada's prosperity has made trade brisk in the east. While in Toronto Mr. Cousins met MacAnnable, a former Medicine Hat resident, and J. G. Turriff of timber-limit fame. The latter commenting on Mac's genial laugh expressed his desire to possess such an accomplishment as he could go anywhere on the strength of it. In reply he received the retort that it ought to be purchasable with a timber-limit.

Nasty Hacking Cough. Cured.

Mrs. John Pelch, Windsor, Ontario, writes:—"I was troubled with a nasty hacking cough for the past six months and used a lot of different remedies but they did me no good. At last I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and with the first few doses I found great relief and to-day my hacking cough has entirely disappeared and I am never without Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in the house."

The price of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25 cents per bottle. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, so be sure and accept none of the many substitutes of the original "Norway Pine Syrup."

CARLSTADT

Mr. Earl B. Rose returned to town last week from Calgary where he has been the last few months.

Constable Mauze, of the North West Mounted Police, Medicine Hat, was in town last week.

Mr. Jos. Sanladerer, moved out onto his land on Wednesday of last week. Many others are doing the same, as time calls for it, and new settlers are arriving almost daily.

Mr. Hans Hanson is in Wisconsin, but is expected to return soon.

Mrs. Thos Swanby has returned after several weeks visit in North Dakota, and now has her daughter, Mrs. Myhr, with her, who will also become a resident of Carlstadt.

Capt. H. L. Wanvig was down at Medicine Hat last Friday, also Mr. Chas. England and Mr. C. B. Knudson were there on Monday of last week.

A number of friends from town drove out to Mr. and Mrs. Orton Foughtys' on Monday of last week, by way of a surprise party, and spent a very enjoyable evening with cards and music in their new home, some miles from town. These were: Mr. and Mrs. Jas. H. Foughty, Mr. Mrs. H. C. Wagner returned last Sunday from a week's visit at Medicine Hat.

Mr. H. Morrow, of Medicine Hat, has rented the large new store, owned by Messrs Englands and which when completed will be the finest building in town. Mr. Morrow will open up this grocery business here on February 1st. This will make the third grocery store in town, and they seem to be required as the place is growing rapidly—but why do they not send us a station agent? There is every accommodation awaiting him and he is needed badly.

Mr. Geo. Beattie was in Medicine Hat last Tuesday.

A number of friends visited Mr. and Mrs. F. E. McDiarmid last Wednesday evening, and eojoyed a few hours of cards and social intercourse these were: Mrs. Chas. England, Mrs Elmer England, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Foughty, Mr. W. E. Mills, Mrs. and Miss Hostland, Mr and Mrs. Thomas Swanby, Mr. Thos. Shipley, Mr. H. Hanson.

These surprise parties seem quite the fashion these days, and there is some talk of visiting some of the bachelors in their lonely dens some of these nice evenings so beware.

Mr. Mike Doyle is a lucky man, after digging only 23 feet for water he has obtained at that depth nine feet of the beautiful and very necessary around here. Mr. P. Flannery and Mr. H. W. Wilucikie have also been fortunate in this respect.

Mr. Corley, assistant post office inspector from Calgary, paid his first official visit here last Thursday, for the purpose of Inspecting the local office (which was only opened last August) and giving and needed instructions and information. Mr. Corley congratulated Mr. Cotter, the postmaster, on his ability in connection with his duties, which are manifold, and found his work quite up to date; he was surprised and pleased at Mr. Cotter's general knowledge pertaining to post office work, and particularly to his grasp of the work in connection with the money order department (which has just lately been introduced). Mr. Corley remarked, that in his opinion, this office, in the near future, would assume the proportions of a town office and he has every confidence in its management under Mr. Cotter's supervision.

The dance given in the hall last Friday evening was very well attended. The stormy weather did not prevent the pleasure seekers from venturing out, and the girls out-numbered the men in attendance, which is rather unusual for a western dance but numbers did not count in this case, nor stormy weather mar the enjoyment of the evening, as the majority were there until daylight was appearing.

The meeting held last Saturday evening in the waiting room of the depot, was not as well attended as had been hoped for. The object of this meeting was, as stated last week, for the maintenance of Mr. Fennell, of Brooks, who holds services here every Sunday morning — but the strength of the meeting was in the interest shown by those present. Mr. F. E. McDiarmid was elected chairman, and the committee formed consisted of Mr. Chas. England, Mr. T. H. Harris and Mr. J. H. Gasson, and Mr Elmer England was elected secretary. Mr. Fennell deserves every support and encouragement possible in his mission here this being his first year's work.

Mr. August Salveson left on Monday for Strathmore, Alta., where he will be two or three weeks.

BONNIE BRAE

This has been a fine week here, clear and just cool enough to be bracing and fresh. The trails are even more slippery than ever, owing to a slight thaw and then a freeze on Friday last.

Mr. Roy Fleming has been out to the Forty-mile coulee for a few days locating stray stock.

Mr. Harry Tenbrook has taken charge of T. W. Follis's milk delivery for a few weeks.

Mr. G. Schmeizer intends trying for a big stake this coming season, he contemplates putting under seed no less than six hundred acres with his steam outfit.

Mr. John Evans has been having rather poor health of late, we hope that he will soon be himself again.

A. E. Marshall of Bonnie Brae farm has been spending a few days in town.

Mr. Geo. Reid of the Hat purchased a fat beef at Bonnie Brae farm, on Wednesday last.

Mr. Follis' new well, sunk by Mr. Ginther a few weeks ago, has filled in with sand and is completely useless. They had erected a windmill over it.

It is reported that Mr. Sirr is about to dispose of his dairy business.

Death of Mrs. Jas. Horner

The death occurred on Saturday morning of Mrs. James Horner, wife of Roadmaster Horner of the C. N. R., of Edmonton, after a lingering illness. The deceased, was in her fifty-seventh year. She, with her husband and family, came to Medicine Hat from Lakefield, Ont., in 1885, where they resided until three years ago. In 1905 Mr. and Mrs. Horner removed to Edmonton. The deceased leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her los: James of Wetaskiwin, conductor on the Wetaskiwin branch of the C. P. R.; W. J., liveryman, of Edmonton; Geo. A. of the Empire Supply Co., Edmonton; D. E., freight agent at Vermilion; Mrs. J. Pierce of Edmonton; Mrs. G. T. Jackson of Lacombe; Norman, Preston and Miss Eva at the family home. The funeral took place yesterday from the family residence, 375 Queen's Avenue, at 2 p.m.

Dissolution of Partnership

Yesterday the partnership which has existed for the past three years between Bullivant & Fisher was dissolved by mutual consent. Both members of the firm will continue in business, Mr. Fisher in charge of the Toronto Street stand, and Mr. Bullivant in the recently opened branch on South Railway Street. In our advertising columns Mr. Bullivant announces a clearing sale of all lines at present in stock as he will carry only working men's lines in future. The business will be conducted on a strictly cash basis, and at rock-bottom prices.

Was All Run Down.

Weighed 125 Lbs. Now Weighs 185

Mrs. M. McCann, Debec Junction, N.B., writes:—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

The price of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Long Session of Council

Ald. Forster Again Objects

At a lengthy meeting of the council last evening in the city hall there were present the Mayor, Ald. Spencer, McKay, Adsit, Bridgeman, Forster, Fawcett and Howson.

Communications were read as follows:

1. From Thos. W. Knight calling the attention of the council to a petition for sidewalk on Balmoral, Short and Ross streets. Referred to Public Works committee.

2. From J. J. Mahaffy asking for increase of salary to $700. Finance committee.

3. From R. Highton an employee at pumping house, asking for increase to $75 per month. Ald. Howson stated that the matter had been overlooked when committee on salaries did their work. Ald Forster thought that the report of the committee should stand or be rescinded in total. Finance committee.

4. From D. G. White on behalf of Douglas the Shoeman, in reference to a license fee of $200 being demanded from him. The mayor stated that as an action had already begun in the police court, that the matter be referred to the city solicitor.

A delegation was received from the W. C. T. U. asking for the council's endorsation of the petition to the legislative assembly praying for the granting of a municipal vote for married ladies holding property. Also calling attention to the fact that no action had been taken on the petition for a curfew bell by-law. The delegation was informed that the judgment of the council on these matters will be communicated to them.

The finance committee read the accounts recommended for payment. Ald. Forster objected to the accounts not coming before the council before being recommended for payment. The mayor contended that to adopt Ald. Forster's plan would be going back to village methods.

A petition was received from certain residents on east side of Ottawa Street asking for sidewalk between Fourth and Fifth avenues. Also from residents of the street asking for a sewer. Referred to public works committee.

The license and police committee reported licenses collected to date as $1,133.50.

The health and relief committee reported that Mr. Toth, whose family had been receiving assistance, be notified that the city would furnish him employment, and that no bills be contracted for maintenance after the 10th of February would be paid.

The special committee on legislation reported on various amendments to be made to the city charter. These included clauses referring to remuneration of mayor and council men; appointment of special constables; installing of sewers and water mains early closing bylaw; franchise to the married ladies holding property; method of collecting poll-tax. Report adopted.

Alderman Howson presented the report of the Public Works committee:

Maintenance—
Repairs to streets (last year $3752)	$2,000
Crossings	100
Sidewalks	100
Culverts (last year $1151.50)	500
Street cleaning	1,000
Weeding	500
Stable expenses	85
Repairs to city hall (including janitor's salary)	900
Sewer maintenance	250
Repairs to tools	175
Salaries	625
Watering streets (including two new sprinklers)	1,500

It is proposed to buy a horse and rig for the use of the public works and water department.

Alderman Howson also reported that the roof of the city hall requires repairs. At present it is difficult to estimate on this, but he advised that the work be undertaken and supplementary estimates presented later.

It was moved by Alderman Howson and seconded by Alderman Fawcett that the report be adopted.

Alderman Forster objected, and said it was the first intimation he had had of this report. He proposed that the report be laid on the table and be discussed later. He was quite in the dark over the whole business. It appeared from the report that chairmen of various committees had met, but he might say that as far as he was concerned he had not been invited to that meeting.

The mayor stated that it greatly facilitated matters for the chairmen of the various committees interested in the expenditure on public works to discuss the various estimates for the year. It was a great improvement on the old village council days when every little detail was discussed by the council as a whole, very often until two or three o'clock in the morning. The committees interested now reported to the council and were responsible for the expenditure.

Alderman Forster said that as he remarked at the first meeting of the council, he had been relegated into the back ground and was quite in the dark as to what was going on. He had not been put on any one important committee, in fact he would say that the arrangement of the committees as at present aranged was an insult to himself. As far as he was concerned, he might as well not be on the council at all. He might say, however, that before the close of the council he intended to move that he be placed on one of the important committees.

The mayor said that as Ald. Forster had given notice of that motion he would defer his remarks until the motion was before the council.

J. W. Hamilton, on behalf of Industrial Realty Ltd., addressed the council recounting the various stages in the agreement between the city and the company, in reference to the building of a spur track to Industrial Place. He contended that the company suffered by the city not fulfilling its obligation. He wanted to know what the city intended to do about it.

Ald. Forster thought that as the city is bound by contract to build the line, it should proceed to secure the necessary legislation and carry out its obligations. He moved that the city solicitor draft the necessary clauses and make the application to the Legislative Assembly.

Alderman Howson thought it was fortunate that the city had no such authority and that the council of that time was not acting in the best interests of the city in making such an agreement.

The consensus of opinion of the council seemed to be that the wisdom of it was not now being considered but rather whether the city should live up to its obligations.

Motion carried.

Mr. O. Sansom then addressed the council on the question of a Carnegie library for the city. He said that on the 6th of December last, at a meeting of the council, the question of establishing a Carnegie library in Medicine Hat came before the council and he was authorized to write and ask Mr. Carnegie for information with regard to the conditions of his donations to the various Carnegie libraries. He had done this and had also received information from other sources. He would like to submit these communications to the council for their consideration. He considered that the establishment of a library would be of great benefit to the city. There was none in the city at the present time. He was aware that the Y. M. C. A. has strong claims on the council but he was of the opinion that the establishment of a Carnegie library is the most feasible at the present time. He would consider it an honor if he could be of any assistance in furthering the scheme. Mr. Sansom then laid the correspondence before the council.

It was moved by Alderman Spencer and seconded by Alderman Adsit, and carried, that the mayor should appoint a committee.

The mayor then appointed Aldermen Forster and Adsit and Mr. Sansom.

A bylaw was introduced to amend bylaw No 168 referring to the licensing of teams drawing produce through the city for shipment. The bylaw was put through the various stages.

The council then resolved itself into a commitee of the whole, and reported as follows:

That the lifetime of sewers debentures be 40 years.

That lifetime of cement sidewalks be 20 years.

That the lifetime of plank sidewalk debentures be 5 years.

That the probable cost of $32,693.75, in regard to sewers, as estimated in report be passed.

That the probable cost of $22,741.00, in regard to cement sidewalks be past.

That the probable cost of $5,354, in regard to plank sidewalks, be passed.

Alderman Forster then moved that the finance committee be increased to five members and that Alderman Adsit and himself be added to that committee. He said that every member of the council knew his opinion on the matter. He felt as he had said before that he had been left out in the cold. He wished to be on one of the important committees, and was quite willing to do his share in the work of that committee. He cast no reflection on the present members of the finance committee but several important things had cropped up that evening of which he had been quite in the dark. For instance the $500 estimate for weeds. In his opinion that amount was quite inadequate. The committees of which he was a member were unimportant committees. He asked for the privilege of taking part in the higher work of the council, of which he felt he was left out. It was not only his own opinion but the opinion of the leading ratepayers. For that reason he moved his resolution. Alderman Adsit seconded the motion. He said he felt too that he had been left out.

Alderman Howson said he considered three men could run a committee as well as half a dozen. It was the way that they were run last year Alderman Spencer who was the chairman of the finance committee went through all the accounts most carefully.

Alderman Spencer considered that the way the committees were run as at present were most satisfactory. He could see no reason for extending the number of members.

The mayor said Alderman Foster was a members of three of the most important committees, and apparently he did not think it worth his while to attend to the business of the health and relief committee. The isolation hospital work needed more attention than it received at present. He considered the motion in very bad taste. He left Ald. Forster off the finance committee in regard to his feelings, as the company in which Ald. Forster was interested had dealings with the council. He could not see that anything would be gained by additional members.

Alderman Forster said he had anticipated such a reply from the mayor. He had cast no reflection all he had asked for was a chance. He had been told on good authority, before the committees were selected, that it was arranged that he should be kept out.

The motion was then put to the council and lost.

For the motion—Aldermen Forster, Bridgeman and Adsit.

Against—Aldermen McKay, Spencer Fawcett and Howson.

Hockey Match Friday

On Friday next the Calgary Tigers will play the Medicine Hat High School Hockey team in the home rink, provided the ice is in proper shape. The game is called for 7.30 sharp, and the spectators are asked to be on time and give the necessary encouragement to our representatives This will likely be the only match of the season and it is hoped that a good gate will be forthcoming as the boys have been put to heavy expense in bringing the Tigers down here. A good game is assurred, as the smaller rink is bound to handicap the Calgary boys who had the advaneage in the big rink in their own town.

It is the intention of the management to put up a temporary 4-foot fence all along the south side of the building and this will be capable of accommodating about five hundred spectators, so get there and root for the Hat.

Tickets will be on sale at 25 cents apiece and this will include skating after the game for any that wish to do so. It is pretty near up to one and all to purchase a ticket, at this price, whether they have other engagements or not and any who escape the appointed canvassers will have to do some pretty lively dodging.

Some slight changes have had to be made in the High School line-up owing to the unavoidable absence of one or two. The line-up as decided upon, at time of going to press is as follows:

Goal— Jack Fallows.
Point—Norman Porter.
Cover—Milton Cory.
Rover—Roy Wilson.
Centre—Jack Barreau.

The team that will represent the Tigers is not yet decided upon. One or two of the boys that played in Calgary are unable to get away but we are glad to be able to announce that Leo Dowd will be able to come down and captain the Tigers.

Don't forget, Friday night at 7.30 sharp.

F. C. Manning a director of the Revelstoke Sawmill Co spent Saturday to Monday in the city. He is touring the country with a view to establishing new branches.

SUDDEN DEATH

Mr. Patrick Flannigan, well known round town in barbering circles, died very suddenly at Bassano last Saturday evening where he had recently gone to work for Mr. Wheatley. Mr Flannigan was well-known in Medicine Hat and previous to his going to Bassano worked for Mr. Mathieson. The deceased came to this city from Davidson, Sask., and belonged to London, Ont., to which city his remains are being shipped. The Barbers' Union is looking after the funeral arrangements.

Add to the Value of Your Estate by Building up Home Industry

THE PRINCIPAL

A noted American was once discussing with some political friends the advisability of purchasing home-made goods in preference to those made abroad. This is how he put it: "If we but a ton of pig iron from Britain, we have the pig iron and Britain has the money; but, if we make the pig iron for ourselves, we have the pig iron and money too."

When you come to think it over, it seems sensible doesnt it? In the one case you send money out of the country to help work a foreign mine and to give employment to foreign labor; in the other case, you keep your money in the country where it is used in the development of a home mine and in swelling the payroll of a home industry.

PRACTICAL APPLICATION

The distant city which gets your money doesn't spend one cent in your home town, nor do they assist in building up industries which will provide work for those who wish to work, and a market for produce; neither do they add one cent to the value of your real estate.

The Medicine Hat workmen on the other hand, who spends his money in the city or district is a source of wealth. If he is thrown out of work business will be affected; if he has steady employment business will expand and grow, and values will increase.

Now, coming to the point, what about your trade? Are you sending out of town for your goods which could be bought just as cheaply in Medicine Hat? If so you are working against your own interests, that is all.

Now, you're shrewd enough to see the point of all this talk. Always be loyal to home industries, and particularly so when it's bad business to be otherwise. Don't forget the old motto "Keep your money in circulation at home by buying goods in Medicine Hat."

Messrs W. B. and F. J. Marshall, have gone on a business trip to Lethbridge and Calgary.

Doc. Cameron has gone to McLeod in search of life (or lives).

First Blood To Medicine Hat

The inauguration of the Southern Alberta Debating league took place at the Young Men's club on Friday evening last, when the representatives of the Calgary Y. M. C. A. came to give battle to Medicine Hat in the opening debate of the season.

There was a good attendance and all those present thoroughly enjoyed the discussion, which was of a very high character.

Alderman Huckvale was in the chair, the judges being Messrs. C. J. Wilson, J. Benson and J. J. Mahaffy.

The chairman in opening the proceedings said it afforded him great pleasure at this, the first meeting of the league, and extended to our Calgary friends a hearty welcome.

The league he stated consisted of three Calgary clubs, one from High River, one from Lethbridge and one from Medicine Hat. It was divided into two divisions of three clubs each, and the winners of each division were to meet for the championship at the end of the season. The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. M. C. were doing splendid work for the youth of this country in moral, physical, and intelectual training. Many great orators of this world had started their careers by being members of debating clubs including Gladstone and Chamberlain. The visiting team, having the right to name the subject of the debate had chosen the following:

"Resolved that there will be greater population west of the Great Lakes than east in 1960."

The home team having the option of choosing the affirmative or negative had chosen the affirmative.

The leaders of each side would be allowed 25 minutes each and the speakers 20 minutes each after which the leader of the affirmatice would be given five minutes to reply.

Mr. M. J. Brown (Medicine Hat) commenced the debate by saying that at present Canada's estimated area was three and a half million square miles of which the West claimed two and a quarter millions and the East one and a quarter millions, and while the present population averaged [illegible] people to the square mile. He proposed to deal with the natural resources of the Dominion as a basis of his argument. It was estimated that the West had four times the amount of timber that the East had, and that British Columbia can produce more timber in the next 40 years than the whole American continent. While most of the timber in the East had been cut, the bulk of that in the West remains uncut, and that is one reason why the future immigrant would be attracted by western Canada. There is no comparison between the timber resources in the East to that in the west.

The same argument applies to the fisheries of the west; how many people would be attracted by the undeveloped fisheries of the west instead of those in the east which are already greatly developed. Then there is the mineral wealth. In 1907 the total output of minerals was 87 million dollars, of which British Columbia claimed 26 millions or nearly one third.

(Owing to the high educational value of this debate rather than abbreviate it we hold part of it till next week.—Editor)

A BORN ORATOR

(Saturday News)

We are told that Alberta lacks orators. There are several exceptions, which come readily to the mind, but it is quite true that, speaking generally, our public gatherings show a very noteworthy absence of first-class speakers. Of course, what appeals to one man as oratory is downright nonsense to others. The Buckner style has many imitators on the other side of the line, and not a few on this. As is well-known, it originated in Kentucky on the streets of the capital city of which state it was once given a picturesque definition.

It is narrated that Cunnel Brekenridge, meeting Majah Bufo'd as he went up town in Lexington one day, asked: "What is the meaning, suh, of the conco'se befo' the c'thouse?" To which the Majah replied: "Gen. Buckneh, suh, is making a speech. Gen. Buckneh, suh, is a bo'n oratah." "What do you mean by a bo'n oratah?" "If yo' or, I, ush, were asked how much two and two make we would reply 'fo'.' When this is asked a bo'n oratah he replies: — 'When in the co'se of human events it becomes necessa'y to take an integeh of the second denomination and add it, suh, to an integeh of the same denomination the result, suh, if I have the science of mathematics to back me in my judgment, the result is, suh, and I say it without feah of successful contradiction, suh, the result is foh.' That's a bo'n oratah."

The Union Bank of Canada has opened a branch at Carlstadt. D. E. Patterson is in charge, and will be conduct it as a sub-agency from here.

L. W. McBean has purchased a white Wyandotte cock and hen from H. A Ross of Guelph, Ont. Mr. McBean will have a number of pure bred birds on exhibition at the poultry show next week.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. John Fossler, Newburg, when his youngest daughter, Martha, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. Sulz of Irvine. The bride, who was prettily attired in white Swiss and Valenciennes insertion, leaning upon the arm of her brother entered the room in which the many guests were assembled and where the Rev. [illegible] Daum pronounced the solemn words which made the young couple man and wife. The bride, who was very popular among her friends in Medicine Hat, is followed by their many good wishes for a prosperous and happy future.

The title of this dialogue might be "Why Papa Believes in Corporal Punishment."

"Papa?"

"Well?"

"Is there a Christin flea?"

"Why, what on earth ever put that into your head?"

"The preacher read it today from the Bible—"The wicked flee when no man pursueth."'

"Why, Tommy, that means that the wicked men flee'—

"Then, Papa, is there a wicked woman flea?"

"No, no. It means that the wicked flees, runs away."

"Why do they run?"

"Who?"

"The wicked fleas."

"No, no! Don't you see? The wicked man runs away when no man is after him."

"Is there a woman after him?"

"Tommy, go to bed! . . ."

DONATION TO THE Y. M. C.

The library of the Y. M. C. will soon be augmented by a gift of 200 volumes from the every Man's library series, which is being donated by one of the large mail order houses of Canada. The library is very extensive and the selection of books is left entirely to the club itself, so that the best works in the series can be selected. A committee has been appointed to make the selection, and the members will soon enjoy the advantage of a large addition to the present library.

More Pure Bred Stock Arrives

W. S. Curry Back from Old Scotland With a Valuable Bunch

Mr. W. S. Currie, one of the best-known horsemen and one of the old-timers of the district, arrived on Thursday last from Scotland. He sailed from the Old Land on the 15th ult., and brought with him twenty-four head of registered horses nine of which are Clydes and fifteen Shetland ponies. The crossing took eleven days four of which were extremely rough and proved trying to the animals. During the whole of the trip Capt. McNeil of the Athenia showed himself to be something more than a thorough seaman and by his kindness and thoughtfulness to the men shipping stock to Canada earned their thanks and appreciation. Mr Henry Aitken who was returning to Canada, assisted Mr. Currie with the shipment. It was intensely cold at St. John and both men and horses were glad to arrive at their destination.

Mr. Currie drew our attention to a peculiar circumstance and one which seemed to us to say the least of it, unfair; at St. John he was called upon to pay four dollars duty upon horse blankets which, as is well-known to purchasers, are always included, together with halters and halter-shanks when horses are purchased in Scotland. It is pretty near time that the government looked into these minor details and it is up to them to do what they can to make the path of the stock importer easy instead of annoying him with stupid little custom duties of this description.

The fifteen certificates of registration belonging to the Shetland ponies are at present in the hands of the secretary of the Nantional Live Stock Records, Ottawa. The Shetland Island Stud Book is not at present recognized in Canada but the secretary, in a letter, which Mr. Currie kindly showed us, stated that he would see what could be done in the matter of Canadian registration for the ponies.

Of the nine Clydes much, in praise, might be said, did space permit. In The Scottish Farmer, printed in Glasgow on January 22nd, the pedigrees of all are given and many of the sires and dams are household names in the homes of most of the horse ranchers of this district.

Of the Clydes two were three-year-olds, one of them being by the Glasgow prize horse and Brydon Shield winner Perpetual Motion, while his dam was by the unbeaten two year old horse Lord Dundonald, which was exported to Australia. The other three two-year-old horses were got by the successful breeding horse Montrave Ronald, the sire of the champion mare Veronique. A promising three-year-old horse is got by the Glasgow champion horse Royal Chattan out of a mare by the unbeaten champion Prince of Carruchan. One of the Montrave Ronald horses is out of a mare by the Glasgow premium horse Royal Carrick which was also second at the Highland, (which show is to Scotland what the Dominion Fair is to us, the event of the year.) Another is out of a mare by the great big horse Crusader, while a third is out of a mare by the celebrated Royal Favorite, and his grand-dam was by the $15,000 Prince of Albion. A two-year-old colt is by the Glasgow premium horse Carbrook. Two yearlings are got respectively by Camilla's Favorite, a son of Royal Favorite and the champion mare Camilla, while the other is by Bute Baron out of a mare by the famous Montrave Ronald.

From the foregoing can be gathered the class of horses Mr. Currie has brought into our midst and it would seem that our motto has been in this instance carried out, as we should always like to see it carried out—"The Best for the West."

Irish Has an Accident

On Saturday afternoon a gentleman from Calgary, well-known in these parts, was driving Jim Johnston's black stallion, commonly known as Irish. Irish who is a general favorite with young men who wish to take young ladies for a drive is one of the best looking and most valuable horses in the city. He accidently upset the sleigh and deposited the young lady and gentleman on the ice. Irish left the folks and the sleigh just about where the accident occurred and bit off up the river and was seen, a little before dusk, passing the Ansley coal mine, five miles up, still going strong, and it was feared that he would end up in the rapids a few miles further on. But old Irish knows as much about air holes and rapids as the majority of the people that have the pleasure of driving him. He turned off three miles past the coal mines and sought for himself a night's lodging at a settler's homestead from which place he was brought back to the Hat on Sunday and it was found, much to the surprise of many, that he was little the worse for his escapade. The sleigh and harness were slightly damaged but the occupants got off without any serious injuries which, considering the nature of the accident, was very lucky—for him.

Fireworks

On Saturday afternoon Barney, of the B. F. Souch Drug Co., lost track of his dates (it was the 5th all right, but the wrong one) and started a celebration which might have been expensive. He was roaming around in the basement of the store with a gas-lighter and lit a bunch of rockets. The rockets responded nobly and Barney saw stars of many colors. The rockets struck the furnace and so what might have been a serious fire ended in practically no loss, the hardest part of the whole programme being to "Blow the Smoke Away."

The Budget Debate and Other Debates

C. A. Magrath Speaks

The budget debate, Mr. Speaker, is a wonderful institution. It allows the crudite scholar to exhibit his knowledge of the dead languages, and to others it gives the opportunity to expose their dense ignorance as to the conditions of this country. It appears to me that it is largely used by hon. gentlemen opposite to vie with one another in lavishing praises on the present administration; and I have no doubt that they have succeded in impressing on our cabinet ministers the conviction that to their administration is due every advantage which the country now enjoys. To their wisdom is due everything from the copious rains that have blessed our soil as well as the withholding from the supposedly free citizens of Ottawa their rights and privileges in this House. Judging by this debate we have to wander abroad in order to learn some things of our own country. I have lived in the west a considerable number of years and thought I knew something about it, but this debate has revealed some wonderful things about it. We have heard a great deal about the railway development in that country, and I would like to give the House some experience respecting the constituency I represent, a constituency consisting of 16,000,000 acres of land or something over 25,000 square miles. When the Conservative party went out of power in 1896, there were 350 miles of railway in operation in that constituency. Since then there has been added, during all these years of peace and plenty, some 80 or 90 miles of railway to the mileage then in operation. We all know that the railway department receives statements from the railway corporations on the 30th of June each year, giving their mileage. I have not the figures before me, but I know that the statements made to the railway department on the 30th of June, 1908 and 1909, in so far as Alberta is concerned, do not show the increase of one mile of railway, while in the province of Saskatchewan some 500 or 600 miles were added during 1909. We all know that railways are being built in Alberta as well as Saskatchewan; I merely mention these figures to show the preponderance of railway construction in Saskatchewan over that of Alberta.

Now, I had not the slightest intention of taking part in this debate, nor would I do so now were it not that the Minister of Finance, in his budget speech, made certain references to the postal revenues with which I cannot agree. And I feel that I would not be doing my duty to the people who sent me here if I allowed the views thus expressed to go unchallenged. There was evident pleasure in the announcement of that hon gentleman that the policy of his government—a policy which undertakes to make money out of the Post Office—had yielded him such a handsome profit. Last session, when he was engaged in a similar task, I very well remember—if I may so put it—his gleeful reference to the splendid surplus from that department. The late administration has been criticised in this House and in the country because it conducted the post office department with a deficit. I am not so sure that we should criticise that government for such a policy. I hold the opinion that an intelligent government, in upbuilding a young country, should not attempt to turn shekels from the Post Office into the treasury. We might as well turn our militia service into a money-making establishment. I assume we are an intelligent people. I presume the minister of the interior is endeavoring to get intelligent people to come into this country with whom we will share our citizenship. And I believe that one of the requisites of an intelligent people is an up to date mail service, in other words I believe that the intelligence of the country, to a large extent, is measured by the character of its mail service. We invite people to come here and settle upon our undeveloped areas, and turn over the sod. They are the men who are making Canada We ask them to take their families away from older settled sections in other countries, to deprive them of the privileges and comforts that they enjoy there and to go out pioneering for us, in short, to turn their backs upon civilization and to go forty and fifty miles away from railway facilities. And when they ask us to give them a new post office or more frequent service than a weekly one, I say we are not justified in sometimes returning the answer that the service will not warrant the expenditure—in other words, that the service must be self-supporting. In support of that statement, I wish to read an extract from a letter recently received from the post office department.

"The offers received for the performance of the mail service to the proposed office, moreover were so high as compared with the probable revenue of the office as to render it impossible for the department to consider the establishment of a post office at this point at present."

I do not think it necessary to refer to other communications, but merely read that one in justification of the statement I made. Besides, we are specifically taxing the periodicals which follow our settlers from the United States into our country. I have before me an account rendered against myself by the "Literary Digest," published in the city of New York, the annual subscription to which is $3. That figure will deliver it in England or Alaska or anywhere in the United States. But the first item that I see on this account is "Canadian postage, 85 cents"—or 28 percent of the price that will deliver it ten times further than Canada. And this has to be borne by the subscribers in this country on account of the regulations of our post office. If hon. gentlemen opposite wish to throw up their hats because of the results of the Post Office service, we have excellent opportunity to see how they are obtained, and for my part I do not believe in such a system. The United States does not assume to tax the papers which follow our people who settle in their country—and I wish to announce that there are a few people going out of this country as well as coming in. The United States does not attempt to turn its post office service into a money-making establishment, and I do not think we should attempt it either. I am very sorry that the post-master general (Mr. Lemieux) is not in his seat. I told him this afternoon that I wished to make reference to some matters in his department. I believe that the officials of his department are doing all in their power to serve the public; I have no complaints to make against the officials. Nor have I any complaint to make against the Postmaster General but wish to acknowledge the courtesy he extends to me from his seat in the house. But when it comes to another feature of his administration, the political end of it, I am determinedly opposed to the system. I believe that in a free country like this, our post office department should be organized free of political managers. I believe that local pooh-bahs should not be appointed as dispensers of post-offices. If the people elect a representative to this House and select wise,y but not well according to hon. gentlemen opposite, then there is a gentleman in the west selected as a pooh-bah, as purveyors of post offices. I have evidence of this—any quantity of it. And I say that this is wrong. It is immaterial to me what government adopts that policy I say that the sooner it is changed the better it will be for a young country like Canada. I would like to see the postmaster general place more post office inspectors at work in the west. And when a petition for a post office is handed in, if the inspector, on looking over the ground, states that a post office should be established and that John Smith would be a good man to appoint as postmaster, that should settle the matter clear of politicians. That is what the country wants. I received letters from the postmaster general last session in which he informed me that he had done certain things and added a paragraph to the effect that he had done so at the request of a gentleman in the constituency whom he evidently constituted a dispenser of post offices. I do not object to anyone assisting is securing a post office it is a matter of indifference to me who helps to get it or by whom it is secured so long as it is secured. I wonder if the post master general has the idea that unless he puts such a paragraph in his letters, I will go into my consituency and say to the people, "I have got the Widow Jones this post office at the munificent sum of $10 a year?" so that they will think that I am a wonderful individual, or that I will try to impress the man who is keeping a stopping place at which the mail service passes once a week that I am a wonderful individual because I have succeeded in getting a service twice a week, whereby he is able to sell double the amount of oats for the mail driver's horses, which gives him that additional profit. If that is the conception of the postmaster general as to the duties of a public man in this country, I may say that I do not see eye to eye with him.

There is another matter to which I would like to refer briefly. We are frequently told that Canada is a great country. Unquestionably she is possessed of great natural resources, of vast virgin wealth. But if she is going to be great, she is already on the highroad towards great and grave crises. We need not attempt to overlook that, because the fact is evident. Great internal questions will arise, and none more important perhaps than the conservation of our natural resources for the people, so that predatory wealch may not get looss among our natural resources, as it unfortunately has done to a considerable extent in the United States. Then we will have great issues to settle with our neighbors, and with other countries. Let me take the case of a great industry which employs to look after its interests a prominent legal firm, which knows the business of that corporation from the ground up. Now, if that firm should have some legal controversy with another firm, its solicitors will be able to look after its interests properly. Now to what extent are we moving in that direction? Very slowly, so far as I can see. It is a great pleasure to me to visit the campus of some of our universities and see the young men they are turning out. It is a refreshing sight to see the photographs of the faculties of our different universities. They are loaded with intelligence. The young men who pass out of the universities are absorbed, largely into our commercial and professional life, while many of them leave the country. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would be delighted to see this government make some arrangement with te presidents of our universities for throwing a mesh around the graduating classes in say arts and engineering, and what the sieve held back to throw some of them into our Archives, and keep them there for a few years under proper direction, investigating old treaties, etc. Sir, if we should do that it would return us our expenditure ten times, nay, a hundred times, more than such a service would cost us. Let us start in this country an engineering branch, an engineering board, as other countries have done. These men will be of great utility to the nation when important questions come up in this country for consideration. If we could breed such an investigating force into the life of this country, it would mean much for Canada—that is, if we [illegible] to be a great people, of [illegible] we are not going to be a great people, it is unnecessary to look into the future. But I believe we should do it, and if we do, my opinion is there will in the future be less opportunity to make the charge that Britain has surrendered our

I could not eat, was pale and thin; every one thought I was going into consumption. I tried everything and different doctors until a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have one bottle used when my appetite began to improve. I used six bottles. I gained ten pounds in two weeks. When I began to take it I only weighed ninety-three pounds. Sunday Closing of Post Offices

The order issued recently by the post-master general that the lobbies of the post offices shall be closed on the Lord's Day is not being received with favor in every quarter. This is not unexpected for the man who carries the secular spirit on the Sabbath Day wants his attention taken up with secular themes and feels the needs of his newspaper etc. If the order meant no more than appears on the face of it, it is questionable if the change would be of much service. But there is considerable back of it. It means a release from compulsory service of the great army of post office employees who heretofore have been compelled to labor a considerable portion of Sunday.

In the local post-office some of the employees have been giving about a half-day's service each Sunday. Henceforth the outgoing mails only need be sorted. Just how large a task this shall be depends upon the citizens. In any case the task is not a laborious one.

The order means a release for more than post office employees. In a letter written to C. A. Magrath by the Deputy Postmaster General he states an abuse which the new order seeks to remedy. The letter reads as follows:—

Dear Mr. Magrath:

Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your letter in reference to closing [illegible] n Sunday, as I infer [illegible] question to which [illegible] other way is the Sunday mail service being curtailed. I may say that the department has not given a decision in the matter, although it is under consideration. I may also say that all the larger offices throughout Canada, except in the West are closed on Sunday, and representations have been made to the department, by the Lord's Day Alliance, to have the offices in the West closed so as to observe the Sunday law.

Representations have also been made to the department that if the lobbies of the post offices are kept open to box holders it leads to the stenographers and others, who should have a day of rest, being compelled to work. If you could find it convenient to call at the department I would be pleased to discuss the matter with you.

I might add that so far at I am personally concerned I am of the opinion that no man should be asked to work on Sunday, unless there is necessity for it, and that it is both in the interests of the individual and the nation that this should be so. I would be glad if you could run in and discuss the question with me.

Yours sincerely,
R. W. Coulter,
Deputy Postmaster General

Doubtless Mr. Coulter knows what he is talking about when he says that many business men have compelled their clerks and stenographers to work answering correspondence on Sunday. The Sunday mails have been a stimulus to this oppression. The spirit of the Lord's Day Act is that no employee shall be compelled to labor seven days in the week. Enquiry at the local post-office elicited the information that some work of this nature is being carried on in Medicine Hat i.e. business correspondence is being attended to on Sunday. There is no suspicion however, that employers compel clerks to work in order that this shall be done. But it is done elsewhere, and we must look at this question from a larger view point than the purely local. Any legislation which releases employees from the bondage of a seven days' service is in the best interests of the nation and ought to be supported.

There is no question but that the distribution of Sunday mail has led to a large extent to the secularization of the Lord's Day. If the new order minimizes this to a great extent it will be doing a real service. In any case the post office department has relieved itself of the responsibility for any such desecration of the day of rest.

As the time for the opening of the Provincial legislature draws near it is becoming more apparent that Medicine Hat constituency is to be without representation in this session of the house. It never had any representation save a nominal one, but now it hasn't even that. The local Liberal committee have a responsibility to the constituency in that respect which they should not shirk, however unpleasant the task may be. Let the constituency be opened up.

Calgary is now endeavoring to place its waterworks system on a paying basis. This is what Medicine Hat did a year ago. There are other respects in which Calgary could afford to take a leaf from this city's municipal history.

When will that Grassy Lake Outlaw put us on its exchange list? We don't like to miss the uplifting influence of such a great religious journal—one so lofty in tone that it has been called "the War-Cry."

Press Comment.

ROOT OUT THE GAMBLING EVIL

(Toronto Globe)

Members of parliament should listen to no proposals to compromise on the question of race-track gambling. Such proposals are being made. Newspapermen hear them in the hotels at Ottawa and about the corridors and committee rooms of parliament. Skillful lobbyists are making the suggestions quietly. The proposals is that bookmaking on the streets and in shops be prohibited, but that it be allowed and legalized on the racetracks. That proposal is presented to members, according to their supposed attitude, as being a "reasonable compromise."

Surely in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird. No member of parliament who can distinguish his right hand from his left in matters of public morality will be deceived by this show of "reasonable compromise" on behalf of a serious public evil. The fact is that the gamblers and their friends are fearful because of the aroused and determined public opinion against this vice. They are convinced that action will be taken by parliament this session. They know the government views Mr. Miller's bill sympathetically. They have the gambling features of the race meets condemned by racing men. They are beginning to hear the farmers mock at the pretext that horse-racing is necessary for the farmer in their horse-breeding industry. And the friends of race-track gambling are eager to sacrifice a few of the outposts if by so doing they can save the citadel.

But it would not be a "reasonable compromise" were the lesser growths and berries on the outmost branches plucked off the upas tree and the main trunk left vigorous and even more fruitful because of this judicious pruning. That would not be a "reasonable compromise." It would be surrender.

Canada has had enough of such "reasonable compromise." The law as it now stands is sufficient experience of that sort. Parliament and the people thought the law meant what it seemed to say when it was last amended. Legal cleverness from Toronto, it is said, drew that amendment in the interests of Woodbine. It seemed satisfactory, but it was discovered to allow the very thing the people of Canada want to prevent. Let there be no more such "compromises."

Racetrack gambling is growing rapidly in Canada. The statistics of the racing associations indicate something of its growth. But its reach is beyond calculation.

It extends over the whole of the year. It is an evil growth. Only one thing should be done with it. It should be pulled up root and branch. To do that is the privilege of parliament. The people of the country expect their representatives to do their duty.

Edmonton, Feb. 2—The Alberta Temperance and Moral Reform League presented the following recommendation to the Alberta government last week: "That the annual convention petition the Alberta government for a local option law which will give the right of any municipality to outlaw the traffic in intoxicating liquors on the majority vote of the resident electors who vote on such questions; the abrogation of the $100 deposit in connection therewith and the taking of this vote at the time of the municipal elections; such amendment to the liquor license ordinance as will more adequately protect a local option district or any other place where there is no liquor license in the way of restricting the amount of liquor that can be shipped into such places; amendments to the liquor license ordinance making the minimum fine for illicit sale of liquor $200 instead of $50 and imprisonment without option of a fine for second conviction; the closing of bars and liquor shops on Christmas day, Good Friday and Thanksgiving Day; that the licensed bar be separated entirely from the hotel or place of accommodation; an amendment to the liquor license ordinance that will prohibit license holders or any one directly interested in the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in any wise holding positions on municipal councils of the province; the prohibiting of pool tables and other forms of amusement on the the premises where there is a licensed bar-room."

The following officers were elected:

President—Rev. F. W. Patterson, Edmonton.

Vice-President—G. A. Barker, Granum.

Executive—Rev. J. M. Harrison, Macleod; W. J. Brotherton, Medicine Hat, Rev. A. W. R. Whiteman, Cardston.

Latest Celestial Wonder

The new comet discovered last week in western Canada, in England and in South Africa, close to the sun, in the evening and morning sky and now visible from the northern hemisphere and emerging from the solar rays in the evening sky, is one of those strange interlopers from space whose coming astonishes the astronomers as much as anybody else, says Garett P. Serviss, the well-known writer and lecturer on astronomy.

"Moreover," continued the scientist, it is evidently a comet of the first magnitude, and of appalling brightness, since it has been seen at the Lick observatory in full daylight, something that has happened but very rarely in the history of comets.

"Already its spectrum has been photographed, and it shows that the comet is shining both by reflected sunlight and by the blaze of its own intense heat.

"The indications are that we shall have a very unusual spectacle, which if present indications are fulfilled, may be as memorial as anything in cometary records.

"It is all the more remarkable that this great stranger should gave made its appearance at the time when Halley's comet is nearing the sun and preparing for its perihelion swing.

"But the two comets are pursuing entirely different paths, and the new one is likely to be a far grander object than its well-known rival. Not enough is yet known of its orbit to enable us to say just what its future course will be, but its promise is so brilliant that the most surprising things may confidently be expected of it.

"It is an interesting fact that it it is possible for so great a comet to come to perihelion without previous detection, stealing in like a thief. Before it became visible, just before sunrise at Johannesburg, it must 7 Times have been coming up almost behind the sun, as viewed from earth. Then it passed the sun, and began to emerge in the evening sky.

"It remains to be seen whether it is like its predecessor of 1882, a member of a group of comets all travelling in the same path, or an entirely independent body.

"It is evident, however, that its perihelion must lie very close to the sun, and it has probably swept all through the coronal region, almost brushing the solar surface, whence the astonishing brilliance that it exhibits. If it keeps in sight as it withdraws from the neighborhood of the sun it would exhibit a magnificent tail.

"The story of this comet will form a startling chapter in the history of astronomy. With the spectroscopic apparatus now in the possession of astronomers a great revelation of the nature of these mysterious bodies is apparently put within our reach.

"Its sudden appearance is another proof of the adventurous nature of the vast voyage that the solar system is making through space.

"On go the planets flying northward with the sun, and into the midst of them, like torpedo boats invading a fleet, come plunging great comets. Some time one of them is mathematically certain to hit the sun—and then what? Nobody can say.

"But who's afraid? After all, in spite of their formidable look, comets are insignificant bodies compared with our solid globe, mostly gas dust; so let them come.

"The great comet of 1882, which stole into the solar system in a similar manner, being first seen in the southern hemisphere, was likewise visible for several days in full sunlight, and it proved to be one of the most marvellous comets on record. But when it got into the northern hemisphere it was visible only in the morning sky before sunrise.

"This one, on the contrary, is coming out into the evening sky, and if the observations of its present course are correct, it is likely to become a very brilliant object."

CHARGING INTEREST TO THE SETTLERS

Ottawa, Feb. 5—A peculiar feature of the regulations governing the purchase of pre-emptions and purchased homesteads has been brought to light by Mr. R. S. Lake, M. P. There is aprovision in the law that interest shall be payable yearly on the whole amount of the obligation assumed beginning at the end of the first twelve months. The people who have been obtaining these homesteads did not understand this provision; it was not mentioned in the advertisements announcing the sale, nor in the circular issued by the department yet it amounts to $24 per annum, and it is now stated that non-payment will mean cancellation "It is a terrible position in which to place the enormous number of new settlers in the country who have not got this money to put up the payment of the annual interest," said Mr. Lake.

I want to make a few remarks garding our outside service. A years ago, previous to the last eral election, we had the inside vice placed under commission. outside service is still in the s old condition. The members of inside service were advised that were to receive an increase in sa previous to election. The outside vice have not been so treated. fortunately for them they are hived together in any locality, b believe, Sir, it is our duty to the outside service under a com sion and to do it at once. If have any rights, if they are enti to increases, by all means let t have increases, but put them in position in which they can be p erly looked after. I occasionally it the public accounts committee this House of parliament and I some things that are not particu ly agreeable to me as a citizen this country. I see officials of outside service brought before committee. I have in my mind at present time an instance in whic gentleman who almost forgot name when under examination hon. gentlemen on this side of House but, when he happened to taken in hand by hon. gentlemen posite it took almost twenty ge men to carry away what he had give. Was that gentleman so seri ly to blame? It is true that he his sacred oath that he would the truth and nothing but the tr but I fear very much, Sir, that juggled with the truth. His b and butter was at stake with political head of his department ing into his countenance conve the intelligence that if he should low himself to give away any that should injure the governm his official position would not worth the paper on which it written. Was that right? I do care what government is in po the system is wrong. Probabaly t man has a family whose bread butter is at stake. Let us get t things right because I realize t political parties are drawn from people of this country and that same policy might result in the sa effects. I am not going to make admission of that sort, but it is p bable and we want on this side the House to see that method d away with.

We had the sight in this Ho some few weeks ago of no less a p sonage than the Prime Minister entangled in the rules and reg tions that he could not get f loose in order to let the people the city of Ottawa have their pro representation in the House. I not going to say anything aga the premier. I have no thought desire to do it, but I am going say something else. Where do people of Ottawa come in? The ticism is too frequently levelled public men in this country that t are not doing their duty. I wo like to know what the people of tawa have been doing all this t Has there been any effort on t part to have this matter rectif As far as I can see there has no may be treading on danger ground but the spice of life come a man who steps out of the bea track and freely expresses his vi and I want the people of Ottawa know my view of the matter. If t condition of affairs existed in city of London there would be a processions passing back and fort front of the prime minister's plac Downing street, and I [illegible] that we had that kind of energy show the people in this new country would be better for the country.

I do not see my hon. friend minister of railways (Mr. Graham his seat, but I want to offer him condolences, because I think I sincerely offer them, in the loss the deputy minister of railways canals. rights in an attempt to appease some other nation.

I want to make a few remarks regarding our outside service. A few years ago, previous to the last general election, we had the inside service placed under commission. The outside service is still in the same old condition. The members of the inside service were advised that they were to receive an increase in salary previous to election. The outside service have not been so treated. Unfortunately for them they are not hived together in any locality, but I believe, Sir, it is our duty to place the outside service under a commission and to do it at once. If they have any rights, if they are entitled to increases, by all means let them have increases, but put them in a position in which they can be properly looked after. I occasionally visit the public accounts committee of this House of parliament and I see some things that are not particularly agreeable to me as a citizen of this country. I see officials of the outside service brought before that committee. I have in my mind at the present time an instance in which a gentleman who almost forgot his name when under examination by hon. gentlemen on this side of the House but, when he happened to be taken in hand by hon. gentlemen opposite it took almost twenty gentlemen to carry away what he had to give. Was that gentleman so seriously to blame? If in true that he gave his sacred oath that he would tell the 'truth and nothing but the truth, but I fear very much, Sir, that he jiggled with the truth. His bread and butter was at stake with the political head of his department gazing into his countenance conveying the intelligence that if he should allow himself to give away any idea that should injure the government his official position would not be worth the paper on which it was written. Was that right? I do not care what government is in power, the system is wrong. Probabaly that man has a family whose bread and butter is at stake. Let us get these things right because I realize that political parties are drawn from the people of this country and that the same policy might result in the same effects. I am not going to make an admission of that sort, but it is probable and we want on this side of the House to see that method done away with.

We had the sight in this House some few weeks ago of no less a personage than the Prime Minister so entangled in the rules and regulations that he could not get footloose in order to let the people of the city of Ottawa have their proper representation in the House. I am not going to say anything against the premier. I have no thought or desire to do it, but I am going to say something else. Where do the people of Ottawa come in? The criticism is too frequenely levelled at public men in this country that they are not doing their duty. I would like to know what the people of Ottawa have been doing all this time. Has there been any effort on their part to have this matter rectified? As far as I can see there has not. I may be treading on dangerous ground but the spice of life comes to a man who steps out of the beaten track and freely expresses his views and I want the people of Ottawa to know my view of the matter. If that condition of affairs existed in the city of London there would be a few processions passing back and forth in front of the prime minister's place in Downing street, and I think that if we had that kind of energy shown by the people in this new country it would be better for the country.

I do not see my hon. friend the minister of railways (Mr. Graham) in his seat, but I want to offer him my condolences, because I think I can sincerely offer them, in the loss of the deputy minister of railways and canals. The business of this government is the biggest business in the country and it is astonishing state of affairs that the largest corporation—the country itself—can allow smaller corporations to take from them men of that character. I suppose it is done by paying them more money. I say it is regrettable that this gentleman should be allowed to pass out of the service of the country. I have had the pleasurs of meeting him occasionally, and I feel that we had occupying this position a gentleman of the very highest ability and a credit to whoever selected him for the place. I have had a very high opinion of him and not only of him but many others among the deputy ministers. I merely wanted to put myself on record in that respect. Now, Sir, I have nothing further to say and I thank the hon. gentlemen for the attention they have given me.

SEED GRAIN SCANDAL

The Dominion Government in 1909 distributed seed grain to settlers in the western provinces who were suffering for it by reason of frost. The result of its operations amounted to something very like a scandal, as Mr. Lake, M.P., pointed out to the House of Commons recently. First, there was great delay. Then the delay in starting meant more delay, because much of the seed had been sent out of the country, and had to be brought back at excessive cost. Then so high a price was fixed, and such onorous conditions were imposed, that a great number of settlers, although they were in great need, refused to accept it. This left a large quantity on the hands of the government and it had to be disposed of at a loss of over $100,0000. Then the government voting down the suggestion of the Conservatives, who moved to have the period two years insisted upon payment for the seed grain within one year. Over $400,000 worth of seed grain was supplied by the government and at the end of the first year only $28,000 had been paid. That meant that nearly $375,000 of arrears were owing by settlers when the general election was taking place, and the government workers assured the farmers that if they voted Liberal the government would not insist upon payment for the grain within one year.

Thus the government bungled the affair from a business standpoint, but contributed to turn its bad business methods into an agency for bring pressure to bear upon voters in the election.

A LIBERAL ON STRIKE

Ottawa, Feb. 5—In the course of the budget debate one of the Western Liberals, Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer, went on strike against a cherished feature of the policy of the Laurier government. He attacked Mr. Fielding's argument in support of bounties and treated it with the utmost disrespect. Mr. Fielding had drawn an analogy between bounties on iron and steel and railway subsidies. Mr. Clark argues that this was false in three respects:

1. Iron and steel can be procured from abroad. Railways must be made in this country.

2. In subsidizing railways establishes a general policy applicable to the whole nation. Bounties on iron and steel can benefit only a few districts of the country.

3. Bounty and tariff together have the effect of making the steel rails of which the railways are built more expensive, thus making it more difficult to supply railways to the people.

Mr. Fielding looked distinctly uncomfortable while his follower thus poured contempt upon his argument.

Another Lecture by Clinton Howard

Mr. Clinton N. Howard, the well-known American temperance lecturer paid his second visit to this city on Wednesday evening last, when he addressed a large meeting in the opera house, under the auspices of the Royal Templars on "What Ought to Happen in Medicine Hat."

Mrs. Daum, of the W. C. T. U., was in the chair, and was supported on the platform by the Rev. Mr. Daum, the Rev. H. H. Hench, Mr. W. J. Brotherton, Rev. Mr. Bryant and Mr. B. W. Bellamy of the Royal Templars.

After a prayer by the Rev. H. H. Hench, Mrs. Daum, in introducing the speaker, described him as one of America's leading orators, and asked the audience to greet him with a "Chatauqua" salute, which was done all present cheering the lecturer and waving their handkerchiefs.

Mr. Howard prefaced his remarks by commenting that across the border they usually carried two handkerchiefs, one of which they used for "show" and the other for "blow." He said he was glad to be "home" again. When he said "home" he meant Medicine Hat because it seemed like "home," it was his second visit. He did not suffer much from stage fright, but he always preferred his second meeting in a city to his first, because it showed that his efforts for the cause had been appreciated. He had spent ten days in Alberta and already felt like one of the people. He had never enjoyed himself so much before in his life, as he was sure his campaign against the saloon had hit the bull's eye.

He had been adversely criticised in some instances but opposition was his greatest encouragement because it showed he had given his opponents something to think about.

He took exception to the Calgary "Daily News" saying that he had "called for the curse of God to smite men engaged in the hotel business in Alberta." He was quite sure his audience would acquit him of ever using such words. On the contrary he frequently stopped at hotels very often much against the wishes of his friends, but he had nothing against an hotel as an hotel, what he objected to was the bar-room attached to the hotel.

Since his last visit to Medicine Hat, he had been to Lethbridge, Calgary and Edmonton and the cause he advocated had received practical sympathy from all three cities. Lethbridge had subscribed $156; Calgary $486, and Edmonton had gone one better with $487 in aid of the temperance movement. He had travelled all over the American continent but he could honestly say that he had never left his home with greater pleasure than he did when he knew he was coming to Canada.

Canada is a country of great wealth both in regard to minerals and agriculture but she is rich in something greater than that, she is rich in men. Why did he say so? Because in no other country in the world would you find men so law abiding and who respected the Sabbath so much (they had even closed the post-offices on Sunday) as in this great Dominion. But Canada is going to do more than that. Canada is going to abolish the saloon in this generation, and that is what Medicine Hat is going to do. Every great moral reform happened because it ought to happen. Look at the abolition of slavery, everybody laughed at the idea when the agitation was started, and yet seven years later slavery was abolished, and that was what is going to happen to the barroom in Canada. The saloon is going to be shut out in Alberta, and Medicine Hat is going to go dry because it ought to go dry. That is one reason; but he was going to give them 5,000 others, and they were every man, woman and child in the city. He was often told that the saloon is a necessary evil. Why? Because it brought revenue to the city. He could tell them that for every $1.25 of revenue that came in from the saloons $25 went out.

In the State of Massachusetts there were 17 dry cities and 16 wet cities. In the dry ones there was 72 per cent less crime and 87 per cent. less pauperism. In the wet cities the trade increases showed 60 per cent. and the population 80 pet cent, but the dry cities had increased 105 per cent in trade and 125 per cent. in population. And so it is in all the states and cities that have shut out the saloon. They are all in a state of increasing prosperity.

In conclusion Mr. Howard said he was confident that the day was coming, and coming soon, when the whole of this great Dominion would cast off the saloon for ever, and what was perhaps of even greater interest to his audience, the day was coming when the news would go forth to the world that "Medicine Hat has gone dry."

THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH

A successful performance of Ian Maclaren's drama "The Bonnie Briar Bush" was given at the opera house on Tuesday evening last. The drama, which was originally produced at the St. James Theatre, London, some three years ago, and the plot of which follows much on the same line of the author's famous novel, was in the hands of a very capable company. Owing, however, to the absence of a programme, it is impossible to criticise the acting to any great extent, except to say that is was good all round. The rendering of the parts of Lachlan Campbell and the Postman, however, stand out for special mention, but the hit of the play was the performance of the small young lady who took the part of Jennie. Her song "Stingy Kid" brought down the house, and she should certainly go far in her profession. While we are unable to say what per centage of Scotch there is in this community, the spontaneous combustion of applause which greeted the performances, showed that the Scotties were very much in evidence on Friday evening.

Serious Kitchen Accident

What Zam-Buk Saved a Lady

Mrs. Fredk. Bryant, of 160 Railway Ave., Stratford, spent dollars trying to get well, but failed until she tried Zam-Buk. It was this way: "I was in the kitchen preparing supper," she says, "when I upset some boiling water. It fell upon my foot, scalding it badly. Next day the skin came off the foot, and it was so painful I could not walk. I treated it, but instead of getting better it got worse, and finally I had to take to my bed. I was laid up for nine weeks, and in that time I tried all manner of so-called remedies. I had embrocations, dozens of salves, I think, and lotions, but the scald developed into a running sore. I was about beaten by it when a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk and I did so. A few applications had the effect of soothing the pain and giving me what I had not had for weeks—a little ease. I persevered with Zam-Buk and day by day the running sore seamed to get less inflamed and less painful, as the Zam-Buk drew away the poison and reduced the inflamation. In a very short time healing commenced, and rapidly continued until the sore was completely healed. I would hardly have believed that any preparation could have done for me what Zam-Buk did, and I shall never be without a supply in the house." When you have a scald, a burn, a skin sore, an ulcer or any skin trouble or injury, try Zam-Buk. Made from the purest of herbal essences, it may be regarded as nature's own healer. Eczema, clod-sores cracked and chapped hands, children's rashes, chilblains, all yield to its soothing, healing influence. It also eases the agony of piles. All druggists and stores, 50 cents a box, or post-free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

AGRICULTURE: THE MASTER SCIENCE

The idea of the supremacy of agriculture is being recognized as never before. That agriculture is the fundamental form of wealth production is a well recognized fact, and the world's greatest thinkers go further and acknowledge that agriculture is the calling which paves the way for all others, and places commercialism educationalism and artizanship on the high plane which they are today. The busy city, teeming with humanity, is apt to lead many to believe that it is the mainstay of the nation. What is the backbone, as it were, of the whole framework of humanity? We answer—Agriculture. What is it that supplies the force that accomplishes the world's work? Is it not after all the staff of life and here again one's thoughts revert to the farm, the source of all sustenance. See these long rows of cars loaded with the product of the farm, bringing food to the teeming millions of the cities. Cut of the feed supply and the greatest centres of human activity as well as the most beautiful cities on earth would soon become appalling spectacles of famine and misery. With so much resting on the products of the farm, agriculture is surely a study for the highest intellect, and is the noblest calling man can follow. What other occupation does offer so many attractions to the man seeking a life study?

When we consider that agriculture embodies the study of plant and animal life, and includes all that is possible to place the different spicies of both on the highest pinnacle of development, we must realize that it contains food for the deepest study and material for the greatest brain. How do plants grow? Along what lines can the most rapid and permanent improvement in matters pertaining to agriculture be made? These and other questions of equal importance are receiving the attention of many of the master minds of this age. Scientific methods are being applied for the working out, to the full extent of present light, every opportunity in the fields of agricultural thought, and yearly new discoveries are being made. What a study the "master science" is! Take for example the endeavor to unravel the workings of the tiny seed as it sends forth its tender shoot and seeks its first nourishment until it is a full matured plant. Then there is opened up the study of food supply from a chemical point of view, a veritable field of study, rich enough in itself to fill a man's life. Add soil physics, methods of cultivation, not to speak of all the other lines that an agricultural life contains, and we ask what other occupation can unfold such wealth of material for study? Have you ever thought about the beautiful shades of color in the woods in the glorious autumn days. Study the cause. Let chemistry come to your aid and unfold this mystery tell you of the different subjects and elements working to bring about the wonderful effects. Learn the cause and effect of all that surrounds you and the country has charms that no city can offer.

The live stock side has not been touched. It is intricate and equally fascinating. Students of note, many of them ripe with years, but nevertheless students, are studying this subject, which is of more vital import from its economic point of view than most stockgrowers realize.

The true farmer is a creator of wealth. The crops he grows are created out of sunshine, rain drops, the carbon of the air, and the available fertility of the soil which he raises are shaped largely according to his skill in the intricacies of breeding, feeding, and management, and consequently the welfare of all nations in a large measure lies in his hand. Who, then, will dispute that the master science is agriculture?

The Miracle of Alberta Red

The most pointed rebuke of all to the fellows who still doubt Western Canada is as good as any other part of the Dominion is the success of what is called the "dry farming" system. Conviction with regard to the potentialities of the West has come to the East as a series of shocks. The making of bacon and dairy produce in the east for the English market has become a habit in the time that has elapsed since Manitoba took over the wheat-growing proposition. The coming on of Saskatchewan and Alberta has not really been a matter of new concern to the eastern producer, but the concern of the eastern producer as a result of the opening of the Manitoba wheat lands is fresh in the experience of men who are still young.

Just accounts of the climate of Western Canada have called for a remarkable reconstruction of notions. While the geographies have not got over saying that "the central regions are characterized by great extremes of temperature and a greatly restricted rainfall in some parts," people come from the east to Alberta to catch a moderate winter. Many with one lung expecting to go back with three, but immigrants are generally over-optimistic and expect to make big wins in a new land without effort.

Then with respect to the areas of restricted rainfall, "where extensive irrigation works have been constructed to water the dry districts," it must be conceded that water has always been considered good for watering purposes. It has more recently come to pass that this artificial and elaborate watering system has been discounted by the discovery that there is plenty of water everywhere for crop growing without robbing the streams.

The term "dry farming," is a term used to stand for a special kind of soil treatment in areas of relatively arid or semi-arid character. It seems likely a fairly good descriptive term especially when set in contrast with irrigation farming. The expression is now repudiated by those living on such lands. In consequence of the success they have met with they will not stand for the limitation suggested in the term "dry." What they contend is that by scientific soil cultivation they obtain as good results in crop production as can be obtained anywhere. The contention seems to be well grounded.

The traveller going through the old ranching country by rail will be slow to believe this. The absence of occupation over large stretches seems self-explanatory. The monotony of the prairie landscape emphsizes the desolate impression, and the vegetation, particularly after it has been smitten with the ripening wind about the first of July is of stunted stature and of an orange-tawny hue that to the uninitiated speak of desert conditions. There is little other evidence of the prairie being instinct with life. In spite of the much-talked-of limiting of the range, cattle and horse stock seem sparse, the skulking coyote seems to be always seeking and never finding, and the occasional nimble antelope seems to show that man has left the prairie in wild possession. Even though the evidences of change are appearing, the man from the close orchards of the east is not impressed with the possibilities of the prairie.

The term "dry farming" originated in the attempt made to get crop yields off the regions of scant rainfall in the western States. Naturally the pressure on areas of low production has been greater over there than here, and it is to operators from such States as Kansas and Nebraska that we are indebted for the introduction of the kind of culture considered suitable to the places of least rainfall in Western Canada. In view of the common idea of the limitations of such areas up till a comparatively recent time the stories of big yields of winter wheat in Southern Alberta sound like accounts of miracles. The miracles seem easy after the explanation has been given.

It does not seem hard to understand why the vegetation on the unbroken prairie should be of low stature. In the first place the rainfall is not abundant, being probably about fourteen inches on the average over most parts of Southern Alberta —about half of what it is in the provinces of Central Canada. In the second place the prairies are treeless and so are free from the mulch that receives and holds the moisture that falls as it is received and held in the forest areas. In the third place the characteristic winds are drying winds. They are robbed of their moisture in traversing the great continental axis. In the last place, the rain coming as it does in great quantities over short periods, chiefly in June, falls on the hard unbroken face of the prairie, from which it is quickly shed into the prairie streams. Small as the rainfall in the total is, it is in the open prairie areas that floods are most common.

It is cultivation that constitutes the first step in the miracle of crop production in the areas. Experiment has shown that from four to seven inches of moisture will produce almost any kind of a crop, and in this view the moisture that falls is twice as great as is actually required. The first problem is to get the moisture into the soil. To do this the surface must be broken and pulverized to make it receptive of rain. Breaking of new land is generally done early in June, before the land has become dry by the loss of all its winter moisture and before the heaviest rain of the season has fallen. When the land has been broken it should be disc harrowed to reduce its too open character. A new machine called the packer, which is simply a series of wedge-shaped metal wheels, is also used, which firms the soil by lateral pressure. The breaking up and working down of the soil puts it in the best of condition for the reception of moisture. The next problem is to put the lid on so as to allow no moisture to escape except by legitimate channels.

This is done by means of the dust blanket. The dissipation of moisture of its use by the plant is by capillary attraction. If soil is left undisturbed the upward route of the soil moisture becomes established, and as it passes off the moisture below keeps climbing and follows it into the air. If the surface is stirred this route is interrupted and the moisture is held within the soil. Of course, all moisture cannot be retained, and it is not uncommon to grow only one crop on the same land in two years and to devote the off year to getting moisture into the soil and keeping it there. A characteristic illustration of the dry farming system would be the plowing of land in the spring and the preserving of moisture by surface cultivation during summer in preparation for fall wheat sowing. Such a crop would have for its maturing the moisture of two years—of one year for its fall growth and of another for its summer growth. It is a good practice to harrow lightly even in the spring of the year in which the winter wheat matures. Though the methods of the dry farmer are not consistently or universally followed, the demonstration of success under the system has resulted in a wonderful impulse to winter wheat growing in Alberta. This year the yield will be about 2,500,000 bushels, which is only 500,000 short of the yield of spring wheat in the province. Individual yields as high as sixty bushels per acre are recorded. The average yield will be slightly over twenty-two bushel per acre.

The most enthusiastic advocates of dry land culture are not satisfied with the admission that their lands are equally productive with those in areas of greater rainfall. They say they are better. In the first place the plant food of their lands is not leeched away by excessive moisture. In the second place the prairie lands are of the same moisture receiving constituency for great depths and so are effective and capacious reservoirs against which drouth has no terrors. In the third place the rains come in rather heavy storms, which suits the condition of the land, and their not coming frequently makes the preservation of a dry top mulch easy. The activity of the wind in itself on the prairie serves to some extent to make the dust blanket. Truly there is no pity to the farmer on the dry lands and no further demonstration needed of the fertility of these lands, The miracle of Alberta winter wheat is exposed.

RUNAWAY TEAM

On Friday morning about eleven o'clock an exciting runaway accident happened on South Railway street. A couple of horses and a dray came tearing along from the direction of the freight sheds. The animals took the road at a chariot race clip and their mad career was only arrested at the corner of Main Street, when in trying to negotiate the turn, up town, they became entangled with the lamp-post, which was promptly demolished, the city property being set up like a hairpin. The impact caused the rig to turn a complete somersault. Remarkable to relate the damage done was trifling, the horses being apparently none the worse for their mad spurt, while the tongue and whiffle trees of the dray were the only articles of furniture broken. The outfit belonged to H. W. Ireland & Co. The driver was not aboard, otherwise he might have gotten a lesson on lamp-post climbing.

Caught Cold By Working In Water.

A Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes:—"In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth, and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

SEVEN PERSONS

Alex Yuill of High River has been visiting his brother Robert for the past two weeks.

Geo Lenard who resumed threshing three weeks ago had to shut down owing to a break on the engine. He reports splendid yields for this district.

When in Medicine Hat call on the editor of The Times whether you have business or not. He will be pleased to make your acquaintance.

According to a Grassy Lake paper that village is to have a $55,000 depot. Calgary and Lethbridge take notice.

One of our well-known bachelors purchased a half beef last week and to show his knowledge of housework he rendered the fat. Having about 100 pounds he went to town and inquired the price of lard, telling the merchant he had about 100 pounds for sale. Of course the merchant did not buy. Knowing the bachelor's ability he asked him where he obtained it and the bachelor replied that he had rendered it from a beef.

On Thursday of last week a husking bee was held at the home of Henry Zimmerman. No records were broken. After the bee a dance was given. Those in attendance report a fine time.

At a dance given by the Farmers' Store on Friday night, the largest crowd in the history of the village for a like event, were present. The Seven Persons orchestra furnished the music which was of high class. The management of the store gave the dance free of charge in their new building which will be used as the grocery department. The new building will be occupied shortly.

Some of the settlers are having difficulty with their wells at various depths they strike solid rock and are compelled to use dynamite.

Messrs Griffin and Robb our new merchants have opened their general store and will be pleased to have you make a call. Whether you want to buy or not they will be pleased to make your acquaintance.

Mr. H. P. Knapper of Grano, N. D., returned Wednesday to file on a choice ¼ section in 12-7. He likes N. D. but he loves this part of Canada. He will ship his effects next fall.

ROWELL

Our district can well take the name of the "Banana Belt" so often ascribed to it, as the weather during the month of January was indeed fine, what with rain of the 24th ult. and a general thaw off, with streams of water everywhere, one would imagine it was the month of March. All the sloughs caught a good supply of water, and now have a covering of ice and impromptu skating rinks are the order of the day. It is now not an unusual thing to see farmers gliding over the ice on their homesteads. Next season has every prospect of opening up in good shape as with the thaw and the rain last month the soil had a good soaking deep enough for breaking and with the additional snow on the land a good crop is almost assurred. If we have our usual rains in the spring a greater influx of genuine farmers will be the result as this district has long suffered by merchants and trainmen etc. taking up homesteads will the sole purpose of realizing as soon as their patents are secured.

Our new coal mine is still busy supplying orders to farmers and Mr. Sexton should be congratulated and encouraged in his new venture, which everyone hopes will turn out a success, as it is a boon to the farmers and the nominal price, $2 a ton, is all right, as the coal is of first-class quality. Mr. Sexton will put a hauling gear on the prairie level as soon as the sale of coal warrants it and if any further traction ploughing outfits arrive on the scene this will be necessary as there will then be a constant demand for coal throughout the year.

Our popular storekeeper Mrs. F. C. Woolven is indeed a busy woman, with her branch store at Carlstadt fully established and doing a roaring business. She is now busy having a store erected at Suffield to meet the increasing demands of the settlers there, and with the three stores in full swing she will be kept hustling. We wish her every success in her new undertakings.

CARLSTADT

Rev. N. C. Barrie held a service in Norwegian last Sunday afternoon at the residence of Mr. S. Soderholm and Mr. Fennell as usual was at the depot for morning service. The room is quite inadequate for the congregation now attending and some place more commodious will have to be found soon, the number of men attending these services is especially commendable and speaks well for the community. A Sunday school service is held immediately after morning service for which all are invited to remain.

Some who were down at Medicine Hat last week were Mrs. F. H. Hart ris, Mr. H. Clark, Miss A. Haugland Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Gochring, Aly. G Beattie, Jr., Mr. A. Johre, Mr. A. N. Cook, Mr. C. F. Starr, Mr. A. D. Thompson.

Mrs. J. J. Gardilla is visiting friends at Medicine Hat while their house is being built on the homestead.

The Masquerade dance, given in the hall last Friday evening was well attended and enjoyed by all. Some of the costumes were cleverly designed and the comic ones caused much merriment among the dancers and onlookers.

Mr. A. Salverson returned last week from Strathmore.

Mr. S. T. Hopper, manager of the Union bank, Medicine Hat, was in town last Saturday for the purpose of opening a branch of the bank here It will be open for business in Morrow's store, twice a week, beginning this week.

Mr. Geo Gunderson, who returns to town this week from Strathmore, is bringing five teams of horses and is building a warehouse for farm implements. He is agent for McCormick also Frost & Wood), and also purposes building a livery stable in town.

Mr. H. Morrow, who has his large general store open for business now, is getting in a car load of seed potatoes; this store with its complete stock of groceries, dry goods, boots and shoes is quite an acquisition to the town, and we wish Mr. Morrow, who is represented byM r. Leonard, every success.

Mr. H. Morrow of the Hat was in town last Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mr. Geo. Beattie, returned home last Sunday from the Hat with a carload of good cattle, he intends going in extensively for cattle and poultry.

Mr. J. Ergler is completing the work on J. H. Gasson's store which was unavoidably abandoned at the time of Mr. Gassons accident. Many are glad to hear of the gradual improvement of Mr. Gasson's condition.

Mr. O'Neil of Bow Island was the guest last week of Mr A. D. Thompson.

Mr. W. A. Stirling, representing C. C. Snowdon of Calgary, wholesale oil merchants, was in town last week, and spoke in flourishing terms of our town and its possibilities. Every day sees many travellers in town canvassing their goods.

Dr. R. H. Mason, who is now on his homestead, intends opening up an office in town twice a week.

The C. P. R. surveyors were in town last week surveying the townsite.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Warner entertained a number of their friends last week, this being their second evening of the kind, recently, and each evening was much enjoyed by all present.

The Clark Bros. will build an office in town shortly and will sell all kinds of well machinery, windmills, pumps, grain grinders, cream separators, etc.

Mr. Oscar Sweten, left last Sunday for North Dakota, he will be absent several weeks.

Mrs. McNeil of Medicine Hat was in town last week. Mr. McNeil has been busy building several houses houses here and at Strathmore, Alta

Dr. Smyth Lecturers

The second address by Dr. Smyth on the Social Evil and its accompanying dangers was given in the Y. M. C. on Sunday afternoon. A large audience of men were present and filled the room to its capacity. As an introduction the doctor gave a history of the organization and work of the society of Sanitary and Moral Prophylaxis and the reasons for its existence. The first congress was held in Brussels in 1902 and every civilized country was represented. At this congress it was decided that something more than preventative measures must be taken to deal with the diseases growing out of the social evil. In 1905 a society was formed in New York and since then many branch societies in different places. The need of such an organization was set forth by the following facts:

1. Such diseases overshadow all other infectious diseases in point of frequency. One eighth of all human disease and suffering comes from this source.

2. The danger to innocent members of society is very great 75 per cent. of all special surgical operations for women are due to it.

3. Seventy to 80 per cent. of the ophthalmia which blots out the eyes of children and 20 to 25 per cent of all blindness is traceable to it.

4. The state pays each year millions of dollars to the support of defectives whose allecation can be traced to this source, but hitherto nothing has been done as a preventative.

After a very enlightening paper on a theme kindred to the above the meeting placed itself on record as being favorable to the organization of a branch of the society in this city. The next address of the series will be given in about three weeks at which the formation of a society will most likely be discussed.

Lecture on Poultry

Poultry matters loom large in the attention of the community these days. Fresh eggs at 60 cents a dozen has a tendency to make the owner of hens consider whether he is getting all the results possible from his brood, and the man who hasn't them think of providing a means of keeping them. At any rate the public is getting considerable information on the poultry question of late.

On Friday evening a large audience listened to two instructive addresses in the City Hall. Mr. S.S.S. Stansell of Edmonton gave an illustrated lecture on Wild Birds of Alberta, explaining to his listeners the value of some of these to the country. This class of bird should be protected. But there is another class which should be destroyed, for they are as harmful as the former are beneficial. By means of lantern slides the lecturer made clear to his hearers the difference betwen these classes.

The next speaker was Mr. Cooke, of Lethbridge, who has previously favored this city with a visit. He gave us some further information on the poultry question dealing mainly this time with the erection of suitable houses for poultry. He illustrated his talk by a model of a poultry house which he had with him, and explained the construction and ventilation of it.

The local poultry association is just at present preparing an exhibition which will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The secretary Mr. V. Morrison has resigned owing to his contemplated removal from the city and A. J. Mc Terrill has been appointed in his place. Entries are coming in rapidly for the show and many outside points will be represented. Citizens are requested to attend to the matter early so that all arrangements can be completed early for the big event of next week.

On Thursday evening last Rev. E. E. and Mrs. Hench were given a very pleasant surprise at their cosy home on Princess Avenue by the members and friends of the Knox Young People's Club. Having gathered in a body at the home of Mr. Walter Levesque the assembly repaired to storm the new pastoral domain, which they certainly did in good style. A social evening of a very enjoyable nature followed, refreshments being served by the young ladies. The following programme was carried out—Talk by Rev. Hench. Song by Miss Buzza; reading by Miss Walker; reading by Mr. Levesque; talk by Mr. J. Snowdon; story by Mr. W. D. Couseley and reading by Miss L. Best. During the evening the host and hostess were made the recipients of a beautiful oak library table.

The next meeting of the society will be held at the home of Miss L. Best, Braemar Street and Fifth avenue. All young people are welcome.

It is universally conceded by deepest thinkers of the present age that Wardells have been endowed by nature with Prophetic Powers to a degree hitherto unknown. Keenly conscious of their great responsibility, they have honestly endeavored to let the light shine that all who seek the truth as they see it. Call and be convinced. Parlors—Bell Block, Main Street.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture paid a visit to Medicine Hat yesterday. In the morning he drove out to the experimental farm and so far as he could judge at this season of the year was well satisfied with it. This year the work will be pushed vigorously, the property fenced, buildings erected, etc. Mr. Marshall also looked into other matters pertaining to this constituency while here. He left on the night train for Lethbridge where he will attend the opening of the winter school of agriculture today.

The Breeding of Pure-Bred Stock

How It is Done at the Pelgan Creek Ranch

Pelgan Creek, Feb. 14—A good afternoon's ride south of Seven Persons, a sturdy infant town some 15 miles from Medicine Hat, is the ranch home of David Cargill, the leading importer and breeder of pure bred and grade Clydesdale horses in Southern Alberta. Known as Pelgan Creek Horse Ranch it is ideally situated on the famous creek and excels in everything which makes for success. Beautiful springs are in abundance and the horses grow fat and sleek, big and streng upon the rich grasses which attain their best in this section of our favored province. It would be difficult to find a better equipped and managed ranch than this. Mr. Cargill has spent six years in making it a model of neatness and convenience. A place for everything and everything in its place is one of his mottos.

His stables are large and commodious. Fitted with every modern improvement their usefulness more than doubled by many ingenious contrivances of Mr. Cargill, which add materially to the interest of the establishment and greatly lessen the labor of the rancher and his helpers. All Mr. Cargill's buildings are of his own design and were built under his direction. Entering the main stable one is at once impressed by the large number of blue class prize cards exhibited over the different box stalls. Mr. Cargill's horses are winners and always carry off a major portion of the prizes he shows annually at the Medicine Hat fair, and this year will probably send an exhibit to Calgary.

With about 150 horses Mr. Cargill is a busy man, particularly as many of these are pure bred and require constant attention. A Times correspondent spent a delightful visit at this well known ranch. A bunch of seven yearly stallion colts in a separate paddock were a beautiful sight. They were all registered pure bred stock, fine examples of what can be reared in this country. Under the skilful care of Mr. Cargill and his assistants they are being trained to a certain degree for the show ring, and will be seen in good condition during the coming season. Mr. Cargill is a firm believer in the old saying "Fed at night," Bonsley, aging 4 years, by Macaritha, one of the greatest breeding horses in Scotland, and out of the $1,500 breeding mare Scottish Maid, is one of this bunch. Mr. Cargill got him over from the Old Country last year and intends to use him to follow on Favourite Blend, the stallion he has been using for the last few years. Blend has been a three times champion at the Medicine Hat show and a winner of the silver medal. He was imported from Scotland where Mr. Cargill picked him from the best there. Blend is out of the unbeaten mare Lady Garnet and is full brother to Lady Roths, champion mare at Winnipeg. He has been used with immense success by his present owner who highly values this splendid horse.

The colt Bonsley is a beauty. He is a magnificent mover with perfect feet and ankles and promises to develop into a handsome horse. He has never been shown by Mr. Cargill but will likely appear at some of the coming fairs.

Edwardson, by Royal Edward; Ben Turret, first prize at the Medicine Hat fair in 1909, by Robin Hood; Cromlax by Baron Ruby and Happy Boy by Golden Gift are all fine colts belonging to the above mentioned ranch. Pelgan Hero, rising two years by Favourite Blend out of the registered mare was bred by Mr Cargill. This colt is a particularly promising one and is the pride of the P. C. R. His dam has won many prizes at the Medicine Hat fairs as have all the other horses above mentioned. The Times was shown many splendid pure bred mares on this ranch. The teams sold by Mr. Cargill are known over the whole country side and are known far and wide for their size, strength and gentleness. One of the secrets of this success to the excellence of the mares found here. Lady Susan by Royal Favourite was second at the Calgary show as a yearling and first at Medicine Hat as a three-year-old. Iona, a Canadian bred mare, was first last year at the Medicine Hat fair as a brood mare. She has a beautiful stallion foal by Favourite Blend. Jan't, an imported mare is a very large horse. She is out of Mazawatte, who sold for £1,700 in Scotland. This fine mare also has a very likely looking stallion foal by Special Blend. The two youngsters are running together in the main stable and are well worth seeing.

In 1909 Mr. Cargill's horses won six firsts, two second, three specials, and the silver medal at the Medicine Hat fair. He has lifted the medal, a prize coveted by every exhibitor, for five consecutive years. This successful rancher recently purchased two very fine stallion foals, out of imported mares and by Gourgenock, a stallion imported by Mr. Cargill, and at present owned by the Canadian Land and Ranch Company. Gourgenock is a celebrated horse and has carried off honors at Calgary and Medicine Hat.

All Mr. Cargill's horses are run in heavy barbed wire pastures. He has

W. C. T. U. ANNIVERSARY SERVICE.

In accordance with a request from the local branch of the W. C. T. U., Rev. J. Morrow will conduct the anniversary memorial service in St. John's church on Sunday evening, February 20th. The subject of discourse will be the life and work of the founder of the W. C. T. U., and the choir, under the direction of Miss McLean, will render special music.

The Francis Willard commemorative service should be an especially notable occasion this year, because the principles for which she stood are no longer the insistent cry of a few reformers, they have become the clamor of a great multitude.

Envelopes will be found in the seats to receive the offering of those who wish to contribute to the furtherance of this work.

In a notice appearing elsewhere in these columns it was inserted, by mistake, that the Knox Young People's club would be led on Thursday by Mr. Simpson. The subject for Thursday will be taken by Miss Caldwell, supervisor of music and drawing in the city schools, and will be "Art." Mr. Simpson's paper will be given later.

Disruption in the Rutherford Administration

Minister of Public Works Resigns

New Minister of Municipalities May Follow Suit

(Special to The Times)

Edmonton, February 15th—Is the Government of the Province of Alberta, the Rutherford administration in danger of overthrow as the result of the upheaval which it is now admitted has occurred within the ranks of the Government party in the legislature? This is the question which is being flung up and down the lines in political circles, both Conservative and Liberal, following the sensational rumors published yesterday regarding the resignation of Hon W. H. Cushing, Minister of Public works and his deputy John Stocks, and the split in the government ranks, and the equally sensational developments which indications point will develop within the next 24 hours

HON. W. H. CUSHING

RESIGNS

The resignation of Hon. W. H. Cushing is now in the hands of the Lieut-Governor, it is stated on the best authority, although it has not yet reached the Premier and although the minister himself does not confirm the statement, it is believed also, that the resignation of his deputy, John Stocks, will follow, although the minister further declares that he has heard nothing of this.

Opposition has arisen to the Government's policy in connection with the Alberta Great Waterways Railway and the southern members are lining up in order to fight this colonization project and to raise the question of the location of the agricultural college.

Hon. W. A. Buchanan, Minister of Municipalities, is undecided as to what course to take but there appears to be a possibility of his resigning. Practically all members from south of Red Deer are expected to join opposing forces and these, 16 in number, will, when combined with the Conservatives and Socialists, leave the administration with a majority of one. Smith of Camrose and Roberts of High River were the only speakers on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, R. B. Bennett failing to make his expected slashing attack on the government.

Rev. J. W. Morrow Speaks on Divorce

On Sunday evening the Presbyterian church was filled by a congregation which listened with close attention to the reasons advanced by the Rev. J. Morrow in favor of making divorce harder to obtain. Mr. Morrow took his text from Matthew 19, verse 6. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." The speaker commenced in his scientific manner, by pointing out the differences in homes, and referred to the number of homes that were wrecked from one cause and another, leading eventually to the courts. Men of married people, he said, were the instance of separation, while those homes which had been blessed by virtuous tempers on the part of their spouses. Many people asked how this was to be remedied and the reverend gentleman went on to say that in certain cases divorce might be, and referred to further on in the chapter from which he took his text, for justification of his contention.

Mr. Morrow then referred to the doctrine of free love which, twenty years ago, was rampant in many of the large cities of the United States, pointing out the bad influence of the doctrine and its connection with the divorce court. He went on to deal with the Mormon settler, admitting that he had made a great success of farming but drafting attention to the fact that his polygamistic tendencies were, in some States, not carried at all. For instance in Salt Lake City a Mormon could have "fifty wives snoring all round him." This was allowed in some States and he concluded that every political party, irrespective of everything else, should aid in stamping this practice out.

He next referred to advertisements which appeared in many of the United States journals, for instance—"Divorce easily and quietly arranged," and to the methods adopted by many unscrupulous lawyers in securing divorces, for a consideration. The bad influence that corrupt literatures and suggestive picture post cards had against marriage were dealt with, and he strongly advocated the keeping of good literature in the homes for all to read.

Many people claimed that divorce was sometimes necessary. He claimed that it was too easy to obtain. In some of the states there were 60 to 70 clauses in the law for which a man might obtain divorce. In Chicago last year 1800 divorces were issued; 2000 in New England and 500 in the State of Maine and he would like to see divorce harder to procure instead of easier, as was stated by a certain minister, some years ago in Canada. The divorce court acted as a loop-hole for those that married in fun, and, if abolished, people would act with less precipitation. At present the law made divorce too easy for the rich, and it would be better to have one law for rich and poor alike, and one uniform law for the whole of the States instead of allowing each State to have a different law.

Mr. Morrow advised young girls to get rid of the idea of marrying a man to reform him. The practice was far too common. It was a very foolish idea for any girl to think that she could reform a man who had soaked himself in liquor till he was 25 or 30. The girl is warned by all her relatives and friends that man is a drunkard yet marries him, knowing that there is always divorce court to fall back on. The pastor next referred to young marriages and the sarcasm contained in the words "with my worldly goods I thee endow" coming from the lips of a young man who did not own a dollar, and probably owed his board bill. Ministers should have more guarantee for, with the exception of the English church where the banns have to be published three weeks ahead, they very often knew nothing about the contracting parties. In this connection he related an anecdote of a time when he was in Wetaskiwin and a man hurried up to him and enquired if he knew where a minister was to be found. Having found out that a Presbyterian minister would do, he was informed that a woman wanted to get married that night and wished the banns published in the church. On enquiring why the stranger did not procure a license, he was informed that Mr. —— would not issue one as the woman had admitted that she had a husband living in Michigan, but that the woman was prepared to swear that she was divorced. He of course refused to marry her but the story served to show with what small knowledge of existing circumstances ministers were expected to perform this most sacred ceremony. These hasty marriages he thought, were another cause for the existence of the divorce court. The law should be amended. We are not on this earth for long, said the pastor, and he thought it decidedly better that the husband or wife should have to wait until the green grass grew upon the grave of the departed before being allowed to marry again.

DIED

At Medicine Hat Hospital, on Monday evening, February 14th, 1910, Martha Eliza, wife of Elmo Marshall, C. P. A LIBERAL ON STRIKE

Ottawa, Feb. 12—In the course of the budget debate one of the Western Liberals, Dr. Michael Clark of Red Deer, went on strike against a cherished feature of the policy of the Laurier government. He attacked Mr Fielding's argument in support of bounties and treated it with the utmost disrespect. Mr. Fielding had drawn an analogy between bounties on iron and steel and railway subsidies. Mr. Clark argues that this was false in three respects:

1. Iron and steel can be procured from abroad. Railways must be made in this country.

2. In subsidizing railways establishes a general policy applicable to the whole nation. Bounties on iron and steel can benefit only a few districts of the country.

3. Bounty and tariff together have the effect of making the steel rails of which the railways are built more expensive, thus making it more difficult to supply railways to the people.

Mr. Fielding looked distinctly uncomfortable while his follower thus poured contempt upon his argument.

Curlers Return From Banff

No Jewelry

A rink of curlers went to Banff on Tuesday last composed of Dr. Hall, J. Collier, J. Benson and M. A. Brown. They report an enjoyable time but no jewelry. They played one game on Wednesday, one on Thursday and two on Friday, and had just struck a winning gait when A. E. Whitin appeared on the scene and he queered the whole rink.

It is evident that the high altitude did not agree with the Hat boys as two of them had to go to the hospital and the other two went to the baths and between those experience they fell. If you should meet the skip don't ask about his Scotch bonnet as he has put it away for the season and with the bonnet has gone his confident and majestic air.

A most enjoyable game of hockey took place on Saturday between the visitors and a team from the city, the visitors proved conclusively that they could not play hockey any better than they could curl.

The weather was beautiful all the time and the open air rinks were as picturesque as any scene could possibly lie in either Scotland or Switzerland.

The Medicine Hat contingent returned yesterday with the exception of Mr. Brown who stayed over in Calgary.

Mr. John McNeely returned on Thursday last from his trip to the east.

The advance-guard of the California excursionists arrived in the city during the past week. W. J. McLean came in on Saturday morning and W. Cousins on Monday. The rest of the party tarried longer remaining in Los Angelos.

Mr. McLean reports glorious weather in California, green grass and flowers being in evidence.

Fire Destroys Purmal Buildings

On Wednesday last a serious fire broke out in the home yard of the Purmal Brick Co., some time between nine and ten o'clock. Mr. Purmal, who lives a quarter of a mile further down, at another of the company's yards noticed that the engine house was on fire but by the time he got there it was of course too late to do anything towards extinguishing the flames.

The engine and machine house are totally destroyed and much valuable machinery rendered useless. It is impossible to say how the fire started as things were left in the same manner as they always had been. It is hard to say exactly what the loss will amount to but we are safe in saying that it will be up in the thousands of dollars.

DIANTHE OF THE WOODS.

It Wasn't a Witch He Caught, but His Ideal of a Girl.

By M. WOODRUFF NEWELL.
[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Andrew Salisbury was on his vacation when he met his fate.

A severe attack of typhoid had put him considerably on the blas, so that he welcomed a quiet recuperating old farmhouse "twenty miles from a lemon" as a desired haven and went there for a summer's sojourn the 1st of July.

The old couple with whom he boarded were one Lemuel Merriwether and his wife, and they worried constantly for fear he should have a relapse.

"I'm very apt to," Andrew assured them often, "being so weak, you know. The delirium especially is likely to return."

Being a lone young bachelor, he enjoyed their anxiety in his behalf and worked shamelessly on their sympathies.

"My heaven!" exclaimed Mrs. Merriwether the morning that he told her that, throwing away a raisin that she was seeding and putting the seeds into the cake in her excitement.

"Oh, it's a very sad disease!" continued Andrew pensively, reaching for his fifth cooky.

Then he took his camera and went out for a morning's prowl through the woods.

The country was in its summer glory, and just before he started back to the house he took the picture that started the trouble.

He had been walking along by the river, and, struck by a clump of birch trees that fringed a dim woodland path, he trained his camera on it and sought the finder. He smiled happily as he saw the picture it made—the slim young trees with the long path winding up behind them.

"That's fine!" he told himself and, holding the camera steady, snapped it. He could scarcely wait to get home to develop it.

Mrs. Merriwether saw him coming and exclaimed anxiously, "Gracious me, boy, where's the fire?"

"Got a prize package," he answered solemnly.

Mrs. Merriwether, honest soul, stared after him.

"You don't suppose, now, the heat's affected his head, do you?" she whispered to Lemuel as he came up from the barn a little later.

"He's been on the go all day in the hot sun, and after such a fever as he had he's liable to have spells of looney, you know he said so. I just asked him what he was hurrying so for, and he said he had a prize package, and I declare to goodness I didn't see nothing but that old camera!"

"Shoo, shoo, mother, the boy's all right. It's probably just some of his funny business."

If they had seen "the boy" at that precise moment they would probably have been more anxious than they were about him.

He was looking at the developed film with startled eyes. His hands shook as he held it up dripping between him and the small ruby lamp on the table.

"By George!" he said and put it through the bath again.

A second time he held it up and scrutinized it in the dim red glow.

"By gum," he said, "it's a witch or I'm going looney!"

There was the path stretching out alluringly into the woods beyond. There were the birch trees, tall and slender and beautiful, and there, just beyond them, peering out between two massive oak tree trunks that bordered the path, was a girl or a witch or a dryad, with laughing lips, flying hair and an extraordinary eighteenth century gown.

"How the dickens!" puzzled Andrew. "It's something on the film. There couldn't have been a real girl there, alone. Lord, there ain't one within twenty miles! She surely wouldn't walk that far, and there was no team in sight, and, anyway, what would a girl of Revolutionary days be doing here?"

He washed the film carefully and put it through the hypo bath. Then he washed it again and, hanging it up to dry, went down to supper.

There he talked at random, his mind being full of the mysterious picture. His remarks were so rambling that they confirmed every suspicion that Mother Merriwether had formed that afternoon.

"He's off!" she whispered sharply to Lemuel outside the kitchen door. "It's the heat. He's way off. Just see how funny he talks. If he ain't better in the morning we'll have Dr. Snow come over. We'll have to watch him without his knowing it. We must be mighty careful not to excite him. Oh, goodness, ain't it awful, that poor boy! My, but typhoid's a fearful disease."

Lemuel, vastly alarmed, was instantly "on to his job." For a watchdog he proved A1. Andrew had difficulty in shaking him off long enough to go to the dark room at bedtime.

The film was almost dry, and he could scarcely wait until the next day to make a print of it.

When morning came, however, he found Lemuel sticking closer than a brother. Wherever he went Lemuel went also, and when Lemuel had to leave him long enough to see about his live stock mother obediently took up the trail just where he left it, until Andrew, impatient and totally unconscious of their anxieties in his behalf, bluntly locked his door in her very face and, getting out his printing frame, settled down to business.

The sunshine was bright in his south window, and he had a print completed in quick time. He held it to the light excitedly, the water dripping from it.

"Christmas, it's a goddess!" he ejaculated.

She peered out at him, her laughing face round and mischievous. Her dress was of olden style, with huge panniers at the side and a trim, laced bodice with a low French neck and little puff sleeves. One tiny foot stuck out saucily in a high heeled French boot.

Andrew stared at her amazed. The arched eyebrows and delicate face were patrician. She might have just stepped out of some old French painting. Why had he not noticed her as he snapped the picture? It was all mysterious. Then he heard Mr. Merriwether's step outside and called to him:

"Any little French court ladies around here?" he inquired.

Andrew opened the door, and Lemuel came in, a puzzled expression on his honest old face.

"Not that I know of," he answered. "Well, then, I'm seeing things," laughed Andrew, "because I saw one in the woods yesterday, puffs and ruffles and high heeled shoes."

"You did?" exclaimed Lemuel slowly. "You did, eh?"

Then, to Andrew's surprise, Lemuel quickly took the key from the lock and, putting it in again on the outside of the door, went out, locking it behind him.

Andrew pounded and yelled in rage and surprise, but all to no purpose. A half hour went by; then a carriage drew up to the door, and a second later Lemuel unlocked Andrew's door and entered, a strange gentleman with him.

"Not feeling well, I hear?" the strange gentleman remarked.

"First I knew of it," sputtered Andrew.

"He's got a relapse," exclaimed Lemuel. "Gone crazy like. Seeing things. Saw a French court lady in the woods yesterday"— But he got no further.

Dr. Snow broke out into a mighty roar.

"So you are the young gentleman?" he said. "Let's see the picture."

Andrew brought it sulkily forth, not yet understanding.

"It's my niece, Dianthe Barrows," explained the doctor after a minute, still laughing.

Andrew smiled. Dianthe!

How the name fitted her!

"She was attending a fancy dress lawn party at Stratford, about six miles up the river, on the other side. She paddled down in her canoe and, seeing those pretty birch trees, wandered into the woods, hiding her canoe in the bushes. She saw you, but you, of course, did not see her. She knew that she would probably show in the picture, as she happened to peer out from behind the trees just as you snapped it. She w[illegible] French costume that [illegible] great-great-aunt's. [illegible] laugh last night w[illegible] about it. We could imagine what a surprise it would be to the gentleman, whoever he might be, after the picture was printed."

"It was," said Andrew, laughing himself now.

"Is—is she staying with you here in town?"

The doctor smiled a little.

"Yes; for the summer. At present she is sitting outside in my buggy, holding the horse."

"I'll come out and meet her," said Andrew promptly. "I always knew I'd marry a girl named Dianthe."

No Place Like Home.

A native of Prince Edward Island had gone forth to see the world. When he reached Boston he engaged a room at a modest hotel, intending to remain there while he hunted for work.

"Will you register?" asked the clerk, handing him a pen.

"Register?" said the traveler. "What is that?"

"Write your name."

"What for?"

"We are required to keep a record of all our guests."

The man wrote his name and was about to lay down the pen when the clerk added:

"Now the place, if you please."

"What place?"

"The place you come from. Where do you live?"

"I live on the island."

"Well, but what island?"

The other man looked at him in amazement. Then he said, with an emphasis that left no doubt of his feelings: "Prince Edward Island, man! What other island is there?"

Social Amenities.

Little Marion was about to make her first call unattended by a member of the family. She was to stay a half hour, I suspect a wonderful new doll belonging to a small friend and return home.

"Now, Marion," was her mother's parting admonition, "Mrs. Rogers may ask you to stay and dine with them. If she does, you must say, 'No, thank you, Mrs. Rogers; I have already dined.'"

"I'll 'member, maumma," answered Marion and trotted off.

The visit finished, the little girl donned her hat and started for the door.

"Oh, Marion," said her hostess, overtaking her in the hall, "won't you stay and have a bite with us?"

This was an unexpected form, and for a second the child hesitated. Then she rose to the occasion.

"No, thank you, Mrs. Rogers," she answered quickly; "I have already bitten."—Woman's Home Companion.

Weeds, Trees and Forestry

Seed Fair March 3rd

Under the auspices of the Medicine Hat agricultural association a meeting was held in the city hall on Friday afternoon, the 11th inst., to hear addresses from Mr. E. H. Malcolm of Killam and Mr. A. Mitchell of Indian Head Experimental Farm, both gentlemen representing the government in the interests of farmers. Mr. Jas. Rae, president of the Agricultural association occupied the chair and remarked rather forcibly upon the small attendance, which was far from being representative of such a flourishing section of the province.

Mr. Malcolm opened the proceedings taking as his subject, "The Eradication of Noxious Weeds." The speaker handled the weeds under two heads viz. annuals and perrenials, and gave a most exhaustive and interesting descr ption of the many objectionable weeds which the farmer has to contend with while cultivating his land. He backed up his descriptions with valuable advice as to the treatment and ultimate extermination of the same. Mr. Malcolm strongly advocated systematic and constant summer fallowing with shallow coultvation of the affected parts of the land. "Go often" he remarked, "over the ground when the weeds are small, and don't wait until they are a foot high." The speaker also advocated sheep as being first rate destroyers of the noxious weeds. In the perennials, Mr. Malcolm discussed the sweet and Twitch grass, Canadian and Russian and Sow thistles and skeleton weeds. Dealing with the Canadian Sow thistles he advises the farmer in the strongest terms, to leave no stone unturned to get rid of these pests, even if it takes him ten years to do so. The C. P. R. in tackling this class of weed on its land, smothers them in coal dust, a very effective cure, he will get the same result by covering the patch over with straw. Not a light covering, but good and thick says Mr. Malcolm. In concluding his most interesting address Mr. Malcolm remarked that threshing machines got blamed for carrying around the seeds of noxious weeds, and it is the threshers, as well as the farmers duty to see that the machines are kept clean. Mr Malcolm said it is to the threshers credit that when the inspector has requested him to keep the machine clean and use screens, he has not once refused to do so. Again, it is not only the duty of the farmer to clean up the weeds on his place but to see that his neighbor or the owner of any irrigation ditches or even the great C. P. R. itself do likewise, and not to hesitate for a moment if these neighbors neglect to do their part, to report the matter to the inspector who will promptly see that the law is enforced.

Questions were invited at the end of the lecture and Mr. Malcolm answered several pertinent enquiries from gentlemen present.

Mr. Mitchell, who spoke on trees and forestry had a very strong subject, and strongly impressed upon farmer and homesteader, the absolute necessity of planting out trees on his land, i.e., in the immediate vicinity of his home and buildings. The protection was not only necessary as a windbreak or snow protection but also as a natural corral, where his stock would be sheltered, where he could grow fruit, vegetables, etc., and if sufficient trees were put in he would have fire wood in case of a shortage in fuel arising at any future date. The farmer must not forget that a good belt of trees round his place, which should take substantial shape inside of three years becomes a valuable asset and adds anything from a thousand dollars up to the value of his property. Mr. Mitchell went thoroughly into the question of preparing the ground the correct distances from the house to plant your trees, and the best brand of trees to grow. Russian poplars, cottonwoods, willows and maples were strongly advocated for this particular part of the country. The speaker was not in favor of planting out trees grown in Ontario and strongly advised procuring seedlings which have borne the tests of our western provinces such as those grown in Manitoba.

Mr. Mitchell had a number of plans drawn up showing the various styles of plantations and shelters being laid out on certain farmer's properties, and these greatly assisted his audience in following his expert instructions as to the cultivation of forestry.

A number of interesting questions were asked at the end of Mr. Mitchell's address, and answered by that gentleman. He gave some interesting hints in fruit growing, but made it perfectly clear that you couldn't start to grow a plum or a crab-apple, until you first of all had your shelter of shade trees.

President Rae announced that the seed grain fair would be held in the city hall on 3rd March and that many valuable prizes would be offered and hoped the surrounding farmers would interest themselves in this and support the Agricultural association in its efforts to promote their interests.

This is to certify that I have received a chart from the Wardells and have found their work to be most satisfactory. The life reading I received gave me more help in my life than anything I ever paid ten times the price for. So I have great pleasure in recommending them to my friends. — Chas Kipius, Contractor, Vancouver.

Third Lecture by Prof. Alexander

Professor Alexander continued his course in Roman History lectures at the city hall on Thursday evening February 10th, when he took as his subject Marcus Aurielus the Noblest Roman of them all.

He traced the character of this great Emperor from his youth, showing his studious nature and quoting from historians said that Marcus was a philospher both by instinct and by training, who took for his motto the famous words of Plato "that states flourish where philosophers rule."

When he was four years old, he lost his father but was fortunate in his mother and grandsires. Indeed it was to his mother he owed his great character. Th. Emperor Hadrian having no heir he named as his successor Antoninus Pirus who in turn having no issue adopted as his sons and successors Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Veres. The association of the Emperor Pirus and Marcus being of the happiest nature, and a period of great progress and prosperity for Rome, at the death of the former Marcus and Lucuis were appointed a joint Augustency. He married Fostina, the daughter of Pirus in 146 A. D. and the only event that marred their domestic life was the conduct of Commobus, their son, whose character is described by the historians as contemptible and full of incorrigable depravity.

Marcus was a great and popular administrator and showed great tact and ability in handling his people. He founded a High Court to look into and if necessary revise verdicts of local tribunals, and initiated many wise and charitable institutions.

When, after a period of 40 years, peace was again broken, he took the field against the Parthians and he routed their hosts at Syria. About this time Rome was visited by a great calamity, the Tiber overflowing its banks, after which the hideous black death plague ravaged the country, of which the emperor himself fell a victim, dying in his tent at Arquili. On his death bed he urged his son to carry on the war but he declined, saying that he feared the plague.

Marcus Aurius was buried in Rome lamented by all his people.

The five dollars I paid Wardells for a chart is the best investment I ever made.—M. J. Winsness, Mansfield, North Dakota.

NEW STORE FRONT

Plans have been completed and tenders are being called for an addition to the Gents' Furnishing Store of H. S. Ireland. The building is to be of brick and a two story structure which will bring the present store flush with the street front. The front will have a centre door with large plate glass windows on either side and a side entrance to the first flat above will be a couple of office rooms. The addition will practically double Mr. Ireland's floor space.

(The Outlaw)

The Provincial Government has decided to allow the Medicine Hat constituency to remain without representation for the session soon to be opened in Edmonton. As this affects a part of Grassy Lake, the Outlaw makes a strenuous and vigorous kick. There is no good reason why this part of Alberta should always be getting it in the neck. Possibly because we are such a passive bunch down here the Government sees fit to hand us the leavings, and possibly because it is absolutely uncertain as to whether a Government supporter will be returned. What this constituency needs most of all is a real live kicker. A man who when he is left off important committees just rises in his might and speaks right out, real sassy—like, in meeting. A man who will gather his robes about him, gird up his loins, tie a knot in his garters, shake the gravel out of his sandals and get right after the man who dares to say a single solitary lonesome word against the fair name, and unsullied reputation of Medicine Hat. A man who, even to support his party, will never allow his prejduices against additional railways to interfere with his duty to his constituency. Such a man can be found in the Editor of The News, and from henceforth, now on, and following this the candidate of The Outlaw will be this august gentleman.

MANY RECEIVED READINGS

Wardells the well-known Palmists, Clairvoyants and Phrenologists, who have a suite of rooms in the Bell Block, had many callers last week, and these who had readings were all satisfied and received big value for their money. Wardells are the leading people in this mysterious profession and those who patronize them can be assured of receiving some surprises at the revelations they make.

REORGANIZATION OF A LAND COMPANY

Last week the F. M. Ginther Land Co. was reorganized, the new officers being F. M. Ginther, president; Curtis Hollinger, secretary-treasurer. The new company has taken an office in the building formerly occupied by D. G. White which has been tastily fitted up. The company will deal in farm lands, city property, insurance and loans.

Mr. Hollinger is also agent for the Red Cliffe Realty Co.

Both members of the firm are well-known business men of the city having wide business connections before forming the partnership, and the new firm will doubtless do a flourishing trade.

The last regular meeting of the Knox Young People's club was held at the home of Miss L. Best on 4th avenue. There was a good attendance and a profitable evening was spent. The chief feature of the evening was an address by Mr. J. Wilson on the Blackfoot Indians, with whom he spent 18 years in the capacity of agent for these people. He dwelt along the lines of their advance in industrial, moral and religious lines and was listened to with much interest. The next gathering of this club will be at the home of Mrs. MacDougall, Braemar Street when a literary meeting will be held. All young people welcome. At this meeting Mr. Simpson will give a talk on General Booth.

On Thursday afternoon a team belonging to a rancher of the district did the runaway stunt. They hit up Toronto Street at a lively gait struck off on the Macleod trail and out into the country. They were eventually caught and handed over to their owner by Dan Colter.

Was All Run Down. Weighed 125 Lbs. Now Weighs 185.

Mrs. M. McCann, Debec Junction, N.B., writes:—"I wish to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. Three years ago I was so run down I could not do my own work. I went to a doctor, and he told me I had heart trouble and that my nerves were all unstrung. I took his medicine, as he ordered me to do, but it did me no good. I then started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and had only taken one box before I started to feel better, so I continued their use until I had taken several boxes, and I am now strong and well, and able to do my own work. When I commenced taking your pills I weighed 125 pounds, and now weigh 185 and have given birth to a lovely young daughter, which was a happy thing in the family. When I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I could not go upstairs without resting before I got to the top. I can now go up without any trouble."

A Policy of Obstruction

The course adopted by Ald. Forster in the city council is not one calculated to serve the best interests of the city. No one doubts the worthy alderman's sincerity and the desire to render public service is commendable, but there is such a thing as mistaken zeal. The best work of the council can be done by harmonious co-operation of all the members, and each one accepting the place and working conscientiously in it, which has been assigned by the mature judgment of a majority of the council. The success of last year's council in handling the city's affairs, under the direction of the present mayor is a sufficient guarantee of his ability to assign members to a useful department of public service. No one has seen fit to question the details of administration in the committees on which Ald. Forster acts. Why should he take an attitude toward the work of other committees which no other alderman takes towards his? Is he the only one worthy of trust on the council board? Are the others such suspicious characters that they must be closely watched by this guardian of the taxpayers' interests? Let the alderman look through other spectacles for a while and see the situation from a new view-point.

Alberta Legislature

The speech from the throne read at the opening of the first session of the second legislature of Alberta announces only one important bill to come before the House viz. the Municipal Act.. In the creation of municipalities western Canada has an opportunity to place upon its statute books legislation which will be efficient without being cumbersome. It was stated by the Minister of Agriculture, when here last week, that the county system would not be introduced to this province. The older provinces of the Dominion have had an experience with it and none of them have found it any advantage. Each municipality will deal directly with the government instead of being grouped together in counties; and the government will administer such public utilities as jails, bridges, etc., which in the older provinces are looked after by county councils. Ontario has several times revised the machinery for the governing of counties and it is doubtful if she has found a satisfactory solution yet. About the best purpose a county serves is to fix the locations in various parts of the province in one's mind, being much simpler than remembering the names of all the municipalities. But in Alberta a better system prevails in our system of section, township and range, by which with a little calculation any point can be fixed in the mind's eye.

The county system is not needed here.

It is to be hoped that the government will open up the question of the guaranteeing of railway bonds this session. The attorney-general, when here last year, admitted that the project of the Southern Alberta Land Company is a reasonable one, and that the bonds ought to be guaranteed. It will be unfortunate if the government does not open up the subject this session, and a failure to do so will be another proof of its utter disregard of the claims of this constituency.

The Calgary Albertan says the city council held an aimless session at a very listless meeting. Calgary aldermen should hear Ald. Forster of the Hat liven things up.

We commend to the attention of the new Minister of Municipalities the condition of the road at Porter's Hill near Medicine Hat.

There were two rumors from the capital last week. One was that R. L. Borden would resign the leadership of the Conservative party; the other stated that the government would appeal to the country on the Navy Bill. One is about as probable as the other.

A NEW COMET!

Alderman Forster's" A. D. 1910

The sky round about the municipal horizon on the 7th inst., was greatly disturbed by the appearance of a new comet which after exploiting itself in various spasmodic stunts, ultimately faded away in a division of 4 to 3. Sic transit glori mundi. Alderman Forster is ambitious, but the council doesn't seem to be hungering after his services on the Finance Committee. Alderman Forster ought to take a trip over to the Old Country and get in touch with Lloyd-George, who will be having plenty of trouble with his budget in the new parliament and the Comet might be of invaluable assistance to the Chancellor as a Finance artist.

POLITICAL REFLECTIONS

(Mail and Empire)

The suggestion is made that if the Duke of Connaught should come as Governor-General Canada will want to make him king. This is a tribute to the Duke, for it shows that he will be popular. But Canada has one King—and with that soverign she is content, although Sir Wilfrid takes the ground that he is an outsider and can be deposed by a vote of Parliament.

When the Quebec bridge fell $8,000,000 worth of steel dropped into the St. Lawrence. Minister Graham now confesses that we have paid $8,000,000 for the steel, and that he has given the metal away along with $45,000 to the man who gets it. as a reward for his trouble in removing it. Just imagine a gift of $45,000 to accept steel that has cost $8,000,000.

CHEAP, DIRT CHEAP

(Winnipeg Telegram)

The coal mining town of Fernie in British Columbia was visited by a disastrous fire. Everybody came to Fernie's assistance including the government of Canada through its militia department which furnished tents and camp equipment. Now the militia department has sent a bill to the municipality of Fernie of $745 for the relief supplies furnished.

This bill has been rendered at precisely the same time that parliament voted, and very properly voted a substantial contribution to the relief of the suffering caused by the Paris flood. Yet, for its size, the destruction and loss in Fernie were just as great as in Paris. And for a Canadian town in dire misfortune the government acts as a usurer in salvage and assistance.

There are at least 745 men in western Canada who would cheerfully subscribe a dollar apiece to meet this bill if Fernie would permit them them to do so. But perhaps the best way to emphasize the character of such action would be for Fernie to immediately pay the bill and intimate that for the future it will battle through its own difficulties without becoming indebted to the Dominion government for assistance. This action might make the militia department appear as small as it is. It could not show it smaller.

Board of Trade

A largely attended and enthusiastic annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held on Tuesday evening in the city hall. President Stewart occupied the chair and expressed his pleasure at seeing so many of the business men of the city at the meeting. It showed what a Board of Trade can be when all get behind it. The minutes of last annual meeting were read and adopted.

The president in his annual report referred to the quiet but persistent work of the board during the year. He expressed the conviction that the energy and money expended in the face of adverse conditions will eventually bring the desired results.

Among other subjects discussed by your council and the joint committee of the city council and the board of trade we may mention the following: Regarding the Canadian Northern Railway; Interview by members of the city council and board with Provincial Government regarding railway extension in Southern Alberta; petition to Hon. Frank Oliver regarding the possibility of an irrigation project through various coulees south of the Saskatchewan River and emptying into the Seven Persons creek; long distance telephone; immigration hall; post office facilities; central land office; guaranteeing the bonds of the Southern Alberta Land Company's railway.

He urged upon the members the advisability of recognizing the fact that there are many young energetic men in the city when they made the selection of officers for the ensuing year.

On motion of W. Huckvale and E. J. Fewings the address was received and filed.

In the secretary's report that officer expressed his appreciation of the kindness and assistance rendered him by members of the board and citizens generally.

The following letters were received during the year from other points in Canada 831, from the United States 80, and from Great Britain and foreign countries 25; a total of 936. The total number of letters sent out were 1235; 1118 to other points of Canada, 92 to the United States, and 25 to Great Britain and foreign countries. Recieved and filed on motion of W. L. Tweed and C. S. Pingle.

The treasurer reported receipts during the year of $8476.61 and expenditures of $8,335.32, leaving a balance on hand of $141.29.

It was moved by Mr. Fewings, seconded by Mr. Burns and carried that the treasurer's report be adopted.

The election of officers for 1910 was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:

Hon. W. T. Finlay, Hon. Pres.
H. L. Tweed—President.
H. S. Ireland—1st Vice-Pres.
J. C. Beveridge—2nd Vice-Pres.
Chas. Pingle—3rd Vice-Pres.
F. G. Forster—Treasurer.
Council—A. P. Burns, W. Cousins, G. A. Cochrane, W. H. Turpin, Dr. O. Boyd, H. W. Ireland and G. W. Elliott.

The president, Mr. H. Tweed, in declaring the meeting open for discussion thanked the meeting for electing him to the presidency for the year, and said he anticipated a very successful season. It behooved them all to do their best for the prosperity of the city, and to encourage all prospective settlers to stay in the district. He thought if they went into the matter with this spirit, that the results for the year would be satisfactory.

Mr. W. G. Williams moved that a hearty vote of thanks be accorded to the retiring officers. Alderman Spencer in seconding said he was sure that every member of the board of trade council had done their best for the city. He was sure there would be great prosperity in the future. Sometimes we believed that the town is not going ahead fast enough. It is slow but sure and he would say that although they were moving with caution, Medicine Hat is in a sound financial condition. The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

Mr. Stewart expressed thanks saying he was very grateful for the expression of confidence. He thought the retiring council had laid a good foundation for successful results during the present year.

Mr. Hall (Secretary) mentioned the subject of the Southern Alberta Land Co.'s new line which he thought should be a matter for discussion by the meeting. Mr. MacGregor of that company was now in town and expected to be in Edmonton very soon.

Dr. Boyd brought forward the question of the present passenger service on the Crow's Nest Line. He said under the present system of running people living at Seven Persons found it much quicker to go to Lethbridge than to come to the Hat. He thought the matter should be brought to the notice of the C. P. R., so that arrangements could be made a special study of fencing and is convinced that heavy wire is the best and safest. He uses only that kind on his ranch. His fences are composed of two upper barbed wires and one lower plain one.

While the Peigan Creek Ranch is splendidly situated for ranching only a very small acreage is suitable for tillage distributed in small lots over the grant. In a manner this is fortunate for Mr. Cargill as he will never likely be molested by importunate landseekers. It is also of the greatest importance to the horse breeding industry in Alberta as Mr. Cargill it doing wonders for the improvement of stock by his careful, skilful and intelligent work.

The scarcity of hay led Mr. Cargill into the agricultural field and he has been experimenting with oats wheat and alfalfa with very encouraging results. He entered upon the work with his customary energy and ability and has demonstrated that he can grow all his own feed. A 5 acre field of oats, harvested in 1909, gave a splendid yield variously estimated at from 50 to 75 bushels per acre.

He has had had good luck with alfalfa and expects to grow it largely in the future. Mr. Cargill is a firm believer is the Campbell system of soil culture and has already proved its efficacy on his ranch.

This year he is making a most interesting experiment with fall oats. He had the seed out from the Old Country and sowed them in the same way as fall wheat, on summer fallow. They made a fine show ng in the fall and Mr. Cargill expects a big yield providing there are no late spring frosts. Good results will follow if this experiment, the first of the kind tries in the province, proves a success. A promising five acre field of wheat and an alfalfa field also look well.

Last year Mr. Cargill raised all kinds of garden vegetables in great profusion.

The P. C. R. is the most hospitable ranch known to your correspondent. The proprietor is a bachelor but is saved the many trials of that ilk by having his sister, Miss Margaret in charge of his household. Miss Cargill is a lady of great refinement and much travel and her presence brings all the comforts and conveniences of the city home to her brother's ranch. Mr. and Miss Cargill have been spending the past month in British Columbia. Mr. Cargill has returned but his sister will visit New York and London before returning in May. During Mr. Cargill's absence Herbert Patterson, foreman of the ranch was in charge.

The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence, and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and if you will only give it a trial we are sure it will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

Mrs. John Connors, Burlington, N.S., writes:—"I have been troubled with headache and constipation for a long time. After trying different doctors' medicine a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after having taken three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all."

The Calgary-Medicine Hat Debate

Look at the variety of important minerals we have in the west: gold, silver, copper, platinum and lead, while here in Alberta, sunny above but black below, we have enormous quantities of coal, which in fifty years to come, would be turning the wheels of industry and employing thousands of men. The Yukon in 25 years will be the mineral country of the world, without taking into consideration the present undeveloped wealth of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and the Peace River Country.

Let us turn to the east for a moment, said Mr. Brown. In 1907 the output of metals in Ontario was 14 million dollars worth but there was no gold and no coal. In that year Ontario imported and consumed ten million tons of coal for which she paid 26 million dollars. That province was certainly rich in iron ore but that was neutralized by the fact that those mines did not lie near the coal beds, while in British Columbia they do.

Are not the superior mineral resources a sufficient attraction for the immigrant to come here instead of settling in the east? Again there is the water question. It is estimated that there is water in the country to give 17 million horse power out of which the west could produce 18 millions. We have the agriculture, the great mineral wealth, the timber and raw material, and power both in water and coal. Are not all these things going to prove inducements? Where can you find a more magnificent climate than in western Canada? If you wanted it 40 below there was Manitoba, if you wanted the climate of California you had it n British Columbia, and if you wanted to be where the sun shines every day in the year you would stop here in Sunny Alberta. How does the eastern climate compare with this?

Then there is our productive land which is our best possession. The output per acre in Western Canada is more than anywhere else on the North American continent, and before very long we can produce two-thirds of the world's consumption of grain. He considered that the country between Medicine Hat and Calgary would be one of the most thickly populated parts on the Dominion in the next fifty years. He had read that evening in one of the leading financial papers that there were nearly 226 million dollars of American capital invested in Canada out of which 100 million were in timber and minerals in British Columbia.

In eastern Canada there were fewer milk cows, swine and sheep in Ontario this last ten years but more horses, while the decrease in butter is enormous. Where has it gone? The answer is simple, the land is not producing as much as it was 10 years ago.

The immigrants will not settle in the east where everything was now developed but would make for the west where there are greater possibilities.

Mr. Brown showed good oratorical power in his address, and presented his arguments well.

The leader of the negative was Mr. E. A. Willamson (Calgary) who said he had not time for the usual felicitations but would plunge at once into the subject of debate. He knew he was on the unpopular side and that they were all filled with optimism at the pleasing picture in their minds. He proposed however, to meet Mr. Brown's arguments with cold facts and would ask the judges to be satisfied with the statistics which he would place befors them, and would take for an example the great Republic to the south. Mr. Brown had spoken in generalities. In the United States the population 50 years ago was 25 millions, at the present day it is 80 millions, less the 20 millions of which are immigrants, so that three quarters of the increase are natural born American citizens. Of this 80 millions 56 are in the eastern United Staes and 24 in the western, but he would point out in regard to Canada that the Yukon and Mackenzie districts were practically unhabitable, while eastern Canada is in advance of the eastern United States for supporting a large population. Eastern Canada was far from being over populated, for comparison the western peninsula in Ontario, the most thickly populated part of Canada had 100 persons to the square mile while Massachusetts averaged 350 per square mile.

With regard to the great natural resources of the west, the country depended principally upon agriculture which was not an argument for a dense population. For example in the state of Mass. the rural population had increased only two and a half per cent. since 1860 as compared with 76 per cent urban. Eastern Canada had already started with an immense advantage in the race for people. Both in the U. S. and Canada immigrants came east and had a tendency to remain where they first landed. The manufacturing industries of the east were the support of the population, and the faster the west grew the faster will cities dependent on manufactures grow. In parts of Ontario owing to intensive farming ten acres today will support a greater farming population than 100 acres did a few years ago.

Dealing with the water question Mr Williamson said that under the St. Lawrence system the east would have the cheapest power on earth, and it would be a very long day before western Canada had their own manufacturing industries. With regard to timber, Quebec had 60 billion feet of timber and in 1900 Nova Scotia had 75 million acres unappropriated crown lands. In the east they had cheap transportation which they had not got in the west. They had coal enough in Nova Scotia to supply Canada east and west for the next 50 years, so they did not need coal from the west because that product was far from exhausted in the east. He did not attach much importance to the climate. Where aman made a good living he was not going to worry about the climate, he would live in the fogs of Newfoundland as well as in Sunny Alberta.

If the butter exports had diminished there were a number of reasons for it. Perhaps they had run short in Alberta.

It was the natural course of events in his judgment from experience from the past that eastern Canada would be greater in population in 50 years than the west....

Mr. C. Sansom (Medicine Hat) debating for the affirmative said that the population of the west had increased during the last eight years 150 per cent while in the east the increase was only 15 per cent. There was no reason to suppose that immigration would decrease so that on this basis in 1960 the west will have the far great number of people. Then there was the moving population from east to western Canada, and they must not forget that for every one they added in that way they took one from the east. Was there any reason to suppose that they would decrease? On the contrary people would come in accelerated numbers. Some part of the country suffered from emigration but did they read of that in Western Canada? No, the people moved from the east and they were "quitters" and when they came to the west they quit moving. In 1907 the immigrated population of the west was 1-26th of the estimated population at present, while the immigrated population of the United States at its highest was only 1-78th of its population for that year. The people of the western States come into western Canada under the most pleasant conditions as compared with the conditions when people migrated to the western States where lawlessness was rampant. With regard to the great natural increase western Canada is holding her population which eastern Canada has never been able to do. Boston and the eastern States is the Mecca far New Brunswick. Turning again to industries, there are 184 manufacturies in Winnipeg alone which employed 13,000 people and of the 31 manufacturing companies incorporated last year 31 decided to establish themselves in that city. Does this show we will not have industries? With regard to transportation, the C. P. R. is advertising tremendously in the States and offering great facilities for the settlers to come west not east. The Hudson Bay appropriation is going to be voted this session which will shorten communication with Europe by upwards of 1000 miles compared with Montreal or New York. There was no question to his mind as to which would have the greater population in 1960.

J. W. Verge (Calgary) in support of the negative, said until a thing was proved it was disproved, and that Medicine Hat had not said anything to prove their case, neither could they do so. The time might come when the west would be more densely populated than the east but it would not be in 1960. He must deal with facts and must draw conclusions, that there would be little happen in the future that has not happened in the past. With regard to immigration, the east was the great gateway of immigration and would be for some time to come. Eastern Canada would absorb most of its immigrants coming into the Dominion. Quoting from Blue books he said that in 1908 the east showed a preponderance over the west of 51,712 immigrants or about 42 per cent. of the whole. How long would it take the west to pull down the surplus population of the east of five million people. The United States was the only precedent they could take and that shattered the argument for the west. Of the natural born population the east showed 90 per cent increase and the west only 60 per cent. and the latter included settlers who had come from the east He refuted the statements of Mr. Sansom with regard to manufactures no manufactures of any importance had yet taken place in western Canada or were likely to for years to come. With regard to natural resources, had they forgotten the rich Cobalt mines, and the big pulp mill the Harmsworth company of England were starting in Newfoundland, which everyone agreed would soon become part of the Dominion. Newfoundland also had the largest fishing fleet in the world. He submitted the resolution had not been proved.

Mr. Brown in reply dealt with the various arguments raised by his opponents and said in conclusion that with regard to immigration they had seemed to have forgotten the gate of the Pacific which everyone admitted was the coast of the future.

The judges then retired and on returning Mr. C. J. Wilson announced that with regard to oratory they had decided in favor of the affirmative (Medicine Hat). They considered that they presented their facts better, had better arrangement of material and that in point of argument they had slightly the advantage. The decision accorhingly lay with the affirmative.

Mr. Williamsen (Calgary) said he had no fault to find with the decision, he had come to give a good square fight, and was perfectly satisfied they had been defeated.

The meeting concluded with the singing of "God Save the King."

Board of Trade

made fos trains from the city to stop at all points. The president in reply said Dr. Boyd's proposal was a good one and the matter would be taken up with Superintendent Taylor.

A long discussion then followed on the Southern Alberta Land Co's scheme. On the motion of Alderman Howson the president appointed Mayor Milne, Mr. Huckvale and Mr. Stewart as a committee to wait on Mr McGregor in order to make arrangements for a joint committee of the council and the board of trade to go with him to Edmonton to wait on the government for the purpose of urging the guarantee of the bonds of the railroad.

The following resolution was proposed by Mr. Huckvale, seconded by Mr. Stewart and carried.

WHEREAS it is the intention of the Southern Alberta Railroad company to construct a line of railway having its terminals at Medicine Hat and Calgary and to operate in and through that portion of Southern Alberta lying mainly between the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway company and the Little Bow river.

AND WHEREAS petitions have been largely signed by actual settlers living in the above mentioned country, urging the necessity of railroad facilities;

AND WHEREAS it being the enunciated policy of the government of Alberta to guarantee the bonds of railroads which are urgently needed throughout the country.

THEREFORE be it resolved by this annual meeting of the Medicine Hat Board of Trade that the government be urged to give the request of the Southern Alberta Railroad Company for a guarantee of their bonds, their most favorable consideration.

Carried.

Mr. W. T. Williams asked the secretary if anything was being done in the way of getting a land office in the city.

The secretary replied that he was at present in correspondence with the Minister of Interior on the subject. The president said that he considered the establishment of a land office in the city a most important matter and it would be taken up strongly.

Mr. J. T. Bell asked what had been done in regard to an Immigration Hall.

The Secretary replied that that question was also under correspondence with the Minister of Interior.

On the motion of Alderman Howson the meeting then adjourned.

ECZEMA

"For three long months I was not able to attend to my own needs; and for three weeks the eczema on my hands was so bad that I was unable to feed myself. I had to be fed as one feeds a baby, because I could not hold knife, fork, spoon or cup."

So says Miss Violet McSorley, of 75 Gore Street, Sault Ste. Marie, in telling how Zam-Buk cured her of eczema. She adds: "Hands, wrists and arms up to the elbows were covered with eczema. The itching and the soreness were nigh unbearable. As the disease developed, the skin actually peeled off, leaving raw sores. The palms, fingers, backs of my hands and wrists were all in this shocking state, and I was forced to sit in agony all the while. The raw sores were soon in a foul condition, and my finger nails, all except two, fell off. During the different stages of my trouble, I sought the advice of three different doctors and received treatment, but although getting slight relief at first, there was no cure. Amputation was at one time thought necessary, but the timely introduction of Zam-Buk prevented this fearful ending.

"Zam-Buk was recommended by a friend and we bought a supply. The first few applications gave me a little ease, but it was not until I had continued with it for some time that I felt a decided improvement. After that my cure went on quickly. Zam-Buk did what everything else had failed to do. Now my hands and arms are quite freed from the terrible eczema."

HOW ZAM-BUK IS SUPERIOR

Zam-Buk is entirely different to other balms, and as superior as it is different. Most salves are nine-tenths animal oil or fat. Zam-Buk hasn't a trace of animal fat in it. Most salves contain mineral coloring matter. Zam-Buk is absolutely without! Many salves contain poisonous antiseptics. Zam-Buk doesn't. Zam-Buk is actually more powerfully antiseptic than crude carbolic acid. Yet it stops, instead of causing smarting when put on a wound.

ZAM-BUK'S MANY USES

Zam-Buk heals more quickly than any other known preparation: eczema, ulcers, piles, bad leg, rashes, ringworm, festering sores, cuts, bruises, burns, scalds, stiffness, poisoned wounds, face and lip sores, chapped hands, cold sores, etc. Best balm for baby's skin sores! Used as an embrocation, it cures rheumatism, sciatica, etc. All druggists and stores 50c box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Mock Parliament

The third session of the Mock Parliament was held at the Young Men's Club on Friday evening the 11th inst.

The speaker took the chair at 8 o'clock.

Mr. MacCourt and Mr. John McDonald took their seats on the government side. Messrs. Stanley and Andrews on the opposition as new members.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. T. Bannon) introduced a bill to adjust salaries of the House by reducing those of the Opposition members by 25 per cent, which was read a first time.

The Minister of Railways (Mr. W. G. Raby) gave notice of the introduction of a bill for the creation of national theatres.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Sansom) then moved the second reading of the Tariff Bill, which was seconded and carried.

The House then went into committee of the whole the speaker being appointed as chairman of the committee.

Mr. Sansom then referred to the magnitude of the task before him. The time at his disposal was utterly inadequate to do justice to the merits of the bill. He said that under the present fiscal system the people have to pay enhanced prices for the necessaries of life, and the farmer for agricultural implements. By this bill the Government proposed to do away with the taxes on imported goods of this description retaining the taxes on luxuries only, and it was decided to raise the necessary revenue by creating a single tax on land values. This would do away with the speculative dealing in land, at present prevalent, especially in the west, and enable those who wisheh to obtain land to do so at reasonable prices. It would also add to the increase of the population.

Mr. Hoffman (Nanaimo) apposed the measure in a lengthy speech. He said that this bill would hit the farmer, who creates the wealth of the Dominion. Protection in a farming country like this was necessary to keep out foreign competition. He ridiculed the idea of a tax on land values. The idea of a tax on land values saying that it would frighten the settler. At the present time everybody could get land at a reasonable price.

The Minister of Militia (Mr. Graham) defended the government's policy and quoted from the present condition of things in the Mother country, saying that the high rents that were at present being extorted from the middle classes of the country was but a prelude of what was to come. A single tax on land values would remedy that evil.

Mr. Pentland in opposing the Bill said the Government seemed extremely anxious to help the farmer. They, however, proposed to do this by reducing the price of his implements and doubling the tax on his land.

The Premier (Mr. Bryenton) said the government's action would do an immense amount of good to the country at large. The present high cost of clothing and the necessities were a great headship to the people, while the tax on land values would do away with the great evil of speculation in agricultural land which was now going on with enormous vigor.

He proposed, however, at that late hour to defer any further remarks until next sitting and moved the adjournment of the house.

The debate was then adjourned.

High School Defeats Calgary Tigers

Before some 350 spectators on Friday evening, the High School hockey team avenged the defeats handed out to them, in Calgary, a couple of weeks ago. The ice was in perfect condition and from start to finish there was nothing but exciting dashes and skilful checks. With the exception of the time when some clever stick-handler, who wanted a rest, succeeded in balancing the puck on one of the rafters of the rink, there was but little time wasted, off-sides being few and far between. C. S. Pingle acted as referee and gave satisfaction to victors and vanquished. He knew the game and it was played as we would always like to see it—clean, from beginning to end. There was quite a little heavy body-checking but the absence of dirty stick and skate work made the game interesting to the spectatars.

Combination play was lacking on both sides, but individual rushes were numerous and pretty stick work and fast skating were much in evidence.

For Calgary Dows starred, and although handicapped, as he undoubtedly was, by the smallness of the rink, showed that given sufficient elbow room he would have proved a tough customer and just a little too good for the class he is playing in. From start to finish he played the game and when the whistle blew for time he was going as strong as when he started. He is a good stick-handler, a fast skater and possesses that which is perhaps the most necessary thing of all—a cool head and an eye for chances. Gill and Cudlip both played well for the visitors; the former doing much, at point, to save them from a worse defeat.

For the home team Porter was undoubtedly the best all round man, and did considerably more than his share. He has speed in plenty and time and time again ran through the Tigers as if they had been caged. He handles his stick well and has grit enough to carry him into any class. Colter and Wilson also played well for the High School, both doing their full share.

Helmer, the Calgary goal, and Dalton, the Medicine Hat goal, made many brilliant saves and did much to stop the scores going higher. Helmer was cool all through and it seemed impossible to get him rattled. Dalton, after having been tumbled over is a scrum around his goal managed, just in time, to shoot out that big glove of his and succeeded in steering the puck from the direction of the goal into the far corner for his save drawing much applause from the spectators.

During the first half the play was very even and all through it was easy to be seen that the size of the rink was handicapping the visitors. It was not until after 10 minutes hard play that the first goal was scored by Roach of Calgary by a combination with Cudlip. Eight minutes later Porter received a pass from Wilson and evened matters up. Then before the crowd had got through cheering for his last goal Porter got the puck again, made a dash and scored, placing us one up on Calgary, all under 1 minute. Six minutes more of strenuous play ensued then Colter took a flying shot from extreme right placing the puck in between Helmer's feet, Wilson making a dash from left settled what might have been a doubtful goal.

Half-time, 3—1, favor of the Hat.

In the second half Calgary again scored the first goal this time Dowd being the successful operator by a pass from Cudlip—4 minutes.

Then the High School boys struck their gait and had things, for the rest of the game, their own way. After ten minutes the scoring started in earnest. Roy Wilson passed to Colter who shot, the puck struck Gill and slid to Barreau who did the correct thing, making the score 4—2.

Three minutes later Fallow's, who spent most of his time taking long shots, got one home; 5—2.

Barreau scored again this time by pass from Cory, 2 minutes.

Here Gill and Colter got a couple of minutes in which to decorate and meditate, for too heavy body checking and came back smiling, refreshed and wiser; just in time to take part in the final fireworks. On this occasion Wilson did the trick, six minutes later, 7—2.

The line up was as follows:

High School		Tigers
Dalton	goal	Helmer
Fallows	point	Gill
Cory	cover	Roach
Porter	rover	McDonald
Barreau	centre	Cudlip
Colter	right	Scott
Wilson	left	Dowd

The High School team entertained their visitors to an oyster supper a little later and there the battle was re-fought and the best of good fellowship prevailed.

A highly exaggerated report appeared in the Lethbridge and Calgary papers last week about a commotion in St. John's church on Sunday evening Feb. 6th, caused by the fainting of Mrs. Sharp. The incident was trifling as Mrs. Sharp was only overcome by the heat and lack of ventilation but soon recovered. She was not taken to the hospital as stated in the reports.

Miss Ruby Kennedy, who left on today's train for Vancouver, B. C., was the recipient of two pleasant surprises before her departure. On Thursday evening a number of young people from Century Methodist church made an unexpected call on her and presented her with a Bible. Miss Kennedy has been an energetic worker in the Epworth league. Her many friends took that opportunity of showing their appreciation of her labors.

On Friday afternoon, the pupils of the Toronto Street school (annex) presented her with a valuable umbrella as a token of the esteem in which they held her as teacher.

CARLSTADT

D. E. Patterson of the Hat has been placed in charge of the branch of the Union bank here; at present the office is open every day waiting instructions from the head office as to the best days of the week to remain open.

The dance in the hall last Friday was not as well attended as the previous ones but it is thought the reason for this is that the dances are held too frequently; they speak of arranging for another next Friday.

Business is very brisk for Mr. J W. Wise at the coal mine. He has at present five men working in the mine and the coal appears to be of good quality.

Mrs. J. J. Gardilla has returned from the Hat and is now out on the homestead with her husband.

Mr. Winter of the Hat is here and is working on the gas well, the men are busy now laying the pipes into the section house and it is reported that the station also will be lighted by it shortly. It looks as if an agent is coming at last. Up to the present this gas well has been unworked and it always seemed a shame to see it wasting.

Mr. J. Bussard, our new restaurant proprietor opened up his large building last week and with a rushing business, quite beyond his expectations. They have four tables, a counter and a private dining room; also five rooms and a hall upstairs. Meals are served at all hours and everything to suit the epicurian taste. It is said that Mr. Bussard is an excellent cook and understands his business.

Mr. H. Morrow was in town last week and seems pleased that he has opened up his general store here.

Mr. J. B. Gray, who has a general store out on his homestead is very much pleased over his new well, there is 90 foot of good water, he will be able to supply his neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. McDiarmid were down at the Hat last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Mansuicid of Bowell, were in town last week on business.

Mr. Findlay, of the Hat, was in town last week.

Mr. J. Bzelland drove home from the Hat one day last week with two fine horses which he purchased there, he secured a third one but did not bring it home.

Mr. J. H. Gasson has just received his car load of farm implements and wagons and has them unloaded by his store.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Radke and family have returned from the Hat and intend going out to their homestead shortly. Mr. Radke bought a large number of chickens with him.

A great many new settlers arrived on Thursday by the midnight train, the two restaurants were full and over flowing, many sleeping on the floors others were obliged to sit up all night.

WHITLA

The dance was given for the benefit of the Whitla Base Ball Club was a grand success, everybody having a good time. The boys are figuring on a pretty fast team this year Their new uniforms will be maroon trimmed with white.

Mr. Jacob Leinhart went to Medicine Hgt Tuesday evening on business.

The C. P. R. are putting in a loading platform here which has been needed for a long time.

There will be a dance at Bow Island on Monday evening, Feb. 14th, for the benefit of the Bow Island baseball club.

There is quite a large settlement around Minda and many settlers who had to go to Eagle Butte and Seven Persons will henceforth get their mail at Minda.

VALENTINES

A successful inovation was introduced into the routine of Montreal Street school for Valentine Day. A large box was placed in the hall which the scholars were invited to use for the mailing of valentines to one another. A GREAT TREAT

Ralph Connor's new story "The Foreigner," has been bought by the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal and publication will begin in two or three weeks. Ralph Connor's former stories "The Doctor," "The Prospector," "The Man from Glengarry," and others have made him famous as a story writer, and "The Foreigner" is regarded by many as his best. It is a thrilling story of the Canadian West. It is said that the price was the biggest by far ever paid for a serial story. It will be a great treat to the readers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star and those who become subscribers to that great weekly during the next two weeks will be in time for the opening chapter. The beautiful picture "The Soul's Awakening" is still offered as a premium. The combination is the biggest dollar's worth in the market today.
