CHAPTER XXIV.

"Yes, Sir Charles; quite suddenly, I believe, as his lordship hasn't been well for some time. I can't say exactly where, but I know that the idea is to winter abroad."

Sir Charles was upon the point of asking some question, when he detected an inquisitive look upon the face of the lackey, and, thanking him instead, for the information supplied, he took his leave.

Completely dazed by the news, he walked through the magnificent avenue of limes, and made his way to the old hostelry, where he was known, for there was no train back to Emden for two or three hours.

When within a dozen yards of the hotel, a carriage swept in view round a curve in the road; the horses were pulled up with a jerk, and he heard his name pronounced in tones of real pleasure.

"Sir Charles Hastings!"

There was no mistaking those silvery notes, and in one moment he found himself pressing the dainty fingers of Ada Craythorne.

"This is a pleasant surprise!" she continued, bestowing upon him one of her most bewitching glances. "I am so glad that I saw you, as the hired carriages are wretched conveyances, and I am sure that you were coming to see mamma!"

Sir Charles had not given the Craythornes a thought, but he stepped into the carriage as Ada made room for him, and the coachman drove on.

He was surprised that Ada should treat him so kindly, and the sweet glances from her bright eyes rather bewildered him. Of course, his story had reached them. He was determined to be received nowhere under false pretences again.

"I was unfortunate in being away from Emden when Lady Craythorne called some time ago," he observed. "And my mother was too ill to receive visitors."

"We were not very much disappointed," Miss Craythorne replied, "for you had taken care to warn us. Do you remember?"

"Yes," he replied, absently; then he continued: "I have not been able to return the call, owing to an old trouble of mine turning up again."

He stammered a little, and his eyes dropped before her sympathetic gaze.

"I know," she responded, gently. "We read something about it in the papers—and—and—the Horleys told mamma a great deal about it."

"Yes."

He smiled bitterly.

"I am so sorry for you, Sir Charles. I always felt that you had seen some great sorrow. How noble of you to help Lady Hastings—your mother—as you did! But is it true—I want to ask you this particularly—is it true that you married this woman without even speaking to her, or even looking at her?"

"It is quite true," replied Sir Charles. "I should not know her if I met her face to face. I believe that she has black eyes. That is all I remember."

"It was an awful sacrifice."

"It was—a sacrifice that I never fully realized until now."

She glanced at him tenderly, and he felt that her sympathy was very sweet. There could be no danger—no wrong now—in her companionship. She knew his pitiful history. He felt drawn toward her almost insensibly, and wished that he had a sister like her. He believed now that the hard thoughts he had had of her were without foundation, and caused merely by his own vanity, and the insinuations of Lord Cecil Stanhope.

"But you will never acknowledge her?" continued Ada. "It would be too dreadful. The law will not acknowledge such a marriage!"

"I do not care to air my grievances in public," he said, with a faint smile. "We cannot get rid of such incumbrances in England without the objectionable routine of the divorce court and its terrible obligations. I only want to be free of her presence. What woman would care to link her fair fame with that of a man who had been divorced?"

"Any woman who truly loved that man—under the same circumstances as yours."

She spoke excitedly, then passed with a vivid blush; but he did not see it; he was looking before him, and her words sounded in his ears as though from afar. He did not even feel the full force of their import until some hours later.

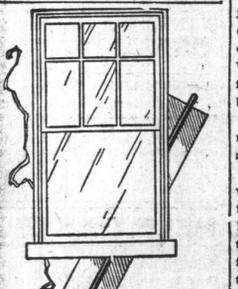

"I hear that Lord Howard and family are to winter abroad," he said presently. His heart leaped into his throat, for he expected that their movements had been made known to the Craythornes.

"Yes," replied Ada. "Rather early to go away, is it not? There appears to have been a great deal of illness at the Abbey. First Lady Marcia, then the earl; and, though Lady Gladys has not quite broken down, she has grown thin and pale. Of course you have heard of her engagement to Lord Stanhope? It was not of a surprise to most people, but I did not think Gladys cared for him one little bit."

Hastings feared that his brain was reeling, but he recovered himself by an effort, saying:

"Is the wedding arranged; an early one, I suppose?"

"Oh, no! Lady Gladys would not agree to it. She will not be married until next June. She wishes to have one London season unfettered." Ada laughed merrily, and just then the carriage turned into the drive.

possessed on earth at that moment to be alone, but it was quite impossible. The vehicle pulled up; there was a rush of feet, and Lady Craythorne and Flossie were greeting him effusively, though they failed to disguise the astonishment they experienced upon seeing who was Ada's companion.

He talked to them, he dined with them, though he could never tell how he did it, for there was only one thought in his brain, one constantly recurring thought.

"It is true! Gladys is false to me!" It rang in his mind like a knell of doom; it never varied, but boomed.

"It is true! Gladys is false to me!" He recklessly accepted another invitation, and begged the Craythornes to visit Lady Hastings. His mother was always regretting that she had been unable to receive them when they came so unexpectedly before.

Before he left for the station Ada whispered to him:

"You know how sorry I am for you, Sir Charles. If you ever want a friend, I am ready to serve you. Sometimes a woman can be of great use."

He did not notice her impassioned tones—he did not see the fire in her smouldering eyes, and replied:

"Your sympathy is pleasant, Miss Craythorne. It is more than kind of you, and I shall never forget it. It proves to me that all women are not wicked and false."

It was a foolish speech, and she can be pardoned for misinterpreting it, but his heart was filled with bitterness.

When he was gone, Ada Craythorne kissed a flower that his hand had touched, and sobbed for very gladness. She believed that he had loved her for weeks, but had not dared to speak of it, because of that woman!

CHAPTER XXV.

A week passed, and Hastings received a letter postmarked Paris. Without glancing further, he knew who it was from, and laid it on one side with a throbbing heart. But for the presence of his mother, he would have pressed the dear handwriting to his lips.

"I never hear you speak of Lord Cecil Stanhope now," Lady Hastings observed to her son.

"No," he said, his brow darkening. "We were never close friends, and have very little in common. I do not like Lord Stanhope, mother."

She was looking at him with anxious interest. This occurred daily after the arrival of the post bag, and every letter terrified her.

"No, there is nothing from Lupus," went on Sir Charles. "I cannot understand his inattention to business, and will run up to town to see him to-day. It is four days since I wrote him."

He was silent a moment, a wild hope in his heart.

"I have only his word that the creature is in England, and meditates making scandal, and I confess that I dislike and distrust the man. He may have some ugly scheme in his brain to make money out of me. These low-class lawyers are all alike!"

Ten Thousand Guests Entertained --- John Bracken, Farmer-Premier of Manitoba --- Free State Troops Occupy Limerick.

ROYAL GARDEN PARTY AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE, LONDON, July 21.

London's social season reached a climax this afternoon with a Royal Garden Party, the largest ever held at Buckingham Palace. About ten thousand guests were present. All classes were represented, including statesmen, diplomats, bishops, dukes, field marshals, admirals, labor leaders, actresses, artists and scientists. King George and Queen Mary walked about mingling with the guests.

NORTHCLIFFE'S CONDITION, LONDON, July 21.

Lord Northcliffe's condition continues a cause of grave anxiety. The fever remains unabated and the heart action is considerably impaired.

RESULT OF MANITOBA ELECTIONS, WINNIPEG, July 21.

With the completion of the election count in Winnipeg, the standing of the parties in the Manitoba Legislature shows United Farmers 24, Progressives 1, Independents 8, Liberals 7, Conservatives 6, Labor 6, Deferred 3, total 55.

MANITOBA'S NEW PREMIER, WINNIPEG, July 21.

John Bracken, age 39, native of Ontario, graduate of the Guelph Agricultural College and for some years Principal of the Manitoba Agricultural College, is to be the next Premier of Manitoba. He was the choice, unanimously it is understood, of the United Farmers, the members elect of the Legislature, as their political leader, and the post carried with it automatically the succession as Prime Minister. Mr. Bracken was not a candidate in the election. He has taken no active part in public life and has not been identified with the farmers' political movement. Mr. Bracken is a Canadian by birth and from generations of farmer stock.

FREE STATERS TAKE LIMERICK, DUBLIN, July 21.

Limerick is completely in possession of Free State troops, it is officially announced. The Free Staters also occupied Tullamore.

PREPARING THE WAY, OTTAWA, July 21.

Another step was taken in preparation for the reorganization of the Government Railways when the Minister of Railways to-day received the resignations of most of the members of the Grand Trunk. The resignations received are those of Sir Joseph Flavelle, H. G. Kelley and A. J. Mitchell. The resignations of J. N. Dupuis and E. L. Newcomb are expected. The resignations of the Directors of the Grand Trunk like those of the Canadian National, do not take effect immediately.

RUSSIAN RELIEF, BERLIN, July 21.

The world has devoted 247,000,000 gold rubles to the relief of Russian famine. Russia herself having contributed 170,000,000 of that amount, according to a bulletin issued by the Famine Relief Commission of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee. United States aid is given as $35,910,000 or 69,840,000 gold rubles, whilst the British total exceeded 25,000,000 gold rubles.

Child Welfare.

IF BABY COULD TALK, HE WOULD SAY:—

Do not kiss me on the mouth.
Do not let the sun shine in my eyes nor the wind fill them with dust.
Do not sneeze or cough in my face, for I may take cold; and that would be bad for me.
Do not expose me to whooping cough or measles or other catching diseases, or I may get sick and die.
Do not pick me up by the arms.
Be careful how you handle me and lay me down.
Do not give me candy or other things that are not good for me.
Do not give me a dirty comforter to suck nor allow me to suck my thumb, for it will spoil the shape of my mouth.
Do not rock me to sleep nor teach me other bad habits.
Do not take me to the movies nor keep me up at night; it robs me of my sleep and makes me cross.
Do not dose me with patent medicines or nasty mixtures.
Do not give me coffee or tea, for I want to keep well.
Do not jolt me or trot me on your knee when I cry.
I want the right things to eat and I want my meals on time.
I want some pure cold water to drink between my meals, for I get very thirsty.
I want a bath and plenty of clean clothes.
I want my own bed; I want the windows open and plenty of time for sleep, for I must have it in order to grow.
I want to be taken out of doors for the fresh air.
I want mother to love me and always be gentle with me.
I want to be a good baby.
A mother is only an ordinary woman, and yet she needs the love of Jacob, the patience of Joseph and the firmness of Daniel.

She is always busy, being a mother. If the new schemes at foot, from which we hope so much, are to be successful, that important factor in the whole matter, the mother must be the first consideration. The mother does not exist for the municipality, the medical or the nurse; they exist for her, and they must remember it.

A NATIONAL DISASTER.
It was formally believed that the rate of mortality among children who had not reached the first anniversary of their birth was a wise dispensation of nature, intended to prevent children with a weak constitution becoming too plentiful. To-day we know that a great infant mortality is a national disaster. On the other hand because numerous economic values are created without purpose and permanently destroyed, and on the other because the causes of the high rate of infant mortality affects the powers of resistance of the other infants and weakens the strength of the nation in the next generation.

SUMMER DIARRHOEA.
It is easier to prevent sickness than to cure it. Proper treatment at the beginning of an attack is worth more than many days treatment later. The important means of preventing summer diarrhoea begins:—
1. Boil all milk in summer.
2. Dilute the baby's food in very hot weather.
3. Stop the food at once if an acute diarrhoea begins.
If the movements become loose and two or three a day, do not neglect it because the baby happens to be teething. It may mean the beginning of a serious illness.
Dilute the food with an equal amount of boiled water and give less than the usual amount at feeding.
If the movements are more frequent and there is vomiting or fever stop all food and give baby boiled water, and call a doctor at once.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—I notice scurrilous abusive article printed in the "Advocate" as an answer to W. A. Munn. This was no answer to the arguments that I used in my letter published by you, and no respectable newspaper would print such trash over an assumed name. What I said, I have said, and am prepared to stand by it, and I fear the proof will come all too soon this fall.
Yours truly,
W. A. MUNN.

In the Realms of Sport.

THE B.L.S. BASEBALLERS.
 Sometimes may look weak and worn, but when the "wolves" set their teeth, they are hard to pry them loose.

The copious downpour prevented the night's football clash between the B.L.S. and C.E.I. It must now remain until the end of the season.

Four aces and a king may not be a hand that rocks the cradle but certainly a rocky hand to get up against—aint it, Bat?

One of the strange things about the B.L.S. Wanderers "set to" at Mount St. John's on Wednesday for the Relegation Cup is that both teams say they expect to win.

Looks as if somebody is gonna be disappointed.

The C.L.B. are having their annual sports day on August 15th.

Everybody will be sorry to hear that Fred Phelan is off the field for this season. Dr. Grievie is sending him to Sudbury on Monday for treatment for a severe fluid sac on his right leg.

After all you might call the C.E.I. the foundation of the League. All the boys teams stand on them.

Messrs. Thos. Curran and Ml. O'Gara are the stewards of the course the Mount Cashel Derby, and unless should be made to them so that various heats can be arranged to everybody's satisfaction.

That baddy annual—the eligibility mercantile and football crews—on again. Surely after all these years of bickering it must be apparent to the Regatta Committee that the rules must be more clearly defined, the old days mercantile crews was office hands, but now packers, shippers and storehands can be rattled through as amateurs. A team that is headed for the cockpit in the football league has nothing to lose by playing crack oarsmen where as up for championship honors aren't take chances on playing ducks.

Answers—The half mile Newfoundland record is held by Joe Green, now of Bell Island, who clipped it off some years ago in 1:15.

There will be only two games of football next week—the B.L.S. and Highlanders on Monday, and the Guards and Stars on Friday. The following is the standing of the teams to date:

Team	P.	W.	L.	D.	F.A.	Pts.
Cadets	6	4	0	3	14	316
B. I. S.	4	3	0	0	11	127
Felldans	5	3	2	0	11	124
W.M. H.	3	2	1	0	4	14
Star	3	1	1	1	3	53
Guard	4	1	3	0	4	2
C.L.B.	5	1	4	0	6	17
Saints	3	1	2	0	3	2
C.E.I.	3	0	3	0	0	0

Andy Cluston, the Captain of the Wanderers, is out of the game for keeps. One of the small bones in his ankle is broken. Too bad, just as the boys are hitting their stride.

If you would learn some language that you never learned before, Don't bother with these teachers full of foreign words and phrases: Go out to Bally Haly.

Out the town two mile or more, And hearken to Duke Winter. When his anguished eyes he raises, Just in time to see the shot he tops. Go diving in a trap.

To get a 3. You may perhaps have thought of him As quite a silent chap. But he'll teach you more new language Than you ever knew could be.

John Murray Anderson, creator of the Greenwich Village Follies, New York, has written J. R. Smallwood as follows:
 My dear Mr. Smallwood:
 I am interested to hear that some one has been entertaining enough to bring Newfoundland by means of a cinematograph and I hope you will find abundant backing in your making. In a country which has much romance and interest associated with it, you should have no trouble in getting a theme for a good story. So far as I know, none has been attempted before—that is, the form of a picture with a contented story. Worked out by people with experience, and in the right way, there is no reason why such a picture should not prove successful and its way to all countries where picture-pictures are exhibited. Thus your efforts not only be rewarded financially but Newfoundland would gain indirectly by this means of publicity. I wish you and your associates every success in the future.
 Sincerely,
 JOHN MURRAY ANDERSON."

Trapping Tigers With Bird Lime.

ARTIFEL TRICKS TO CATCH WILD ANIMALS.
 The idea that a hunter could trap wild animals with no other aid than bird-lime seems ridiculous, yet this is the favorite method adopted by natives of Sumatra, in the East Indies.
 The bird-lime is made from the gum of trees. In catching tigers or elephants the hunter spreads the lime where the animals will pass, and covers it with leaves. When a "cat" animal puts his foot in the gum he does not attempt to run away, but tries to bite the stuff from his feet, and then gets it on his face.
 As he tries to rub it off he plasters it over his eyes, and when he is thoroughly covered with it he is so helpless that he can be caged without much trouble. He spends weeks of his captivity in trying to remove the lime from his fur.
 Monkeys are captured in bird-lime smeared on the limbs of trees, but another way of catching small specimens is by means of a sweetened rag in a bottle.
 The bottle is covered with green rattan and tied to a tree. The monkey puts his hand through the neck and grabs the rag. He cannot pull his hand out while it is doubled up with the rag in it, and he hasn't enough sense to release his hold. He fights with the bottle until the arrival of the hunter, who presses the nerves in the animal's elbow and forces him to open his hand and leave the rag for the next monkey.

 NEW YORK, July 21.
 New York prohibition officials have forwarded briefs against fifteen British vessels, charging rum running from the Bahamas to a fleet of small craft in American waters, and demand that the British Government effect punishment of officers and crews of such vessels.

REBS ON THE RUN.
 DUBLIN, July 21.
 With both flanks broken because of the fall of Limerick and Waterford, the insurgent army is reported retreating in the direction of Cork. It is believed to number a thousand soldiers, thoroughly equipped for a guerrilla war, but without artillery. Messages from Cork state the city is quiet but people are anxious, fearing the city to be the scene of an imminent battle. Limerick is little damaged by the siege, but was fired by the retreating rebels, and many historic edifices were ruined. Castibar has been captured by Nationalists. Valera left Limerick before its capture and is now in Clonmel.

GERMS PASS Through Walls.
 MONKEYS USED IN VACCINE EXPERIMENTS.
 Five hundred monkeys have been used in the last three years in experiments by which the vaccine now in use against pneumonia has been developed.

This has been part of national research work on the subject of influenza and pneumonia, which, according to Dr. W. H. Park, of the New York Health Department, has proved amongst other things, that the invisible, unidentified organism that causes influenza can pass through a stone wall.

For three years the Department has kept under observation 6,000 vaccinated and 8,000 unvaccinated persons. There have been two cases of pneumonia amongst the vaccinated, and twelve amongst the unvaccinated.

The monkeys have been brought in as they were needed from South America and Africa, and the experiments have been carried out in Washington and New York.

The Value of Inoculation.
 Dr. W. H. Park states that two substances were used hypodermically in the treatment of pneumonia, one being the vaccine and the other the serum taken from a horse that had been inoculated with pneumonia.

The serum was generally admitted to be a useful aid in the treatment of pneumonia, but there was some difference of opinion regarding the vaccine.

When a person suffering from pneumonia is inoculated with the vaccine, a chill is produced which sometimes throws off the disease.

The experiments on monkeys showed that when the animals were vaccinated they did not get pneumonia, even though they might be inoculated with the germ.

If they were not vaccinated they did get the disease when inoculated, and usually died, but that did not mean, said Dr. Park, that experiments on human beings would show the same results.

Immigration to U.S.A.

AMERICAN LABOUR AGENT HERE TO INVESTIGATE.
 Mr. C. Tolman, United States Immigration Inspector at Halifax, is now in Newfoundland enquiring into the conditions which are causing local men to emigrate to the United States. Mr. Tolman's visit is the result of communications which passed between the Newfoundland Government and U. S. Consul Benedict with respect to the difficulty our emigrants are finding in getting into the States. He has been sent by the American Labour Department to discover if the charges of certain labour unions that contract workers are being obtained here to cut prices or do scab work in the States. It was also charged that workers were advertised for by American concerns. Mr. Tolman is now in St. John's and has interviewed heads of government departments and others who could give him information on the matter he is investigating. He will go around the Bay this afternoon and will pursue his enquiries at various points. He has stated that he disbelieves the charges of the labour unions that contract labour has been solicited here, and he thinks that as a result of his report, provided that they are qualified in the other respects stated in the act, emigrants from Newfoundland will find it easier to gain admission to the United States.

After Speeders.
 SEVERAL MOTORISTS SUMMONED.
 The police are still after motorists who exceed the speed limit in the city. Major Cotton, the aviator is among those who have been recently summoned. This case was postponed because the charge read for "reckless negligent and dangerous driving." Mr. C. J. Fox objected to three charges appearing on the one summons. The police withdrew the summons and will issue three separate writs against accused. A motor driver who was speeding along New Gower Street, was fined $5. Police witness stated that accused was driving so fast that they could not see who were in the car. They both distinguished the number.

Dynamiting for fish is a great sport among the Malays. The dynamite is exploded in a stream, and the natives rush off, some in boats and some swimming, to collect the fish that rise to the surface.

Another method of catching fish is by the natives use a mixture of lime and sap obtained from the root of the tuba tree. They first warn the villagers down stream so that the latter will not drink any of the water; then they pour out the white liquid. It spreads over the stream, making the fish mabok (drunk). The fish rise to the surface and are gathered into boats.

Regatta Committee Meeting.

MANY CREWS ENTERED.

At last night's meeting of the Regatta Committee held in the T. A. Armoury a considerable amount of business was transacted. In reference to the presentation of prizes, Mrs. Hiscock, wife of the President, who was selected by the Committee at last week's meeting wrote acceptance, and thanking them for the honor.

The collectors reported satisfactory progress, and the success of the day from the financial standpoint is now assured. Secretary T. L. Noonan, on behalf of the Reid Newfoundland Co. handed in a cheque for $100.00, their donation towards the funds of the Regatta Committee. A donation of two dollar gold pieces for the winning crew in the Intermediate Fisherman's Race from a gentleman who wished to remain unknown was announced by President Hiscock.

Protests were also heard by the Committee. Mr. A. G. Williams took exception to two oars in T. & M. Winter's Mercantile crew. He claimed that they were laborers. The Committee held that the men in question were eligible to row.

On behalf of the Cadet Football crew, Mr. W. Caul protested against two of the crew of the C.E.I. and one oar from the C.L.B. He held that they had not played this season in any league games as the rule called for. Vice-President Higgins explained the ruling in the matter, and stated that the Regatta Committee would be guided by the Football League, which was in a position to judge who was or who was not a genuine football player. The names of the four crews will be submitted to the League, which meets on Monday night, for their decision.

The Regatta Committee will meet again on Tuesday night when the remaining crews will enter.

Retiring Pastor Honored.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION TO REV. W. B. BUGDEN.

Rev. W. B. Bugden, retiring pastor of Wesley Church, was last night the recipient of an appreciative address and purse of gold from the congregation for the past four years. Following the regular prayer service the address was read by Mr. J. C. Puddister and the presentation made by Mr. A. W. Martin. Mr. Bugden, who was taken completely by surprise, made a feeling reply, expressing a deep sense of thankfulness to the people whose many kindnesses to him during his pastorate had been the source of great encouragement and help and would not soon be forgotten.

ADDRESS.

To the Rev. W. B. Bugden, B.A., Pastor of Wesley Church, St. John's.

Rev. and Dear Sir.—The tie that binds a faithful pastor to his people is so close that when severance comes there is sorrow. Your earnest ministrations and unflinching zeal have endeared you to all whose privileges it has been to be included in your pastorate. Your thoughtful and evangelical utterances have instructed, encouraged and inspired. If we have not fully profited thereby ours is the fault, and ours the loss.

As a pastor you have watched over us with devotion and sympathy. You have rejoiced with us, and you have shared our sorrows. If we fail to attain the ideals that you held up for our emulation the failure will be ours.

The uniform tact displayed by you in the official and social life of the Church has encouraged and maintained harmony at all times. To the sick, the sad, the poor and the needy you have proven yourself a friend. The debt of gratitude which we owe to you is equally due to your devoted wife, whose invaluable assistance in the work of the Church will ever be held in cherished memory. As a small token of the love and honour in which we hold you, we ask your acceptance of the accompanying purse, and of these words of appreciation, affection and thankfulness, wishing you many more years of gracious influence and usefulness in the service of the Master and humanity.

Signed on behalf of Wesley Church and its varied agencies, the Quarterly Official Board, Board of Trustees, Society Classes, Sunday School, Young men's Literary Class, Epworth League, Laymen's Forward Missionary Movement, Adult Bible Class, and on behalf of the whole congregation.

A. W. MARTIN,

Sloan-Duployan Who's Who.

A most interesting publication has just been received in the shape of "The Sloan Duployan Society Souvenir and Who's Who," which contains an account of the founding and progress of this great shorthand institution. It originated with Lord Foley, the Vice President, who served in the Air Force during the war. "Newfoundland is a great stronghold for the Society, Sloan-Duployan being the only shorthand system used in the country. Mr. R. L. Grimth, of here, says that one of the first things he did on his return home was to begin learning S.D. They think a wonderful lot of Sloan-Duployan out there, he states"—such is the introduction to the Newfoundland pages. The portraits of several of our successful stenographers appear:—Miss Sadie St. John, St. Georges; Miss Myrtle Adams, Bishop Falls; Miss Ada M. Thistle, St. John's; Miss Ada Allan, St. John's; Miss Susie Lewis, St. John's; Miss Kathleen Hayes, St. John's; Miss Flora Stickland, Hr. Grace; Misses Winnie Noel and Gertrude Parsons, Harbour Grace; Miss Nellie Goadby, St. John's; Miss Nellie Conway, St. John's, also a charming group of medal winners from the Presentation Convocation, Harbour Grace, including Misses Isabelle Horwood, Bessie Godden, Mary Kelly, Winifred Jones, Agatha Kennedy, Gertrude O'Brien and Maggie Lee. The Foley challenge shield was first competed for in 1919, and won by the Commercial Department of the Academy of Our Lady of Mercy, St. John's, under the Principalship of the Rev. Sister Mary Joseph Fox. A full page photograph illustrates the ceremony of presentation where the winners are about to be crowned with laurels, the wreaths being handed to the little pages by six prominent Newfoundland ladies including Miss Harris, now Mrs. Bernard. The successful group consists of Misses Irene Wills, Lillian Sullivan, Mollie Ellis, Marjorie English, Violet Davy, and Mary O'Donnell. A large illustration of the Foley Shield appears. In 1920 it was won in Caylon, and again in 1921, passing to Testing Flies' Flights. TRACKING DOWN A HOUSEHOLD PEST.

Some wonderful experiments with household flies were carried out recently.

The marking and releasing of 234,000 flies in order that scientists might study the peculiarities of fly behaviour was a remarkable undertaking.

The object of these experiments was to find out how various kinds of insects were distributed, and how knowledge concerning the intimate daily doings of winged pests could be used to control and, if possible, exterminate them.

House-flies may travel any distance from one mile to fifty or even one hundred miles in the course of their wanderings. Observations made off the coast of Florida proved that flies sometimes migrate there from Cuba, ninety-five miles away, while fly visitors from a spot forty-five miles away were found to be quite common.

Marked With Red Chalk. The flies were caught in large conical fly-traps. These were exposed for from four to twenty-four hours in places which teemed with flies. The covers of the traps were then removed, and the flies were driven into screened cylinders.

The free ends of the cylinders were covered with cheesecloth, and the cylinders were then conveyed to the point of liberation, where they were slipped, one at a time, into a special canvas bag containing one or two ounces of finely-powdered red chalk, which was sprinkled over the captive flies in order to mark them for future identification. The flies were then released.

A large number of traps were placed at varying distances from the point where the flies were let loose. The flies which collected in these recovery traps were killed and counted, and the number of marked flies determined with the use of a microscope.

It is notable that more than 64 per cent. of the total number of flies released were captured again within twenty-four hours of liberation.

The Year's Worst Fish Story. Lefton Harmond and Mechanician Ray, flying in an aeroplane over Buckeye Lake, near Columbus, Ohio, dropped lines and caught four fish. Then they flew upwards to the 11,000 foot altitude and preserved their catch by freezing.

This is the worst we have heard yet, and we have heard a few.

NO MORE, NO LESS.

We do what we have to do. Sometimes, if it is a very big task, we break down doing it; sometimes we kill ourselves by overwork. But far more often we do what we have to do. No more, no less.

Something recently called to my mind a Summer some years ago when I had had much less service and much more to do. "How did I ever do it?" I marvelled. "I don't see how I managed. I don't believe I could do it today."

I said as much to a friend, and she said: "Oh yes, you could if you had to. It's only because you don't have to do so much that you think you can't. I've had hard times in my life and easy times and hard again and I've found that I could almost always do what I had to do."

She did stand it. It's true, isn't it? And it's true of other things than work. What we have to bear we can bear.

I once heard a woman say in speaking of another woman whose husband had been grossly unfaithful to her: "That's the one thing I couldn't stand. I know it would kill me. Anything in the world but that."

That was some years ago. She was wrong. She could stand it. She has stood it and has come out of that fiery ordeal with a new sweetness and sympathy and strength of character.

What we have to do we can do and what we have to bear we can bear. No more, no less.

When We Get Up. And the no more is just as true as the no less.

If you have to get up at 6 o'clock in the morning you get up then. If you don't have to get up until 8 o'clock you get up then. And if you are used to getting up at eight you find you don't like to get up at seven, any more than the person who gets up at six likes to get up at five.

So it is with many of the demands that life makes on us. We don't like some of them at first but we can and do adjust ourselves to most of them. And if life makes few demands we are apt to make but little response.

A Little Comfort. It's like working for an easy or a hard taskmaster. As a newspaper woman I once worked for an editor who was very strict and I did for him the best work I was capable of. And then I worked for an editor who was very easy with me, and ashamed as I am to say it, I grew sloppy in my work.

Isn't it a little comfort when life seems a hard task-master to know that it is forcing you to give the best you have in service and accomplishment and in character development?

Fraudulent Marking At Wimbledon.

The scoring at the meeting of the National Rifle Association was not always kept so admirably as it is now, and for some time, when the annual competition took place at Wimbledon, doubts had been expressed with reference to the system of marking; at last these suspicions were proved in a strange manner. Pte. Runtz, of the London Rifle Brigade, acting upon information supplied by Sergeant Sage, of the Tower Hamlets Volunteers, presented himself before the council on July 23, 1889, and stated that some of the men employed as markers were corrupt. He himself, he said, had arranged that, in shooting for a certain prize, he should be credited with a score of 45, whether he made them or not. Thereupon Mr. A. P. Humphrey, of Cambridge University, was told off particularly to watch Runtz's shooting, and the manner in which it was recorded. The returns showed that Mr. Runtz was credited with a score of 45, for which, as he stated, he arranged. The result of this investigation led to the court martialing of the sergeant of Marines in charge of the target in question. Eventually the accused man was acquitted, but the system was emphatically condemned. Although the court was not satisfied as to the guilt of the man actually before them, they were quite convinced that a system of fraudulent marking had been going on for some time at Wimbledon. In the autumn of that year the N.R.A. tendered its thanks to Sergeant Sage and Private Runtz for their honourable action in the matter.

Modernized Version Of "East Lynne."

WORLD'S MOST POPULAR STORY AT NICKEL MONDAY.

One of the most interesting features in connection with the big production of "East Lynne," which comes to the Nickel next week is in the modernized version of this classic story that is offered to the screen public. The original novel by Mrs. Henry Wood, first published in 1861, clothed its characters in the costumes of that day; so have every one of the numerous dramatizations of this beloved tale. In this picture, however, the story is entirely modernized, from the clothes worn by the players to the railroad trains, automobiles and other modern inventions which are revealed in the screening. The plot is so familiar as to require no detailed synopsis here. How Isabel Carlyle is influenced by Francis Levison to doubt her husband, deserts him and her son to go with Levison and returns when abandoned by him to die in her husband's arms is shown in a fresh manner as to charm with a freshness that augurs well for extended engagements.

St. John's Resident DESCRIBES HIS DAUGHTER'S CURE FROM ECZEMA.

I am more grateful since using your wonderful D.D.D. for Eczeema. My little girl was troubled with Weeping Eczeema. I used everything but to no use and I thought D.D.D. would be of no use either. My girl's head became so bad I had to clip her hair off and keep her from school. She got sores all over her body. I used 6 bottles and I am proud to say she is cured. Not a pimple or rash and her skin is clear and white and all the itching is gone. I will recommend D.D.D. to anyone I know who is troubled with Eczeema. I am ever so happy and thankful for your wonderful cure.

JANE'S CAREER.

When Jane was young and flappy, the belle of all the town, she made young men in a happy, because she turned them down. And many wished to wed her, with wreaths upon her brow, but no one ever led her to make the solemn vow. She wished to be a lawyer, and practice in the courts; said wish was the destroyer of love for many sports. In this brief mundane journey," she said, "I wish to shine; so I'll be an attorney—no wedding rings in mine. I can't be a winner if she sees matches weird, and diagrams a dinner for some one with a beard." She said as she expected, she saw her name increase, and now she's been elected a Justice of the Peace. With honors she is laden, her roll has all loveless and alone. No lighted window greets her when homeward she returns, no loving husband beats at her door, nor borrows what she earns. Her progress was amazing, but ever and anon I see her sadly gazing as though the prize were gone. It's when we're old and lonely, and tired and sad and say, that loving comrades only seem worth the price we pay.

15th LEAGUE MATCH—C.L.B. VS. WANDERERS. Played on Llewellyn Place July 15th, 1897—Result, C.L.B. 2 goals; Wanderers 1 Goal.

This match was pulled off before a small gathering of spectators—the Cycling Championship meet no doubt taking a number who would otherwise have been present. It was anticipated that the Brigade would be too strong for Blackwood's team and this proved correct. The Brigade played down hill for the first half and started in earnest, the ball being but a short time in play when Chaplin, the Wanderers' goalkeeper had to save a scorcher which he did in good style. The C.L.B. had some grand chances during the first 20 minutes of play, but their shooting was very erratic and it looked as if the first half would end without any scoring. However, a few minutes before half-time the ball was brought down the field and Harris who was on the spot, shot through one of the Brigade. Then the whistle blew.

On resuming, the Wanderers, with ground in their favour, for a short time pressed, but were never dangerous, as the Brigade back divisions offered a very stubborn defence. Play continued pretty even, the C.L.B. if anything having the best of it, securing quite a number of corners, from which, however, nothing resulted.

Warren played well, but was very faulty at times on the touch line.

The other Brigade players who excelled were Hussey, Harris, Long and Garland, especially the latter at back.

For the Wanderers' Blackwood excelled himself and is, in fact, the life of the team, whilst Mews at back played a very steady game.

The best run of the match, to our mind, was that made by Aleck Marshall, who for his age, possesses speed and tackling powers of no mean order.

Pike, the centre forward, is a good man, but seemed a bit off colour.

Chaplin will make a good goalkeeper, as he saved brilliantly last night.

Mungo Park's Explorations.

No man ever carried a stouter heart to brave the perils of the unknown than Mungo Park, a young Scottish ship surgeon, who in 1795 set sail from Portsmouth to explore the dark lands of West Africa. He knew that his predecessor, Major Houghton, had sacrificed his life after great hardships and sufferings, in a similar venture, but he was quite ready to pay the same price in the cause of civilisation. His instructions were to discover and trace the course of the River Niger, and he started from Fasilka on his perilous journey with only a couple of negro servants for escort, two slave merchants, a Mohammedan black, and a negro blacksmith, with a stock of beads, amber and tobacco, for barter with the natives. For three months he travelled through the most terrible hardships and dangers, and was warned at every stage that he would not come out of the venture alive. Suffering daily from the tortures of thirst, suffocated by sandstorms, scorched by the heat of the sun, plundered by natives, and in constant danger of the forest beasts, he at last arrived at the border of the Moorish kingdom of Ludamar. The Moors treated him with the greatest insolence, hissing, shouting and abusing him, spitting in his face, opening his bundles and robbing him of everything they fancied. The fact that he was unprotected, a Christian, and a suspected spy, were sufficient to drive every spark of humanity from the heart of a Moor. They came to him with the news of the doom that had been passed upon him, one, that he was to be put to death; another, that his right hand was to be cut off; a third, that his eyes were to be put out; but all agreed that the sentence was not to be executed until Fetma the queen, had first seen him. For a whole month he was subjected to indignities and persecutions, until he was reduced to a state of exhaustion. He was then presented to Queen Fetma, who, to his surprise and delight gave him an amiable reception and presented him with food. With regained strength he was inspired with new hope, and on what was to him a never to be forgotten day, July 23, 1795, he made his escape.

But great as his perils had been before his capture, they were greater now as a fugitive. Chased by the Moors, plundered by wandering bands, subsisting on shrubs, he was reduced to a greater state of exhaustion than before, until a "good Samaritan," an old peasant woman, befriended him. Continuing his journey, at last, barefooted, tattered, and half dead, he reached Sego, where he fell in with a roving band of Kaartans, who treated him with every kindness, and welcomed him to their band. A few days later, Park says: "I saw with infinite pleasure the object of my mission in the long sought for, majestic Niger, glittering in the morning sun, as proud as the Thames at Westminster; and, drinking of the water, lifted up my fervent thanks in prayer to God, for having thus far crowned my endeavours with success."

He had numerous further adventures and hairbreadth escapes, while fever brought him to the verge of the grave at Kamala. On his recovery he set off in with a slave caravan, and was allowed to accompany them, a journey of 500 miles, to the Gambia, and ultimately he arrived at Pisanis, his starting point, a ragged, unkempt "wild man of the woods," to be greeted by his friend, Dr. Lindley, with great joy and satisfaction, as one risen from the dead.

Stocking Banks.
The postal savings banks are out for the money hidden away in various crude, old-time caches—such as the decrepit teapot in the cupboard, the kitchen clock, the mattress and the stocking suit. Great wealth awaits the successful profiteers in these rich unworked lodges. The first French effort under Ferdinand de Lesseps to dig the Panama canal was financed largely by funds secreted in those ways among the peasants. Part of the western shore of Newfoundland is still called the Gold Coast because of treasure earthbound in cans, interred by those who lost confidence in banks after two disastrous failures at St. John's. Every such collapse means a further withdrawal of timorous investors and depositors, many of them aliens, who for years are they came here carried all their worldly goods about with them where they wandered. Part of the work of Americanization rightly may be to engender in the new arrival a warranted confidence in the fiscal solvency of banking institutions. The postal savings bank pays a low rate of interest. But any rate of interest is more than the cracked sugar bowl or the threadbare repository returns. It is the Scriptural story of the buried talent over again.—The Democrat.

HOPE.
There is no hope for the beasts of the field.
They suffer pain and die,
Their young become the hunter's yield.
One bitter, anguished cry
Marks the despair which death has wrought.
Love has been theirs, but all for naught.
But hope God gave to woman and man
Who see their loved ones die,
And ever since first this world began
Though we wonder and question why
Hope whispers low; you shall love again,
And joy shall follow your hours of pain.
Death is death to the beasts of earth,
But man has a soul divine,
And the passing on is a royal birth
To an everlasting line,
And hope shines out through the darkest day—
They still live on who have gone away.

Seal Hunters.

HAVE NO FAITH IN AERIAL SURVEY.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., July 5.—New-fangled contraptions find little favor in the eyes of the Newfoundland sealers, and so a plan introduced this season to use airplanes for locating the seal herds failed of acceptance by the seasoned sealing skippers. The crew of an airman cannot beat the skill of a seafaring man wise in wind and weather, said the skeptics.

Aviators flew over the vast ice fields from Labrador south to the Grand Banks during the sealing season and claimed to have found the main seal herd 200 miles from the region where the sealing fleet was operating. "Nonsense," said the seal hunters, and went on about their business. The airman offered to sell their information to the Newfoundland government for $40,000 and they offered it to the owners of the sealing fleet for the same figure. The season waned, and neither government nor ship owners would deal. Finally when the sealing was over and the fleet had dispersed, the aviators agreed to accept 10 cents a seal for their information. It was too late and so the "seals-from-the-air" theory has never been tested.

Hunters claim that the main body of seals was where they killed their catch, and in proof point to the harvest of 120,000 carcasses, 20 per cent more than that of 1921. The old hand at the hunting studies wind and weather for weeks before the season opens, and then follows his experience and instinct. As for spotting seals from the air, he says no green man is to be trusted with that job. Even experienced sealers admit that nothing is easier than to exaggerate the number of seals visible from the crow's nest of a ship, let alone an airplane.—The News, Washington.

Queen Alexandra

HAS SECRET OF PERENNIAL YOUTH.

LONDON.—Queen Alexandra, the Queen Mother, now in her 78th year, is far more active than most women of her age. She might take life far easier than she does, but she evidently is opposed to the idea of being laid on the shelf. She likes to show herself among the people and she is gratified by the applause with which her appearance always is greeted. Undoubtedly it acts as a sort of psychological tonic upon her and helps her to feel as young as she looks. She crowds many activities into a day. One day recently she appeared in public at the Cart Horse Parade for prizes in Regent's Park; then at a concert in aid of workshops for disabled soldiers, and finally at the Richmond Horse Show. But she makes two concessions to advancing years. She seldom goes out of an evening and she goes to bed early, usually playing a game of "Patience" before retiring.

Canadian Golf.

CONTEST FOR CHAMPIONSHIP BEGINS SOON.

Montreal, July 22.—The Canadian Open Golf championship will be competed for this year on July 28 and 29 over the links of Mount Bruno Golf Club near Montreal. It is expected to attract all the professionals in Canada as well as a number from the United States and also the best amateur players all over the Dominion. As the contest does not conflict with any important tournament in the United States it is expected that among the visitors from across the border may be Kirkwood, the remarkable Australian, as well as Hutchinson, ex-British Open Champion. Hagan who recently won the British open championship and Barnes, open champion in the United States last year.

Canada's first line of defence will be C. R. Murray, of Montreal, winner of the Quebec Provincial Championship, George C. Cummings, winner of the Toronto and District Open Championship, and Davis Black of Vancouver. The championship is open to all amateurs and professionals. It will consist of 72 holes medal play, 18 of which will be played in the morning of the first day and another 18 in the afternoon. The second day's programme is identical. The tournament which will take place under the rules of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, will commence on the morning of July 28.

The Rivermead Cup, a trophy to be competed for annually under the rules of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, will be presented to the winner and will be held for 1 year by his club, or until the next annual competition takes place.

The course at Mount Bruno comprises a distance of 3,244 yards going out with 3,299 yards coming in, making a total of 6,543, an exceptionally lengthy course. The holes are all good, but the twelfth is worthy of special mention, being 595 yards from tee to pin, and the thirteenth, which is 440 yards long. Up to the twelfth hole, the player has been looking over a picturesque panorama of valleys and distant hills, but when he faces the flag he is looking towards cool woods. Apart from the vista, how ever, he is facing a difficult task. The average player requires those full shots to be hole high, while five is very often exceeded. Besides the great length of the hole the course runs uphill which greatly adds to its difficulty. The thirteenth is another picturesque hole, the bush having been cut away to provide a fairway, and when he has left the tee, the player emerges into what appears to be new world.

TRINITY.

Although I fear I shall not be able to give such a good reason for the absence of my week-end notes in the near future—they were absent last week because I was present at Bonavista. Long years ago when our good people at Trinity did not go far a-field, and Bonavista—like all good places—was hard to get to, and some adventurous person decided to visit it, and some one asked him, where he was going, he would answer with a semi-serious expression, "I am going to leave the country." And then, when asked for further details of his intended foreign visit, he would say, "I am going to Bonavista." Well, the prevailing northeast winds since that time, together with the "Bonavista Branch Railway, have brought Bonavista so near to us, that we have ceased to be (what an old friend of mine called) "jokesters" in our reference to it, and now, when we wish to spend an enjoyable week-end in pleasant surroundings near home, we go to Bonavista.

At the invitation of Canon Bayly who has gone as Chaplain to the Bishop during his Labrador visitation, I went to Bonavista on Wednesday (July 12th) to officiate at the marriage of two of his parishioners. Before the hour appointed for the wedding, however, I was called upon to bury a little child—Marjorie Templeman—This gave me an opportunity to spend an hour in the cemetery and the Mortuary Chapel. The cemetery is beautifully situated, uniformly laid off in lots, with fairly well kept paths all through it. The graves show indications of loving care, and the majority of them are marked by a well-proportioned marble cross, thus giving the cemetery a distinctively Christian appearance. A beautiful Lych-gate—of which there are so few in Newfoundland—guards and admits to the cemetery. The Mortuary Chapel is a well proportioned and Church-like building. It is fitted with an Altar, a Lectern, and a few seats, and the roof and walls are neatly finished with wood in natural colours. This is one of the three Mortuary Chapels in the Diocese (St. John's, Bonavista and Trinity) and if it were fully fitted with seats, the windows filled with stained glass memorials, and the exterior given a fresh coat of paint, it would constitute an easy first of the three. Under the shadow of the east end of the building lie the bodies of the father and mother of Canon Bayly, whose names bring back a flood of happy, holy memories to those who were privileged to know them in the parish and in their home. Grant them Lord Eternal rest.

The solemnisation of the marriage of John Bishop and Beatrice Anthony at the Parish Church, gave a large number of parishioners the opportunity to "rejoice with them that do rejoice" by taking part in the service, and witnessing the mutual consent, and the pledging of "their troth either to other"; and if the enthusiastic congratulations of their many friends at the church gate—plus the abundance of rice showered on them as they drove through the street—mean anything, they should be very happy for a long time.

The next day Doctor Forbes extended a kind invitation to me to go with him to the outskirts of the town and witness the opening of two graves of people who had been buried there over two hundred years ago. The doctor had obtained the necessary authority and permission to do this, in order that he might, if possible, find something that would throw some light on the history of Bonavista at that time. During the work of excavating for the canal last year several coffins were uncovered, in some of which some clothing was found, viz. a pair of long stockings, three or four inches of the top of another stocking, and a pair of men's dark blue bloomers and trousers and a coat, such as the Puritans wore, and such as we see in pictures of them to-day. All this has been thoroughly disinfected by the Doctor, and may be seen and examined at his Drug Store. There are several surprising features about these articles, but none more so than the fact, that in spite of their having been buried at least two hundred and fifty years they are still in an excellent state of preservation.

The two graves that were opened by the Doctor during my visit, were disappointing in results, as nothing was found in them but the bottom boards of the coffins, and that was all but gone. At the head of one grave was a slate stone, broken off nearly level with the ground. The part of it that was under the surface was in perfect condition, and on it were cut the letters A. D. W. E. S. L. These letters never formed a part of a word, or words; but evidently they had been cut to experiment with, before attempting to cut them in the regular inscription on the upper part of the stone, which, unfortunately for us, had disappeared.

No doubt the reason why these bodies and clothing in the canal excavation were in such good condition, and those in the graves opened during my visit had gone to dust, was the fact that the soil in the canal section is of a boggy nature, and hence a preservative, and that in the other section (some distance from the canal) is a dry loam and calculated to hasten decay. There are other graves in both sections, which point to the fact that those places were definite burying places of those who died at Bonavista, during a period of its history of which to-day there is no record, and to which the contents of the graves give no definite clue. That they were English I have no doubt; and a lady who has had the courage to closely and intelligently examine the clothing referred to, has advanced the theory that it was worn by some of the Puritans who during the storms whilst crossing the Atlantic in 1620, got separated from the others, and instead of reaching the shores of Massachusetts, found themselves on this part of the rugged shores of Newfoundland; and those who succumbed to the hardships they endured, were buried by those of their companions who survived. Hence the blue Puritan trousers and jacket.

It now remains for some one else to advance another theory to account for the presence of these articles of clothing, and to give reasons. In my notes of next week, I shall give some extracts, etc., from the old Church Registers at Bonavista.

Mr. Simms, wife and family have arrived at Trinity. Mr. Simms and Miss Goodwin will have charge of the school here during the coming school year. We extend to them a hearty welcome.

Mr. Sampson, M.H.A. and Mrs. Sampson registered at Garland Hotel last week visited British Harbor and returned by "Malakoff" to Catalina.

The funeral service, when the body of little Joan Lockyer was laid to rest, was conducted in such a way as to eliminate as many of the gloomy features of death as were possible; such features as are more or less out of keeping with any funeral service, and especially that of a little child. The little white coffin was literally covered with beautiful flowers, the Sunday school teachers and children, each carrying a bouquet of flowers, and in charge of Mrs. Forster, walked ahead of the coffin from the house to the Mortuary Chapel. The little grave was lined with evergreen, and such a profusion of flowers, as completely hid the brown earth, and thus destroyed those sad feelings that a bare grave produces. As the little coffin rested on the flowers below, and the flowers on it blended with those of the sides of the grave, the effect was very beautiful, and could not fail to dispel the gloomy thoughts that our poor human nature is so prone to suggest at the time. The Sunday school children sang one of their appropriate hymns, and when the priest had said the closing prayers, the children filed past the grave, and as they passed they deposited their bouquets of flowers in the grave, and young and old went back to their homes with brighter lessons of death, as taught by the brightness of the service, and the beauty of the flowers. Kathleen Joan Lockyer, whom God called to rest, aged 7 years.

A well has been dug in the Cemetery, to provide water for those who are trying to cultivate flowers on and around the graves.

A correctly made red ensign having been procured at Bonavista, the motor ferry, Capt. Lane, looks all the brighter for its presence.

In addition to the interest we always take in strangers during their visit to Trinity, we are also interested in their past; not by any means however, from a sense of idle curiosity, or from any manly desire to become possessed of information such as we are not entitled to, but from a genuine interest in them, and the good work that they have done, and the old friends of ours with whom they have been associated. Amongst the visitors who registered at Garland Hotel some few days ago were Mr. J. T. Lawton and Mr. J. R. Murphy of Bell Island, who spent a day in Trinity on route to King's Cove, on pleasure bent during a short holiday.

Mr. J. T. Lawton was born in King's Cove and left there when he was eighteen years of age. In 1878 he was at St. Bon's College, and during the year 1879 he taught school at Trinity. He then went to Ireland; studied in Dublin for four years, and was graduated in the Royal University of Ireland in 1881, and taught school in Ireland for nine years. Upon his return to Newfoundland he took charge of Harbor Grace Academy and creditably filled the position for fifteen years. He was assistant Inspector of the Roman Catholic Schools, during the summer holiday for five years. In 1907 he became Editor of the Evening Herald, and he has been working with the Dominion Iron and Steel Co. at Bell Island since 1909. Mr. Lawton is the author of "Fishes and Plant Food," an agricultural text book, for some years on the C.M.E. syllabus. He is also the author of "Nationalization of Society," the theme of which is, the Government or State organization and control of labour and industry; a theme, Mr. Lawton says he believes in more and more, the longer he lives.

Mr. J. R. Murphy was born in St. John's, and is a grandson of Captain Edward Murphy of Catalina (the famous seal-killer) and nephew of Hon. J. J. Murphy, M.L.C. Mr. Murphy worked with the Anglo Telegraph Co. for the past sixteen years with the Dominion Iron and Steel Co., both at Sydney and Wabana, Bell Island. I am glad to know they enjoyed the day at Trinity, and I trust they had an equally enjoyable time with old friends and amidst old scenes at King's Cove. Come again.

Mrs. Somerton returned from her visit to St. John's last week, all the better for the holiday. Mrs. Parsons and Master Austen from St. John's, and Miss Somerton from Ontario at the same time, and they will all enjoy life for a month or two at the old home.

Head Constable and Mrs. Ryan are happy over the fact, that all their children (five) and grandchildren are home together.

The Editor has my best thanks for his kindness in making my remarks on flags, the subject of a complimentary editorial.

Since my return from Bonavista on Tuesday, every second person that I have met, has reminded me of the fact that there were no Trinity notes in last Saturday's Telegram. Well, "absence makes the heart grow fonder"—sometimes.

Some of my items this week are a little belated. This, however, was not intentional, and must not be taken as indicative of lack of interest on my part. Did you notice there were no items last week?

Mrs. Hugh Lilly of St. John's, and her two children are spending an enjoyable holiday with Mrs. Lilly's parents, Capt. Robert and Mrs. Fowlow at Trinity.

A new ferry wharf is being built at Goose Cove, S.W. Arm.

Miss Stella Lockyer has gone to Blanc Sablon to spend the summer with her sister Mrs. Samuel Grant. We shall try to be as good as we can be during your absence Stella; and to have all the house cleaning done by the time you come back.

Mr. Arthur Snelgrove, one of our respected citizens during the past few years, has decided to move—with his family—to Ontario, Canada, and has disposed of his household goods. In addition to other qualifications that made Mr. Snelgrove a citizen that we can ill afford to lose, his technical knowledge of music and his ability to impart the same to others, have placed several of our people under a lasting obligation to him. We wish him and Mrs. Snelgrove many years of health and happiness in beautiful Ontario.

Mr. Arthur Garden of the Royal

Bank of Canada Staff, St. John's, registered at Garland Hotel, on his way to and from British Harbor, during his holidays. Glad to see him.

The Garland Hotel and surroundings have been thoroughly painted, and looks as clean and tidy outside, as it is comfortable and well fitted inside.

The members of the Church of England School Board of Trinity District, treated themselves to a joy-ride by S.S. Malakoff to Ireland's Eye last week. They held their annual meeting there: Were royally treated by the people; received an invitation to meet next year at British Harbor; and came home like giants refreshed.

The local Football team are practicing for a match with Catalina next week.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.
In my last notes I remarked, "there is only one Trinity." A careful reader has reminded me that "there is another Trinity in Bonavista Bay." Thank you, Sir—but you misunderstood me. I was not then referring to Trinity geographically, but sentimentally, as Trinity is viewed by a Trinity Harlan.

J.G.S.—The Court House that was preceded the present building, was also preceded by another, that stood not far from the old Church yard.

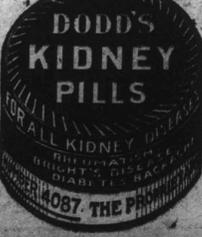

R.T.—Your reference to the long handled collecting boxes, that were used all over the country sixty years ago, to collect the offerings in church, is quite correct. No, they have not all quite disappeared. The four that were used in old St. Paul's Church, Trinity at that date are still preserved, and may be seen (together with other reminders of an interesting past) in the Vestry of the present St. Paul's Trinity. Come along and live in the past as well as in the present for awhile. It will do you good.—W. J. L. Trinity, July 22nd, 1922.

The Loss of the 'Puritan'

To sailors, the loss of a vessel engenders a feeling somewhat akin to sadness. In the fishing fleets, vessels, are almost personalities. They are intimate things. They have distinctive characteristics—some good and some bad. One gets to know the units of the fleet in the course of time and a fisherman will recall the names and points of a hundred craft.

Some schooners, from first to last, are nothing more than ordinary. They are the hot-potato, as it were, of the fleets. But others win a place in the watery world by beauty, speed or endurance which gain for them the halo of aristocracy. We can recall many such. Out on the banks, running into market, or at anchor in harbor, these aristocrats can be picked out from the rabble with ease and fishermen will tumble up from sleep to admire them.

Such a vessel was the Puritan. She was the baby of the Gloucester fleet, born only this year. The man who drafted her lines gave more than ordinary thought to his calculations, for he had visions of another clipper vessel up in the Bluenose country, with a turn of speed and a title as Queen of the North Atlantic. The Puritan must be planned to aspire to such an honor. On her designer's drawing-board, she was imbued with the qualities which make for the inheritance of the queenly crown when the two would meet in contest. With her designer, so with her builder. The best of timber went into her frames and the shipwrights whittled and fitted with more than ordinary care. They knew that they were putting their skill against smart and able workmen up in the Provinces and it behooved them to build as best they knew. The caulkers drove the oakum into her seams with a pride in their work. The spar-makers lined and planed the long masts and booms with the knowledge that no man could do better. The sail-makers cut the fine canvas to a nicety and stitched and roped and did the sailorly work of turning in cringles and clew-irons with an intimate knowledge of what the sail would have to stand when strong winds were blowing and a rival vessel was poking her bowsprit up on the weather quarter. Then came her skipper, when all the good work was assembled and placed, and he looked her over with a seaman-like eye and mentally visioned the behavior of the untried schooner in all the hundred and one situations which arise at sea.

She passed his experienced scrutiny and he took charge.

DEADLY SABLE ISLAND.

Out on the windy wastes of the North Atlantic went the Puritan and the long rollers washed with her and the salt sprays slashed her sleek clipper body and the Spring breezes belled her white canvas in welcome to the new sea-creature, and guided by the hands of her masters she responded and sheared through the brine at the rate of knots. "A fine vessel—a splendid vessel," said her crew. "She'll sail, this one, and when the big race comes off in Fall . . . ?" Aye, they could vision her storming along with that big mainboom sheeted flat aft, with the topsail and the balloon and the big stays' aloft and the sheets like bar iron and the white-water boiling in the lee scuppers and, a roaring wake astern—and her rival, possibly, vainly stemming that same wake.

Then came the day when, engaged in her lawful occasions, the Puritan romped gaily through a steaming mist and showing her heels at a ten-knot clip. She was young and full of life and loved to slide her long smooth body through the cold green sea to her tall spars. Good wheelmen, she had; men who did not tantalize a willing hooker by too many spokes one way or the other; fellows who could keep her steady on one spoke a whole watch and who could steer through the eye of a needle. Little she recked of mists. They were common enough already in her young life and the sea was wide.

"Better take a sound," someone said. And then the Puritan staggered in her headlong career, lifted again and crashed sickeningly while her spars shook and her whole fabric strained and twisted. "Sable Island Northwest Bar!" The stricken vessel saw the sea that had caressed her and sank instantly to an insatiable demerol which lifted her up and crashed her down on the hard sands—splitting her keel, wrenching her floor timbers from their bolts, bursting her seams wide. Cresting breakers, growing malevolently, creased over her helpless hull, pounding her with terrific blows which made the stout iron fastenings draw and the wood fibers crack. Her crew were fighting for their lives in the breakers. Dories were swung over the rails and were capsizing alongside. Her human complement were deserting her—all but one, and he would never see another dawn.

Throughout the long night, the breakers worried her like wolves. Over her deck they raged, tearing her fabric and rending her to pieces. Sable Island sands had her in their grip and Sable Island Sands never let go. The Puritan was doomed.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette.

Simplicity Marks Daily Life of His Holiness.

WORKS TWO THIRDS OF THE DAY

ROME, (Associated Press).—The daily life of Pope Pius XI. at the Vatican is marked by simplicity, incessant work and regular exercise. He labors from 12 to 16 hours a day; sleeps from six to seven, and plays two hours. His meals are taken while he examines his mail or gives directions to his secretaries. His play consists of a vigorous military march seven or eight times around the Vatican gardens, making five or six miles and this he does rain or shine. His Holiness takes personal charge of the direction of the affairs of the church, assigning the routine to his secretaries. The diplomatic letters which attracted so much attention during the Genoa conference were the personal work of the Holy Father. He reads and dines into the rich collection of Vatican books assiduously. So insistent is he, sometimes, in seeking just the thought he wants that some of the prelates have been compelled to use a "gentle violence" in urging him, when the night has crept far on, to seek repose. His energy astonishes the papal household. Recently when it was suggested to him that he was working far too hard, Pius XI replied: "You know that when one is made Pope, life is finished. All that is in the hands of God. I will do nothing to preserve my life one day more, but I will work until God says, 'It is enough.'" The Pope rises at 6.30 o'clock every morning and says mass in his private chapel before breakfast, which is at 8 o'clock. This meal consists of coffee with milk, bread and butter. The mail is brought in while he eats, and the Pontiff divides it among his seven secretaries for attention and answers. At 9 o'clock, Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary of State, is received in the papal chamber every day except Tuesday and Friday. On Tuesday Monsignor Borgognini-Duca, the pro-Secretary for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, is received, and on Friday Monsignor Pizzardo, the Substitute Secretary of State. One hour is assigned to each for the discussion of affairs.

THE DIURNAL ROUTINE.

At 10 o'clock the Pope commences his private audiences, receiving cardinals, bishops, prelates, high civil personages, diplomats and nobles. These conferences last until one o'clock, when the public audiences begin. For an hour the Holy Father receives pilgrims, associations and various organizations who come to Rome to pay homage to him. At 2 p.m. the Master of the Papal Household, Monsignor Caccia-Dominione, is received and places before His Holiness the list of audiences for the succeeding day and asks for their approval. The Pope lunches usually at 2.30. While he eats alone there are several of his secretaries present to receive orders and discuss matters particular to their charge. The Pontiff also has additional letters read to him and gives instructions for the replies. The meal is simple. His Holiness is a great lover of rice done in the Milan style. Then follow outlets, or perhaps check, but the Pope is not exacting; he has never been known to refuse any dish placed before him. A few vegetables and some fruit complete the meal.

WALK NOT NEGLECTED.

A feature of the day which is never neglected is the walk. Promptly at 3.30 p.m. the Pope enters his carriage and is driven to the gardens. Here he walks five or six miles briskly. Even on this tramp there is work. His Holiness will have at his side some prelate with whom he wants to confer. He will go into full details of the matter in hand while walking and issue his instructions. At half-past five the Pontiff returns to the papal apartments. Audiences begin again and he receives cardinals, archbishops, and other prelates in private audience. These conferences are scheduled to end at 8.30 o'clock, but on occasions of importance they continue much later. Supper is served as a rule at 9 o'clock. This too, is very simple, consisting of only one or two dishes. After supper Pius XI goes to work again. At this hour he devotes himself to the composition of various Vatican communications, later going to the library to read and work. On one occasion recently he kept the library lights burning until one o'clock in the morning.

Latest Wireless Wonder.

Two super-wireless stations came into operation a short time ago, and recently a third, situated at Berna, in Switzerland, has been added. They send out their messages in Morse codes at the amazing rate of 200 words a minute. High-speed wireless can deal with a vast number of messages in a short time, and it is absolutely secret, for no one can read it without the complicated receiving machine. Messages are dealt with by making dots and dashes in a long strip of paper tape. The tape is then inserted into the transmitter which automatically sends out the signals recorded upon it. So great is the speed that the dots and dashes are blended into a continuous high note. The sound contains every dot and dash, but no human ear is capable of recognizing them. At the receiving end is an instrument provided with a blank gramophone record revolving at enormous speed. Upon it a sharp point cuts a record of the messages received. The record is then placed in another machine, where it is revolved at one-fifth of its previous speed. The signals now become intelligible to the expert operator, who writes them down as he receives them.

Teachers Greetings.

The following message was yesterday received by Dr. Blackall from Major Ney, Hon. Organizer of the Overseas Education League tour of parts of the European Continent:—"Newfoundland in cordial liaison Canada, South Africa and New Zealand." The interpretation is, we presume, says the Daily News, that the Nfld. Teachers' Contingent has united with those from the other Dominions, and have started on their tour through Britain, France and Belgium. Mr. Llewellyn, Colley of Bishop Field College and Rev. Mr. White, B.A. of Moreton's Harbour are amongst the travellers from Newfoundland.
