Association States Whole Question Must Be Kept Clear of Politics.

Home Bank depositors lined up in double rows inside the market branch of the Bank of Montreal this morning to receive the first official 25 per cent dividend distributed to savings holders since the Home Bank suspension was announced months ago By 11 o'clock the crowds became so great that another line was formed in the street, and the staff of extra workers were scurrying about all morning without a hitch.

The bank will remain open until eight o'clock this evening, additional hours having been arranged for the convenience of depositors. At noon today it was estimated that $35,000 had been turned over on Home Bank savings accounts savings accounts.

Men appointed by the London Home Dank Depositors' Association were n hand to ask each depositor to sign the white slip making over one-half of one per cent of his total de-posits. The money thus derived will e used by the central committee at Poronto to carry the depositors' case before the government and demand Ottawa assume all loss suffered by the savings holders.

Furs and Heavier Clothes Are Only Articles Not in Demand.

The last week in local retail circles has been a "humdinger," according to several retailers spoken to by The Advertiser this morning.

All admonitions to shop early seem to have been ignored, in the opinion of the merchants, the rush during the past week having been sustained and heavy. Moderate priced articles have been claiming the most attention, the purses seeming to be a little tighter than last year, but not much. The citizens do not seem to have confined themselves to any one paricular choice of merchandise, all inds being in demand. While some

The mighty Shakespeare himself could not have failed to commend this new and distinctly original characterization of the mel-ancholy Danish philosopher. There have been Hamlets and Hamlets. Some have been content to sacrifice the esthetic, emotional Hamlet for the virile, dominant Hamlet who so subtly reflects the undaunted philosophy of pessimism which was Shakespeare's. Sir John's Hamlet is not of the latter, and perhaps that is why his characterization seems so delightfully naive and distinct in it-

The new Hamlet, whom Londoners have hitherto not seen, bares his sou to the world, and is unashamed. The torment of an introspective mind eeking to solve the riddle of life and death: the tolerant scorn of an heroic oul for the sickening orthodoxy of his fellows; the despair which genius always feels on finding that ques-tionings bode no good and that the iddle of life and death shall always emain a riddle—these are the stress ed points of this new Hamlet, who revealing his bleeding heart, strikes a sympathetic chord in the hearts of all whose misfortune it is to understand.

Traits Lovable.

The story of Hamilet has been too often told to bear repeating. It is Sir John Martin Harvey's projection had gone a block one of the motorists of Shakespeare's philosophy as re-flected in the haunted figure of the Prince of Denmark, which is worthy of comment. With the exception, perhaps, of John Barrymore, no other living Hamlet has so successfully "sold" the public on the charming lovable traits of that tragic figure. In the comment of the comm With the exception presenting an original Hamlet, how-ever, Sir John in no way obscures the board of works.

The final scene, which in the Hamlet of Forbes Robertson closes with the ward to offer or ask for one. I'm goby Horatio's soliloquy, is in this new Hamlet much more effective. Hamlet's slight body, hoisted high by sorrowed friends against a background of blue night, while brave music floods the air, gives a wonderfully thrilling effect.

Deserve Commendation. Only the best of criticism can be directed at the supporting cast. Miss Marie Linden is the unquestioned feminine star of the play, as Ger-trude, Queen of Denmark, and Harvey Braban, as the king, could hardbe improved on. ALBERTA HOTELS Government Prepares Bill To Govern the Selling of Beer.

DRINK ON PREMISES

Canadian Press Despatch. Edmonton, Dec. 21.—Hotels and restaurants will not be permitted to sell beer, according to the bill which will be submitted to the Legislature next month, implementing the re-cent referendum which was indorsed by a large majority for the legal sale in the province of intoxicating liquor. Sale of beer by bottle or glass for consumption on the premises will be permitted, however, in such premises, consisting of a room conforming to strict regulations of the board, it is announced in a statement issued today by Premier Greenfield, following a three-day caucus of his supporters in the Legislature.

A liquor control board of three members with "very wide powers" is to be appointed to administer the act.

Permits are to be issued to residents and visitors, and they may purchase wines and spirits in sealed packages at government stores in quantities "limited by regulations of the board" for consumption "in private residences only." Beer is also to be sold only to permit owners.

There is to be a measure of local option governing the location of liquor stores and licensed beer premises. Bona fide clubs will be permitted to sell beer to members, ubject to regulations.

Mayor Wenige's Next Inaugural Address Is Awaited With Interest.

And there is nothing in the municipal procedure bylaw to discourage a search for a good reason for a group of reasons why 1923 should be listed in gold lettering.

Ald. George Burdick's timely comment at the farewell session was: "We didn't poke one another in the eye as they did in Toronto," while reference was also made to a Michigan mayor, who last year threatened to throw one of his aldermanic op-ponents through the window. Noth-ing quite as sensational as that ing quite as sensational as that occurred during 1923, and no one need ever dare essay the remark that the British right of free speech was ever violated. As a general rule, the micinal procedure hylaw blandly ignored. Members talked of-ten and at length. Their opinions voiced so all could hear, and were voiced so all could near, and very rarely did anyone object.

Mayor Wenige did feel impelled one night to admonish Ald. William Wilson, while now and then Ald. Wilson, while how and then and Wilson felt it his duty; perhaps from his respected position as "dean of all the councillors," to correct Ald. Watt. But a sharp command, "Sit down, Watt," or "Don't be jumping up and down, Drake," was the extent of Ald.

Wilson's lesson.

Taking them "by and large," as they would say at Ottawa (so it must right), the 1923 legislators haved about as well as they have done in past years.

now as to their record. While they appear in the public limelight probably more than any other of the city representatives, not excluding the city's delegates to the important seats in the governments, the general public seems to have never quite gathered the significance of the fact that the mayor and aldermen possess but a 4 per cent spending power.
They jingle together but 4 cents out f every dollar. And this is what they did in 1923:

London, Dec. 22.—Hope that a cure for the foot and mouth diseases which is now ravishing cattle herds in Great Britain at last is at hand, is held out by the Daily Express' Utrecht correspondent who reports that important experiments are being made there by Professor Pfeiler, a German, and Dutch veterinary.
The two are now working out their theories in the neighborhood of a public slaughter house in Utrecht. The correspondent says the method employed is a sub-cutaneous injection of a specially prepared serum. Dr. Pfeiler be s it will eventually save Europe the tremendous wastage she now suffers, because of the plague of the disease.

In the meantime the disease continues to spread.

After a splendid turkey dinner an elaborate program was introduced, made up altogether of talent recruited from the factory. One of the outstanding numbers was a cornet duet by Messrs. Leon Gregory and James Brown, both of whom are fin-ished artists. Other excellent numbers were: Banjo selection, Archie Bryce; ukelele solo by Alfred Truman; mouth organ solo, Norman Wight; flute solos by George Yendall and Thomas Bain, and choral selections by Tom Brock, assisted by a band of voices made up of John James McFarquhar also gave a piano selection. Alex. McDougall acted as accompanist throughout the evening. Getting down to serious subjects, Mr. Yendall dealt at some length with the prospects for 1924. Conditions to his mind pointed to an exceptionally good year. In his opin-ion, 1924 will be a year of declining profits. Expenses are keeping at a high level and this, together stiff competition, will tend to show adversely where efficiency is not practiced. If manufacturing plants throughout the Dominion then efficiency results. He pointed out that efficiency was in keeping oneself keyed up to one's work. CHURCHES IN SONG WILL MARK 'GREAT BIRTHDAY'

Elaborate Services Planned For Sunday To Signify Holy Day.

SPECIAL SOLOISTS

Mrs. Innis Carling and Miss Marion Beck To Sing at St. Paul's Cathedral.

"Which made the world stand This phrase has been used times without number to express men's awe at the thought of the Great Birthday. After 2,000 years, when other births have been forgotten, when great men have lived and died, and their name becomes but a printed word on a dusty page, the obscure manger birth is still sufficiently potent to make the world stand still once more Other holidays and other holy days have separated themselves from the years, have flourished a brief span, and then became a memory, but the birthday of Our Lord still impels men to take one day each year apart from other days separate and distinct, as one day of days upon which the earth and things earthly may be forgotten.

Of Christmas, the modern world has made both holiday and holy day. Next Tuesday will be the holiday, a day given over to the children, to a spirit of generosity, of cheer and good will. Tomorrow will be the holy day. In the churches there will world apart from the world men w. There will be celebrated that birthday before which men's minds have gone down in awe and ament. Before the obscure birth and the simple life of Christ, great minds been humbled, acknowledging nething which transcended all something which transcended all earthly laws, and demanded more than anything else in life with a great intangible force that faith, upwhose invisible but none the less firm foundation, all of life is built.

Christmas services have been in the minds of clergy and congregations for days past as the Christ-mas feeling in the air gathered nearer. The results tomorrow will nearer. The results tomorrow will be special music, special sermons and services, and a more inspired effort adorn the churches with those of Christmas which mean its greatest celebration.

Each clergyman will be with his congregation tomorrow. Few of the churches are announcing visiting or out-of-town speakers. Special soloists have been secured in many cases, and all choirs have prepared a present season, when the renewed thanksgiving can find expression

Mrs. Innes Carling and Miss Marion Beck will sing tomorrow evening in St. Paul's Cathedral. The offertory will be the Christmas section of the "Messiah." At the even-Methodist Church, where the choir, under the leadership of J. Parnell Morris will be augmented and will Church will be led by George C. Carrie. AWAIT "WINDING UP"

While the city has already seized the Ruggles Motor Truck Company in order to secure the 1922 land tax amounting to $593, City Treasure

James Bell reported today that a settlement cannot now be made until the affairs of that company had been

"wound up."
The city contemplated a sale next week of certain property of the com-pany, but after a further conference yesterday afternoon with the London treasurer states that the city will authorized as the custodian of the company's affairs until such time as a receiver is appointed by the gov-ernment, and the claim is advanced that this, being a government order prevents the city from any collection or sale of any property at this juncture. The city is not eager, how-ever, to enter into any controversy in this regard, the treasurer advises, but will wait until the "winding up" process is over. The amount is not formidable and Mr. Bell is confident that the city will be the first to col-

Sale of Property To Collect Old-Fashioned Christmas Dinner Not Forgotten by the Railway Company.

PUDDING BY TON

Turkey and old-fashioned plum pudding are looked upon as the chief items on any Christmas dinner billof-fare. These two choice dishes have not been forgotten by the dining car department of the Canadian National Railways, and starting today they will appear on both the regular a la carte and the special table d'hote menu services to be provided on all dining cars of the system from coast to coast during the holiday season. Christmas and New Year travel is the most intensive of the year, and even to place those two special items on the menu has entailed elaborate preparations and the expenditure of much thought and energy. According to Walter Pratt, manager of the dining car department of the National system, approximately 1,000 turkeys, weighing from 10 to 14 pounds each, will be required to feed patrons of the dining cars during the time the special menu is in force. Christmas pudding has been prepared, not by the pound but by the ton, for at least 4,000 pounds will be consumed on the dining cars during the holiday season.

The famous old English recipe from which the Christmas pudding is made will be of interest to housewives everywhere. The recipe as supplied here by the dining car department of the Canadian National Railways is sufficient to make six two-pound puddings. It is: 2 lbs. raisins; 4 lbs. currants; 2 lbs. chopped suet; 2 lbs. brown sugar; 1 lb. bread crumbs; ½ lb. flour; 1 large carrot, grated; 2 tablespoonsful ground ginger; 3 teaspoons cinnamon; 3 oz. allspice; 2 nutmegs, grated; ½ lb. citron; ½ lb. candied lemon peal. Rum or brandy to be added if desired. Wet mixture with 16 eggs well beaten and mix thoroughly. Put into molds or batins and tie tightly. Boil for ten hours.

Ordeal for Children.

This was quite an ordeal for the children. It really was. To stand up there, all alone, and let Father Christmas give you a great big Ma-Ma doll trial for a 5-year-old, but they did it just as easily as a grown-up and, in fact, if the truth be known, much more easily than Santa Claus and his Fred Gill Returns. Fred Gill came back after this with another of his inimitable characterizations, as Bert Williams again. He was accompanied by Mrs. A.

Cowan.

By this time it was noon, or 'dinner Time' as most of the children called it. Santa Claus told them all that he had to leave them till Christmas eve, and that he was so very, very, sorry that he couldn't wait and stay with them all the year. He wished them all the best of luck and good health for the coming year. The great Winter Gardens emptied out its three thousand children. Harry three thousand children. Happy, comforted and glad "all over" as one young lady told the paper man, that they had seen "Santa," they trailed home, a charming, laughing, perfectly happy crowd of little people and as Santa Claus said himself after it was all over, "they are dear little people. Sir Henry was speaking before an unusually large and enthusiastic gathering of the Commercial Travellers of Canada, who met from many corners of the Dominion for their annual function, and displayed a great deal of confidence in the future of the country.

In the course of his address, Sir

In the course of his address, Sir Henry was able to make the announcement that up to the 1st of December the net profits of the Nationals have reached $15,500,000, and he could confidently predict, in view of the conditions and traffic since that date, that the net operating profits for the year would amount to $18,000,000. That figure had to be set up against an operating profit of less than $3,000,000 for the previous year. than $3,000,000 for the previous year. Sees Bigger Profits.

Sees Bigger Pronts.

Looking into the future, Zir Henry was most optimistic, and he declared that he would be greatly disappointed that he would be greatly disappointed. in the people of Canada if at the end of next year there was not an operating profit of $30,000,000. A year after that it should be all clean sailing for the Canadian Nationals and for the people of Canada, as far as their railway problem is concerned.

At the same time, in spite of the fact that the present year has made great strides in developing the spirit and sentiment of public ownership of railways, Sir Henry wanted to recall that an operating profit of $13,000,000. that an operating profit of $18,000,000 which he hopes to have at the end of the year, will not meet the capital charges. So he asked for patience and consideration for another two years at least, and at the end of that time he was certain if there are no great he was certain if there are no great setbacks that the problem will have been solved. This announcement was received with considerable enthusiasm on the part of commercial travelers

The point which Sir Henry wished to emphasize was that the people of Canada must be great enough not to allow racial or other differences to stand in their own light, so far as the development of railway service is concerned. There have been some charges that the Nationals have discharges that the Nationals have dis-criminated against certain portions of Canada but this contention was that no claim whatever of any reasonable sort has ever been placed before him without having received most careful and considerate treatment. And in many cases the requests had been granted.

Maritime Complaints.

The great complaint, he stated, had come from the Maritime Provinces. They have said that they are being discriminated against, and that they are not getting the same kind of treatment which they received under the old Intercolonial system. But Sir Henry could not see that the Maritimes have any real complaint. For instance, they advanced the claim that they should not be left deserted and so had asked for a separate gent. They got that, with a man of their own at the head. They had also asked that the differential in shipping rates from the port of Halifax, which amounted to one cent on a hundred pounds, should be removed. And that also had been granted. A third claim also had been granted. A third claim they are still pressing, to the effect that the freight rates are unsatisfactory and counting against the development of their trade with the central provinces. But even here the Maritimes should bear in mind that the provinces are the market pressible effort is being made every possible effort is being made towards solving that problem, and while the matter has not yet been pressed to a conclusion, there are prospects that the solution will be ound shortly. Must Use Ports. So far as the big problem of Canada was concerned, Sir Henry felt that it was internal trade. The Maritimes, he recalled, went into confederation with every belief that their two great winter ports, Halifax and St. John, would be used to the utmost by the balance of the Dominion. Sir Henry agreed that they had every right to agreed that they had every right to hold to that belief; and so far as the rest of Canada was concerned, he felt that it was their duty to see to it that these ports are used to the utmost for the development of the Maritimes and the Dominion.

Premier Declares Loss Will Not Send Government To Country.

Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa; Dec. 21.—Although there is no question about the fact that the government regards the loss sus-

Fortunately we have a birthday this week, which helps to pass one of the long days, and it is one of the easiest birthday parties of the year. When the neighbors' children arrive they know they will find the big kitchen table full of Chrismas tree decorations in the making—colored paper to make into chains or brilliant flowers, cardboard stars, moons and snow men ready to cover with silver paper or sparkling, artificial snow—these are all to be taken home to hang on their own trees, and they have a happy, busy afternoon preparing them. Then we have a simple tea and a cake with candles, and, last of all, an old-fashloned magic lantern show which thrills them as much as the movies do their city cousins. The the movies do their city cousins. The lantern is a relic of the Farmer's own childhood, and is run by a smoky little lamp which fills the rooms with an odor without which the show wouldn't be they aren't looking.

Here is a Christmas hint for bachelor uncles who are too shy to venture into the toy departments: Go to a nice, quite sporting goods store, where there aren't any saucy girl clerks who want you to hold Ma-Ma dolls, and buy a nicely-colored decoy duck. The Mallards are especially pretty, and make such lovely, durable toys.

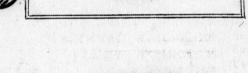

We know why we are having such beautiful mild weather these days: The seven-year-old got a big sleigh for her birthday, so probably there won't be any snow at all this winter. However, a sleigh's a sleigh for a' that, and she's having lots of fun dragging it around in the mud.

"They drove hard all night, constantly on the alert against police attack and armed to the teeth for battle if it came. Near London they found they were unpulsed to the found they were running short of gas and that the engine, in need of oil, was laboring hard. They passed gas pumps at a village east of London, but they were afraid to take a chance on being recognized, and there were houses and stores close by. It was nearly 6 o'clock when they reached the east limits of London on a govrnment pavement.

There they found an oil company's station and decided to get gas at any cost. They drove in beside the office building and tried to find somethic building. It tore a ball in the wall of the ground floor. or to take it if there was no one there. They could not find any of the employees and went to a garage at the back. There were motor crucks with small cans on the sides, but all were empty, and they could not get either gas or oil. Then some-one found a can of old oil drained off rom some engine, and they put that gers. their own machine. Ryan stayed the back seat of the car with a prace of gats and guarded against surprise, while Brown and one of the surprise, while Brown and one of the others made a search. While they were there a motorcycle policeman swung into the place and Ryan held both guns on him prepared to plug him through the curtains if he made

"We are tourists and are in trouble,' Brown told the cop. 'We have run out of gas and oil and we cannot find anyone here. We are eaving five dollars to pay for what ever we get here, but we cannot wait, because we have got to go on to Port Huron.'
"The story sounded all right to the cop, and he told them there was a garage open further up the street. Then they asked him the way out, and he escorted them part way down and directed them out to the Sarnia

"Ryan was afraid the policeman was pulling a trap on them and sat with his guns on him every inch of the way. When they got safely out in the country again Ryan was able to laugh, but he ordered the gang to take no more chances on comedy. "They rode through to the St. Clair River, and at Sombra arranged Clair River, and at Sombra arranged with a bootlegger to shoot them across to the American side in a launch. They were safe on the Michigan side before noon. That was the only risky situation on the whole trip through from Toronto to the American side."

The story of the Toronto bootlegger finds a striking verification at the plant of the Canadian Oil Comparies on Dundas street in Pottersburg, where three men and a woman stopped last September to replenish Found the Bullet. "I left the plant at 6:35 that morning," said Harry Lawder, of 380 Hale street, night watchman for the Can-adian Oil. "As usual I looked around to make sure that everything was all right and I unlocked the doors of the truck garage so that the men could get out for the day. That afternoon the manager called me back and asked me if everything was all right when I left. came at 6 o'clock said that the fivegallon cans had been taken off the sides of the motor trucks and had been thrown around the garage floor.

The caps were taken off the tanks, where someone had tried to get gasoline from the top, because the drain cocks were locked. They had tried all the oil tanks and out on the east side of the building we found a pail that one of the men had left in the garage the night before, with oil drained off from a motor.

"I insisted that I had not left the place until 25 minutes to six and finally my word was backed up by Motor Cycle Policeman Monahan.
Monahan said that he had driven up to the station just before six o'clock and had found three men and a woman in a car with a Toronto carrying some of the cans and Monahan thought they were being waited on by some of the employees. Later he said he saw them getting gasoline at a pump on Dundas street near Lyle street, and they were asking the way out to Windsor."

Lawder handed over to The Advertiser a 45-calibre Remington U. M. C.

the building between the garage and where the tourists' car had stood.

"It was just a couple of days after the Toronto bank robbery, and I thought of the bandits as soon as I

Children of the Hospital Staff Gather Around Christmas Tree.

Forty little people, children of the staff and attendants at Westminster Hospital, enjoyed a jolly Christmas party last evening in the recreation hall at the hospital. Following sup, per, an enjoyable entertainment was given including many numbers by the children and solos by Dr. Towers, who acted as chairman of the eve ning and the Misses Tingey, Brazier and Farrow. Excellent music, pro-vided by the hospital orchestra un-

How Can a Girl Get Acquainted With Nice People in a Strange City?—Should a Girl of Sixteen Become Engaged?-The Bad-Tempered Girl Who Is Triffing With Love.

Dear Miss Dix-How does one make friends when one is "a stranger in strange land?" I have lived here for two years, and today I know exactly two men, one of whom is so undesirable that I avoid him as much as postulation of whom is so undesirable that I avoid him as much as postulation of whom is so undesirable that I avoid him as much as postulation of whom is so undesirable that I avoid him as much as postulation of the property of the pr financially embarrassed, so that he doesn't come around very often. I know possibly twelve girls, but they Supper Is Served in Billiardare not friends. They have never called on me, and have never invited me to their homes. One of them frankly told me that she had he own circle of friends, whom she had gone to school with, and she didn't care to add to the circle. At church I was so completely ignored that it was humiliating. I haven't been to to decorate the mess room and ante church for more than a year, because when I did go no one knew I was So I spend my time in this man ner: I work from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., except on Saturdays, when I have a half-holiday. Then I go to a movie and do a bit of shopping. Excellent dance music was provided and after the first half of the program had been enjoyed, supper Sundays I do nothing. My evenings are spent with a book or a game of

I ask you what kind of an evening is that for a girl who is pretty, and full of life and pep, who dances, and likes a good show, and dresses well and who is a good talker, and a better listener? So I ask you again how can a nice girl get acquainted with the people she would like to know when SALLY. she goes to live in a strange town?

You have propounded one of the greatest riddles in the world, Sally. The churches, the women's clubs, the social workers, humanitarians and philanthropists have acquired gray hairs trying to devise some plan by which the friendless in a city could establish social relations with their fellow creatures. But nobody yet has ever been able to formulate any plan of bringing congenial strangers together, and of making wholesale introductions that would not have in them every element of danger to the unsophisticated, and offer every opportunity of crime to the evil-minded.

So the tragedy of loneliness in cities goes on and pretty young girls like you, with their feet aching to dance, and their very souls hungry for boy and girl comradeship, sit up and eat their hearts out in vain longing, while plenty of nice boys, who are dying for just such girl pals, wander R. Hunt, Col. and Mrs. Morgan, Mr. forlornly up and down the streets, and think how fine it would be if they and Mrs. J. Smallman, Mr. and Mrs. only knew a nice girl like the girls back home.

And nobody knows how to bring the two together. That's the pity of it. Cheer up, though Sally, this isolation doesn't last.

After all, a city is not a deserted island, and sooner or later you will meet some boy or girl whose aura corresponds to your own, and he or she will introduce you to his or her friends, and their friends will introduce you to their friends' friends and before you know it you will be in your own tight little circle, and barricading against newcomers yourself.

But remember this: You have to make your own calling and election sure. When you are introduced to people you have got to "sell" yourself to them, you have got to make them want to know you better. You have got to be attractive enough to them to make them follow up the introduction. It is a matter of personality, and it's up to you.

Dear Miss Dix-I know a girl who is good-looking, with a very at tractive personality. She is also an accomplished pianist and singer, and already at the age of sixteen she has attracted attention by her work, and great promise is being held out for her future.

This summer she became acquainted with a gentlemanly young fellow of twenty-two years who is just commencing his college course, expecting Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Little, Mr. and Mrs. E. S work his way through. He has been calling on her almost every evening Mrs. W. J. Baxter, Major Kenneth Ingram, Capt. and Mrs. Beresford, for the last three months.

Her parents are willing for them to become engaged, and wait until such time as he is in a position to marry. Do you think she is capable of deciding her whole future life at the early age of sixteen years? W. A.

Certainly not. A girl of sixteen is still a child with a child's taste and a child's judgment. She is no more capable of picking out a husband than she is of steering a ship across the ocean, or running a corner on Wall Street.

Nothing is more curious than that a mother, who wouldn't let a girl at a happy Christmas party given by the Mothers' Unit in the Parish choose a fur coat for herself on her own unaided judgment will let her Hall. Over 125 children were presselect her life mate, and that a father, who would not trust her knowledge of men and things to make a hundred-dollar trade, will let her gamble with

A girl of sixteen has no idea in the world of what sort of man she is going to like when she is twenty-two

The very type that appeals to her at sixteen fills her with disgust or bores her to tears, when she arrives at woman's estate, and while an engagement is not so disastrous as an early marriage, it is a heavy handicap.

For a young girl to be engaged during her school days is a fatal blight on her education, for one thing. She cannot put her mind on her studies if she is waiting for love letters, and her attention is distracted from her work by wondering what her fiance

For another thing, it cuts off a girl's opportunities in the bud. It keeps other men away from her, and does her out of all of the gay, carefree, irresponsible fun of girlhood. And the girl who has missed that has missed the gift of the gods.

Parents are certainly very foolish who let a young girl tie herself up in the meshes of a long engagement. It is far better both for her and the young man to remain free until they are ready to talk matrimony as well

If they truly love each other, they will stand without being hitched, and if they don't, it will be far better that there will be no hated halter to break.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—My trouble is that I cannot seem to get along with the young man to whom I am engaged. When I am pleasant he is lovely and there is nothing he would not do for me. He never begins a fight with me, although he tells me that there are lots of things that I do of which he doesn't approve, but he will not spoil my happiness by nag-

But when I get grouchy, and am hateful, he can stand it for just so ing. Then he loses his temper and says that he doesn't care if we break off the engagement.

Do you not think that if he really loved me he would love me whether UNPLEASANT. am in a good temper or a bad temper?

No. Why should he love you when you are disagreeable and unreasonable? A high-tempered woman, giving rein to her passions, is every whit as disgusting as a drunken woman. Love survives many things, but not temper. DOROTHY DIX. Copyright, 1923, by Public Ledger Company.

Lew Talbot's Presentation of "Wine, Women and Song" Features Comedy.

Lew Talbot's presentation of "Wine, Woman and Song" next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Grand promises a show always popular on the Columbia "wheel" and, this year, made more attractive than ever by new scenery, costumes and mirthful scenes. Bert Bertrand, who is featured in Hebrew comedy, Harry S. LeVan, his first assistant, and S. Levan, his first assistant, and Nate Busby, a black-face funster of droll manners, will carry the laugh-impelling incidents, while a bevy of attractive beauties, headed by Gertrude Ralston, Betty Burroughs and Viola Spaeth, will contribute the necessary elements of vivacity that make burlesque the favorite entermake burlesque the favorite enterinment with the whole family.

Bert Bertrand wrote the book and Max Ferhmann supplied new music for "Wine, Woman and Song." Bertrand's style of Hebrew comedy has gained for him increasing popularity with the burlesque "fans" for the reason that his methods are original and his "Jew" a unique creation in stage business. Harry S. LeVan presents an eccentric style of comedy, featuring a routine of dancing steps that are said to be decidedly out of the ordinary. Nate Busby, Jimmie Walters and Otto Johnson are other men of versatile ways in entertaining.

But, after all, burlesque would be less attractive if mere man was in the ascendancy throughout the show, for beauty of female face and figure lends a charm that even good, hearty, clean comedy cannot entirely sup-plant. So it is that Gertrude Ralston, Betty Burroughs and Miss Spaeth, they are attractive and talented principals, will be backed by a chorus of 20 singing and dancing girls to embellish the musical num-

Home-made, but Has No Equal for Coughs

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with sore ness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with cropp and you want quick help try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds. There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto Ont.

Great Comedian Will Appear At Grand Theatre On January 7.

The preliminary interest that has en aroused by the announcement that Sir Harry Lauder, the famous singing comedian, and his company of entertainers, are to appear at the Grand, Monday, January 7, matinee and evening, is not surprising. Lauder is one of the world's most interesting personalities. He is not only an artist to his finger tips, but he is also an individual whom the great of the earth love to honor. In England he is the friend of royalty and the nobility; in the United States he has been a guest at the White House, and has been honored by many of the country's most representative or-ganizations. He is thoroughly demo-cratic—a man of the peopl, despite the fact that he has received the accolade of knighthood—and his mil-lions of friends and admirers include rich and poor alike.

Lauder's confessed mission in life—and his remarkable career proves the truth of it—is to radiate sun hine through the medium of his homely songs and lilting melodies. That his songs and fitting melodies. That his mission has been successful is attested by the fact that his public has grown year by year until the theatres where he sings are rarely large enough to hold the crowds that want to hear him.

One of Lauder's latest songs breathes the spirit of his entire philosophy. It is called "Singing Is the Thing to Make You Cheery," and those who have heard it declare that among all Lauder's cheery songs this is the observer's heartern per song song this is the cheeriest. Another new song which is said to make the smiles race over the face of the most phlegmatic is a descriptive melody of the singer's own little corner of Scot-land. It is called "Bella the Belle o' Dunoon," and its title suggests the individuality and merry lilt that is characteristic of all Lauder's comedy

There is a universal desire to see —and hear—Lauder. No artist is more sought after; and the fact that he is coming to this city meets with popular approval.

The advance sale of tickets for the engagement of Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche," Metro's mammoth masterpiece, which will be seen at the Majestic Theatre all next week, starting Monday evening, with daily matinees thereafter at 2:15, gives evidence that the amusement seekers of London are prone to take advantage of the wonderful opportunity given them to witness this pinnacle of the silver screen at the same time it is being shown in New York, Chicago, and the largest cities of the United States, instead of waiting for a year or more before the film is released in the general program.

has undoubtedly "Scaramouche established Rex Ingram as the master mind of cinema producers, inasmuch as he has not only reached new heights in dramatic art in his staging of Rafael Sabatini's famous story, but has had the astuteness and good fortune to offer it with an absolutely flawless cast, and this in itself is a wonderful achievement, when it is considered that the cast of principals numbers thirty, and ten thousand extras were employed in the making.

It required six months of research work before the first setting of "Scaramouche" was started. A complete staff of native Frenchmen and historians was maintained throughout the term of production. Neither pains nor expense were spared to make even the tiniest detail accurate.

In re-creating the numerous his torical scenes and characters in the story, personal assistance was re-ceived from the Carnavalet Museum in Paris; from Mme. Tussaud's Mu-seum in London; from Rafael Saba-tini, the author, himself an historian; cent Danton, a great-grandson of Danton, and from various other authoritative sources. Tells of Study of Psychology in Order To Produce "Scaramouche."

Directing a mob is more interest ing than directing an individual player, is a sidelight reflection that Rex Ingram has made in regard to his Metro production of "Scaramouche" which comes to the Majestic, Monday evening, December 24th, 1923.

"The Mob," he declares, "is in itself a character so powerful, yet so subtle, that it can dominate some of the biggest moments the screen knows. Yet the treatment of a mob can never be too subtle, its reactions must all be gauged by the most elemental emotions. It must be either gay, serious, noisy, excited or silent. Its movement must always be consistent with those principles of mob psychology which recently have been outlined by scientists.

"Before I began my work on "Scaramouche" I spent a great deal of time reading Rosa's book, "Social Psychology," and in developing the picture I found I could apply many of his principles about mob behaving.

"My greatest difficulty came in my ing than directing an individual play-

"My greatest difficulty came in my effort to accentuate mob effects. To accomplish this I selected certain players who took places in the fore-ground and did special things. I found that though individual work of this sort was highly impressive, it soon tended to weaken the mob effect, for as soon as an audience became interested in a single individual of the mob it lost interest in the more important activity of the mob as a whole.

"My most interesting scenes, I believe, include the procession of the people of Paris, and the riot scenes."

"Scaramouche" is declared the picture of the year!

Some Comments to Make About the 1923 City Council. Editor of The Advertiser:

Sir,—I have been reading that Mayor Wenige will not allow any ney expenditure to go into the city London bill for 1924. Probably he is going to adopt the pay-as-you-go policy that he made so much about in 1923. Among things not provided in the estimates is $4,500 for advertising the Western Fair; $2,000 for the Old Home Week, mak-ing $6.500; city hall plans and prices ing $6,500; city hall plans and prizes, ordered by Mayor Wenige and his mayor has discriminated against me city has is a plan that is said to look like a city hall, but that looks like a barracks. There will be an over-draft of $20,000, unless we get the taxes from the annexed area, and I don't think we will. There were five aldermen who fought all the way through to prevent this unlawful expenditure on the city hall plans. We were beaten, but we got the people to vote yes or no on the question of building on the McCormick site, and they told what they wanted, and it showed that the postage saved will be greater than the interest lost.

An alleged heldup man with four charges against him was given bail on $200,000 in Montreal. Why should there be any bail given at all in such like a city hall, beta a barracks. There will be an over-draft to $20,000, unless we get the taxes from the annexed area, and I don't think we will. There were five albarracks. DENNY BROOKS

A STORY OF COURAGE. BY ELENORE MEHERIN.

"Where's Denny? Where did he go?" Lizzie, with the box tucked under her elbow, sent the sharp, small eyes darting over the amphitheater. "I'm sure it's nice in him not to wait, and we came all the way over all go up to the hills and have a little picnic. And I'm sure Denny would have enjoyed that."

"Oh, he would have just loved it, Lizzie!" Katy raised her program quickly, shaded the laughter in her eyes. "He'li be orful sorry to miss it."

haven't you?" Lizzie asked curiously "Tve meant to come over, but it's so hard with the baby. I suppose we might go down there."
"Why, of course!" the hospitable Katy answered, but she thought.

"Now everything is spoiled! They'll stay all afternoon. They'll be there when Denny comes back, and I know he was going to take me for Martha came up and whispered "Wouldn't you let me wheel you, Katy? I saw Denny, but he didn't ee me. Mamma saw him, too!"

Katy had prepared a lunch for three. She wasn't sure that it would stretch out for six, but once they were at the barn she grew light. hearted, eager to hear the comments. Lizzie would make when she saw

"Now, don't mind fixing up things, Katy—we'll just have what Lizzie's

But Katy was in the kitchen pulling down lettuce, tomatoes from the cooler and Mrs. Traynor cut the bread, opened cans of beans, sliced some corned beef. Lizzie stood in the doorway. "If I had an apron, Katy, I could help. I don't want to spot my new skirt. Oh, you're throwing too much of that lettuce away. We don't need so much to eat. I'm sure I've brought sandwiches enough for four. Oh, you're terribly extravagant, Katy."

"Yes, Lizzle—I just love to be extravagant! That's the way we keep eat them on the way home we have enough here." Katy was busy passing salad, cold meat, asking Mrs. Traynor to bring the tea, the cake. Lizzie's eyes wandered greedily about the room. "I'm sure it's real nice here, Katy. I'm sure I can't imagine how you could have such a place and Denny not making any money."

"Didn't you know we were rich, Lizzie?" Katy laughed. "Denny earns more than we spend. We even think about taking a trip to Europe, we, Mr. Traynor? We've talked bout going to Alaska and Egypt. You know, engineers travel."
"I suppose Denny'll get pretty

In the midst of Lizzie's injured plaint Denny, whistling softly, pushed the door. Katy caught the blank the door. Katy caught the blank astonishment in his brisk "Hello! Well!" Then he was kissing Aunt Josie and she was saying, "I'm glad, Denny," and patting his hand.

That's natural enough.' Martha sat on the sofa, an ungainly, quiet girl, like her mother gainly, quiet girl, like her mother. She was looking over a kodak album. "Oh, here's a picture of Violet, mama, isn't it? Oh, I remember just how she looked."

Aunt Josie glanced at the picture, picked up the book and stared at it, slow tears gathering in her eyes.
"Yes, that's your sister Violet. That's just the way she was."
"Why don't we ever see her, mam-

"Gawd knows, I'm praying for it!" The tears dropped.

Lizzie sat upright, little eyes gleaming. "Now, you're going to cry, mama. I'm sure that's considerate in you, and you know what papa says—we're not to speak of her.

Emmet says that, too!"
"Is that so, Lizzie Borley?" Denny's white teeth showed—the dignity
"The morning was gone. "Well, of the morning was gone. "Well this isn't papa's house, and it's not Emmet's. And Violet's name will be spoken here as long as there's a roof on the place!" Lizzie's think skin flamed under the heavy powder. "It's just like you, Denny, to fight with me and what did I do? I only tried to avoid trouble. I'm sure that's all. And you wouldn't be so brave if you knew what I know, and I guess Violet Borley's not worth fighting about! She's too lazy even to work. She won't keep a job! That's what's become of her! Just going straight down and dragging the family's name and not returning it. That's wh she did! Borrowed $2 from Sadie Foley and never paid it back!"

Aunt Josie's face was a broad, anguished stare. "Lizzle, Lizzle, what are you saying? Is this true? Oh, my Gawd!"

"Well, I guess I don't tell lies,

"Why didn't you tell me before?"
Aunt Josie pressed her hands to her month.

"Yes, and have you crying and saying I was to blame. As if I could help it if she wanted to degrade

Referee Ends Battle After Herscovitch Takes Several Counts of Nine.

MAYBERRY BEATS BURNS

ronto, Dec. 21.-Mickey Walker easons tonight why he is the top notcher, and the bout with Moe Herscovitch, the Canadian champion here did not go the regulation distance. It was stopped towards the end of the sixth, when Referee Lou Marsh put an end to the proceedings, after Walker had hit Herscovitch with everything he had, and had sent him down for a number of counts of nine. Walker weighed 148 and Herscovitch 152.

Herscovitch started in in a flattering manner, and he took the first round. He landed a left hook and a right uppercut that jarred Walker, and in a mix-up near the ropes Walker had a cut over his left eye opened. At close quarters Walker had a slight edge. Walker took the second round by the speedy use of both hands to the body. In the next round Herscovitch was more cau-tious, and Walker commenced to go out in front. But McMillan wanted to show pep, so when he crossed the field he yelled to the Giant bench, calling McGraw "Muggsy." He did this several times.
McGraw got aboard him. What a tongue lashing that little fellow got!

McMillan went to Manager Donovan and inquired the reason. "McGraw is a man well along in years," Patsy told him, "and that word always offended him. Coming from a fresh youngster, it's all the worse. You'll never get anywhere doing that. Now, I want you to go right to McGraw's office in the club house tomorrow and apologize, explaining that you didn't understand.' The next day young McMillan, like bearding the lion in his den, went traight to McGraw and apologized in the most manly manner. The way he did it so impressed the Giant manager that he was from then on one of McMillan's best friends and McMillan showing him tricks about hitting and fielding.

A Six—Is Here

Built by Hudson under Hudson Patents

Essex closed car comforts now cost $230 less than ever before. Also with this lower price you get an even more attractive Coach body and a six cylinder motor built on the principle of the famous Hudson Super-Six.

It continues Essex qualities of economy and reliability, known to 135,000 owners. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

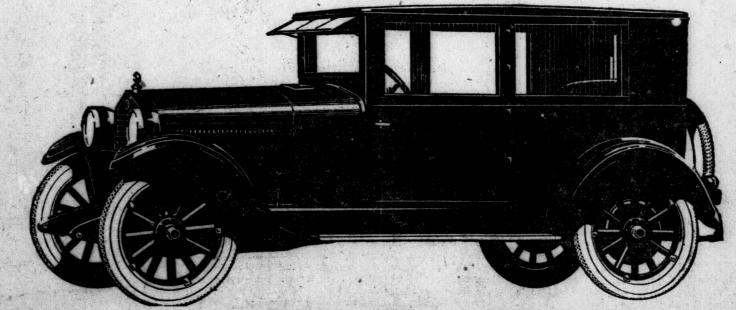

You will like the new Essex in the nimble ease of its operation. Gears shift quietly. Steering is like guiding a bicycle, and care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. That, for the most part, is done with an oil can.

The chassis design lowers the center of gravity, giving greater comfort and safety, at all speeds, on all roads. You will be interested in seeing how this is accomplished.

Greater fuel economy is obtained. The car is lighter, longer and roomier. You will agree that from the standpoint of appearance, delightful performance, cost and reliability, the new Essex provides ideal transportation. Coach

THREE PERSONALITIES IN MEGAN LLOYD GEORGE

Had Curious Theory That She Was Kate Duffy, Dorothy Smith, and Megan Lloyd George

DON'T think Megan Lloyd George could have been more than five or six years of age when first I met her," says T. P. O'Connor. in T. P.'s and Cassell's Weekly. the simple tastes of the family and of the man who even at that time was the second figure in the empire.

In the morning there entered into my room a little being who seemed like a sprite from another world, with her chubby little face, with her soft Welsh voice. She was possessed of sparkling, quizzical, searching eyes—the eyes of her father, to whom she bore a most striking resemblance—and she handed me daintily a cup

She was then a good deal-of a dream-child, for she had a curious theory about herself-namely, that she was not one, but three personalities: she was Kate Duffy, an Irish girl. and Dorothy Smith. an English girl, and finally she was Megan Lloyd George.

I entered into this mystic spirit, and asked her whether I would be able to see at tea-time-Kate Duffy and Dorothy Smith, and would Megan Lloyd George also be there?

She answered with the same seriousness, and assured me that I would see all the three young ladies at tea-time. Even then she had something of the quick repartee of her father. Once she paid him back a little loan of money he was supposed to have given her.

"Megan," said the father, "you know our Welsh proverb, that the two bad payers are those who pay too soon and those who pay too "Yes," replied Megan promptly, "but what about the man who pays back?" I did not see her again till many years afterwards, when I made a speech at a Welsh dinner. She introduced herself to me. There wasn't the smallest necessity, for I recognized again her familiar appearance, and especially those bright, quizzical eyes of hers. I was delighted the other day when I found that she had lived up to my expectations; for here is an amusing account I find from the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph in New York-my friend, Mr. Bullen:

What does Mr. Lloyd George's daughter think about? Enterprising newspaper reporters have attempted to find out.

Much amused by the blunt, intruding personal questions of the typical American newspapermen, Miss Megan made ready but reticent replies, like her father, not telling more than Dog Incident Gives

"What do you want to be?" was one question. "I haven't decided," was the answer.

"Well, are you going to get married or go into politics? Are you in love with anybody?" "I am not in love now," declared Miss Megan, "and I may either go into politics or get married-or both."

"Perhaps you have some other sort of career in mind-literature, the stage, the movies, or

"Perhaps I have," said Miss Megan. "Do you approve of women smoking cig-"I don't know anything about it," was the reply. Then Miss Megan took a turn at questioning her interrogators. "Why do reporters ask such silly questions?" she inquired. The newspapermen were unable to make as ready a reply as she had to their queries.

Unsociable Socialist is Ramsey MacDonald, Feels Deeply, but Lacks Little Human Touches be prime minister of England." This was the way Sir Philip Gibbs described Ramsey MacDonald last February. And now, sooner than Gibbs expected perhaps, his prophecy seems about to be fulfilled.

The young Scottish lad who 42 years ago helped keep himself alive by being a stableboy is thus scheduled to become a prime minister of England. In other words, to a large section of England the end of things seems to be not

"Society," in truth, has little sympathy to hope for from Ramsey MacDonald. He grew up to manhood fighting "Society." Repeatedly, 'he found the path of his hopes blocked by a supercilious snub. Even when he was still quite a young child he resolved to become a never made efforts to make friends. barrister, but for want of what is called "interest" he had to help in stables, to water horses, to run errands. It was useless to display talents that could not be cultivated or aptitudes that could not be exploited by an employer. John Bull, in the dark years of the war, even questioned his right to bear the name of MacDonald, reproducing a birth certificate in an attempt to show that he was registered as Ramsey, an illegitimate child. It was in the little Scottish fishing village of Lossiemouth that he was born 57 years ago. Nobody's parents could have been poorer. But his mother was a cultivated woman. A legacy of ambition and pure English speech, uncommon in that neighborhood, she left to her son. Among his richest memories now is his mother's love and encouragement.

Naturally, MacDonald grew to manhood with firm conviction that society was unjust to the worker. It was in that frame of mind that he launched himself on London at twenty years

His progress was repaid, for he had brains, more than Lloyd George, more than one Tory of prominence has had to admit. Even in the old days, the pillage dominie had quickly discovered young MacDonald's extraordinary ability and inordinate industry, and prevailed upon the lad's parents to allow him to study for the profession of teaching.

MacDonald, as his critics are fond of reminding him, has never been, in the old accepted sense of the term, a laboring man. He has never labored in the workshop or in the fields. He was a clerk in a London warehouse, studying science in his spare hours. He was a leader writer on a Liberal evening paper. He became private secretary to Mr. Thomas Lough, M.P., making a preliminary acquaintance with parliamentary affairs in this way.

There was no stopping him. He wrote and spoke on socialism in his spare time. He edited Socialist library, contributing to it a book of his own. Twice at Southampton and Leicester, he went down to defeat, but, once again, in 1906, he raised the Socialist flag again at Leicester and led the poll.

Downing Street when the French delegates were present. A newspaper reporter, mistaking Mr. MacDonald for M. Phillipe Berthelot, French foreign secretary, approached him and began, in passably good French, to ask him his views on the reparation question.

Ramsey MacDonald stood and gaped at him. Then he gave a shrug and a gruff: "I am not Monsieur Berthelot," and walked away.

Besides he always dressed

The hand of sorrow had been laid heavy upon him, for in a brief period he lost a child and a wife-a woman of angelic sweetness of character, the niece of Lord Kelvin and closely related to W. E. Gladstone on the paternal side. Early in life the terrible conditions she had witnessed in work among the poor led her to become a socialist and throw in her lot with the Independent Labor party, of which her future husband was the head. She brought him money and perfect comradeship. With his three daughters now remaining, he lives in a colorless, standardized little villa at No. 9 Howitt road, Belsize Park, Hampstead.

After all, he is not perhaps the great Bogey that some parts of England would have us believe. He believes that socialism should be a political rather than a revolutionary movement. He is for the capital levy and gradual state ownership and operation of fundamental industries. But this he makes clear is to be extremely gradual. The socialistic state, in his opinion, can best be accomplished by legislative means. Bolshevism and communism have always met with his opposition by every means. The line of demarcation between Communism and Socialism, to him, is very clear. Under Communism, according to him, the state not only owns the land and its industries but owns the people as well. They are designated for certain work and assigned certain pay, whether they will or not. But under socialism the people are free. They can select their own work. They are no more the slaves of the government than come vigil. This gentleman was his host at the time of his last visit to Toronto. He expected that after the fatigue of his lecture at Hart House the poet would be ready for slumber, but Yeats proved to be a real Dublin nighthawk. Perhaps it would be more appropriate to call him a nightingale Anyway, his lecture had made him thoroughtly wideawake and put him in a wonderful conversational mood.

He told literary anecdotes. He chanted his own poems. He crooned Erse sagas. One o'clock struck. Two o'clock struck. Yeats grew fresher than ever, but his host was yawning, hollow-eyed, on his chair. He was not accustomed to late sessions with the muses.

The only thing that kept him awake was a terrible fear that he might fall off his chair and disgrace himself for ever. At last, about four in the morning, either the poet became exhausted or he observed his host's somnolent condition. Anyway, he called the seance off and went to his bedroom.

He must have passed an exceedingly restless night, for in the morning it looked like ex-Premier Nitti's house after the Fascisti had got through with their visit. The bedclothes were strewn everywhere in great confusion. When it was all sorted out it was found that the poet had left behind his hair brush and pajamas and a few other articles indispensable to his toilette.

The host had to send these articles by special delivery to New York, so that Yeats might present his usual immaculate appearance to his next audience. In spite of the honor of entertaining a genius, this Toronto admirer of poetry in future will prefer for domestic comfort one of our more sedate Canadian poets.

Yeats recently received the Nobel prize in person at Stockholm. But Sweden's capital is famous for its night life. It may be that his Swedish host easily beat him in an all-night contest. In Toronto at any rate the poet was an easy winner. His host remembers him not as a nightingale, but as a nighthawk and a night-

Shinning down a rope at midnight, into a nestful of industrious tomb-robbers, is a pastime which at least does not lack excitement. There were eight at work, and when I reached the bottom there was an awkward moment or two I gave them the alternative of clearing out by means of my rope, or else of staying where they were without a rope at all, and eventually they saw reason and departed.

Remodel Niagara Falls to Get More Power Ambitious Projects to Improve Upon Nature

Horseshoe Falls, from American side, when 160,000 cubic feet of water flowing over.

Both Canada and U.S.A. at Peak Load Exceed Amount Agreed Upon — Shall New Islands Be Set in River Above Falls, or Will a Submerged Weir Do the Trick?—American and Canadian Plans Differ.

By W. R. PLEWMAN

HE future of Niagara falls, one of the greatest natural wonders of the world, is giving serious concern to the governments of Canada and the United States, and is likely to lead to the negotiation of a new treaty between the two countries for the division of the water form-

In both countries there are practical persons who say that the scenic beauty of Niagara must not interfere with the use of the water to drive the wheels of industry and brighten the homes of the people living within a radius of 150 miles. These utilitarians are opposed by a multitude who argue that it would scarcely be short of sacrilege to destroy or seriously mar the natural attractions of the falls and rapids.

Theodore Roosevelt was one of those who opsed the idea that Niagara's beauty must be sacrificed to the prosperity and comfort of the communities adjacent to Niagara falls. His view was that Niagara falls was the heritage of the two nations and should be preserved as a joy to the eye and an object lesson for the whole hu-

Fifteen years ago, when Roosevelt's influence was at its highest, the value of electric energy was not as generally appreciated as it is to-day. The alarm created by Roosevelt about the rush to build great power plants on either side of the river at the falls was responsible for the cancellation of franchises and the making of a treaty in 1909 which limited Canada to the use of 86,000 cubic feet of water per second above the falls and the United States to the use of 20,000 cubic feet. Experts agreed that the total of 56.000 cubic feet, one-quarter of the flow, could not be exceeded without harm to the beauty of the falls.

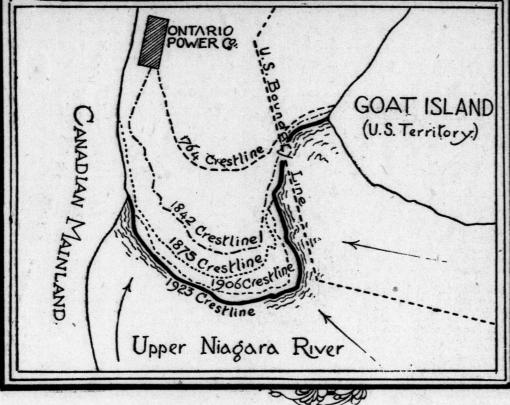

At the time the treaty was made the Chicago rainage canal was already taking 3,000 cubic eet from the great lakes system and from Niagara falls, diverting the water from its natural hannel and carrying it off to the Gulf of Mexico. The Welland canal was then taking about 4,500 ubic feet, of which 3,000 feet were being used for power purposes, this water also being diverted away from Niagara falls, but restored to the great lakes system. The treaty made no direct reference to either diversion, and the international joint commission which deals with waterways matter never has been asked to pass judgment

Both Canada and the United States are using for power purposes the full amount of water named in the treaty—that is, 36,000 cubic feet per second for the former and 20,000 cubic feet for the latter. Indeed, they are exceeding that amount, the United States claiming that as long as her diversion per 24 hours does not exceed 20.000 cubic feet per second on the average she nay take more during limited periods. The U.S. var department which handles such matters has uthorized the American power company at the falls to take up to 20 per cent. more than 20,000 cubic feet per second during the peak load period

Canada was not asked whether she agreed with this interpretation. At one time Ottawa, while scarcely vocal, was understood to disagree with the Washington viewpoint. A recent despatch from Ottawa suggested that Canada had not adopted it yet. But the power companies on the Canadian side think they should be able to do what the American company does, and they are taking additional water, so that the total Canadian diversion at the falls has reached 38,500 cubic feet during peak load periods.

At this point it might be well to observe that Ottawa has treated Niagara falls with comparative indifference as against the intense interest hown for a generation by the authorities at Washington, who have kept engineers making measurements, preparing reports, conducting experiments, and generally exercising an intelligent oversight. Until recently no one has kept a sheck on the water diverted by the various companies on the Canadian side. The Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park commission collects certain rentals from the power companies based on the horsepower developed. The courts ruled that the commission could not collect rentals if more horsepower were illegally developed. The commission has never measured the water passing through the plants.

The duty of seeing that Canada does not exceed the limitation set by the treaty to the use of water at the falls rests on the federal authorities, but has usually been overlooked. At the adian cataract is awe-inspiring, and each returnpresent time Hon. Mr. Stewart, minister of the ing visit to them increases the wonder that the interior, is gathering data relating to the use of water by the various plants.

Remedial Measures Needed

ITH the power plants on both sides of the boundary utilizing all the water allowed by the international treaty, if not exceeding it, and the public clamoring for fresh supplies of electric energy, what is to be done? The prevailing opinion among those who have faced the whole situation is that a much larger diversion of water for power purposes should be sanctioned under conditions that would preserve Niagara engineers should perform various surgical operations on the river, cutting away its bed here, building up there, and regulating the flow in a way that would provide a remedy for much of the harm done and to be done by man to the

The view that vastly greater water diversions can be made without detracting from the beauties of the falls, and without remedial measures being taken, is not borne out by investigation. Only 10,000 cubic feet of water is passing over the 1,000 feet wide American falls to-day, which means an average depth of only one foot. These falls are entirely on the American side of the river. They are very pretty, forming a long snowwhite screen of water which permits of a close-up view from favorable angles. Any curtailment of the present flow would seriously mar the appearance of these falls.

American citizens try to make themselves believe that the American falls provide a more beautiful view than is offered by the Horseshoe falls, which happen to be mostly within Canadian territory. Their engineers say that the bulk of the water goes over the Horseshoe falls in the notch near the centre of the falls, which are 2,600 feet wide, and that because of the location of this notch the heaviness of the prevailing mist, and the unfavorable angle of view, the Unbiased visitors to Niagara do not share this view. If the American falls are pretty, the Horseshoe falls are majestic. The thunder of the mighty volume of water pouring over the Can-upper lakes are not drained dry. More than twenty times as much water goes over here as takes the plunge at the American falls. The water dashes 165 feet down to the level of the river below the falls-known as the Maid of the Mist pool-and impelled by its own weight continues on down and down for more than another 165 feet, so that the total drop may be nearly 350 feet before the water begins to rise to the surface of the lower river.

But even the Horseshoe falls are prejudicially affected to a slight degree by the present. In its latest annual report, now in the printer's diversion of water for power purposes. True, a hands, the commission, which has Mr. P. W. great volume of water is always passing over the centre of the falls. But on either side, where the water is shallower, the varying in the flow due to changing levels in Lake Erie appreciably narrows the falls and the varying in the consumption of water for power purposes, while less cognizable, is apparent to the naked eye.

Photographs recently taken by the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park commission would even support the view that the amount of ironing done by the housewives of Ontario is reflected in the appearance of the falls. Appearing herewith is a picture of the Canadian end of the Horseshoe falls on a Sunday last month when industry was resting and the power generation was low. Alongside of it is a picture taken on a Tuesday, twelve days earlier, when industry was busy and when the housewives' ironing brought on the peakload power period. It may be that the level of Lake Erie had some bearing on the result. But it will be noticed that on the Sunday the water was flowing on the right to the abutment wall while on the Tuesday it stopped many feet to the left. Also the Tuesday picture shows a big strip of the precipice uncovered by water,

The view of the U.S. government engineers that "The scenic beauty of Niagara falls has been appreciably damaged both by the recession of the apex of the Horseshoe falls which is proceeding at the rate of about four to six feet a year and by the diversion of water for power and

Artificial Islands Suggested

NUMBER of plans are being suggested for enhancing the beauty of the falls while permitting an increased diversion of at least 24,000 cubic feet per second for power pures. The international joint commission has onsidered the building of a dam at Buffalo at a cost of eight million dollars which would raise the level of Lake Erie by two feet and Lake on by nearly one foot, and permit an increase of 20 per cent. in the low water flow over the falls. The dam would really be a submerged weir, half a mile long, and having a series of U.S. government engineers champion this dam at the mouth of the river, plus a submerged weir, curved in form, 1,380 feet long, to be built across the central part of the rapids upstream from the "notch" in the Horseshoe falls. In ddition, they would cut down the high Canadian end of the falls and also the shallow area on the American side near Terrapin point. This would epen the water on the edges of the river and falls, and distribute the flow more evenly. The Americans would also put in a submerged dyke extending from Goat island to Chippawa. These ans mean more benefit to the American side of unnatural in view of physical conditions. The cost of these works would be about six million thirty in number, would be not unlike the Three Sister islands in appearance. It is believed that they would hold back the water and make the flow more even, and that with a little chipping away of the river bed near the sides of the stream, submerged weirs would then be unnecessary, although the dam at Buffalo would be a desirable supplement.

Mr. J. H. Jackson, C.E., superintendent of Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park Commission, is one of those who support the island plan of equalizing the flow. The park commission. also has gone on record as favoring this plan. Ellis, of Toronto, as chairman-Mr. Ellis being also chairman of the Toronto Transportation Commission and chairman of the Toronto Hydro Commission-not only comes out definitely for the islands as against the submerged weir, but deprecates the American suggestion that the volume of water and the mist are not attractions and that a much larger increased diversion than 24.000 cubic feet could be made for power purposes. The report says:

"The commissioners believe that the volume of water pouring over the Horseshoe is most impressive and that a reduction of almost 50 per cent. as is recom mended cannot be made without sacrificing some of the majesty of the scene. Neither does it appear safe to concur in that the central veil of mist detracts from the charm of Niagara. Indeed, it enhances the appearance at high stage under clear weather conditions but with strong winds it is far from pleasant.

needs of existing developments could be taken from the river if compensating works were to be constructed, but the park nmissioners are of the opinion that the building of islands in the upper rapids. the lowering of the rock ledge at the exdistinctly artificial construction as is practicable, should be the basis of negotia-States for the restoration of scenic

Test With Model of Falls

HE idea of placing artificial islands above the falls has supporters in the United States. American engineers have been secretly at work testing the idea. They have constructed a large model of the falls and upper Niagara river, in which the three cascades and the river bed are faithfully reproduced, and are gathering data thereby as to the effect of little islands on the natural flow.

One evidence that water needs to be drawn to the extremities of the falls is the fact that the scenic tunnel in the gorge on the Canadian side, which is 800 feet long, the end of which used to be behind a solid body of water, has to be extended. Early this summer only spray was falling over in front of the last outlook. To improve the view the park commission blasted away two feet of rock at the crest of the falls over a stretch of 75 feet. That appreciably improved the scenic effect. But the commission is now proceeding to extend the towards the centre of the falls. If the submerged weir plan were adopted, coffer dams would have to be built on either side of the river on the crest of the falls, creating large dry areas which would permit of the excavation of shoal spots as shown on the accompanying diagram. The location of the proposed engineers say that from three to three and a half feet depth of water should be allowed to go over the reformed crest, or about 70,000

As Americans see it. 24,000 additional cubic feet could be made available for power purposes as soon as the regulating dam at Buffalo is installed. But with the submerged weir near the crest, the additional diversion could be safely increased to 44,000 or 50,000 feet. It is claimed that a flow of 50,000 cubic feet would be ampl to sluice ice over both the falls and that the constant flow, with the remedial dam operating, would be about 180,000 cubic feet. That would leave from 100,000 to 110,000 cubic feet available for power purposes as against 56,000 being

At least 90,000 cubic feet is needed to take care of ice in the Maid of the Mist pool. There is no likelihood of trouble on that score, for with 70,000 cubic feet flowing over the falls and the quantity of water already being poured back into plants, all the additional diversion could be used elsewhere. Canada's share could be used for a second Chippawa canal or tunnel and the U.S. for a canal that would develop power with the maximum drop near Lewiston. All experts are agreed that no more water should be un nomically used for generating purposes at

Of the first increased diversion of 24,000 cubic feet for power, the Americans propose to take 20,000 feet, leaving Canada only 4,000 This, they an even division of all boundary waters in the great lakes system and Canada now is getting more than her share at the falls. Divided as they suggest, the two countries would both be getting 40,000 cubic feet. The additional 4,000 feet would be handy for the Chippawa canal, enabling it to produce up to capacity, but it would not warrant the building of a second

Chicago's Drainage Canal

W HILE Chicago is taking upwards of 10,000 cubic feet for her drainage canal, there is no possibility that Canadians will consent to an cubic feet taken into the Welland canal for power will have to be checked off against the Chicago diversion should the latter ever get international sanction.

If the total diversion at Niagara were increased to 80,000 cubic feet, the calculations might work out this way: CANADA. Welland Canal power 3,000 c.f.s. At Niagara now 36,000 c.f.s. New diversion 7,500 c.f.s. Total share water 46,500 c.f.s. UNITED STATES. Drainage canal 10,000 c.f.s. At Niagara now 20,000 c.f.s. New diversion 16,500 c.f.s. Total share water 46,500 c.f.s.

Thus Canada would be getting 7,500 c.f.s. of the new diversion and the U.S. 16.500, and any further increased diversions would be on a straight fifty-fifty basis.

It would be quite possible to take enough water from the Niagara river near the Whirlpool, with a 90-foot drop, to develop 240,000 horsepower of electricity. It seems that this could be developed much more cheaply on the American side than in Canada. Our "cousins" even regard the cost of development on our side as prohibitive ,so they suggest that take all the water that is available. A better plan might be to have an international development and make a fifty-fifty division of the

Wearing Away Process

NY kind of remedial measure will check the flow over the notch of the Horseshoe falls and the dangerously fast eating away of the rock. Much of the recession is due to huge rocks being thrown about in the lower river by the action of the water, exercising a scouring effect. The lower strata are softer than the upper but the latter collapse after a period of undermining. The crest line of the falls in the eighteenth century and at different periods since then is shown on a diagram. The notch was more acute a few years ago. Since then some heavy falls of rock have made it more of a horseshoe in

The falls have been wearing away for 30,000 40,000 years. American engineers suggest that in 30 or 40 years the notch may be carried over to their side of the boundary, which also is indicated on the diagram, but this is extremely unlikely. It is more probable that at a later period the American falls will be dried up by the recession of the Horseshoe. The treaty of Ghent was intended to divide the waters of the great lakes system evenly between Canada and United States and its authors succeeded fairly well. But at Fosters' Flat in the Gorge 80 per cent. of the flow is on the American side and at the falls 93 per cent. is on the Canadian side.

The new waterways treaty that must be negotiated as a preliminary to the construction of the deep St. Lawrence waterway and power development should adhere to the principle of a fifty-fifty ownership in the waters of the great lakes system. It should declare to what extent existing diversions are validated and require all new diversions for whatever purpose to receive the sanction of the International Joint Com-

BUTTERFLIES TO ORDER FRENCH BREEDING FARMS

WHAT must surely be one of the most fascinating industries in the world is carried on in Southern France, where special butterfly farms have been established. Here, under scientific guidance, hundreds of beautiful specimens are bred. Cross-breeding has been tried, and numerous experiments are conducted to obtain bril liant and original markings on the wings of these insects, which are afterwards sold to collectors or for the adornment of women's hats The farms are provided with special leafy trees and plants on which the eggs are hatched. Directly the young appear the branches are cut off and taken to a specially ventilated room, where they are placed in vases of water.

As soon as the tiny caterpillars have eaten up this first supply of leaves fresh branches are provided. Having been in an even temperature for about two weeks the young caterpillars are taken out into the open, where they are placed on plants that are protected from birds

When they have become fully grown this protective net is removed, and soon they retire into cocoons or roll themselves up into leaves. These are collected and stored in specially ventilated boxes, where, in a very short time, butterflies of wonderful hues are evolved .- Tit-Bits.

The cofferdams would be temporary works to enable areas on each side of falls to be need off and shoals removed where indicated. The submerged weir would be permanent.

MONTREAL LEADS GRAIN EXPORT FOR CONTINENT

early, and it wasn't long before the proverbial Yuletide throngs began to appear.

Despite the fact that the majority of purchasers were a trifle more tolerant of prices, today's changes in the market values of produce were scarce, with the exception of turkeys, which featured with a slight jump over Thursday's mark. Two days ago choice birds were selling from 20c to 30c per lb wholesale, but today the price advanced from 24c to 27c. The prevailing retail prices were from 27c to 30c per lb. A few were asking 35c, but sales were not forthcoming, and the prices were dropped. Some birls, mostly large ones, could be purchased at 25c per lb.

Saturday's supply was not as large as Thursday's, and it is predicted by many that a goodly quantity will be brought to the city on Monday. The prices will likely remain fairly steady.

Chickens were in slow demand at 20c to 25c per lb, while ducks and geese were not selling much faster at 22c to 25c, most people being apparently intent on a turkey dinner since the price has dropped almost 300 per cent within the past two years.

WEEKLY TRADE REPORT

Canadian Press Despatch.
Winnipeg, Dec. 21.—The weekly trade report of the Canadian Creditmen's Association, Ltd., reads:
Halifax—Wholesale trade satisfactory;
retail business improving. Collections fair. St. John—Wholesale trade good; re-tail trade fairly satisfactory. Collec-

St. John—Wholesale trade good; retail trade fairly satisfactory. Collections fair.

Montreal—Wholesale trade generally reporting heavy holiday business, but regular orders still given out in small amounts, with very little spring business being placed. Retail business very good on the whole. Collections in the wholesale trade show a higher percentage than at this time last year.

Toronto—Busines with both wholesale and retail trades for heavy goods has been materially restricted, owing to the mild weather prevailing. Sales in other lines, excepting as above, are well ahead. Christmas shopping has started in earnest, and fairly heavy trade is anticipated. Collections not improving to any extent, and it is hoped these will pick up after Christmas. Employment situation normal for this season. Mining active. Lumber, pulp and paper trades continue busy.

Winnipeg—Wholesale trade has not shown much improvement, being still handicapped by mild weather. Retailers busy with Christmas trade, and reporting fair volume. Collections fair.

Regina—Wholesale trade generally good. Retailers report better business at city points than in the country. Collections slow.

Saskatoon—Wholesalers report some improvement over last week. Retailers feeling stimulus of Christmas buying. Collections fair.

Calgary—At the present time business throughout the country and city districts is really good. Collections, however, are only fair.

Vancouver—Wholesale and retail grocery trade quiet for this time of year.

Drygoods quiet, but improvement expected. Boots and shoes quiet. Collections slow.

FORDS LOOK!

BARGAINS IN FORDS!

THIS week's list of reliable used Fords should eatch the eye and fancy of anyone who ever had the idea of driving his own car.

PRICES have been pared down to absolutely rock-bottom. There is certainly no excuse for being without a car these days. And it is easy to finance one, too. Just pay us a modes sum when you take the car you choose The balance can be spread over a year if you wish.

DON'T forget. You take no chances or any of the used cars sold by Middle sex Motors. The ones we sell all have the attention of our corps of Ford ex-perts. A used Ford that does not give satisfaction is not good advertising for perts. A used Ford that does not give satisfaction is not good advertising for us, and that is why we make absolutely sure before any car leaves our salesrooms that it is in Al mechanical condition. We invite prospective purchasers to bring their own mechanicany of your friends who know anything about a Ford — to ins, ect the car you are about to buy.

Poincare Defends Occupation As Only Possible Means of Collecting.

SECURED MUCH COAL

Associated Press Despatch. Paris, Dec. 21.—Premier Poincare, eplying to adverse criticisms of the tuhr operation from the government's opposition, today reviewed the entire situation in the Chamber of Deputies. He produced figures purporting to show that France and Belgium had obtained more than 5,000,000 tons of coal and coke since January 11, the beginning of the occupation, as compared with what he termed a 'probable zero" had not the guarantees been taken. He added that with 27 per cent of the entire Ruhr production assured for 1924, the shipments next year will reach more than 26,-00,000 tons.

The premier reiterated the government's intention not to evacuate the territory beyond the Rhine "until we are completely paid," and lauded the occupation as an effective means of bringing Germany to the realisation. bringing Germany to the realization that she must come to terms. Concerning the experts committee appointed by the reparation commis-

The following wireless was received yesterday from Capt. Donald B. MacMillan, now in winter quarters near Etah, North Greenland, 700 miles from the North Pole, by Amateur Radio Operator Len Weeks. Mr. Weeks was experimenting with his radio receiving set when he suddenly caught the call from WNP, the MacMillan Arctic schooner Bowdoin.

We were driving with our Eskimo dogs and sledge miles from the ship over the hard surface of the the ship over the hard surface of the sea ice looking for polar bears, when we heard a tinkling of sleigh bells. As Eskimos never have bells on their dogs we knew that it must be Santa

And sure enough in a few minutes his six fine reindeer came bounding down the valley so rapidly that I was afraid old Santa would go by and not see our dog team at all. But he has sharp eyes and sees everything. He pulled hard on the beautiful seal-skin reins and yelled Whoa, Snow-flake! and Whoa, Starlight! and stopped right where we were.

And my what a sleigh! It must have been his best one, for it was made of branching horns of reindeer beautifully woven together and shoot with glistening white walrus tusks. Over the back hung a magnificent

I kept my eyes closed so long that I began to think that Santa had forgotten all about me. Then he said, "Now you may open them." We were in a magnificent snow-covered valley bordered by towering black cliffs over a thousand feet high above our heads. They glittered like diamonds and apparently were so near that we could almost pluck them out of the sky.

> First he took me into the library where there were hundreds and hun-dreds of big Books containing thousands and thousands of names of children. And here for the first time I met Mrs. Santa Claus, a dear old lady with snowy white hair who loves all children. In front of her was a little radio set and she was listening and asking mothers what their boys and girls would like most for Christmas,

for Christmas.

Beyond the library there were rooms and rooms. In fact, Santa doesn't know how many there are. "Which room would you like to see first," he inquired. "The doll room is right this way," he said, and led me to the end of a long hall to a door marked Dolls. Inside I could hear children laughing and, do you believe it, talking. Eskimos! Yes, the room was filled with Eskimo kiddies, all busily dressing dolls and putting wheels on doll carriages.

In other rooms there were apples, oranges and popcorn and heaps and oranges and popcorn and heaps and heaps of candy. There were planos and diamond rings for mother, cigars and neckties for father. My, what a busy man Santa will be the night before Christmas, trying to deliver all those wonderful presents. And after we had seen the toys, drums, tin whistles, little puppies, bunny rabbits, and all the rest, Santa harnessed a fresh team of reindeers and we went galloping up through the valley and down the coast to the Bowdoin. Santa has gone back to his ice

WHERE WILL YOU SPEND CHRISTMAS?

In all the cycle of the year there is no time that brings families to-gether as does the Yuletide. Though knows all about who makes them.

He put the phones to his ears and his fingers on the little dials. "Now I have Toronto, now Chicago, now Dallas, Texas, now Prince Rupert," he said. "I often call up mothers and find out how their children behave." That is how Santa finds out so many things about us and why he is so content to live way up here, for he can listen to all the world and can hear people talking and heartiful music from Europe Canada.

He gether as does the Yuletide. Though you were at the ends of the earth you would long to be home for Christmas and if it were at all possible you would be there. In the long ago when traveling facilities were very limited, people journeyed many weary miles and endured great hardships that they might be with friends and loved ones on Christmas Day. Today it is so different. The modern railway enables you to cross the continent in a few days in comfort. This year there promises to be the continent in a few days in comfort. This year there promises to be the usual heavy Christmas and New Year travel, north, south, east and west, and in order that you may reach your destination as comfortably and speedily as possible, Canadian National Railways are making preparations far in advance. Anyone wishing to pay for the traveling expenses of relatives or friends from any point, need only to place the money in the hands of nearest ticket agent of the line; our representative will him.

I wondered if Santa would go straight out over the ice of the polar sea to the North Pole, but no, when we were far beyond Anoritoo, which means "place of winds," he told me
