and would have passed on, but she detained him.
"Yes, it came this morning. They have arrived in Chicago, and she is delighted with her magnificent new home. She says she will be a social queen by reason of her husband's wealth, and declares she is glad she married him instead of you. I am ashamed of her, the feeble, heartless girl! She even invited me on my old love for you, and suggested that perhaps now she had proved faithful, I might win you back to your old allegiance."
Stung by Violet's heartlessness, he cried, warmly:
"Ah, would that I had never wandered from that first allegiance, and wounded your true heart, dear Amber."
"Ceil! Oh, Ceil!" she cried, with a melting glance that encouraged him to add:
"Is it too late to go back, Amber?"

CHAPTER XXXVII.
It was the proudest, happiest moment of Amber Lauren's life when Ceil Grant, stung to madness by the supposed mockery of Violet, cried out in the heat of resentful passion:
"Ah, would that I had never wandered from that first allegiance, and wounded your true heart, dear Amber! Is it too late to go back?"

By a clever falsehood she had stung his pride and forced him into a proposal sooner than she had dared to hope.
He could think of nothing for a moment but his blind anger against heartless Violet, and his sudden wish to show her that he was not wearing the willow for her wicked desertion.
How sweet and noble Amber's conduct seemed by contrast with Violet's perfidy. He felt conscious of a torturing regret that she had ever come into his life, and that he had ever promised of happiness never to be filled.

He had no love to give Amber, but he knew she would prize gratitude and esteem; so he rushed into the trap she had set for him, and looked kindly into her hazel eyes that were swimming with joy as he exclaimed:
"Is it too late, Amber?"
"Oh, Ceil, dear Ceil!" she cried, joyfully again, and held out both her hands to him. He took them in his, pressed them gently, and dropped them again.

This was their betrothal. Amber longed for a single caress, for even one cold kiss, but Ceil was too honest to prefer a wretched semblance of love that never could be a reality.
He was paying his debt to Amber, and was showing Violet that he could console himself; that was all.
But, oh, the dazzling light of love on Amber's face, the exaltation in her flashing eyes! She cried out, happily:
"I am glad that you can throw off Violet's spell so easily, dear Ceil, and I will try to make you happier than she ever could have done."
"I thank you!" he answered, gently, although he knew in his heart that her boast was impossible.

All his soul cried out for Violet, his beautiful lost love. She was false, but he knew that he could never forget.
As he stood there gazing at her radiant face, he suddenly remembered that the stern old judge who had refused to give him Violet would reject his suit for Amber as well. He was ashamed of the relief that came with the thought, but he cried out, quickly:
"Ah, Amber, what is the use of our plighting our vows? Your proud grandfather would never consent to our marriage!"

CHAPTER XXXVIII.
A week passed, very quiet and weary to our sweet Violet in her seclusion at the home of Mrs. Lavarre. To her restless heart, tortured by suspense and anxiety, the time seemed endless, but the advice of her two new friends was still to wait a while and take no steps to break up the mystery that surrounded her flight.
"If I might only write to Ceil,"

our marriage!"
"He shall consent!" Amber replied, with a proud toss of her graceful head, and she added, quickly: "I always told Violet that she could have her way with grandpapa by being more resolute, but she was timid and half-hearted, and her love for you was not strong enough to make her courageous in fighting her battles. It is different with me, Ceil, for I shall triumph, you may be sure."
He smiled at her without replying, and she added:
"But of course, we will keep it a secret just at present, and tell only your dear mamma, I think she is fond of me, Ceil, and I hope she will be pleased."
"I am sure she will be pleased," he replied, kindly, then added: "I wish I could go back with you, Amber, to tell her the news, but I am compelled to meet a client at the office this morning."
"I will excuse you, since your business is imperative," she replied, gayly, and kissing the tips of her fingers to him, passed on toward Bonnycastle.

Ceil merely lifted his hat, in token of farewell, and hastened toward his office, his mind in a chaos of gloomy thoughts.
Violet's desertion and her mocking letter to Amber rankled in his heart with a pain that the devotion of his new betrothed could not assuage.
It seemed like a cruel mockery of fate that Amber, and not Violet, was to be his wife.

How often he had dreamed in his doting fondness of the glad future day when he should lead his beautiful, golden-haired love to his mother, telling her proudly that Violet was to be his wife and her daughter, and make joy and sunshine in their home.
Alas! the dream was over. Violet was false and vain; she loved gold and social rank more than a true and loving heart. She had thrown him aside, and Amber was to reign in her stead, and he was pure and noble, but Amber, whom he could love, was heartless covous.

Poor Ceil! the future looked very dark and gloomy to his despondent heart as he wended his way off toward Violet, and Violet filled his thoughts, to the exclusion of triumphant Amber, who had hastened to Bonnycastle and imparted her news to Mrs. Grant.
The lady was surprised, though she did not permit Amber to suspect it. Intuitively she had read the girl's heart, and knew that love for Ceil had prompted all her kindness, but she had not expected that her son would so soon forget his lost Violet.

The truth flashed quickly over her mind.
She understood that Ceil had sacrificed himself to pay the debt he owed Amber for saving Bonnycastle to his mother.
"Dear, noble boy!" she thought, tenderly, and kissed Amber very fondly while she glistened a silent prayer that Ceil would soon learn to love the beautiful girl to whom he had plighted his hand since she had proved more worthy of his heart than lovely Violet, who had once been her favorite.

CHAPTER XXXIX.
A week passed, very quiet and weary to our sweet Violet in her seclusion at the home of Mrs. Lavarre. To her restless heart, tortured by suspense and anxiety, the time seemed endless, but the advice of her two new friends was still to wait a while and take no steps to break up the mystery that surrounded her flight.

"Good-morning," she cried, pausing before him, with a bewitching smile.
"I am glad I met you. I have a letter from our saucy Violet."
"Indeed!" and Ceil grew paler,

ROYAL Baking Powder

leaves neither acid nor alkali in the food.

In raising food in the old-fashioned way, with cream of tartar and soda, there is either an acid or an alkali remaining. The cream of tartar and soda bought from the shops vary greatly in strength, so that no one but a chemist after analysis can use them in the proper proportions to obtain a neutral result. A little too much cream of tartar, and there is an acid residuum. A little too much soda, and there is an alkaline or soapy taste left. Royal is compounded by expert chemists who determine by analysis the quality of all ingredients and admit none but the most highly refined. The result of its work is accordingly pure, sweet, wholesome food which can be eaten without discomfort by those of most delicate digestion. The Royal saves labor to the housewife amounting to more than its cost.

she sighed, and the thought of his trouble weighed like lead upon her spirits.
She knew not what story her enemies had invented to impose upon his credulity. Perhaps Amber had declared that she was false and heartless, and had married Harold Castello knowingly, and of her own free choice.
"She will win his heart from me, and then I shall die of despair," she moaned; but when she gazed on her opal ring she saw the beautiful jewel glowing with dazzling hues of rainbow light, and knew that Ceil's heart was still her own; no matter what cruel story of treachery and desertion they had poured into his ears.
"He loves me still, my darling!" she murmured, and took comfort in the thought, forgetting that she was bound by irrevocable ties to a man that Ceil's love could only be sorrow.

But when she pleaded so piteously that she ought to write to Ceil, Lena Lavarre gently reminded her of the hideous truth that she was Harold Castello's wife.
"To write to your lost lover would only augment his misery," she said. "Besides, your enemies will be watching for that very clue, and they would pounce upon you like merciless hawks. Be patient, dear, and wait a little while before you make a single move in this strange game you are playing with destiny. It seems to me that Heaven itself will interfere to save you from Harold Castello."
"Heaven did not interfere to save you, Lena," Violet answered, bitterly. A heart-rending sigh heaved Lena's breast, and she answered, sadly:
"I did not do as Heaven's mercy, Violet, for I was a willful, disobedient daughter, and ignored the fifth commandment in my determination to please myself. So I was punished for my sin. But wish you, dear, it is different. You are good and gentle, but you fell a victim to the wicked plots of your enemies without fault of your own, so I believe that God is watching you to save you and restore you to happiness again."
"How can I ever be happy again, bound to this guilty wretch, Harold Castello?" cried hapless Violet, with the big tears raining from her blue eyes down upon her pale, lovely cheeks.

"Trust in God and wait," answered poor Lena, reverently, and after a moment's thought, she added:
"Who knows even yet but that I may be Castello's lawful wife? In that case your own marriage would be a sham, and you would be free from your hateful bonds. I'll tell you, Violet, that I have been trying to see his valet—the one that he said acted the parson in our marriage ceremony. I shall ask him if it is true, and thus settle the doubt forever!"
All Violet's hopes hinged on this doubt. She prayed night and day that the truth might be revealed, and Lena Lavarre proved to be Harold Castello's legal wife.
"Then I should be free again—oh, blissful thought!—and my undying love for Ceil would no longer be a burden for him to come and sin! I should see him here, and throwing my arms, tell him how cruelly we both had been tricked and deceived. We would be married soon, and Amber's wicked arts could never part us again!"
But this faint, lingering doubt, that in its uncertainty saved her from complete despair, was soon to be dispipated by the truth.

Lena Lavarre had washed from her face and hands the brown dye she had assumed when she answered Harold Castello's advertisement for a French maid for his bride, and with her fair complexion, rich golden hair, and large brown eyes, appeared so beautiful that Violet did not wonder at Harold Castello's infatuation with the damsel coquette. Even now, with the pensive shade of a tragedy on her exquisite face, she was very charming.
But Lena no longer exulted in the beauty that had brought her so much sorrow. When she went abroad on simple domestic errands for her mother, she always wore a thick veil that obscured her face, and she appeared unconscious of the admiring glances that rested on her queenly form and graceful carriage. The seat for flirtation was over now, for her proud heart was broken, and Lena would be glad when death released her from her undying remorse for her ruined life and her father's untimely death.

THE ACADIAN.

Local and Provincial.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., OCT. 28, 1898.

Local and Provincial.

We predict a bumper house for Mr. Avon Saxon to night. No one should miss going.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Jenner will please accept the thanks of the ACADIAN for wedding favors.

The Presbyterian pulpit at Wolfville last Lower Horton was occupied on Sunday last by Mr. Ramsey, a student of Pine Hill College, Halifax.

Every lady attending the Concert to-night will be presented with a portrait of Mr. Saxon, handsomely finished in English style, as a souvenir.

The annual meeting of the Kings County Agricultural Society will be held at Evangeline Hall, Lower Horton, on Tuesday afternoon next, beginning at 2 o'clock.

Boy's Caps 25c, at Borden's.

See Chase, Campbell & Co's air of Clothing. Nothing in this line has ever been placed on the market and as they warrant every suit we strongly advise a personal inspection.

Mr. T. B. Messenger, of Kingston, was unusually lucky at the Welcome Soap prize competition at the Halifax exhibition. He secured first, third and fourth prizes—a gold watch, pair of opera glasses, and two engravings.

Men's Unlaundered Shirts for 50c, the best in the trade at Borden's.

Attention is directed to the announcement of the Yarmouth Steamship Co. which appears in another column of this issue. The steamers of this company have run most successfully, their trips being performed with wonderful regularity.

The annual reception of the members of the College Y. M. C. A. was held in College Hall on Friday evening last. The hall was prettily decorated with potted plants and flags and presented a nice appearance. Those present report a very pleasant time.

Boys' Suits, Reefers, Overcoats and Underwear, at J. D. CHAMBERS.

Mr. Saxon will be assisted by Miss Lawson, the vocal teacher at the Seminary—her first appearance here; Miss Jamieson, an elocutionist well and favorably known here; Prof. McDonald, violinist, of Halifax, and Miss Dakin, pianist, of Windsor. It will not fail you to miss this concert.

St. Andrew's Y. P. S. C. E. has in view a lecture and entertainment course for the winter season. They have the promise of the following well known men to assist: Rev. D. W. Gordon, D. D., and Rev. R. A. Falconer, B. D., of Halifax; Rev. J. S. Carruthers, of New Glasgow; and E. M. MacDonald, M. P. of Pictou. These men are each and all well worth listening to.

WANTED—Young lady to learn Millinery, at our rooms. J. D. CHAMBERS.

Rev. Dr. Higgins occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church last Sunday morning. In the evening the College Y. M. C. A. conducted the regular monthly missionary meeting. Revs. W. E. Boggs and George Churchill, returned missionaries, were present, and the latter gave an interesting account of the progress of his work in India during his twenty-five years of service in that field.

On Deck Again

Until further notice I shall carry on my business in the store opposite Hotel American lately vacated by Miss Baird. I shall have an almost entirely new stock and respectfully solicit a continuance of your patronage.

Yours truly, A. W. STEWART.

Personal Mention.

(Contributions to this department will be gladly received.) Mr. Clarence H. Borden left on Monday for a visit to Fredericton and other points in New Brunswick.

Mrs. Caldwell, of Boston, and Miss Cowan, of Chicago, who have been spending the summer in Wolfville returned on Saturday morning.

Mr. W. J. Balcom's many friends in Wolfville are glad to learn that his health is improving. Mr. Balcom is now at Aylesford, and expects to be able in a few weeks to return to his business here.

Rev. and Mrs. P. M. Macdonald went to Pictou last week to be present at the marriage of the former's sister, Miss Anna Macdonald, which took place on Wednesday. The groom was Mr. John Campbell McMillan, of Seattle, Washington.

Miss Macdonald spent last winter in Wolfville and made many friends who join in wishing her every happiness.

Concert at Lower Canada. The public school, of Lower Canada, of which Mr. F. Godfrey, of this place, is principal, held a very successful concert in the Temperance hall at that place on Friday evening last. The evening was a most pleasant one and the large audience present, which more than filled the hall, unanimously pronounced the affair a complete success. The manner in which the recitations, dialogues, etc., were rendered by the pupils of the school reflected much credit upon the teacher, as well as upon the talent of the performers. Misses Johnson, Godfrey and Forbes, of Wolfville, assisted with the music, and added not a little to the attractiveness of the entertainment. The proceeds are to be devoted to the purchase of necessary equipment for the school.

A Canadian Medicine.

WHICH HAS MADE A WONDERFUL REPUTATION THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

Every Cure Published is Investigated by a Responsible Newspaper—The Advertiser Has Looked Into and Given Below the Particulars of One of These Cures.

From the Advertiser, Montreal, N. B.

The Advertiser has come across still another instance of the remarkable curative powers of the famous Canadian remedy, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Mr. William Tullie, of Lower Brighton, a prominent lumberman and farmer, came very near being a cripple from rheumatism, the dread disease so prevalent along the St. John River. Mr. Tullie is now 65 years of age. Five years ago he was taken with the first symptoms of rheumatism—over exposure, the stream dries and the general hard life of the lumberman, paved the way for the lodgement of the excruciating disease.

Next meeting in Temperance Hall, Thursday, Nov. 10th, at 3.30 p. m. The meetings are always open to any who wish to become members.

The Training of Children. With children you must mix tenderly with firmness.

Daily Living. The most pointed and practical standard of daily living of which I can think, is to permit in one's self no open habit in word or deed that others might not safely imitate, and no secret habit that one would be ashamed to have the best and purest known.

Making Friends. Life is very critical. Any word may be our last. Any farewell, even admiring glances and meriments may be forever.

Home Failures. And Serious Losses from Use of Common and Adulterated Dyes.

Diamond Dyes. ARE USED BY ALL WISE AND ECONOMICAL WOMEN.

The only pure, harmless, and successful package dyes for home dyeing are the Diamond Dyes.

The imitation package dyes and the common soap grease mixtures are so largely adulterated with foreign substances that they are positively dangerous to use and handle.

The Diamond Dyes have a long record of triumphs and well-done work that has never been equalled in the history of home dyeing.

Easy, pleasant and profitable home dyeing is only possible with the tested and popular Diamond Dyes.

As there are still storekeepers who sell inferior package and soap grease dyes for the sake of long profits, so to it that your dealer gives you the Diamond Dyes when you ask for them.

It is poor judgment to pay ten cents for adulterated dyes when you can buy the guaranteed Diamond Dyes for the same price.

Send to Wells and Richardson Co., Montreal, for book of directions and sample card of 48 colors; free to any address.

Mr. Wise—Johnny, can you tell me why the little hand on my watch goes faster than the big one?

Johnny (after mature deliberation)—Papa, ain't it just like why I have to run when I go walking with you?

Bloomfield—You bet I have. He opens the property now.

Unsystematic Giving.

"Talk as much as you please about leaving every one to give according to his religious impulse, experience has proved how little men give on that plan. Human nature is given to cheating the Lord, if it were not so he would never have asked that startling question: 'Will a man rob God? yet ye have robbed me in tithes and offerings.'"

Up-Hill a Hard Path.

Being on an elevation presupposes climbing by him who stands there. No man makes progress upward without meeting and overcoming obstacles. If one is not willing to struggle to the end, he cannot reach this end. Hence obstacles and struggles are to be welcomed as essential to high attainment; not to be grieved over.

As a rule a man who has a mustache can eat twist or whickers he can stroke three times as long making up his mind as one who has't.

"I saved $500 this year by moving." "Cheaper house?" "No; I found that my wife was trying to outdress a rich woman in the same block."

"There's a young woman who makes little things count." "How does she do it?" "Teaches arithmetic in a primary school."

Minards Liniment Cures LaGrippe. Goldborough—You may say what you like about Ritickets, but he's as good as his word.

Pointedier—But consider how many bad words he uses!

Mr. Sealove (at his seashore cottage)—My dear, please tell our daughter to stop something less doleful.

Mrs. Sealove—There's not our daughter, my love. That is the fog horn.

Bilkiss—Who was it who wrote "Actions speak louder than words?" "Happer—I don't know, but I'll bet the thought occurred to him while he was trying to sneak upstairs at 3 o'clock in the morning."

"Ever been any inebriety in your family?" asked the agent who was writing out Sam Handwick's application for a life insurance policy.

"I never knew of but one case. One of my brothers got married on a salary of $7 a week."

"Papa," said the beautiful girl, "George and I are two souls with but a single thought."

"Oh, I'll don't let that discourage you," replied her father kindly. "That's one more than your mother and I had when we were married."

Minards Liniment the Best Hair Restorer. Wickwire—I don't exactly like the idea of calling one of the new ships of war The American Girl.

Yalaby—What is the matter with it? "It sounds too tame. The Hired Girl would give a much better idea of destruction and desolation."

"Pleze, sir," said an Irish traveller, "would you be so obliging as to take me great coat, here, to Boston wid yer?"

"Yes," said the man in the wagon; "but how will you get it again?" "Oh, that's mighty easy, as it is," said Pat, "for shure I'll remain inside uv it."

DEAR SIR—I was for seven years a sufferer from Bronchial trouble, and would be so nervous at times that I could scarcely speak above a whisper. I got no relief from anything till I tried your MINARD'S HONEY BALSAM.

Two bottles gave relief and six bottles made a complete cure. I would heartily recommend it to any one suffering from throat or lung trouble.

Fredrickson. J. F. VANHUSKIEK. An ill paid minister went to his deacon to ask for an increase of salary.

"Salary!" said the deacon. "I thought you worked for souls; the poor man, 'bout I can't eat souls; and, if I could, it would take a good many of your size to make a dish!"

DR. AGNEW'S HEART CURE. Saves Thousands of Lives. Four years ago Jacob Dewitts, of Hay Island, was dragged to the verge of death by a broken heart disease.

He was given up to die. From vigorous manhood he had gone to a broken dependent wreck. He procured Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, used it faithfully, and to-day weighs 215 pounds, and lives to bless the day the great remedy was recommended to him. It relieves in 30 minutes.—24.

PROSTRATED, EXHAUSTED.

NO SLEEP—NO REST.

LL do not appreciate the words of John G. Saxe, who sang, "God bless the man who first invented sleep!"

But appreciation is not wanting to those who have suffered as Mrs. White, of Mars Township, Ont., will testify.

She writes, "I was prostrated, exhausted, and unable to sleep for three months. I could not have stood this much longer, and it was only when death seemed imminent that some American Nervine became the good physician. After taking the first dose of the Nervine she slept all night, and has now been able to sleep well, and has no signs of nervousness."

This is a wonderful medicine in the several cases of nervousness, and the greatest fish-bulldog to be found anywhere in the world.—23.
