22. No action or proceeding shall be commenced or prosecuted against any person in respect of anything done in obedience to a writ of mandamus, issued by the court or any judge thereof. (N.S. 65.)

23. When it appears to the court or a judge that the respondent claims no right or interest in the subject matter of the application, or that his functions are merely ministerial, the return to the writ and all subsequent proceedings down to judgment shall still be made, and the proceedings be carried on in the name of the person to whom the writ is directed, and if the court or judge thinks fit so to order, may be expressed to be made on behalf of the person really interested therein.

In that case the persons interested shall be permitted to frame the return, and conduct the subsequent proceedings at their own expense; and, if judgment is given for or against the applicant, it shall likewise be given against or for the persons on whose behalf the return is expressed to be made; and, if judgment is given them, they shall have the same remedies for enforcing it as the person to whom the writ is directed would have in other cases. (N.S. 66.)

24. Where, under the last preceding rule, the return to a writ of mandamus is expressed to be made on behalf of some person other than the perabat pers if a in of 2 gran whic at h such it is son to whom the writ is directed, the proceedings on the writ shall not abate by reason of the death, resignation or removal from office of that person, but they may be continued and carried on in his name; and if a peremptory writ is awarded, it shall be directed to the successor in office or right of that person. (N.S. 67.)

25. No order for the issuing of any writ of mandamus shall be granted, unless at the time of application an affidavit be produced, by which some person shall depose upon oath that such application is made at his instance as prosecutor, and if the writ be granted the name of such person shall be indersed on the writ as the person at whose instance it is granted. (N.S. 69.)

Pleadings in Quo Warranto.

26. When any information in the nature of a quo warranto has been filed, the defendant may plead to such information, within such time and in like manner as if the information were a statement of claim delivered in an action, and where the judgment is for the relator, judgment of ouster may be entered for him in all cases. (N.S. 94.)

27. The prosecutor, in answer to a plea that the defendant has held and executed the office or franchise for six years before the exhibiting of the information, may reply any forfeiture, surrender, or avoidance by the defendant within the said six years. (N.S. 95.)

Pleadings in Mandamus.

28. When any return is made to the first writ of mandamus, the applicant may plead to the return, within such time and in like manner as if the return were a statement of defence delivered in an action. (C.P.R. 27.)

Pleadings in Prohibition.

29. Where pleadings in prohibition are ordered, the pleadings and subsequent proceedings, including judgment and assessment of damages (if any) shall be, as nearly as may be, the same as in an ordinary action for damages. (N.S. 57.)

Judgment by Default.

30. In case no statement of defence or other pleading shall be entered within the time limited, the opposite party may file a note of such default, in the proper office, after the expiration of the time limited, upon filing an affidavit showing such default, unless an order of the court or a judge extending such time shall have been obtained and served, in which case such note shall not be filed until after the expiration of the time granted by such order, and after the filing of such note, the party in default shall not, without leave of the court or a judge, file any further pleading; but the party entering such note may make an application ex parte to the court or a judge for such judgment as he may deem himself entitled to. (C.P.R. 29.)

Habcas Corpus.

31. If a writ of habeas corpus he disobeyed by the person to whom it is directed, application may be made to the court or a judge, on an affidavit of service and of such disobedience for an attachment for contempt. (C.P.R. 30.)

32. The return of the writ of habeas corpus shall contain a copy of all the causes of the prisoner's detention indersed on the writ, or on a separate schedule annexed to it. (C.P.R, 31.)

33. The return may be amended, or another substituted for it, by leave of the court or a judge. (C.P.R. 31.)

34. When a return to the writ of habeas corpus is made, the return shall first be made and motion then made for discharging or remanding the prisoner, or amending or quashing the return. (C.P.R. 33.)

35. On the argument of a motion for a writ of habeas corpus, the court or a judge may, in their or his discretion, direct an order to be drawn up for the prisoner's discharge, instead of waiting for the return of the writ, which order shall be sufficient warrant for any gaoler or constable, or other person, for his discharge. (C.P.R. 34.)

General.

36. Application for a prerogative writ of mandamus, for a writ of certiorari, or order to quash proceedings without the actual issue of the writ, for a writ of habeas corpus, for prohibition, or for an information in the nature of a quo warranto, may be made either to a judge in chambers or in court, or to the court en bane. The court or a judge may, if it be deemed proper, grant ex parte an order for the immediate issue of a writ of habeas corpus. (C.P.R. 35.)

37. Any writ may be served, according to the rules relating to the service of writs of summons, under the rules of the Supreme Court. (C.P.R. 36.)

38. It shall not be necessary to serve the original of any writ, judgment, order or other proceeding, but the party served with a copy thereof shall be entitled to inspect the original at the time of service, if he so demand. (C.P.R. 37.)

39. All proceedings under these rules shall be entitled in the Supreme Court and shall be styled in the matter to which they relate, so as to show the name of the applicant as informant, relator, plaintiff, private prosecutor, or otherwise, according to the nature of the case and the name of the defendant, respondent or party against whom the application is made. RULES OF COURT (SASK.)

40. In all proceedings under these rules the costs shall be in the discretion of the court or judge, who shall have full power to order either the applicant or the party against whom the application is made, or any other party to the proceedings, to pay such costs, or any part thereof, according to the result. (C.P.R. 39.)

41. The proceedings for attachment for contempt, for disobedience of any writ, judgment, or order issued or made under these rules, shall conform as nearly as may be to proceedings for contempt for disobedience of any writ, judgment or order in a civil action. (C.P.R. 40.)

42. When a cause or matter is at issue the plaintiff, informant, relator or private prosecutor, as the case may be, may, on notice of motion, apply to a judge in chambers to set the same down for hearing or trial, whereupon such judge may set it down accordingly at such time and place as he may deem advisable.

43. If the plaintiff, informant, relator or private prosecutor does not make such application within two months after the cause or matter is so at issue, the defendant or respondent may, on like notice, apply to a judge in chambers to set the cause or matter down for hearing or trial, or he may give notice of motion dismissing the cause or matter with costs. Upon such application the judge may, if the motion is to set the cause or matter down for hearing, set it down accordingly, or if the motion is to dismiss the cause or matter, make such order and on such terms as he may deem just.

Application of Rules of Supreme Court.

44. The following rules and orders of the Supreme Court with respect to civil actions and proceedings in such court shall, as far as applicable, apply to all proceedings in relation to Crown matters, and wherever by any of such rules, it is provided that any act shall be done by, or proceeding held by, or before the local registrar, such act shall be done by, or proceeding held by, or before the registrar:

RULES OF COURT (SASK.)

2. Within one calendar month after such application has been so delivered or left for him, the justice shall state and sign and deliver to the appellant a case setting forth:

- (a) The substance of the information or complaint;
- (b) The names of the prosecutor (or complainant) and defendant;
- (c) The date of the proceeding questioned;
- (d) The facts of the case;
- (e) The conviction, order, determination or other proceeding questioned;
- (f) The grounds on which the same is questioned, which must be confined to the grounds raised at the trial;
- (g) The grounds upon which the justice supports the proceeding questioned, if the justice sees fit to state any.

3. The justice shall not deliver said case until after the appellant may apply to the court en banc for a rule as provided by sec. 764 of the Code.

(a) Or the appellant may in such event apply to a judge sitting in chambers, upon affidavit of the facts, for a summons calling upon the justice and the respondent to show cause why such case should not be stated; and the judge in chambers may, on the return thereof, make such order, with or without payment of costs, as to him seems meet; and the justice being served with such order shall, if ordered to do so, state a case upon the appellant entering into such recognizance and paying the fees to the justice, as provided in said sec. 762.

5. Within ten days after the receipt by the appellant of a case stated by a justice, he shall file or cause it to be filed with the registrar of the Supreme Court en banc.

6. Upon sufficient cause for the delay being shown, the court or judge, as the case may be, may hear and determine the matter, although the case was not filed within said ten days.

7. The appellant shall state, in the notice of appeal given to the other party, to the proceeding as required by sub-sec. 2 of sec. 761 of the Code, as amended by chap. 9 of 8 and 9 Edward VII (1919), whether the appeal is to the court en bane or to a judge in chambers, and if to the court en bane the date of the sittings of such court at which it will be heard.

8. When the case stated has been delivered to the registrar for hearing by the court en banc, the same shall be heard at the next sittings of such court, which shall sit no sooner than fourteen days after the delivery of the case stated to the registrar, and the appellant shall give to the respondent ten days' notice in writing of the time and place of hearing the appeal.

9. When the case has been delivered to the registrar for hearing by a judge in chambers, the appellant shall, within five days after such delivery, apply to the judge in chambers to fix a time and place for the hearing of the appeal, and the judge shall thereupon appoint a time and place for such hearing, and a copy of such appointment shall be served upon the opposite party, or as the judge may direct:

Provided that if such application be not made within said period of five days, the judge may, upon sufficient cause for the delay being shown, fix such time and place, notwithstanding that said period may have elapsed.

10. If the court or a judge order the case to be sent back for amendment, the same shall be forthwith amended by the justice, in accordance with any directions given by the court or a judge, and transmitted when amended by the registrar.

11. An order of a judge, by whom a case stated has been heard, shall have the same effect as an order made by the court under sec. 765 of the Code, and the provisions of sec. 767 of the Code shall apply, where the decision is that of a judge, in the same way as in case of a decision by the court, and any order of the judge may be enforced by process issued out of the court.

12. In so far as these rules do not expressly make provision, whenever a case stated is brought before a judge as hereinbefore provided, the provisions of sees. 761 to 767, both inclusive, and of any amendments and additions thereto as to such a case when before the court shall, mutatis mutandis, be applicable to the proceedings on a case before the judge.

13. A justice before, or immediately after, delivering a case stated to the appellant shall transmit the recognizance to the registrar.

14. Slight deviation from strict compliance with these rules shall not invalidate any proceeding or thing, if the court or judge sees fit to allow the same, either with or without requiring the same to be corrected.

3. The keeeper of the common gaol mentioned in such certified copy of sentence is authorized, and hereby required, to receive the convict mentioned in such certified copy of sentence into his custody in the said gaol, and he and the sheriff of the judicial district in which such gaol is situated, and all other persons and authorities whose duty it is to do so, are hereby authorized and required to carry out and execute the sentence mentioned in such certified copy of sentence, according to its tenor and effect.

- Nova Scotia Crown Rules]-See Appendix to N.S. Laws, 1891.

General.

Jurisdiction of courts generally.

577. Unless otherwise specially provided in this Act, every court of criminal jurisdiction in any province is competent to try any crime or offence within the jurisdiction of such court to try, wherever committed within the province, if the accused is found or apprehended or is in custody within the jurisdiction of such court or if he has been committed for trial to such court or ordered to be tried before such court, or before any other court, the jurisdiction of which has by lawful authority been transferred to such first mentioned court under any Act for the time being in force.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 640.

Trial jurisdiction of criminal courts]—So long as the offence was committed in the same province, a court of criminal jurisdiction in that province may try the charge if the offence was committed in the county or district forming the territorial limit of the court's jurisdiction, or if the accused was found or apprehended within such territorial jurisdiction; but sec. 577 does not authorize the trial by one county tribunal of an offence wholly committed in another county by persons resident in that other county and who were not found or apprehended in the first county, but were brought there from their own county by process wrongly based upon an assumption that they had committed an offence in the county from which the process issued. R. v. O'Gorman, 18 O.L.R. 427, 13 O.W.R. 1189, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 230; R. v. Roy, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 368 (Que.); R. v. Lynn (No. 1), 3 Sask. L.R. 339, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 15 W.L.R. 336; R. v. Lynn (No. 2), 4 Sask. L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 129.

If the accused were brought from his own county to another and there committed for trial, it would seem that such committal must be based on the assumption that it will be proved that the crime was committed in the latter county, the accused not having been apprehended there so as to give jurisdiction under that head, and if it turns out at a hearing forced upon the defendant that the whole affair occurred in the county from which he was brought, and that if the true facts had been disclosed he would not have been taken from that county to answer a charge elsewhere, the foundation for the jurisdiction of a county tribunal in the county to which he was taken has failed, and the fact of his being temporarily in custody within the jurisdiction of the court will not establish jurisdiction of that court under such circumstances. See R. v. O'Gorman, 18 O.L.R. 427, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173.

Facilities are afforded by the Code for the transfer of preliminary enquiry proceedings to the place of the offence if begun in another place or county (Code sec. 665); the justice's jurisdiction under sec. 653 seems as well founded on the presence of the accused within his territorial jurisdiction where the offence was committed in another magistrate's territory in the same province as it would be on the fact of a crime being committed within his territorial jurisdiction by a person who had decamped to another place. The provision of sec. 653 is explicit in stating a justice's power to issue process for the purpose of a preliminary inquiry in "any of" the cases mentioned in sub-secs. (a), (b), (c) and (d) of that section. The justice before whom the accused is properly brought because it turned out that he was, as suspected, within the limits of the territorial jurisdiction of the justice issuing the process, may hold the preliminary inquiry (Code sec. 668); but at "any stage of the inquiry" he may, after hearing both sides, order that the accused be taken before a justice of the place where the offence was committed, i.e., the place of the alleged offence. Code sec. 665. This latter provision is not a compulsory one, but optional. R. v. Burke (1900), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 29.

The arrest and committal for trial in the one county or district is enough to confer jurisdiction on the local trial court proceeding with the trial upon such committal, although the offence was committed in another judicial district of the same province. R. v. McKeown, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 492 (Que.); R. v. Sinelair, (1916) 36 O.L.R. 510, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 328; appeal quashed, R. v. Sinelair, 38 O.L.R. 149, 11 O.W.N. 131.

The general policy of the common law was that a person accused of an offence should be tried in the county where the offence was committed; but see. 577 of the Code makes a change in that respect, leaving it for the accused to apply to change the venue; R. v. Sinelair, 36 O.L.R. 510, supra; re Seeley, 41 S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270; or to transfer the preliminary inquiry under sec. 665.

If the accused has been committed in one judicial district for trial by jury, and because of there being no gaol in that district, he is regularly taken to the gaol of an adjoining district to await his trial, he may elect a speedy trial without a jury before the district judges criminal court of the district in which the gaol is situate, although there is no pretense either that the offence was committed in that distriet or that the accused was arrested there. R. v. Harrison, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 12, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 159, 10 Sask. L.R. 436; R. v. Lynn, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 129; R. v. Tetrault, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 259.

An exceptional class of cases is that where the accused has been "ordered to be tried before" the court of district in which he was not resident and in which he was not found or apprehended, and in which it is not claimed that the offence was there committed. Such order is commonly termed an order for change of venue, and depends upon special circumstances rendering a fair trial improbable at the place where it would ordinarily be held, in the event which happened, that is to say, whether it was, on the one hand, a committal for trial in the county where the accused was found or apprehended, or was already in custody for some other offence, or, on the other hand, a committal in the district of the offence regardless of the place of arrest. As to such change of venue see Code see. 884; R. v. Stauffer, 4 Sask, L.R. 284, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 205.

There is a special jurisdiction under sec. 584 to remove possible difficulties as to offences at or near boundaries between local jurisdictions or committed in transit, and under secs. 585-588 as to unorganized or remote districts.

Territorial jurisdiction in cases of misappropriation and failure to account]—As against an employee receiving money for a company and bound to promptly pay same over to a fellow employee, the omission to account at the particular time when it was his duty to account, and a failure to account at any subsequent time makes out a prima facic case of theft, where he had omitted to make the usual entry or issue the usual voucher for the payment. R. v. Martin (1912) 2 W.W.R. 602 (Alta.).

The theft may be prosecuted in the jurisdiction in which there was a refusal to account by denying the receipt of the money where such denial evidences an intention to fraudulently convert, although in the ordinary course the moneys which the accused employee received in the regular course and issued vouchers for, would be accounted for in another jurisdiction. R. v. Martin (1912) 2 W.W.R. 602 (Alta.), eiting R. v. Rogers, 14 Cox C.C. 22; R. v. Murdock, 5 Cox C.C. 360; R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & P. 596; R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 95.

Submission to the jurisdiction]—Where the objection is one of want of jurisdiction over the person but the magistrate has jurisdiction to deal with the subject-matter of the charge and under ordinary and regular procedure would have jurisdiction over the person of the accused, the latter can waive compliance with the omitted conditions and submit himself to the jurisdiction. R. v. Miller (1913) 25 W.L.R. 296 (Alta.); Giroux v. The King, (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258; Giroux v. The King, 26 Que. K.B. 323, affirmed.

Pleading to the charge before the magistrate holding a summary trial without taking objection that the accused was illegally arrested without a warrant has been held to be a waiver of the objection. A dietum of Hyndman, J., in the latter case that the objection if raised would not have affected the jurisdiction of the magistrate is opposed to the decisions in the other cases above referred to; but see R. v. Hurst, 7 W.W.R. 994, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 160.

De facto magistrate]—Although a de facto magistrate may not be qualified for appointment to such office, the legality of his appointment eannot be inquired into on a motion to quash a conviction made by him in the territorial jurisdiction for which he assumes to exercise judicial functions. R. v. Cyr [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1185 (Alta.), eiting O'Neill v. Atty-Gen. of Canada, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. at 311 and 23 Cyc. 619; R. v. Cyr [1917] 3 W.W.R. 849, 29 Can. Cr. Single judge sitting for the court]—Sees. 577 and 580 contemplate trials by a single judge sitting as a court. R. v. Burgess, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 424 at 431 (N.S.).

Jurisdiction only in case of illness or absence of another judge]-The provincial law constituting the court may in some cases give a junior judge jurisdiction only in the event of the actual absence of the senior judge from the trial, or from the particular territorial jurisdiction. Whether it is the one or the other will depend upon the form of the statute. A commission under a statute of the province of Quebec (R.S. Que, article 3262 (a), 5, Geo, V (Que.), ch. 52, sec. 3), empowered another judge to hold the court of sessions of the peace "in case of the absence or inability to act of one or more of the judges of the court of sessions of the Peace" of a particular district, and it was held that he had jurisdiction if he began the trial in which the senior judge of sessions did not desire to sit, at a time when the latter was absent from the court room, and that his jurisdiction was not displaced by the casual appearance of the senior judge in the court room where there was no intention of intervening in the trial which it had been arranged between them should be held by the substitute judge, Brunet v. The King (1918), 57 S.C.R. 83, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16; and see ex parte Cormier, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 179; R. v. Perkin, 7 Q.B. 165; Byrne v. Arnold, 24 N.B.R. 161; Ashbury v. Ellis [1893] A.C. 339. A statement of the absence on the record even of a court of record would probably not be conclusive. Brunet v. The King (1918), 57 S.C.R. 83, 3 262; J the . ch. 3 unde

Juvenile Courts]—Where Juvenile Courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30 and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age.

Supreme Court of Alberta]—The Supreme Court of Alberta has all the general jurisdiction of the former English courts of common law and equity of general jurisdiction. It consequently possesses the extraordinary jurisdiction of the former English court of King's Bench. R. v. Hung Gee, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1133, 1134, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 411, 24 W.L.R. 862 (Alta.).

N.W.T. Act in Alberta and Saskatchewan]—Under sec. 9 of the Code, the application of the Code in Alberta and Saskatchewan is in effect made subject to the condition that if anything in the Code be inconsistent with anything in the North-West Territories Act the latter is to prevail. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (1915) 9 W.W.R. 804, 33 W.L.R. 148.

The North-West Territories Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 62, is a consolidation of the former N.W.T. Act as amended in 1905, contemporaneously with the Alberta Act and the Saskatchewan Act, whereby the two provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were constituted out of territory forming part of the then North-West Territories. R. v. Dickey, 9 W.W.R. 142 (Alta.).

The operation of this new N.W.T. Act of 1906 was expressly restricted as of necessity to the residue of the Territories. Being Dominion legislation it could, in any case, have no effect in the newly constituted provinces except so far as it deals with subjects over which the Parliament of Canada has jurisdiction. R. v. Dickey, 9 W.W.R. 142, 144 (Alta.).

The N.W.T. Act (Can.) as it stood immediately prior to the amendment of 1905 [Can.] (see Alberta Office Consolidation, 1915, of N.W.T. Ordinances, with which is printed the N.W.T. Act as of the time mentioned) was continued in force in Alberta to the extent to which the Alberta Act (Can. Stat. 1905, ch. 3; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 3, sec. 16) was not inconsistent with it, subject to the respective jurisdictions of the Federal Parliament and the provincial legislature over the several subject matters embraced in the N.W.T. Act. R. v. Dickey, 9 W.W.R. 142, 145 (Alta.).

Intimidation in labour strikes, etc.]—Sec. 501 relates to the offence of intimidation, including violence and threats in labour strikes, and watching and besetting for purposes of intimidation.

Indictable Offences.

Questions raised at trial may be reserved for decision.

579. Any judge or other person presiding at the sittings of a court at which any person is tried for an indictable offence under this Act, whether he is the judge of such court or is appointed by commission or otherwise to hold such sittings, may reserve the giving of his final decision on questions raised at the trial; and his decision, whenever given, shall be considered as if given at the time of the trial.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 753; R.S.C. 1886, eh. 174, sec. 269.

Postponing decision]—This section is to enable the trial judge to give his decision although the court, such as a court of assize, may be a temporary one held under commission and the session may have been concluded.

Jurisdiction of superior courts.

580. Every superior court of criminal jurisdiction and every judge of such court sitting as a court for the trial of criminal causes, and every court of over and terminer and general gaol delivery has power to try any indictable offence.

Origin]-Sec. 538, Code of 1892.

Jurisdiction generally]-See note to sec. 577.

Superior court of criminal jurisdiction]—See definition in Code sec. 2 (35).

Criminal courts in Ontario]—The Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 56, see. 120, declares that its provisions are not to affect the power to issue commissions for the discharge of criminal business on circuit or otherwise, or the authority of a judge or retired judge of any of the superior courts, or a judge of a county court, or one of His Majesty's counsel learned in the law, to preside without any commission at any sittings for the trial of criminal matters and proceedings. It provides that such judge or counsel when so presiding with or without a commission shall be deemed to constitute the court. This enables a judge or King's counsel to be assigned to hold a sittings for trial on request from the government authorities without awaiting a formal commission. The services of another judge being usually available, it is not often necessary to ask a King's counsel to preside.

Ontario courts and practice]-See secs. 599-601.

Certiorari to remove case from Sessions Court]—Where difficult questions of law are shown to be involved, an indictment may, in Ontario, be removed into the Provincial Supreme Court from the Court of General Sessions, by certiorari. R. v. Toronto Railway Co. (1904) 4 O.L.R. 277; 5 O.W.R. 621.

Option for trial without jury in trade conspiracy cases.

581. Where an indictment is found against any person for any of the offences mentioned in sec. 498, the defendant or person accused shall have the option to be tried before the judge presiding at the court at which the indictment is found, or the judge presiding at any subsequent sitting of such court, or at any court where the indictment comes on for trial, without the intervention of a jury; and in the event of such option being exercised the proceedings subsequent thereto shall be regulated in so far as may be applicable by Part XVIII.

Origin]-52 Vict., Can., ch. 41, sec. 4.

Option for trial without jury]—The proceedings are to be regulated in so far as may be applicable by Part XVIII, which is the Speedy Trials Act. The procedure of the latter will apply pro tanto, although the trial may take place before a tribunal which is not within the Speedy Trials clauses, Part XVIII, of the Code.

Special provision for appeal]—An appeal upon all issues of law and fact shall lie from any conviction by the judge without the intervention of a jury for any offence mentioned in sec. 498 to the court of appeal in the province where such conviction is made; and the evidence taken upon the trial shall form part of the record in appeal, and, for that purpose, the court before which the case is tried shall take note of the evidence, and of all legal objections thereto. Code sec. 1012.

Trade conspiracies and combinations]—See Code sec. 2 (38), 496-503, 581, 590, 1012; Conciliation and Labour Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 96; Combines Investigation Act, Can. 1910, ch. 9; Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, 1907, Can., ch. 20, as amended 1910, Can., ch. 29; the Department of Labour Act, 1909, Can., ch. 22.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART X1)

Jurisdiction of sessions and certain other courts.

582. Every court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, when presided over by a superior court judge, or a county or district court judge, or in the cities of Montreal and Quebee by a recorder or judge of the sessions of the peace, and in the province of New Brunswick every county court judge has power to try any indictable offence except as hereinafter provided.

Written opinions on disposal of cases not required]—There is no law compelling judges of the sessions to present in writing the reasons for their decisions at the time of their delivery. R. v. Jacobs (1917), 26 Que. K.B. 382. An appellate court may, therefore, take cognizance of the notes of judgment handed out by the sessions judge a considerable time after the judgment was pronounced. R. v. Jacobs, supra.

General Sessions in Ontario]-The General Sessions Act, R.S.O. 1914. ch. 60, sec. 3, enacts as to Ontario that the courts of general sessions of the peace shall have jurisdiction to try "all criminal offences except homicide and the offences mentioned in sec. 583 of the Criminal Code." The sessions at Toronto and Hamilton, for the counties of York and Wentworth respectively, are held in March, May, September and December; in other counties in June and December; and in provisional judicial districts at the same time as the district courts trying civil cases, the same judge presiding over both. The judge of the county or district court, as the case may be, or in case of his death, illness, or absence, or at his request, the junior or deputy judge shall be the chairman of the court and shall preside at the sittings thereof. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 60, sec. 7. And where a judge is present it shall not be "necessary," in order to constitute the court, that an associate or other justice of the peace should be present. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 60, sec. 8. In practice these courts are held by the chairman alone as regards the criminal trials jurisdiction. The office of justice of the peace and the Court of General Sessions, or Court of General Quarter Sessions, as it was formerly called, were in existence in Upper Canada before the meeting of the first Parliament of the Province of Upper Canada, that is, prior to September 17th, 1792. On the 29th May, 1801, the statute, 41 George III, ch. 6, was passed. It recited that doubts had arisen with respect to the authority under which the Courts of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, the District Courts, the Surrogate Courts and the Courts of Request had been created and were then holden in the several districts of the province, and also the authority under which commissions of the Peace, commissions of Assize and Nisi Prius, commissions of Oyer and Terminer, commissions to sheriffs and other persons concerned in the administration of justice had been issued in and for the said districts respectively, and then proceeds to enact: "That the authority under which the said courts and commissions had been erected, holden and issued, and also all matters and things done by virtue of the same are, so far as relates to the authority under which the same have been so creeted, holden, issued and done, good and valid to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and that the provisions of the Acts of the Legislature of the province respecting the said courts and commissions, or any of them, are hereby declared to extend and to be in force, except as hereinafter mentioned, in each and every the said districts respectively." This enactment, so far as it relates to the authority under which commissions had been issued and the courts of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace had been held, was embodied in the Consolidated Statutes of Upper Canada, ch. 17, sec. 1, and has been repeated in the various Revised Statutes of Ontario. R. v. Malloy, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, 119 (Ont.).

The records of the general sessions courts in Ontario counties are public records and open to inspection. Attorney-General v. Scully, 2 O.L.R. 315, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 167; R. v. Scully, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Ont.).

It shall not be necessary for any court of general sessions in the province of Ontario to deliver the gaol of all prisoners who are confined upon charges of theft, but the court may leave any such cases to be tried at the next court of over and terminer and general gaol delivery, if, by reason of the difficulty or importance of the case, or for any other cause, it appears to it proper so to do. Code sec. 601.

County Court Judge's Criminal Court]—See Code sec. 823, applying the same limits of jurisdiction to the County (or District) Court Judge's Criminal Court.

New Brunswick]—County courts in New Brunswick are not courts of over and terminer and general gaol delivery, as the circuits of the Supreme Court are. Criminal jurisdiction is given to the county courts by statute, but nothing is said to the effect that they are courts of general gaol delivery. R. w. Wright, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 88 (N.B.).

Juvenile Courts]—Where Juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30 and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age. See note to Code sec. 821.

Officials with special power in Quebec]-See sec. 604.

Special Jurisdiction.

On water between jurisdictions.—Near boundary between jurisdictions.—In respect to mail or vehicle or vessel passing through several jurisdictions.

- (b) where the offence is committed on the boundary of two or more magisterial jurisdictions, or within the distance of five hundred yards from any such boundary, or is begun within one magisterial jurisdiction and completed within another, such offence may be considered as having been committed in any one of such jurisdictions;
- (c) where the offence is committed on or in respect to a mail, or a person conveying a post letter bag, post letter or anything sent by post, or on any person, or in respect of any property, in or upon any vehicle employed in a journey, or on board any vessel employed on any navigable river, canal or other inland navigation, the person accused shall be considered as having committed such offence in any magisterial jurisdiction through which such vehicle or vessel passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which the offence was committed; and where the centre or other part of the road, or any navigable river, canal or other inland navigation along which the vehicle or vessel passed in the course of such journey or voyage, is the boundary of two or more magisterial jurisdictions, the person accused of having committed the offence may be considered as having committed it in any one of such jurisdictions.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., ch. 46, sec. 3; Code of 1892, sec. 553; Procedure Act, R.S.C. 1886, sec. 10; 32-33 Vict., ch. 29, sec. 8; 7 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 64, sec. 12.

"Within the distance of 500 yards from any boundary"]—The distance mentioned in sub-sec. (b) of the above clause is to be measured in a direct line from the border, and not by the nearest road; R v. Wood, 5 Jur. 225.

Where an offence has been committed within 500 yards of the boundary between two magisterial jurisdictions, see. 584 (b), will not enable the prosecutor to lay it in one jurisdiction and try it in another; but he may both lay and try the offence in either jurisdiction. In Rex v. Girdwood (1776), 2 East P.C. 1120, 1 Leach's Crown Cases 169, it was held on a case reserved, that a person writing a threatening letter in one county and delivering it to another person in that county, by whom it was posted at the writer's request to an address in another county, was properly tried and convicted in the latter county.

In R. v. Esser (1767), 2 East P.C. 1125, Lord Mansfield held that the sending of a letter by post directed to a person in another county was sending also in the latter county, and that the whole was to be considered as the act of the defendant to the time of the delivery in that county. 3 Russell on Crimes, 6th ed., 722.

If the accused person, "wherever he may be" (i.e., within Canada), is charged with having committed an indictable offence within the limits over which a justice of the peace has jurisdiction, the justice is empowered to issue a warrant or summons to compel the attendance of the accused person before him for the purpose of preliminary enquiry; Code see. 653; and the accused may be arrested upon such warrant in any part of Canada upon the warrant being "endorsed" by a justice within whose jurisdiction the accused may be found; Code sec. 662. The "endorsement" is to be made only upon proof, by oath or affirmation, of the handwriting of the justice who issued the same, and when made is sufficient authority to the person bringing such warrant, to carry the person against whom the warrant is issued, when apprehended, before the justice who issued the warrant or before other justices at the place from which the warrant came. Code sec. 662.

The courts will take judicial notice of the local divisions, such as counties, municipalities and polling sections, into which their country is divided for purposes of political government. Ex parte Macdonald, (1896) 27 S.C.R. 686, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 10.

Where the offence charged was the making, circulation and publication of false statements of the financial position of a company, and it appeared that the statements were mailed from a place in Ontario to the parties intended to be deceived in Montreal, the offence, although commenced in Ontario, is completed in the Province of Quebec by the delivery of the letters to the parties to whom they were addressed. R. v. Gillespie (No. 2) (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 309 (Que.). In such case, the courts of the Province of Quebec have jurisdiction to try the accused, on his being arrested there. R. v. Gillespie, supra; Code sec. 577.

JURISDICTION

The offence of fraudulent conversion of the proceeds of a valuable security may consist in a continuity of acts—the reception of the valuable security, the collection of the proceeds, the conversion of the proceeds, and lastly the failure to account for them; and where the beginning of the operation is in one district and the continuation and completion are in another district, the accused may be proceeded against in either district. R. v. Hogle (1896), 5 Que. Q.B. 59, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 53.

A court of one province is not to try an offence committed entirely in another province. Code sec. 888.

Magistrates cannot give themselves jurisdiction or retain jurisdiction by finding a particular fact one way, if the evidence is clearly the other way. White v. Feast (1872), L.R. 7, Q.B. 353; R. v. Davy (1900), 27 A.R. 508 (Ont.), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 28, 33.

A prohibition may issue to a court exercising criminal jurisdiction as well as to a civil court. Per Cockburn, C.J., in R. v. Herford, 3 El. & El. p. 136. And there is no doubt that prohibition can issue to a justice of the peace to prohibit him from exercising a jurisdiction which he has not. Chapman v. Corporation of London (1890), 19 Ont. R. 33.

Libel in a newspaper circulated in another province]-Code sec. 888. Sub-sec. (c)-Offence during transportation]-Sec. 584 (c) provides that where the offence is committed upon any vehicle employed in a journey, the person accused shall be considered as having committed such offence in any magisterial jurisdiction through which such vehicle passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which the offence was committed. But where the formal charge in lieu of an indictment alleged that the railway journey on which the offence was committed was one from Swift Current to Parkbeg, both within the judicial district of Moose Jaw, and the train, while on the journey during which the offence was committed, did not pass through any judicial district other than the judicial district of Moose Jaw, there would be no sufficient basis for a trial in another judicial district. But if the charge had alleged and it were proved that the offence was committed on a train journey from Swift Current to Regina, there might be some force in the contention that this section enabled the Crown to proceed in the Regina district, because in that case the offence would be considered as having been committed in the judicial district of Regina, as well as in the judicial district of Moose Jaw. Where, however, the charge itself limits the course of the journey to one wholly within one judicial district, sub-sec. (c) will not apply. R. v. Lynn, 3 Sask. L.R. 339; 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 15 W.L.R. 336.

2. When any provisional judicial district or new county is formed and established in any of such unorganized tracts, all offences committed within the limits of such provisional judicial district or new county, shall be inquired of, tried and punished within the same, in like manner as such offences would have been inquired of, tried and punished if this section had not been passed.

3. Any person accused or convicted of any offence in any such provisional district may be committed to any common gaol in the province of Ontario.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 555; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 14.

Offenders in Ontario provisional judicial districts]-By the Prisons and Reformatories Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 36, the constable or other officer having charge of any person accused or convicted of any offence in any provisional judicial district in the province of Ontario committed to any common gaol in the province, and entrusted with his conveyance to any such common gaol, may pass through any county in the province with such person in his custody. The keeper of the common gaol of any county in the province of Ontario in which it is found necessary to lodge for safe keeping any such person so being conveyed through such county in custody, shall receive such person and safely keep and detain him in such common gaol for such period as is reasonable or necessary. The keeper of any common gaol in the province, to which any such person is committed as aforesaid, shall receive such person and safely keep and detain him in such common gaol under his custody until discharged in due course of law, or bailed in cases in which bail may be by law taken.

586. All offences committed in any part of Canada not in a province duly constituted as such and not in the Yukon Territory may be inquired of and tried within any district, county or place in any province so constituted or in the Yukon Territory as may be most convenient.

2. Such offences shall be within the jurisdiction of any court having jurisdiction over offences of the like nature committed within the limits of such district, county or place.

3. Such court shall proceed to trial, judgment and execution or other punishment for any such offence in the same manner as if such offence had been committed within the district, county or place where the trial is had.

Origin]-6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 8, sec. 2; 62-63 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 1.

Jurisdiction of Provincial courts and justices.

587. The several courts of criminal jurisdiction in the provinces aforesaid, and in the Yukon Territory, including justices, shall have the same powers, jurisdiction and authority in case of such offences as they respectively have with reference to offences within their ordinary jurisdiction as provincial or territorial courts.

Origin]—6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 8, sec. 2; 62-63 Vict., ch. 47, sec. 2. Jurisdiction of courts and justices as to offences in unorganized territories of Canada not included in any province]—The offences here referred to are those mentioned in the preceding section 586, which formed a part of the same original enactment, 62-63 Vict., ch. 47.

Juvenile courts]—Where juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30 and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age. See note to Code sec. 821.

Offences committed in the district of Gaspé.

588. Whenever any offence is committed in the district of Gaspé, the offender, if committed to gaol before trial, may be committed to the common gaol of the county in which the offence was committed, or may, in law, be deemed to have been committed, and if tried before the Court of King's Bench, he shall be so tried at the sitting of such court held in the county to the gaol of which he has been committed, and if imprisoned in the common gaol after trial he shall be so imprisoned in the common gaol of the county in which he has been tried.

PART XII.

SPECIAL PROCEDURE AND POWERS.

Offences Requiring Statute.

Offences against Imperial statutes.

589. No person shall be proceeded against for any offence against any Act of the Parliament of England, of Great Britain, or of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unless such Act is, by the express terms thereof, or of some other Act of such Parliament, made applicable to Canada or some portion thereof as part of His Majesty's dominions or possessions.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 5.

Criminal offences declared by Imperial Statutes]—Notwithstanding the general legislative authority conferred by the British North America Act upon the Canadian Parliament to deal with the criminal law, there remains the jurisdiction of the British Parliament to legislate in matters of concern to the Empire at large, and with reference to such to deelare that an Imperial statute shall be operative not only in Great Britain, but in all British possessions or colonies. Of this class are the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, Imp., and its amendments, the Army Act, the Prisoners of War Escape Act, 52 Geo. III, ch. 156 (as amended, 54-55 Vict., Imp., ch. 69), and statutes relating to the jurisdiction of the Admiralty such as the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, Imp.

Some of the Imperial Acts having an extended application throughout British territory are expressed to be subject to acceptance and adoption of same by the local legislature or parliament so far as concerns matters as to which a constitutional power to legislate has been conferred. See the Army Act, 44-45 Vict., Imp., ch. 58, secs. 176-177, the Army Amendment Acts, 1909, and 1912 Imp., and the Militia Act (Canada), R.S.C. 1906, ch. 41, secs. 74 and 99.

In other cases the form of the Imperial statute is to make the law expressly applicable to British possessions beyond the seas (thus including Canada) and to reserve to the Imperial Executive the right to suspend by Order-in-Council the operation of the statute in the selfgoverning colony when its parliament has passed a suitable statute along similar lines. See the Extradition Act, 1870, 33-34 Vict., Imp.,

ch. 52, secs. 17 and 18; the Patents, Designs and Trade Marks Act, 1883 (Imp.), sec. 103, and Code secs. 335 (s), 486, 495.

It is submitted that in provinces other than Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia, sec. 589 has made it no longer necessary to consider whether an English criminal law statute in force in England at the time of the occupancy, conquest or cession of the province, was of such a nature as to be applicable to the newly acquired territory. See Doe d. Anderson v. Todd, 2 U.C.Q.B. 84; Beasley v. Cahill, 2 U.C.Q.B. 320; Uniacke v. Diekson, 1 James 300; Smyth v. McDonald, 1 Oldright, 274; Shea v. Choat, 2 U.C.Q.B. 11. And even as to the common law where generally adopted in a colony acquired by occupancy, the adoption may be a limited one excluding parts of the common law, incompatible with colonial conditions. Uniacke v. Diekson, 1 James (N.S.), 289; and see R. v. Mercer, 17 U.C.Q.B. 602; R. v. Moodie, 20 U.C.Q.B. 389; Reid v. Inglis, 12 U.C.C.P. 195.

As to the provinces named, Code sees. 10, 11 and 12 introduce the criminal law of England, whether statutory or common law, with the qualifications contained in those sections.

The object of the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 28-29 Vict., (Imp.), ch. 63, was to conserve the right of the Imperial Parliament to legislate for the colonies by enactment expressly made applicable to them, and where such legislation had taken place to invalidate any colonial legislation repugnant thereto; but it was not intended to invalidate colonial laws because they happened to be repugnant to English law, where no such express legislation by the Imperial Parliament had taken place. R. v. Marais, [1902] A.C. 51.

The Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, Imp., dealing with the extradition of fugitive criminals from one part of the British Empire to another for trial, is from its nature expressly applicable to and in force in Canada.

The effect of sec. 589 of the Code is to declare that unless an Imperial statute creating an offence is made applicable to Canada by express terms contained in the same or some other Imperial statute, it is not of its own force to be considered effective in Canada as a ground for a criminal prosecution; but it will be effective in Canada if it has been expressly adopted by Canadian legislation; see sees. 10-12.

English common law as applied to crimes]-

Sec. 589 must be read along with Code secs. 10-12, declaring that the criminal law of England as of the various dates therein mentioned as to the provinces of Ontario, British Columbia and Manitoba, shall be the criminal law of the province except as varied by provincial or Dominion law. See Hopkins v. Smith, 1 O.L.R. 659. It is to be noted, moreover, that sec. 589 deals only with the English statute law, and says nothing in regard to the English common law which has been held to be still operative as regards common law erimes as to which no provision has been made in the Code. 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 330. And as many of the old English statutes have been held to be merely declaratory of the common law, it may still be possible to prosecute for some common law crime overlooked in the codification, although the prosecution in such case should not in terms be under the declaratory English statute in provinces other than Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia; see sees. 10-12, and note to sec. 16.

As to British Columbia, see also re Dean, (1913) 3 W.W.B. 1037, 48 S.C.R. 235, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 374; R. v. Dean, 18 B.C.R. 18.

Repeal by Imperial Parliament of statute expressly applicable to Canada]—It would seem that the granting of a constitution and powers of self-government to a colony does not confer upon the colony the power to amend or repeal as to the colony a prior Imperial statute which "by express terms" had been made applicable to the colony, though the colony might repeal or amend the general English law, whether statutory or common law, which it had acquired by settlement or cession. R. v. Schram, 14 U.C.C.P. 318; Clement's Canadian Constitution, 3rd ed., 63. An Imperial Act expressly extending to Canada and to British Colonies is subject to amendment or repeal by the Imperial Parliament. Bank of Upper Canada v. Bethune, 4 U.C.Q.B. (Old series) 165.

If, after the grant of a constitution and independent powers of legislation, an English statute which had been introduced into a colony as a part of the general English law and not by statute expressly applicable to the colony, is repealed in England, it will continue to apply in the colony until there repealed so far as concerns such self-governing colony, because the provisions of the English repealing statute, which are substituted for the repealed statute, do not then extend to the colony. Kerr v. Burns, 4 Allen, N.B. 609; following James v. McLean, 3 Allen, N.B. 164.

Prosecutions for trade conspiracy.

590. No prosecution shall be maintainable against any person for conspiracy in refusing to work with or for any employer or workman, or for doing any act or causing any act to be done for the purpose of a trade combination, unless such act is an offence punishable by statute.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 518; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 19.

Conspiracy of workmen]—See the exception as to combines of workmen for their reasonable protection as such contained in Code secs. 497 and 498 (2).

Cases Requiring Consent.

Offences within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty.

591. Proceedings for the trial and punishment of a person who is not a subject of His Majesty, and who is charged with any offence committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, shall not be instituted in any court in Canada except with the leave of the Governor General and on his certificate that it is expedient that such proceedings should be instituted.

Origin]-Sec. 542, Code of 1892; Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, Imp., 41-42 Viet., ch. 78.

Governor-General]—" Governor-General " means the Governor-General for the time being of Canada, or other the chief executive officer or administrator for the time being carrying on the government of Canada on behalf and in the name of the Sovereign, by whatever title he is designated. Code sec. 2 (6).

Indictment not bad for omission to state the consent]—See sec. 855 (h).

Jurisdiction in Canada over admiralty offences]—The jurisdiction of the Admiralty extends over British ships, not only on the high seas, but also in foreign rivers, below the bridges, where the tide ebbs and flows, and where great ships go, although the municipal authorities of the foreign country may be entitled to concurrent jurisdiction. R. v. Anderson, L.R. 1 C.C.R. 161; 38 L.J.M.C. 12. As to jurisdiction when a ship is in dock, see U.S. v. Hamilton, 1 Mason, 152. If great ships go to the place, proof that the tide ebbs and flows is unnecessary. R. v. Allen (1837), 1 Moody C.C. 494. The jurisdiction extends to all persons on board the ship whether Britsh subjects or foreigners. R. v. Lopez, Dears. & B. 525; 27 L.J.M.C. 48; R. v. Lesley, Bell, 220; 29 L.J.M.C. 97.

The provisions of sec. 591 of the Canadian Code were taken originally from sec. 3 of the Imperial Statute known as the "Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878," c. 73, which was passed following the decision in R. v. Keyn, L.R. 2 Ex. D. 63. Sec. 2 of that statute is as follows:—

"An offence committed by a person, whether he is or is not a subject of Her Majesty, on the open sea within the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions, is an offence within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, although it may have been committed on board or by means

Sec. 7 of the Territorial Jurisdictions Act (Imp.) defines "the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions" in reference to the sea as meaning—" such part of the sea adjacent to the coast of the United Kingdom or the coast of some other part of Her Majesty's dominions, as is deemed by international law to be within the territorial sovereignty of Her Majesty; and for the purpose of any offence declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral any part of the open sea within one marine league of the coast measured from low-water mark shall be deemed to be open sea within the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions."

Offences on foreign ships while within the three-mile limit]-In the Franconia case (R. v. Keyn, 2 Ex. D. 63) arising out of a collision within three miles of the coast of England between a foreign and a British ship, and resulting in the death of a British subject on the Birtish ship, the master of the foreign ship was indicted for manslaughter; and the question arose whether a foreigner on a foreign ship was amenable to the laws of England for an offence committed on a British subject within the territorial waters of the realm. The majority of the court held that he was not within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty and was not answerable in the English courts for the offence complained of. R. v. Kevn, supra. In consequence of this decision the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, was passed; and it dealt and dealt only with offences committed on board foreign ships, whether by foreigners or by British subjects on board such ships, within the territorial waters of Her Majesty's dominions, that is, within one marine league of the coast measured from low water mark. Parliament in passing this Act was assuming a new jurisdiction: that over foreigners on foreign ships in territorial waters, a claim of jurisdiction to which other nations might not assent, and, doubtless to prevent misunderstanding with other nations, if possible, a restriction was placed upon the institution of proceedings for trial and punishment in the case of such offences by making it necessary, before instituting the proceedings, to obtain the consent of one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, together with a certificate that the institution of such proceedings is expedient. In the Dominions out of the United Kingdom such consent and certificate are to be obtained from the Governor of the Dominion. R. v. Neilson (1918) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

The view has been expressed that, in copying into the Criminal Code sec. 3 of the English Act, almost verbatim, the Parliament of Canada intended that it should be adopted with the interpretation, the definitions, and the application to which it is subject in the original Act; and that, in consequence, it applies only fo offences committed within territorial waters and by persons on board a foreign ship; and has no application to offences committed on board British ships on the high Offences on the sea outside the three-mile limit]—It is a generally accepted principle of international law that every sovereign state has exclusive jurisdiction over its public and private ships in all places outside the jurisdiction of a foreign state. All ships, with the persons and cargoes carried by them—leaving aside questions of contraband, etc., arising in times of war—are considered, while on the high seas, to be under the exclusive dominion of the state whose flag such ships legally carry. Westlake International Law, 3rd ed., p. 185, sec. 154; The Queen v. Kinsman (1853) James (2 N.S.R.) 62; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U.S. 572; R. v. Keyn, 2 Ex. D. 63; R. v. Neilson (1918) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1; and see R. v. Adolph, 12 Can. Cr. Cas, 413.

Prosecutions under the Merchant Shipping Acts, Imp.]—The Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, Imp., 57-58 Vict., ch. 60, (sees. 684 and 686), confers power on Canadian courts of criminal jurisdiction to try a person "found" within the jurisdiction of the court for an offence committed on board a British ship in like manner as if the offence had been committed within its territorial limits, if the court would in that event have had jurisdiction. The accused is "found" within the jurisdiction although forcibly brought there as a prisoner. R. v. Lopez, Dears. & B. 525.

The jurisdiction so conferred on Canadian courts by sec. 686 of the Merchant Shipping Act, Imp., is not subject to the requirement of a certificate under Code sec. 591. R. v. Neilson, (1918) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.); R. v. Heckman, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 242 (N.S.), per Ritchie, J. By the same Act (sec. 687), all offences against property or person committed in or at any place either ashore or afloat out of Her Majesty's Dominions by any master, seaman, or apprentice, who, at the time when the offence is committed, is, or within three months previously has been, employed in any British ship, shall be deemed to be of the same nature respectively, and be liable to the same punishments respectively, and be enquired of, heard, tried, determined, and adjudged in the same manner, and by the same courts, in the same places, as if such offences had been committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England; and the costs and expenses of the prosecution of any such offences may be directed to be paid as in the case of costs and expenses of prosecutions for offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England. See R. v. Dudley, 14 Q.B.D. 273, 54 L.J.M.C. 32, and 12-13 Vict., Imp., ch. 96.

The punishment for the offence so tried in Canada committed outside of its territorial jurisdiction is to be that which might have been imposed if committed in Canada, and, if such crime is not made punishable under Canadian law, the penalty (other than capital punishment) shall correspond as nearly as may be to that which would have applied on a trial in Eugland. Courts (Colonial) Jurisdiction Act, 1874, 37 Viet., Imp., ch. 27.

The Great Lakes]—Those portions of the great lakes to the east of the international boundary line form part of the Province of Ontario and are under its legislative authority and control. R. v. Mickleham, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 382, 11 O.L.R. 366.

In Regina v. Sharp (1869), 5 P.R. 135, the contention on the part of the accused was that the offence being stated to have been committed on Lake Erie, if committed in Canadian waters, the police magistrate for Toronto, who had committed the accused to the common gaol of the county of York, had no jurisdiction because the jurisdiction belonged "to the townships respectively fronting on the lakes," and if committed in United States waters there was equally no jurisdiction in the police magistrate, because the Imperial Acts under which he assumed to act did not extend to the great lakes.

In R. v. Sharpe, supra, the judge in remanding the accused into custody said nothing to lead to the conclusion that if it had been shown that the offence was committed within the territorial limits of the province, there would not have been jurisdiction in the magistrate of the county in which it was committed. He, however, held that the great lakes form part of the high seas, and were, therefore, even though the offence had been committed in American waters, under the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, and that, by the Imperial statutes to which he referred, that jurisdiction had been conferred upon certain persons, and, amongst others, upon the magistrate who had committed the prisoner to gaol. R. v. Mickelham, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 382, at 386, distinguishing R. v. Keyn, 13 Cox C.C. 403; and see United States v. Grush (1829), 5 Mason's Reports 290.

Arrests for offences committed on the high seas]—As to the issue of warrants of arrest, see sec. 656; R. v. Neilson (1918), 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

Certificate of Governor-General granting leave to prosecute]—See. 4 of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act (Imp.) enacts that "On the trial of any person who is not a subject of Her Majesty, for an offence declared by this Act to be within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, it shall not be necessary to aver, in any indictment on such trial, that such consent or certificate of the . . . Governor, as is required by this Act, has been given; and the fact of the same having been given shall be presumed, unless disputed by the defendant at the trial; and the production of a document purporting to be signed by . . . the Governor, and containing such consent and certificate, shall be sufficient evidence, for all purposes of this Act, of the consent or the certificate required by this Act."

In British Columbia, Morrison, J., held that a preliminary enquiry may be begun in respect of an indictable offence committed by a foreigner on a British ship within the three-mile limit without first obtaining the leave of the Governor-General under Code sec. 591, and the accused may be remanded for the purpose of obtaining the leave of the Governor-General for the trial and punishment of the accused. R. v. Tano (1909) 14 B.C.R. 200, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 440. The Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 (Imp.), from which Code sec. 591 is derived, was held applicable to the offence, and Morrison, J., held that the phrase "proceedings for the trial" used in Code sec. 591 must be construed in accordance to the statutory limitation which sec. 4 of the Imperial statute (quoted above) provides. R. v. Tano, supra; compare R. v. Neilson (1918), 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.); R. v. Adolph, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 413 (N.S.); R. v. Heekman, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 242 (N.S.).

Code sec. 656 gives express authority to arrest in Canada a person charged with crime on the high seas, and such right is independent of the certificate for which sec. 591 provides. R. v. Neilson (1918), 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

Admiralty offences]—See Code secs. 8, 137-140, 335 (b), 591, 656, 855 (h).

Canadian Jurisdiction over extra-territorial Admiralty offences]— See 12-13 Vict., Imp., ch. 96, sees. 1 and 2; 18-19 Vict., Imp., ch. 91, sees. 21; 23-24 Vict., Imp., ch. 122; 28-29 Vict., Imp., ch. 63; Merchant Shipping Amendment Act, 30-31 Vict. (Imp.), ch. 124, sec. 11; Courts (Colonial) Jurisdiction Act, 1874, 37 Vict., Imp., ch. 27; Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, 41-42 Vict., Imp., ch. 73; 53-54 Vict., Imp., ch. 37; Merchant Shipping Act, 57-58 Vict., Imp., ch. 60, sees. 687 and 688; Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894-1914, Imp.

When bays, gulfs, etc., form part of adjacent county]—On the seacoast it is only the land not covered by the sea which forms part of the adjoining county and therefore the jurisdiction of the courts of the county does not extend below low water mark. Bays, gulfs, mouths of rivers, harbours, ports, roadsteads, or waters between jaws of land where one can see from one bank to another form part of the neighbouring or adjacent counties, and, therefore, an offence committed in these waters is within the territorial jurisdiction and not that of the admiralty. Duguay v. North American Transportation Co., 22 Que. S.C. 517; R. v. Schwab, (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 539 (N.S.); The Wavelet Young's Admiralty Decisions, 34 (N.S.); R. v. Bruce, 2 Leach 1093.

A charge against a foreigner for theft committed upon and from a foreign ship while it was lying in a Canadian harbour within the body of the county may be prosecuted without the leave of the Governor-General, under sec. 591. R. v. Schwab, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 539. Disc 5

SPECIAL POWERS

Disclosing official secrets.

592. No person shall be prosecuted for the offence of unlawfully obtaining and communicating official information, without the consent of the Attorney General or of the Attorney General of Canada.

Origin]—Sec. 543, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 10, sec. 4. Disclosing official secrets]—See Code secs. 85 and 86.

Consent of Attorney-General]—The consent may include more than one offence; R. v. Thompson, 5 W.W.R. 157, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 78; and several offences may be included in an indictment with a separate count as to each, subject to an order being made for separate trial upon one or more counts. Sees. 856-858.

In an English case the appellant was convicted at the Central Criminal Court of an offence under sec. 1 of the Trading with the Enemy Act, Imp., 1914. Sec. 1, sub-sec. 4, of that Act provides that: "A prosecution for an offence under this section shall not be instituted except by or with the consent of the Attorney-General." It was proved at the police court that the consent of the Attorney-General to the prosecution of the appellant had been obtained, but no proof of the consent was given at the trial. No objection was taken at the trial that the consent had not been proved. The Court of Appeal dismissed the appeal, distinguishing Rex v. Bates [1911] 1 K.B. 964, and following Rex v. Waller [1910] 1 K.B. 364; Rex v. Metz, 84 L.J.K.B. 1462, 11 Cr. App. R. 164; and see notes to sees. 85 and 86. But it would seem that a conviction cannot stand if the consent has not in fact been obtained; R. v. Bates, supra; and if the indictment is dependent upon a magistrate's order of committal, the consent must be obtained before the preliminary proceedings before the magistrate. R. v. Barnett (1889), 17 Ont. R. 649.

The absence of the consent is a matter of defence. Rex v. Thompson, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 78, 5 W.W.R. 157. Stuart, J., there said: "The case of Rex v. Canadian Pacific Railway, (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 549, is clearly distinguishable. In that case the judgment went specifically upon the ground that the magistrate, before taking the information, had no communication of any kind from the Attorney-General indicating that his consent had been given. A careful examination of that case will show that the exact effect of the decision is, that before receiving an information, the magistrate must have had communicated to him in some way or other, the consent of the Attorney-General. The case does not decide what would or would not be a sufficient communication. It merely decides, that where there is no communication at all there is no jurisdiction in the magistrate to proceed."

Compare Thorpe v. Prestnall, [1897] 1 Q.B. 159; R. v. Neilson, (1918) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XII)

"Attorney-General"]-See definition in sec. 2, sub-sec. (2).

Powers of Deputy Attorney-General]—The Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 31, enacts that, unless the contrary intention appears, words empowering certain public officers to do any act include deputy officers. But see re the Criminal Code, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459, decided under Code sec. 873A, and the Lord's Day Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 153, sec. 17. It would seem to follow from that decision that the Deputy Attorney-General of a province cannot give the consent required by sec. 592, but that the deputy of the Attorney-General of Canada may do so. The public officers or functionaries referred to in sub-sec. (m) of sec. 31 of the Federal Interpretation Act would thus be limited to those appointed under federal statutes and whose removal or suspension is dealt with by sub-sec. (k) of the same section. But an "acting Attorney-General" of a province is the Attorney-General pro tem. and could give the consent. R. v. Faulkner, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 47, 16 B.C.R. 229, decided under Code sec. 873.

Indictment not bad for omission to state the consent]—See sec. 855(h).

Judicial corruption.

[§ 592]

593. No one holding any judicial office shall be prosecuted for the offence of judicial corruption, without the leave of the Attorney General of Canada.

Origin]-Sec. 544, Code of 1892.

"Holding any judicial office"]—This phrase is used in sec. 156 as to bribery or corrupt practices. Sec. 156 also deals with bribery of members of Parliament or of a legislature, but the limitations of sec. 593 apply only to the judiciary.

Leave of Attorney-General of Canada]—See notes to sees. 85, 592 and 594. Sec. 593 requires the consent of the Attorney-General of Canada (the Minister of Justice). Where, as in secs. 592, 594, et seq., the consent of the "Attorney-General" is required, it refers to the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General of the province, or in the case of a territory under federal administration, the Attorney-General of Canada. Sec. 2, sub-sec. (2).

Indictment not bad for omission to state the consent]—See sec. 855 (h).

Making explosive substances.

594. If any person is charged under section 113, before a justice with the offence of making or having explosive substances, no further proceeding shall be taken against such person without the consent of the Attorney General except such as the justice thinks necessary, by remand or otherwise, to secure the safe custody of such person.

Making or possessing explosives with intent]—See sec. 113 (b).

Omission of consent]—The appellant was convicted under sec. 2 of the Explosive Substances Act, 1883...(Imp.), for feloniously causing an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life, or of a nature to cause serious injury to property. The consent of the Attorney-General to the prosecution required by sec. 7 of the Act had not in fact been given. Held, that as the Attorney-General's consent had not been obtained to the proceedings, the conviction must be quashed. The court could not treat the absence of the consent as involving no substantial miscarriage of justice. R. v. Bates [1911] 1 K.B. 964, 27 Times L.R. 964, and see R. v. Metz (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 164, 84 L.J.K.B. 1462. See also notes to sees. 85 and 592. The failure to state the consent in the indictment itself is not fatal. Sec. 855 (h).

Sending unseaworthy ship to sea.

595. No person shall be prosecuted for the offence of sending an unseaworthy ship to sea on a voyage without the consent of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Proof of consent]-See notes to secs. 85, 592 and 594.

Indictment not bad for omission to state the consent]-See sec. 855 (h).

Sending out unseaworthy ships]-See sec. 288.

Shipping Act]—Prosecutions under Part XV of the Shipping Act may be proceeded with under Part XV of the Code, but the consent of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is essential. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 113, sec. 948.

Criminal breach of trust.

596. No proceeding or prosecution against a trustee for a criminal breach of trust shall be commenced without the sanction of the Attorney General.

Proof of consent]-See notes to secs. 85, 592 and 594.

Practice in High Court of Justice in Ontario.

599. The practice and procedure in all criminal cases and matters in the High Court of Justice of Ontario which are not provided for by this Act, shall be the same as the practice and procedure in similar cases and matters heretofore.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 754; 46 Vict., Can., ch. 10, sec. 2.

Ontario practice]-Sec. 599 preserves (inter alia) the Ontario practice of certiorari for the review of a conviction under Part XVI, as to which there is no jurisdiction to hear an appeal on a case reserved by the magistrate. R. v. Booth, (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 224, 31 O.L.R. 539.

It is held in Ontario that, if the summary trial being under sec. 777, a case might have been reserved or stated, certiorari will not lie; R. v. 786

600. If any general commission for the holding of a court of assize and nisi prius, oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery is issued by the Governoi General for any county or district in the province of Ontario, such commission shall contain the names of the justices of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, and may also contain the names of the judges of any of the county courts in Ontario, and of any of His Majesty's counsel learned in the law duly appointed for the province of Upper Canada, or for the province of Ontario, and if any such commission is for a provisional judicial district such commission may contain the name of the judge of the district court of the said district.

2. The said courts shall be presided over by one of the justices of the said Supreme Court, or in their absence by one of such county court judges or by one of such counsel, or in the case of any such district by the judge of such district court.

Commissions of assize, etc. in Ontario]—Sec. 600 is a restriction upon the prerogative powers exercisable by the Governor-General of Canada in respect of the issue of commissions of assize and of over and terminer and general gaol delivery in the province of Ontario. It is supplementary also to the legislation contained in the Judges' Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 138, having a general application throughout Canada, which declares or confirms the concurrent power of provincial lieutenantgovernors as to the issue of similar commissions for trial of criminal cases. See R. v. Amer (1878) 42 U.C.Q.B. 391.

The Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 56, sec. 3, continues the Supreme Court of Ontario as a superior court of record, having civil and criminal jurisdiction; and sec. 49 of the same Act enacts that commissions of assize or any other commissions either general or special may be issued by the "Lieutenant Governor in Council" for the trial of matters in that court, "or for the exercise of any civil or eriminal jurisdiction capable of being exercised by the court."

A provincial legislature having legislative power over the constitution of criminal courts may dispense with the issue of commissions of assize without concurrent legislation by the Dominion Parliament being obtained in respect of the incidental change in practice whereby the reading of a commission at the opening of the court is omitted. R. v. Walker, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 77, 15 B.C.R. 100.

Provisional judicial districts in Ontario]-See sec. 585.

Gaol delivery by court of General Sessions.

[§ 600]

601. It shall not be necessary for any court of general sessions in the province of Ontario to deliver the gaol of all prisoners who are confined upon charges of theft, but the court may leave any such cases to be tried at the next court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, if, by reason of the difficulty or importance of the case, or for any other cause, it appears to it proper so to do.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 756; R.S.C. 1886, ch 174, sec. 272.

Jurisdiction of Sessions of the Peace in Ontario]—By R.S.O. 1914, ch. 60, sec. 3, "The Courts of General Sessions of the Peace shall have jurisdiction to try all criminal offences except homicide, and the offences mentioned in sec. 583 of the Criminal Code of Canada." Code sec. 582 also affirms the power of the Sessions to "try any indictable offence "except those mentioned in sec. 583, which includes treason, murder manslaughter and various other crimes.

The judge of the county or the district court, as the case may be, or, in case of his death, illness or absence or, at his request the junior or deputy judge shall be the chairman of the court and shall preside at the sittings thereof. Ibid. sec. 7

As to what constitutes "absence," see Brunet v. The King (1918) 57 S.C.R. 83, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16; ex parte Cormier, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 179 (N.B.); Byrne v. Arnold, 24 N.B.R. 161.

Where a judge is present it shall not be necessary, in order to constitute the court, that an associate or other justice of the peace should be present Ibid. sec. 8.

Where a judge is unable to hold the sittings at the time appointed the sheriff or his deputy may, by proclamation, adjourn the court to any hour on the following day to be by him named, and so from day to day until he received other directions from the judge or from the Attorney-General. The sheriff shall forthwith give notice of such adjournment to the Attorney-General. Ibid. sec. 9.

The court of general sessions is not properly an inferior court; it is a court of over and terminer. R. v. McDonald (1871), 31 U.C.Q.B. 337; Campbell v. R., 11 Q.B. 799, 814. It is, however, a court which does not possess any greater powers than are conferred upon it by statute. It has a general jurisdiction over offences attended with a breach upon (1871)

Calendar of criminal cases in Nova Scotia.

602. In the province of Nova Scotia a calendar of the criminal cases shall be sent by the Clerk of the Crown to the grand jury in each term, together with the depositions taken in each case and the names of the different witnesses.

Origin]-Sec. 760, Code of 1892; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3.

Nova Scotia practice]—To a similar provision of the Code of 1892 was added a clause directing that "the indictments shall not be made out (except in Halifax) until the grand jury so directs." This prohibition was dropped on the amendment contained in 63-64 Vict., ch. 46. Before any witnesses were examined by the grand jury in Nova Scotia, they were furnished by the clerk of the Crown, with the calendar, the depositions and the names of the witnesses. In England they are furnished by the prosecutor with a bill of indictment, with the names of the witnesses indorsed thereon. The witnesses are then sent before the grand jury. The jurors learn the charge and the names of the witnesses—in the one case from the encladar, depositions and the list of witnesses' names. See R. v. Townsend, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 29 at 36, 28 N.S.R. 468.

The grand jury come into court and report that in certain cases they are prepared to find bills.

The grand jury, under this section, has the power to direct that indictments shall be prepared in all cases upon the calendar furnished to them, even though they may not be prepared to find them, and may intend not to do so. Assuming they do not so direct, it is nevertheless competent for them, through their foreman, to indorse the words "no bill," or other equivalent expression, upon the depositions in each case, or upon the calendar, opposite to the title of each cause, which they return to the court. R. v. Townsend, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 29, at 52, 28 N.S.R. 468.

The omission to send to a grand jury the depositions along with the calendar in Nova Scotia will not invalidate an indictment found without such depositions. R. v. Turpin (1904), 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 59 (N.S.).

Terms and sessions in Nova Scotia]—Sec. 27 of the Nova Scotia Judicature Act, R.S.N.S. 1900, ch. 155, is not ultra vires of the Nova Scotia legislature in respect of the change it purports to make in the times at which fixed sessions of certain provincial courts of criminal jurisdiction are to take place. Sentences in Nova Scotia.

603. A judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia may sentence convicted criminals on any day of the sittings at Halifax, as-well as in term time.

Sentence out of term of court]—As to fixed sessions of court, see R.S.N.S. 1900, ch. 155; R. v. Cook, 48 N.S.R. 150, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 50.

Powers General of Certain Officials.

Officials with powers of two justices.

604. The Judge of the Sessions of the Peace for the city of Quebec, the Judge of the Sessions of the Peace for the city of Montreal, and every recorder, police magistrate, district magistrate or stipendiary magistrate appointed for any territorial division, and every magistrate authorized by the law of the province in which he acts to perform acts usually required to be done by two or more justices, may do alone whatever is authorized by this Act to be done by any two or more justices.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 541; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 7.

Limited jurisdiction of Court of Sessions]—See secs. 582 and 583. Magistrate "appointed for any territorial division"]—The jurisdiction of a stipendiary magistrate appointed for an entire county is not ousted as to a town within the county by the appointment of a stipendiary magistrate for the town; but both may have concurrent jurisdiction, unless the town magistrate's appointment is specifically made to confer exclusive jurisdiction within the town limits. R. v. Giovanetti, 34 N.S.R. 505, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 157; R. v. Coady (1915) 48 N.S.R. 255, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 434.

Courts of Sessions of the Peace at Montreal and Quebec]—The court of general sessions of the peace at Montreal, sometimes called the court of quarter sessions, has power to hear and determine all matters relating to the preservation of the peace, and its jurisdiction may be exercised by the other court known as the "Court of the Sessions of the Peace" established by article 3259 R.S.Q.; there is in strictness no "police magistrate's court," the acts of the magistrate are not acts of "a court" although the place of hearing is by Code sec. 714 to be deemed an open court. R. v. Walker, (1913) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 179.

The wording of art. 3351, R.S.Q., is such as to imply that the old common law powers of justices of the peace in the province of Quebec are preserved, and are to be taken as conferred upon them by the fact of their appointment. R. v. Walker, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 179, at 185.

Substitute judges of the Sessions Court]—See Brunet v. The King (1918) 57 S.C.R. 83, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16, and notes to sees. 777, 824-827.

Jurisdiction as to prize fights.

606. Every judge of a superior court or of a county court, judge of the sessions of the peace, stipendiary magistrate, police magistrate, and commissioner of police of Canada, shall, within the limits of his jurisdiction as such judge, magistrate or commissioner, have all the powers of a justice with respect to offences against provisions of this Act as to prize fights.

Origin]-R.S.C. 1886, ch. 153, sec. 10.

Prize fight offences]—These are dealt with in secs. 2 (31), 104 to 108, inclusive, and in secs. 627, 628 and 1059.

Preserving order in court.

607. Every judge of the sessions of the peace, chairman of the court of general sessions of the peace, police magistrate, district magistrate or stipendiary magistrate, shall have such and like powers and authority to preserve order in courts held by them during the holding thereof, and by the like ways and means as now by law are or may be exercised and used in like cases and for the like purposes by any court in Canada, or by the judges thereof, during the sittings thereof.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 908, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 109.

"To preserve order"]--The authority conferred is for the purpose of preserving order in the court. This may ordinarily be effected by directing that the offender be removed.

The power given by sec. 607 to police magistrates and other named officials does not extend to proceedings for contempts committed out of court. Re Seaife, 5 B.C.R. 153. As to contempt of court by improper newspaper comment, see sec. 322.

[§ 607] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XII)

A summary trial court under Part XVI of the Code is an "open public court." Sec. 787. A county court judge's criminal court holding a "speedy trial" under Part XVIII over which a judge of the sessions of the peace may preside in Ontario or Quebec (sec. 823) is a "court of record." Sec. 824. A magistrate trying a charge under the Summary Convictions Act (Part XV of the Code) is not a court of record, but by sec. 714 the place where the trial takes place is to be deemed "an open and public court to which the public generally may have access so far as the same can conveniently contain them." Code sec. 714.

Ways and means as now are or may be exercised, etc.]—The word "now" was included in the corresponding sec. 109 of the former Code from which this section is derived, but the effect of the re-enactment may be to make applicable the law as it stood at the time when the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, came into effect (31 January, 1907).

Commitment in writing]—The commitment should be in writing and for a definite period. Armstrong v. McCaffrey, 12 N.B.R. 525; R. v. Scott, 2 C.L.J. 323; ex parte Porter, 5 B. & S. 209.

Resistance to execution of process.

608. Every judge of the sessions of the peace, chairman of the court of general sessions of the peace, recorder, police magistrate, district magistrate or stipendiary magistrate, whenever any resistance is offered to the execution of any summons, warrant of execution or other process issued by him, may enforce the due execution of the same by the means provided by the law for enforcing the execution of the process of other courts in like cases.

614. The owner, keeper or person in possession of the intoxicating liquor so seized, if he is known to the officer seizing it, shall be brought forthwith before the commissioner or justice who issued the search warrant, and if it appears to the satisfaction of the commissioner or justice that a violation of the provisions of the said section has been committed, or was intended to be committed, with respect to such intoxicating liquor, it shall be declared forfeited, with any package in which it is contained, and shall be destroyed by authority of the written order to that effect of the commissioner or justice, and in his presence or in the presence of some person appointed by him to witness the destruction thereof.

2. (Repealed by Canada Statutes, 1907, chap. 9.)

3. Such commissioner or justice, or the person so appointed by him, and the officer by whom the said intoxicating liquor has been destroyed, shall jointly attest, in writing upon the back of the said order, the fact that it has been destroyed.

Origin]-6 and 7 Edw. VII, ch. 9, sees. 5 and 6; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 151, see. 16.

Seizure and destruction of liquors in proclaimed district]-A commissioner of police appointed under R.S.C. 1906, ch. 92, was held to be a person "fulfilling a public duty" within the terms of the Ontario statute, R.S.O. 1897, ch. 88, and is entitled to notice of action thereunder before suit is brought against him for a return of a fine and costs alleged to have been irregularly levied upon the plaintiff by the commissioner in virtue of his office in respect of plaintiff's possession of intoxicating liquor within a prohibited district in alleged contravention of Criminal Code, sees. 150 and 151. Where an order for the forfeiture and destruction of intoxicating liquor seized was made by a commissioner of Dominion police assuming to act under the authority of Code sec. 614 in the presence of the owner of the liquor brought before him by the seizing officer, and the commissioner had, by statute, jurisdiction over the subject-matter and over the owner in respect thereof, a notice of action must be given within six months under R.S.O. 1897, ch. 88, even if the forfeiture was irregularly made or was wholly void or contrary to natural justice, and was not reduced to writing; and semble the action itself must be brought within six months under Criminal Code, sec. 1149. 616. If the owner, keeper or possessor of intoxicating liquor seized as aforesaid, is unknown to the officer seizing the same, it shall not be condemned and destroyed until the fact of such seizure, with the number and description of the packages, as near as may be, has been advertised for two weeks by posting up a written or a printed notice and description thereof, in at least three public places, in the place where it was seized.

2. If it is proved within such two weeks to the satisfaction of the commissioner or justice by whose authority such intoxicating liquor was seized, that with respect to such intoxicating liquor no violation of the provisions of sec. 150 has been committed or is intended to be committed, it shall not be destroyed, but shall be delivered to the owner, who shall give his receipt therefor in writing upon the back of the search warrant, which shall be returned to the commissioner or justice who issued the same.

3. If after such advertisement as aforesaid, it appears to such commissioner or justice that a violation of the provisions of the said section has been committed or is intended to be committed, then such intoxicating liquor, with any package in which it is contained, shall be forfeited and destroyed as hereinbefore provided.

Evidence of precise description of liquor not necessary.

617. In any prosecution under this Act for any offence with respect to intoxicating liquor, it shall not be necessary that any witness should depose directly to the precise description of the liquor with respect to which the offence has been committed, or to the precise consideration therefor, or to the fact of the offence having been committed with his participation or to his own personal and certain knowledge; but the commissioner or justice trying the case, so soon as it appears to him that the circumstances in evidence sufficiently establish the offence complained of, shall put the defendant on his defence, and in default of such evidence being rebutted, shall convict the defendant accordingly.

A mistake by mis-description of the official capacity of the magistrate in the proceedings before the final adjudication whereby a "commissioner of police" having the authority of two justices of the peace was wrongly described in the preliminary proceedings as a "justice of the peace" will not invalidate a summary conviction made by him as a commissioner of police if he was correctly designated as such both in the memorandum of adjudication and in the formal conviction. R, v. v. V

Search warrants generally]—The Criminal Code (see. 629 et seq.) provides for the issue of search warrants in a variety of cases. The common law authorized the issue of a search warrant only in the case of larceny or suspected larceny: Encyclopædia of the Laws of England, Lad ed., vol. 13, tit. "Search Warrants," p. 199; Jones v. German [1896] 2 Q.B. 418 and [1897] 1 Q.B. 374; Ho Quong v. Cuddy, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 797 (Alta.).

It would seem that the effect of sec. 629 upon the common law warrant for stolen goods must be either to supersede entirely the common law warrant or to make it subject to the same requirements as the Code demands for a search warrant in respect of any offence.

A search warrant issued under see, 629 is a judicial proceeding, and may be removed by certiorari. R. v. Kehr., 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 52, 11 O.L.R. 517; R. v. Frain (1915), 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 389 (Sask.); R. v. Bender (1916), 36 O.L.R. 378, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 393, 10 O.W.N. 102.

A search warrant for liquors may be issued under the Canada Temperance Act without first laying a charge against the custodian of the liquors for keeping them for sale. Townsend v. Cox, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 509, [1907] A.C. 514.

See as to warrants to search for intoxicating liquor under various liquor laws: Townsend v. Beekwith, 42 N.S.R. 307, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 353; R. v. Heffernan, 13 Ont. R. 616; Ex parte Dewar, 39 N.B.R. 143; Ex parte McCleave, 35 N.B.R. 100; R. v. Le Blane, 41 N.B.R. 99, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 12 E.L.R. 66, Ex parte Doyle, R. v. Lawlor, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 60, 42 N.B.R. 244; R. v. Swarts, 37 O.L.R. 103, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 90; R. v. McGarry, 24 Ont. R. 52.

Form of information to obtain search warrant]-See Code form 1, following see, 1152.

Information for search warrant]—The information on oath for the purpose of getting a search warrant is distinct from that required under Code sec. 654 for a warrant to arrest the suspected person. Ex parte Cavanagh. 34 N.B.R. 1, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 267.

If the information discloses no criminal offence, the search warrant issued upon it will be set aside. R. v. Frain (1915), 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 389 (Sask.). So also if the information does not state the causes of suspicion (Code form 1); R. v. Kehr, 11 O.L.R. 517, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 52; R. v. Frain (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 389; R. v. Bender (1916) 36 O.L.R. 378, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 393; Roux v. Hewat [1919] 1 W.W.R. 530 (B.C.)

"May" issue a warrant]—By the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, the word "may" is to be construed as permissive and the word "shall" as imperative, but this statutory direction is subject to the express qualification that the context does not otherwise require. Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 34. The word "may" does not give an arbitrary power of refusal where what is to be done is in the nature of a public duty, but it rather imports a judicial discretion; the official empowered is to consider and decide upon an application for a search warrant, and if he finds the contingency exists for which the statute provides the remedy, it is his duty to apply it and a mandamus will lie for his refusal to hear the application. Cameron v. Wait, 3 A.R. (Ont.) 193; Bernardin v. Dufferin, 19 Can. S.C.R. 581; Dwyer v. Port Arthur, 21 Ont. R. 175. But a mandamus will not lie to correct an erroneous decision of the justices upon a matter of judicial discretion as distinguished from a merely ministerial duty. R. v. Middlesex Justices, 9 A. & E. 546; Re White and Galbraith, 12 P.R. (Ont.) 513; Ex p. Cook, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 72; R. v. Ettinger, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 387. He must exercise his discretion bona fide and not arbitrarily. R. v. Adamson, 1 Q.B.D. 201. He must not have based his decision upon considerations not recognized by the law or have so misconstrued the statute as to have practically declined a jurisdiction conferred upon him. or he will be subject to a mandamus order from a superior court. Fournier v. De Montigny, 10 Que. S.C. 292; Re Parke, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 122, 30 Ont. R. 498; Re Holland, 37 U.C.Q.B. 214; R. v. Connolly, 20 Ont. R. 220; R. v. Sanderson, 15 Ont. R. 106; Thompson v. Desnoyers, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 68.

Form of search warrant]-A statutory form of search warrant (Code form No. 2) follows Code sec. 1152.

A search warrant signed by a justice acting in the illness, or absence, or at the request of a police magistrate, and having no jurisdiction otherwise, should include, in its designation of the justice, such fact, otherwise the warrant is invalid. R. v. Lyons, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 218.

A search warrant directing the constable to search a particular house "or any other house at —— if there is any suspicion that the said goods, etc., be in such house," is bad, as it delegates to the constable the duties of the justice, by enabling him to act on suspicions arising in his mind after the issue of the warrant, and it is also void for uncertainty. McLeod v. Campbell (1894), 26 N.S.R. 458.

Search warrant to state the offence]—The search warrant must disclose on its face the alleged offence in respect of which it was issued. R. v. Le Vesque (1918), 42 D.L.R. 120 (N.B.); R. v. Frain (1915), 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 389 (Sask.). The warrant may be invalidated by material defects in the information. R. v. Frain, supra; R. v. Kehr, 11 O.L.R. 517, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 52.

Execution of search warrant]—The search warrant is to be executed by day unless it shows on its face that the justice has authorized that it be executed at night. Code sec. 630. "Day" is from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m., and night is from 9 p.m. to 6 a.m. See Code sec. 2, sub-sec. (23).

If a constable is the aggrieved person, and not merely an informant in his official capacity, the search warrant should not be executed by him in his own case. Condell v. Price, 1 Hannay (N.B.) 333; Powell v. Williamson (1843), 1 U.C.Q.B. 154; R. v. Belyea (1915), 43 N.B.R. 375, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 395.

1906, ch. he word t to the . Interdoes not is in the In Hamilton v. Calder, 23 N.B.R. 373, it is said that where the search warrant is for stolen goods, some one (the owner, if he is complainant), who can point the goods out, usually accompanies the officer in the execution of the warrant for the purpose that on his pointing and declaration the officer may judge whether or not they are the goods mentioned in the warrant; the constable's duty is to judge and determine them to be such goods before he takes or removes them.

Launoek v. Brown (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 593, 106 E.R. 482, was a case of a search warrant under a statute (22.23 Car. II, ch. 25, sec. 2) which empowered game keepers and other persons, authorized by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace for the county in the day time to search the houses, outhouses, or other places of certain persons for guns, bows, greyhounds, etc., and to seize, detain and keep the same, etc. The court en banc of four judges, affirming the decision of the trial judge, held that a search warrant under the statute was un lawfully executed, inasmuch as no demand of admittance had been made before breaking open the outer door of the dwelling-house of the plaintiff's house. This rule is applicable to all search warrants or orders for search of a dwelling-house unless it is clear from the statute authorizing the search warrant that a demand to open is not necessary. Wah Kie v. Cnddy (No. 2), 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 383, 387, 7 W.W.R. 797 (Alta.).

In Hodder v. Williams [1895] 2 Q.B. 663, the statement made in Smith's Leading Cases in the notes to Semayne's Case, 5 Coke 91, is approved: "The maxim that 'a man's house is his castle' only extends to his dwelling-house; therefore a barn or outhouse, not connected with the dwelling-house, may be broken open in order to levy an execution (Penton v. Brown, 1 Sid. 181, 186), but not to make a distress for rent: Brown v. Glenn, 16 Q.B. 254."

In the execution of a search warrant or order for search, where the place is not a dwelling-house, or a room or other place—" parcel of a house" (Penton v. Brown, 1 Keb. 698, 1 Sid. 186)—the police officer executing it must have the search warrant with him, in order to exhibit it for inspection if it is asked, and in that ease produce it and permit inspection of it (Code sec. 40), but he need not under all circumstances first demand an entrance or signify the cause of his coming. Wah Kie v. Cuddy (No. 2), 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 383, 7 W.W.R. 797, 8 A.L.R. 111; R. v. Sloan, 18 Ont. App. R. 482.

The law is careful to protect the rights and liberty of the subject, and if a peace officer or any other person invades a house or home without authority he is a trespasser, and the occupant is justified in using force to either eject or prevent him from carrying out what he may claim to be a privilege, but which he has not the proper authority to exercise. R. v. Lyons, 2 Can. Cr. Cas, 218.

In an action for malicious prosecution, in which the plaintiff was nonsuited, it appeared that a magistrate, upon the information of the defendant that the plaintiff unlawfully had and kept in his possession a dog belonging to the defendant, has issued a search warrant to a constable, who took the dog, against plaintiff's protest. An information was then laid by the constable to the same effect, and a summons issued against plaintiff, on the return of which, on plaintiff's counsel objecting that no offence was shown, the information was amended, and the plaintiff was charged with stealing the dog, which charge was dismissed: Held, that the matter having been fairly stated to the magistrate by defendant, he was not liable for the erroneous view of the magistrate as to his jurisdiction in issuing the warrant and summons; but, held, also, that there being evidence that the defendant had assented to the amendment, he was not justified in charging the plaintiff with theft, because he believed the dog was his own; the real question being, not whether the defendant believed the dog to be his, but whether he believed that the plaintiff had stolen him, and that the case should have been left to the jury. enables a search warrant to be executed outside of the jurisdiction of the magistrate by whom it is issued on being endorsed by a justice of the county in which it is to be executed in accordance with the new form 2A, added in 1909.

Search warrant.-Form.-Execution.

630. Every search warrant shall be executed by day, unless the justice shall by the warrant authorize the constable or other person to execute it at night.

2. Every search warrant may be in form 2, or to the like effect.

Origin]-Code of 1892, see. 569; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 101. Form of warrant to search]-Code form 2 following sec. 1152.

Detention of things selzed .- Restoration.

631. When any such thing is seized and brought before a justice, he may detain it, taking reasonable care to preserve it till the conclusion of the investigation; and, if any one is committed for trial, he may order it further to be detained for the purpose of evidence on the trial.

2. If no one is committed, the justice shall direct such thing to be restored to the person from whom it was taken, except in the cases next hereinafter mentioned, unless he is authorized or required by law to dispose of it otherwise.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 569; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 101.

Goods in custodia legis]—Liquor consigned to McK. was seized under a search warrant issued under Part II of the Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 152, sec. 136, on information of C., a liquor license inspector, and given into C.'s custody for safe keeping. The warrant was issued by the proper officer and was regular and valid on its face. McK. replevied the goods from C., who put in a claim of property under C.S.N.B. 1903, ch. iii, sec. 361: Held, that the replevin was not maintainable and that C. was entitled to retain possession of the liquor until it should be disposed of according to law, such possession being necessary to the carrying out of the Act. McKeen v. Colpitts, 39 N.B.R. 256, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 488. But replevin has been maintained where the claimant was a stranger to the search warrant proceedings and proved under a search warrant for liquors. Fraser v. Watters, 41 N.S.R. 201.

Search in disorderly houses,—Order for search.—Destruction of property seized.

641. If a constable or other peace officer of any city, town, incorporated village or other municipality or district, organized or unorganized, or place, reports in writing to the mayor or chief magistrate, or to the police, stipendiary or district magistrate of such city, town, incorporated village or other municipality, district or place, or to any police or stipendiary magistrate having jurisdiction there, or, if there be no such mayor or chief magistrate, or police stipendiary or district magistrate, to any justice having such jurisdiction, that there are good grounds for believing, and that he does believe, that any house, room or place within the said city or town, incorporated village or other municipality, district or place is kept or used as a disorderly house as defined by sec. 228; or for betting, wagering or pool selling contrary to the provisions of sec. 235, or for the purpose of carrying on a lottery or for the sale of lottery tickets. or for the purpose of conducting or carrying on of any scheme, contrivance or operation for the purpose of determining the winners in any lottery contrary to the provisions of sec. 236. whether admission thereto is limited to those possessed of entrance keys or otherwise; such mayor, chief magistrate, police, stipendiary or district magistrate or justice, may, by order in writing, authorize the constable or other peace officer to enter and search any such house, room or place with such other constables or peace officers as are deemed requisite by him, and such peace officer or peace officers may thereupon enter and search all parts of such house, room or place and if necessary may use force for the purpose of effecting such entry, whether

2. The person issuing such order, or the justice before whom any person is taken by virtue of an order under this section, may direct that any money or securities for money so seized shall be forfeited to the Crown for the public uses of Canada, and that any other thing seized shall be destroyed or otherwise disposed of: Provided that nothing shall be destroyed or disposed of pending any appeal or any proceeding in which the right of seizure is questioned or before the time within which such appeal or other proceeding may be taken has expired.

Order for search of disorderly house]-The order may specify the time of the search as between a certain hour on one date and another certain hour on the second day following. R. v. Shaak [1918] 3 W.W.R. 889 (Alta.). In the case of a common bawdy-house it may recite that it appears on the oath of the informant (naming him) that there is reason to suspect that the keeper and inmates of a common bawdy-house are concealed in the house or premises (giving the street address or other identification), and may authorize and require the officers to whom it is addressed to enter the premises between the stated hours and to search for the said persons and bring them before the justice issuing the order or before some other justice. R. v. Shaak [1918] 3 W.W.R. 889 (Alta.). On the arrest of the keepers and inmates they may be held until a charge is laid. Their names may not be known until after the arrest, but when the identity of the persons who are keepers or inmates is then disclosed, information should be laid at once against them; it is not, however, necessary to issue personal warrants of arrest against each before calling on the accused persons in custody to answer the charge, their arrest and appearance under the general search order being sufficient for that purpose, R. v. Shaak [1918] 3 W.W.R. 889 (Alta.).

Until the year 1913 the authority to enter and search as given by the sections corresponding to the present sec. 641 had been confined to gaming and betting houses. There had been authority to "take into custody all persons who are found therein," as well as to seize tables and instruments of gaming, etc. One of the things which could be done with the persons so arrested was shown by the provisions of sec. 642, which authorized the magistrate before whom they were brought to examine them under oath in regard to "any unlawful gaming in the house," and there is a provision in sub-sec. 2 for their protection. Then in 1913 the wording of sec. 641 was changed so as to give the authority to search in the case of suspicion of the existence of a "disorderly house" generally as defined by sec. 228 which covers gaming and betting houses but also includes houses of ill-fame. But while this in consequence authorized the arrest of all persons found in such a house no change was made in sec. 642, so that the authority to examine under oath is still confined to evidence of gaming. Thus the purpose of arresting persons found in a house searched in consequence of suspicion that it is a bawdy-house is left rather obscure. They cannot be examined under oath for evidence that the place was being kept as a bawdy-house. Yet there is undoubtedly authority to take them into custody. While there no doubt is a possibility that there was an oversight in not at the same time amending sec. 642, still the court must endeavour to attribute some sensible purpose to the provision for arrest; and it was said in R. v. Shaak, supra, that there would seem to be no other than that they may be held pending the laying of a charge against them, and no reason why this should not also apply to persons arrested in a gaming house, although a special additional action by way of examination is provided in their case. A charge should be laid promptly, otherwise there would be a way open for oppression. If there were delay habeas corpus would undoubtedly lie. R. v. Shaak, supra.

Justification of search—Execution of search under a search order]— A search "order" under see. 641 is probably a "warrant" so as to justify the person authorized in its execution, although the suspected offence may not be proved, if the order was legal on its face. See secs. 25-29. But no more force is to be used than is reasonably necessary. Code see. 66; Ho Quong, et al. v. Cuddy (1914), 7 W.W.R. 797, sub nom. Wah Kie v. Cuddy, 8 Alta. L.R. 111, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 383. The officer must have the search order with him to show if inspection is asked for. Ibid.; Code see. 40; but he need not, under all circumstances, first demand an entrance or signify the cause of his coming unless the place is a dwelling-house. Ho Quong v. Cuddy, 7 W.W.R. 797, at 801; Hodder v. Williams [1895] 2 Q.B. 663. If the premises to be searched are a dwel the 797, I place dwelling-house, much more circumspection would be called for than in the case of another class of building. Ho Quong v. Cuddy, 7 W.W.R. 797, 801 (Alta.), per Beck, J.

Furthermore, the doctrines of English law require that when the place to be searched is a "dwelling-house" a demand to open must be made before breaking in, and this applies to all search warrants or orders for search unless it is clear from the authorizing statute that such demand is not necessary. Ho Quong v. Cuddy, 7 W.W.R. 797 (Alta.), applying Semayne's case, 1 Smith's L.C. 11th ed., 105; Hodder v. Williams [1895] 2 Q.B. 663, 65 L.J.Q.B. 70. And where the place is not a dwelling-house, still it is the duty of the police officer executing the search order or warrant to have it with him in order to exhibit it for inspection if asked and in that event to produce it and permit inspection of it. Ho Quong v. Cuddy, 7 W.W.R. 797, 801 (Alta.), eiting Penton v. Browne, 1 Keb. (Eng.), 698.

Time of search]—The search order should be executed promptly for it never was intended that after a complaint made and an order for search given, the order should be filed away without any attempt to enforce it for years, and yet it remain operative. The premises may no longer be used for an improper purpose and "it would be contrary to justice that the stringent provisions of this section should be put in force when or how the police thought proper." Per Drake, J., in R. v. Ah Sing (1892), 2 B.C.R. 167.

Penalty for being "found in" a disorderly house]-See sec. 229.

Form of search order on a gaming charge]—" I hereby authorize you, the chief constable, or inspector or sergeant of the (Calgary) police force, to enter the premises (specifying street address or other description), with such constables as are deemed requisite by you or him, and if necessary, to use such force for the purpose of effecting such entry, whether by breaking open doors or otherwise, and to take into custody all persons who are found therein and to seize all tables and instruments of gaming and all money and security for money found on such premises and to bring the same before me or such other justice as may be presiding in my stead, to be by me or him dealt with according to law."

Municipal by-law as to search without warrant]—It has been held that, having regard to the provisions of sec. 641 of the Criminal Code, a police officer is not justified in forcibly entering a gaming house without warrant or permission from proper authority, notwithstanding the provisions of a municipal by-law purporting to authorize him so to do. Win Gat v. Johnson, 1 Sask. L.R. 81, affirmed on this point on varying the judgment. Win Gat v. Johnson, 1 S.L.R. 476.

Obstruction of search is prima facie evidence in gaming and opium joint cases]-See sec. 986.

Confiscation of gaming and lottery equipment]-In a case under the Ontario Liquor License Act, which contained a similar power to order the destruction of liquor seized, it was held that the goods being in the custody of the law, and under the jurisdiction of the magistrate, and the destruction being a ministerial act, there was no necessity, in the absence of statutory requirement or other authority, for the direction to the police officers to be in writing. Ing Kon v. Archibald, 17 O.L.R. 484, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 201.

The constitutional right to provide for confiscation, as in sec. 641, was upheld even as against a claimant of moneys seized who was not a party to the proceedings before the magistrate, the process being in rem. O'Neil v. Attorney-General of Canada, 26 Can. S.C.R. 122, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 303.

642. The person issuing such order or the justice before whom any person who has been found in any house, room or place, entered in pursuance of any order under the last preceding section, is taken by virtue of such order may require any such person to be examined on oath and to give evidence touching any unlawful gaming in such house, room or place, or touching any act done for the purpose of preventing, obstructing or delaying the entry into such house, room or place, or any part thereof, of any constable or officer authorized to make such entry; and any such person so required to be examined as a witness who refuses to make oath accordingly, or to answer any question, shall be subject to be dealt with in all respects as any person appearing as a witness before any justice or court in obedience to a summons or subpœna and refusing without lawful cause or excuse to be sworn or to give evidence, may, by law, be dealt with.

2. Every person so required to be examined as a witness, who, upon such examination, makes true disclosure, to the best of his knowledge, of all things as to which he is examined shall receive from the judge, justice, magistrate, examiner or other judicial officer before whom such proceeding is had, a certificate in writing to that effect, and shall be freed from all criminal prosecutions and penal actions, and from all penalties, forfeitures and punishments to which he has become liable for anything done before that time in respect of any act of gaming regarding which he has been so examined, if such certificate states that such witness made a true disclosure in respect to all things as to which he was examined: and any action, indictment or proceedings pending or brought in any court against such witness in respect of any act of gaming regarding which he was so examined, shall be stayed, upon the production and proof of such certificate, and upon summary application to the court in which such action, indictment or proceeding is pending, or any judge thereof, or any judge of any of the superior courts of any province.

Examination under oath of person apprehended under search order is limited]—The persons arrested in a bawdy-house case are not subject to the examination under oath, at least as regards the offence of keeping or being an inmate of the house; R. v. Shaak [1918] 3 W.W.R. 889 (Alta.); there having been no corresponding amendment to see. 642 when the preceding sec. 641 was amended in 1913, so as to apply to disorderly houses generally instead of being limited to gaming and betting houses. See note to sec. 641. But it would seem that if there had been any obstruction of the officer in entering, there may be an examination as to that, and a certificate of immunity on full disclosure under see. 642 (2). Sub-sec. (2) specifies gaming, but is not in terms restricted to gaming eases when read along with sec. 641.

Incriminating answers]—It would seem advisable that the witness should formally object to answer before making the disclosure demanded by this section, and so obtain the benefit of sec. 5 of the Canada Evidence Act in case it applies, a point which does not appear to have been decided.

Refusal to answer on examination]—See sec. 678 as to witnesses on a preliminary enquiry, sec. 711 as to witnesses in a summary conviction proceeding, sec. 788 as to witnesses on a summary trial under Part XVI, and sees. 971-977 as to witnesses upon the trial of an indictment.

Opium joints]—The procedure of secs. 641 and 642 is made applicable by sec. 642A on the raid of an opium joint and the persons "found in" may be compelled to make disclosure under oath.

Search and seizure in opium joints.

642_A. The provisions of secs. 641 and 642 shall apply to searches in opium joints and to the seizure of devices, pipes or apparatus for preparing for smoking or inhaling, or for smoking or inhaling opium, and all couches, beds and chairs in such joints, and to the proceedings thereupon.

the age parately at suite. Jan., ch. ed under amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age. That Act is in force only in such places as may be designated by proclamation in the Canada Gasette, and when the Act is proclaimed, any provisions of the Criminal Code inconsistent therewith are repealed as to such place. 7-8 Edw. VII, ch. 40, sec. 33. It provides for the appointment of probation officers, the establishment of a Juvenile Court by either Provincial or Federal authority to deal with "juvenile delinquents" defined by sec. 2 to be boys or girls "apparently or actually under the age of sixteen years," who violate any provision of the Criminal Code, chap. 146, of the Revised Statutes, 1906, or of any Dominion or provincial statute, or of any bylaw or ordinance of any municipality, for which violation punishment by fine or imprisonment may be awarded; or who is liable by reason of any other act to be committed to an industrial school or juvenile reformatory, under the provisions of any Dominion or provincial statute.

The commission by a child of any of the acts so enumerated shall constitute an offence to be known as a delinquency and shall be dealt with as hereinafter provided. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 40, sec. 3.

See R. v. Huffman [1919] 1 W.W.R. 625 (Sask.).

Except as provided in that Act, prosecutions and trials under the Act shall be summary and shall, mutatis mutandis, be governed by the provisions of Part XV of the Criminal Code, in so far as such provisions are applicable, whether or not the act constituting the offence charged would be in the case of an adult triable summarily; provided that whenever in such provisions the expression "justice" occurs, it shall be taken in the application of such provisions to proceedings under this Act to mean "judge of the Juvenile Court, or justice specially authorized by Dominion or provincial authority to deal with juvenile delinquents." 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 40, sec. 5.

When any child is arrested, with or without warrant, such child shall, instead of being taken before a justice, be taken before the Juvenile Court; and, if a child is taken before a justice, upon a summons or under a warrant or for any other reason, it shall be the duty of the justice to transfer the case to the Juvenile Court, and of the officer having the child in charge to take the child before that court, and in any such case the Juvenile Court shall hear and dispose of the case in the same manner as if such child had been brought before it upon information originally laid therein; but this shall not apply to any justice who is a judge of the Juvenile Court or who has power to act as such, under the provisions of any Act in force in the province. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 6.

Where the act complained of is, under the provisions of the Criminal Code or otherwise, an indictable offence, and the accused child is apparently or actually over the age of fourteen years, the court may, in its discretion, order the child to be proceeded against by indictment in the ordinary courts in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Code [§ 644] in that behalf; but such course shall in no case be followed unless the court is of the opinion that the good of the child and the interest of the community demand it; and the court may, in its discretion, at any time before any proceeding has been initiated against the child in the ordinary criminal courts, rescind an order so made. But subject to this provision, the Juvenile Court has exclusive jurisdiction in cases of delinquency, 7-8 Edw, VII, Can., ch. 6, secs. 4 and 7.

The trials of children under the Juvenile Delinquents Act shall take place without publicity and separately and apart from the trials of other accused persons, and at suitable times to be designated and appointed for that purpose.

Such trials may be held in the private office of the judge or in some other private room in the court house or municipal building, or in the detention home, or if no such room or place is available, then in the ordinary court room, provided that when held in the ordinary court room an interval of half an hour must be allowed to elapse between the close of the trial or examination of any adult and the beginning of the trial of a child.

No report of the trial or other disposition of a charge against a child, in which the name of the child or of its parent or guardian is disclosed, shall, without the special leave of the judge, be published in any newspaper or other publication. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 10.

Fining parent for delinquency in respect of child's offence]-

Where a child under sixteen is proved to have been guilty of an offence for the commission of which a fine, damages or costs might, in the case of an adult, be imposed, and the Juvenile Court is of the opinion that the case would be best met by the imposition of a fine, damages or costs, whether with or without any other action, the court shall order that the fine, damages or costs awarded be paid by the parent or guardian of the child, instead of by the child, unless the court is satisfied that the parent or guardian cannot be found, or that he has not conduced to the commission of the offence by neglecting to exercise due care of the child or otherwise. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 18.

Ordering parent to give security for child's good behaviour]-

Where a child under sixteen is charged with any offence the Juvenile Court may order its parent or guardian to give security for its good behaviour. But no such order is to be made without giving the parent or guardian an opportunity of being heard; but a parent or guardian who has been duly served with notice of the hearing pursuant to the Act shall be deemed to have had such opportunity, notwithstanding the fact that he has failed to attend the hearing. Any sum imposed and ordered to be paid by a parent or guardian under sec. 18 of that Act may be recovered from him by distress or imprisonment in like manner as if the order had been made on the conviction of the parent or guardian of the offence in question. A parent or guardian shall have the same right of appeal from an order made under the provisions of this section as if the order had been made on the conviction of the parent or guardian. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 18.

Contributing to child's delinquency]-Any person who knowingly or wilfully encourages, aids, causes, abets or connives at the commission by a child under sixteen of a delinquency, or who knowingly or wilfully does any act producing, promoting or contributing to a child's being or becoming a juvenile delinquent, whether or not such person is the parent or guardian of the child, or who, being the parent or guardian of the child and being able to do so, wilfully neglects to do that which would directly tend to prevent a child's being or becoming a juvenile delinquent, or to remove the conditions which render a child a juvenile delinquent, shall be liable, on summary conviction before a Juvenile Court or a justice, to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a period not exceeding one year, or to both fine and imprisonment. The court or justice may impose conditions upon any person found guilty under this section, and suspend sentence subject to such conditions; and on proof at any time that such conditions have been violated may pass sentence on such person. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 29. But the justice must be one authorized to administer the Juvenile Delinquents Act. 7-8 Edw. VII, ch. 40, sec. 5. The delinquency of the child must be within the statutory definition. R. v. Huffman [1919] 1 W.W.R. 625.

Prosecutions against adults for offences against any provisions of the Criminal Code in respect of a child under sixteen may be brought in the Juvenile Court without the necessity of a preliminary hearing before a justice, and may be summarily disposed of where the offence is triable summarily, or otherwise dealt with, as in the case of a preliminary hearing before a justice. 7-8 Edw, VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 30.

No legal offence is disclosed in an information charging a woman with knowingly and wilfully "keeping company with" a man and thereby depriving him from keeping his children under proper parental control and contributing to their being or becoming juvenile delinquents; see. 29 of the Juvenile Delinquents Act, 1908, 7 and 8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 40, does not support such a charge. R. v. Curry (1915), 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 340, 8 O.W.N. 512.

Delinquency in respect of provincial statutory offences]—Nothing in the Juvenile Delinquents Act contained shall be construed as having the effect of repealing or over-riding any provision of any provincial statute; and when a juvenile delinquent who has not been guilty of an act which is, under the provisions of the Criminal Code an indictable offence, comes within the provisions of a provincial statute, it may be dealt with either under the provincial Act or under this Act as may be decemed to be in the best interests of such child. 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 6, sec. 32.

Trials may be held in private in certain cases.—Orders for exclusion of public.—Saving of common law power.

645. At the trial of any person charged with an offence under any of the following sections, that is to say:—202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 228 in so far as it relates to common bawdy-houses, 239 in so far as it relates to paragraphs (i), (j) or (k) of secs. 238, 292, 293, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 313 and 314, or with conspiracy or attempt to commit, or being an accessory after the fact to any such offence, the court or judge or justice may order that the public be excluded from the room or place in which the court is held during such trial.

2. Such order may be made in any other case also in which the court or judge or justice may be of opinion that the same will be in the interests of public morals.

3. Nothing in this section shall be construed by implication or otherwise as limiting any power heretofore possessed at common law by the presiding judge or other presiding officer of any court of excluding the general public from the court-room in any case when such judge or officer deems such exclusion necessary or expedient.

Origin]-Sec. 550A, Code of 1892, as amended, 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46.

Exclusion of public]—The sections referred to are some of those found in Part V of the Code under the sub-divisions "offences against morality," "seduction" and "nuisances," and in Part VI, under the sub-divisions of "assaults," "unlawful carnal knowledge," "abortion," and "abduction."

As to exclusion of the public on the trial of juveniles under sixteen, see sec. 644. Where juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age. Vagrancy offences]—Vagrancy is defined by sec. 238, and as to same the above sec. 645 is expressly limited to paragraphs (i), (j) and (k). Sub-division (i) relates to night-walkers; sub-divisions (j) and (k) were repealed by Can. Statutes, 1915, Geo. V, ch. 12, sec. 7, on the enactment of Code sec. 229A, without any corresponding alteration being made in sec. 645.

Open court at common law]—It is one of the essential qualities of a court of justice that its proceedings should be public, and that all parties who may be desirous of hearing what is going on, if there be room in the place for that purpose, provided they do not interrupt the proceedings, and provided there is no special reason why they should be removed, have a right to be present for the purpose of hearing what is going on. Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & C. 240; Scott v. Scott [1913] A.C. 417.

The decision in Scott v. Scott [1913] A.C. 417 was distinguished in another divorce case, Moosbrugger v. Moosbrugger, 29 Times L.R. 658; and see Cleland v. Cleland, 30 Times L.R. 169; but was applied in Reid v. Aull, 5 O.W.N. 964, same case, 32 O.L.R. 68, 6 O.W.N. 372.

By peace officer in the above and other cases.

647. A peace officer may arrest, without warrant, any one who has committed any of the offences mentioned in the sections in the last preceding section mentioned or in sections,—

- (a) 405, obtaining by false pretense; 406, obtaining execution of valuable securities by false pretense;
- (b) 525, injuring dams, etc., or blocking timber channel; 536, attempting to injure or poison cattle;
- (c) 542, cruelty to animals; 543, keeping cock-pit;
- (d) 555, exporting counterfeit coin; 561, possessing counterfeit current coin; 563, paragraph (b), bringing into Canada or possessing counterfeit foreign gold or silver coin; 563, paragraph (d), counterfeiting foreign copper coin.

Origin]-Sec. 552, Code of 1892, as amended 58-59 Viet., Can., eh. 40.

Arrest by peace officer without warrant]-See also sees. 37-47.

Offence committed anywhere in Canada]—Every peace officer who, on reasonable and probable grounds, believes that an offence for which the offender may be arrested without warrant has been committed, whether it has been committed or not, and who, on reasonable and probable grounds, believes that any person has committed that offence, is justified in arresting such person without warrant, whether such person is guilty or not. Code sec. 30. By the common law, any person (whether a peace officer or not) might arrest any one on probable suspicion of felony, and a peace officer under such circumstances was protected, even if it should turn out that no such felony had been committed by anyone, provided he could show that he had reasonable ground for suspecting the party arrested: Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England. 14th ed., 310; 2 Hale's History of the Pleas of the Crown, 78; Allen v. L. & S. W. Rv. Co. (1870) L.R. 6 Q.B. 65; 40 L.J.Q.B. 55.

On such an arrest the common law rule applies to require that the person arrested should be brought before a justice of the peace within a reasonable time. Anderson v. Johnston, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 620 (Sask.), affirming Anderson v. Johnston, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 353, 10 Sask. L.R. 352; R. v. Cloutier, 12 Man. R. 183, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 43.

ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT

Arrest on police request from another city or place]-

Where the chief of police in one city notifies the police in another city that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of a certain man and forwards a description and photograph of the accused and the police so notified, relying on such description and photograph, arrest a man, in the honest and reasonable belief that he is the one wanted, they are protected by sec. 30 of the Criminal Code from liability in civil or criminal proceedings, even though the man arrested is not in fact the one for whom the warrant had been issued. If he be not in fact the man wanted, the arresting officer may be liable in damages for detaining him longer than is reasonably necessary to determine his identity, and he must use diligence in communicating with the officer who requested the arrest. Anderson v. Johnston, supra.

The offence must be one for which an arrest without warrant would have been justified at the place where the crime was committed; Code sees. 30, 33, 647; or may be justified under sec. 649, where the accused is believed to be escaping and is taken in fresh pursuit; R. v. Shyffer, 15 B.C.R. 338, 15 W.L.R. 323, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 191; or in the special case of a suspected procurer where the circumstances bring it within sec. 652A.

And if the arrest is made on the faith of a telegram from the police of another province and the belief of the arresting officer that the offence was committed and that a warrant had been issued in the other province, the accused will not be released on habeas corpus in the district where he was arrested because of the offence not being one for which an arrest without warrant is justified, if the original warrant arrives in time to be endorsed for execution and returned to the habeas corpus as the cause of detention. R. v. Lee Chu, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 322.

Person found committing offence.—Arrest by peace officer.—By any person by night.

648. A peace officer may arrest, without warrant, any one whom he finds committing any criminal offence.

2. Any person may arrest, without warrant, any one whom he finds committing any criminal offence by night.

Origin]—Sec. 552 (3), Code of 1892; 58-59 Vict., Can., ch. 40, sec. 1. Person "found committing" the offence]—See secs. 32, 35, 36, 47, 646, 648, 650, 651, and as to the offence of being "found" in a disorderly house, see secs. 229 as amended in 1913; Altman v. Majury, (1916) 37 O.L.R. 608, 11 O.W.N. 21, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 398.

A peace officer is "justified" in arresting without warrant any person whom he finds committing any offence against the Criminal Code, whether punishable on summary conviction or indictable. Code sec. 35. The word "justified" in this connection is taken from the English

[§648] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIII)

Draft Code from which sec. 35 of the Canadian Code was derived. The English Commissioners reported that in the sections dealing with justification they used the word "justified" when there was no change in the law as it previously existed, but that where they submitted an enactment in the draft Code which extended the prior law, or as to which there was some doubt whether the prior law was being extended or not, they used the words "protected from criminal responsibility," so as clearly not to prejudice the person injured as to any right of damages which he might have for the act for which protection against criminal proceedings was being recommended. Plested v. McLeod (1910) 3 Sask, L.R. 375, 15 W.L.R. 533, 535. The majority of the court in that case held that Code see, 35 is not for the purpose of " authorizing " the arrest, but is for the protection of the officer making the same from the consequences of his act either in a criminal or civil proceeding; and that it would protect him only in cases in which the officer was authorized to make the arrest, e.g., in the case of a person found committing a criminal offence. (Code sec. 648.) Plested v. McLeod, supra.

Arrest of person found committing breach of the peace]—See secs. 46, 47.

Arrest by any person on fresh pursuit.

649. Any one may arrest without warrant a person whom he, on reasonable and probable grounds, believes to have committed a criminal offence and to be escaping from, and to be freshly pursued by, those whom the person arresting, on reasonable and probable grounds, believes to have lawful authority to arrest such person.

Origin]-Sec. 552 (4), Code of 1892.

Arrest on suspicion of person believed to be freshly pursued]-See sec. 37.

Arrest without warrant on fresh pursuit]—The fact that a police officer came from another province several weeks afterwards upon the arrest of the accused to take him back to answer the charge does not constitute a fresh pursuit under Code see. 649. Procedure-Summons or Warrant.

Summons or warrant by justice in what cases.

653. Every justice may issue a warrant or summons as hereinafter mentioned to compel the attendance of an accused person before him, for the purpose of preliminary inquiry in any of the following cases:—

- (a) If such person is accused of having committed in any place whatever an indictable offence triable in the province in which such justice resides, and is, or is suspected to be, within the limits over which such justice has jurisdiction, or resides or is suspected to reside within such limits;
- (b) If such person, wherever he may be, is accused of having committed an indictable offence within such limits:
- (c) If such person is alleged to have anywhere unlawfully received property which was unlawfully obtained within such limits:
- (d) If such person has in his possession, within such limits, any stolen property.

May issue a warrant or summons]—The Interpretation Act declares that the word "may" is to be construed as permissive unless the context otherwise requires. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 34, sub-sec. 24. The power here conferred is that the justice shall determine whether further proceedings are warranted or not upon a consideration of the complaint and of any evidence adduced under sec. 655. The direction of sec. 653 is that the justice may issue a warrant or summons "as hereinafter mentioned," but sec. 655 directs that if he is of opinion that a case for so doing is made up he shall issue a summons or warrant. The consideration of the information for this purpose is a judicial act. R. v. Ettinger, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 387 (N.S.). Compare, as to this, the wording of sec. 629, relating to the issue of search warrants.

Territorial limits as affecting jurisdiction to commit for trial]— Where persons are brought by process from one county to another upon a conspiracy charge and committed for trial therein, but the Crown fails to prove against them any overt act committed within the county in which the proceedings are taken, although charged as committed in both counties, the court of that county has no jurisdiction to convict for a conspiracy committed wholly within the county from which the accused were brought. R. v. O'Gorman, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173, 18 O.L.R. 427.

An election of speedy trial without a jury in the County Court Judge's Criminal Court does not confer jurisdiction in a case in which there would be no jurisdiction over the accused if the trial were upon indictment before a jury. Semble, had the charge in the preliminary enquiry for conspiracy not included both counties as the locality of the conspiracy and had no evidence been proven before the committing magistrate of overt acts in his county by some of the persons charged, the committal for trial and the indictment of charge which followed might have been quashed; but if the evidence of an overt act within the county upon which the committal order was founded is discredited at the subsequent trial the fact of the committal having been made does not aid the jurisdiction. The King v. O'Gorman, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173, 18 O.L.R. 427; and see Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que. K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas, 113.

"Indictable offence"]—Whether specifically declared an indictable offence or not, the offence is included if it be a statutory one under Dominion law for which the offender may be prosecuted by indictment. Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 28.

Information or complaint.-Form.

654. Any one who, upon reasonable or probable grounds, believes that any person has committed an indictable offence under this Act may make a complaint or lay an information in writing and under oath before any magistrate or justice having jurisdiction to issue a warrant or summons against such accused person in respect of such offence.

2. Such complaint or information may be in form 3, or to the like effect.

Origin]-Sec. 558, Code of 1892.

Form of information and complaint for an indictable offence]-Code form 3, following see. 1152.

Affirmation in lieu of oath]-See sees. 14 and 15 of the Canada Evidence Act.

Purpose of information or complaint]—A written information on a preliminary enquiry is for the protection of the accused so that he may know the charge laid against him, but if the magistrate, on being verbally informed of the offence by the accused himself, issues a summons and the accused attends on its return a committal for trial may be made on the depositions taken upon the preliminary enquiry, without an information in writing. The committing justices had jurisdiction over the accused on his attending in answer to the summons although objection was taken to the want of an information. R. v. Thompson, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 162; same case, re Thompson, 14 B.C.R. 314.

In a criminal case the preliminary hearing before the magistrate of an offence punishable on indictment, is not, properly speaking, the enquete of the informant, but that of the magistrate. Belanger v. Mulvena, 22 Que. S.C. 37.

An information should give a coneise and legal description of the offence charged, and should contain the same certainty as an indictment, and the description of the charge must include every ingredient required by the statute to constitute the offence. The statement of the offence may be in the words of the enactment describing it or declaring the transactions charged to be an offence. R. v. France, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 321.

If a magistrate's summons is issued on an information purporting to have been sworn at a specified time and place, and the defendant appears thereon and pleads to the charge, the proceedings will not be quashed on certiorari because it is afterwards shown that the information was not in fact sworn at such time and place. Ex parte Sonier, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 121, 34 N.B.R. 84.

Withdrawal of complaint]—The person who has laid the complaint in a summary proceeding for keeping a disorderly house and who thereafter declares under oath before the magistrate that she laid the charge without understanding it and under duress of detectives may be permitted to withdraw it and so terminate the proceedings. Baxter v. Gordon Ironsides and Fares Co., 13 O.L.R. 598; R. v. Rousseau (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 390; Tamblen v. Westeott, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 391, 7 W.W.R. 1037.

Amending the information]—It seems that in no case is it necessary to re-swear an information after an amendment, if the amendment is of such a nature only as that it merely gives greater particularity or certainty to the charge and does not amount to the laying of a new charge, i.e., a charge of a different kind of offence or of a similar offence at a time or place materially different from that first alleged. R. v. Tally, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449; 7 W.W.R. 1178 (Alta.).

Even if the accused had a right to insist upon the information being re-sworn, he waives the irregularity by refraining from taking the objection: R. v. Lewis, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 499; R. v. Tally, supra.

Leave to amend a clerical error in a complaint being heard under Part XV may be granted even after the conclusion of the evidence for the prosecution. Bell v. Parent, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 465.

Where a condensed form of describing the offence is authorized by statute as regards a summary conviction, the same form will be valid in an information or in a summons or warrant. Code see, 1124 (2).

Objection to form of information]—See secs. 669, 670, 753, 754, 1120, 1121, 1124, 1125.

Ontario]—The Police Magistrates' Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 18, limits the jurisdiction of justices in cases where there is a police magistrate competent to act. A justice shall not admit to bail or discharge a prisoner, or adjudicate upon, or otherwise act until after judgment in a case arising in a city or town for which there is a "police magistrate," or where the initiatory proceedings were taken before a police magistrate, except at the request of the police magistrate or in case of his illness or absence or except at the general sessions; but such restric-

Malicious prosecution]-The liability of the informant for maliciously laying in information without reasonable or probable cause is regulated by the civil and not the criminal law. The instituting of criminal proceedings for the purpose of establishing a civil right amounts to the malice which must be proven in an action for malicious prosecution. Ibbotson v. Berkley, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 1018 (B.C.); Olds v. Paris, [1918] 2 W.W.R. 682 (B.C.).

In Cox v. English, Scottish and Australian Bank, [1905] A.C. 168, 74 L.J.P.C. 62, Lord Davey in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee said at p. 170: "The principles applicable to these cases have been laid down for the English courts in the case of Abrath v. North-Eastern Railway (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 440, 52 L.J.Q.B. 620, in which Bowen, L.J., said (p. 455) 'in an action for malicious prosecution the plaintiff has to prove, first, that he was innocent and that his innocence was pronounced by the tribunal before which the accusation was made; secondly, that there was a want of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution . . . ; and lastly, that the proceedings of which he complains, were initiated in a malicious spirit, that is, from an indirect and improper motive, and not in furtherance of justice."

Although the absence of reasonable and probable cause is some evidence from which malice may be inferred, the jury by their finding as to the honest belief of the defendant, negatives any inference which depended solely on such evidence; and in the absence of any other evidence of indirect motive, an additional finding of the jury that the defendant was actuated by malice could not be supported. Brown v. Hawkes, [1891] 2 Q.B. 718, 61 L.J.Q.B. 151; and see Watson v. Smith '1899) 15 Times L.R. 473.

Absence of reasonable and probable cause is some evidence from which malice may be inferred but it is something entirely distinct and different. The latter is entirely a state of mind; the former is at least partly an extraneous condition arising by reason of the non-existence of certain facts. Scott v. Harris [1918] 3 W.W.R. 1028, 1032 (Alta.).

The making of enquiry is something to be considered in determining the existence of reasonable cause, but it is not a state of mind, as the malice which is necessary to support an action of malicious prosecution is. Scott v. Harris, supra. If a person, honestly believing in the guilt of another and desiring only the enforcement of the law, lays a charge without making any enquiry whatever he is not liable to an action even though the result of enquiries would have shown him his mistake. Scott v. Harris, supra; but his failure to do so presumably may be considered by the jury in finding for or against malice.

That the defendant acted on the advice of counsel, is some evidence of reasonable and probable cause, but not necessarily a complete answer. Olds v. Paris [1918] 2 W.W.R. 682 (B.C.); Harris v. Hiekey (1912) 17 B.C.R. 21, 1 W.W.R. 679, 19 W.L.R. 948; Abrath v. N.-E. Ry. (1883) 11 Q.B.D. 79; 52 L.J.Q.B. 352, and on appeal, 11 App. Cas. 247; 52 L.J.Q.B. 620.

A person seeking to shelter himself behind his counsel must take proper care to inform himself of all the facts. See St. Denis v. Shoultz (1898) 25 A.R. 131 (Ont.); Momsen v. Rudolph (1913) 18 B.C.R. 631; 3 W.W.R. 710; Abrath v. N.-E. Ry., supra; Olds v. Paris [1918] 2 W.W.R. 682 (B.C.).

The advice of counsel, after disclosure of all facts, is cogent evidence of the existence of reasonable and probable cause; but, if the complainant does not believe in the guilt of the accused, there is no reasonable and probable cause for him: Connors v. Reid, 25 O.L.R. 44; Mc-Mullen v. Wettlaufer, 33 O.L.R. 177, 7 O.W.N. 697; Schaal v. Reeves [1918] 2 W.W.R. 442.

No presumption of reasonable and probable cause arises from taking the advice of a police sergeant or of a police constable. Schaal v. Reeves [1918] 2 WW.R. 442, 447.

Summons or warrant thereon.-Evidence on oath.

655. Upon receiving any such complaint or information the justice shall hear and consider the allegations of the complainant and, if the justice considers it desirable or necessary, the evidence of any witness or witnesses; and if the justice is of opinion that a case for so doing is made out he shall issue a summons, or warrant, as the case may be, in manner hereinafter provided.

2. Such justice shall not refuse to issue such summons or warrant only because the alleged offence is one for which an offender may be arrested without warrant.

3. The justice shall in connection with such hearing have the same power of procuring the attendance of witnesses and of compelling them to testify as under Part XIV.

4. The evidence of witnesses, if any, at such hearing shall be given upon oath, and the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the form of a deposition, and, subject to the provisions of sec. 683, which, so far as applicable, shall apply to such hearing, shall be read over to and signed by the witness and signed by the justice.

Origin]—Sec. 559, Code of 1892, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 30; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, sec. 9.

Where an arrest may be made without warrant]—Sub-sec. 2 of sec. 655 originates with the English Draft Code, sec. 440, and was necessary for the proposed English Code, because of rulings made by some English justices that in cases of felony the complainant might himself arrest the offender and therefore required no warrant. Commissioners' report, pp. 32 and 33.

Witnesses to support application for warrant or summons]—The addition of the power to hear the complainant's witnesses, if any, made by the Code Amendment of 1909, was thought to be a desirable amendment in ordinary cases inasmuch as the justice may sometimes not feel justified in granting a summons or warrant without some further evidence than that of the applicant. Furthermore, it was designed to give express authority for compelling the attendance of witnesses and for the taking of their evidence upon oath upon application for warrant in extradition cases. The extradition judge is by sec. 10 of the Extradition Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 155, to issue a warrant of arrest on such evidence as would justify the issue of a warrant if the erime had been committed in Canada.

the complainant and "the evidence of his witnesses, if any" in support of the application for a summons or warrant, in respect of an indictable offence, the Crown may, upon the trial, call witnesses whose evidence was not offered on the application for the summons or warrant. The object of the amendment is to prevent the magistrate from refusing to issue process, because in his view the complainant's own unaided statement might be insufficient to make out a case, although supplementary evidence was available and was tendered. R. v. Johnston (N.S.), 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 369, 44 N.S.R. 468; Re Broom (1911) 3 O.W.N. 51. It would seem, however, that before the amendment was passed, the magistrate had a discretion to examine other witnesses than the complainant if produced, though possibly no power as now to compel their attendance. Ex parte Tierney, 17 Que. K.B. 486, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 194; Ex parte Boyce, 24 N.B.R. 347.

If any witnesses are produced to satisfy the justice that he should issue process, which, for any good reason, he is not convinced he should do on the oath of the complainant alone, such witnesses are to give their evidence upon oath and their deposition is to be taken in writing. White v. Dunning, (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1210, 8 Sask. L.R. 76, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 85; ex parte Archambault, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 433; R. v. Mitchell, 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; ex parte Boyce, 24 N.B.R. 347.

The depositions are to be reduced to writing or may be taken in shorthand, following the directions "so far as applicable" of sec. 683, but as they are ex parte statements, they cannot be used as part of the evidence on the preliminary enquiry to support a committal for trial; for the latter purpose the witnesses must again attend and give evidence, and be subject to cross-examination. See sec. 682; Weir v. Choquet, 6 Rev. de J. 121.

If the justice is satisfied by the information itself that there is sufficient ground to issue a summons without any preliminary examination under oath, either of the complainant or of his witnesses, he need not examine the complainant or his witnesses under oath, ex parte Kane (1915) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 166 (N.B.); R. v. Neilson, 44 N.S.R. 488, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 298: Ex parte Archambault, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 433, ex parte Dolan, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.); ex parte O'Regan, (1909) 39 N.B.R. 378; ex parte O'Neill, (1910) 40 N.B.R. 339; R. v. Mitchell, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113, 24 O.L.R. 324; (contra, see R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425).

Application to summary conviction proceedings under Part XV]-The provisions of Part XIII for compelling the appearance of the accused are, "so far as applicable," to apply to summary conviction proceedings, except as varied in Part XV. See Code sec. 711. Whether the provision of sec. 655 for hearing additional witnesses in support of the application for a summons or warrant applies in any case under Part XV is an open question. In ex parte Dolan (1911), 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171, 174 (N.B.) the court found it unnecessary to decide the point, but intimated that in a summary conviction matter, the duty of the justice remains "as it always has been," that is, that he should reasonably satisfy himself that there is sufficient cause for his interference by summons. Ordinarily, a written and signed information is sufficient for that purpose. But if, with such an information before him, his mind is still unsatisfied or in doubt, he may, if he desires, "as he heretofore could have done," take the evidence under oath of any witness in support of the information. Ex parte Dolan (1911) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171, 174.

If the proceedings were under Part XV (summary convictions) and a warrant of arrest was not asked, but a summons only, it would seem that the provisions as to taking evidence would not apply, as the information in that event need not be under oath (see. 710). R. v. Neilson (1910) 44 N.S.R. 488, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 298; R. v. Sweeney, 45 N.S.R. 494, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 222.

Refusal to issue process]—Mandamus will not lie to compel a magistrate to issue a warrant for the arrest on a criminal charge of conspiracy of persons resident out of Canada who are temporarily therein solely for the purpose of giving evidence before a committee of a provincial legislature in respect of the very matter which is sought to be made the subject of the criminal charge, while such non-residents are under the protection of a safe-conduct granted to them by the legislature. Marsil v. Lanetot (1914) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 223.

The refusal of a summons or warrant is not a discharge of the accused within sec. 688 permitting the prosecutor to have himself bound over to prosecute for an indictable offence. Ex parte Reid, 49 J.P. 600.

In Ontario a magistrate who refuses to issue either a summons or a warrant upon an information laid before him for a eriminal offence may be called upon by order nisi from the Supreme Court of Ontario to show cause why the information had not been proceeded upon. The person accused by such information may also be made a party to the proceedings against the magistrate that he may also show cause why the magistrate should not issue process against him. R. v. Graham, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 264; R. v. Meehan (No. 1), 3 O.L.R. 361; R. v. Meehan (No. 2), 3 O.L.R. 567, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 312; Re Broom, 18 Can Cr. Cas. 255 (Ont.), 2 O.W.N. 306.

Where justices entertained an application for a summons for a criminal offence, and have considered the material on which the application is based, and refused to hear more, or to grant the summons, the High Court will not interfere by mandamus to order them to hear again: Ex parte MacMahon, 48 J.P. 70. That was an application for a mandamus to a magistrate to exercise his jurisdiction in granting summonses against five persons for the crime of wilful and corrupt perjury. In giving judgment Lord Coleridge said: "If he, the magistrate, has not exercised his jurisdiction, this court will compel him to do so, for parties have a right to his exercise of that jurisdiction, and he has no right to refuse to do so. But if it has been exercised, however erroneously, this court, which is not a court of appeal from the magistrate, has no power whatever to correct or review his exercise of his jurisdiction."

The court will not grant to the prosecutor a mandamus to compel a re-hearing by the magistrate of an application for process in respect of an indictable offence, if the magistrate has exercised his discretion (although erroneously) in refusing the process after being put in possession of the facts on which he can exercise discretion. But, if the magistrate on an application for process erroneously holds that the offence is not indictable, and that he therefore has no jurisdiction to hold a preliminary enquiry in respect thereof, a mandamus will lie to compel him to do so. The King v. Mechan (No. 2), 3 O.L.R. 567, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 312 (Ont.); Thompson v. Desnoyers, 16 Que. S.C. 253, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 68; and see re McLeod and Amiro, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 230 (Ont.). So, where process has been granted, the accused is not entitled to restrain further proceeding by applying to a superior court for prohibition upon material showing a good ground of defence. Beaudry v. Lafontaine, 17 Que. S.C. 398.

Delay for consideration]—It is only if the magistrate is "of opinion that a case for so doing is made out" that he is directed to issue a summons. That consideration may require time. In most cases the course of duty is plain, and no prolonged consideration is needed. It is therefore to be expected that the form of summons should read as it does to meet the ordinary case. But the presence of the words "this day" in form 5, having regard to the language of sec. 655, by no means warrants a construction of that section which would compel the magistrate in every case in which he takes an information to issue a summons forthwith or not at all. R. v. Hudgins (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 223, 14 O.L.R. 139, per Anglin, J.

Ministerial and Judicial Acts]—The issue of a warrant for arrest upon a sworn information is in itself a ministerial act of the magistrate, but his preliminary decision under Cr. Code see. 655 on the question whether a warrant or summons is the more appropriate, or whether in fact any offence is disclosed in the information, is a judicial act. Marsil v. Lanetot (1914), 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 223 (Que.).

Without an information properly laid a justice has no jurisdiction to issue a warrant and if he does so he is liable in trespass. Appleton v. Lepper, 20 U.C.C.P. 138; McGuiness v. Defoe, 23 A.R. (Ont.), 704; Kingston v. Wallace, 25 N.B.R. 573; Murfina v. Sauve, 19 Que. S.C. 51.

Discretion of magistrate]—The discretion vested in a magistrate to refuse a warrant of arrest will not be interfered with by mandamus; nor will a mandamus be granted where a warrant had been granted, but on re-consideration had been withdrawn by the magistrate before it was executed. R. v. Biddinger (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 217; and see re Parke, 30 Ont. R. 498; Ex parte McMahon, 48 J.P. 70.

The magistrate may well decline to permit a witness whom he has believed on the trial of an assault case to be prosecuted for perjury, at the instance of a witness whom he did not believe, and where, upon the perjury charge, there could be no further evidence than that given upon the trial of the assault. It is not in the public interest that the retrial of a trivial assault case should be had in this indirect way. Re Broom, 3 O.W.N. 51.

It was objected in R. v. Graf, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193, 19 O.L.R. 238, upon a charge under sec. 207 of selling obscene pictures, that, before the actual trial of the case, the magistrate had looked at the books and pictures found in the defendant's possession, and had thereby necessarily become prejudiced against the defendant. Held, that, as the magistrate was at liberty to look at the productions before issuing a summons or warrant, in order to form his opinion as to whether or not a case was made out, he was entitled to do so after the defendant was in custody, or at any time. A warrant ought never to be issued when a summons will be equally effectual, except when the charge is of a serious nature. O'Brien v. Brabner, 49 J.P. 227, 78 L.T.N. 409.

When an information is laid before a justice he should use some discretion and common sense in deciding whether he should issue a warrant or a summons to secure the attendance of the accused. Beck, J., in Carruthers v. Biesiegel (1908), 1 Alta. L.R. 390, 391.

Preliminary inquiry where accused under remand for sentence on another charge]—A prisoner convicted by a magistrate on a summary trial and remanded for sentence to a fixed date may be brought up in the meantime for preliminary enquiry upon another criminal charge by means of a writ of habeas corpus ad respondendum ordered by a Superior Court on the prosecutor's application. R. v. Henry (1915) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 86; Ex parte Griffiths, 5 B, & A, 730, followed.

Where there is concurrent jurisdiction with the U.S.A. on the Great Lakes]—There may be a concurrent jurisdiction of the U.S.A. in respect of an offence committed on board an American vessel on a part of the Great Lakes constituting the high seas, under R.S.U.S., sec. 5346. United States v. Rodgers, 150 U.S. 249, 37 L. Ed. 1071, or on any river conneeting two of the boundary lakes and within navigable waters. Ibid. So the U.S. Courts assume jurisdiction, under R.S.U.S., sec. 5346, to try a person who commits, on board a vessel belonging in whole or in part to the U.SA. or to an American eitizen, an assault on another with a dangerous weapon, when such vessel is in the Detroit river out of the jurisdiction of the State of Michigan and within the territorial limits of Canada. United States v. Rodgers, supra. This jurisdiction is exercised when the vessel and parties are brought again into U.S. territory. By comity between nations it is generally understood that disorder which disturbs only the peace of the ship or those on board is to be dealt with exclusively by the sovereignty of the home of the ship, but those which disturb public peace may be suppressed and, if need be, the offenders punished by the proper authorities of the local jurisdiction. that he is a deserter he shall be confined in gaol until claimed by the military or naval authorities or proceeded against according to law.

2. No one shall break open any building to search for a deserter unless he has obtained a warrant for that purpose from a justice, founded on affidavit that there is reason to believe that the deserter is concealed in such building, and that admittance has been demanded and refused.

 Every one who resists the execution of any such warrant shall incur a penalty of eighty dollars, recoverable on summary conviction, before two justices.

Origin]—Sec. 561, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 169, sec. 7; compare sec. 154 of the Army Act (Imp.).

Persuading to desert from military or naval service]-See secs. 81-84.

Summons .- Form .- Service .- Proof of service.

658. Every summons issued by a justice under this Act shall be directed to the accused, and shall require him to appear at a time and place to be therein mentioned.

2. Such summons may be in form 5, or to the like effect.

3. No summons shall be signed in blank.

4. Every such summons shall be served by a constable or other peace officer upon the person to whom it is directed, either by delivering it to him personally or, if such person cannot conveniently be met with, by leaving it for him at his last or most usual place of abode with some inmate thereof apparently not under sixteen years of age.

5. The service of any such summons may be proved by the oral testimony of the person effecting the same or by the affidavit of such person purporting to be made before a justice.

Origin]-Sec. 562, Code of 1892; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, secs. 14 and 15.

Procedure on appearance of accused]—See sec. 668 et seq. Part XIV as to preliminary enquiry and sec. 771 et seq. Part XVI as to summary trial of indictable offences in certain cases.

Application of summons procedure to summary conviction matters]— See sec. 711. Sub-sec. (5) of sec. 658 requires the affidavit or proof of service of the summons to be sworn before a justice and cuts out the application of any general provision as to the power of a commissioner to take affidavits for use in courts generally. R. v. Pelley, (1915) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 405 (N.S.). Without this proof there would be no jurisdiction to proceed in the defendant's absence in a summary conviction matter. R. v. Pelley, supra.

Service made by a de facto constable, one serving after his term has run out and before a re-appointment, would not invalidate a summary conviction on certiorari. R. v. Pelley, supra; R. v. Gibson, 29 N.S.R. 4, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 451.

Warrant may follow summons either before or after default]—See sec. 660 (4).

Warrant for apprehension.

659. The warrant issued by a justice for the apprehension of the person against whom an information or complaint has been laid as provided in sec. 654, may be in form 6, or to the like effect.

2. No such warrant shall be signed in blank.

Origin]—Sec. 563, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 43, 44, 46. Form of warrant in the first instance to apprehend a person charged with an indictable offence]—Code form 6, following sec. 1152.

Formalities of warrant]—See secs. 655, 659, 660, 661 (3), 669, 670, 1120.

Warrant may be endorsed in another territorial division]—See secs. 662, 663.

Admission to bail pending hearing]-See secs. 664, 668, 681.

Similar process on non-appearance to summons under Part XV]— Code sec. 718.

Formalities of warrant.—Statement of offence.—No return day.— Summons not to prevent warrant.—Warrant in default.— Form.

660. Every warrant shall be under the hand and seal of the justice issuing the same, and may be directed, either to any constable by name, or to such constable and all other constables within the territorial jurisdiction of the justice issuing it, or generally to all constables within such jurisdiction.

2. The warrant shall state shortly the offence for which it is issued, and shall name or otherwise describe the offender, and it shall order the officer or officers to whom it is directed to apprehend the offender and bring him before the justice or justices issuing the warrant, or before some other justice or justices, to answer to the charge contained in the information or complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law.

3. It shall not be necessary to make such warrant returnable at any particular time, but the same shall remain in force until it is executed.

4. The fact that a summons has been issued shall not prevent any justice from issuing a warrant at any time before or after the time mentioned in the summons for the appearance of the accused.

5. In case the service of the summons has been proved and the accused does not appear, or when it appears that the summons cannot be served, a warrant in form 7 may issue.

Origin]-Sec. 563, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 43, 44, 46. Form of warrant when the summons is disobeyed]-Code form 7, following sec. 1152.

Warrant may issue on Sunday]-See sec. 661 (3).

Duty of officer executing warrant]-See secs. 661-664.

The Fugitive Offenders Act]-The Imperial Parliament, and it alone, has the power to pass a law of general application to the whole of the British Empire dealing with the question of apprehending a fugitive offender in one portion of the Empire and returning him to the part where the offence was committed, in order that he may be tried and punished, R. v. Simpson, (re Whitla) 9 W.W.R. 1461, affirming 9 W.W.R. 986. This legislation is contained in the Fugitive Offenders Act, 44-45 Vict., Imp., ch. 69 (1881). The Act contemplates that when an offence to which the Act applies has been committed in one British possession and the party accused has taken refuge in another British possession, the ordinary law prevailing in the place where the offence was committed may be set in motion, but with this distinction that the magistrate may proceed with the taking of depositions in the absence of the accused, but otherwise in a manner similar to that of a preliminary enquiry, for the purpose of determining whether or not an order for the fugitive's return should be made. Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, Imp., sec. 29; R. v. Simpson, 9 W.W.R. 1461. This includes the power to compel witnesses to attend. Ibid.

Procedure applies also on non-appearance to summons under Part XV]—Code sec. 718.

661. Every such warrant may be executed by arresting the accused wherever he is found in the territorial jurisdiction of the justice by whom it is issued, or, in the case of fresh pursuit, at any place in an adjoining territorial division within seven miles of the border of the first-mentioned division.

2. Every such warrant may be executed by any constable named therein or by any one of the constables to whom it is directed, whether or not the place in which it is to be executed is within the place for which he is a constable.

3. Every warrant authorized by this Act may be issued and executed on a Sunday or statutory holiday.

"Within seven miles"]-The distance is to be measured in a straight line on a horizontal plane. Mouflet v. Cole, L.R. 8 Ex. 32.

Admission to bail pending hearing]-See secs. 664, 668, 681.

Statutory holiday]—The effect of a statutory provision, such as is contained in the Interpretation Act of the Dominion and many provinces, defining the word "holiday" to include New Year's Day, etc., naming the days commonly observed as holidays, relates only to the interpretation of the word "holiday" where used in a statute. Upton v. Phelan, 18 N.B.R. 192: Ex parte Cormier, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 339.

As regards the interpretation of the Code, the word "holiday" in eludes Sundays, New Year's Day, the Epiphany, Good Friday, the Ascension, All Saints' Day, Conception Day, Easter Monday, Ash Wednesday, Christmas Day, the birthday or the day fixed by proclamation for the celebration of the birthday of the reigning sovereign, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, the first Monday in September, designated Labour Day, and any day appointed by proclamation for a general fast or thanksgiving. B.S.C. 1906, eb. 1, sec. 34 (Interpretation Act).

Every warrant authorized by this Act]—This phraseology is wide enough to include all warrants under the Criminal Code. Compare sees. 8-12, containing similar references to "this Act," although certain parts of the Code may be referred to as separate Acts if designated by the former titles of the Acts from which they were consolidated. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 29.

Warrants for offences under other statutes]-

Where the prosecution is not for a Code offence, but is under some other statute, federal or provincial, to which some of the Code practice has been made applicable, the exact extent of its adoption must be enquired into for the purpose of ascertaining whether this provision for issuing and executing a warrant on Sunday will extend to such offence or not. The Code does not, of its own force, impose its system of legal procedure upon the provinces in respect of offences created by the provincial legislatures; but these legislatures have very generally adopted the summary convictions procedure of Part XV of the Code by declaring in provincial statutes regulating summary convictions for provincial offences that except where otherwise provided Part XV of the Code shall apply mutatis mutandis as if embodied in the provincial law. See in Ontario, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 90, sec. 4. Sec. 661, not being in Part XV, but in Part XIII, would, in such cases, apply as if included in Part XV only to the extent to which Part XV itself makes it applicable. A reference to sec. 711 in Part XV shows that the provisions of Parts XIII and XIV, relating to compelling the appearance of the accused before the justice for trial are to apply "so far as applicable" and "except as varied, etc." (sec. 711). A warrant of arrest to answer a charge in a summary conviction matter is issued under the authority of sec. 711; and sec. 661 (as well as secs. 654, 655 and 660) would apply by virtue of sec. 711 in all cases to which Part XV had been made applicable. R. v. McGillivray, 41 N.S.R. 321, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 113. But where Part XV could apply only by its inclusion by reference in the special Act, such reference will not involve the application of sec. 661 (3) to warrants in execution in default of distress or of payment of a fine under sees. 739-741 of Part XV. Ex parte Freeker, 33 C.L.J. 248; Ex parte Willis, (R. v. Lawlor) 44 N.B.R. 447, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 383.

For any offence against the Criminal Code, search warrants are authorized to be issued, Part XII, see. 629, et seq., and the execution of such a warrant is authorized to be made on a Sunday or statutory holiday. (Part XIII, see. 661, sub-see. 3.)

Warrants under the Canada Temperance Act]-

Selling, keeping or exposing for sale intoxicating liquor contrary to the provisions of Part II of the Canada Temperance Act is not an offence against the provisions of the Criminal Code; neither is it an indictable offence; but in so far as no provision is made in Part III of the Canada Temperance Act for any matter or thing which is required to be done with respect to prosecutions under the provisions of that Act. all the provisions of Part XV of the Criminal Code, that is the part relating to Summary Convictions, are made applicable in the same manner as if they were incorporated in the Canada Temperance Act. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 152, sec. 135. The Canada Temperance Act makes special provision for the issuance, upon proper information, of search warrants to search for intoxicating liquor, and prescribes the form of both information for the warrant and the warrant itself: (see. 136 as amended in 1908, ch. 71, sec. 3, and in 1916, ch. 14); but the Act is silent both as to the manner and the time of service (except that the search shall be made in the daytime), of any search warrant that may be issued under the Act. In Ex parte Willis, supra, Barry, J., said: "It is important to bear in mind that by the express words of sec. 135 of the Canada Temperance Act it is only Part XV of the Criminal Code that is made applicable to prosecutions under the former Act, and that according to the accepted canons of construction of statutes, all the other provisions of the Code are, therefore, inferentially or impliedly excluded. And since the provisions of the Criminal Code in regard to the issue and service of search warrants are to be found in Parts XII and XIII of that Act, it follows that we cannot resort to or rely upon these parts for authority to serve on a Sunday a search warrant issued under the provisions of the Criminal Code for the purpose of legalizing the service on a Sunday of a search warrant, because that provision is not found in Part XV, but is a provision of Part XIII, which latter part is not applicable to prosecutions under the Canada Temperance Act."

Informant officer may be given the warrant of arrest]—The same officer who laid the information may be deputed to execute the warrant of arrest. R. v. Harrison, (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 420 (B.C.). But it is undesirable that he should make the arrest if he has any personal feeling against the accused or any financial interest in the prosecution or in the matter of the complaint. R. v. Harrison, (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 420. (B.C.).

662. If the person against whom any warrant has been issued cannot be found within the jurisdiction of the justice by whom the same was issued, but is or is suspected to be in any other part of Canada, any justice within whose jurisdiction he is or is suspected to be, upon proof being made on oath or affirmation of the handwriting of the justice who issued the same, shall make an endorsement on the warrant, signed with his name authorizing the execution thereof within his jurisdiction.

2. Such endorsement shall be sufficient authority to the person bringing such warrant, and to all other persons to whom the same was originally directed, and also to all constables of the territorial division where the warrant has been so endorsed, to execute the same therein and to carry the person against whom the warrant issued when apprehended, before the justice who issued the warrant, or before some other justice for the same territorial division.

3. Such endorsement may be in form 8.

4. If the person against whom such warrant has been issued is then confined for some other cause in any prison within the province then, upon application to the judge of any superior, county or district court, and upon production to him of the warrant with an affidavit setting forth the above facts, such judge if he is satisfied that the ends of justice require it, may make an order in writing addressed to the warden or keeper of such prison, or to the sheriff or other person having the custody of the prisoner, to bring up the body of such person before the justice who is holding the preliminary inquiry, from day to day, as may be necessary for the purposes of such inquiry, and such warden, keeper, sheriff or other person, upon being paid his reasonable charges in that behalf, shall obey such order.

Prosecution may proceed before endorsing justice in certain events]-Sec. 663 shows that in some cases the endorsing magistrate may require that the person when apprehended in his territorial division on his endorsement of the warrant from another division, shall be brought before him or some other justice of the division in which the arrest took place; but this is only to be done if the prosecutor, or some of the witnesses for the prosecution, are in that territorial division. Code sec. 663. The magistrate may then exercise a discretion as to whether the interests of justice will be better served by taking the preliminary hearing in the district of the arrest instead of allowing the arresting officer to take the prisoner to the district in which the warrant issued. This provision would doubtless be applied if all of the witnesses desired to be called on either side, including the informant, had followed the accused to the place where he was arrested, and both parties desired the preliminary inquiry and the subsequent trial, if any, to take place in the district of the arrest rather than in another district where the offence is alleged to have been committed.

preceding section, the constable or other person or persons who have apprehended him may, if so directed by the justice endorsing the warrant, take him before such justice, or before some other justice for the same territorial division and the said justice may thereupon take the examination of such prosecutor or witnesses, and proceed in every respect as if he had himself issued the warrant.

Procedure in other cases of person arrested on warrant.

664. When any person is arrested upon a warrant he shall, except in the case provided for in the last preceding section, be brought as soon as is practicable before the justice who issued it or some other justice for the same territorial division, and such justice shall either proceed with the inquiry or postpone it to a future time, in which latter case he shall either commit the accused person to proper custody or admit him to bail or permit him to be at large on his own recognizance according to the provisions hereinafter contained.

Origin]-Sec. 567, Code of 1892.

Person arrested to be brought before the justice]—The first duty of a magistrate dealing with a person arrested upon his warrant is to have such person brought before him as soon as practicable, and then make out such order as the case requires. The express enactment of Code sec. 664 must be followed in this respect and ordinarily no remand may be made in the prisoner's absence. Ex parte Sarrault, 15 Que. K.B. 3, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 448; and see sec. 679.

Preliminary inquiry.—Offence committed out of jurisdiction.— Offender taken before justice where offence committed.

665. The preliminary inquiry may be held either by one justice or by more justices than one.

2. If the accused person is brought before any justice charged with an offence committed out of the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, such justice may, after hearing both sides, order the accused at any stage of the inquiry to be taken by a constable before some justice having jurisdiction in the place where the offence was committed.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 557.

Transfer of preliminary enquiry to place of offence]—If a person is brought before a justice of the peace charged with an offence committed within the province, but out of the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice the latter, in his discretion, may either order the accused to be taken before some justice having jurisdiction in the place where the offence was committed (see. 665), or may proceed as if it had been committed within his own jurisdiction. S. was brought before the stipendiary magistrate of the City of Halifax charged with having committed burglary in Sydney, C.B. It was held that the stipendiary magistrate could, with the consent of the accused, try him summarily under sec. 777. Re Charles Seeley, 41 Can. S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270.

The power conferred on a magistrate under this section of ordering the accused person brought before him, charged with an offence committed out of his territorial jurisdiction, to be taken before some justice laving jurisdiction in the place where the offence was committed, is permissive only. 666. Upon the constable delivering to the justice the warrant, information, if any, depositions and recognizances, and proving on oath or affirmation, the handwriting of the justice who has subscribed the same, such justice, before whom the accused is produced, shall thereupon furnish such constable with a receipt or certificate in form-10, of his having received from him the body of the accused, together with the warrant, information, if any, depositions and recognizances, and of his having proved to him, upon oath or affirmation, the handwriting of the justice who issued the warrant.

- 2. If such justice does not commit the accused for trial, or hold him to bail, the recognizances taken before the first mentioned justice shall be void.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 557.

Form of receipt to be given to the constable by the justice for the county in which the offence was committed]—Code form 10, following sec. 1152.

Procedure on preliminary enquiry]-See sec. 668 et seq.

Coroner's inquisition.—Warrant or recognizance to bring case before magistrate.—Transmitting depositions.—Procedure.

667. Every coroner, upon any inquisition taken before him whereby any person is charged with manslaughter or murder, shall, if the person or persons, or either of them, affected by the verdict or finding is not already charged with the said offence before a magistrate or justice, by warrant under his hand, direct that such person be taken into custody and be conveyed, with all convenient speed, before a magistrate or justice; or such coroner may direct such person to enter into a recognizance before him, with or without a surety or sureties, to appear before a magistrate or justice.

2. In either case, it shall be the duty of the coroner to transmit to such magistrate or justice the depositions taken before him in the matter,

3. Upon any such person being brought or appearing before any such magistrate or justice, he shall proceed in all respects as though such person had been brought or had appeared before him upon a warrant or summons.

Origin]-Sec. 568, Code of 1892.

Coroner's court]—The coroner's court is a common law tribunal charged with making an investigation into the cause of death; Robin v. McMahon, (1917) 50 Que, S.C. 267, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 407. It is a court of record, and the coroner is a judge of a court of record. Davidson v. Garrett, (1859) 30 Ont. R. 653, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 200.

"Inquisition whereby any person is charged," etc.]—The inquiry before the coroner is to ascertain the cause of death, and no one is, strictly speaking, a defendant on such an inquiry, at least until the verdict is rendered. This may be an open verdict, such as that the deceased came to his death by foul means used by some person or persons to the jury unknown, or it may define the cause of death as due to accident or to the criminal neglect or the wilful and malicious act of a named person. Such person is then "charged" by the inquisition, and it is to the latter class of case where the finding charges manslaughter or murder that reference is made in sec. 667. The verdict of the coroner's jury and the record of the depositions and proceedings at the inquiry are to be transmitted in such cases for use on the preliminary enquiry before a magistrate (sec. 668 et seq.). The finding of the coroner's jury is not a substitute for a true bill by a grand jury or for a formal charge in jurisdictions where there is no grand jury. Code sec. 940. In practice the coroner's inquest does little more than marshal the evidence for the prosecuting officer and indicate to some extent the class of charge which the Crown officer is likely to bring to trial. The depositions forwarded to the magistrate under sec. 667 (2), have again to be transmitted by the magistrate to the trial court if he sends the case up for trial. Sec. 695. But no one is to be tried upon a coroner's inquisition alone, as was possible prior to the Code. Sec. 940. Much freedom is usually given in permitting persons who claim to have an interest in the coroner's proceedings to be represented by counsel and examine and crossexamine witnesses, but there being no person "accused" until the termination of the proceedings there is no absolute right to have counsel examine the witnesses. Agnew v. Stewart, 21 U.C.Q.B. 296.

Non-juridical days]—The issue and execution of the warrant on a Sunday or holiday is authorized by sec. 661. Code sec. 961, in view of its context, would probably be held not to apply to a coroner's court, and the holding of the inquest and the taking of evidence would be limited to juridical days. It was held in Re Cooper, 5 P.R. 256 (Ont.), that a coroner's inquest held on Sunday was invalid.

Witness disobeying summons]—A coroner is a local officer who can act only within his own municipal jurisdiction; and a warrant issued by him to apprehend a defaulting witness cannot be validly executed outside of that jurisdiction. The fact that a witness at an inquest has already been questioned at great length is not a ground for prohibiting the coroner from subjecting her to further examination; the court assumes that the coroner will not permit the witness to be unduly harassed. Re Anderson and Kinrade, 18 O.L.R. 362; 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 448.

Coroner's duties both ministerial and judicial]—A coroner's duties are partly judicial and partly ministerial. Re Anderson and Kinrade, 18 O.L.R. 362, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 448; Ex parte Wilson (1871) Stevens N.B., Dig. 334. He is appointed by provincial authority and is assigned special duties by provincial legislation, but in holding an inquest in respect of a death charged to have been brought about criminally, the coroner presides over a criminal court and its proceedings in that regard are within federal control. R. v. Hammond, 29 Ont. R. 211, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 373.

As provincial legislation controls the compensation paid to coroners for their services, reference has to be made to provincial statutes and regulations to ascertain the classes of cases in which coroners are expected to hold inquests and the conditions framed for the purpose of limiting the expenditure of public money for inquests to those which are considered absolutely necessary. The coroner should not hold an inquest in a matter in which he himself had been employed as a surgeon or physician and would more properly be a witness than an officer presiding over a judicial enquiry. Re Haney and Mead, 34 C.L.J. 330.

A coroner has power to himself summon the coroner's jury by a mere verbal direction to the persons required to be jurors. Davidson v. (Garrett, (1899) 30 Ont. R. 653, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 200.

A coroner may summon a witness to re-attend to give further evidence on new matter alleged to have been disclosed to the Crown since the witness' examination in the same inquest. Rc Anderson and Kinrade, (1909) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 448.

Subsequent use of depositions taken at coroner's inquest]-A coroner is not a "justice" within sec. 999, so as to permit the depositions taken before the coroner being certified by him and read at a subsequent trial in a criminal court without further proof; R. v. Graham, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 388; but the coroner may be called as a witness to prove the accuracy of the depositions. Any deposition before the coroner will be admitted in evidence against the person subsequently charged only in case such person was present before the coroner and was afforded full opportunity to cross-examine the witness, and that the particular witness whose deposition it is proposed to use in this way is proved to be dead or unable to travel or is being kept out of the way by the contrivance of the accused. In such cases the evidence might be admitted under common law principles quite apart from sec. 999 of the Code or of see, 23 of the Canada Evidence Act. R. v. Riggs, 4 F. & F. 1085; Johnson v. The King, (1911) 13 Can. Exch. R. 379; Phipson on Evidence, 4th ed., 449; Boys on Coroners, 4th ed., 291.

The English practice is to treat the depositions as inadmissible unless they comply with all the requirements of the Indictable Offences Act, 11-12 Viet., Imp., ch. 42, which corresponds with sec. 999 of the Code. Bird v. Keep, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1199, 1204. The inquisition or finding is not conclusive upon any person affected by it. Bird v. Keep, supra.

Depositions of a witness speaking in French taken down by the translator in English at a preliminary inquiry, but not read over and explained to the witness or signed by him are not admissible to contradict his testimony on a subsequent proceeding, but the witness may be cross-examined as to material statements then made, and witnesses called to show a contradiction with his former testimony. R. v. Ciarlo, (1897) 1 Can. Cr. Cas 157 (Que.).

An accused person on a murder trial giving testimony on his own behalf may be asked whether or not he made a certain statement at the inquest although the original depositions are not available in court; and he has no right to demand before answering that he be informed of what was taken down in the depositions; but if use is to be made of the latter to contradict him the original deposition should be produced. R. v. Mulvihill, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197, affirmed in Mulvihill v. The King, 23 Can. Cr. Cas 194, 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587.

Once the signature of the witness has been proven to his deposition at the inquest, it may be used to test his memory or to impeach his credit, although it may have been insufficiently certified or irregularly returned; R. v. Laurin, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 545 and 548 (Que.); Can. Evid. Act, R.S.C., 1906, ed. 145, sec. 10. Similarly it may be used to impeach the credit of an adverse witness on his denying having made the previous statement, but the previous statement when admitted does not become proof of the fact it purports to verify. R. v. Duckworth, 37 O.L.R. 197, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 314; Can. Evid. Act, sec. 9.

Coroner's warrant]—On a verdict being found by the coroner's jury against a person for culpable homicide, the coroner may issue his warrant for that person's arrest. Robin v. McMahon (1915) 50 Que, S.C. 267, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 407. 14

Removal of verdict and proceedings by certiorari]—The verdict deelaring a person-criminally guilty of the death under investigation can be attacked only for irregularities shown against the verdict itself and not for irregularities prior to the verdict or prior to the holding to the inquest by non-conformity with provincial regulations, Robin v. Mc-Mahon (1917) 50 Que. S.C. 267, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 407.

The Quebec statute as to Coroners (4 Geo. V Que. (1914), ch. 38, amending R.S. Que., articles 3477 to 3487 (a) for the most part relate to the preliminary declaration to be made by the coroner, the medical examination, the declaration concerning the report which must be made by the coroner to the Government, also the provisions concerning the place where the inquest should be held, and the selection of the jury and the duties of the coroner; but these dispositions are not imperative and are more directory than mandatory. They have for their object the regulation of the proceedings of the coroner with the administrative authority so as to assure a better control of the expense incurred for the maintaining of this official and the expense of his tribunal, but they cannot constitute illegality of such a nature that the verdict should be set aside on certiorari. Robin v. McMahon (1917) 50 Que. S.C. 267, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 407.

668. When any person accused of an indictable offence is before a justice, whether voluntarily or upon summons, or after being apprehended with or without warrant, or while in custody for the same or any other offence, the justice shall proceed to inquire into the matters charged against such person in the manner hereinafter directed.

Jurisdiction generally]—Jurisdiction involves two distinct concepts: authority to deal with a person against his will, and authority to deal with the subject matter. If a person who is not amenable without his consent to the coercive jurisdiction of a court voluntarily appears and submits to it, the court has jurisdiction to deal with the matter as against him as in the well-known instance of an action against a foreign sovereign. But consent cannot give jurisdiction over subject matter which is itself not within the cognizance of the court. Ridley v. Whipp (1916) 23 Argus L.R. (Austr.) 129, 22 C.L.R. 381, per Griffith, C.J.

In R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614, it was held that upon the proper construction of the Justices Acts, Imp., the mode of bringing a man before the court is a mere matter of procedure, and that if a man being in fact before justices and being charged, submits to the jurisdiction, the justices have authority to proceed. That case did not decide what would happen if the defendant had made a valid objection to the jurisdiction. Griffith, C.J., in Ridley v. Whipp (1916), 22 C.L.R. 381, 23 Argus L.R. (Australia) 129, 131.

When accused is "before a justice"]—Code sec. 668, directing the justice to proceed to inquire into the matters charged when a person is before a justice and is accused of an indictable offence, is to be limited to cases in which the accused is rightly before such justice. Re Holman and Rae, (No. 2), 21 Can, Cr. Cas. 11, 27 O.L.R. 432. [§ 668]

A magistrate may hold a preliminary enquiry in respect of an indicable offence committed in the same province outside of his territorial jurisdiction, if the accused is apprehended within the limits over which such magistrate has jurisdiction. Code sec. 577. Re the Queen v. Burke (1900), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 29 (Ont.); re Seeley, 41 S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270.

A written information on a preliminary enquiry is for the protection of the accused so that he may know the charge laid against him, but if the magistrate on being verbally informed of the offence by the accused himself issues a summons and the accused attends on its return a committal for trial may be made on the depositions taken upon the preliminary enquiry, without an information in writing. R. v. Thompson, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 162. The committing justices had jurisdiction over the accused on his attending in answer to the summons although objection was taken to the want of an information, but semble, a warrant to arrest the accused could not have been issued without a sworn information, had he failed to attend on the summons. R. v. Thompson, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 162; same case, Re Thompson, 14 B.C.R. 314.

Part XIV not applicable to corporation defendants]-

The procedure of Part XIV is applicable to persons and not to corporations. If a corporation is to be charged with an indictable offence, the prosecution is begun by an indictment preferred by leave of the court or of the Attorney-General, or preferred by the Attorney-General himself or some one authorized to act for him. Secs. 873, 873A. Code secs. 916-921 deal with procedure in the case of a corporation defendant.

"Apprehended with or without warrant"]—As to arrest without warrant, see secs. 646-652; and as to issuing a summons or warrant, see secs. 653-655. A commitment for trial for an indictable offence may be justified in respect of a person brought before the magistrate under an invalid warrant, if the magistrate had a general jurisdiction over the person and over the subject matter of the inquiry; R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614; McGuiness v. Dafoe, 23 A.R. (Ont.) 704, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 139; but different considerations may apply to the special jurisdiction of summary trial conferred by secs. 771-799 (Part XVI).

Irregularity or defect in warrant or summons]-Code sec. 669.

Several charges]—Where several informations for various offences are laid against the same person, the magistrate will have jurisdiction under see. 668, to proceed with preliminary enquiries as to all of such charges, although the accused was arrested and brought bofore him by virtue of a warrant of arrest issued upon one information only, subject to the right of the accused to a reasonable adjournment. R. v. Weiss (No. 2), 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 42, 5 W.W.R. 48 and 460, 6 Alta. L.R. 264.

That the magistrate proceeded with the hearing of the evidence on preliminary enquiries for two offences at the same time, against the same accused, is not a ground for habeas corpus in respect of his committal for trial. Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.B. 57.

Other justices]—When a magistrate has become seized of a case by taking the information for an indictable offence no other magistrate having general concurrent jurisdiction with him can acquire jurisdiction to intervene and preside at a preliminary enquiry, even with the consent of the first magistrate, except in so far as such course is authorized by statute in special circumstances such as illness or absence of the first magistrate. Re Holman and Rae (No. 2), 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, 27 O.L.R. 432; R. v. McRae, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 49, 28 Ont. R. 569.

Regina v. McRae (1897) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 49; 28 O.R. 569, determines that where an information is laid before a magistrate he becomes seized of the case and that no other magistrate has any right to take part in the trial unless at the request of the magistrate before whom proceedings are taken. All the magistrates in the county have jurisdiction; but so soon as proceedings are taken before any one of these officers having concurrent jurisdiction he becomes solely seized of the case. The magistrate has under the statute, and possibly apart from the statute, the right to ask other magistrates to sit with him; and, if he does so, the whole bench becomes seized of the complaint: Regina v. Milne, 15 U.C.C.P 94.

The Ontario statute relating to Police Magistrates, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, see. 18, recognizes this principle. So also do sees. 10 and 34, which provide that the Deputy Police Magistrate, or if there is no Deputy, any other Police Magistrate appointed for the county, may proceed for the Police Magistrate in the case of his illness or absence. Middleton, J., in Re Holman & Rae (No. 2), 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, said: "Neither of these sections (10 and 34) gives to the magistrate any power, once he has undertaken the case, to discharge himself, save in the case of illness or absence. He has no power to request another magistrate to sit for him. Contrast the provisions of the two sections with sec. 18, which provides that in the case falling within it, the magistrate may so request. By sec. 31, where the case arises out of the limits of the city, the Police Magistrate is not bound to act; but if once he does act it appears that he must continue to the end. This view of the statute is quite consistent with the view taken in Regina v. Gordon, 16 O.R. 64."

In Quebec if the magistrate who had begun the hearing dies, is dismissed, resigns his office or withdraws from the hearing, then another competent magistrate may take it up, but he should begin the hearing de novo before himself; he cannot merely continue that previously begun. The judge of the sessions of the peace, Hon. Mr. Chaveau, who had begun the preliminary hearing, having obtained leave of absence, and, without concluding it, started for a voyage to Europe, is deemed to be withdrawn from the proceeding; and in such ease, with the consent of the Crown, the party prevented from proceeding was entitled to obtain from the magistrate, Angers, who replaced him, an order for beginning de novo the hearing in order to dispose of the matter. A writ of certiorari will not, in such case, be granted to prevent Magistrate Angers from taking up the case and beginning it again. Bertrand v. Angers, 21 Que. S.C. 213 (Sup. Ct.).

Discretion to transfer inquiry to locality of offence]—See secs. 665 and 666.

Montreal]—In the district of Montreal the Clerk of the Peace or Deputy Clerk of the Peace has all the powers of a justice under Parts XIII and XIV. Code sec. 605.

Saskatchewan and Alberta]—In these provinces a preliminary enquiry before a magistrate is not an essential before the preferring of a formal charge under 873a, by the Attorney-General or an agent of the Attorney-General or a person with the written consent of the judge or of the Attorney-General or by order of the court. Re Criminal Code, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459, 43 Can. S.C.R. 434; R. v. Duff, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 454, 2 S.L.R. 388, overruled on this point.

R.N.W. Mounted Police]—By the statute, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 91, the Royal North-West Mounted Police Force, as constituted by the Governorin-Council, shall continue to be a police force duly constituted for the province of Saskatchewan and the Yukon Territory, and shall be known as the "Royal North-West Mounted Police."

The Commissioner of Police and the assistant commissioners shall, respectively, have all the powers of two justices of the peace under the R.N.W. Mounted Police Act, or any Act in force in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and in the North-West Territories and the Yukon Territory. R.S.C. 1006, ch. 91.

The superintendents and such other officers as the Governor-in-Council approves, shall be ex-officio justices of the peace.

Every constable of the force shall be a constable in and for the said two provinces and the North-West Territories and the Yukon Territory for carrying out any laws or ordinances in force therein. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 91, sec. 12.

The R.N.W. Mounted Police Act further provides that: "It shall be the duty of members of the force, subject to the orders of the Commissioner:---

(a) to perform all duties which now are or hereafter shall be assigned to constables in relation to the preservation of the peace, the prevention of crime, and of offences against the laws and ordinances in force in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta and in the North-West Territories and the Yukon Territory, and the criminal and other laws of Canada, and the apprehension of criminals and offenders, and others who may be lawfully taken into custody;

- (b) to attend upon any judge, stipendiary magistrate, or justice of the peace, when specially required, and to execute all warrants, and perform all duties and services in relation thereto, which may, under this Part or the laws and ordinances in force in the said two provinces and in the North-West Territories and the Yukon Territory, or the criminal or other laws of Canada, be lawfully executed and performed by constables;
 - (c) to perform all duties which may be lawfully performed by constables in relation to the escort and conveyance of convicts and other prisoners and lunatics to or from any courts, places of punishment or confinement, asylums or other places. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 91, sec. 18.

Juvenile Courts]—Where Juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age.

669. No irregularity or defect in the substance or form of the summons or warrant, and no variance between the charge contained in the summons or warrant and the charge contained in the information, or between either and the evidence adduced on the part of the prosecution at the inquiry, shall affect the validity of any proceeding at or subsequent to the hearing.

Origin]—Sec. 578, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 58; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 9.

Defects in substance or form]—Defects cured under this section would include an omission to state in the warrant of arrest that the information was under oath where it was so in fact; Kingston v. Wallace, 25 N.B.R. 573; or the lack of a law stamp on the warrant even if a stamp were required under provincial law; R. v. Rodrigue, 9 Que. P.R. 122, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 249; R. v. Hamelin, 16 Que. K.B. 501, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 333. As to defects in summary conviction proceedings, under Part XV, see sees. 723-725, 753, 754, 1121-1125, 1129; and in summary trials under Part XVI, sec. 1130.

day, and in the meantime may remand such person, or admit him to bail as hereinafter mentioned.

Origin]-Sec. 579, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 59; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 9. Adjournment of hearing]-Sec sec. 679.

Procuring Attendance of Witnesses.

Summons for witness.-Form.

671. If it appears to the justice that any person being or residing within the province is likely to give material evidence either for the prosecution or for the accused on such inquiry he may issue a summons under his hand, requiring such person to appear before him at a time and place mentioned therein to give evidence respecting the charge, and to bring with him any documents in his possession or under his control relating thereto.

2. Such summons may be in form 11, or to the like effect.

Form of summons to a witness]-Code form 11 following sec. 1152.

Compelling attendance of witnesses]—The magistrate, under sec. 671, is vested with some discretion in issuing subpenas to witnesses, because of the words of that section "if it appear to the justice that any person is likely to give material evidence," and may refuse to issue a subpena if the reasons advanced by the applicant do not show that the witness sought to be examined is likely to give material evidence. R. v. Allerton (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 6 W.W.R. 522.

A magistrate is justified in refusing to issue a subpona for the attendance of the Attorney-General before him as a witness if it appears that the Attorney-General could not give material evidence. Ibid; R. v. Baines, [1909] 1 K.B. 258, 21 Cox C.C. 756.

In Rex v. Baines [1909] 1 K.B. 258, 21 Cox C.C. 756, ministers of the Crown were sought to be examined as witnesses at a criminal trial, and a subpœna was actually issued and served; an application was successfully made to the court to set aside such subpœna, as being an abuse of the process of the court, on the ground that such witnesses could not give any relevant evidence. It was mentioned in that case that a minister of the Crown had no special privilege from being summoned as a witness. They have no privilege or precedence over other subjects of the Crown; but if a subpœna is issued in a way that would be harassing and not to aid in the administration of justice, but for an ulterior purpose, a superior court may interfere. R. v. Allerton, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 6 W.W.R 522.

The summons to witness here referred to, commonly called a subpœna, is for a preliminary enquiry. If the case is one of summary trial under Part XVI, reference is to be had to sees. 788 and 789. Titchmarsh v. Crawford, 1 O.W.N. 587.

The summons to witness is to be issued by the justice holding the inquiry, i.e., the justice before whom the accused has been brought as indicated in sec. 668. Bryne v. Arnold, 24 N.B.R. 161.

If the witness is unable to attend through illness, but could give his depositions at his residence, and desires to do so, the proper course would be to adjourn the inquiry to his residence where such a course is practicable. R. v. Bros. [1911] 1 K.B. 159.

Every such summons shall be served by a constable or other peace officer upon the person to whom it is directed either personally, or, if such person cannot conveniently be met with, by leaving it for him at his last or most usual place of abode with some inmate thereof apparently not under sixteen years of age.

Origin]-Sec. 582, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 61, 51 Vict., ch. 45, sec. 1; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 16.

Defaulting witness]—Some reasonable effort should be made to serve the witness personally; and before any warrant to arrest a witness for non-attendance is issued, evidence should be given that the summons has, in all probability, come to the witness' knowledge. Gordon v. Denison, 22 A.R. (Ont.) 326.

If the witness be too poor to travel to the place of the hearing that may be a "just excuse" for his non-appearance, if no provision has been made for his expenses. Stone's Justice, 39th ed. 8.

A witness subpœnaed in a criminal case where the charge is for an indictable offence must attend without prepayment of expenses or witness fees; R. v. James, 1 C. & P. 322; though an allowance is usually made under provincial laws regarding the administration of justice for an allowance to such of the witnesses subpœnaed by the Crown in criminal prosecutions as are unable to bear their own expenses of attending court.

Form of warrant when a witness has not obeyed the summons]—Code Form 12, following sec. 1152; and see secs. 662 and 673 (3), as to endorsement in another magisterial jurisdiction.

Procedure against defaulting witness.-Conviction for contempt.

674. If a person summoned as a witness under the provisions of this Part is brought before a justice on a warrant issued in consequence of refusal to obey the summons, such person may be detained on such warrant before the justice who issued the summons, or before any other justice in and for the same territorial division who shall then be there, or in the common gaol, or any other place of confinement, or in the custody of the person having him in charge, with a view to secure his presence as a witness on the day fixed for the trial, or, in the discretion of the justice, released on recognizance, with or without sureties, conditioned for his appearance to give evidence as therein mentioned, and to answer as for contempt for his default in not attending upon the said summons.

2. Such subpœna shall be served personally upon the person to whom it is directed, and an affidavit of such service by a person effecting the same purporting to be made before a justice, shall be sufficient proof thereof.

Subpana to witness in another province]—Such particulars as to the nature of the evidence expected from the witness should be set forth in the affidavit or deposition upon which the application is made as will satisfy the judge applied to that the evidence of the witness is material. A judge may make an order for the issue of a subpana to witnesses in another province to compel their attendance upon an appeal from justices under Part XV of the Code. R. v. Gillespie, 16 P.R. 155 (Ont.).

Sec. 677 provides for enforcement of the subpæna by a warrant endorsed in the other province under secs. 662 and 677 (2).

Witness in another province.—Warrant for witness defaulting under subpœna.

677. If the person served with a subpœna as provided by the last preceding section, does not appear at the time and place specified therein, and no just excuse is offered for his non-appearance, the justice holding the inquiry, after proof upon oath that the subpœna has been served, may issue a warrant under his hand directed to any constable or peace officer in the district, county or place where such person is, or to all constables or peace officers in such district, county or place, directing him, them or any of them to arrest such person and bring him before the said justice or any other justice at a time and place mentioned in such warrant in order to testify as aforesaid.

2. The warrant may be in form 15, or to the like effect; and if necessary, may be endorsed in the manner provided by sec. 662 and executed in a district, county or place other than the one therein mentioned.

No just excuse for non-appearance]-See sec. 673.

Form of warrant when a witness in another province has not obeyed the subparal—Code form 15, following sec. 1152. Code form 8 may be applied in preparing the endorsement of the warrant, sec. 677, sub-sec. (2) and sec. 662.

Hearing and Connected Procedure.

Witness refusing to be examined.—Commitment to gaol.—Further commitment on again refusing.—Disposing of case on the other evidence.

678. Whenever any person appearing, either in obedience to a summons or subpœna, or by virtue of a warrant, or being present and being verbally required by the justice to give evidence, refuses to be sworn, or having been sworn, refuses to answer such questions as are put to him, or refuses or neglects to produce any documents which he is required to produce, or refuses to sign his depositions without in any such case offering any just excuse for such refusal, such justice may adjourn the proceedings for any period not exceeding eight clear days, and may in the meantime by warrant in form 16, or to the like effect, commit the person so refusing to gaol, unless he sooner consents to do what is required of him.

2. If such person, upon being brought up upon such adjourned hearing, again refuses to do what is required of him, the justice, if he sees fit, may again adjourn the proceedings, and commit him for the like period, and so again from time to time until such person consents to do what is required of him.

3. Nothing in this section shall prevent such justice from sending any such case for trial, or otherwise disposing of the same in the meantime, according to any other sufficient evidence taken by him.

Origin]-Sec. 585, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 63; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 16. Form of warrant of commitment of a witness for refusing to be sworn or to give evidence]—Code form 16, following sec. 1152.

Witness refusing to testify]—It must appear not only that the witness refused without just excuse to answer, but that the question asked was in some way relevant to the charge. Re Ayotte (1905), 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 133, 15 Man. R. 156.

Defendant and wife or husband of defendant as witnesses]-See Canada Evidence Act, secs. 4 and 5.

Fugitive Offenders Act]—As a magistrate is expressly empowered by sec. 29 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 44-45 Vict., Imp., ch 69 [R.S.C. 1906, ch. 154, sec. 27], to take depositions for the purpose of that Act in the absence of the person accused, he must be held to have the like power to punish a witness for refusing to testify in proceedings so taken in Manitoba in the absence of accused for the purpose of bringing the latter back from England to Manitoba to answer the charge. R. v. Simpson, re Whitla (1916), 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 15, 9 W.W.R. 986 and 1461, 26 Man. L.R. 129; Ex parte Lillywhite, 19 N.Z.R. 510.

Preliminary inquiry.—Powers of justice.—Addresses.—Further evidence.—Adjournment of hearing.—Inquiry may be private. —Regulating course of inquiry.—Verbal remand for three days.—Custody of accused.

679. A justice holding a preliminary inquiry may, in his discretion,--

(a) permit or refuse permission to the prosecutor, his counsel or attorney, to address him in support of the charge, either by way of opening or summing up the case, or by way of reply upon any evidence which may be produced by the person accused; a

- (d) order that no person other than the prosecutor and accused, their counsel and solicitors shall have access to or remain in the room or building in which the inquiry is held, if it appears to him that the ends of justice will be best answered by so doing;
- (e) regulate the course of the inquiry in any way which may appear to him desirable, and which is not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

2. If any remand under this section is for a time not exceeding three clear days the justice may verbally order the constable or other person in whose custody the accused then is, or any other constable or person named by the justice in that behalf, to keep the accused person in his custody and to bring him before him or such other justice as shall then be acting at the time appointed for continuing the examination.

Origin]—Sec. 586, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 65; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 21.

"A justice holding a preliminary enquiry "]—When a person accused of an indictable offence is before a justice having jurisdiction to hold a preliminary enquiry, see. 668 makes it obligatory that the latter should "proceed to inquire into the matters charged." A common practice makes this cover an inquiry immediately after the arrest as to the question of bail and the taking of bail before the magistrate if he can be got to attend at the gaol or police station for that purpose; but in such eases the bail is for the attendance of the accused at the first sittings of the police court, usually on the next juridical day. Some city magistrates require payment of a small fee from the accused asking this special consideration, but the legality of the collection of any fee cannot be considered as settled.

Person arrested to be brought before a justice]—Sec. 664 provides that a person arrested "upon a warrant" is to be brought "as soon as practicable" before the justice; and the justice is to proceed with the inquiry or postpone it to a future time in which latter case he shall either commit the accused to proper custody or admit him to bail or permit him to be at large on his own recognizance according to the provisions which follow, thus including the provisions of sec. 679.

It is the duty of every one arresting another to give notice, where practicable, of the warrant or cause of the arrest. Code sec. 40. He is to produce the warrant, if required; sec. 40. In the special case of an arrest without warrant by a peace officer of a suspected person loitering by night, the person apprehended is not to be detained after noon of the following day without being brought before a justice. Code sec.

652. And in other cases of arrest without warrant on a criminal charge, there is a common law obligation to bring the arrested person promptly before a justice.

Irregularity in summons or warrant]-See secs. 669, 670.

Hearing by substitute justice]—When a magistrate has become seized of a case by taking the information for an indictable offence no other magistrate having general concurrent jurisdiction with him can acquire jurisdiction to intervene and preside at a preliminary enquiry, even with the consent of the first magistrate, except in so far as such course is authorized by statute in special circumstances such as illness or absence of the first magistrate, or his death or resignation: Re Holman and Rae (No. 2), 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, 4 O.W.N. 434, 23 O.W.R. 428, 27 O.L.R. 432; Re Guerin, 16 Cox C.C. 596, 60 L.T. 538, 53 J.P. 468; Bertrand v. Angers, 21 Que. S.C. 213.

But the justice of the peace who issues a warrant of arrest to bring the accused in custody for a preliminary enquiry has the right to order him by the warrant to appear before himself or any other justice or magistrate having jurisdiction in the district, and the enquiry may be taken in such case before another magistrate who replaces the first. R. v. Daigle, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 92 (Que.).

Associate justices]—The preliminary enquiry may be held either by one justice or by more justices than one. Code sec. 665 (1). If an associate justice is brought into the case after the evidence of a material witness has been taken, the case should be begun de novo and the evidence given again as the commitment by the two magistrates will be invalid if one of them had not heard all the material evidence. Re Nunn, 6 B.C.R. 464, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 429.

Preserving order in court]-See sec. 607.

Sub-sec (a)—" Permit or refuse permission to the prosecutor to address him in support," etc.]—The prosecutor is the informant and so also is the person on whose behalf the informant stated in the information that he was laying the charge. See sec. 688, as to binding over the person preferring the charge. Quite evidently it does not apply to restrict counsel representing the Crown or any public department of the government from addressing the magistrate in support of a charge laid on behalf of the Crown.

A private informant is no party to a criminal prosecution, and cannot insist that he or his counsel shall aid in the conduct thereof. R. v. Gilmore, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 219, 6 O.L.R. 286. Permission may, however, be granted in the discretion of the justice under sub-sec. (a).

Sub-sec. (c)—Adjournment of hearing]—Where on a preliminary enquiry a remand is to be made for a time exceeding three clear days, the justice may remand only by warrant, declaring that it appears to be necessary to remand the accused, Code form 17, and an informal remand endorsed upon the warrant is insufficient. R. v. Holley (1893), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 510.

The accused must be personally present before the magistrate to be remanded. Re Sarault (1905), 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 448, 15 Que. K.B. 3. A verbal remand for eight days for the purpose of a medical examination of the accused as to sanity cannot be made on the mere suggestion of the police officer without bringing the accused personally before the magistrate. Re Sarault, supra.

If, however, a remanded prisoner is too ill to be brought from the gaol on the day to which he was remanded, the magistrate, on being satisfied of the fact by medical evidence, may issue a warrant of remand for another eight days, 59 J.P. 682; Stone's Justice, 39th ed. 7.

In Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.R. 57, Laurendeau, J., said: "We must consider par. (c) of article 679 as making an exception. The article states that the postponement cannot be for more than eight clear days if the accused is remanded back to prison— 'and may remand the accused by warrant, provided that no such remand shall be for more than eight clear days.' When the accused is admitted to bail, no warrant of remand according to form 17, is required. The French version of the same articles is perhaps even more obvious. It states: 'pourvu qu'aucun renvoi du prévenu en prison ne soit pour plus de huit jours frances.' If the accused is held on bail the delay of postponement may be longer." Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.R. 57.

In a Yukon case it was held that the sureties to a recognizance of bail expressly given for an adjournment of a preliminary enquiry by consent, for longer than the eight days provided by Code see. 679, are not released for non-conformity with the statutory direction that adjournments shall not be for more than eight days, that being a matter of procedure only which it was competent for the parties to waive, if indeed the statutory direction applies at all where bail is given. R. v. Sullivan, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 174; re Burns' bail, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 292, and R. v. Hazen, 20 A.R. (Ont.) 663, applied.

A prisoner in custody under two warrants of commitment for trial for different offences cannot set up the irregularity of a remand under see, 679, because of an adjournment exceeding eight days made during the preliminary inquiry on one of the charges, as a ground for his release on habeas corpus. Rex v. Beaudoin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 319.

If the magistrate has exercised his discretion on legal grounds, the court will not interfere with him merely because they would have exereised the discretion in another way; but if the magistrate exercised his discretion on something extraneous or something illegal, it is the same as declining jurisdiction, and if a magistrate declines to exereise his jurisdiction he may be compelled by mandamus to go on. Regina v. Adamson, 1 Q.B.D. 201; Regina v. Faweett, 11 Cox C.C. 305; Regina v. Evans (1890), 54 J.P. 471.

If there is a variance from the charge stated in the information or in the summons or warrant, and the accused is thereby prejudiced in his defence, such will be a ground for asking an adjournment. Secs. 669, 670.

As to adjournment of summary conviction proceedings under Part XV, see sec. 722.

The language of sec: 679 differs from that of sec. 722, which deals with summary conviction procedure, in that sec. 679 says "eight clear days," while sec. 722 says "eight days." Eight clear days would leave eight intervening days between the day of remand and of hearing.

Sub-sec. (e)—" Regulate the course of the inquiry"]—In R. v. Phillips, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 89, 11 O.L.R. 478, defendant was charged that he did in specified years "conspire with others whose names are unknown, by deceit, falsehood and other fraudulent means to defraud the public." The magistrate having power under sec. 679 (e) to "regulate the course of the inquiry" might have ordered particulars on the defendant's application, but he declined to do so on the ground that the preliminary inquiry was merely an investigation and defendant would not be prejudiced. It was held that his refusal did not go to the jurisdiction and prohibition was refused. The absence or insufficiency of particulars does not vitiate the information for the purposes of a preliminary enquiry, but the magistrate has a discretion to order particulars to be furnished by the prosecution. R. v. France, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 321.

It is essential that whatever words may be used in the information they should be sufficient to give the accused notice of the offence with which he is charged, and to identify the transaction referred to. The absence or the insufficiency of particulars does not vitiate an idictment nor an information; but if it should be made to appear that there is a reasonable necessity for more specific information, the court or magistrate may, on the application of the accused person, order that further particulars be given, but such an order is altogether within the judicial discretion of the judge or magistrate. R. v. France (1898), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 321, 329 (Que.).

In a criminal case the preliminary hearing before the magistrate of an offence punishable on indictment, is not, properly speaking, the inquiry of the informant, but that of the magistrate. Belanger v. Mulvena, 22 Que, S.C. 37. Even after argument on questions of law arising from the evidence given, the magistrate may, in his discretion, allow the informant to give further evidence. Belanger v. Mulvena, 22 Que. S.C. 37.

Magistrates conducting a preliminary enquiry in respect of an indictable offence, may not on its conclusion convict of a lesser criminal offence, over which they have summary jurisdiction, although proved by the evidence adduced if no complaint was laid before them, nor the accused called upon to defend in respect of such lesser offence. R. v. Mines (1894), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 217, 25 Ont. R. 577; ex parte Duffy, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 277. And where the information is laid for an offence under the Code which the magistrate has no jurisdiction to try summarily, he cannot convert it into a charge under a municipal by-law and convict of the latter upon the original information. R. v. Dungey, 2 O.L.R. 223, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 38. But he may commit for trial on any one or more charges of indictable offences which the evidence may diselose. R. v. Mooney, 15 Que. K.B. 57, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 333.

Transfer of inquiry to a justice in locality of offence]—See sees. 665, 666.

Requiring recognizance from witnesses to give evidence at trial]— Code sec. 692, 840, 1094.

Juvenile Courts]—Where juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age.

Montreal]-In the district of Montreal the Clerk of the Peace or Deputy Clerk of the Peace has all the powers of a justice under Parts XIII and XIV.

Hearing may be resumed during time of remand.

680. The justice may order the accused person to be brought before him, or before any other justice for the same territorial division, at any time before the expiration of the time for which such person has been remanded, and the gaoler or officer in whose custody he then is shall duly obey such order.

Origin]—Sec. 588, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 66. "Before any other justice"]—See note to sec. 679.

681. If the accused is remanded as aforesaid, the justice may discharge him, upon his entering into a recognizance in form 18, with or without sureties in the discretion of the justice, conditioned for his appearance at the time and place appointed for the continuance of the examination.

Form of recognizance of bail instead of remand in custody on an adjournment of examination]—Code form 18, following sec. 1152.

Giving bail on remand]—Every individual may in criminal cases become bail who is a housekeeper and possessed of property equal to the responsibility incurred. Petersdorff on Bail, 505.

[§ 681] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIV)

Any indemnity given to the bondsmen, whether by the prisoner or by a third person, is illegal. Consolidated Exploration & Finance Co. v. Musgrave, [1900] 1 Ch. 37; R. v Porter [1910] 1 K.B. 369, 102 L.T. 255.

If the accused consents to an adjournment for more than the eight clear days specified in sec. 679, the recognizance of bail is not invalid because taken for the longer period even if the limitation applies to remands on bail. Re Burns bail, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 292, 2 E.L.R. 167; R. v. Sullivan, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 174; Dick v. The King, 13 Que. P.R. 157, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44.

The omission of the words "to owe" in the form corresponding to the present form 18 was held fatal to the recognizance. R. v. Hoodless, 45 U.C.Q.B. 556.

A superior court has jurisdiction to admit the necused to bail while the preliminary enquiry is pending before the magistrate. In making an order for bail pending the preliminary enquiry a judge of a superior court may impose the condition that the proposed bail shall not only make affidavits of justification but attend before a magistrate for examination as to their qualification. R. v. Hall, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 492; R. v. Mason, 5 P.R. 125 (Ont.).

Cash bail]—A justice may as a substitute for bail take money in deposito, commonly called cash bail. Petersdorf on Bail, 506; Moyser v. Gray, Cro. Car. 446.

Breach of recognizance on remand]—See sec. 1097 and Code form 73. Bailing accused to appear for trial without committal]—See sec. 696 and Code form 28.

Bail by superior court after committal]-See secs. 696-702.

Ontario]-The Police Magistrates' Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 18, provides that no justice of the peace shall admit to bail or discharge a prisoner or adjudicate upon or otherwise act until after judgment, in a case arising in a city or town for which there is a police magistrate, except at the court of general sessions of the peace or in the case of the illness or absence or at the request of the police magistrate; R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 18; nor shall he do so except in those circumstances in any case in which the initiatory proceedings had been taken before a police magistrate. Ibid. But a justice of the peace "acting within his territorial jurisdiction" may take an information or issue a summons or warrant returnable before the proper police magistrate; R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 18 (3); that is, if the case is one in which he has concurrent jurisdiction with the county police magistrate if proceedings have not already been begun before the latter, he may on issuing process make it returnable before himself and take charge of the future proceedings or he may make the process returnable before the police magistrate, and so effectively transfer the case to the latter official.

Evidence for prosecution to be taken.—Upon oath.—Cross-examination.—Deposition in writing.—To be read over and signed.

682. When the accused is before a justice holding an inquiry, such justice shall take the evidence of the witnesses called on the part of the prosecution.

2. The evidence of the said witnesses shall be given upon oath and in the presence of the accused; and the accused, his counsel or solicitor, shall be entitled to cross-examine them.

3. The evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the form of a deposition, which may be in form 19, or to the like effect.

4. Such deposition shall in the presence of the accused, and of the justice, at some time before the accused is called on for his defence, be read over to and signed by the witness and the justice.

5. The signature of the justice may either be at the end of the deposition of each witness, or at the end of several or of all the depositions in such a form as to show that the signature is meant to authenticate each separate deposition.

Origin]—Sec. 590, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 69; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 17.

Magistrate must be present during entire hearing]—The magistrate is not required to take down the evidence himself, but the law requires in effect that the witnesses must be before him, and that he must see them and hear them when testifying, and then their testimony may be taken down either at length by a clerk or in shorthand by a stenographer. R. v. Traynor, 10 Que. Q.B. 63, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 410.

Where on a preliminary inquiry before a magistrate the witnesses were sworn by him and were then taken into another room and their evidence in chief taken by a stenographer and not in the presence of the magistrate, such depositions are illegally taken, although the prisoner's counsel had the opportunity of afterwards cross-examining the witnesses before the magistrate. R. v. Traynor, supra; R. v. Watts, 33 L.J.M.C. 63.

The objection to the irregularity is not waived by the cross-examination of the witnesses on the prisoner's behalf on their return to the magistrate's presence, if the objection is taken by the prisoner's counsel before he proceeds to cross-examine. R. v. Traynor, supra.

Both the commitment for trial and the indictment founded on such illegal depositions are invalid and should be set aside. Ibid.

"Entitled to cross-examine"]-The expressions "entitled to crossexamine" and "full opportunity to cross-examine" as used in secs. 682 (2) and 999, imply for the accused the right to hear the evidence delivered in his presence, to eatch the words as they fall from the lips of the witness, and to mark his expression and demeanour while testifying. R. v. Lepine (1900), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 145 (Que.).

When depositions in a preliminary enquiry, to which the accused was not a party, and, consequently, taken in his absence, are read to the same witness in a case against the accused, and the witness, after being sworn in the presence of the accused, either affirms that his former deposition contains the truth, or makes corrections, as the case may be, and then affirms its truth as corrected, the prosecutor, being then given permission to ask further questions, and the accused to crossexamine, such proceeding does not afford the accused the full and complete opportunity to cross-examine contemplated by law. Ibid.

On a preliminary hearing, counsel for the accused on cross-examination questioned a witness as to a conversation with another party relating to the charge. On objection being taken the justice refused to allow the question and the accused thereupon applied for a mandamus requiring the justice to allow the question. It was held that, while the court has power to issue mandamus to compel a justice to hear and determine a case it has no authority to control a justice in the conduct of the case or to prescribe to him the evidence he shall receive or reject, particularly so in the case of a preliminary hearing where the justice is not trying the case. R. v. Martin, 3 Sask. L.R. 495, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 107.

Form of depositions]—A form for the taking of depositions on a preliminary enquiry is provided; Code form 19; and is applicable to summary conviction matters also except as to matters in which Part XV, dealing with summary convictions procedure makes some variance. Code sec. 721 (3). In a hearing under Part XV the witnesses need not sign their depositions, Code sec. 721 (5); but they are to do so on a preliminary enquiry. Sec. 682.

The statutory form for depositions contemplates a caption in which are to be stated (1) the name of the justice. (This may be by a reference to the "undersigned" justice); (2) his jurisdictional territory; (3) the date on which the depositions were taken; (4) the presence of the accused in the case of a preliminary enquiry; and, in case of his absence at a summary hearing, the due service of a summons and his default thereon; (5) the charge; (6) the fact that the witness was sworn or affirmed; (7) a concluding certificate to the effect that the depositions if on a preliminary enquiry were taken in the presence and hearing of the accused and were signed by the witnesses and the justices. R. v. Dickey (1915) 9 W.W.R. 142, 32 W.L.R. 404 (Alta.).

Application to summary conviction procedure]-

On a summary conviction matter, the appearance of the accused is not a pre-requisite to the taking of depositions and adjudication, and the justice has a discretion to proceed ex parte if the accused has been duly summoned; Cr. Code sec. 718; or the justice on default of appearance either by counsel or in person, may issue his warrant (Code sees. 659, 660) and adjourn the hearing until the defendant is apprehended. A strict construction of sec. 718, if taken alone, would seem to authorize the justice, if he saw fit, to issue a warrant for the personal appearance of the accused even where he was represented by counsel (Code sec. 715): but sees, 715 and 720 taken together make it clear that where defendant appears by counsel in a matter subject to Part XV the magistrate has no jurisdiction to enforce the personal appearance of the accused for the purposes of the trial, but must hear and determine the complaint if both parties appear "either personally or by their respective counsel, solicitors or agents" (Code sec. 720). R. v. McDonald (1913), 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 348 (P.E.I.), citing R. v. Thompson, 100 L.T.R. 970, and R. v. Montgomery, 102 L.T.R. 325. The depositions must show that the witnesses were sworn or affirmed, as the case may be. R. v. Dickey (1915), 9 W.W.R. 142, 144, 32 W.L.R. 404 (Alta.). Signing the depositions]-

The provision that the justice is to sign the depositions taken on a preliminary enquiry, (see. 682, sub-sees. (4) and (5)), or in a summary matter (see. 721, sub-see. (3), has been held to be directory only and not mandatory. [Alta.] R. v. Diekey (1915) 9 W.W.R. 142, following ex parte Doherty, 32 N.B.R. 479, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 310 (N.B.); and that it does not go to the jurisdiction. Rex v. Kay; Ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 498; Ex parte Budd, 39 N.B.R. 602, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 235. Contra: R. v. Robert, 12 Que. P.R. 7, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 194. The provision that the witnesses should sign their depositions, unless taken in shorthand, is directory only and not imperative. R. v. Seott, 26 Ont. R. 646. A statutory provision that depositions be read over to the accused may be waived. R. v. Leach, 17 O.L.R. 643, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 375.

By the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. ch. 1, sec. 34 (24), unless the contrary intention appears, the word "shall" is to be construed as imperative, and "may" as permissive. But while the direction of the statute may be imperative so far as the magistrate is concerned, it seems necessary to inquire further into the purpose of the enactment before it can be affirmed that non-compliance therewith will be a cause of nullity. Certain matters of procedure may be waived by the accused or his counsel; some of them, although not waived may be of such a character that non-compliance could not prejudice the accused. But as the depositions on the preliminary enquiry may in certain events be read in evidence at the trial of an indictment (sec. 999), the better opinion seems to be in favour of quashing a commitment or an indictment founded on the irregular depositions if they have not been read over in the presence of the accused so that errors which the deponents might correct on such reading might be amended. See R. v. Beaulieu, 26 Que. K.B. 151; McDonald v. The King, 25 Que. K.B. 322, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 175, and compare Code sec. 684. It is irregular for the magistrate to obtain in the absence of the accused, the signature of a witness to his incomplete deposition. R. v. Trevane, 4 O.L.R. 475, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 125. If the cross-examination has not been completed, the deposition of that witness cannot be used under sec. 999, at the trial in the event of the witness' illness. R. v. Trevane, supra.

In R. v. Eliasoph, 19 Que. K.B. 232, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 131, it was held that the hearing of the testimony of one witness in the absence of the accused would not afford ground for quashing an indictment which followed the preliminary enquiry and the commitment there made. See see. 872. Probably any effect which an irregularity in the depositions may have upon the indictment itself may be obviated by obtaining the consent or order of the court or of the Attorney-General, to prefer the indictment. Code see. 873.

It is too late to object to an irregularity in the signature of the depositions, after electing a speedy trial. R. v. Morin (1917) 26 Que. K.B. 428, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 269.

A charge brought for trial under the Speedy Trials clauses, Part XVIII of the Code (see sec. 827) will not be quashed because the justice issuing the committal did not strictly comply with sub-sec. (5) by signing at the "end" of the deposition, if it was otherwise signed by him in form sufficient for identification. R. v. Jodrey, 38 N.S.R. 142, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 477; As it is the statutory duty of the magistrate to take down all the relevant testimony on a preliminary inquiry, the production of written depositions regular in form raises a presumption that all material testimony is included therein, but this presumption may be rebutted on a charge of perjury brought in respect of one of such depositions by producing the writing and proving by parol testimony that it is incomplete. R. v. Prasiloski (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 139, 15 B.C.R. 29, 13 W.L.R. 298.

Noting objections raised]—The depositions taken in writing by the magistrate should contain all the material statements sworn to by the witnesses, and the objections of counsel and rulings made by the magistrate thereon should also be noted therein. R. v. Grady, 7 C. & P. 650; R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817; and see sec. 691, under which the accused is entitled on payment of the prescribed fee to a copy of the depositions.

Defence evidence]—Depositions of witnesses for the defence are, if offered, to be taken in the same manner as the depositions of the witnesses for the prosecution. Code sec. 686.

Waiver of depositions on preliminary inquiry]—In some cases the accused by his counsel may desire to waive the taking of depositions and consent to a committal for trial (see. 690), or, being held to bail under see. 696, thus reserving until the trial itself the cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution. If there is a probability that crown witnesses available on the preliminary enquiry might be absent from Canada at the later trial, the taking of their depositions so that their testimony might be available under sec. 999, might be advisable for the prosecution, and objection might be raised on this ground to such a course being adopted. The evidence must be taken in conformity with sec. 682 unless the waiver is assented to by the prosecution. Waiver of depositions is not expressly dealt with by the Code, but is recognized in numerous cases. See R. v. Gibson, 29 N.S.R. 4, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 45, R. v. Wener, 12 Que. K.B. 320, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 406; R v. Breckenridge, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, 12 Que. K.B. 474; R. v. McDougall, 8 O.L.R. 30. 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 238; R. v. Hebert, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 284. Those cases, however, which held that the right of speedy trial under former sees. 825 and 827 was dependent upon the actual taking of depositions at the preliminary enquiry, are no longer applicable because of the amended form of those sections following the Code Amendment Acts of 1907 and 1909. Giroux v. The King (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258, affirming R. v. Giroux (1916), 26 Que, K.B. 323; R. v. Walsh, 48 N.S.R. 1, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7.

Form of deposition of a witness]—Code form 19, following sec. 1152. Where depositions taken in shorthand]—See sec. 683.

Statutory presumptions]—As the purpose of the preliminary inquiry is to ascertain whether "the evidence is sufficient to put the accused on his trial" (Code sec. 690), reference may be had to statutory provisions constituting certain facts prima facie evidence in certain cases or otherwise providing special methods of proof. See Code secs. 979-994.

Similar procedure in summary conviction matters]-See sec. 721.

Identification by Bertillon system]—By the Identification of Criminals Act, R.S.C. 1906, eh. 149, any person in lawful custody, charged with, or under conviction of, an indictable offence, may be subjected, by or under the direction of those in whose custody he is, to the measurements, processes and operations practised under the system for the identification of criminals commonly known as the Bertillon Signaletic System, or to any measurements, processes or operations sanctioned by the Governor-in-Council having the like object in view. Such force may be used as it is necessary to the effectual carrying out and application of such measurements, processes and operations. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 149. sec. 2. The signaletic eards and other results thereof may be published for the purpose of affording information to officers and others engaged in the execution or administration of the law. No one having the custody of any such person, and no one acting in his aid or under his direction, and no one concerned in such publication, shall incur any liability, eivil or criminal, for anything lawfully done under the provisions of the Act. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 149, sec. 3.

Canadian Criminal Identification Bureau]—A system of finger-print records is maintained by the Canadian Criminal Identification Bureau under the supervision of the Chief Commissioner of Dominion Police, Ottawa. These include finger prints of convicts in Dominion penitentiaries and in many provincial and county prisons, and also prints obtained by municipal and provincial police.

Depositions in writing or by stenographer.—Stenographer to be sworn.—Affidavit proving transcript.

683. Every justice holding a preliminary inquiry shall cause the depositions to be written in a legible hand and on one side only of each sheet of paper on which they are written: Provided that the evidence upon such inquiry or any part of the same may be taken in shorthand by a stenographer who may be appointed by the justice and who before acting shall, unless he is a duly sworn official court stenographer, make oath that he shall truly and faithfully report the evidence.

2. Where evidence is so taken, it shall not be necessary that such evidence be read over to or signed by the witness, but it shall be sufficient if the transcripts be signed by the justice and be accompanied by an affidavit of the stenographer, or if the stenographer is a duly sworn court stenographer by the stenographer's certificate that it is a true report of the evidence.

Origin]-Sec. 590, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 69.

Evidence on preliminary inquiry may be taken in shorthand]—Where a statute provides for taking "the evidence" in shorthand, it is not to be assumed that the stenographer's notes are a complete record of all that took place; it will, therefore, not be assumed that there was not first an adjudication of guilt on the second offence charged without reference to the prior conviction, and that such adjudication preceded the interrogation of the defendant by the justice on the close of the evidence, as to whether he denied the prior conviction or not. R. v. Hanley, 41 O.L.R. 177; and see as to when a statute is to be held to be directory only, in requiring the accused to be interrogated after conviction for the later offence. R. v. McDevitt, 39 O.L.R. 138; R. v. Coote, 22 O.L.R. 269; R. v. Hanley, 41 O.L.R. 177, 179.

Depositions taken in shorthand]—When, as provided by the 2nd subsec. of sec. 683, the depositions were taken in shorthand by a stenographer, previously sworn to take them, it is not necessary that they should be read in presence of the accused and of the magistrate to the witnesses, and signed by them, as in the case where the depositions are taken down in longhand according to the provisions of sec. 682; it is sufficient that the depositions in shorthand should, before being transmitted to the clerk of the peace be authenticated by the signature of the presiding magistrate, and that they should at the same time be accompanied by an affidavit of the stenographer establishing that his transcript is a true report of the evidence. R. v. Rouleau, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 281.

The proviso contained in sec. 683 which permits the proceedings to be taken down in shorthand, was introduced into Canadian criminal law in 1892, when the law was codified.

The omission to swear the stenographer, not already sworn as an official stenographer, is a matter of substance and not a mere matter of form. R. v. L'Heureux (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 100; R. v. Johnson (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1045, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 203 (Man.); R. v. Limerick, ex parte Dewar (1916) 44 N.B.R. 233, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 309.

But the petitioner's affidavit in support of an application for habeas corpus that the stenographer who transcribed the evidence at the preliminary enquiry had not been sworn will not be credited as against the certificate of oath signed by the magistrate and filed in the record. Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.R. 57; compare R. v. Book (1915) 25 Man. R. 480, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 89, under a Manitoba statute.

The fact that the stenographer was duly sworn may be proved by the justice's certificate, although the stenographer did not sign a formal affidavit or oath in writing. McDonald v. The King, 25 Que. K.B. 322, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 175.

Under sec. 13 of the Extradition Act, R.S.C. 1906, c. 155, which provides that the judge before whom the fugitive is brought should hear the case in the same manner as nearly as may be as if the fagitive was brought before a justice charged with an indictable offence, the proceedings are regulated by sub-sec. 682-686 of the Criminal Code and under sec. 683, if the evidence is taken in shorthand, it is imperative that the transcript be signed by the judge and be accompanied by an affidavit of the stenographer that it is a true report of the evidence before there can be a committal of the accused for extradition, and, if these be lacking, the prisoner is entitled to his discharge on habcas corpus, although there would be nothing to prevent fresh proceedings [§ 683] being taken against him, Re Royston, 18 Man. R. 539, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 96.

The stenographer must be first sworn as provided by the section, that is, as the section states, "before acting" the stenographer shall make oath that he shall truly and faithfully report the evidence. Failure in this respect is not merely a matter of procedure or relating to procedure, but it is a matter of substance which goes to the jurisdiction. R. v. Limerick, 44 N.B.R. 233, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 44.

The effect of failure to comply with the strict requirements of sec. 683 is that the justice acting in a summary conviction matter (Code sec. 721), lacks the necessary jurisdiction to make his acts legal. R. v. Limerick, supra; R. v. Johnson (1912), 1 W.W.R. 1045, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 203 (Man.). Contra: R. v. Bosak (1916), 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 374, 10 O.W.N. 301, in which Sutherland, J., in dealing with a corresponding section of a provincial licensing law said that failure to swear the stenographer under R.S.O. 1914, ch. 215, sec. 87 (2), did not affect the jurisdiction of the magistrate to make a summary conviction under that Act. And see R. v. Jackson (1918) 40 O.L.R. 173, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 362.

Effect of irregularity on the indictment following the committal]— It has been held that an indictment will not be quashed on the ground that it is founded on depositions certified by the magistrate's stenographer, but not signed by the magistrate nor accompanied by the stenographer's affidavit under see. 683. R. v. Prasiloski (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 139, 15 B.C.R. 29, 13 W.L.R. 298. Contra: R. v. Robert (No. 1), (1910) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 194, 12 Que. P.R. 7, where both the commitment for trial and the indictment based thereon were quashed for non-compliance with see. 683, but this did not bar a fresh indictment preferred under see. 873 by the Attorney-General, independently of any commitment or preliminary inquiry. R. v. Robert (No. 2), 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 196 (Que.).

Accused may obtain copy of depositions]-See sec. 691.

Procedure applicable to summary conviction proceedings]—See sec. 721.

Depositions in general to be read to accused.—Accused to be addressed in statutory form.—Statement of accused.

684. After the examination of the witnesses produced on the part of the prosecution has been completed, and after the depositions have been signed as aforesaid, the justice unless he discharges the accused person, shall ask him whether he wishes the depositions to be read again, and unless the accused dispenses therewith shall read or cause them to be read again.

2. When the depositions have been again read, or the reading dispensed with, the accused shall be addressed by the justice in these words, or to the like effect:

"Having heard the evidence, do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not bound to say anything, but whatever you do say will be taken down in writing and may be given in evidence against you at your trial. You must clearly understand that you have nothing to hope from any promise of favour and nothing to fear from any threat which may have been held out to you to induce you to make any admission or confession of guilt, but whatever you now say may be given in evidence against you upon your trial notwithstanding such promise or threat."

3. Whatever the accused then says in answer thereto shall be taken down in writing in form 20, or to the like effect, and shall be signed by the justice and kept with the depositions of the witnesses and dealt with as hereinafter provided.

Origin]—Sec. 591, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 70 and 71; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, sec. 32; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 18.

Second reading of the depositions]—When the evidence has been taken in shorthand, the accused party can lawfully be asked if he wishes the depositions to be read again before the stenographer's transcript has been made. McDonald v. The King (1916) 25 Que. K.B. 322, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 175; R. v. Beaulieu, 26 Que. K.B. 151, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 336. In such a case, see, 684 is sufficiently complied with, if when the justice asks the accused whether he wishes the depositions to be read again, he has the stenographer in attendance with his note-book ready to do the reading, even if the depositions have not yet been transcribed, though possibly the accused may be entitled to ask to have the transcript made before he is called upon for the statement. McDonald v. The King, supra, which seems to overrule the decision of Mercier, J., in R. v. Rouleau, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 281 (Que.), holding that no rereading was necessary where the depositions were taken in shorthand.

Form of statement of the accused]—Code form 20, following sec. 1152.

Taking statement of accused on Form 20]—An opportunity is given the accused on the preliminary enquiry to have his own statement (not under oath) taken down and kept with the depositions. This statement is in statutory form after due caution to the accused. McDonald v. The King (1916), 25 Que. K.B. 322, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 175. The accused is to be asked to sign it if he will; Code form 20.

Caution to the accused in statutory form]-

Although the magistrate's record of proceedings does not show on its face that a statement made by the accused to him in answer to the charge was made after due caution in accordance with sec. 684, the fact that it was so made may be proved at the trial and the statement may then be put in evidence by the prosecution. R. v. Kalabeen (1867). 1 B.C.R., pt. 1, per Begbie, C.J. It has been held also that the statutory form of inquiry contained in sub-sec. (2) is directory only as regards telling the accused that he has nothing to hope for, and nothing to fear from promises or threats; and if the accused was cautioned without strict compliance with its formalities his answer may be given in evidence against him if it be shown that he was not induced to make it by any promise or threat. R. v. Soucie, 17 N.B.R. 611; R. v. Sansome (1850), 1 Den. 645, 19 L.J.M.C. 143, 4 Cox 203; and see Code sec. 685, which recognizes the right to give in evidence any admission notwithstanding sec. 684, if it would by law be admissible as evidence against the accused. In the English statute of 1848, the enactment now contained in present sec. 685 is in the form of a proviso to the section corresponding with the present sec. 684. There are, in effect, two cautions in sec. 684; first, that what the accused says, although not bound to say anything, will be put in the record and may be used against him, and, second, that if any promises or threats have been made to him to induce him to make a statement when he should come before the magistrate, he is to understand that such promises, or threats, were not authorized, and he is not to make any admissions because of them. It was held under the English Act that these cautions were separable and that where the first had been duly given and was shown in the record, but the second was omitted, the prisoner's statement in answer could be used against him if no previous inducement or threat had been held out; the second caution being designed only to take away the effect of previous inducements or threats. R. v. Sansome, 1 Den. 545. 19 L.J.M.C. 143. It is, of course, advisable that both portions of the caution be given and duly certified along with the statement made by the accused in answer so that there may be no question of its admissibility in case inducements had been previously held out or threats made. R. v. Bate, 11 Cox 686. It is further to be noted that these cautions were in separate sections in the Canadian statute 32-33 Vict., ch. 30 (secs. 31 and 32).

Where the prisoner, having once been examined before the justice, and cautioned by him in the manner prescribed, made a statement, which was taken down in writing, but not signed by him or by the justice, he was then remanded, and on a subsequent day was brought again before the justice; no new witnesses were then examined, but the prisoner's counsel put some questions to a witness who had been examined before; but the prisoner was again cautioned, but declined to make any further statement; the statement made by him on the first occasion was held admissible against him on his trial. R. v. Bond, 1 Den. 517, 19 L.J.M.C. 138.

Statements made by a prisoner while cross-examining a witness before the magistrate may be given in evidence against him on his trial, but if they have been reduced to writing as part of the depositions they must be proved by the depositions and not by the witness so crossexamined. R. v. Taylor, 13 Cox 68, 77 L.R. 2 C.C.R. 147, 38 J.P. 484.

A prisoner was sworn and gave evidence on own behalf under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, Imp., before any caution was given to him. The usual caution was afterwards given, when he said, "What I have already said is true." At the trial, under the advice of counsel he declined to give evidence. It was held that the deposition was rightly admitted in evidence for the prosecution. R. v. Bird, 62 J.P. 760.

Code sec. 684 (2), prescribing the warning to be given to the accused by a justice holding a preliminary enquiry applies only to statements which the accused may make on the preliminary enquiry and the full statutory warning need not be given by police officers or other persons in authority with whom the prisoner holds conversations after his arrest. The King v. Steffoff, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 366, 20 O.L.R. 103.

The omission of the justice of the peace on a preliminary examination to put the usual question inviting a statement by the accused under sec. 684 of the Code, after the depositions have been read over, does not invalidate a commitment for trial. R. v. Lantz, 47 N.S.R. 495, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 212; compare R. v. Prasiloski (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 139; R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 8 Alta. L.R. 73, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488. Contra: R. v. Beaulieu, (1917) 26 Que. K.B. 151, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 336, where the indictment was quashed by Lemieux, C.J.

Accused to be asked to sign the statement]-The statement made by the accused is to be signed "by the justice," but it is not irregular for him to ask the accused himself to sign it (Code form 20), even where the statement consists merely of the words, "I have nothing to say "; and if he signs such statement in a preliminary inquiry upon a forgery charge it may be used against him for purposes of comparison of handwriting on the trial. R. v. Golden, 11 B.C.R. 349, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 278. While the statement of the accused is required to be signed only by the justice, it is an instruction upon the statutory form that the accused should be got to sign it, "if he will." See R. v. Walebek, 4 W.W.R. 501, 507, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130; Code form 20. A further instruction upon the form is to state "whatever the prisoner says and in his very words, as nearly as possible." The statement may be put in evidence by the Crown. Code sec. 1001. It is sufficiently authenticated by the justice's signature. Code sec. 1001; R. v. Walebek, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 501, 507; 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130.

It has been held that a prisoner called as a witness on his own behalf cannot be compelled to furnish a specimen of his handwriting; Rex v. [$ 684]

Grinder, 11 B.C.R. 370, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 333; and the prisoner's statement taken under Form 20, must be certified and forwarded with the depositions, although the prisoner declines to sign it. R. v. Walebek, supra. If, however, the prisoner tenders his own evidence in defence under sec. 686, both he and the justice are to sign his deposition. Secs. 682, 686.

Statement of accused made through interpreter]—If the accused is a foreigner, not understanding the English language, the statement may be taken through the sworn interpreter, and it is a proper precaution to have the completed statement when transcribed in English re-translated into the language of the accused and to have its correctness assented to after any necessary alterations. See R. v. Walebek (1913), 4 W.W.R. 501, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Alta.). The statement becomes admissible in evidence against the accused at the trial. Code sec. 1001. If the accused then claims that he did not understand what he signed or the warning given, he may establish that fact on the trial and so weaken the effect of the statement. [Alta.] R. v. Walebek (1913) 4 W.W.R. 501, 507, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Alta.).

A statement by an accused, made on his preliminary hearing in the form prescribed by the Code, and signed by him and by the magistrate before whom it was taken is not rendered inadmissible under sec. 1001 on the trial by the fact that the justice testifies that the accused was a foreigner, that it was necessary to use an interpreter during the preliminary proceedings and that the statement was taken down in condensed form by the magistrate, then read over to the accused by the interpreter and duly signed. R. v. Walebek (1913) 4 W.W.R. 501, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Sask.). His objection is not tenable that the statement is not admissible in the absence of evidence that the interpreter correctly interpreted the warning and the statement of the accused. If the accused did not understand what he signed or the warning given it is open to him to establish that fact. R. v. Walebek, supra.

Accused may obtain copy of his statement]-See sec. 691.

Statement of accused to be transmitted with the depositions]-See see, 695.

Statement of accused may be used against him at the trial]-See Code see. 1001.

Where evidence is given on the question of the admissibility of an alleged confession as a voluntary one, this raises a trial within a trial, and such evidence should, if possible, all be given at one time. R. v. De Mesquito, 9 W.W.R. 113, 114, per Martin, J.A. (B.C.)

No formula is necessary to be used to prove the want of inducement or threat. R. v. Hoo Sam (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1053 (Sask.), per Wetmore, C.J.

Where the trial is with a jury, the confession should not be let in subject to its being later displaced if not shown to have been voluntary. R. v. De Mesquito, 9 W.W.R. 113, 114, per Martin, J.A. (B.C.). Such would be a ground for a new trial if done before a jury in the event of the evidence being finally excluded. Ibid., eiting R. v. Sonyer, (1898) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 501. Such a practice is inconvenient and undesirable even where the trial is before a judge alone. R. v. De Mesquito, 9 W.W.R. 113, 114 (B.C.).

If after taking objection at the time that the evidence of an admission was tendered that a sufficient foundation had not been made and cross-examining on the questions which were then put to the witness to lay the foundation by proving that the admissions, to which he is to depose, were made voluntarily, counsel for the accused should again take objection if he desires to raise the point that a sufficient foundation had not been made for the admissibility of the confession. R. v. Hoo Sam (1912), 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1053. Semble, if he does not do so it is not open to him to set up after verdict that the evidence was improperly received. Ibid. at 1053, per Wetmore, C.J.

Confessions generally]—The general rule is, that a confession is not admissible as evidence against any person except the person who makes it; Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 21. But if one prisoner makes a confession in the presence of another, who thereupon makes statements which are properly construable as admissions by him, the confession of the first will be admissible against the second, not as evidence of the facts which it states, but introductory to and explanatory of the admissions of the second. Before a confession can be received in evidence, it must be proved affirmatively that the confession was free and voluntary; and ecutor other arged. n. 2. tary] was a therefore the prosecutor must always prove the circumstances under which it was made. R. v. Sanavitch, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 568 (Alta.); R. v. Spain, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465, 27 Man. R. 473; R. v. Bogh Lingh, (1913) 18 B.C.R. 323, 24 W.L.R. 941, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 323; R. v. Bruce, 13 B.C.R. 1, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 275; Ibrahim v. The King, [1914] A.C. 599, 83 L.J.P.C. 185, 24 Cox C.C. 174; R. v. Rodney (1918) 42 O.L.R. 645.

A confession is not deemed to be voluntary, if it appears to the court to have been caused by any inducement, threat, or promise proceeding from a magistrate or other person in authority or concerned in the charge (e.g., the prosecutor or the person having the custody of the accused), and having reference to the charge against the accused person, whether addressed to him directly or brought to his knowledge indirectly, and if, in the opinion of the court, the inducement, threat, or promise gave the accused person reasonable grounds for supposing that by making a confession he would gain some advantage or avoid some evil in reference to the proceedings against him. Thus, on a trial of A. for murdering B., a handbill issued by the Secretary of State, promising a reward and pardon to any accomplice who would confess, was brought to the knowledge of A. who, under the influence of a hope of pardon, made a confession. It was held that the confession was not voluntary: R. v. Boswell, Car. & Marsh, 584, cited as an illustration by Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 22. R. v. Thompson, [1893] 2 Q.B. 12.

In Ibrahim v. The King, [1914] A. C. 599, Lord Summer, in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council, says (p. 609): "It has long been established as a positive rule of English criminal law, that no statement by an accused is admissible in evidence against him unless it is shown by the prosecution to have been a voluntary statement, in the sense that it has not been obtained by him either by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised or held out by a person in authority."

A confession is not involuntary merely because it appears to have been caused by the exhortations of a person in authority to make it as a matter of religious duty, or by an inducement collateral to the proceedings, or by inducements held out by a person having nothing to do with the apprehension, prosecution, or examination of the accused. Thus, A. being charged with the murder of B., the chaplain of the gaol read the Commination Service to A, and exhorted him on religious grounds to confess his sins. A., in consequence, makes a confession, and it was held that this confession was voluntary: R. v. Gilham, 1 Moo. C.C., 186, cited by Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 22. So, again, a confession made by a prisoner to the gaoler in consequence of a promise by the gaoler that if the prisoner confessed he should be allowed to see his wife, would be admissible in evidence. To make a confession involuntary, the inducement must have reference to the escape of the accused from the criminal charge against him, and must be made by some person having power to relieve him, wholly of partially, from the consequences of that charge, or by a person pretending to have such power.

A confession is deemed to be voluntary if, in the opinion of the court, it is shown to have been made after the complete removal of the impression produced by any inducement, threat, or promise which would otherwise render it involuntary. Thus, A. is accused of the murder of B.; and C., a magistrate, tries to induce A. to confess by promising to try to get him a pardon if he does so. The Secretary of State informs C. that no pardon can be granted, and this is communicated to A. After this, Á. makes a statement. This is a voluntary confession. Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 22, R. v. Clewee, 4 C. & P., 221.

It is a question of fact whether or not the statement was volutarily and freely made: It is not to be excluded merely because made to a person in authority. Statements made by soldiers at a military court of inquiry at which they were given a chance of making statements on their own behalf were held admissible in a prosecution at the assizes for conspiracy to defraud. R. v. Colpus, (1917) 86 L.J.K.B. 459, [1917] 1 K.B. 574.

A confession made without suggestion from any outside source is admissible although the statement itself showed that it was induced by the hope of pardon operating on his mind. R. v. Godinho, (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 12.

Voluntary confession obtained by fraud or deceit]-

Facts discovered in consequence of a confession improperly obtained, and so much of the confession as distinctly relates to those facts may be proved. Thus, A., accused of burglary, makes a confession to a policeman under an inducement which prevents it from being voluntary. Part of it is that A. had thrown a lantern into a pond; the fact that he said so, and that the lantern was found in the pond in consequence, may be proved: Stephen, Dig. Evid., art. 22, R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P., 364.

It is improper to endeavour to extort a confession by fraud or under the promise of secrecy; but if a confession is otherwise admissible as evidence, and was made voluntarily, it does not become inadmissible merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it; R. v. White, (1908) 18 O.L.R. 640, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 30; R. v. Best, (1909) 78 L.J.K.B. 692; or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions whether put by a magistrate, officer, or a private person, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make a confession and that evidence of it might be given against him.

If a confession is given in evidence, the whole of it must be given, and not merely the parts disadvantageous to the accused person.

Confessions made under oath]-

Evidence amounting to a confession may be used as such against the person who gives it, though it was given on oath and though the proceeding in which it was given had reference to the same subject matter as the proceeding in which it is to be used, and though the witness might have refused to answer the questions put to him; but if he was improperly compelled to answer, his answers are not a voluntary confession: Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 23.

Thus, A. was charged with maliciously wounding B. Before the magistrates, A. had appeared as a witness for C., who was charged with the same offence. A.'s deposition was allowed to be used against him on his own trial: R. v. Chidley and Cummins, 8 Cox C.C. 365.

Non-incriminating statements]-

A conviction where corroboration is required should not be based on proof of a statement made by the accused, and used as corroboration, if the statement may with equal reason be construed as non-incriminating. R. v. Blyth, 11 O.W.N. 406; 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 20.

An acknowledgment of a subordinate fact not directly involving guilt, or in other words, not essential to the crime charged, is not a confession, Crossfield's Trial, 26 How. St. Tr. 215; R. v. Hurd (1913) 4 W.W.R. 185, 189, 23 W.L.R. 812, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 98 (Alta.).

Proving that accused denied guilt]—The rule as to the exclusion of the confession or admission of the accused without proof that it was voluntarily made does not apply to a statement made by him which rather suggests a denial of his guilt. R. v. Hurd, 4 W.W.R. 185, 23 W.L.R. 812, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 98 (Alta.); and see R. v. Thompson [1910] 1 K.B. 640.

In R. v. Christie [1914] A.C. 545, 554, Lord Atkinson says: "It by no means follows, I think, that a mere denial by the accused of the facts mentioned in the statement necessarily renders the statement inadmissible, because he may deny the statement in such a manner and under such circumstances as may lead a jury to disbelieve him, and constitute evidence from which an acknowledgment may be inferred by them."

In Rex v. Christie, supra, the statement objected to went to the question of guilt. It was substantially as if the accused had been asked if he were guilty of the crime charged and had denied the charge. The statement in question in R. v. Letain, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 505, 518, merely referred to the subject of the deceased's raincoat, which might possibly have been lawfully in the accused's possession, thus dealing merely with a collateral circumstance and not with the question of guilt. On this point, R. v. Letain, is distinguishable from both Rex v. Christie, supra, and R. v. Norton [1910] 2 K.B. 496, 79 L.J.K.B. 756.

Written confessions]—If the admissions have been reduced to writing and read over and explained to and signed by the accused, the writing will be admissible on proof of the confession being a voluntary one. De Paoli v. The King, (1915) 24 Que. K.B. 525, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 256.

If a written confession or admission by the accused was not a voluntary one and its admission in evidence was therefore improper, this raises a question of law, and the conviction may be quashed or a new trial ordered as the Court of Appeal may see fit. R. v. De Mesquito, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 113 (B.C.)

If there was no other evidence upon which the conviction could be supported after ruling out the inadmissible confession, the Court of Appeal should order the conviction to be quashed rather than direct a new trial. R. v. De Mesquito, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 113.

Fact of person being in custody as affecting statement made by him]—The arrest itself is said to be an inducing cause sufficient to bar the reception in evidence of a confession or statement elicited by questions put by an officer to a prisoner while under arrest, where there had been no caution or warning that what he might say might be used against him. R. v. Kay, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 403, 11 B.C.R. 157; R. v. Cook, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 241.

The rule requiring a warning to persons under arrest before receiving their confessions is not an arbitrary one, but rests on the presumption of inducement which arises from the arrest or other custody. Ibrahim v. The King, [1914] A.C. 599, 609; R. v. Colpus, 12 Cr. App. R. 193, 200; R. v. Rodnev, (1918), 42 O.L.R. 645, 653, in which R. v. Kav. 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 403, 11 B.C.R. 157, was referred to as not laying down an absolute rule of exclusion. As stated by Latchford, J., in R. v. Rodney, supra: "It is not the fact that an accused person was under arrest that determines whether a statement made by him to a constable or other person in authority is admissible, though that fact is of undoubted importance, and should receive careful consideration when evidence of a statement so made is proffered. Nor is the absence of warning the determining factor in such a case. The utmost circumspection should, no doubt, be exercised in the reception of evidence of statements made in such circumstances. Before admitting evidence of statements so made, the magistrate or judge should be satisfied that no inducement whatever has been held out to the accused by any person having authority over him or concerned in the subject-matter of the charge. But, if satisfied that the statement has not been obtained by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage held out by a person in authority, he should declare the evidence admissible. The matter is largely, if not entirely, one of discretion, to be exercised in accordance with the rule laid down by Lord Sumner in Ibrahim v. The King [1904] A.C. 599, 609.

If there is no ground for a suggestion that the statement was made in reply to a threat or upon any inducement, the evidence will be admitted. Rogers v. Hawken, 67 L.J.Q.B. 526, 19 Cox C.C. 122 (discussing R. v. Male, 17 Cox C.C. 689); R. v. Day, 20 Ont. R. 209 (discussing R. v. Gavin (1885) 15 Cox C.C. 656; R. v. Miller, (1895) 18 Cox C.C. 54; Attorney-General of N.S.W. v. Martin, (1909) 9 Com. L.R. 713 (Austr.); R. v. Elliott (1899) 31 Ont. R. 14; R. v. Hoo Sam (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049 (Sask.), distinguishing R. v. Kay, 11 B.C.R. 157. The same rebuttable presumption against a confession being voluntary may arise although the accused has not been formally arrested; R. v. Jones (1910), 5 Cr. App. R. 177, 180; as where the accused was subjected to search at police headquarters whither he had gone on invitation. R. v. Rodney, (1918) 42 O.L.R. 645, 650, per Latchford, J.

Cautioning the accused]—It cannot be said, as a matter of law, that the absence of a caution makes the statement inadmissible. It may tend to show that the person was not on his guard as to the importance of what he was saying or as to its bearing on some charge of which he has not been informed. R. v. Voisin, 34 Times L.R. 263; R. v. Colpus, (1917) 12 Cr. App. R. 193, [1917] 1 K.B. 574; R. v. Byan, 9 O.L.R. 137; R. v. Steffoff, 20 O.L.R. 103; R. v. Spain, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 113 (Man.) [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465; R. v. Hoo Sam, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1051.

Statements made by an accused person to a constable in reply to an inquiry are not inadmissible on the ground that the constable did not previously caution him, provided that the constable did not, before making the inquiry, make up his mind to take the person into custody or to take proceedings against him. Lewis v. Harris, 24 Cox C.C. 66, 30 T.L.R. 109, 58 S.J. 156.

It would not be correct to say that a caution given to the prisoner validates as evidence any answer he makes. It would be otherwise if anything were done by the officers to intimidate the prisoner or to withdraw or nullify the caution. See R. v. Wallace, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 158, 20 B.C.R. 97.

Statements voluntarily made after caution and while under arrest for one charge are equally admissible on another and quite different charge. R. v. Van Horst (1914) 20 B.C.R. 81.

There is no absolute rule that the caution given by one officer to the prisoner must be repeated on his being brought before another officer; the admission made to the latter has been admitted where the court was satisfied that the effect of the caution to the first officer still remained. R. v. Wallace, 20 B.C.R. 97. But where a prisoner has been warned, the warning will not necessarily make admissible a statement made on a later occasion to a constable who interrogated him without renewing the warning. R. v. Bela Singh, 7 W.W.R. 603 (B.C.).

On the other hand, it would seem that if a statement has been elicited by an officer without cautioning a person in custody under circumstances which would exclude the statement so made, he should be specifically warned that what he then said cannot be used against him, when the same officer on another occasion renews the interrogation of the prisoner in respect of the same admissions after warning him that he is not obliged to answer. R. v. Kong, (1914) 20 B.C.R. 71, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 142.

Every case as to the admissibility of a statement made by an accused person while under arrest must be decided according to its own circumstances. Ibrahim v. The King [1914] A.C. 599, 614, 83 L.J.P.C. 185; R. v. Spain [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465, 469.

Interrogation by police]—There is no statutory form prescribed for police officers in warning an accused that anything he says may be used against him, and that he is not bound to say anything. R. v. Spain, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465, 27 Man. R. 473, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 113.

It was said in R. v. Gavin, (1885) 15 Cox C.C. 656, that a policeman should not interrogate a prisoner as to the charge; but that case was expressly overruled in R. v. Best, [1909] 1 K.B. 692, 78 L.J.K.B. 692; and see R. v. Firth (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 162, from which it would appear that, as a matter of law, if the police make an untrue statement to a prisoner which calls forth an admission, the latter is admissible notwithstanding the prior untruth which elicited it. But see, contra, R. v. McDonald (1896) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 221 (Terr.).

Where the prosecution offers evidence of an alleged confession made by the accused to a police officer it is the duty of the presiding judge to enquire into all the circumstances in order to ascertain whether the confession was made freely, and if he finds that it was not, he must reject the evidence. R. v. Sanavitch, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 568, per Hyndman, J., applying R. v. McCraw, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 253 (Que.). Even if an admission made to a police officer were admitted without proper proof that it was a voluntary statement, this would not justify the ordering of a new trial if the accused himself went into the witness box and told there in substance the story releted by him to the police. The jury having before them practically the same thing from the accused in his testimony as they had in the alleged confession, there was no substantial wrong and the Code forbade a new trial. R. v. Moke, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575, 586, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (Alta.).

Interrogation by employer]—A confession is not voluntary where it followed a statement made by the employer complaining of a theft and accusing his employee in the presence of a constable by saying: "You will be arrested if you do not say where the goods are." R. v. De Mesquito (1915) 9 W.W.R. 113 (B.C.).

Exact words of confession not essential to admissibility]—The doctrine in R. v. Sexton (1822) referred to in Joy, on Confessions (1842) 19, and in Russell on Crimes, 7th ed., 2205, that confessions must be excluded unless the ipsissima verba are given, is now doubted, R. v. Godinho (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 12; and see Russell on Crimes, 7th ed., 2180. As to confessions or admissions made through an interpreter, the same rule would probably apply as would in taking admissions under sec. 684, through an interpreter; see R. v. Walebek (1913) 4 W.W.R. 501, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Sask.); R. v. Charcoal, 3 Terr. L.R. 7.

Assent of accused to statements of others; silence not always assent]-Statements not coincident, in point of time, with the occurrence of the shooting, but uttered in the presence and hearing of the accused and under such circumstances that he might reasonably have [§ 685] been expected to have made some explanatory reply to remarks in reference to them, are admissible as evidence. Gilbert v. The King, 38 Can. S.C.R. 284, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 127.

It is a rule of law that an incriminating statement made in the presence and hearing of the defendant, even on occasion which would reasonably be expected to call for some explanation from him, is not evidence against him on his trial of the facts therein stated, save in so far as he has accepted the statement. But a mere denial by him of the truth of such a statement does not in law render that statement inadmissible against him. To this extent, R. v. Norton [1910] 2 K.B. 496, 5 Cr. App. R. 65 is overruled by R. v. Christie [1914] A.C. 545. In practice, however, there is a rule of prudence and discretion that such a statement should not be tendered until, in the opinion of the judge, there is a foundation for a reasonable inference by the jury that the defendant accepted it or part of it. If, notwithstanding this rule, such a statement has been given in evidence, the judge, if he thinks that it should have been withheld, should caution the jury concerning its true effect. In this respect the judgment in R. v. Norton [1910] 2 K.B. 496, represents the correct practice. R. v. Christie, [1914] A.C. 545, 10 Cr. App. R. 141 (H.L.) affirming R. v. Christie, 9 Cr. App. R. 169.

The former rule of evidence that one's silence shall be construed as a virtual assent to all that is said in his presence, is susceptible of great abuse, and calls for a course of conduct which prudent and quiet men do not generally adopt. If that rule be sound to the full extent, as laid down in some of the early cases, it would be in the power of any evil-disposed person to always ruin his adversary's case by drawing him into a compulsory altercation in the presence of chosen listeners, who would be sure to misrepresent what he said. Nothing could be more unjust or unreasonable. Hence, in more recent cases, the rule has undergone very important qualifications. The mere silence of one, when facts are asserted in his presence, is no ground of presuming his acquiescence, unless the conversation were addressed to him under such circumstances as to call for a reply. The person must be in a position to require the information, and he must ask it in good faith, and in a manner fairly entitling him to expect it, in order to justify any inference from the mere silence of the party addressed. If the occasion, or the nature of this demand, or the manner of making it, will reasonably justify silence in a discreet and prudent man no unfavourable inference therefrom should on that account be made against the party. R. v. McCraw, (1906) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, 16 Que. K.B. 193. Greenleaf on Evid. 273.

The contents of a statement alleged to have been made in the presence of a prisoner cannot be given in evidence unless and until the judge has satisfied himself from the evidence contained in the depositions or given at the trial, that there is evidence, fit to be submitted to a jury, that the prisoner by his answer to the statement, whether given in words or by conduct, acknowledged the truth of the statement. R. v. Christie [1914] A.C. 545, 10 Cr. App. R. 141, affirming 9 Cr. App. R. 169, and overruling in part R. v. Norton [1910] 2 K.B. 496, 79 L.J.K.B. 756. The fact of the silence of a person accused of receiving stolen property upon hearing statements made as to his alleged guilt by the person who stole the property may be admissible in evidence as leading to the inference of his guilty knowledge. Re Cohen, 8 O.L.R. 143, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 251 (Anglin, J.).

Confession is evidence only against person making it]—In every case where there is an incriminating statement by a co-prisoner, the jury should be carefully directed on the relevant law. Rex v. Altshuler, 11 Cr. App. R. 243; R. v. Martin, 9 O.L.R. 218, 5 O.W.R. 317, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 371.

Generally, a confession is only evidence against the person making it and cannot be used against others. R. v. Davis, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 431: R. v. Hearne (1830), 4 C. & P. 215; R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221; and R. v. Fletcher, 4 C. & P. 250. In the latter case, Mr. Justice Littledale said, after deciding that the whole of a certain letter written by one of the prisoners implicating and naming other prisoners should be read to the jury :-- " But I shall take care to make such observations to the jury as will prevent its having any injurious effect against the other prisoners; and I shall tell the jury that they ought not to pay the slightest attention to this letter except so far as it goes to affect the person who wrote it." And see R. v. Davis, 9 Cr. App. R. 66. Where two persons are charged with being concerned in the same offence and are put in adjoining cells, and the police overhear a conversation between them, evidence of the conversation is admissible at the trial. R. v. Gardner, 32 Times L.R. 97. Where two persons have been separately arrested and separately charged with an offence and have subsequently been put in the dock together and charged jointly, a statement made previously by one of them behind the back of the other and implicating him ought not to be read in the presence of that other. Nevertheless, any material statement or confession by the other in answer to such statement is admissible in evidence, but the judge ought to reject it, if he is satisfied that it was read over to the prisoner for the mere purpose of getting an admission from him. Rex v. Gardner, supra.

The confession of another person arrested with the accused in a gaming house case, but not jointly charged, is not admissible on the trial of the accused; such person should be called as a witness for the prosecution if it is desired to prove the facts which he professes to confess. R. v. See Woo, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 213.

Effect of confession]—A confession alone is sufficient to justify a conviction. Rex v. Graf, 19 O.L.R. 238, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193.

A confession properly proved in law needs no corroboration to found a conviction for murder although in practice there is invariably some corroboration. R. v. Sykes, (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 233.

The admission by the defendant in a bigamy case of his marriage may be sufficient not only as to the fact of the ceremony but as to the validity of the ceremony according to the foreign law. Zdrahal v. Shatney (1912) 3 W.W.R. 239, 259, (Man.), eiting R. v. Newton, alias Simmonsto, 1 Cox C.C. 30, 1 C. & K. 174, 2 M. & Rob. 503.

But it seems that it is a question for the jury whether they will or will not infer from an admission of the first marriage not only an admission of the fact of the first marriage but the foreign law under which it was celebrated. Zdrahal v. Shatney (1912) 3 W.W.R. 239, 259, (Man.), citing R. v. Newton, supra; R. v. Creamer, 10 Lower Canada R. 454; R. v. Nadum (1911) 24 O.L.R. 306; and Miles v. United States, 103 U.S. 304.

Any statement of the accused which tends to prove his guilt would be a confession, and, if the words used are ambiguous, it would be for the jury to say what was the effect of them. R. v. Hoo Sam, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1057 (Sask.), per Newlands, J.; but see R. v. Blyth, 11 O.W.N. 406.

Error on admitting statement or confession which was not admissible]—If it should happen that an involuntary confession has been put in evidence before the jury, the safer course is for the judge to offer to discharge the jury. R. v. Hurd, 4 W.W.R. 185, 192, 22 W.L.R. 812, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 98 (Alta.).

The prisoner's counsel may, however, waive the right to a new jury and be satisfied with a proper direction to the same jury to disregard the evidence improperly admitted. R. v. Hurd, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 185, 192 (Alta.). As to reversal of verdicts for error, see Code sec. 1019

Witnesses for the defence .- All relevant evidence to be taken down.

686. After the proceedings required by sec. 684 are completed the accused shall be asked if he wishes to call any witnesses.

2. Every witness called by the accused who testifies to any fact relevant to the case shall be heard, and his deposition shall be taken in the same manner as the depositions of the witnesses for the prosecution.

Origin]-Sec. 593, Code of 1892.

Evidence for defence on preliminary enquiry]—Sections 686 and 687 are not applicable to summary conviction proceedings (but see sec. 715); they are part of the preliminary procedure in prosecutions for indictable offences; and are necessary in that connection, because, without them.

it might be deemed that such evidence as grand juries usually act upon would be enough. In regard to an actual trial, no such provisions should be needed, because first principles in the administration of justice require that the court shall plainly call for, and patiently hear, the defence, at the conclusion of the case for the prosecution. R. v. Keenan (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 467, 469, 28 O.L.R. 441, 4 O.W.N. 1034. Sec. 721 does not expressly make sees. 686 and 687 applicable to summary prosecutions; there was no need that it should. Sec. 721 deals with the manner of taking the evidence of the witnesses-procedure separately provided for in secs. 682, 683, 684, and (in part) 687. R. v. Keenan, supra. Sec. 686 introduced by the Code of 1892 made a change in the law, as prior to that time the justice was obliged to receive only evidence "in proof of" the charge. The application of the procedure in preliminary enquiries to extradition matters made it impossible under the former law for the person whose extradition was sought, to prove an alibi before the extradition judge; Re Garbutt, 21 Ont. R. 465; except possibly where the judge granted leave to adduce evidence for the defence. Re Burley, 1 C.L.J. 20. The person charged has now the absolute right to adduce his evidence, and regard is to be had to the whole of the evidence by the magistrate or extradition judge, as the case may be, in ascertaining whether a sufficient case is made out. Code sec. 687; Extradition Act, B.S.C. 1906, ch. 155, sec. 18; R. v. Payne, (1919) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. - (Que.), overruling ex parte Burke, 2 Rev. de Jur. 151.

Section 686 of the Code is substantially complied with in extradition proceedings where the Commissioner at the close of the case for the prosecution calls upon counsel for the accused for his defence, where upon the argument was proceeded with, without specifically asking the accused if he wished to call any witnesses. Re Moore, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 264, 20 Man. R. 41.

Evidence in reply]—The justice may in his discretion receive further evidence on the part of the prosecutor after hearing any evidence given on behalf of the accused. Code sec. 679 (b).

Depositions to be taken "in the same manner," etc.]-Code secs. 682, 683.

Addresses of counsel]—See sec. 679, sub-secs. (a), (d) and (e). Regulating the course of the inquiry]—See sec. 679.

Adjudication and subsequent steps and Bail.

Accused discharged if no case.—Discharge makes defendant's recognizance void unless prosecutor bound over.

687. When all the witnesses on the part of the prosecution and the accused have been heard the justice shall, if upon the whole of the evidence he is of opinion that no sufficient case is made out to put the accused upon his trial, discharge him.

2. In such case any recognizances taken in respect of the charge shall become void, unless some person is bound over to prosecute under the provisions of the next following section.

Procedure on change of magistrates pending the hearing]-A preliminary hearing in a criminal case commenced before one magistrate cannot be continued before another. But if the magistrate who had begun the hearing dies, is dismissed, resigns his office or withdraws from the hearing, then another competent magistrate may take it up, but he should begin the hearing de novo before himself; he cannot merely continue that previously begun. Bertrand v. Angers, 21 Que. S.C. 213. If the preliminary enquiry was begun before one justice and another justice is called in to sit with him, the hearing of the evidence must be begun de novo, as it would then be essential that both justices should hear all the evidence on which their joint deliberation was to depend. Re Nunn, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 429 (B.C.). But if the associate justice sitting with a stipendiary magistrate withdraws on the disagreement arising and takes no part in the decision which the stipendiary gives as his own and the stipendiary might have sat alone, it would seem by analogy to summary conviction procedure that his decision would be valid. R. v. Thomas, ex parte O'Hare, [1914] 1 K.B. 22, 23 Cox C.C. 687. Where the two justices disagree as to committing for trial and neither is willing to withdraw, they should adjourn the case to be re-heard before other justices; if this is not done, the accused may be entitled to demand his discharge. Ex parte Hanning, 5 Que, Q.B. 549, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 203; Durrand v. Forrester, 18 Man. L.R. 444. The prosecutor may have himself bound over to prefer an indictment if the accused is discharged; Code secs. 688, 871; or he may apply to the Attorney-General to prefer an indictment; Scottstown v. Beauchesne, 5 Que. Q.B. 554; or he may apply to the court for leave to prefer an indictment. Code sec. 873.

Application of sec. 687 to preliminary enquiry only]-See note to sec. 686; R. v. Keenan, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 467, 28 O.L.R. 441.

Discharge of the accused]—If the magistrate is positive that no grand jury would bring in a true bill against the accused before him on a preliminary enquiry, and that no petit jury would find him guilty, it is his duty to dismiss the charge. R. v. Howard (1913) 5 W.W.R. S38, 841 (Man.). Applied to a charge of manslaughter on its being shown that death did not result from the blow given in the altercation but indirectly from the excitement following the altercation. R. v. Howard, supra; Cr. Code, see. 255.

Termination of proceedings in favour of accused]—One of the essentials in an action of malicious prosecution is that the criminal proceedings shall have terminated in favour of the accused who has become the plaintiff in a damage action against the complainant or other prosecutor in the preliminary inquiry or other criminal proceedings. If the prosecutor gives his recognizance to prosecute notwithstanding the discharge of the accused, the proceedings are not at an end, although the accused is no longer under any recognizance. If a true bill is found he must appear and answer the charge or be brought up on a bench warrant. If the accused is discharged and the prosecutor is not bound over at his own request, the discharge is provisionally a termination of the proceedings, but it may appear that a new charge was laid or leave granted to indict independently of any preliminary inquiry. Sec. 873 (2).

The termination of the proceedings may appear from the production of the original information on which the informant had signed a memorandum drawn by the magistrate to the effect that he withdrew the information. Tamblen v. Westcott, 7 W.W.R. 1037 (Alta.); Fancourt v. Heaven, 18 O.L.R. 492.

And even where there was a committal for trial, the direction of the Attorney-General in Saskatchewan to his agent not to prefer a charge will be prima facie proof of termination of the proceedings. Mortimer v. Fisher, 4 W.W.R. 454 (Sask.).

On the preliminary hearing of a charge of arson against the plaintiff, one justice decided that he should be committed for trial and the other that the information should be dismissed, and nothing more was ever done in the matter. It was held that it could not be said that plaintiff had been discharged on this investigation so as to entitle him to bring an action for malicious prosecution against the informant. As other justices had not been called in to rehear the case on the disagreement, possibly the justices might have been compelled by mandamus to make an order of dismissal and, if they had made such an order, the plaintiff could have proceeded with his action. Durrand v. Forrester, 18 Man. L.R. 444, 15 Can. Cr. Cas, 125.

No effective certificate of discharge on preliminary inquiry]—There is no provision under the Criminal Code to give any legal effect to a justice's certificate of discharge on a preliminary enquiry so as to bar a second prosecution. United States v. Ford, 10 W.W.R. 1042, 1044 (Man.). Similarly a certificate of discharge by an extradition judge on the hearing of an application for an extradition commitment will not bar a subsequent application. Ibid.

If the justice discharge the accused on a preliminary enquiry either the same justice or another may cause him to be brought up again for another preliminary enquiry upon the same charge. R. v. Ford, 10 W.W.R. 1042, at 1044, eiting R. v. Hannay, 11 Can. Cr. Cas 23. But if the justice or magistrate is "trying" the charge, instead of holding a mere preliminary enquiry, the certificate of discharge becomes important. If the hearing is one in summary conviction proceedings he may give a certificate of dismissal. Code sec. 730. Such certificate is a bar to any further or subsequent prosecution for the same offence; sec. 730.

If the case be one of summary trial under Part XVI of the Code, for an indictable offence, the certificate of discharge is likewise a bar to a subsequent prosecution. Sees. 791, 792; and see United States v. Ford, 10 W.W.R. 1042, 1044 (Man.), an application for extradition and subject to similar rule as that applicable to preliminary enquiries.

Sub-sec. (2)—"Any recognizances taken in respect of the charge"]— The justice may have admitted the accused to bail; Code secs. 664, 681; in which case a recognizance with sureties may have been given or a cash deposit made with the Crown officer by way of "cash bail"; or the justice may have ordered that the accused shall go at large on his own recognizance, until an adjourned date for proceeding with the enquiry; secs. 664, 681. On a prejudicial variance appearing between the charge in the information or warrant and that contained in the information, the justice may have admitted the accused to bail pending the hearing; Code sec. 670. There are also the recognizances which may have been required from defaulting witnesses in the course of the inquiry; sec. 674.

Montreal]—In the district of Montreal the Clerk of the Peace or Deputy Clerk of the Peace has all the powers of a justice under Parts XIII and XIV.

Application to extradition proceedings]—In the case of a fugitive, accused of an extradition crime, and not convicted therefor in the foreign state, the extradition judge or commissioner is to commit the fugitive for surrender if such evidence is produced as would, according to the law of Canada, subject to Part I of the Extradition Act, "justify his committal for trial if the crime had been committed in Canada"; Extradition Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 155, sec. 18; and if such evidence is not produced, the judge shall order him to be discharged. Ibid.

In extradition proceedings the judge is to find (1) whether there is prima facie evidence of the commission by the accused of an offence, which if committed in Canada would be an indictable offence by the law of Canada; and, if it be so found, then (2) whether there is prima facie evidence that the offence is one of the erimes described in the extradition arrangement with the foreign country seeking extradition. Re F. H. Martin (No. 1), 2 Terr. L.R. 301, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 326; Re Latimer, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 244.

It is no objection to an extradition warrant that two offences of a cognate character are stated therein. R. v. Rutland; Ex parte Kalke. 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 22.

Whether that part of the depositions taken in the foreign state which contain evidence which would have been excluded under the rules of evidence in Canadian courts is to be considered or not, is an unsettled question. Re Rosenberg [1918] 1 W.W.R. 845 (Man.); Re Harsha, 11 O.L.R. 494, 7 O.W.R. 97, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 433, 440.

The weight of authority seems to favour the view that where evidence is received from the foreign state, demanding the extradition, its admissibility depends on the foreign law of evidence. Piggott on Extradition, 153, 154. But the magistrate is entitled to scrutinize the foreign depositions with a view to ascertaining the substance of them and disregarding mere hearsay when he comes to weigh the evidence. Re Rosenberg [1918] 1 W.W.R. 845 (Man.). Depositions which otherwise would establish the facts sworn to are not to be excluded because of failure to comply with certain formalities which Canadian law may impose in domestic litigation upon the admission of the like evidence. Re Zosenheim. 20 Times L.R. 121; re Rosenberg, supra.

In international extradition applications it has been doubted whether opposing evidence could be received to prove that the application was not made in good faith. Re Rosenberg, supra. When defence evidence was not admissible on preliminary enquiries (prior to the enactment of Code sec. 687), such evidence was rejected; re Debaun, 32 Lower Canada Jurist, 281, 296; but the change in the practice in that respect appears to make it admissible at least where it would affect the credit to be given to the testimony in support of the extradition application.

If the application is one for extradition from one British territory to another under the Fugitive Offenders Act (Imp. and Canadian), the evidence of bad faith would be admissible. Re McTier, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 80 (Que.); R. v. Delisle, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 210.

It is only necessary that the evidence should be such as to give rise to probable cause to believe the accused guilty. Re Goodman, 26 Man. R. 537, at p. 556, 10 W.W.R. 1178; 34 W.L.R. 1091, following Ex parte Feinberg, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 270; The Court should always lean in favour of sending the fugitive for trial in his own country, unless it should be plain that under no view of the evidence the offence could be made out. Moore on Extradition, p. 648, eiting Hagarty, C.J., in Re Phipps, 1 O.R. 586; and see United States v. Webber, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 6 (N.S.) and re Siletti, 71 L.J.K.B. 935; 87 L.T. 332; Re Castioni [1891] 1 Q.B. 149; 60 L.J.M.C. 22; re Rosenberg, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 845 (Man.).

Review of extradition committal by habeas corpus]—On a habeas corpus application for discharge of the person committed by an extradition warrant in international extradition, the only question is whether the accused was at the time of the issue of the writ in lawful custody. United States v. Gaynor, [1905] A.C. 128, at p. 134; 74 L.J.P.C. 44. The lawfulness of the custody must depend upon the question whether there was a sufficient compliance with the provisions of The Extradition Act. If the extradition judge had no evidence before him upon which he could act, he would have no jurisdiction to order a committal. In re Galwey [1896] 1 Q.B. 230; 65 L.J.M.C. 38; In re Arton (No. 2), [1896] 1 Q.B. 509, 65 L.J.M.C.; Ex parte Huguet, 29 L.T. 40, at p. 41; 12 Cox C.C. 551, and In Re Siletti, 71 L.J.K.B. 935; 87 L.T. 332. In the last-mentioned case the view was expressed that on a habeas corpus the only question that the court can entertain is the question of jurisdiction, that is, that the crime charged is not one within the meaning of The Extradition Act; that the accused might contend that there was no evidence upon which the magistrate could exercise his discretion as to whether he would commit or not; but that the court ought not to enter into the consideration as to whether the magistrate had exercised his discretion properly where there was some evidence of the extradition offence.

Prosecutor may be bound over to prosecute.-Form of recognizance.

688. If the justice discharges the accused, and the person preferring the charge desires to prefer an indictment respecting the said charge, he may require the justice to bind him over to prefer and prosecute such an indictment, and thereupon the justice shall take his recognizance to prefer and prosecute an indictment against the accused before the court by which such accused would be tried if such justice had committed him, and the justice shall deal with the recognizance, information and depositions in the same way as if he had committel the accused for trial.

2. Such recognizance may be in form 21, or to the like effect.

"Indictment"]—This word includes a formal charge under sec. 873A and a "record" under sec. 827 on a speedy trial. Code sec. 2 (16), as amended 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 8.

Form of Recognizance where the prosecutor requires the justice to bind him over to prosecute after the charge is dismissed]—Code form 21, following sec. 1152.

Prosecutor applying to be bound over to prefer indictment notwithstanding discharge]—The justice is not bound to take the recognizance of the prosecutor when neither the information nor the evidence discloses a criminal offence. Ex parte Wason, L.R. 4 Q.B. 573, 38 L.J.Q.B. 302. Compare see. 2 of the Vexatious Indictment Act, Imp. 1859, and see R. v. Lord Mayor of London, Ex parte Gostling (1886) 16 Cox C.C. 77, 54 L.T. 646, R. v. Crabbe, 59 J.P. 247.

The discharge referred to in sec. 688 is a discharge on the preliminary enquiry, and the section does not apply to the refusal of process under sec. 655. Ex parte Reid (1885) 49 J.P. 600.

The person preferring the charge has a legal right to require that his recognizance be taken to prosecute where the magistrate discharges the accused, and the fact that the prosecutor exercises such legal right, particularly where a true bill was afterwards returned, will not alone displace his defence of reasonable and probable cause in an action for malicious prosecution brought by the accused, who was acquitted on the trial. Klein v. Katz (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 153, 21 Rev. Leg. 275.

A person accused of perjury may, with his own consent, be summarily tried before a police magistrate; and where the defendant sought and consented to be tried summarily pleading "not guilty," and the magistrate, upon hearing the evidence, adjudicated summarily and dusmissed the charge; it was held that the magistrate was right in refusing thereafter to bind the prosecutor over to prefer and prosecute an indictment against the defendant, for the magistrate has, under see. 784 to determine before the defence has been made, whether he will try the case summarily or not. Re Rex v. Burns (No. 2), 1 O.L.R. 341, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 330.

Status of private prosecutor]-See secs. 689, 840, 871, 962.

Although bound over to prosecute an indictment, a private prosecutor may not be entitled to have his counsel attend before the grand jury to submit a draft bill of indictment. It has been held that in the district of Montreal, he must apply to the trial court for leave to do so. R. v. Hoo Yoke, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 14 Que. K.B. 540.

The Crown Attorney for the county has the statutory right in Outario under the Crown Attorney's Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 91, sec. 8, to "assume wholly the conduct of the case where justice towards the accused seems to demand his interposition," and upon his taking charge of the prosecution after a true bill has been found, the private prosecutor has no right to take part in the proceedings at the trial, at least where the case does not present more of the features of a private injury than of a public offence. Crown Attorney's Act, R.S.O: 1914, ch. 91, sec. 8 (σ). R. v. Fraser, (1914) 30 O.L.R. 598, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 140.

Order for security for costs against private prosecutor bound over]— Security for costs may be ordered against the informant at a later stage when the case comes before the jury court. The defendant may there move for an order that the prosecutor be not permitted to prefer any indictment until he has given security for the costs of the defence, including the costs of appearance on the preliminary inquiry, in case the grand jury should not find a true bill, or, if found, there was no conviction upon the indictment. Code sec. 689.

Informant's recognizance to prosecute]—This recognizance given by the informant to ensure the case going to the grand jury notwithstanding the adverse opinion of the magistrate (see. 687) is to be dealt with in the same way as if there had been a committal; see. 688; that is, it is to be transmitted along with the information, depositions, etc., to the clerk or other proper officer of the court by which the accused is to be tried. Code sec. 695.

Witnesses not under recognizance]----wihile the magistrate is compelled to take the informant's recognizance under sec. 688, if the informant requires him to do so, there is no similar obligation to bind over the witnesses to appear. It may be doubted whether there is any authority to receive the recognizance of a witness to appear and give evidence in the contingency here provided for, after the discharge of the accused on the preliminary inquiry. The witnesses for the prosecution can be summoned to attend before the grand jury.

Prosecutor bound over may prefer an indictment]-The person bound over to prosecute, whether there has been a committal for trial or not, may prefer an indictment; Code see. 871; subject to any order made for security for costs under sec. 689 (2). The bill of indictment may be for the charge in respect of which the prosecutor is so bound over, or for any charge founded upon the facts or evidence disclosed on the depositions taken before the justice; Code sec. 871. The indictment may contain more than one count, for sec. 871 contemplates a possible motion on behalf of the accused to quash " any count in the indictment " on the ground that it is not founded on the facts or evidence disclosed on the depositions taken before the justice; sec. 871, sub-secs. (2) and (3). The private prosecutor who has given a recognizance to prosecute, may apply for leave to prefer an indictment; Code sec. 873 (2); and as such leave may be granted to any person whether bound over or not, and whether or not there has been a preliminary enquiry, the granting of such leave, endorsed upon the bill of indictment itself, obviates many questions which otherwise might be raised as to the regularity of the recognizance to prosecute, or as to the conformity of the indictment with the offences disclosed on the depositions or set forth in the prosecutor's recognizance.

Prosecutor bound over may be ordered to pay costs on failure of prosecution.—Security for costs may be ordered as condition for leave to prefer indictment.

689. If the prosecutor so bound over at his own request does not prefer and prosecute such an indictment, or if the grand jury does not find a true bill, or if the accused is not convicted upon the indictment so preferred, the prosecutor shall, if the court so direct, pay to the accused person his costs, including the costs of his appearance on the preliminary inquiry.

2. The court before which the indictment is to be tried or a judge thereof may in its or his discretion order that the prosecutor shall not be permitted to prefer any such indictment until he has given security for such costs to the satisfaction of such court or judge.

of Commissioner of the Dominion Police has, as such, no legal capacity to represent and act on behalf of the Crown, and in laying an information in which he designated himself as such Commissioner of the Dominion Police he acted as a private individual and not as the legal representative of the Crown, although he declared that he was acting as such commissioner "on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen." R. v. St. Louis (1897), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 141 (Que.).

The accused having been discharged, and the commissioner having bound himself by recognizance to prefer and prosecute an indictment on the charge contained in his information, and the grand jury having thrown out the bill of indictment, the commissioner was held to be personally liable for the costs incurred by the accused on the preliminary inquiry and before the trial court. Ibid.

An order made by the presiding judge of a criminal superior court awarding costs against the private prosecutor in respect of an indictment for assault on which the grand jury found no bill, is not subject to review by or appeal to the court en banc. R. v. Mosher (1899), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 312: 32 N.S.R. 139.

Where the application for such an order has been made on the last day of the term of the criminal court and judgment reserved thereon the order may be legally made out of term nunc pro tunc as of the date of application, the delay in such case being the act of the court and not being due to the neglect or fault of the applicant. Ibid.

The application for security may be made at the time when the prosecutor moves for leave to go before the grand jury, where the local practice requires an order for leave; or in case the prosecutor has irregularly gone before the grand jury without an order for leave, the court may afterwards order the security to be given in like manner as if the prosecutor had proceeded regularly, and on security being given may refuse to quash the indictment already found by the grand jury. R. v. Hoo Yoke, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 14 Que. K.B. 540.

Taxation of costs]-See sees. 1045, 1047; and Crown Bules, under see. 576.

Committal of accused for trial.-Form of warrant.

690. If a justice holding a preliminary inquiry thinks that the evidence is sufficient to put the accused on his trial, he shall commit him for trial by a warrant of commitment, which may be in form 22, or to the like effect.

Origin]—Sec. 596, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 73; 32-33 Viet., Can., ch. 30, sec. 56; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 23.

Sufficiency of evidence to put accused on his trial]-Saunders' "Practice of Magistrate Courts," 5th ed., 231, says: "Justices in the performance of this portion of their duties will not balance the evidence and decide according as it preponderates, for this would, in fact, be taking upon themselves the functions of jury and be trying the case; but they will ask themselves whether or not the evidence as it stands makes out a strong or probable, or even conflicting case of guilt, in any of which cases they will do right in committing the party to trial. If, however, from the weakness of the evidence, the unworthiness of the witnesses or the conclusive proof of innocence produced on the part of the prisoner they feel that the case is not sustained, and that if they committed for trial a verdict of acquittal must be the necessary consequence, they will at once discharge the accused and so put an end to the enquiry so far as they are themselves concerned."

See also sec. 687; R. v. Howard (1913) 5 W.W.R. 838 (Man.).

The magistrate has only to find evidence of a probable case of guilt to justify a committal for trial, and has not to deal with the preponderance of testimony. R. v. Odell, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 39 (Que.).

Sec. 690 should be read along with sec. 696, both having originated from the same sec. (56) of the Indictable Offences Act, 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 56. Under that Act, if, in the opinion of the justice and justices the evidence was sufficient to put the accused party upon his trial for an indictable offence, although it did not raise such a strong presumption of guilt as would induce them to "commit the accused for trial without bail," or if the offence with which the party is accused was misdemeanour, then the justices were to admit the party to bail, but if the offence were a felony, and the evidence given was such as to raise a strong presumption of guilt, then the justice or justices were by his or their warrant to commit him to the common gaol, to be there safely kept until delivered by due course of law.

Depositions taken before another magistrate at one stage of preliminary inquiry]—Depositions taken before one magistrate should not be considered by another magistrate sufficient evidence to commit a prisoner upon, without having seen the demeanour of the witnesses when they were giving their evidence, and so being in a position to judge for himself of the truth of their statements. Re Guerin, 16 Cox C.C. 596.

Form of warrant of commitment]-Code form 22, following sec. 1152.

Magistrate not bound to accept defendant's consent to committal on partial hearing]—A Superior Court will not interfere with the magistrate's discretion as to adjourning the inquiry when the discretion is exercised in good faith and he must be allowed a reasonable length of time after the close of the evidence to reach a decision. Re Ying Foy, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 14, 14 B.C.R. 254.

It is the duty of the magistrate to take the evidence of all concerned, and a Superior Court will not on the application of the accused order the magistrate by mandamus to forthwith commit for trial, instead of adjourning for further evidence, although a prima facie case is admitted by the accused and commitals had been made by the same magistrate of others charged with the same offence on similar evidence. Re Ying Foy, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 14, 14 B.C.R. 254.

In Re Schofield and Toronto, (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 93, a motion for leave to prefer an indictment against a municipality for maintaining a nuisance, Meredith, C.J.C.P., said: "It is plain that the policy of the criminal law is to require a somewhat thorough preliminary investigation of every indictable offence. That is very apparent from many of the provisions of the Criminal Code. And the purposes of it are obvious. For one thing, it lays the facts in a proper manner before this court so that they can be in a proper manner laid before the grand jury. It has been the practice in some cases not to make such an investigation, but to do what has been called 'waive examination.' I find no warrant for any practice of that character: it seems to me to be quite improper. What the law requires is a preliminary investigation : and it is only upon the facts thus brought out that ordinarily an indictment can be laid. The Code provides that there may be an indictment for the offence for which the accused has been committed for trial; and that there may be an indictment for any other offence founded on the facts disclosed in the preliminary inquiry. The policy of the law plainly is, that cases should pass through an inquiry of that sort before being presented to the grand jury. It is true that power is given to the Attorney-General, and to the judges, to permit an indictment in cases which have not come up in that manner; but I cannot think that that power was intended to be exercised in any but unusual cases. It is necessary sometimes where magistrates have not done their full duty, not made that inquiry into the case which the law required : and there are other cases in which it is plain that, if there were no provision of that character, there might be delay in the administration of criminal justice, if not eventually a miscarriage."

Inspection and obtaining copy of depositions]-See sees. 894, 896.

Review of commitment on habeas corpus]—The court has jurisdiction upon habeas corpus to examine into the legality of a commitment for trial made by a justice upon a criminal charge, and in a proper case to order the discharge of the accused. R. v. Mosier, 4 P.R. 64 (Ont.); R. v. Hicks, (1912) 2 W.W.R. 1100; 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 192; R. v. Gillespie, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 551; R. v. Cox, 16 Ont. R. 228; R. v. Weiss and Williams, (No. 1) 6 Alta. L.R. 264, 4 W.W.R. 1358, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 438, 25 W.L.R. 286; R. v. Weiss and Williams (No. 2), 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 42, 6 Alta. L.R. 264, 25 W.L.R. 351, 5 W.W.R. 48 and 460; ex parte Garland, 35 N.B.R. 509.

Defects in the commitment may be cured by the depositions returned with it on a habeas corpus motion. R. v. Phillips, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 89; R. v. Beaudoin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 319; R. v. Brown, [1895] 1 Q.B. 119.

The fact that the magistrate proceeded with the hearing of the evidence on preliminary enquiries for two offences at the same time, against the same accused, is not a ground for habeas corpus in respect of his committal for trial. Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.R. 57.

The omission of the justice of the peace on a preliminary examination to put the usual question inviting a statement by the accused under sec. 684, after the depositions of the Crown witnesses have been read over, does not invalidate a commitment for trial. R. v. Lantz, 47 N.S.R. 495, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 212.

Power to remand on habcas corpus where proceedings in excess of justice's jurisdiction are set aside]—See Code see. 1120; R. v. Frejd, 18 Can. Cr. Cas 110, 22 O.L.R. 566; R. v. Manzi (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 359, 8 O.W.N. 533; R. v. Goldsberry, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 159; Morgan v. Malepart, 20 Rev. Leg. 277, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 192.

Territorial jurisdiction over offence or over the person]—If the accused was not resident in the district in which the preliminary enquiry was held but was brought there to answer a charge for an offence laid as having been committed there, and was committed on that charge, the committal does not aid the jurisdiction of a local court to try him without his consent, if it turns out that the alleged offence was in all other respects outside of the territorial jurisdiction, and consequently the committal should not have been made on the facts as they later developed. R. v. O'Gorman, 18 O.L.R. 427, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173; Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que. K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; Code sees. 577, 580, 582.

If there is a total absence of jurisdiction upon the face of the proceedings, the right to prohibition is not lost by acquiescence down to the time of application for the writ. Farquharson v. Morgan [1894] 1 Q.B. 592, 63 L.J.Q.B. 474; Clarke v. Knowles (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 189. There may also be cases in which a person has by virtue of certain formalities of law chosen his forum and acquired the privilege of a particular mode of trial; but this privilege may be waived and another forum selected with the consent of the Crown or prosecutor as the case may be. Giroux v. The King (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258, affirming Giroux v. The King (1916) 26 Que, K.B. 323.

And the election of speedy trial upon a charge framed as within the jurisdiction is not a selection of the forum for trial of a charge of the like offence which otherwise would not be within the territorial jurisdiction of the court. R. v. O'Gorman, supra.

It would seem that the fact that the charge does not contain the particulars of the offence does not withhold from the magistrate jurisdiction to go on with the preliminary investigation and commit for trial. R. v. Beaudoin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 319.

There is a distinction in this respect between those proceedings before magistrates which are essentially summary proceedings upon which the magistrates will themselves adjudicate and cases where the magistrates are merely exercising their jurisdiction with a view to sending the case for trial before a different tribunal. In the one, the magistrates straightway exercise their jurisdiction over the offence; in the other the accused is sent for trial before a different tribunal and has full and ample notice before his trial of the character of the offence with which he is charged. "When a case is sent for trial the real question to be considered is whether the evidence on the hearing of the summons covers and justifies the counts of the indictment." Lord Russell, in Reg. v. Brown, [1895] L.R. 1 Q.B. 119, at 126.

And see R. v. Phillips, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 89; Reg. v. France, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 321; R. v. Beaudoin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 319.

Attorney-General may indict regardless of commitment]—It is the privilege of the Attorney-General to be able to present directly before the grand jury an indictment against a person suspected of committing a criminal offence, without having recourse to the ordinary mode of a preliminary enquiry generally followed. R. v. Weir, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 155 (Que.). The fact that the accused was sent to the assizes pursuant to a preliminary inquiry to stand his trial according to law, does not deprive the Attorney-General of the right himself, by the agency of his representative duly authorized for the purpose, to present an indict ment before the grand jury and to entirely ignore the proceedings already taken before the magistrate. R. v. Houle, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 407 (Que.).

Saskatchewan practice on committal]—In Saskatchewan the practice with regard to eriminal charges is as follows: When any person is committed for trial, the justice of the peace before whom the preliminary inquiry is held transmits the original depositions to the elerk of the district court of the district in which the offence is alleged to have been committed. The local agent of the Attorney-General for the district then transmits a copy thereof to the department of the Attorney-General. Upon receipt of a copy of the depositions the Attorney-General either authorizes the local agent to prefer a charge, under the provisions of sub-sec. 2 of sec. 873A of the Criminal Code, or instructs him not to prefer a charge in the matter. In exercising this discretion the Attorney-General is practically performing the functions of the grand jury: see In re Criminal Code, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 549, 43 S.C.R. 434; R. v. Weiss, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 460, 7 W.W.R. 1160, 8 S.L.R. 74.

North-West Territories]—Whenever any person charged with a criminal offence is committed to gaol for trial, the person in charge of such gaol, shall, within twenty-four hours, notify the nearest stipendiary, in writing, that such prisoner is so confined, stating his name and the nature of the charge preferred against him; whereupon with as little delay as possible, the stipendiary shall cause the prisoner to be brought before him for trial, either with or without a jury, as the case requires. Accused entitled to copy of depositions.

691. Every one who has been committed for trial, whether he is bailed out or not, shall be entitled at any time before the trial to have copies of the depositions, and of his own statement, if any, from the officer who has custody thereof, on payment of a reasonable sum not exceeding five cents for each folio of one hundred words.

Vict., Can., ch. 29, sec. 48; 6-7 William IV, Imp., ch. 114, sec. 3.

Accused may obtain copy of depositions]—The object of a statutory provision giving prisoners the right to a copy of the depositions is to enable them to know what they have to answer on their trial, and the magistrate should therefore take down all that took place before him with respect to the charge. R. v. Grady (1836), 7 C. & P. 650; R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 718.

Officer having custody of depositions]—See sec. 695. Right to inspect depositions at trial]—See sec. 894.

Recognizances to prosecute or give evidence.—Contents.—Forms.— Recognizance or deposit.

692. When any one is committed for trial the justice holding the preliminary inquiry may bind over to prosecute some person willing to be so bound, and bind over every witness whose deposition has been taken, and whose evidence in his opinion is material, to give evidence at the court before which the accused is to be indicted.

2. Every recognizance so entered into shall specify the name and surname of the person entering into it, his occupation or profession, if any, the place of his residence and the name and number. if any, of any street in which it may be, and whether he is owner or tenant thereof or a lodger therein.

3. Such recognizance may be either at the foot of the deposition or separate therefrom, and may be in form 23, 24 or 25, or to the like effect, and shall be acknowledged by the person entering into the same, and be subscribed by the justice or one of the justices before whom it is acknowledged.

4. Every such recognizance shall bind the person entering into it to prosecute or give evidence (both or either as the case may be), before the court by which the accused shall be tried.

5. If it is made to appear to the justice that any person to be so bound over as a witness is without means or without sufficient means, or if other reasons therefor satisfactory to him are shown, the justice may require that a surety or sureties be procured and produced and join in the recognizance, or that a sum of money be deposited with the justice, sufficient in his opinion to ensure the appearance of such person at the trial and the giving of his evidence.

Warrant for arrest of absconding witness.—Committal to give evidence.—Copy of information.

693. Whenever any person is bound by recognizance to give evidence before a justice, or any criminal court, in respect of any offence under this Act, any justice, if he sees fit, upon information being made in writing and on oath, that such person is about to abscond, or has absconded, may issue his warrant for the arrest of such person.

2. If such person is arrested, any justice, upon being satisfied that the ends of justice would otherwise be defeated, may commit such person to prison until the time at which he is bound by such recognizance to give evidence, unless in the meantime he produces sufficient sureties.

[§ 693] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIV)

3. Any person so arrested shall be entitled on demand to receive a copy of the information upon which the warrant for his arrest was issued.

Origin]-Sec. 598, Code of 1892; 48-49 Vict., Can., ch. 7, sec. 9.

Witness refusing to be bound over,-Discharge of witness.

694. Any witness who refuses to enter into or acknowledge any such recognizance as aforesaid may be committed by the justice holding the inquiry by a warrant in form 26, or to the like effect, to the prison for the place where the trial is to be had, there to be kept until after the trial, or until the witness enters into such recognizance as aforesaid before a justice having jurisdiction in the place where the prison is situated.

2. If the accused is afterwards discharged any justice having such jurisdiction may order any such witness to be discharged by an order which may be in form 27, or to the like effect.

Origin]—Sec. 599, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 78, 79. Form of commitment of a witness for refusing to enter into the recognizance1—Code form 26, following sec. 1152.

Transmission of record to clerk of court.—To other officer when place of trial changed.

695. The information, if any, the depositions of the witnesses, the exhibits thereto, the statement of the accused, and all recognizances entered into, and also any depositions taken before a coroner if any such have been sent to the justice, shall as soon as may be after the committal of the accused, be transmitted to the clerk or other proper officer of the court by which the accused is to be tried.

2. When any order changing the place of trial is made the person obtaining it shall serve it, or an office copy of it, upon the person then in possession of the said documents, who shall thereupon transmit them and the indictment, if found, to the officer of the court before which the trial is to take place.

Origin]-Sec. 600, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 77. After the committal of the accused]-Sec. 691 uses the words "committed for trial whether he is bailed out or not"; and reading secs. 691 and 695 together as dealing with the one subject, it seems that sec. 695 should be interpreted as including the limited form of committal under bail fixed by the justice for which see, 696 provides. See as to speedy trials, see, 825 as amended, 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 45, and 8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9.

It was, however, held, prior to these amendments, that where the accused is admitted to bail under Crim. Code 696 without being committed for trial under sec. 690, the depositions need not be transmitted by the justice, under sec. 695, to the officer of the court in which an indictment is to be preferred. R. v. James Gibson (1896), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 451, 29 N.S.R. 4.

Second preliminary enquiry]—A person discharged by a justice on a preliminary enquiry for an indictable offence may be summoned again before the same or another justice on a fresh information for the same offence; and it is said that if the accused is committed for trial on the second preliminary enquiry, the depositions on the first, when he was discharged, need not be transmitted to the trial court under Code sec. 695. R. v. Hannay, 11 Can Cr. Cas. 23, 2 W.L.R. 543.

Nothing is admissible as a deposition against the prisoner, unless the prisoner had an opportunity of cross-examining the person mak ing the deposition. Per Lord Denman, C.J., R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621. But where a witness has undergone several examinations, it seems proper to return them all, although those only would be admissible in evidence against the prisoner which were taken in his presence. Thus where a witness for the prosecution had made three statements at three different examinations, all of which were taken down by the magistrate, but the only deposition returned was the last taken after the prisoner was apprehended, and on the day he was committed; Alder son, B., said, that every one of the depositions ought to have been returned, as it is of the last importance that the judge should have every deposition, that has been made, that he may see whether or not the witnesses have at different times varied their statements, and if they have, to what extent they have done so. Magistrates ought to return to the judge all the depositions that have been made at all the examinations that have taken place respecting the offence which is to be the subject of a trial; R. v. Simon, 6 C. & P. 540, and whether for the prosecution or on the part of the prisoner. Per Vaughan, J., R. v. Fuller, 7 C. & P. 269. Roscoe's Crim. Evid., 11th ed., 69.

Saskatchewan practice]—In Saskatchewan the practice with respect to criminal charges is as follows: When any person is committed for trial, the justice of the peace before whom the preliminary enquiry was held transmits the original depositions to the clerk of the district court of the district in which the offence is alleged to have been committed. The district local agent of the Attorney-General then transmits a copy to the Attorney-General's Department. Upon receipt of the copy, the Attorney-General decides whether a charge should be preferred or not, and instructs his local agent accordingly. R. v. Weiss (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1160 (Sask.); Code sec. 873a.

Rule as to bail.—When two justices may admit to bail.—When one justice may admit.—Committal on default.—Form of recognizance of bail.

696. When any person appears before any justice charged with an indictable offence punishable by imprisonment for more than five years, other than treason or an offence punishable with death or an offence under any of the secs., 76 to 86 inclusive, and the evidence adduced is, in the opinion of such justice, sufficient to put the accused on his trial, but does not furnish such a strong presumption of guilt as to warrant his committal for trial, the justice, jointly with some other justice, may admit the accused to bail upon his procuring and producing such surety or sureties as, in the opinion of the two justices, will be sufficient to ensure his appearance at the time and place when and where he ought to be tried for the offence; and thereupon the two justices shall take the recognizances of the accused and his sureties, conditioned for his appearance at the time and place of trial, and that he will then surrender and take his trial and not depart the court without leave.

2. In any case in which the offence committed or suspected to have been committed is an offence punishable by imprisonment for a term less than five years any one justice before whom the accused appears may admit to bail in manner aforesaid, and such justice or justices may, in his or their discretion, require such bail to justify upon oath before him or them as to their sufficiency.

3. In default of such person procuring sufficient bail, such justice or justices may commit him to prison, there to be kept until delivered according to law.

4. The recognizance mentioned in this section shall be in form 28.

Origin]—Code of 1892, sec. 601; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 81; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, sec. 52.

Justices' jurisdiction to take bail on sending case for trial]—Sec. 606 of the Code is the only section conferring upon a justice of the peace any power to bail at the end of a preliminary hearing. The authority conferred by this section only applies, however, to the case of an offence other than a treasonable one or an offence punishable with death. Rape is an offence punishable with death, and justices of the peace on sending a case up for trial for that offence cannot grant bail to the accused. Re Hopfe's bail, 4 W.W.R 1. 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 116 (Alta.).

While the preliminary enquiry remained incomplete and up to the point of decision thereon, the justice who for the time being was seized of the inquiry might admit to bail. Before the final order the justice must be one who would have jurisdiction to proceed with the preliminary inquiry if he chose so to do, although on the particular occasion he may be in attendance as a substitute magistrate acting by arrangement with the magistrate who usually hears the evidence. While the Code is not explicit on the point, it would seem that a substitute magistrate acting at the request of and in the absence of a magistrate having an otherwise exclusive jurisdiction, may attend at the gaol or police station and take bail, although nothing more is done than to fix the time for appearance. The police magistrate or justice who issued the warrant, or before whom the accused is to be brought on his arrest, may, if he chooses, hear a bail application and take bail for the appearance of the accused immediately after the arrest and before any witnesses are in attendance. The Crown prosecutor will usually be consulted before granting bail, but the justice is to exercise his own judgment, he being the public functionary responsible for the granting or refusing of bail pending the inquiry. The taking of bail is generally considered to be a part of the "inquiry" under sec. 668, and wide powers of control of the "inquiry" are conferred by sec. 679.

On a remand of the accused for further hearing in the preliminary inquiry for an indictable offence, bail is expressly authorized under sec. 681 and Code form 18, or the defendant's own recognizance may be taken without surcties. Code sec. 681. But even then, the prohibition of sec. 699 applies so that bail caunot be granted by a justice on a remand for any of the more serious treasonable offences or for an offence punishable with death. No person "accused" of those offences is to be bailed except by order of a superior court. [§ 696]

In exceptional cases a superior court will interfere on habeas corpus to grant bail pending the inquiry if the magistrate declines to grant bail; R. v. Vincent (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 5 O.W.N. 141; R. v. Hall, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 492; but will not usually do so before some depositions have been taken if the charge is a serious one. R. v. Cox (1888) 16 Ont. R. 228. Br

Sec. 696 applies only to the justice's powers in the particular events of which it treats. The order for bail must be made concurrently with the order sending the case up for trial and not after a committal to gaol for trial by a warrant of commitment in form 22. Code secs. 690, 698, 700-702. Furthermore, the case must be one for a non-capital indictable offence, and such offence must be one for which there is a maximum penalty provided by law either of five years' imprisonment or less than five years' imprisonment. Sub-sec. (2) uses the phrase " punishable by imprisonment for a term less than five years" as the antithesis of the phrase contained in the first paragraph, "an indictable offence punishable by imprisonment for more than five years." The context seems to compel the interpretation of the phrase "punishable by imprisonment for a term less than five years" as referring to the maximum and not to the minimum which the law provides. There is another class of cases not within either of these descriptions, and that comprises certain common law offences for which the Code has provided no penalty, and in respect to which the common law punishment of imprisonment applies without any express limit to the term of imprisonment. R. v. Cole, 3 O.L.R. 389, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 330, 1 O.W.R. 117. So it was held that one justice had a common law power to admit to bail on sending the case up for trial where the offence was one at common law not provided for by the Code. R. v. Cole, supra; and see R. v. Walkem, 14 B.C.R. 7, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 122, 128.

Imprisonment without hard labour is a common law punishment for misdemeanours, and the common law provides no limit to the term of imprisonment. Castro v. The Queen, 5 Q.B.D. 490, 509; 1 Stephen, Hist. Crim. Law, 490.

While the Criminal Code covers nearly all offences which are commonly prosecuted, there are undoubtedly cases of a class the prosecution and punishment of which is left to the common law, the Code not having abrogated the common law. Union Colliery Co. v. The Queen, 31 S.C.R. 81, 87; Brousseau v. The King, 56 S.C.R. 22; R. v. Cole, 3 O.L.R. 389, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 330. Amongst these are certain classes of conspiracy indictable at common law, but not being a conspiracy to defraud or to commit an indictable offence or other conspiracy specially dealt with by the Code. Bail in such common law conspiracies would follow the rule laid down in R. v. Cole, supra, conspiracy being a common law misdemeanour.

The incitement to commit a felony, although no felony is actually committed, is in itself a common law misdemeanour, now held to be included as a substantive offence under Code see. 69, sub-sec. (d).

Brousseau v. The King (1917) 56 S.C.R. 22, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 207. And there is a suggestion in the Brousseau case that a charge against a person in an official position for corruptly using the power of his position by asking for a bribe might be supported as an indictable misdemeanour at common law. Brousseau v. The King, 56 S.C.R. 22, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 207, 208.

If the case is one coming under Part XVI (summary trials) and a tribunal is constituted for such trial, and the defendant has consented to such trial in cases where such consent is essential, different considerations will apply on the question of bail.

Bail by magistrate holding summary trial for indictable offence]— On the accused being arraigned for summary trial under sec. 778 and a plea of not guilty entered, the magistrate has the jurisdiction to admit to bail which attaches at common law to a trial tribunal. If the offence would before the Code have been classed as a common law misdemeanour, the accused would be entitled to bail at common law. R. v. Spilsbury [1898] 2 Q.B. 615; R. v. Badger, 12 L.J.M.C. 66, 4 Q.B. 468; re Frost. 4 Times L.R. 757; R. v. Bennett, 34 J.P. 701; R. v. Atkins, 49 L.T.N. 421; Linford v. Fitzrov, 18 L.J.M.C. 108, 13 Q.B. 240.

The magistrate's duty in taking bail is a judicial one, and malice must be proved in a civil action against him for neglect of that duty. Linford v. Fitzroy, supra; Conroy v. McKenney, 11 U.C.Q.B. 439 (Ont.); McKinley v. Munsie, 15 U.C.C.P. 236.

Form of recognizance of bail]—Code form 28, following sec. 1152. Estreat of bail]—See sees. 1088 et seq.

Bail to sessions court]-Code sec. 697.

Place of residence of sureties to be stated in the recognizance]—Code sec. 825, sub-sec. (8).

Notice to sureties on election of speedy trial]—Code see. 825, sub-see. (8).

Render by sureties]—Code sec. 825, sub-sec. (4); 1088, 1090-1093. Requiring additional sureties at the trial]—Code sec. 1092.

Sub-sec. (3)—Committal in default of finding sureties]—The sureties may be found later, and the accused will then be entitled to take advantage of the order for bail. R. v. Gibson, 29 N.S.R. 4; ex parte Blossom, 10 L.C. Jur. 29, 68.

Bail after committal for trial]—Where the accused has been "finally committed" (Code sec. 698) by a warrant of commitment under form 22 (see Code sec. 690), he may move for an order for bail to the judge of a superior court or county court (Code secs. 698, 700), but a county court judge is not to be applied to in capital offences or in case of the treasonable offences specified in sec. 699. An alternative procedure is to apply for a writ of habeas corpus to the superior court having habeas corpus jurisdiction, with a view to being bailed on the return of the writ. R. v. Barthelemy, 1 E. & B. 8, 1 Dears, 60. The more convenient process is that of a summary application under Code sec. 700, upon which the like order may be made as could be made on habeas corpus. Code sec. 701.

Procedure as to bail after committal]-See secs. 698-702.

Speedy trial without a jury]—Whether the order sending the case for trial is made under sec. 696 or under 690, the accused may elect a "speedy trial" without a jury under sec. 825, subject to the limitations of that section; but he must notify the sheriff to that effect. Code sec. 825 (6); R. v. Daigle (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 92 (Que.).

The recognizance of bail and the depositions and information go before the county court judge's criminal court on an election of speedy trial in such case, without any formal certificate from the magistrate being required. R. v. Daigle, supra.

Appearance at court of sessions of the peace.

697. Where the offence is one triable by the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace and the justice is of opinion that it may better or more conveniently be so tried, the condition of the recognizance may be for the appearance of the accused at the next sittings of that court notwithstanding that a sitting of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction capable of trying the offence intervenes.

Origin]-Sec. 601, Code of 1892; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; R.S.C., ch. 174, sec. 81.

Recognizance to sessions instead of superior court]—Sec. 697 leaves a wide discretion to the justice, enabling him to make the recognizance to a court of sessions. It should not be applied to deprive the accused of the privilege of trial at the first available court without a good reason, such as the impossibility of the parties being ready for trial at the first court.

"Superior court of criminal jurisdiction"]-See definition in sec. 2, sub-see, (35).

Ball after committal.—Order for by superior or county court.— Justices taking recognizance to attach court order for ball to their warrant of deliverance.—Warrant of deliverance.— Form.

698. In case of any offence other than treason or an offence punishable with death, or an offence under any of the secs. 76 to 86 inclusive, where the accused has been finally committed as herein provided, any judge of any superior or county court, having jurisdiction in the district or county within the limits of which the accused is confined, may, in his discretion, on application made to him for that purpose, order the accused to be admitted to bail on entering into a recognizance with sufficient sureties before two justices, in such amount as the judge directs, and thereupon the justices shall issue a warrant of deliverance as hereinafter provided, and shall attach thereto the order of the judge directing the admitting the accused to bail.

2. Such warrant of deliverance shall be in form 29.

Notice to committing justice of bail application to judge]—See sees. 700-702.

Notice to Attorney-General's Department]—The safer course is to notify also the Attorney-General or his representative. The rules of court of the particular province, made under the authority of sec. 576, may make this obligatory.

Transmission of papers on motion for bail]-Code sec. 700.

County court judge]—A county court judge may not, however, grant bail for a capital offence such as murder or rape, nor for treason or the treasonable offences specified in secs. 76 to 86 inclusive. See sec. 699.

Form of warrant of deliverance on bail being given for a prisoner already committed]—Code form 29, following sec. 1152.

Bail only by a superior court for treason, etc., or capital offence.

699. No judge of a county court or justices shall admit any person to bail accused of treason or an offence punishable with death, or an offence under any of the sees., 76 to 86 inclusive, nor shall any such person be admitted to bail, except by order of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction for the province in which the accused stands committed, or of one of the judges thereof, or, in the province of Quebec, by order of a judge of the Court of King's Bench or Superior Court.

Province in which the accused stands committed]—See note to see. 700.

Certain treasonable offences bailable only by superior court]—Sees. 76-86 inclusive, to which reference is made in see. 699, refer to offences specially relating to the Government, including treasonable offences, conspiracy to intimidate a legislature, mutiny, desertion from His Majesty's service, spying and disclosure of official secrets.

Ball after committal.—Notice to justice.—Record to be transmitted. —Penalty for neglect.

700. When any person has been committed for trial by any justice, the prisoner, his counsel, solicitor or agent may notify the committing justice that he will, as soon as counsel can be heard, move before a superior court of the province in which such person stands committed, or one of the judges thereof, or the judge of the county court, if it is intended to apply to such judge, under sec. 698, for an order to the justice to admit such prisoner to bail.

2. Such committing justice shall, as soon as may be, after being so notified, transmit to the clerk of the Crown, or the chief clerk of the court, or the clerk of the county court, or other proper officer, as the case may be, endorsed under his hand and seal, a certified copy of all informations, examinations and other evidence touching the offence wherewith the prisoner has been charged, together with a copy of the warrant of commitment, and the packet containing the same shall be handed to the person applying therefor for transmission, and it shall be certified on the outside thereof to contain the information concerning the case in question.

3. If any justice neglects to comply with the foregoing provisions of this section, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, the court, to whose officer any such information, examination, other evidence, or warrant of commitment ought to have been delivered, shall, upon examination and proof of the offence in a summary manner, impose such fine upon such justice as the court thinks fit.

Origin]--Sec. 604, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 93, 94, 95. Bail after committal to gaol outside of district]--Where owing to the lack of a gaol in the district in which a prisoner has been committed for trial there is no place where prisoners who are committed for safe keeping to await their trial can be confined and they are sent to a provincial gaol outside of the district of the district court judge where the committal took place, it is to be assumed that such confinement is a confinement within such district so as to enable such district court judge to make an order for bail under Code sec. 698. R. v. Greig (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 30 W.L. R. 286 (Sask.).

Indemnity of bail is illegal]—The weight of English authority now affirms the doctrine that where bail is given on an agreement of third parties to indemnify the bail, such agreement of indemnity is illegal. R. v. Porter [1910] 1 K⁻¹ 36' overruling R. v. Broome, 18 L.T. (O.S.) 19, and R. v. Stockwell, 66 J.P. 376.

The parties to such an indemnity agreement are guilty of a criminal conspiracy although they did not know they were doing an illegal act.

R. v. Porter, supra. Contracts to indemnify bail are contrary to public policy and are not enforceable. R. v. Porter [1910] 1 K.B. 369.

Grounds for granting bail)—Reference is to be had to the following considerations:—1. The nature of the accusation: R. v. Baronet, 1 E. & B. 1; R. v. Butler, 14 Cox's C.C. 530. 2. The nature of the evidence in support of the accusation: Re Robinson, 23 L.J.Q.B. 286; R. v. McCormack, 17 Ir. C.L.R. 411. 3. The severity of the punishment which conviction will entail: R. v. Gottfriedson, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 239; Re Robinson, supra. The character or behaviour of the accused is said to be irrelevant. 4. Whether the sureties are independent or are illegally indemnified by the accused; R. v. Butler, 8 L.R. Irish 39, 14 Cox C.C. 530; Herman v. Jeuchner, 15 Q.B.D. 561; R. v. Porter [1910] 1 K.B. 369; R. v. Greig, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 356 (Sask.).

The propriety of admitting to bail for indictable offences which were formerly classed as felonies should be determined with reference to the accused person's opportunities for escape, and to the probability of his appearing for trial. R. v. Fortier, 13 Que, K.B. 251, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 191; ex parte Maguire, 7 L.C.R. 59 (Que.); R. v. McNamara, 18 B.C.R. 125. To determine this point it is proper to consider the nature of the offence charged and its punishment, the strength of the evidence against the accused, his character, means and standing. Where a serious doubt exists as to his guilt the application for bail should be granted. If, on the evidence, it stands indifferent whether he is guilty or innocent, the rule generally is to admit him to bail; but if his guilt is beyond disputting the general rule is not to grant the application for bail unless the opportunities to escape do not appear to be possible and it is consequently almost certain that he will appear for trial. R. v. Fortier, supra.

The fact that the application for bail is not opposed either by the Attorney-General or the private prosecutor may also be taken into account by the court or judge. R. v. Fortier, 13 Que. K.B. 251, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 191.

Where there is danger that accused persons, committed for trial, may purposely allow their bail to be forfeited with the view of avoiding scandal, the court, on an application to admit them to bail, should require the bail to be of a substantial amount. R. v. Stewart (1900), 6 Man. R. 257, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 131.

Where a prisoner committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter would ordinarily be admitted to bail, bail will not be refused because the Crown prosecutor swears to a belief that he can prove the offence to have been murder. R. v. Spicer (1901), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 229.

It is for the court to exercise a sound discretion, and if satisfied that not withstanding the ordering of bail the prisoners are, in view of all the circumstances, likely to be fortheoming at the proper time to answer the charge, bail may be ordered. R. v. Keeler (1877), 7 P.R. 117, 120 (Ont.); R. v. Wood, 9 Ir, L.R. 71; R. v. Gallagher, 7 Ir. C.L. 19; R. v. McCartie, 11 Ir. C.L. 188.

If the offence be not very serious and the depositions disclose no more than slender grounds of suspieion, bail may be allowed. R. v. Jones, 4 U.C.R. (O.S.) 18 (Ont.).

The court should not, on an application for bail, weigh and decide the question of credibility of witnesses. R. v. Keeler (1877), 7 P.R. 117, 123 (Ont.).

Bail not usual in murder cases]-In cases of murder, and the more so after a preliminary investigation by a judicial officer, an investigation which ought to be thorough, and at which the accused person has the right to give any such relevant evidence as he chooses, and after a commitment for trial as the result of that investigation-and still more so in cases in which a true bill has been found also-the rule is that the accused person should not be admitted to bail, the temptation to escape from a trial in such a case being too great to leave much, if any, great hope that bail to any amount would overcome it. But there well may be some exceptions to that rule, including the statutory one contained in the Habeas Corpus Act. See Regina v. Bowen (1840), 9 C. & P. 509; R. v. Rae (1914), 32 O.L.R. 89, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 266; 31 Car. II, ch. 2, sec. 6; R. v. Gentile (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 342 (B.C.); re Bartlemey, 1 E. & B. S; R. v. Guttredge, 9 C. & P. 228; R. v. Greenaere, 8 C. & P. 594; R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558; ex parte Corriveau, 6 L.C.R. 249 (Que.); R. v. Keeler, 7 P.R. 117 (Ont.); R. v. Murphy, 2 N.S.R. 158; R. v. Mullady, 4 P.R. 314 (Ont.); R. v. Coady, Morris' Newfoundland Decisions 58; McCraw v. The King (1907) 16 Que. K.B. 505, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 337; R. v. Fitzgerald, 3 U.C.R. (O.S.) 300 (Ont.); R. v. Higgins, 4 U.C.R. (O.S.) 83 (Ont.); R. v. Blythe (1909) 19 O.L.R. 386; R. v. Monvoison, 20 Man. R. 568; ex parte Huot, 8 Que. L.R. 28; ex parte Maguire, 7 L.C.R. 59 (Que.).

Under the Habeas Corpus Aet, 31 Car. II, ch. 2, sec. 7, the Crown is not obliged to proceed with the trial at the first assize after the commitment. If the prisoner held for a felony petitions in open court at the first sittings to have his trial proceeded with, the Crown must indict him at that sittings or he will be admitted to bail. But the duty of the Crown is said to be fulfilled if the case is traversed to the next sittings of over and terminer, and the Crown must then be ready to proceed with the trial at that the second sittings of a competent court following the commitment. R. v. Keeler, 7 P.R. 117 (Ont.); R. v. Bowen, 9 C. & P. 509; R. v. Mullady, 4 P.R. 314 (Ont.); R. v. Rae (1914), 32 O.L.R. 89, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 266.

Practice on bail orders]—The order for bail should not leave the question of the sufficiency of the surctice solely to the Crown officer without reserving the determination of their sufficiency to the judge himself, or to a justice of the peace, in case of disagreement on that question. R. v. Greig (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 30 W.L.R. 286 (Sask.).

If an order has been made by a county judge for bail, but because of some irregularity in the warrant of deliverance the accused was rearrested, the judge may make another order de novo, even if he could not amend the first order. R. v. Greig (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 30 W.L.R. 286 (Sask.).

The form of order may be that, upon the defendant entering into a recognizance before the committing justice of the peace, the defendant himself in an amount fixed, and two sufficient surveites in amounts also fixed, to the satisfaction of the justice, the defendant be admitted to bail to appear for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction to answer the charge stated in the warrant of commitment or any other charge which may then be preferred against him in respect of the depositions on the preliminary enquiry.

An order for bail on an appeal by reserved case may fix the amount of bail and delegate to a justice of the peace the ascertainment of the sufficiency of the surveites and the taking of the recognizance itself. R. v. Johnston, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 296.

Even after conviction affirmed by the Court of Appeal, bail may be granted pending a further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada if such further appeal lies. R. v. Brunet (1917) 27 Que, K.B. 224.

It has been held that a superior court has jurisdiction to rescind an order made for bail on proof being made that fictitious bail had been put in. R. v. Mason, 5 P.R. 125 (Ont.).

Order upon application for bail.

701. Upon application for bail as aforesaid to any such court or judge the same order concerning the prisoner being bailed or continued in custody, shall be made as if the prisoner was brought up upon a habeas corpus.

Origin]—See. 604, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 93, 94, 95. Bail on habeas corpus where warrant of arrest is from another province]—On habeas corpus the Supreme Court of Alberta has jurisdiction to admit to bail one arrested on a criminal charge laid in another province, though the arrest be legal, and to make the condition of the recognizance that the prisoner shall surrender himself to the proper officer in the province in which the charge is pending against him, the superior courts of the several provinces being, in criminal matters, auxiliary to each other. Definitions.

705. In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires,-

- (a) 'territorial division' means district, county, union of counties, township, city, town, parish or other judicial division or place:
- (b) 'the court' in the sections of this Part relating to justices stating or signing cases means and includes any superior court of criminal jurisdiction for the province in which the proceedings in respect of which the case is sought to be stated are carried on ;
- (c) 'district' or 'county' includes any territorial or judicial division or place in and for which there is such judge, justice, justice's court, officer or prison as is mentioned in the context:
- (d) 'common gaol' or 'prison' for the purpose of this Part means any place other than a penitentiary in which persons charged with offences are usually kept and detained in custody:
- (e) 'clerk of the peace' includes the proper officer of the court having jurisdiction in appeal under this Part and, in the province of Saskatchewan or Alberta and in the Northwest Territories, means the clerk of the Supreme Court of the judicial district withir which conviction under this Part takes place or an order is made.

Origin]—Sees. 839 and 900, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 2: R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 102.

Sub-sec. (b)--" The court"; "superior court of criminal jurisdiction"]--Code sec. 2, sub-sec. (35). "Summary Convictions Act"]-A reference in any statute of Canada to the "Summary Convictions Act" is to be construed as a reference to Part XV of the Code. See R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 29.

"Magistrate"]—In every Act of the Parliament of Canada in which the word "magistrate" is used, it means a justice of the peace, unless the context otherwise requires. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 34, sub-sec. (15). But it has a special meaning under the Summary Trials clauses (Part XVI); Code sec. 771.

Paragraph (c)—" District " or " county "]—In conjunction with subsec. (c) supra, may be read the definition in sec. 2 (10).

Yukon Territory]—As to gaols and lockups in the Yukon, see the Yukon Act, B.S.C., eh. 63, sees. 84 and 88.

Prohibition against summary conviction proceedings—Question of jurisdiction]—Prohibition will not lie unless there is a lack of jurisdiction in the judicial officer or court dealing with the proceedings sought to be prohibited. R. v. Phillips, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 89, 11 O.L.R. 478.

It is undoubted law that the rule for jurisdiction is that nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of a superior court but that which specially appears to be so, and on the contrary, nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior court but that which is so expressly alleged: Peacock v. Bell (1667) 1 Wms. Saund. 73, approved of in Gosset v. Howard (1846) 10 Q.B. 411, at pp. 453-4; Camosun Co. v. Garetson (1914) 7 W.W.R. 219 (B.C.); R. v. Taylor (1913) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 26 W.L.R. 652, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234; Falkingham v. Victorian Ry. Comrs., [1900] A.C. 452.

Where the defect of jurisdiction is clear on the face of the proceedings, there is a right to prohibition. R. v. Jack, (1915) 49 N.S.R. 238, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 385; Farquharson v. Morgan [1894] 1 Q.B. 552, 63 L.J.Q.B. 474; Clarke v. Knowles, 87 L.J.K.B. 189.

It is quite proper to prohibit an appeal or other proceeding of an inferior court where the applicant establishes a defect of jurisdiction. The course open to a defendant where the court is without jurisdiction is two-fold. He may, on that ground apply to this court for a prohibition before the case comes on in the inferior court, or he may go before the inferior court either actively or by awaiting its decisions. The rule is clearly laid down in Mayor of London v. Cox, L.R. 2 H.L. 239, that where want of jurisdiction is apparent upon the face of the proceedings. prohibition goes at any time after service of the process, i.e., as soon as the jurisdiction of the inferior court is asserted. It does not matter what the originating proceeding is; as soon as it is filed the proceedings are begun, and if the want of jurisdiction appears on the face of them, any person may apply to restrain the court from further proceeding. Re Buchanan (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 199, at 204, 26 W.L.R. 447; Brazill v. Johns, 24 Ont. R. 209; re Holman and Rea, 4 O.W.N. 434, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, 23 O.W.R. 428; R. v. Sparks (1913) 23 W.L.R. 613, 18 B.C.R.

116, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 184; R. v. Speed, 20 Man. R. 33; 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 24.

Forcing on a trial almost immediately after the service of the summons in a summary matter before a justice despite an application by defendant for an adjournment may be a ground for prohibition where the proceeding was contrary to natural justice. R. v. Eli, 10 Ont. R. 727; and see Trimble v. Miller, 22 Ont. R. 500; Goold v. Hope, 20 A.R. 347; R. v. Smith, L.R. 10, Q.B. 604; Martin v. Mackonachie, 3 Q.B.D. 739. And so may be the adjournment of the hearing for longer than the statutory period. Donohue v. Recorder's Court of Quebec City, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 182.

If there were a gross abuse of the authority of a magistrate by compelling the attendance of the accused at a place extraordinarily far from his home and the place where the offence was alleged to have been committed and where all the witnesses resided, while a competent and impartial justice was available near the place of the alleged offence, a superior court would have power to intervene and prevent the abuse of the process of the inferior court on the ground that the defendant was prejudiced in his right to make his "full answer and defence." R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178, at 1180 (Alta.); Code sec. 715. That ground goes to the jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Tally, supra; R. v. Farrell, 15 O.L.R. 100.

When an irregular adjournment of the hearing of a complaint under the Summary Convictions clauses of the Code is made, the jurisdiction of the magistrate is ousted, he becomes functus officio, and prohibition will lie to restrain him from dealing further with the case. Pare v. The Recorder of Montreal, 27 Que. S.C. 424, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 295.

Prohibition lies against the exercise of judicial acts without jurisdiction. R. v. Coursey, 27 Ont. R. 181; Re Cummings and Carleton, 26 Ont. R. 1; Re Chapman and London, 19 Ont. R. 33; R. v. Davison [1913] 2 Irish R. 342; ex parte Demmings, 37 N.B.R. 586; Kearney v. Desnoyers, 10 Que. K.B. 436.

Where the jurisdiction of magistrates is purely statutory, it is open to collateral attack by evidence dehors the proceedings, whether or not such proceedings purport to show jurisdiction. Rex v. Taylor, (1913) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652. Per Beck, J.

Prohibition may be granted to a court of sessions in respect of its assumption of jurisdiction to set aside a summary conviction in an appeal to it which had not been perfected by proof of statutory requisites. Re Meyers and Wonnacott, 23 U.C.Q.B. 611.

Prohibition will be granted against a magistrate who proceeds to try a charge in respect of which he has no jurisdiction; R. v. Eaton, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 252, 31 Ont. R. 276; or from enforcing a summary conviction where the justice was disqualified by interest through membership in an association which would benefit by the fines. Daigneault v. Emeron, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 534, 20 Que. S.C. 310.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

Although the authority of county justices of the peace is confined to the limits of the county for which they are named, it does not necessarily extend to all places within the county, if there be any district therein which possesses a separate and exclusive jurisdiction; and if concurrent jurisdiction is to be exercised by the county justices in such separate jurisdiction the commission should so state in express words such as the phrase "as well within liberties as without." R. v. Cody, (1914) 48 N.S.R. 255, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 18 D.L.R. 773. Paley on Convictions, 7th ed., 34.

A justice of the peace is sufficiently designated as such in the record of proceedings if he is designated therein as stipendiary magistrate for the county and, as such, is an ex-officio justice of the peace by virtue of a provincial statute; Ex parte Seriesky, 41 N.B.R. 475, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 140, 12 E.L.R. 387; but aliter if a justice described himself as a justice of the peace in a non-existent district. Zimmerman v. Burwash, 29 Que. S.C. 250.

A justice for a judicial district is sufficiently described as the justice for the county, the limits of which are the same as the judicial district. Sorgius v. Bouchard, 26 Que. K.B. 242; appeal quashed. Sorgius v. Bouchard, 55 S.C.B. 324.

Prohibition has been granted to restrain a county court from an illegal assumption of certiorari jurisdiction over a summary conviction. R. v. O'Neil, 20 N.S.R. 530.

Prohibition will not lie to correct an illegal or wrong judgment, nor if the defect can be remedied in due course of law. Elliott v. Biette, 21 O.R. 596; Regina v. Murdock, 27 A.R. 443.

It is not a means of appeal but applies only to keep the inferior court within its jurisdictional limits. Hudson's Bay Co. v. Joanette, 23 Can. S.C.R. 415; Bar of Montreal v. Honan, 8 Que, Q.B. 26; Beaupré v. Desnoyers, 11 Que, S.C. 541; R. v. Cunerty, 26 Ont. R. 51.

Where the want of jurisdiction does not appear on the face of the proceedings, but is dependent upon some circumstance which was not brought to the justice's notice, the applicant's failure in the latter respect may be a ground for refusing him a writ of prohibition. Sherwood v. Cline, 17 Ont. R. 30; Broad v. Perkins, 21 Q.B.D. 533. Reasons which merely show that the petitioner for a writ of prohibition may have a good ground of defence to the charge made against him in the proceedings before the magistrate, are insufficient to justify the issue of a writ of prohibition. Beaudry v. Lafontaine, 17 Que. S.C. 396. The magistrate cannot give himself jurisdiction by misconstruing a statute, but otherwise an erroneous interpretation he places upon it is not reviewable by prohibition. Long Point Co. v. Anderson, 18 A.R. (Ont.), 401; Re Dyer and Evans, 30 Ont. R. 637; re McLeod and Amiro; 27 O.L.R. 232, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 230; re Sigurdson, (1915) 25 Man. R. 832, 9 W.W.R. 940.

Effect of other adequate remedy]--Where the objection to the jurisdiction appears upon the face of the proceedings, prohibition lies even after judgment although there is an alternative remedy by motion to set aside the judgment. Camosun v. Garetson (1914) 7 W.W.R. 219, . (B.C.); Farquaharson v. Morgan [1894] 1 Q.B. 552; Thompson v. Hay, 20 A.R 379 (Ont.).

In a proper case and for a proper excess of jurisdiction the Superior Court of Quebee may, in virtue of articles 50 and 1003 of the Code of Civil Procedure, issue a writ of prohibition. But, as article 50, C.P. (Que.), says, this control must be exercised in the manner and form provided by law. It does not mean that the Superior Court of Quebee which is a civil tribunal without criminal jurisdiction, has a right by its writ of prohibition to displace, or interfere in a criminal case with the procedure or remedies provided for the case by the Federal Legislature, which has exclusive jurisdiction in criminal law and procedure. R. v. Amyot, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 232 (Que.).

In Audet & Doyon, 10 Que. L.R. 21, McCord, J., delivering the judgment of the majority of the court, said:--" Prohibition is an extraordinary remedy and should not be employed where the party has a complete remedy in some other and more ordinary form." And see Laliberté & Fortin, 2 Que Q.B. 573; Breton v. Landry, 13 Que. S.C. 31.

Prohibition will not be granted while an appeal from the decision attacked is pending. Re Rochon, 31 Ont. R. 122.

Prohibition will not lie to determine the status of a dc facto judicial officer, but proceedings may be taken in quo warranto. Ex parte Gaynor & Greene, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 240.

Prohibition is not to issue to an officer of the court applied to, for his official acts may be controlled by court order. Re Crouse, (1913) 47 N.S.R. 64, 12 E.L.R. 416, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 231.

It is not the proper procedure by which to raise the question of the validity of the service of a warrant on a Sunday. Re McGillivray, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 113.

An information for assault was laid before S., justice of the peace for A. county. After summons issued an order nisi of prohibition was served on him at the instance of the defendant and no further proceedings were taken before him. B., another justice for the county, having been requested by S. to hear the charge, took another information and issued a summons. On the return of the summons the defendant's attorney, who was clerk of the peace, advised B. that he had no jurisdiction, and B. thereupon refused to proceed. An information was then laid before R., another justice of the peace for A. county who was requested by S. to act after B. had declined to proceed. An order nisi of prohibition having been granted against R. and it appearing that the three justices had concurrent jurisdiction, it was held that as S. and B. were not bona fide proceeding in the matter, there was no ground for interfering with R. Ex parte Peek (No. 2), 39 N.B.R. 274, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 49.

No interim order in prohibition]—The court has no power, pending an application for prohibition, to make an interim order staying the proceedings in the inferior court as to which the prohibition is sought. Myron v. McCabe, 4 P.R. 171 (Ont.); re Holman and Rea (No. 2), 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, 4 O.W.N. 434, 23 O.W.R. 428.

Where prohibition will be adjourned to correct error]—Where an inferior court has made an order which is wrong, but which it may easily set right, a prohibition motion may be enlarged to give it an opportunity to correct the mistake, and, on its being corrected, the motion will be dismissed. R. v. Hamlink, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 493.

The court hearing a prohibition motion has a discretion to refuse an adjournment for the purpose of cross-examination upon an affidavit, where the adjournment would be against justice. Re Buchanan, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 200, 26 W.L.R. 447.

Rules of court governing prohibition practice]—Rules of Court passed under sec. 576 will apply to all proceedings relating to any criminal prosecution.

But it has been held in Manitoba that prohibition against a magistrate from hearing a criminal charge on the ground of his disqualification through bias, is itself a civil and not a criminal proceeding, and is subject to the practice laid down by provincial law. R. v. Suck Sin, 20 Man. R. 720, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 266.

Taking objection at hearing on ground of disqualification]—When a case is heard before a court of summary jurisdiction the defendant or his solicitor must take objection to the presence on the bench of any justice who is alleged to have an interest in the subject-matter of the case, if he is aware of the existence of such interest, before the merits of the same are gone into. R. v. Byles, 23 Cox C.C. 314, 108 L.T. 270: R. v. Biggar, ex parte McEwan, (1906) 37 N.B.R. 372; Wakefield v. West Riding Ry. 35 L.J.M.C. 69, L.R. 1 Q.B. 84; R. v. Brown, 16 Ont. R. 41. If the defendant or his solicitor, fails to take such objection and is afterwards convicted, he cannot then come to the Superior Court and obtain a writ of certiorari to quash the conviction on the ground that one of the justices had an interest in the matter which was before the court of summary jurisdiction. Rex v. Byles, Ex parte Hollidge, 23 Cox C.C. 314; 108 L.T. 270.

Disqualification of magistrate from interest bias or relationship]— Disqualification is made out if the circumstances show a reasonable apprehension that the justice may be biased. R. v. Woodroof, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 17; R. v. Huggins [1895] 1 Q.B. 563; ex parte Peek (No. 1), 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 133 (N.B.); ex parte Peek (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 51 (N.B.).

A magistrate is disqualified on the ground of bias from trying a case if he has himself prosecuted the same defendant before another magistrate for an offence of the same character, if the certiorari proceedings upon the conviction which he then obtained are still pending and undisposed of in a Superior Court. Ex parte Daigle, R. v. Charest, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 37 N.B.R. 492.

Uncontradicted affidavits filed on a motion to quash a summary conviction under a liquor law that the magistrate had stated he would convict any parties charged with selling liquor whether the evidence proved it or not, if he believed them to be guilty, shows a disqualifying bias on the part of the magistrate, and the conviction on a liquor-selling charge will be quashed. R. v. Rand (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 147, 15 D.L.R. 69, 13 E.L.R. 450 (N.S.).

Signing a petition against the granting of a liquor license to the accused, does not disqualify the magistrate from subsequently trying the accused for an offence under the liquor license law. Ex parte Van Buskirk, R. v. Davis, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 38 N.B.R. 335.

The court refused to quash a conviction on the ground of bias of the presiding justice by reason of an action pending against him where it appeared that the action was commenced and declaration and plea filed more than eight years before the conviction; that the action was by the husband (since deceased) of the accused against the justice, and arose out of a trespass committed under a search warrant issued by the justice for the examination of the husband's premises for liquor alleged to have been unlawfully stored; that no further proceedings had been taken, but it was stated in an affidavit of the accused read on the argument that it was not her husband's intention as she believed, and it was and is not her intention to allow the suit to abate. R. v. Kay; Ex parte McCleave, 38 N.B.R, 504, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 18.

The fact that the police magistrate of the city of Moneton was a member of the Board of Police Commissioners for that city as established by 7 Edw. The circumstance that in imposing a fine for a violation of the Canada Temperance Act the public fund from which the magistrate's fees are paid is thereby increased, will ordinarily be too remote an interest to disqualify him from entertaining a complaint for a violation of the Act. R. v. Holyoke, ex parte McIntyre, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 422, 13 D.L.R. 225, 13 E.L.R. 210; ex parte McCoy, 33 N.B.R. 605; ex parte Gorman, 34 N.B.R. 397, 4 Can. Cr. It has been held (but quaere) that a justice is not disqualified from trying a charge under a liquor statute in one judicial district although he is an inspector under that statute in another judicial district. Ex parte Michaud, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 569.

A justice of the peace who accepts the offices of clerk of the peace and clerk of the county court is not disqualified from trying an offence charged under the Liquor License Act on the ground that the offices are incompatible. R. v. Plant; ex parte Morneault, 37 N.B.R. 500.

The magistrate trying a case under a liquor license law was held not disqualified because of his being a ratepayer in the district. Ex parte Hebert, 4 Can. Cr. A justice of the peace is not disqualified by the fact that he and the counsel for the prosecution are partners in the business of attorneys provided they have no joint interest in the fees earned by the counsel for the prosecution or in any fees payable to the justice on the trial of the information. Neither is it a ground of disqualification that the justice was appointed and paid by the town council at whose instance the complaint was made and the prosecution carried on h salary being a fixed sum, not dependent on the amount of fines collected. R. v. Grimmer, re Macdonald (1886), 25 N.B.R. 424.

Indirect interest in prosecution; class interests]-

Every person having a personal interest in any litigation, or having a direct or indirect motive for desiring a particular decision to be come to, should abstain from putting himself in such a position as that unconsciously to himself a bias adverse to the due administration of justice might take possession of his mind. R. v. Justices of Great Yarmouth (1881), L.R. 8 Q.B.D. 525; R. v. Farrant, 20 Q.B.D. 58; R. v. Chapman (1882), 1 Ont. R. 582; R. v. Eli, 13 A.R. 526 (Ont.).

A magistrate who is engaged in the same kind of business as a trader prosecuted under a transient traders' license law is thereby disqualified from adjudicating upon the charge. R. v. Leeson (1901), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 184 (Ont.).

Defendant was convicted of a breach of a by-law in selling land by auction without license; two of the four convicting justices were licensed auctioneers for the county and persisted in sitting after objection taken on account of interest, though the case might have been disposed of by one justice. It was held that they were indirectly interested in the result of the case, in so far as it was to their interest either to limit the number of persons acting as auctioneers in the town, or to confine the business of selling lands by auction to persons holding, as they did, auctioneer's licenses, and the conviction was quashed with costs against the two justices. R. v. Chapman (1882), 1 Ont. R. 582.

The magistrate must not unite in his own person the functions of judge and prosecutor. Monson's Case, [1894] 1 Q.B. 750.

If a prosecution be brought for the benefit of a small class of privileged persons, of whom the magistrate is one, the conviction will be quashed on the ground of the pecuniary interest of the justice. R. v. Huggins, [1895] 1 Q.B. 563; Daignault v. Emerson, 20 Que. S.C. 310; R. v. Leeson, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 184. But if the ordinary members of the society or association on whose behalf the prosecution is brought have no control over or responsibility for any prosecution brought by the society, the fact that the magistrate is one of the ordinary members will not suffice to disqualify him. Allinson v. General Council, [1894] 1 Q.B. 750. So where a prosecution was brought at the instance of the Incorporated Law Society, and a conviction obtained for falsely pretending to be a solicitor, but no part of the fine was payable to the society, it was held that the fact of one of the magistrates being a member of the society furnished no reasonable ground for supposing that he was biased, nor did it constitute him a party on whose behalf the prosecution was taken or give him a pecuniary interest therein, although the society was under the liability of having an order for costs made against it. R. v. Burton, [1897] 2 Q.B. 468; R. v. Mayor of Deal, 45 L.T. 439; R. v. Handsley, 8 Q.B.D. 483.

The justice of the peace before whom the information was laid, and who issued the summons was alleged to be interested; but the hearing took place before, and the adjudication and conviction were made by another justice whose qualification was not attacked, while the defendant pleaded to the charge and raised no objection to the validity of the proceedings until the application for a certiorari; it was held that the conviction could not be impugned. (R. v. Gibbon, 6 Q.B.D. 168, distinguished); R. v. Stone (1892), 23 Out. R. 46.

When the magistrate's position would be a good ground of challenge to a juror for favour, he is disqualified to act. Ex parte Wallace, 27 N.B.R. 174; Ex parte Jones, 27 N.B.R. 552; Ex parte Hannah Gallagher (1898), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 486, 34 N.B.R. 413.

It is sufficient to show that the magistrate might have been influenced, and it need not appear that he was in fact influenced. R. v. Milledge, 4 Q.B.D. 332; R. v. Gaisford, [1892] 1 Q.B. 383; Tessier v. Desnoyers, 12 Que. S.C. 35.

A magistrate is disqualified from trying an information for an offence punishable on summary conviction where there is a bona fide action pending against him brought by the husband of the accused for alleged malicious conduct as a judicial officer and for assault. Ex parte Hannah Gallagher (1898), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 486, 34 N.B.R. 413.

If the action against the justice is not bona fide but a mere sham to attempt to disqualify him, its pendency will not operate as a disqualification. Ibid.; Ex parte Scribner, 32 N.B.R. 175.

The disgualification of a justice arising from an action pending against him ceases when he has recovered judgment, though an execution has issued which is unsatisfied. Ex parte Ryan (1894), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 485 (N.B.).

With the exception of where a magistrate acts upon view of an offence, he should not be a promoter of the prosecution, or be interested personally in the matter he is called on magisterially to investigate. It is contrary to natural justice that the judge should be interested in securing the conviction of the accused, or be influenced by any bias other than that produced by the evidence on the mind of one unpredisposed by any kind of interest to have his judgment so warped as to prevent his giving an impartial decision. If such an interest exists, the magistrate is disgualified from acting judicially, be the interest never so small. The court cannot weigh the interest or estimate its force, R. v. Sproule (1887), 14 Ont. R. 375, 381.

The mere fact of a magistrate being a druggist, and in that capacity filling medical prescriptions containing small quantities of liquor, would not constitute a disqualifying interest in a prosecution for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor. R. v. Richardson (1891), 20 Ont. R. 514.

The connection of the magistrate with a society, which supplied funds part of which were used to make the purchase upon which the prosecution of illegal sale of liquor was based, because of his being an honorary member of the society but not entitled to take any part in its affairs, is not a ground of disqualification. R. v. Herrell (1898), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 510, 12 Man. R. 15.

Where a conviction is set aside on the ground of disqualification of the magistrate costs are not generally given against him. R. v. Meyer, 1 Q.B.D. 173: but they may be if he has been guilty of some gross impropriety in the exercise of his summary jurisdiction. R. v. Goodall, L.R. 9 Q.B. 557, per Cockburn, C.J.; R. v. Klemp (1885), 10 Ont. R. 143, 158.

Mere possibility of bias not enough to disqualify]-

Though any pecuniary interest, however small, in the subject matter disqualifies a justice from acting in a judicial inquiry, the mere possibility of bias in favour of one of the parties does not ipso facto avoid the justice's decision; in order to have that effect the bias must be shown at least to be real. If a justice has such an interest as might give him a real bias in the matter, he should not only take no part in the decision, which would render it void, but should entirely withdraw during the whole case. R. v. Myers, 1 Q.B.D. 173; R. v. Rand, L.R. 1 Q.B. 230; 35 L.J.M.C. 157; R. v. Sunderland justices, [1901] 2 K.B. 357; 70 L.J.K.B. 946, 599.

If the mere fact of existing litigation is relied on as the disqualification of a presiding justice on the ground of bias, the litigation must be really pending. Service of a notice of action not followed by an action is not sufficient. Rex v. Byron, 37 N.B.R. 383; R. v. Kay; Ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 498, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 38; R. v. Batson (1906) 1 E.L.R. 364.

The court will inquire into the circumstances and ascertain whether an action brought by the applicant against the justice reasonably leads to the inference of bias. Ex parte Scribner, 32 N.B.R. 175.

Calling one of the magistrates as a witness will not alone disqualify him. R. v. Sproule, 14 Ont. R. 375.

Relationship to prosecutor may disqualify magistrate]-

The justice is disqualified if his son is the prosecutor and would be entitled in the event of a fine being imposed to a share of the fine. R. v. Longford, 15 Ont. R. 59.

It was held in Ex parte Wallace, 27 N.B.R. 174, that a justice was disqualified from hearing a case against his daughter-in-law after the death of her husband, the death of the husband not having affected the relationship between the justice and his son's widow. In Ex parte Jones, 27 N.B.R. 552, the conviction was quashed where the grandfather of the justice was a brother of the defendant's great grandfather, following the common law principle that judicial officers should not act if related within the ninth degree of consanguinity. The reason usually given for this rule is that such relationship may reasonably create a bias in favour of the party with whom the relationship exists. But Hanington, J., in Ex parte McEwan, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 97, said that perhaps that is too limited a reason.

But the magistrate is not disqualified because he and the prosecutor are married to sisters. R. v. Major, 29 N.S.R. 273.

Where one of the magistrates trying several connected charges of assault was married to a first cousin of one of the complainants, and the other complainants were acting as servants of the related complainant in the matter in which the assault arose, all the convictions were set aside on the ground of affinity. Campbell v. McIntosh (1872), 1 P.E.I. Rep. 423.

Application of Part.

Applies within authority of Parliament to all cases of summary conviction.—To all cases where an order can be made summarily.

706. Subject to any special provision otherwise enacted with respect to such offence, act or matter, this Part shall apply to,—

(b) every case in which a complaint is made to any justice in relation to any matter over which the Parliament of Canada has legislative authority, and with respect to which such justice has authority by law to make any order for the payment of money or otherwise.

Origin]-Sec. 840, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 3.

"Subject to any provision"]—Whenever by the same clause of a statute an offence is declared and a special mode of prosecution for such offence is provided, that mode is presumed to be exclusive. So a theft of growing trees of a value of less than $25 from farm woodland is not an indictable offence, but a matter of summary conviction under Code see. 374, except for a third offence, as thereby provided. R. v. Beauvais, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 494.

Legislative authority]—The procedure of Part XV will apply "subject to any special provision otherwise enacted," where the Parliament of Canada has legislative authority. So an appeal from a summary conviction under the Lord's Day Act in force in Nova Scotia prior to Confederation and remaining unrepealed is controlled by the provisions of Part XV and not by the Provincial Summary Convictions Act as the subject of Sunday Observance is a part of the criminal law. R. v. Bellefontaine, (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 140; Attorney-General v. Hamilton Ry. Co. (1903) 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 331, [1903] A.C. 524; Ouimet v. Bazin, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 458, 46 S.C.R. 502; R. v. Laity, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 417, 18 B.C.R. 443.

Sub-sec. (b)—" Authority to make any order for the payment of money or otherwise "]—The Indian Act, R.S.C., ch. 81, makes provision for the seizure of trees cut without authority on Indian lands or on a reserve. Any officer or agent acting under the superintendent general of Indian affairs may make the seizure in the name of the Crown, and the power of seizure includes the wood or other products of the trees. Any judge of any superior, county or district court, or any stipendiary magistrate, police magistrate or Indian agent, is authorized by see. 85 of that Act to try and determine such seizures in a summary way under the provisions of Part XV of the Criminal Code.

Animal Contagious Discases Act]—Offences under this statute, R.S.C., ch. 75, are by sec. 48 thereof to be prosecuted before any two justices of the peace or any magistrate having the power of two justices of the peace. This is an example under the first sub-sec. of sec. 707 of a direction by the Act or law upon which the information is framed that two justices must hear the case.

Canada Temperance Act]—See R.S.C. 1906, ch. 152; statutes 1908 Canada, ch. 71; 1910 Canada, ch. 58; 1914 Canada, ch. 53; 1916 Canada, ch. 14.

Dairy Industry Act, 1914, Can.]—Special enactments are made by this statute as to summary prosecutions for offences such as the sale of deteriorated or diluted milk to a milk bottling establishment or to manufacturers of dairy products. The same Act deals with the offences of making and selling butter substitutes, oleomargarine, butterine, etc., and of re-manufacturing butter to produce "process butter," or "renovated butter," and the sale of "skimmed milk cheese." 4-5 Geo. V, (Can.), ch. 7.

Department of Railways and Canals]—By the Department of Railways and Canals Act, R.S.C., ch. 35, sec. 29, all pecuniary penalties imposed thereunder or by any regulation made under the authority of that Act shall be recoverable with costs before any justice of the peace for the district, county, or place in which the offence was committed, under Part XV of the Criminal Code, and if sufficient distress cannot be found, and such penalty is not forthwith paid, such justice may, by warrant under his hand and seal, cause the person offending to be imprisoned for such term as such justice directs, not exceeding thirty days, unless such penalty and costs are sooner paid.

Electric Light Inspection Act]—See the special provisions regulating procedure in offences against this statute in R.S.C., ch. 88, secs. 37 and 38.

Fisheries Act, 1914, Canada]—Except in so far as in the Fisheries Act is otherwise specially provided, all penalties and forfeitures incurred under it are enforceable under Part XV of the Criminal Code.

Fish Inspection Act, Canada]—Penalties under this Act, 4-5 Geo. V, ch. 45, effective from May 1, 1915, are enforceable by sec. 29 thereof on summary conviction under Part XV of the Criminal Code.

Gold and Silver Marking Act]—Offences are punishable on summary conviction and minimum penalties provided, Can. Stat. 1913, ch. 19; Can. Stat. 1915, ch. 15; Can. Stat. 1918, ch. 23.

Immigration Act Regulations]—These regulations are enforceable by summary conviction. See Orders-in-Council of 5 May, 1913 and 10 May, 1913, printed with 1914 Canada Statutes (page 52 of Orders).

P5

Indian Reserve Regulations]—Part XV of the Criminal Code applies to proceedings for the imposition of punishment under regulations made by Indian chiefs in reference to the control of Indian reserves under sec. 98 of the Indian Act, R.S.C., ch. 81.

Inland Revenue Act]—See R.S.C. 1906, ch. 51, and amending Acts; R. v. Young [1917] 3 W.W.R. 1066, 24 B.C.R. 482.

Inspection and Sale Act, Canada]—For offences punishable on summary conviction under the Inspection and Sale Act (Can.), see R.S.C. 1906, ch. 85, and amending Act, 4-5 Geo. V, ch. 36, in force January 1, 1915. Intoxicating Liquors Act, Can.]-Offences are punishable on summary conviction. 6-7 Geo. V, Can., ch. 16, sec. 3; 7-8 Geo. V, Can., ch. 30. per

A prosecution for any offence under this Act may be brought and earried on and a conviction had in the city, town or other place from which any intoxicating liquor is unlawfully sent, shipped, taken or earried as aforesaid. 7-8 Geo. V, Can., sec. 2, adding secs. 4a, 4b, 4c and 4b to the principal Act.

Migratory Birds Convention Act]-Offences are punishable on summary conviction, Can. Stat., 1917, ch. 18, sec. 12; Convention with U.S.A., December 7, 1916, for the protection of migratory birds in Canada and the United States.

Montreal Pilots Court]—This court has the jurisdiction and powers of a stipendiary or police magistrate for offences under Part VI of the Shipping Act, R.S.C., 1906, ch. 113, punishable by summary proceedings of Part XV of the Code. See sec. 528 of the Shipping Act. Penaltics imposed under Part VI of the Shipping Act may be prosecuted summarily before a stipendiary magistrate, police magistrate or two justices of the peace, or by civil action. See sec. 560 of the Shipping Act.

North-West Territories]-Unless otherwise therein specially provided proceedings for enforcing any Territorial Ordinance to the North-West Territories by the fine, penalty or imprisonment, may be brought summarily before the justice of the peace under the provisions of Part XV of the Criminal Code.

Shipping Act]-Part XV of the Code is to apply to and govern summary proceedings under the Shipping Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 113.

Timber Culling in Ontario and Quebec]—As to summary proceedings under Part XV of the Code, see the Cullers Act, R.S.C., ch. 84, sec. 54.

Tobacco Restraint Act]—The Statute 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 73, provides for the enforcement by summary conviction of its provisions against the use of tobacco by juveniles and for the regulation of the use of automatic vending machines so that they may not be used by children under sixteen to procure tobacco products.

War Charities Act, 1917]—Summary conviction procedure applies, but proceedings, except for offences against see. 9 (protection of badges), are not to be instituted except with the consent of the Secretary of State of Canada or the Minister assigned to exercise powers under the Act.

War Ecvenue Act, 1915]—This affects the sale of drug preparations and provides for stamps being affixed to the packages, etc. 5 Geo. V, Can., ch. 8; Patenaude v. Dubé, 26 Que. K.B. 431; Minister of Inland Revenue v. Nairn, 11 O.W.N. 422, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 1; Ethier v. Minister of Inland Revenue, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 12 (Que.).

Water Meters Inspection Act]-Penalties are recoverable under this statute on summary conviction before one justice of the peace if the penalty does not exceed twenty dollars, and before two justices of the peace if the penalty does exceed twenty dollars, R.S.C., ch. 89, sec. 33.

Weights and Measures Act]-Subject to the provisions of the Weights and Measures Act, R.S.C., ch. 52, Pt. XV of the Code applies to all prosecutions for penalfies thereunder.

White Phosphorus Matches Act, Canada]—Penalties under this Act, 4-5 Geo. V (Can.), ch. 12, are recoverable on summary conviction. Sec. 5 prohibits the sale or use of matches made with white phosphorus.

Jurisdiction.

Hearing to be by one or more justices.—May be by one justice unless special Act provides otherwise.

707. Every complaint and information shall be heard, tried, determined and adjudged by one justice or two or more justices as directed by the Act or law upon which the complaint or information is framed or by any other Act or law in that behalf.

2. If there is no such direction in any Act or law then the complaint or information may be heard, tried, determined and adjudged by any one justice for the territorial division where the matter of the complaint or information arose: Provided that every one who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission of any offence punishable on summary conviction, may be proceeded against and convicted either in the territorial division or place where the principal offender may be convicted, or in that in which the offence of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring was committed.

Every complaint and information]—The words "every complaint or information" mean a complaint or information under the summary convictions clauses. B. v. Edwards (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 96, 100 (Ont.).

Mandamus to justice to hear and determine]—In cases where a magistrate has authority to hear and determine a matter, but refuses to do so to the frustration of justice, the court has jurisdiction in the exercise of its mandatory authority to direct him to hear and determine. But while the case is under consideration by him the court will not issue a mandamus to control his conduct of the case, or to prescribe to him the evidence which he shall receive or reject as the case may be. R. v. Carden (1879), 5 Q.B.D. 1, 5; R. v. Connolly (1891), 22 Ont. R. 220, 226; R. v. Case, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 204; and see Wong Tun, 10 W.W.R. 15; R. v. Fields [1917] 1 W.W.R. 149 (Alta.); Collison v. Kokatt (1915), 8 W.W.R. 561, 32 W.L.R. 245.

Where an applicant seeks, relief by way of prerogative order of mandamus the proceedings should be styled in the name of the sovereign ex relationic the applicant against the respondent; in such a case the applicant must have a legal right to the performance of some duty of a public, and not merely of a private, character, and there must be no other effective lawful method of enforcing his rights. Frankel v. Winnipeg, 3 W.W.R. 405, 23 Man. R. 296; Hutchings v. Canada National [1917] 2 W.W.R. 41; and see sec. 576 and notes to same.

"Heard, tried, determined and adjudged "]—Where two justices are required by the special Act, both must attend to give judgment; it is not enough for one to attend and read a conviction signed by both. R. v. Haines, ex parte McCorquindale (1908), 39 N.B.R. 49. But acts preliminary to the hearing and subsequent to the adjudice on may be done by one justice. Code sec. 708.

If, on the hearing, counsel for the complainant and for the accused agree that judgment may be served without fixing a date for same, other than that the decision shall be given within one week, and shall be notified to the respective solicitors, and the magistrate acquiesces in and conforms to such arrangement, he does not thereby lose jurisdiction, and a conviction made within the week should not be set aside. R. v. McKenzie, 44 N.S.R. 474, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 372.

It is not competent for magistrates, where an information charges an offence which they have no jurisdiction to try summarily, to convert the charge into one which they have jurisdiction to try summarily, and to so try it on the original information. R. v. Dungey, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 38, 2 O.L.R. 223.

"By one justice or two or more justices as directed," etc.]—Apart from any statutory provision a charge need not be laid or dealt with by the nearest justice. R. v. Tally, (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1178.

Where two justices are specified in the special Act, they may ask another or others to sit with them and take part in the trial. Such statutes are construed as providing a minimum number of justices and not as interfering with a recognized practice to call in other justices. So also where a single justice may try the case as he may where there is no direction to the contrary, it is held that he may call in other justices to sit with him and assist in the adjudication, and a conviction made and signed by them all is valid. R. v. Leconte, 11 O.L.R. 418.

When an accused person is summoned to appear before a justice of the peace having jurisdiction to conduct the proceedings, other justices of the peace are not entitled to be associated with the summoning justice, except at the latter's request. R. v. McRae (1897), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 49, 28 O.R. 569.

A summary conviction by the magistrate who summoned the accused and heard the charge will be supported, although three other magistrates attended the hearing and purported to dismiss the charge, if the latter magistrates sat without the request or consent of the summoning magistrate. R. v. McRae, supra.

Under various statutes of special application certain officials have the powers of two justices as regards prosecutions under the special statute affecting his line of duty, for instance the Indian Act.

Summary conviction before two justices of the peace, with a penalty of from $50.00 to $1,000.00, is provided under the Immigration Act, R.S.C., ch. 93, sec. 45, for false representation to induce or deter immigration into Canada.

A parish court commissioner appointed under the laws of New Brunswick with the power of two justices of the peace is authorized to try prosecutions under the Canada Temperanee Act and is a "magistrate" under sec. 131 thereof, which confers jurisdiction on magistrates having the power of two justices. Ex p. Monahan, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 53, subnom. R. v. Alexander, Ex parte Monahan, 39 N.B.R. 430.

Judicial acts of magistrate must be done within territorial jurisdiction]—A justice of the peace cannot exercise his judicial functions outside the limits of his territorial jurisdiction. R. v. Hughes, 17 N.S.R. 194.

"Territorial division where the matter of the complaint or information arose"]—These words in the second sub-sec. of sec. 707 apply to fix the venue if there is no direction to the contrary contained in the statute which declares the offence or in some other law applicable to the ease; see R. v. Dowling, 17 Ont. R. 698. An example of a more extended jurisdiction is contained in the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, R.S.C. (1906), ch. 75, under sec. 47, of which it is directed that offences against that Act or against official regulations made thereunder may be prosecuted or tried either in the place in which such offence was committed or in any place in which the person charged happens to be.

A summary conviction for an offence in the magisterial district is not supported by evidence which designates the locality of the offence by a name which applies to a section of country extending partly within the limits of the magisterial district and partly outside of such limits; it will not be presumed that the portion of the designated locality within the magistrate's jurisdiction was intended. R. v. Oberlander (1910) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 245, 15 B.C.R. 134.

The creation by statute of a new judicial district gives to the officers of the new district exclusive jurisdiction, and there is not concurrent jurisdiction remaining in judicial officers of the former territory from part of which the new district was formed. Provincial justices bound by dutics imposed by federal law]—The decision in re Vancini, 34 S.C.R. 621, must be accepted as affirming the principle that the Dominion Parliament can, in matters within its sphere, impose judicial dutics upon any subjects of the Dominion.

A federal law may confer trial jurisdiction upon justices in respect of offences under federal authority, although the justices are appointed by the province and not by the Dominion. R. v. Wipper, 34 N.S.R. 202; re Vancini, 34 S.C.R. 621.

Magistrate with power of two justices]—See Code sees. 2 (18) and 604. Sub-section (2) of sec. 18 declares that a "justice" means a justice of the peace, and also a police magistrate, a stipendiary magistrate, and any person "having the power or authority" of two or more justices of the peace. And by sec. 604 under the heading of "powers general of certain officials" (Part XII), police magistrates and district magistrates (inter alia) and every magistrate "authorized by the law of the province in which he acts to perform acts usually required to be done by two or more justices," may do alone whatever is authorized by the Code to be done by any two or more justices.

A stipendiary magistrate is none the less a justice of the pence because he receives a stipend, nor is he any the less a justice because the policy of the legislature has been to give him the powers of two justices in order to facilitate the transaction by him of the business which would otherwise fall on the other justices. R. v. McFadden (1885), 6 N.S.R. 426.

The fact that a man is a police magistrate does not debar him from calling in another justice of the peace to sit with him in a case where two justices or a magistrate with powers of two justices are required; and there is nothing to oust the general jurisdiction of justices in the fact that a stipendiary magistrate has been appointed for the district, if his authority is not specifically made exclusive. R. v. Irwin, 16 O.L.R. 454.

Where a magistrate with the powers of two justices is presiding and another justice sits with him, but withdraws from taking any part in the decision on their differing in opinion, the conviction by the stipendiary alone will be authorized if he might legally have conducted the hearing alone. R. v. Thomas, ex parte O'Hare [1914] 1 K.B. 32, 23 Cox C.C. 687.

Substitute justices empowered for emergencies]—Where justices make a summary conviction which they have jurisdiction to make only if acting at the request of the police magistrate, or in case of his absence or illness, the conviction should properly show on its face the fact on which their jurisdiction depends. R. v. Ackers (No. 3), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 222, 21 O.L.R. 187; R. v. Duering, 2 O.L.R. 593, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 135. But the defect may not be fatal. Code sees. 1120, 1124, R. v. Ackers, 21 O.L.R. 187; R. v. Tally (1915), 7 W.W.R. 1178, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449 (Alta.); R. v. McGregor, 26 Ont. R. 115, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 410; R. v. Perrin, 16 Ont. R. 446.

A deputy stipendiary in Nova Scotia appointed by a town council under R.S.N.S., ch. 71, sec. 115, has jurisdiction only in the event of the stipendiary's absence from town or of incapacity, through illness, interest, or otherwise, of the stipendiary. R. v. Morris, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

The city of Moneton Incorporation Act, 53 Vict. (N.B.), eh. 60, sec. 65, provided that a sitting magistrate may act for the police magistrate of the city of Moneton when he is temporarily absent or ill, or "is any way disqualified by being a witness, or from relationship or otherwise." It was held that a conviction by a sitting magistrate stating that he was acting for the police magistrate, "he being disqualified, and not alleging the grounds of disqualification, was sufficient on its face. R. v. Steeves; Ex parte Gallagher, 39 N.B.R. 4, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 239.

A statute authorizing another magistrate to act in the place of a police magistrate in the latter's "absence" is to be construed as conferring jurisdiction in a case in which the police magistrate was unable to preside because his attendance was required before another tribunal and asked the other magistrate to sit for him, and this notwithstanding the presence of the police magistrate in the courtroom during a part of the proceedings. Ex parte Cormier (1909) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 179 (N.B.); Brunet v. The King (1918) 57 S.C.R. 83, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16.

In Cormier's case an affidavit of the police magistrate was read, giving his reasons for being absent and saying that in consequence of his enforced absence from the court he asked the sitting magistrate to attend to the business of the court. The absence intended by the Act, 53 Vict. (N.B.), ch. 60, sec. 65, is not actual absence from the jurisdiction or even from the place of trial, but it includes inability to attend to the business of the court, through his necessary attendance at an official enquiry under a commission.

Absence may mean absence from the bench, not necessarily absence from the court or jurisdiction. Brunet v. The King, 57 S.C.R. 83; Bryne v. Arnold, 24 N.B.R. 161 at p. 164; Reg. v. Perkin, 7 Q.B. 165; and see ex parte Gallagher, 39 N.B.R. 4; Reg. v. McDonald, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 97. It is an ambiguous term; Brunet v. The King, supra; and in some cases may, and in others may not, import prior presence. Brunet v. The King, supra; Asbury v. Ellis [1893] A.C. 339, 345; Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East 192.

Where the statute confers powers on the substitute magistrate in case of the other's "absence or inability to act," the word absence should be construed as meaning something different from "inability to act"; and as connoting physical non-presence from whatever cause. Brunet v. The King, (1918) 57 S.C.R. 83. 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16, 24; see 5 Geo. V (Que.), ch. 52, see. 3, R.S. Que., art. 3262 (a).

Where a magistrate refrains from trying a case on the ground of personal objection on the part of a relative of the accused, he may be [$ 707] taken to have inferentially consented and requested the magistrate, who did actually try the case, to so do. R. v. Tally (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1178.

Magistrates appointed with exclusive jurisdiction]-The appointment of a county police magistrate does not necessarily supersede a like previous appointment of another person, but both will have jurisdiction unless the latter appointment is expressed to be in the place and stead of the former. R. v. Spellman (1906) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 99, 13 O.L.R. 43; and see R. v. Holmes, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 235, 14 O.L.R. 124; Hunt. qui tam, v. Shaver, 22 A.R. (Ont.) 202; Robertson v. Freeman, 22 U.C.Q.B. 298; Smyth v. Latham, 9 Bing. 692.

De facto justices]-A conviction made by a de facto justice of the peace who, in good faith, exercises his function, will not be set aside although he has not complied with all the formalities relative to his qualification. Hogle v. Rockwell, 20 Que. S.C. 309.

As to de facto officers generally, see O'Neil v. Attorney-General. (1896) 26 S.C.R. 122, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 303; Handfield v. College of Physicians, 45 Que. S.C. 140.

Exclusive jurisdiction of first justice taking up the case]-It is a principle of law that where magistrates duly authorized act in any matter within their jurisdiction, their doing so excludes the jurisdiction of all other justices; and the acts of other justices, except in conjunction with the first, are void. Glen on Summary Jurisdiction (6th ed., 1887), page 32.

By statute ch. 5 of 1907 (Alta.), s. 9, amending the Act respecting police magistrates and justices of the peace (Alta.), it is enacted that: "Jurisdiction in any particular case shall exclusively attach in the first justice of the peace or where more than one justice is required the first justices to the required number duly authorized who has or have possession and cognizance of the fact: Provided that at the request of any such justice or at the unanimous request of any such justices where more than one justice is required any other justice or justices may take part in any case."

S. 9, s-s. (5) of ch. 13, 1906 (Alta.), declares that "It shall not be necessary for the police magistrate or justice who acts before or after the hearing to be the police magistrate or justice or one of the justices by whom the case is to be heard and determined."

Under the Alberta statutes it has been held that where a police magistrate requests another magistrate to take an information, and intimates that he will take sole charge of the rest of the case, the acquiescence of the magistrate is equivalent to a counter request that the police magistrate will take charge of the hearing. R. v. Cruikshanks (1914), 6 W.W.R. 524, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 7 Alta, L.R. 92, 27 W.L.R. 759.

Presence of accused and jurisdiction over offence]-

In Reg. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614, 48 L.J.M.C. 151, a warrant was issued informally and without oath; the defendant having no knowledge 946 of the defect, made no objection to the hearing of the charge. After being twice argued in the court for Crown cases reserved, it was decided that where a charge is made in the presence of the accused, who is then and there called to answer it, it is immaterial, so far as the jurisdiction of the justices to hear that charge is concerned, whether the accused is before them voluntarily or otherwise, or on a legal or illegal process. Later, Lord Coleridge, C. J., in commenting on the authorities cited for the above proposition, says in Dixon v. Wells, 125 Q.B.D. 249, 255, 59 L.J.M.C. 116: "First, in all the cases to which our attention has been called, there was no protest made by the person who appeared, and the courts said, applying a well-known rule of law expounded centuries ago, that faults of procedure may generally be waived by the persons affected by them. They are mere irregularities, and if one who may insist on them waives them, submits to the judge and takes his trial, it is afterwards too late for him to question the jurisdiction which he might have questioned at the time. . . . Although the fact of his protest ought to be a complete answer to the assumed jurisdiction, I cannot disguise from myself the fact that from the language of many of the judges in Reg. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614-although perhaps not necessary for the decision of the case-and the judgments of Erle, C.J., and Blackburn, J., in Reg. v. Shaw, 34 L.J.M.C. 169, they seem to assume that if the two conditions precedent of the presence of the accused and jurisdiction over the offence were fulfilled, his protest would be of no avail. It would have been easy to say that a protest would have made a difference; but I find no such qualification in Reg. v. Hughes, although something like that is said in one of the cases."

It is pointed out in re Paul (No. 2) (1912), 2 W.W.R. 927, that the effectiveness of a protest is recognized both in Dixon v. Wells, supra, and in Pearks v. Richardson [1902] 1 K.B. 91, 71 L.J.K.B. 18.

Even if the defendant had not by entering upon a full defence waived the irregularity in the summons and his right to an adjournment (see, 724), the refusal of an adjournment would not go to the jurisdiction; R. v. Le Bell, ex parte Farris (1910), 39 N.B.R. 468, 473; unless under circumstances which made it a denial of the right to make defence and contrary to natural justice. R. v. Irwing, 18 O.L.R. 320, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489.

R. v. Hughes, supra, was applied in R. v. Hanley (1917), 41 O.L.R. 177, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 63, to a prosecution under a provincial law, it being held that it was unnecessary because of the law held down in R. v. Hughes, to consider an objection raised to a summary conviction under the Ontario Temperance Act, 6 Geo. V, Ont., ch. 50, sec. 41, on the ground of the accused having been wrongfully arrested without warrant.

Commissioners of Dominion police]—The Dominion Police Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 92, authorizes the appointment under federal authority of commissioners of police for any district territory or province, but provides that every such commissioner shall be subject, except as the Act provides otherwise, to the law of the particular province or territory respecting police magistrates and the office of justice of the peace. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 92, sec. 3. Each commissioner is to perform such duties as the Governor in Council may assign, and keep minutes of every proceeding had before him. Sec. 5.

Every such commissioner of police shall, for the purpose of carrying out the criminal laws and other laws of Canada only, have and exercise, within the limits of his jurisdiction: (a) All the powers and authority, rights and privileges by law appertaining to justices of the peace generally; (b) within any province, all the powers and authority, rights and privileges by law appertaining to police magistrates of cities in the same province; (c) in any of the territories or districts of Canada, all the powers and authority, rights and privileges by law appertaining to stipendiary magistrates in the same district or territory. R.S.C. 1906, el., 92, see, 3.

The authority so conferred has been held to be within the legislative powers of Parliament. Ex parte Le Bell, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 363, 39 N.B.R. 468; re Vancini, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 228, 34 S.C.R. 621.

Juvenile courts]—Where juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age.

Nova Scotia magistrates]—Two justices of the peace appointed for the entire county and holding a session at the police office established in an incorporated town within the county under the Towns Incorporation Act, N.S., have concurrent jurisdiction with the stipendiary magistrate of the town to try a charge of selling intoxicating liquor in contravention of the Nova Scotia Temperance Act, 1910. R. v. Coady, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 484; R. v. Giovanetti, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 157, 34 N.S.R. 505.

Ontario police magistrates]—Under the Police Magistrates Act, Ont., conferring power on the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to appoint police magistrates, the effective act of appointment is the Order-in-Council, and police magistrates so appointed have jurisdiction to act as such before their commissions are issued. R. v. Reedy, 18 O.L.R. 1, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 256. A police magistrate for a town correctly describes himself as making the conviction as police magistrate, although, in making it, he was acting in his capacity as cz-officio justice of the peace for the district or county in which the town was situate. R. v. Reedy, 18 O.L.R. 1, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 256.

A police magistrate can only sit as such within the limits of the territory for which he is appointed. When sitting elsewhere in the county, by virtue of his ex-officio status as a justice of the peace under the Police Magistrates Act (Ont.) he may exercise the powers of two or more justices of the peace, though not then sitting as police magistrate. When sitting elsewhere than in the city or town for which he is police magistrate, though not divested of his individuality as a police magistrate, and, in fact, exercising jurisdiction because he is a police magistrate, and therefore ex-officio a justice of the peace for the county his powers and jurisdiction are merely those of two or more justices of the peace; and what two or more justices of the peace are not authorized to do he may not do. If a police magistrate for a city or town were empowered to sit as and to exercise the functions and jurisdiction of a police magistrate throughout the entire county in which such city or town is situate, though his commission should purport to appoint him police magistrate for the city and town only, it would in fact make him police magistrate for the county and every part of it. This is not the effect of the statutory extension of his jurisdiction as a justice of the peace. R. v. Holmes, 14 O.L.R. 124, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 235 at 239; Regina v. Gully (1891), 21 O.R. 219; R. v. Riley, 12 P.R. 98, 104; R. v. McLean, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 323; Hunt v. Shaver, 22 A.R. 202; R. v. Duering, 2 O.L.R. 593, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 135.

Quebec magistrates]—Special powers are conferred by sec. 604 on certain judges and magistrates, including judges of the sessions courts at Montreal and Quebec, to do alone whatever is authorized by the Code to be done by any two or more justices.

In the absence of a special enactment, the Court of King's Beneh in Quebee has no concurrent jurisdiction to try offences punishable on summary conviction. R. v. Beauvais, 28 Que., S.C. 498, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 494.

Jurisdiction over corporations]—Proceedings under Part XV may be taken against a corporation. Code sec. 720A (8-9 Edw. VII, Can., eh. 9, sec. 2); Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, eh. 1; R. v. Toronto Ry. Co. (1898) 26 A.R. 491 (Ont.); R. v. Dominion Coal Co., 41 N.S.R. 149. A decision contra in ex parte Woodstock Electric Light Co., 34 N.B.R. 467, is superseded by the new sec. 720A.

One justice may do all acts before and after hearing.—Justices must be present together when acting.

708. Any one justice may receive the information or complaint, and grant a summons or warrant thereon, and issue his summons or warrant to compel the attendance of any witnesses for either party, and do all other acts and matters necessary preliminary to the hearing, even if by the statute in that behalf it is provided that the information or complaint shall be heard and determined by two or more justices.

3. It shall not be necessary for the justice who acts before or after the hearing to be the justice or one of the justices by whom the case is to be or has been heard and determined.

4. If it is required by any Act or law that an information or complaint shall be heard and determined by two or more justices, or that a conviction or order shall be made by two or more justices, such justices shall be present and acting together during the whole of the hearing and determination of the case.

Origin]-Sec. 842, Code of 1892.

"Justice"]-See definition in sec. 2 (18).

Sub-sec. 3—Jurisdiction before and after hearing]—This enactment has reference to cases in which there is both a hearing and a determination of the information or complaint; and has no reference to preliminary enquiries for indictable offences, the procedure governing which is to be found in Part XIV. Re Holman and Rea (No. 2), 27 O.L.R. 432, 23 O.W.R. 428, 4 O.W.N. 434, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 11, reversing re Holman and Rea (No. 1), 4 O.W.N. 207, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 7.

Under sub-sec (3) it is not necessary that the justice who took the information should also try the charge when the proceedings are under Part XV of the Code. The statutory form of summons is one requiring the accused to attend before the justice issuing the same "or before such other justice or justices of the peace for the same county as shall then be there." Code form 5. The other justice must, however, have the necessary jurisdiction to act in respect of the particular case, and it is not unusual to find restrictions in that respect enacted by the provincial legislature under whose authority the appointments of justices, as well as of police magistrates, are made. So where jurisdiction is by a provincial law to attach exclusively to the first justice taking cognizance of the case, but at his request another justice may take part, a implied request is sufficient. R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178 (Alta.); R. v. Cruikshanks, 6 W.W.R. 524 (Alta.); Alta, stat. 1907, ch. 5, sec. 9.

Where special Act requires two justices for trial]—When two justices are required, both justices should attend on the delivery of judgment; a conviction signed by both during the adjournment and read by one of them in the other's absence on the day to which adjournment had been made is irregular. R. v. Haines, ex parte McCorquindale, 39 N.B.R. 49, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 187. But sec. 708 enables the justice before whom the information was laid to adjourn the hearing of a summary conviction matter, although he would not alone have jurisdiction to try the ease. R. v. Miller, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 19 O.L.R. 125; R. v. Graves (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 345.

One justice may receive the information, although two required for trial under special Act]—The form of this enactment does not dispense with the necessity of both justices concurring in the direction for the issue of a summons although the signature of one justice is sufficient for the summons, if the special Act not only requires a trial before two justices, but that the information itself should be considered by two justices before issuing process thereon. R. v. Ettinger, 32 N.S.R. 176; R. v. Hennessy, ex parte Pallen (1907) 3 E.L.R. 427, overruling ex parte White, 34 N.B.R. 333.

Assault or battery.—Title to lands coming into question.—Questions of insolvency or court process involved.

709. No justice shall hear and determine any case of assault or battery, in which any question arises as to the title to any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency, or any execution under the process of any court of justice.

Origin]—Sec. 842, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 73; Offences Against the Person Act, 1861, Imp., sec. 46.

"Justice"]-See definition in sec. 2 (18).

Assault or battery]—This section is in terms limited to cases of assault or battery; but where the charge is for malicious damage to property or mischief, sees. 510-539, reference is to be had to the limitations of sec. 540 and 541 as to fair elaim of right, colour of right, and trespasses in pursuit of game.

When common assault otherwise a subject of summary conviction]—Code sees. 290, 291, 732-734.

Assault involving realty rights]—When there is a bona fide claim of right material to the decision, as the justices have no jurisdiction to determine the existence of the right, they have no jurisdiction to determine whether in the case before them there has been an excessive user of the alleged right. R. v. Cork Justices [1913] 2 Irish R. 391; R. v. Pearson, L.R. 5 Q.B. 237.

The justice's jurisdiction is ousted if, by convicting, he would be settling a disputed property right actually raised by a claim which was not a frivolous one. R. v. French [1902] 1 K.B. 637; Burton v. Hudson [1909] 2 K.B. 564; Talbot v. Dunne [1914] 2 Irish R. 125; Penwarden v. Palmer, 10 Times L.R. 362; R. v. Davidson, 45 U.C.Q.B. 91 (Ont.).

The jurisdiction of the justice is not ousted if the assault was not committed in the assertion of any title to land or in the defence of any such title. R. v. Shaw, ex parte Kane (1915), 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 156.

It is not enough that a title to or an interest in land was being asserted by the alleged assault if the title was not disputed. Lucan v.

Barrett (1918), 84 L.J.K.B. 2130, 13 L.G.R. 1361, [1915] W.N. 257 (a school expulsion ease).

Information and Complaint.

When complaint need not be in writing.-Or under oath.-Each complaint for one offence or matter only.-May be laid by agent.

710. It shall not be necessary that any complaint upon which a justice may make an order for the payment of money or otherwise shall be in writing, unless it is so required by the particular Act or law upon which such complaint is founded.

2. Every complaint upon which a justice is authorized by law to make an order, and every information for any offence or act punishable on summary conviction, may, unless it is by this Part or by some particular Act or law otherwise provided, be made or had without any oath or affirmation as to the truth thereof.

3. Every complaint shall be for one matter of complaint only, and not for two or more matters of complaint, and every information shall be for one offence only, and not for two or more offences.

4. Every complaint or information may be laid or made by the complainant or informant in person, or by his counsel or attorney or other person authorized in that behalf.

Farrar (1890), 1 Terr, L.R. 308; R. v. Mabey, (1875) 37 U.C.Q.B. 248 (Ont.); R. v. Hoggard, 30 U.C.Q.B. 152; R. v. Williams (1876), 37 U.C.Q.B. 540; Onley v. Gee, 30 L.J.M.C. 222; R. v. Hammick, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 846; R. v. Wood, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 913.

An alternative description of the identical offence will not make an information or conviction invalid. R. v. Leconte, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 41, 11 O.L.R. 408; R. v. Irwing, (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 18 O.L.R. 320.

The opinion has been expressed that a seaman's "desertion and re fusing duty" may be treated as one offence under the Canada Shipping Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 113, sec. 287, as amended by Canada statutes 1907, ch. 46. Re Dalton (1916) 26 Can, Cr. Cas. 142 (N.S.).

An information or a summary conviction is not to be held to charge two offences or to be uncertain, merely on account of its stating "the offence" to have been committed in different modes or in respect of one or other of several articles either conjunctively or disjunctively. Sec. 725; and see R. v. Brine, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 54.

But sec. 725 does not go to the extent of saying that the conviction will be good where it charges the accused with committing one or other or both of two offences which are quite separate and distinct from one another and are not merely the same offence committed in one or other of two different ways. R. v. Toy Moon (1911), 1 W.W.R. 50, 53 (Man.), per Perdue, J. A.

Intermixing of trials in summary matters]—Courts do not give any countenance to the notion that justices may mix up two or more criminal charges and convict or nequit in one of them with any reference to the facts appearing in the others. R. v. Austin, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 1 W.L.R. 571. Such a course would be contrary to law; and undoubtedly as a general rule it will be prudent and right for justices to avoid any course which reasonably bears the aspect of such a mistake. R. v. Steeves, ex parte Richard, 42 N.B.R. 596, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183. On the other hand, courts should be equally sorry to throw any doubts upon the rights of justices, in any case, for reasons of justice arising out of the circumstances of the case itself, and for its better determination to adjourn or postpone their decision; and if their discretion in this respect be honestly exercised, and not, directly or indirectly, with a view of throwing in facts or evidence which have no legitimate bearing upon [$ 710] their decision, it must not be interfered with. R. v. Steeves, ex parte Richard, supra; Reg. v. Fry (1898), 19 Cox C.C. 135, 67 L.J.Q.B. 712, per Wills, J. In R. v. Fry there were several charges against the same defendant, but the justices in adjudicating in each case applied to that case the evidence that was given with reference to it and no other. It was held the postponement by the justices of the decision in the first case, until they had disposed of the other cases, did not under the circumstances render the decision in the first case bad in law. Reg. v. Fry has been followed in ex parte Perkins (1890), 30 N.B.R. 15, and in Rex. v. Alexander, ex parte Monahan (1909), 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 53, 39 N.B.R. 430.

In Reg. v. Marsh, ex parte Tennant (1886), 25 N.B.R. 371, it was held that the onus was on the defendant to prove that the several cases were identical. Where the charges were different as to time and place, taking evidence upon another charge against the same accused, pending the adjournment of the hearing of a former charge, and after part of the evidence therein had been taken, was held not to invalidate the conviction. R. v. Bullock (1903), 8 Can. Crim. Cas. 8, 6 O.L.R. 663. See Rex. v. Sing (1902), 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 156.

Where there is any doubt or discrepancy as to what actually took place, or as to the action of the magistrate in matters of routine, the presumption that all was done rightly should prevail. Rex v. Hamlink, (1912) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 493; R. v. Strachan, 20 U.C.C.P. 182 (Ont.); R. v. Steeves, ex parte Richard, 42 N.B.R. 596, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183; Reg. v. Bolton (1841), 1 Q.B. 66.

In R. v. Reid, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, the defendant was tried before a stipendiary magistrate on two charges, one of assault and one of pointing a firearm at the complainant. Both charges were tried before any decision was given on either of them, and the magistrate then proceeded to convict defendant for the assualt and acquit him on the second charge. It was contended that this was illegal under the decision in The Queen v. McBurney (1897), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 339, and The Queen v. Burke, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 14, both of them decisions of the Supreme Court of Nova Secotia.

Following the English decisions in preference, Russell, J., held that where the offence was clearly proved and no evidence was offered in exculpation, he was not bound to hold the conviction bad on account of the irregularity in trying both cases together, simply because of the shadowy possibility that the judgment of the magistrate may have been influenced against the prisoner by his examination in his own defence on the second charge and his cross-examination by the counsel for the prosecution. Compare R. v. Fry, 19 Cox C.C. 135, and Hamilton v. Walker [1892] 2 Q.B. 25.

In R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449 (Alta.), separate charges of common assault against each of the defendants were tried together without the consent of the defendants; but the depositions showed that, had the cases been tried separately, the evidence would have been identical in each case; that the assaults, charged separately against each defendant, both took place as part of one and the same occurrence. Under these circumstances the court on certiorari held that no possible injustice could be done to either defendant, and applying the reasoning in the cases of R. v. Fry, 19 Cox C.C. 135, 62 J.P. 457, and The King v. Lapointe, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, the convictions should stand as against this objection, at all events as it did not appear that any exception was taken at the hearing to this course being taken.

As to taking exception at the trial, see R. v. Alward, 25 Ont. R. 519; R. v. Hazen, 20 A.R. 633 (Ont.); R. v. Austin, 1 W.L.R. 571.

Waiver of sworn information]—Although a sworn information is necessary to enable the justice to issue a warrant in the first instance, a defendant may so conduct himself upon the trial as to forfeit the right to insist that a certiorari shall issue to quash a summary conviction founded upon an unsworn information. R. v. McNutt, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 184 (N.S.). The question of jurisdiction, founded upon the alleged defect, must have been distinctly raised before the magistrate. Ibid.; R. v. McMillan, 2 Pugs. N.B. 112; R. v. Mason, 29 U.C.Q.B. 433; R. v. Clark, 20 Ont. R. 642.

Likewise, a defect in not stating particulars of the offence may be waived by plea made without taking exception. R. v. Ballentine (1914), 14 E.L.R. 278, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 385 (N.B.).

Joinder of defendants]—In R. v. Littlechild, L.R. 6 Q.B. 293, it was held that it was in the discretion of the justices to join all the defendants in one information for using a gun on Sunday and that each was liable for the full penalty. The justices might try the defendants together or separately and make out separate convictions. And where two persons who had used nets together were convicted in separate penalties on separate information, but the two cases were heard as one, it was held that the hearing was irregular, but not an excess of jurisdiction warranting a certiorari. R. v. Staffordshire, 23 J.P. 486; and see R. v. Hagerman, 31 Ont. R. 637; re Roske and Messenger, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 341.

Two persons separately summoned for an assault on the same person and on the same occasion, but charged at the hearing with a joint assault, may be tried together on such a charge notwithstanding that the defendants object to the two charges being taken as one. Re Brighton Stipendiary Magistrate (1893), 9 Times L.R. 522.

Information by agent of a society]—Where an information is laid in the name of an individual describing himself as the agent of a society named, the society does not thereby become a party to the proceedings. Canadian Society v. Lauzon, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 354.

Describing the offence]-The Code recognizes that popular language

The description of any offence in the words of the Act or regulation creating the offence, or any similar words, is sufficient in law, Code sec. 723 (3); compare as to indictable offences sec. 852. And the justice, if satisfied that it is necessary for a fair trial, may order that the prosecutor give further particulars. Code sec. 723 (2); compare, as to indictments, secs. 859, 860.

The nature of the crime need only be described in the words of the statute creating it, but time and place and manner are to be specified. Smith v. Moody [1903] 1 K.B. 56, 72 L.J.K.B. 43, re Effie Brady (1913) 3 W.W.R. 914, 23 W.L.R. 333, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 123 (Alta.); R. v. Leconte, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 41 (Ont.); R. v. Trainor [1916] 1 W.W.R. 415, 418 (under Code sec. 852).

There must be fair and reasonable particularity as to the nature of the offence; Smith v. Moody, supra; that is, such particulars as to the time, place and subject matter of the charge as with the statutory or other description of the offence also given, will show what the information is for. Re Effic Brady (1913), 3 W.W.R. 914, 23 W.L.R. 333, 5 Alta. L.R. 400, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 123.

Amending the information]—There is no express power to amend an information which is subject to Part XV; but after an amendment made, it may be treated as a new information. Certain defects and variances are declared by the Code not to be material; sees. 723-725; and the justice may order particulars. Sec. 723 (2). If the justice allows an amendment of a sworn information, it is a preferable practice in all cases to have the information re-sworn. But an information will not be invalidated by failure to have it re-sworn if it does not charge a new offence.

After an amendment which is of such a nature only as to give greater particularity or certainty to the charge and which does not lay a new charge as for a time and place materially different from the first or for a different kind of offence. R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178 (Alta.). And even where the amendment to the information is of a character that it should be re-sworn, a demand for re-swearing should be made at the time or it may be treated as waived. R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178 (Alta.), citing R. v. Lewis, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 499, 5 O.L.R. 509.

What defects not objectionable]-Code secs. 723-725.

Defects in information cured by the depositions]—See sees. 724 and 1124.

Certain provincial offences for which multiplicity is permitted]— As regards offences declared by provincial statutes, reference must be had to the statute itself or to the provincial law regulating summary conviction procedure for offences within provincial legislative power. Many of the provinces have summary convictions statutes which expressly make applicable the procedure of Part XV of the Criminal Code to charges laid under provincial laws except in so far as the provincial statute otherwise declares.

t be nary Where a provincial liquor law expressly provided that several charges may be included in the one information and the magistrate adjudged the accused guilty on each charge, it is not necessary that separate convictions should be drawn up, and the fines in such case may be imposed in and by the one conviction adjudging a forfeiture in respect of each offence. R. v. Whifiin, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 141, and see re Cross, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 173.

Where a summary conviction is in form for two separate offences where by statute two offences may be included, and it shows that the penalty adjudged is for both although within the legal limit for one, but one of the offences is defectively described in a manner not cured by statute, the conviction will be quashed on certiorari; it cannot be amended by striking out the offence defectively described, as the court has no power to make a fresh adjudication by apportioning the penalty which was discretionary with the magistrate. R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask. L.R. 299; R. v. Aitken, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 781, 11 Alta. L.R. 573.

Offences involving a practice or carrying on of business]—The law does not contemplate a single act as constituting the practice of a profession or trade. Apothecaries Co. v. Jones [1893] 1 Q.B. 89 at 95; R. v. Cruikshanks, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23 at 26. So in founding a charge upon two specific acts of practice at different dates upon different persons, the information might more properly have charged the defendant with practising dentistry within the period of the first and second acts, and the specific acts would have constituted the evidence of the practising. R. v. Cruikshanks, supra.

But the practice of the profession of dentistry is shown by services for only one customer on different dates, ex. gr. the taking impressions of the gums and fitting the plates for artificial teeth. R. v. Cruikshanks, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23; R. v. Raffenberg, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 297; R. v. Armstrong, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 72.

The Quebec Game Laws, by Articles 1405 and 1410, in imposing a fine upon any person found in possession of an animal or part of an animal killed during close season, does not create as separate offences the possession by such person, at the same time, of several of such animals and of their skins. Consequently the person in whose possession are found 775 skins of beavers killed during close season, is liable for one offence only and subject merely to one penalty of from $10 to $25, and a conviction against him for 775 offences and 775 penalties is void. Zimmerman v. Burwash, 29 Que. S.C. 250.

Compelling appearance.--Copy of warrant to be served.--Summons,

711. The provisions of Parts XIII and XIV relating to compelling the appearance of the accused before the justice receiving an information for an indictable offence and the provisions respecting the attendance of witnesses on a preliminary inquiry and the taking of evidence thereon, shall so far as the same are applicable, except as varied by the sections immediately following, apply to any hearing under the provisions of this Part: Provided that whenever a warrant is issued in the first instance against a person charged with an offence punishable under the provisions of this Part, the justice issuing it shall furnish a copy or copies thereof, and cause a copy to be served on the person arrested at the time of such arrest.

2. Nothing herein contained shall oblige any justice to issue any summons to procure the attendance of a person charged with an offence by information laid before such justice whenever the application for any order may, by law, be made ex parte.

Time limitation for 'summary conviction' prosecutions]-Code sec. 1142.

No warrant if summons likely to be answered]—It is well established that except in very serious cases, justices ought not to issue a warrant in the first instance for an offence punishable by summary conviction, if a summons will probably be equally effectual in securing the appearance of the accused. O'Brien v. Brabner, 49 J.P. 227, 78 L.T.N. 409.

No warrant without sworn information]-Code sec. 653, 654.

If the justice unlawfully issues a warrant of arrest without the sworn information required by law, he acts without jurisdiction and is liable in damages in an action for false arrest. McCatherin v. Jamer, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, 41 N.B.R. 367, 11 E.L.R. 527.

No warrant on mere information and belief without disclosing grounds]—If the information is one of mere information and belief that the accused has committed the offence, the magistrate may issue a summons, but not a warrant unless the grounds for the information and belief are either stated in the information or are disclosed to the justice on his further examining the informant ex parte on the application for process. Ex parte Coffon, 37 N.B.R. 122; R. v. Lizotte, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 316; R. v. Lorrimer, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 430 (N.S.); ex parte Grundy, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 65 (N.B.). It becomes the magistrate's duty so to examine the informant before issuing a warrant where the sworn information is one of mere information and belief which does not fix the informant's oath to allegations of facts and circumstances as distinguished from mere belief. to the It would seem that an information made upon information and belief need not disclose the name of the informant's informant unless the magistrate requires it. R. v. Swarts, 37 O.L.R. 103, 10 O.W.N. 231, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 90 (information for a search warrant for liquors under the Canada Temperance Act). On the application for process, whether for a summons or a warrant, in a summary matter, the justice is to satisfy himself that there is sufficient cause for issuing the process. R. v. Kay, ex parte Dolan, (1911) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.); R. v. Shaw, ex parte Kane, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 156 (N.B.); Murfina v. Sauve, (1901) 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 275 (Que.).

He may be satisfied to issue a warrant on sworn information if it sets out sufficient allegations of fact, or he may further examine the informant as to his grounds of belief, and, if still unsatisfied, he may hear ex parte under see. 655 witnesses produced by the informant to corroborate his story. R. v. Lorrimer, supra; R. v. Mitchell, (1911) 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; ex parte Arehambault, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 433 (Que.). See. 655, sub-see. (1), applies to proceedings under Part XV as well as to preliminary enquiries. See. 711; R. v. Lorrimer, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 430 (N.S.); R. v. Kay, ex parte Dolan, (1911) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.); ex parte Madden, (1908) 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 273. [Contra, see R. v. Neilson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 298 (N.S.).]

The justice is to decide as a judicial act whether he will issue a summons or a warrant. Thompson v. Desnoyers, (1899) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 68, 16 Que. S.C. 253; R. v. McGregor, 26 Ont. R. 115; R. v. Ettinger, 32 N.S.R. 176; R. v. Neilson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 298 (N.S.).

Formalities of warrant]-Code secs. 659-664; Code form 6.

Copy warrant to be served in summary matter]—Sec. 711 (2). Failure to serve at the time of arrest does not go to the jurisdiction of the justice. Ex parte Madden, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 273 (N.B.).

Executing warrant of arrest on Sunday]-See sec. 661.

Arrest to be by constable]—Code sec. 661 (2). The fact that the defendant was arrested and brought before the magistrate, who made the conviction, by a constable who was not qualified as required by a provincial law is no ground for a certiorari. The improper arrest does not go to the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate. (R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614 applied.) Ex parte Giberson, 34 N.B.R. 538, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 70; C.S.N.B., ch 99, sec. 69.

If the constable has a personal interest in the case, apart from his interest as an officer of the law, he should not be assigned to make the arrest. R. v. Belyea (1915) 43 N.B.R. 375.

According to a number of recent decisions an informant constable may execute process in his own case if he prosecutes in his official capacity and has no personal financial interest in the result other than a liability for costs and has no animosity towards the defendant. R. v. Belyea, (1915) 43 N.B.R. 375; R. v. Swarts, 37 O.L.R. 103, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 90; R. v. Lake, (1916) 38 O.L.R. 262; ex parte Dewar (1909) 15 Can. Cr. Summons to be signed by justice]—The summons is to be signed by the justice; Code form 5; but not in blank. Code sec. 658 (3). The defendant is not legally eited to appear when served with an unsigned summons. Lamontagne v. Lanctot, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 449. But this, as well as other defects, may be waived by appearance and plea. R. v. Kay, ex parte Dolan, 41 N.B.R. 95, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171; R. v. Thomp son, [1909] 2 K.B. 614; Dixon v. Summons to be directed to the accused]—Code sec. 658; Code form 5, following sec. 1152. Although applied to for a summons only the justice is to satisfy himself that there is sufficient cause for his interference by summons. R. v. Kay, ex parte Dolan, (1911) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.). He may be satisfied to issue a summons upon an unsworn complaint or may insist upon a sworn information, and if the information does not contain absolute and positive statements leading to the offencsuch as he should credit for the purpose of issuing a mere summons, he may examine other witnesses ex parte as to the complaint. Ex parte 'Madden, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 273 (N.B.); R. v. Kay, ex parte Dolan, (1911) 41 N.B.R. 95, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171.

If satisfied to issue a summons without hearing other evidence than that of the informant, or without more than the information as the basis, the justice is not compelled by sec. 655 (1) to give a preliminary hearing of other witnesses for the complainant on the application for process. R. v. Mitchell, (1911) 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; ex parte Archambault, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 433 (Que.); ex parte Madden, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 273 (N.B.).

Summons to be served by constable or other peace officer]—Code sec. 658 (4). Irregularity in the service being made by a person not authorized by law, may be waived. Ex parte Giberson, 34 N.B.R. 538. It is good service if made by a constable holding over after the expiration of his term and until the appointment of his successor, if he is recognized as a de facto constable. R. v. Pelley, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 405 (N.S.).

Proof of service by oath or affidavit before a justice]—Code sec. 658 (5). The affidavit or oath of service is to be sworn before the justice, not before a commissioner to take affidavits in the provincial Supreme Court. R. v. Pelley, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 405 (N.S.).

A justice has no jurisdiction to hear a complaint ex parte unless there is evidence before him to show that the defendant was served with the summons a reasonable time before the return. Sec. 718. A summons issued at ten o'clock in the morning, returnable the same day at one, does not allow the defendant a reasonable time to appear and defend, and a conviction and default of appearance founded on such a proceeding should be quashed on certiorari. R. v. Wathen; Ex parte Vanbuskirk, 38 N.B.R. 529, per Hanington, J.

Substitutional service of summons]-The magistrate acquires no iurisdiction over the person of the defendant while he is out of the province, and a conviction made on service of the summons upon his wife at his last place of abode in the province (sec. 658), will be removed by certiorari and quashed on an affidavit made by the defendant that from a date prior to the laving of the information until after the hearing he had been continuously out of the province. Ex parte Donovan (1894), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 286, 32 N.B.R. 374; R. v. Dimond, 9 Sask. L.R. 106, 33 W.L.R. 803, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 107; Ex parte Fleming, 14 C.L.T. 106; R. v. Webb [1896] 1 Q.B. 487; R. v. Farmer, 61 L.J.M.C. 55. Where substitutional service is relied on, there must be proof that the person served for the defendant was an inmate of the defendant's last or most usual place of abode, and that such person was apparently of the age of sixteen years or upwards, and service on a hotel clerk at the hotel of which the defendant was the proprietor and in which the proprietor usually resided was held insufficient without proof that the hotel clerk made the hotel his place of residence. Ex parte Wallace, 19 C.L.T. 406. But service on a person proved to be of the required age and to be resident at the defendant's house, is sufficient to justify proceeding ex parte only if the justice is satisfied that the summons came to defendant's notice. R. v. Smith, L.R. 10 Q.B. 604.

If the summons is not served personally the nature of it must be explained to the person with whom it is left. R. v. Smith, (1875) L.R. 10 Q.B. 604. It must also be shown by affidavit or oral testimony that the defendant could not be conveniently met with, so as to effect personal service. R. v. Carrigan, 17 C.L.T. 224.

The jurisdiction of the magistrate to proceed ex parte only attaches on proof that the summons was duly served and the court has power to enquire into the validity of the service, and will grant a certiorari if it be shown that the service was invalid. Reg. v. Farmer, [1892] 1 Q.B. 637. 61 L.J.M.C. 55; R. v. Franey, (1909) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 441, 44 N.S.R. 163.

The proof of substitutional service of a summons returnable on the following day should show the hour and place of service, for without any evidence of the distance the accused would have to travel to answer the summons and of the time when service was made giving such short notice, the justice would have no evidence on which he could adjudicate upon the question of reasonable notice which necessarily arises in case of default of appearance, i.e., whether the summons was duly served a 'reasonable time before the time appointed for appearance' (sec. 718). Re O'Brien, 10 Can. Substitutional service is to be made at the last or most usual 'place of abode' of the defendant. Sec. 658 (4). This does not include an office address, but means place of residence. R. v. Lilley, (1910) 75 J.P. 95; R. v. Bhodes, (1915) 79 J.P. 527.

As to proceeding ex parte in default of appearance, see see. 718. Summons to corporation]—Code sec. 720A.

Defects in summons or warrant cured]-Code sec. 724.

Attendance of witnesses; compulsory process]-Code secs. 671-678, 713.

Witnesses on appeal from justice's decision]—Under the provisions of sees. 676 and 711 of the Code, it is competent for a judge to make an order for the issue of a subpena to witnesses in another province to compel their attendance upon an appeal under sees. 749, 752, to the General Sessions from the decision of the justice. Reg. v. Gillespie, 16 P.R. 155 (Ont.).

The taking of evidence]—Code secs. 682, 721. The magistrate's elerk may take down the depositions in longhand without being sworn. R. v. McKinley, [1917] 2 W.W.R 1069, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 294 (Alta.).

The accused may waive the taking down in writing of the evidence given against him. R. v. Poirier; Re Janeau, 31 Que. S.C. 67; same case sub nom. R. v. Janeau, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 360; but otherwise the omission of the magistrate to have the evidence taken in writing is fatal to the conviction. R. v. McGregor, 11 B.C.R. 350, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 313.

In all cases before the recorder of the City of Montreal other than eivil actions the provisions of the Criminal Code apply generally and the evidence must be taken down in writing. Lacroix v. Weir, 8 Que. P.R. 186, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 297.

Stenographer taking down the depositions]—Some courts declare that failure to swear the stenographer (sec. 683) is fatal to a summary conviction depending on depositions certified by the stenographer. R. v. Johnson, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1045 (Man.).

If the justice does not take down the depositions in longhand, he may appoint and swear in a stenographer for the purpose of taking the depositions in shorthand. Sec. 683. If there is a duly sworn official court stenographer attached to the tribunal exercising the powers of a justice under Part XV, he will not have to be specially sworn to truly and faithfully report the evidence. Sec. 683.

Where the provisions of the Criminal Code as to taking down the depositions have not been complied with in a summary matter and the record, as returned by the justice to a certiorari shows that the socalled depositions were merely the summary afterwards prepared by the magistrate, the decision of the magistrate cannot stand. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719, 726 (Alta.). "It might even on appeal seriously prejudice a defendant's rights if he was unable in any way to refer to the previous evidence." Dierks v. Altermatt, supra, per Stuart, J.

Sub-sec. (2)—Ex parte orders]—Sub-sec. (2) relates to summary orders as distinguished from summary convictions; compare sec. 731 as to service of orders of justices. If the special Act authorizes the making of a summary order of a particular kind, either on summons or ex parte, the justice may either grant or refuse it ex parte, or may issue a summons if he so chooses.

Finding surveys to keep the peace]—The procedure of Part XV is applicable also to proceedings under Code see, 748 (2) on complaint of threats and reasonable ground of fearing personal injury. Sec. 748 (3).

the the 712. The provisions of sec. 662 relating to the endorsement of warrants shall apply to the case of any warrant issued under the provisions of this Part against the accused, whether before or after conviction, and whether for the apprehension or imprisonment of any such person.

Origin]—Sec. 844, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 45, sec. 4; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 22.

Endorsement of warrants of arrest]—The endorsement should recite proof of the signature of the issuing justice. Reid v. Maybee, 31 U.C.C.P 384.

Endorsement of warrants of commitment]—The omission to endorse a warrant of commitment under sec. 739, will not be effective for the prisoner's release on habcas corpus if a valid commitment is returned in answer to the writ. R. v. Whiteside, (1904) 4 O.W.R. 113, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 478; Southwick v. Hare, 24 Ont. R. 528.

Summons for witness out of jurisdiction.—Summons and warrant served by peace officer.

713. A summons may be issued to procure the attendance, on the hearing of any charge under the provisions of this Part of a witness who resides out of the jurisdiction of the justice before whom such charge is to be heard.

2. Every such summons and every warrant issued to procure the attendance of a witness, whether in consequence of refusal by such witness to appear in obedience to a summons or otherwise, may be respectively served and executed by the constable or other peace officer to whom the same is delivered or by any other person, as well beyond as within the territorial division of the justice who issued the same.

Origin]-Sec. 848, Code of 1892, 51 Vict., Can., ch. 45, secs. 1, 3.

Subpana to witness in another magisterial jurisdiction]-Sec. 713 makes special provision for a summons to a witness out of the magisterial jurisdiction. Sec. 671, which by sec. 711 is to be applied to summary proceedings "so far as applicable," enacts that if it appears to the justice that any person being or residing within the province is likely to give material evidence either for the prosecution or for the accused on such inquiry he may issue a summons under his hand, requiring such person to appear before him at a time and place mentioned therein to give evidence respecting the charge, and to bring with him any documents in his possession or under his control relating thereto. Code sec. 671; Code form 11. The special provisions of sec. 676 would apply under see. 711 to witnesses living in Canada, but outside of the province where the proceedings are being taken, unless sec. 713 is to be construed as applying throughout Canada and not merely in the same province. It is suggested that sec. 713 is limited to the province; and that it is necessary to obtain a judge's order under sec. 676 for a subpæna to witness in another province if his attendance is required at a hearing under Part XV.

Trial.

714. The room or place in which the justice sits to hear and try any complaint or information shall be deemed an open and public court, to which the public generally may have access so far as the same can conveniently contain them.

Origin]-Sec. 849, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 33.

Place of hearing deemed an open and public court]—Notwithstanding the declaration of sec. 714, the acts of the magistrate are not acts of a "court," the section being directed to the publicity of the proceedings rather than their legal effect. See R. v. Walker, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 179 (Que.).

Exclusion of public in certain cases]-Code sec. 645.

Exclusion of public in cases under Juvenile Delinquents Act]—See 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 40, sec. 10.

Trials may be held on holidays other than Sundays]—Amongst other days specially named, Easter Monday is to be held a legal holiday in the interpretation of Dominion laws; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 34 (11).

but that does not prevent a trial and summary conviction on that day under a Dominion statute. Ex parte Cormier, R. v. Kay, (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 339, 38 N.B.R. 231.

Trials not to be held on Sundays]-Sunday is not a dies non for all purposes pertaining to legal proceedings; Child v. Edwards, [1909] 2 K.B. 753; but trials and other judicial acts, as distinguished from ministerial acts, were not permitted on Sunday unless expressly authorized by statute. See Code sec. 961, validating verdicts on indictments. Except as varied by statute, ministerial acts done on Sunday come within the restrictions applied by the Sunday law of 29 Car. II, ch. 7, sec. 6, (1677) in provinces where it is still operative under R.S.C. 1906, ch. 153, see. 16. Subject to the operation of any Sunday law, acts which were ministerial and not judicial, in legal proceedings might legally be done on a Sunday. R. v. Winsor, (1866) L.R. 1 Q.B. 289. 10 Cox C.C. 276. Sec. 661 (in Part XIII), declares that every warrant "authorized by this Act" may be issued and executed on a Sunday or statutory holiday. Code sec. 661, sub-sec. (3). This probably includes warrants of commitment in summary matters as well as other classes of warrants; but see contra, R. v. Frecker, (1897) 33 C.L.J. 248 (N.B.); and the decision in R. v. Myers, 1 Term. R. 265, under the Sunday Observance Act of 1677, would, in that case, be superseded by Code sec. 661.

Preserving order during proceedings before a justice]-Justices of the peace as such have no power to commit for contempt. Ex parte Hyndman, 50 J.P. 151, 2 Times L.R. 345. But a justice may order that a person disturbing the proceedings in his court, and refusing to desist, be removed from the court. Clissold v. Machell, 26 U.C.Q.B. 422; R. v. Brompton, [1893] 2 Q.B. 195; R. v. Lefroy, L.R. 8 Q.B. 134; Young v. Saylor, 20 A.R. 645 (Ont.); Armour v. Boswell, 6 U.C.R. (O.S.) 153, 352, 450 (Ont.). As to finding sureties for keeping the peace, if the interruption is a breach of the peace, see R. v. Lee, 12 Mod. R. 514. By sec. 604 certain officials are given the powers of two justices, and by sec. 607 some of these including all police magistrates, district magistrates and stipendiary magistrates, have conferred upon them such and like powers and authority to preserve order in "courts" held by them during the holding thereof in like manner as a judge of any court in Canada. But sec. 607 may not apply to a session by a police magistrate, etc., while exercising the powers of a justice under Part XV, or even while exercising the powers of two justices under Part XV where two justices are by a special Act required to adjudicate upon a summary conviction matter.

Ontario]—A justice of the peace has the right, unless another suitable place is provided by the municipality, to use the town hall of any municipality which has no police magistrate for the hearing of cases brought before him, but not so as to interfere with its ordinary use. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 87, sec. 19.

Counsel for parties.

715. The person against whom the complaint is made or information laid shall be admitted to make his full answer and defence thereto, and to have the witnesses examined and cross-examined by counsel, solicitor or agent on his behalf.

2. Every complainant or informant in any such case shall be at liberty to conduct the complaint or information, and to have the witnesses examined and cross-examined, by counsel or attorney on his behalf.

Origin]—Sec. 850, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, secs. 34, 35; 11-12 Vict., Imp., ch. 43.

Defendant not in default if his counsel appears in proceeding under Part XV]—The cases of Rex v. Thompson, [1909] 2 K.B. 614, 100 L.T.R. 970, and Rex v. Montgomery, 102 L.T.R. 325, taken together determine that so full and complete is the power given by the two sections (715 and 720) to counsel to represent the person charged, that the presence of counsel in court prevents the magistrate from enforcing the appearance of the accused there, and that where there is a proper appearance by counsel, attorney, or agent, the justices are bound to hear and determine the same, and, on a plea of guilty, to convict the offender. R. v. McDonald, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 229, 230, 12 E.L.R. 166, (P.E.L.). But an unauthorized plea of guilty will not bind the accused. See infra "authority of counsel."

"Full answer and defence"]—This phrase appears in Code sees. 715, 786 and 942, dealing respectively with summary conviction matters, summary trials and trials on indictment.

The words "full answer and defence" mean that the accused can invoke every means both in law and in fact to meet the charge; the word "answer" being specially applicable to a defence on the facts and the word "defence" applying both to matters of testimony and matters of law. R. v. Romer, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235.

There may be a refusal of the right of full defence under some circumstances by refusing an adjournment after the trial has begun for the purpose of bringing other witnesses in defence. R. v. Dominion Drug Stores [1919] 1 W.W.R. 285 (Alta.).

The fact that through an oversight a magistrate sentences a prisoner before hearing evidence for the defence does not deprive the prisoner of an opportunity to defend himself, if the magistrate at once corrects the error by offering to hear the defence. R. v. Cyr, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 849, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 77 (Alta.), affirming R. v. Cyr, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1185 (Alta.).

The accused is not denied the right to make "full answer and defence" to the charge by reason of the magistrate having stated, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution, that a denial on oath by the accused would not alter his opinion as to her guilt. R. v. McGregor, (1895) 26 Ont. R. 115, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 410.

Where one of two magistrates hearing an information was called as a witness for the defence but refused to be sworn and give evidence, and the associate magistrate refused to use his authority to require him to be sworn, it was held that the defendant was thereby deprived of the right of making a full defence, and his conviction was quashed on this ground. Calling a magistrate as a witness did not of itself disqualify him from further acting in the case. R. v. Sproule (1887), 14 Ont. R. 375. That case was, however, disapproved in R. v. Brown (1888), 16 Ont. R. 375, where it was held that the defendant is not entitled to show by witnesses at the hearing that the magistrate had a disqualifying interest in the case.

Where in summary proceedings it is desired to call the presiding magistrate as a witness, the application should be supported by an affidavit stating not only that the magistrate is a necessary and material witness, and that the application is made in good faith, but disclosing specifically what the party proposes to prove by the magistrate's testimony. Ex parte Hebert, (1898) 34 N.B.R. 455, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 153.

Where the presiding magistrate is called as a witness for the defence but refuses to be sworn, a summary conviction made without his evidence should not be quashed unless it is shown that the request to have the magistrate called as a witness was made in good faith by the defence, that the magistrate could give material evidence and that the accused was therefore prejudiced. Ex parte Flannagan, (1897) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 513 (N.B.).

Section 722 shows that the question of the adjournment of the hearing is in the discretion of the magistrate. What see, 715 (1) of the Code says is that the person against whom the complaint is made or the information laid shall be admitted to make his full answer and defence thereto, and to have the witnesses examined and cross-examined by counsel, solicitor or agent on his behalf. A similar right is given to the complainant or informant by sub-sec. (2). R. v. Irving (1908) 18 O.L.R. 320. In Reg. v. Biggins (1862), 5 L.T.N.S. 605, it was held upon a similar enactment, the origin of that found in our Code, that it did not touch the discretionary power of the magistrate in the conduct of the trial, and that he was not bound to adjourn to enable the accused to procure counsel, and that, although the accused had the absolute right to the assistance of counsel, if he could obtain it, he was not entitled as of right to an adjournment for the purpose of enabling him to do so. The object of the clause was to alter the old law, under which in matters of summary jurisdiction, the parties were not entitled to the assistance of counsel or attorney. Reg. v. Justices of Cambridgeshire, (1880) 44 J.P. 168; and see also Paley, 8th ed., p. 117, 119, and Ex parte Hopwood, (1850) 15 Q.B. 121.

Whatever remedy the defendant may have by way of appeal to the sessions or by way of criminal information against the magistrate, if he adopted an unusual or unreasonable course for the purpose of preventing the defendant from having legal assistance, the refusal to adjourn for that purpose will not entitle the defendant to have the conviction quashed or to be discharged on habeas corpus. The refusal of the right to examine and cross-examine witnesses stands upon a very different footing: Reg. v. Griffiths (1886), 54 L.T.N.S. 280; R. v. Irving (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 18 O.L.R. 320.

The defence may move to dismiss at the end of the prosecutor's case and on the motion being refused may call witnesses; on denial of this right the magistrate loses jurisdiction to convict. R. v. Dominion Drug Stores [1919] 1 W.W.R. 285 (Alta.).

Defendant to be asked if he wants to give evidence]—The accused has a statutory right to be allowed to make his full answer and defence to the charge by his own evidence and the testimony of other witnesses, if present; and he should be distinctly asked whether he desires to give evidence before the charge is adjudicated upon. R. v. Curry, (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 340, 8 O.W.N. 512.

Right to insist on legal formalities being observed]—A person upon trial for a crime has a right to hear all the evidence adduced against him and to insist as a matter of right, that the formalities of the law as to criminal trials are complied with; and when formal proceedings are in strict law required, ex gr., an arraignment upon a specific charge made known to the prisoner at the hearing before a magistrate, the absence of the required proceedings is a ground for setting aside the conviction without regard to the question whether or not any substantial injustice had resulted to the accused. R. v. Roach (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 28, 6 O.W.N. 630; Martin v. Mackonachie, 3 Q.B.D. 730, 770, applied.

Interpreting to accused foreigner]—As to the right of a foreigner at his trial to have the evidence interpreted, see Rex v. Meceklette, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 17, 18 O.L.R. 408; Rex v. Sciarrone, 1 O.W.N. 416.

In R. v. Meceklette, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 17, 18 O.L.R. 408, the return to a habeas corpus following defendant's summary conviction, was good upon its face, showing a warrant of commitment, which recited the conviction of the defendant for unlawfully committing an act of indecency in a public place; and there was ample evidence to support the conviction; but the defendant attempted to show by affidavits that, not understanding English, he did not know that he was on trial, and did not understand the evidence given. This was contradicted by one who was sworn as an interpreter at the trial, and by a policeman. It was held that the capacity of the interpreter and all matters connected with the interpretation of the evidence were questions for the magistrate, and his finding could not be attacked by habeas corpus. R. v. Meceklette, 18 O.L.R. 408, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 17. Semble.

that there is no inherent right in any foreigner that the proceedings taken in the courts of this province shall be made wholly intelligible to him, even though he should be charged with crime. Cases in which a contrary doctrine is laid down turn upon some statutory or constitutional provision. Rex v. Meecklette, 18 O.L.R. 408, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 17.

The proceedings must be fairly conducted, and refusal to adjourn a case against a Chinaman for half an hour so that he could get an interpreter to assist him in his defence was held to invalidate a summary conviction made under the Public Health Act, Alta. R. v. Lee Kee, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 767 (Alta.).

Taking "view" of locus in absence of parties to assist in determination]—In a summary proceeding for an illegal sale of liquor under the Indian Act, a conviction will be quashed if, after the close of the evidence, the magistrate went alone and took a view of the place of sale, and so stated when giving his judgment, and this notwithstanding that the defendant was present when the view was had. Re Sing Kee, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 86, 8 B.C.R. 20.

Compelling defendant's attendance for trial at place remote from place of offence and from his place of residence]-Sec. 2 of ch. 13 of 1906, Alta. stat., says that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint justices of the peace for the province, who shall have jurisdiction as such throughout the same. There is no statutory provision in Alberta requiring a charge to be laid or dealt with by the nearest justice. But if it appeared that there was gross abuse of the authority of a magistrate by, for example, compelling the attendance of the accused at a place extraordinarily far from his home and the place where the offence was alleged to have been committed, and where all the witnesses resided, while a competent and impartial justice was available near the place of the alleged offence, the court would have power to intervene and prevent the abuse of the process of the inferior court, on the ground that the defendant was prejudiced in his right to "make his full answer and defence" (sec. 715), and that therefore the magistrate lacked jurisdiction; R. v. Tally, 7 W.W.R. 1178, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449, 452, and see Rex v. Farrell, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 100.

Adjournment to get counsel]—If the accused was summoned a reasonable time before the hearing, he cannot claim an adjournment as a matter of right to enable him to obtain counsel to conduct the defence. R. v. Irwing (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 18 O.L.R. 320.

Adjournment on amending charge in a material respect]—If the eharge is amended in a material respect on the return of the summons and, as amended, is for a distinct offence from that alleged in the information and summons although of the same class, the accused will be entitled to an adjournment without being placed on terms as to costs. R. v. Farrell, (1907) 15 O.L.R. 100. In such case it is not a matter of discretion (Code sec. 722) whether the justice shall adjourn the trial or not when requested to do so, for the refusal would be a

Counsel to assist the justice in matters of procedure]—A qualified solicitor appearing at a trial before a justice of the peace ought to assist the tribunal in matters of formal procedure. He ought not to be heard very favorably on asking costs of a certiorari motion on the ground of merely formal errors of procedure which he had made no attempt to correct by advising the magistrate at the time. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719, 726 (Alta.), per Stuart, J., and see R. v. Cyr [1917] 3 W.W.R. 849, 859, (Alta.). So if he consents to an illegal adjournment sine die, this will be taken into consideration on disposing of a successful motion by his client attacking the jurisdiction of the justice because of same. Dierks v. Altermatt, supra.

Authority of counsel to represent client for whom he appears]— In R. v. Broadfoot, (1910) 17 Can Cr. Cas. 71 (N.S.), it was held by Judge MacGillivray, that a summary conviction made without evidence in the absence of the accused on a plea of guilty entered by a solicitor for the accused, was bad for want of jurisdiction where relied upon as one of the prior convictions in a liquor prosecution for a third offence, there being no proof of the solicitor's authority.

The power of summary conviction is in derogation of the common law and is to be strictly construed. R. v. Broadfoot, supra.

In Hallsworth v. Zickrick, 17 C.L.T. 37, an attorney appeared for the defendant who was not present when the case was called, and pleaded guilty for her, whereupon the magistrate convicted her of the offence charged. The attorney paid a portion of the fine imposed, but later the defendant applied to quash the conviction on the ground that the attorney had appeared and entered the plea of guilty without her authority or knowledge. It appeared that the summons had not been served on the defendant personally, and that she had not herself instructed the attorney to appear for her, and, as there was some doubt as to whether she had authorized the instructions to the attorney, an order was made quashing the conviction. And see R. v. Dimond (1916) 9 Sask. L.R. 106, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 317, 33 W.L.R. 803. Counsel represents his client on a charge of a second offence for the purpose of being asked the statutory question whether the accused had been previously convicted as alleged. R. v. O'Hearon, (1901) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 187.

commissioner or commissioners to take the evidence upon oath of any person who resides out of Canada and is stated to be able to give material information relating to an offence for which a prosecution is pending under this Part, or relating to any person accused of such offence, in the circumstances and in the manner, mutatis mutandis, in which he might do so under sec. 997; and all the provisions of the said section, in respect of matters arising thereunder, shall apply mutatis mutandis to matters arising under this section: Provided that no such appointment shall be made without the consent of the Attorney General.

Origin]—6 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 5, sec. 1; sec. 851, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 47.

Witness "stated to be" able to give material information]—The same particularity is not required as to the proof to be adduced on an application for a commission to take the evidence under sec. 716, of a witness out of Canada who is "stated to be" able to give material information relating to a summary conviction offence as would be required upon an application under sec. 997, to take evidence for use at the trial of an indictable offence or at a preliminary enquiry, in which cases it must be "made to appear" that the evidence of the absent witness is material. R. v. Murray, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 119, 21 O.W.R. 544, 3 O.W.N. 734.

Use of depositions on appeal]—See sec. 752 (3).

Stipulation to use depositions in another case]—An agreement to use evidence taken in another case should be properly recorded. R. v. Davey, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 5 O.W.N. 666, 25 O.W.R. 630.

Proof of exception, etc., by defendant.—Prosecutor need not prove negative.

717. Any exception, exemption, proviso, excuse or qualification, whether it does or does not accompany in the same section the description of the offence in the Act, order, by-law, regulation or other document creating the offence, may be proved by the defendant, but need not be specified or negatived in the information or complaint, and whether it is or is not so specified or negatived, no proof in relation to the matter so specified or negatived shall be required on the part of the informant or complainant.

Origin]—8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; sec. 852, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, eh. 178, sec. 38. Onus on defendant to prove himself within statutory exceptions]— See, 717 is, as regards summary conviction matters, an exception to the rule that he who alleges a fact must prove it even though the allegation is couched in negative terms, unless the subject of the negative assertion is peculiarly within the knowledge of the accused, in which case it was for him to prove it as a matter of defence, even before sec. 717 was enacted.

Since the Act 9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, amending sec. 717 of the Code, it is not necessary for the prosecutor to negative exceptions in sub-secs. 117 and 127 of the Canada Temperance Act. R. v. Dibblee, ex parte MeIntyre, 39 N.B.R. 361.

Negativing exceptions in information]—For the prior law on the question of negativing exceptions in the description of the offence, see R. v. Boscovitz, 4 B.C.R. 132, R. v. White, 21 U.C.C.P. 354, (Ont.); R. v. Strauss, 5 B.C.R. 486, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 103, R v. Smith, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 383, 31 Ont. R. 224; R. v. Nunn, 10 P.R. 395 (Ont.); R. v. Boomer, 13 Can. Cr. Non-appearance of accused,—Ex parte hearing,—Warrant to procure attendance of accused.

718. In case the accused does not appear at the time and place appointed by any summons issued by a justice on information before him of the commission of an offence punishable on summary conviction then, if it appears to the satisfaction of the justice that the summons was duly served a reasonable time before the time appointed for appearance, such justice may proceed ex parte to hear and determine the case in the absence of the defendant, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the defendant had personally appeared in obedience to such summons, or the justice may, if he thinks fit, issue his warrant as provided by sees, 659 and 660 and adjourn the hearing of the complaint or information until the defendant is apprehended.

Origin]—56 Vict., Can., ch. 32, sec. 1; sec. 853, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 39; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 31, secs. 7 and 32.

Process for compelling appearance]-Code sec. 711.

In case the accused "does not appear"; appearance by counsel]— In Rex v. Montgomery, 102 L.T.R. 325, there was a hearing of a summons for driving a motor car at a speed exceeding the limit. The defendant appeared by his solicitor, who pleaded guilty on his behalf and also to a previous conviction. The justices, on the application of the inspector of police, ordered a warrant to compet the defendant of appear personally. The warrant was granted improperly, so it was held on appeal, because a valid plea of guilty had been made. Lord Alverstone, C.J., said: "It was not necessary for the purpose of obtaining a conviction or of proving the previous conviction, for the appellant had pleaded guilty to both."

Bucknill, J., said: "The justices were bound to proceed on the appearance and to convict in this case. That was all they had to do on the plea of guilty being made to the offence and to the previous conviction."

"Summons duly served"]—As to manner of service, see sees. 658 and 711.

Default in appearing to defective summons or defective information]—Sec. 718 applies only to a valid summons and default thereunder; the defendant is not bound to appear to a summons which was not signed. Lamontagne v. Lanctot, (1916) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 449 (Que.).

A summary conviction was set aside where no place of trial was mentioned in the summons and defendant did not appear; R. v. Wilson; ex parte Harrington, 40 N.B.R. 383; and where the place of the offence was not stated in the information and defendant's counsel appeared only to object to the jurisdiction and then withdrew from the case; R. v. Hubbard, ex parte Monahan, (1914) 42 N.B.R. 524; although the summons mentioned a place of the offence. R. v. Hubbard, supra.

A variance or discrepancy between the day of the week and the day of the month mentioned in the summons does not invalidate it; the day of the month governs. Ex parte Tompkins, 37 N.B.R. 534.

The failure to properly state the prior offence in the summons will prevent a conviction for a second offence in default of appearance. Re Crouse (R. v. Crouse No. 2), (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 243, 12 E.L.R. 499 (N.S.); R. v. Grant, 30 N.S.R. 368.

Appearance by counsel]-See secs. 720, 720A, and note to 721.

"If it appears that the summons was duly served "]—The justice's jurisdiction to act under sec. 718 depends on this proof of service; Lévesque v. Asselin, 6 Que. P.R. 64, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 505; and on a "summons" being duly served. Lacasse v. Fortier, (1917) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 87 (Que.). A notice from the complainant of the time and place of hearing accompanied by a copy of the complaint, is not a "summons." Lacasse v. Fortier, supra; Rheaume v. Cliche (1917) 24 Rev. Leg. 61 (Que.).

summons, which was dated July 26th, 1909, and was returnable two days later, was served by a constable who delivered it to a brother of defendant, the defendant himself being absent from home at the time. The affidavit of the constable showed that the summons was served on the evening of the same day on which it was dated, between the hours of nine and ten o'clock, and that the person to whom it was delivered was of sufficient age, but it was not made to appear that such person was an "inmate" of defendant's last or most usual place of abode, the affidavit merely stating on this point that he stayed there most of time, but time. It was held that the service was sufficient in point of time, but that, in the absence of evidence to show that the summons was delivered to the defendant personally, or in his absence to an inmate of his last or most usual place of abode, as required by sec. 658, sub-sec. (4), the conviction must be set aside. R. v. Franey, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 441, 44 N.S.R. 163.

The justice may accept as proof of service of the summons a constable's affidavit of service endorsed thereon and sworn before another justice prior to the return date. R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425. (This case was disapproved as to another point involved, in R. v. Mitchell, 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 O.W.R. 588).

In default of appearance the justice may proceed ex parts to hear and determine]—The justice has a discretion to exercise which the court will not review on certiorari. R. v. Coote, 22 O.L.R. 269, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 211. He is to decide whether he will proceed ex parts or adjourn the hearing and issue a warrant. R. v. Smith, L.R. 10 Q.B. 614; R. v. Coote, supra.

It has been held that in proceeding on default, an error in stating the date of the offence in the information may be corrected so long as it does not charge a different offence. Ex parte Tompkins, 37 N.B.R. 552. And a change of the date of a liquor selling offence does not in all cases mean that a different offence is charged; there may be such other particulars of time and place disclosed as point to a single occasion and not to a continuous offence. Ex parte Tompkins, supra.

The defendant is not to be convicted in his absence of an offence distinct from that stated in the information and summons. Ex parte Doherty, (1894) 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 84, 33 N.B.R. 15.

On proceeding to try a summary conviction matter in default of appearance and convicting the accused, the justice may also hear evidence and make an adjudication as to whether there are any chattels whereon to levy a distress (Code sec. 744), and if there are none he may dispense with the issue of a distress warrant and with a return of no goods and may issue a commitment in the first instance. R. v. Degan, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 148, 17 O.L.R. 366.

In default of appearance the justice may issue warrant and adjourn the hearing]—Where the defendant fails to appear, an adjournment of the hearing must nevertheless be to a time and place appointed and publicly stated at the time the adjournment takes place. R. v. Smith. 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425 (N.S.).

The accused when so brought up on warrant has the same right to make his full answer and defence as he would have had on the original return date. Levesque v. Asselin, 6 Que. P.R. 64; same case sub nom. R. v. Levesque, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 305. He has taken the risk that the magistrate would proceed ex parte instead of adjourning; but a justice of the peace has no right if he illegally proceeded ex parte without proof of service of the summons, to issue a warrant of arrest to bring the accused before him for sentence and pronounce same without allowing further evidence. Lévesque v. Asselin, 6 Que. P.R. 64, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 505.

Non-appearance of prosecutor,-Dismissal or adjournment.

719. If, upon the day and at the place so appointed, the defendant appears voluntarily in obedience to the summons in that behalf served upon him, or is brought before the justice by virtue of a warrant, then, if the complainant or informant, having had due notice, does not appear by himself, his counsel, solicitor or agent, the justice shall dismiss the complaint or information unless he thinks proper to adjourn the hearing of the same until some other day upon such terms as he thinks fit.

Other justices not entitled to intervene]—Other justices of concurrent jurisdiction are not entitled to sit as associate justices on a case which the sitting justice has jurisdiction to try alone and desires so to try it. R. v. McRae, 28 Ont. R. 569.

Jurisdiction on appearance by counsel]—In a summary conviction matter, the accused may appear by counsel instead of personally and the magistrate has jurisdiction to proceed without requiring the accused to be personally present. A corporation defendant must appear "by attorney." Sec. 720A.

Counsel duly authorized may enter a plea of guilty in the absence of the client. R. v. McDonald (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 229 (P.E.I.); R. v. Thompson, [1909] 2 K.B. 614; R. v. Montgomery, 102 L.T. 325.

In R. v. Aves, 24 L.T. 64, it was held that an absent defendant may plead guilty through his counsel duly authorized but if counsel without authority so to do pleads guilty for the defendant, the conviction is invalid. It is well, therefore, to have defendant's written authority for such plea and to have such authorization ready to file with the magistrate should he require it. This is particularly desirable where a subsequent offence would entail an increased punishment and would raise the question of the validity of the first conviction; and this although the punishment for the case in hand may be only a fine which is tendered at the hearing. See Hallsworth v. Zickrick, 17 C.L.T. 37; R. v. Broadfoot, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 31 (N.S.); R. v. Dimond, 9 Sask, L.R. 106.

Arraignment of accused when personally present]-Code sec. 721.

Justice cannot enforce personal attendance under Part XV if counsel appears]—So full and complete is the power given by sees. 715 and 720 to counsel to represent the person charged, that the presence of counsel in court prevents the magistrate from enforcing the appearance of the accused there; and where there is a proper appearance by counsel, attorney, or agent, the justices are bound to hear and determine the same, and, on a plea of guilty, to convict the offender. R. v. McDonald, (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 229 (P.E.I.); R. v. Thompson, [1909] 2 K.B. 614; R. v. Montgomery, 102 L.T.R. 325.

If charge not admitted, evidence to be taken]—The evidence of witnesses is to be taken in the manner provided by Part XIV. Code secs. 721 (3), 682, 683, 686; but when the proceedings are under Part XV the witnesses need not sign their depositions. Sec. 721 (5).

Ordering particulars in summary prosecution]-See sec. 723 (2).

Previous notice of the charge by summons or otherwise]—Unless dispensed with by statute or waived, there must be some previous summons or notice, to the party charged, of the hearing of the charges against him. This may be waived by appearing, pleading and defending. But asking an adjournment for the purpose of procuring evidence is not necessarily a waiver. R. v. Vrooman, 3 Man. R. 509; R. v. Davis (1912) 3 W.W.R. 1 (Alta.); R. v. McNutt, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 184 (N.S.); and see ex parte Dolan, 41 N.B.R. 95, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 161. But if he examines or cross-examines a witness in proof of his objection, it seems that thereby he submits to the jurisdiction of the magistrate to decide the point and cannot raise it afterwards on certiorari. R. v. Doherty, (1899) 32 N.S.R. 225, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 505.

[§ 720]

Case closed for the complainant; motion to dismiss]—If the prosecution goes on with the evidence and closess its case, the justice is to determine whether an objection taken by the defence is to be sustained, which takes exception to the sufficiency of the proof. R. v. Chew Deb, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 854, 18 B.C.R. 23, 23 W.L.R. 308, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 20. It is not competent for the justice to give the complainant leave to withdraw the charge so that he may lay a fresh information for the identical offence and adduce new evidence; R. v. Chew Deb, supra; though he probably would have power to give leave to the complainant to re-open the case in chief and to grant an adjournment for bringing further evidence. On the motion to dismiss being refused, the defence is entitled to call evidence. R. v. Dominion Drug Stores [1919] 1 W.W.R. 285 (Alta.)

Service of summons upon corporation.-Appearance by corporation.

720_A. When the defendant is a corporation the summons may be served on the mayor or chief officer of such corporation, or upon the clerk or secretary or the like officer thereof, and may be in the same form as if the defendant were a natural person.

2. The corporation in such case shall appear by attorney, and if it does not appear the justice may proceed as in other cases.

Service of summons on corporation]—Prior to this enactment, notice of the summons was held to be good if given in a manner similar to a notice of indictment of a corporation given under Code see. 918. R. v. Toronto Ry. Co., 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 471, 26 A.R. 491 (Ont.) Sec. 720A requires service of the summons itself. A similar provision is contained in Part XVI as to certain indictable offences. See sec. 773A.

Evidence against corporation]—Membership or the holding of shares in the defendant corporation does not excuse the shareholder from being compelled to give evidence in the charge against the corporation. R. v Mayflower Bottling Co., 44 N.S.R. 417.

The shareholder may, by active, personal participation in the corporation's offence render himself liable as a party to its offence. R. v. Glassey, (1912) 22 Can. Cr Cas. 71 (N.S.) and see R. v. Hendrie, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 198; R. v. Hays, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 423; Bernier v. Dequoy, 33 Que. S.C. 237.

Arraignment of accused.—Conviction or order if charge admitted.— If charge not admitted.—Evidence in reply.—Under Part XV witness need not sign.

721. If the defendant is personally present at the hearing the substance of the information or complaint shall be stated to him, and he shall be asked if he has any cause to show why he

2. If the defendant thereupon admits the truth of the information or complaint, and shows no sufficient cause why he should not be convicted, or why an order should not be made against him, as the case may be, the justice present at the hearing shall convict him or make an order against him accordingly.

3. If the defendant does not admit the truth of the information or complaint, the justice shall proceed to inquire into the charge and for the purposes of such inquiry shall take the evidence of witnesses both for the complainant and accused in the manner provided by Part XIV in the case of a preliminary inquiry.

 The prosecutor or complainant is not entitled to give evidence in reply if the defendant has not adduced any evidence other than as to his general character.

5. In the hearing under this Part the witnesses need not sign their depositions.

Origin]—See. 856, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, secs. 43, 44, 46.

" If defendant is personally present "]-This does not make it obligatory upon defendant to attend personally in a summary conviction matter in answer to a summons, for, by see. 720, he is permitted to appear either personally or by counsel; R. v. McDonald (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 229 (P.E.I.); Bessell v. Wilson, 1 E. & B. 488; R. v. Montgomery, 102 L.T. 325; R. v. Coote, 22 O.L.R. 269, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 211; R. v. Thompson, (1915) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 463 (N.S.); R. v. Thompson [1909] 2 K.B. 614; And if he appears by counsel he is not chargeable with non-appearance under sec. 718. An information for one offence may be changed to another in the defendant's presence or he may be called upon to answer to additional charges, but with the right to ask an adjournment. See sec. 724 (4) and sec. 722. If, however, the defendant allows the proceedings to go on upon a new charge without any protest or request for time to answer, he will be bound by them. R. v. Clarke, 20 Ont. R. 642; R. v. Crouch, 35 U.C.R. 433 (Ont.); Stoness v. Lake, 40 U.C.R. 320 (Ont.).

The want of service of a summons as well as any irregularity in the service may be cured by defendant's presence. R. v. Hughes, 4 Q.B.D. 614; R. v. Berry, 23 J.P. 82, 28 L.J.M.C. 86, 8 Cox C.C. 121; R. v. Fletcher, 12 Cox C.C. 77; R. v. Stone, 1 East 639; R. v. Clarke, 20 Ont. R. 642; Davis v. Feinstein, 25 Man. R. 507; R. v. Bennett, 3 Ont. justices and a charge is then made against him, if he has not been summoned he has good ground for asking for an adjournment. If he waives that and answers the charge, a conviction would be perfectly good against him. R. v. Shaw (1865) L. & C. 579, 10 Cox C.C. 66, per Blackburn, J.; Turner v. Postmaster General (1864) 5 B. & S. 756, 10 Cox 15, 11 Jur. N.S. 137.

The accused by proceeding with the trial without objection may be held to have submitted to the justice's jurisdiction, although illegally arrested under an invalid warrant issued without any sworn information. R. v. Yaldon, 17 O.L.R. 179, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 489.

The substance of the complaint to be stated to defendant]—The defendant is to be arraigned upon a specific charge made known to him at the hearing. R. v. Roach, 6 O.W.N. 630, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 28; Martin v. Mackonachie, 3 Q.B.D. 739, 770. He should not have to ascertain the nature of the charge as the case develops during the taking of evidence. Nagazoa v. Niquet, (1917) 24 R. de Jurís, 339, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 77 (Que.). In every case where an individual is accused of an offence for which he may be imprisoned a complaint in writing should be made against him before the case is called and before he is called upon to plead or show cause under sec. 721, sub-sec. (2). Nagazoa v. Niquet, supra.

Defendant to be asked to show cause; pleading to the charge]— Technically speaking, there is no such plea as either "guilty" or "not guilty" contemplated by Part XV. Under see, 721 of the Code, an accused is to be asked, "if he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted, or why an order should not be made against him, as the case may be." The practice is almost universal, to ask the accused if he be guilty or not guilty, and when an necessed pleads guilty such plea may be regarded as an admission of the truth of the information and of the absence of sufficient cause why he should not be convicted or why an order should not be made. R. v. O'Brien, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 848, 849, (Sask.). If the same principles apply to a trial under Part XV as to a trial of an indictable offence, before a judge and jury in a superior court, an application after judgment for leave to change a plea is too late. Rex v. Selbe, 9 Car, & P. 346.

Even before judgment the court has a discretion in the matter. Rev. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K.B. 339, at p. 349, 71 L.J.K.B. 805; R. v O'Brien, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 848 (Sask.).

If the principles applicable to a trial on indictment do not apply to a trial under Part XV, then it seems there is no authority for allowing an accused to withdraw an admission as to the truth of an information and as to the absence of sufficient cause why he should not be convicted. R. v. O'Brien, supra.

Although the accused may "admit the truth of the information," he is still to have an opportunity of setting up that the information discloses no offence in law. Ex parte Richard (1916) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 166 (Que.).

Where the complaint is not properly laid]-An illegal complaint could not give to the justice of the peace the necessary jurisdiction to inquire into it and decide upon it: Carriere v. Montreal (1902), 5 Que. P.R. 44; R. v. Leschinski, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 199; R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372; R. v. Coulson, 27 Ont. R. 59, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 114. So where the War Revenue Act, 1915, provided that the fine must be sued for and recovered in the name of the Minister of Inland Revenue, and the complaint was brought in the personal name of another person, it was held that the complaint was not susceptible of being amended, since the effect of such amendment would not only be to correct the name of the complainant, but to substitute as complainant a person other than the one who has lodged the complaint. Ex parte Richard, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 166 (Que.); Bëland v. Boyce, (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 421; R. v. C.P.R., 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 549, 7 Terr. L.R. 443, and an appearance by counsel and a plea of not guilty entered by counsel for defendant in his absence without objection to an alleged irregularity in the information and proceedings upon which the summons was founded, is a waiver of the irregularity and a submission to the jurisdiction of the justice. R. v. Kay (1911) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.); Dixon v. Wells, 25 Q.B.D. 249; R. v. Thompson, [1909] 2 K.B. 614.

If the information does not disclose an offence within the magistrate's territorial jurisdiction and the defendant does not attend on the summons either personally or by counsel, the defect cannot be cured so as to give the magistrate jurisdiction to proceed ex parte. R. v. Hubbard, (1914) 42 N.B.R. 524, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 127.

An information which purports to be that of one person, but which is signed and sworn to by another person is invalid. R. v. McNutt, 28 N.S.R. 377, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 184.

Certain defects in the information cured]-Code sees. 723-725.

Defects in the summons]—Defects in a summons are cured by a personal appearance by the defendant and going to trial on the merits. R. v. Holyoke, ex parte McIntyre, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 422, 13 E.L.R. 210 (N.B.); R. v. Doherty, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 505, 32 N.S.R. 235; Ex parte Giberson, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 537, 34 N.B.R. 538; McGuiness v. Dafoe, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 139, 27 Ont. R. 117.

A summons may be issued upon an information before a justice of the peace for an offence punishable on summary conviction, although the information has not been sworn; but before a warrant can be issued to compel the attendance of the accused, there must be an information in writing and under oath. R. v. William McDonald (1896), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 287 (N.S.).

If a magistrate's summons is issued on an information purporting to have been sworn at a specified time and place, and the defendant appears thereon and pleads to the charge, the proceedings will not be quashed on certiorari because it is afterwards shown that the information was not in fact sworn at such time and place. Ex parte Sonier,(1896) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 121, 34 N.B.B. 84.

A person who appears in answer to a summons, and takes his trial and his chance of acquittal, is considered as having waived any objection to the summons. R. v. Justices of Carriek-on-Suir, 16 Cox C.C. 571; R. v. Hazen, (1893) 20 A.R. 633 (Ont.).

Appearance without summons or warrant]—There may be an appearance by which a summons is waived; R. v. Mitchell, (1911) 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; Geller v. Loughrin, 24 O.L.R. 18, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 461; or the right to object because of the illegality of the warrant may be waived. R. v. Yaldon, 17 O.L.R. 179, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 489.

But in a proceeding which is subject to Part XV, if the attendance of the accused before the magistrate has been compelled by his illegal arrest upon a warrant issued without jurisdiction, and objection is taken on the hearing but overruled, the summary conviction will be quashed. Ex parte Grundy, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 65 (N.B.); Ex parte Boyce, 24 N.B.R. 247, Ex parte Coffon (R. v. Mills), 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 48, 37 N.B.R. 122. [Contra: R. v. Hanley, 41 O.L.R. 177; R. v. Baptiste Paul, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 159.]

As to raising the objection to a separate charge brought while the accused was in custody under the illegal arrest, see R. v. Hurst, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 994, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 129, 30 W.L.R. 176.

Where arrest is authorized without a warrant]—If the arrest is made without a warrant upon a charge which is to be tried under Part XV, e.g., vagrancy, the accused is taken to the police station, the charge is entered in the complaint book and unless bailed by competent authority, the prisoner is there detained and brought before the magistrate at the earliest opportunity. The charge is then read, the prisoner pleads, and the case is then tried or inquired into or the prisoner remanded or bailed on the trial being adjourned. R. v. Jackson, (1917) 40 O.L.R. 173, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 352, 362.

Depositions to be in writing]—The omission of the magistrate to have the evidence taken in writing at the trial is fatal to the conviction; Re Lacroix, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 297, (Que.); R. v. McGregor, 11 B.C.R. 350, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 313; Denault v. Robida, 10 Que. S.C. 199; unless the taking of the depositions is waived as it has been held may be done. R. v. Poirier, re Janneau, 31 Que. S.C. 67, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 360; (William) King v. Weir, 8 Que. P.R. 409.

The omission to take down the depositions is not material if in the course of the hearing the accused changes his plea to one of guilty and is sentenced on that plea. R. v. Goulet, (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 365 (Que.). The taking of the depositions in writing is waived if defendant's counsel knowing of the omission, enters upon his cross-examination without taking objection. Bedard v. The King, 22 Rev. Leg. 302, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 99 (Que.).

As to waiver of depositions in quasi-criminal proceedings under provincial laws, see R. v. Locke, (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 337 (N.S.), re Piers, 44 N.S.R. 254; Rand v. Rockwell, 2 N.S.D. 199. Ad Omission to read depositions over to witnesses]—The provisions of secs. 682 and 721, sub-sec. 3, require the evidence to be read over to the witnesses on the trial of an information or complaint, but such is a matter of procedure, and its omission does not go to the jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Kay, ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 498; R. v. Kay, ex parte Steeves, 39 N.B.R. 2, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 160; ex parte Doherty, 32 N.B.R. 479.

Signature of deposition by witness not essential under Part XV]— Witnesses are commonly asked to sign their depositions and that practice is called for on a preliminary enquiry (see. 682), as to depositions not taken down in shorthand (sees. 682, 683); but sub-see. (5) of sec. 721 makes this unnecessary in proceedings under Part XV, whether the depositions are taken in longhand or in shorthand.

The justice to sign the depositions]—Whether taken in shorthand or not, the justice is to sign the depositions (sec. 682), the signature being affixed to the transcript when the shorthand notes are extended. Sec. 683.

In New Brunswick it is held that a summary conviction will not be quashed because the depositions signed by the witnesses were not also signed by the presiding justice; and that the omission does not go to the jurisdiction. Rex v. Kay, Ex parte Gallagher, 38 N.B.R. 498, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 38; Ex parte Budd (N.B.) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 236. Subsec. 4 of sec. 682 was held to be directory only and the signing by the magistrate a mere matter of procedure. Ibid. But see note to sec. 682.

When depositions taken in shorthand]-Code sec. 683.

Sec. 683 of the Code permits the magistrate, in a preliminary inquiry. to have the evidence taken in shorthand; and, by force of secs. 711 and 721 (3), the same course can be taken on a trial under the summary convictions clauses. R. v. L'Heureux, 14 Can. Crim. Cas. 101; Rex v. Warilow, 17 O.L.R. 284, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 117; R. v. Bond (1911) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 96.

Contradicting the recorded plea]—Whether there was in fact a plea of guilty in a summary conviction matter as stated in the conviction, is a question of fact as to which affidavits may be used on certiorari pro and contra; and if satisfied by such affidavits that the plea was wrongly recorded the conviction will be quashed for want of jurisdiction. R. v. Barlow [1918] 1 W.W.R. 499 (Alta.); R. v. Richmond [1912] 2 W.W.R. 1200, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 29 (Alta.).

Hearing in open court]-Code sec. 714.

Non-appearance of prosecutor]-Sec. 722 (3).

722. Before or during the hearing of any information or complaint the justice may, in his discretion adjourn the hearing of the same to a certain time or place to be then appointed and stated in the presence and hearing of the party or parties, or of their respective counsel, solicitors or agents then present, but no such adjournment shall be for more than eight days.

2. If, at the time and place to which the hearing or further hearing is adjourned, either or both of the parties do not appear, personally or by his or their counsel, solicitors or agents respectively, before the justice or such other justices as shall then be there, the justice who is then there may proceed to the hearing or further hearing as if the party or parties were present.

3. If the prosecutor or complainant does not appear the justice may dismiss the information, with or without costs as to him seems fit.

4. Whenever any justice adjourns the hearing of any case he may suffer the defendant to go at large or may commit him to the common gaol or other prison within the territorial division for which such justice is then acting, or to such other safe custody as such justice thinks fit, or may discharge the defendant upon his recognizance, with or without sureties at the discretion of such justice, conditioned for his appearance at the time and place to which such hearing or further hearing is adjourned.

5. Whenever any defendant who is discharged upon recognizance, or allowed to go at large, does not appear at the time mentioned in the recognizance or to which the hearing or further hearing is adjourned the justice may issue his warrant for his apprehension.

Origin]—Sec. 857, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, secs. 48, 49, 50, 51; 32-33 Viet., Can., eh. 31, secs. 7, 32.

Application to Part XV only]—Sec. 722 refers to summary conviction procedure and does not apply to a preliminary enquiry for an indictable offence. Dick v. The King, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 44, 13 Que. P.R. 57; Code sec. 798.

"No such adjournment shall be for more than eight days"]-The adjournment here referred to is an adjournment of the hearing, and this is to be distinguished from an adjournment after the hearing on a reservation of judgment. See note to sec. 726. At the expiration of the eight days without a further hearing or adjournment, the justice becomes functus officio. Paré v. Recorder of Montreal, 27 Que. S.C. 424, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 295. And where the justice has a regularly appointed clerk of his court, the clerk in his unavoidable absence may, it seems, adjourn the court only to a date within the eight day limit from the last adjournment personally made by the justice. But the justice having a general jurisdiction over the offence may, it seems, proceed with the charge with the defendant's consent without issuing a fresh summons if the defendant voluntarily attends at a date beyond the eight days after consenting to an adjournment for a longer time. Bedard v. The King, (1916) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 99 (Que.); R. v. Hazen, (1893) 20 A.R. 633 (Ont.); R. v. Heffernan, (1887) 13 Ont. R 616. [Contra: R. v. French, (1887) 13 Ont. R. 80.]

The hearing may be adjourned from time to time if either party is present. Proctor v. Parker, 12 Man. R. 528; Messenger v. Parker, (1885) 18 N.S.R. 237, 242. As to adjournment or dismissal on the nonappearance of the prosecutor or his counsel, see sec. 719.

The eight days are to be computed so as to exclude the date when the adjournment was ordered, the following day being the first of the eight. R. v. Collins, 14 Ont. R. 613; Williams v. Burgess, 12 A. & E 635.

An adjournment made for more than eight days in the absence of the accused and his counsel is invalid. R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425; Donohue v. Recorder's Court, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 182 (Que.).

Defendant to wait for case to be called]—Although the case is adjourned to a fixed hour on a certain day, the accused is bound to wait until the case is called; and if the justice is not sitting at that hour he must still wait a reasonable time for the session to begin. R. v. Wipper, (1901) 34 N.S.R. 202, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 17.

Bail on remand]—A defendant has his remedy by way of habeas corpus upon the return of which the court may order bail pending a remand by a magistrate, and this remedy is applicable as well where the charge upon which the remand was made is a subject of summary conviction and not indictable as in respect of indictable offences. R. v. Vincent and Fair, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 5 O.W.N. 141, 25 O.W.R. 104. And the magistrate under sub-sec. (4) has a discretion to free the defendant either on bail or on his own recognizance to appear at the adjourned hearing instead of remanding him in custody.

If the person arrested is admitted to bail and a time and place for the hearing is then stated in his presence, the justice has a discretion to proceed with the hearing on the default of the accused in attendance on the day fixed. Sec. 722 (2); R. v. Hornbrook, ex parte Madden, 38 N.B.R. 358, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 273.

Adjournment by one justice although special Act requires two for trial]—Code see. 708 enables the justice before whom the information was laid, to adjourn the hearing of a summary conviction matter although he would not alone have jurisdiction to try the case. R. v. Miller, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 98, 19 O.L.R. 125; R. v. Graves (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 345.

Discretion to adjourn]—The granting of an adjournment in a summary conviction matter is in the discretion of the justice, but such discretion is not to be exercised in such a way as will deprive the accused of a fair trial. R. v. Luigi, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 25 (Ont.).

Although it is usual to give an adjournment for the parties to procure counsel, the justice is not bound to adjourn the case for that purpose; R. v. Biggins, 5 L.T.N.S. 605; R. v. Cambridgeshire, 44 J.P. 168; R. v. Tally (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1178, 30 W.L.R. 396 (Alta.); R. v. Irwing, (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 18 O.L.R. 320, 12 O.W.R. 316.

The justice has a discretion to grant an adjournment of the hearing in order that the defendant may obtain counsel, but where the accused failed to ask for counsel or for an adjournment until after the evidence for the prosecutor was closed, the magistrate's refusal to adjourn will not invalidate the conviction. R. v. Pfister, (1911) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 92, 3 O.W.N. 440, distinguishing R. v. Brisbois, 15 O.L.R. 264, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 96.

If there is a variance between the information and the evidence, the justice is to decide whether the variance has prejudiced the accused so that he has been "thereby deceived or misled," and if he finds such cause of prejudice he may adjourn the trial and may impose costs upon the prosecutor as a term thereof. Sec. 724, sub-sec. (4). If it is a mere variance, the justice has a discretion, but if the offence is of a distinct class the case is not one of variance and the defendant is not to be held to answer a distinct offence then brought forward for the first time without being given time to bring his witnesses and otherwise to make his full answer and defence. Code sec. 715. But if the special Act permits of prosecutions being brought in general terms for offences between widely separated dates and authorizes the substitution of one offence for another of the same class at trials thereunder, that would tend to show that for the purpose of the special Act the substituted offence should not be considered as a distinct offence. See R. v. Milkins, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 20 (Ont.).

On the trial of an offence under the Canada Temperance Act, the information may be amended or altered, and any other offence under the Act substituted and the trial continued to conviction without an adjournment, if the defendant is present and does not allege he is misled and ask for an adjournment. R. v. Byron, Ex parte Batson, 37 N.B.R. 386, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 240.

A summary conviction for a second offence may be made under subsec. (2) on evidence taken in the absence of the accused at an adjourned hearing made as required by sub-sec. (1). R. v. Leach, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 375, 17 O.L.R. 643.

When adjournment demandable as of right]—A summary conviction will be quashed, if by the refusal of a reasonable adjournment, the accused has been deprived of an opportunity to make his full answer and defence. R. v. Lorenzo, 1 O.W.N. 179, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 19, 1 O.W.N. 179.

Where the accused was summoned for the day following the service of the summons and the charge was then amended as for another offence, the accused was entitled to an adjournment without being put on terms of paying the costs of the day, and the refusal of the same was a denial of his right to make "full answer and defence," (Code sec. 715). R. v. Farrell, 12 Can. Cr. Cus. 524, 15 O.L.R. 100.

Unless it appears that the refusal of a magistrate to grant an adjournment results in the accused being prevented from having a fair trial, from making "his full answer and defence," the magistrate's bona fide exercise of discretion cannot be reviewed. R. v. Tally, (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1178, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449, 30 W.L.R. 396 (Alta.); R. v. Irwing, (1908) 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 489 (Ont.).

Discretion to adjourn on prosecutor's default]—If the prosecutor does not appear, not desiring to proceed with the case, the justices are not bound to dismiss the case but may proceed as if he were present; and if the prosecutor is a necessary witness the case may be adjourned and the prosecutor summoned and compelled to attend by the same process as an ordinary witness would be. Ex porte Bryant, 27 J.P. 277; Code see, 719.

Right to make full answer and defence]-See sec. 715.

Waiving an irregular adjournment of summary conviction hearing]-

An irregular adjournment of summary proceedings before a magistrate is waived by the accused afterwards appearing for trial and putting in his evidence without taking objection thereto. R. v. Miller, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 87, 19 OL.B. 125; R. v. Graves (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 345; R. v. Hazen, (1893) 20 A.R. 633 (Ont.).

Defects and Objections.

Proceedings not objectionable on certain grounds.—Particulars may be ordered.—Description of offence in words of Act.

723. No information, complaint, warrant, conviction or other proceeding under this Part shall be deemed objectionable or insufficient on any of the following grounds, that is to say,—

(a) that it does not contain the name of the person injured, or intended or attempted to be injured; or,

- (b) that it does not state who is the owner of any property therein mentioned; or,
- (c) that it does not specify the means by which the offence was committed; or,
- (d) that it does not name or describe with precision any person or thing.

2. The justice may, if satisfied that it is necessary for a fair trial, order that a particular, further describing such means, person, place or thing, be furnished by the prosecutor.

3. The description of any offence in the words of the Act or any order, by-law, regulation or other document creating the offence, or any similar words, shall be sufficient in law.

Ordering particulars if satisfied that it is necessary]—This may appear from the information itself or the defendant may support his application for particulars with an affidavit intituled in the matter of the information and stating that he is not aware of the nature and particulars of the alleged offence, and that it is necessary for a fair trial of the case that he should be given further particulars, (describing what is required in detail so far as possible). R. v. Stapylton, 8 Cox C.C. 69.

Stating ownership]—Particulars may be ordered under sub-sec. (2) if the magistrate thinks it necessary. And if the information incorrectly describes the ownership it may be amended and an adjournment granted. Ralph v. Hurrell, 40 J.P. 119, 32 L.T. 816; Code sec. 724 (4).

Sub-sec. (3)—Describing the offence]—The words of sub-sec. (3) relate simply to the description of the offence; they do not dispense with the necessity of alleging all matters material to the offence, not being exceptions which under sec. 717 need neither be specified nor negatived.

The leading authorities as to the interpretation of sub-sec. (3) are the English decisions in Smith v. Moody, [1903] 1 K.B. 56, and Cottrell v. Lempriere, 24 Q.B.D. 639, in conformity with which are the decisions in R v. Campbell, 22 B.C.R. 601, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 196; R. v. Harris, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 393 (Y.T.); R. v. McCormaek, 7 Can. Cr. Cr. Cas. 314, 19 Man. R. 209.

Cases in which a narrower view has prevailed are Ex parte Hilchie, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 289; R. v. Leconte, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 41, and R. v. Riddell, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 400.

In Re Effie Brady, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 914, 5 Alta. L.R. 400, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 123, at 129, Walsh, J., of the Supreme Court of Alberta, said: "The summary convictions sections of the Code are administered by a body of men, the great majority of whom are without legal training or experience of any kind. It is probably for this reason that sec. 723 (3) of the Code was enacted so that a justice of the peace might not worry over the phraseology to be used by him in describing an offence, but might use the ready-made description of it contained in the section creating it. That being so I think that he should be allowed to do so. Not being a judge or a lawyer, he is not used to picking hidden meanings out of the plain language of statutes nor should he be asked to do so. It surely must be mystifying to a justice of the peace after being told by the Code that he will be all right if he describes an offence in the language of the section enacting it to be told by a judge that he was all wrong in so describing it and that his conviction which follows implicitly the directions of the statute in its description of the offence is no good because he did not put into that description some words which do not appear in the statute. Of course, as Lord Alverstone says, in Smith v. Moody, [1903] 1 K.B. 56, 'fair information and reasonable particularity as to the nature of the offence must be given in indictments and convictions.' This, I take it, means that such particulars as to the time, place and subject-matter of the charge must be given as with the statutory description of the offence will show upon the face of the conviction exactly what it is for."

A conviction under a by-law which enumerates a large number of offences must specify specifically which offence is intended. Riopelle v. Desrosiers, (1900) 3 Que. P.R. 195.

The curative provisions of secs. 723 and 724 do not cure the defect in an information which states on its face that the offence was committed at a date so long past that the prosecution would be barred. R v. Le Blanc (1911) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 12 E.L.R. 66 (N.B.). And if a statute makes an offence of a "wilful" act or omission, the defect is not cured in a conviction which omits to describe the offence as "wilful" by stating it to be "unlawful," R. v. Bridges, (1907) 13 B.C.R. 67, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 548; R. v. Tupper, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 199; ex parte O'Shaughnessy, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 136, 13 Que. K.B. 178.

Sec. 723 does not cure a defect in a conviction or a warrant of commitment which does not show on its face that it is made by a justice having jurisdiction. R. v. Gow, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 81; R. v. Graves, 21 O.L.R. 329, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 150 and 318; Hunt v. Shaver, 22 A.R. 202 (Ont.).

The conviction must show that there was an offence within the territorial jurisdiction of the magistrate and the defect cannot be cured on certiorari where there is no evidence to prove such an offence. Woodlock v. Dickie, 6 R. & G. 86; R. v. Aikens, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 467.

Sub-sec. (3) of sec. 723 was introduced by ch. 46 of the Canada Statutes of 1910, and supersedes prior decisions to the contrary effect in R. v. Coulson, 24 Ont. R. 246, R. v. Spain, 18 Ont. R. 385. Compare as to indictments, sees. 852 and 859.

Describing offence as committed in different modes]-Code sec. 725.

Variance or defect.—When not material as to time.—When not material as to place.—If misleading, adjournment.

724. No objection shall be allowed to any information, complaint, summons or warrant for any alleged defect therein, in substance or in form, or for any variance between such information, complaint, summons or warrant and the evidence adduced on the part of the informant or complainant at the hearing of such information or complaint.

2. Any variance between the information for any offence or act punishable on summary conviction and the evidence adduced in support thereof as to the time at which such offence or act is alleged to have been committed, shall not be deemed material if it is proved that such information was, in fact, laid within the time limited by law for laying the same.

3. Any variance between the information and the evidence adduced in support thereof, as to the place in which the offence or act is alleged to have been committed, shall not be deemed material if the offence or act is proved to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the justice by whom the information is heard and determined.

4. If any such variance, or any other variance between the information, complaint, summons or warrant, and the evidence adduced in support thereof, appears to the justice present and acting at the hearing to be such that the defendant has been thereby deceived or misled, the justice may, upon such terms as he thinks fit, adjourn the hearing of the case to some future day.

Origin]-Sec. 846, Code of 1892.

"Variance" between information and evidence]—The word 'variance' indicates that it is the same offence erroneously stated in some particular, to which the section is to apply, and not a different offence. Martin v. Pridgeon, (1859) 28 L.J.M.C 179, 1 E. & E. 778; R. v. Brickhall, 33 L.J.M.C. 156; Whittle v. Frankland, 2 B. & S. 49; Ralph v. Hurrell, 44 L.J.M.C. 145; R. v. Lyons, (1905) 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (N.S.).

Defects curable by the depositions]—A summary conviction describing an offence in proper form will not be set aside on the ground that the information did not charge any offence known to the law if, in fact, the case was tried out in respect of the legal offence disclosed in the depositions. R. v. Tally (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1178, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 449 (Alta.). Even the omission of the date of a summary conviction offence may be cured under Code sec. 1124 for the purposes of a certiorari motion. R. v. Tally, supra. So also may the omission to state the several acts constituting a "practising" under a provincial law to which that section had been made applicable by provincial legislation. R. v. Schilling, (1915) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 380 (Sask.).

As to defects held to be cured under the corresponding English section, see Onley v. Gee, 9 W.R. 662; Rodgers v. Richards, [1892] 1 Q.B. 555; Bartholomew v. Wiseman, 8 Times L.R. 147.

Duplicity as a defect in information or conviction]—See secs. 710 (3) and 725.

Amending the information]—In Ex parte Tompkins, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 552, 37 N.B.R. 534, the defendant was charged with having sold intoxieating liquor without a license on the 24th of November, 1905, and when it came to trial he did not appear and the magistrate amended the information from a charge for selling on the 24th to a charge for selling on the 20th. The court was of opinion the magistrate had a right to do that and to enter a conviction for a sale on the amended information. Ex parte Doherty, 33 N.B.R. 15, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 84, was distinguished; there the charge was for selling and the information was amended to a charge for keeping for sale which was a different offence. The majority of the court there held the defendant could not be convicted on the amended charge.

A mere clerical error in the information may be amended during the hearing although the evidence for the prosecution had been closed. Bell v. Parent, (1903) 23 Que. S.C. 235.

An amendment by change of date may be made if it concerns the same offence as was intended to be charged in the information; Ex parte Tompkins, (1906) 37 N.B.R. 534; but not to charge a different offence. R. v. Lyons, (1905) 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (N.S.).

Proceedings not objectionable on certain other grounds.--Multiplicity or uncertainty because of stating different modes.

725. No information, summons, conviction, order or other proceeding shall be held to charge two offences, or shall be held to be uncertain on account of its stating the offence to have been committed in different modes, or in respect of one or other of several articles, either conjunctively or disjunctively, for example, in charging an offence under sec. 533 it may be alleged that

[§ 725]

'the defendant unlawfully did cut, break, root up and otherwise destroy or damage a tree, sapling or shrub'; and it shall not be necessary to define more particularly the nature of the act dene, or to state whether such act was done in respect of a tree, or a sapling, or a shrub.

Origin]-Sec. 907, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 107; 49 Viet., Can., ch. 49, sec. 4.

Charging an offence in different modes]-Referring to sec. 725, Perdue, J. A., said in R. v. Toy Moon (1911) 1 W.W.R. 50, 21 Man. R. 527, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 33, 19 W.L.R. 480: "It will be observed that the above section declares that no information, etc., shall be held to charge two offences or to be uncertain on account of its stating the offence to have been committed in different modes, etc. It is, therefore, necessary, before the section can apply, that an offence be charged; and, upon it being charged, the conviction is not objectionable if it states the offence to have been committed in different modes. The example that is given in the section, I think, clearly shows this. It is made an offence under sec. 533 wilfully to destroy or damage a tree, sapling, or shrub, being things of a similar nature. The offence lies in the injury to the tree, etc., and the fact that the manner in which the offence was committed is stated in the alternative, will not, by the effect of sec. 725, render the conviction bad. In the same way, a conviction "for buying, exchanging, taking in pawn, detaining, or receiving" from a soldier his war medal, is a single offence only, and is not bad for uncertainty: The King v. Brine, 8 Can. Crim. Cas. 54. . . Sec. 725 does not go to the extent of saying that the conviction will be good where it charges the accused with committing one or other or both of two offences which are quite separate and distinct from one another, and are not merely the same offence committed in one or other of two different ways. A conviction would not be good which declared the accused guilty of having stolen or obtained by false pretences a sum of money from the same or different persons." R. v. Toy Moon, (1911) 1 W.W.R. 50, 21 Man. R. 527.

In Johnston v. Needham, [1909] 1 K.B. 626, Lord Alverstone, delivering the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division held that a conviction for ill-treating, abusing and torturing a horse, would be bad as being for more than one offence. The Canadian decisions, however, especially those in which the aid of sec. 725 has been invoked, are the other way. Re Wagner, (1916) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 406, 9 W.W.B. 1000.

In Rex v. White, 34 N.S.R. 436, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 430, it was held that a conviction for stealing "in or from" a building was for but one offence.

In Regina v. McDonald, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, it was held that the objection that a conviction for that the defendant "unlawfully did distill or rectify a quantity of spirits and did make or ferment a quantity of beer" was for two offences, was disposed of by sec. 725 of the Code.

In Rev. Brine, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 54, it was held that a conviction for "buying, exchanging, taking in pawn, detaining or receiving from a soldier a military decoration" was cured by this section.

In Rex v. Brouse, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 17, 23 O.W.R. 790, 4 O.W.N. 640, Britton, J., held that a conviction for that the defendant "did unhawfully offer, expose, or have in his possession for sale ten barrels of apples packed contrary to the provisions of sec. 321 of the Inspection and Sale Act" was for only one offencé, applying R. v. McDonald, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

In the case of Rex v. Irwing, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 18 O.L.R. 320, in the Ontario Court of Appeal, where the conviction objected to was for being the keeper of "a disorderly house of prostitution or house for the resort of prostitutes," Osler, J.A., said, at p. 321: "To keep a disorderly house of prostitution' is to keep a 'disorderly house, hawdy house or house of ill-fame,' the latter being one description of the offences in sec. 238 (j) of the Criminal Code; an alternative description of the same thing is by the same clause to keep a house for the resort of prostitutes. All three forms of expression charge the same thing and the point seems to be covered by our recent decision in Rex v. Leconte, 11 O.L.R. 408, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 41."

In R. v. Monaghan, 18 C.L.T. 45, it was held that a conviction for that defendant did give and sell intoxicating liquor to an Indian was not a conviction for two offences.

In Smith v. Moody, [1903] 1 K.B. 56, 72 L.J.K.B. 43, 20 Cox C.C. 369, the conviction complained of stated that the appellant "did injure the property" of the respondent without specifying the property and this was held insufficient for lack of that information.

In the case of Rex v. Leconte, 11 O.L.R. 408, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 41, in which Smith v. Moody was cited, it was held that a conviction of a woman under clause (j) (since repealed) of Code sec. 238 of being "the keeper of a disorderly house, hawdy house or house of ill fame or house for the resort of prostitutes" was not void for duplicity and that the conviction in that form was valid under sec. 723 (3) of the Code because it described the offence in the words of the statute creating it.

A conviction under sec. 238 (i) Criminal Code, which refers to the accused as a common prostitute or night walker, is not bad for duplicity because it does not state to which class she belongs; if, strictly speaking, any duplicity is involved it is but a defect of form within the meaning of sec. 724, and the objection is cured by the provision of that section. Re Effie Brady, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 914, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 123, 23 W.L.R. 333, (Alta.).

viction. If the conviction stated the offence under a liquor law to have been committed between the 23rd and 26th days of the month of December, that would have been sufficient. Stating that the offence was committed on one or the other of the days intervening between the two dates mentioned amounts to practically the same thing. Time is never of the essence of the offence under the Liquor License Act (N.B.), so long as it appears that the information was laid within the time limited for bringing the prosecution. If the conviction were brought up on certiorari the court has power to amend the date of the commission of the offence so as to make it conform to the evidence. Ex parte Jeed, (1913) 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 255, 12 E.L.R. 497 (N.B.).

Where the special statute expressly provides that several charges may be included in the one information, then if the magistrate adjudges the accused guilty upon each charge, separate convictions need not be drawn up, but the fines may be imposed for each offence in one formal conviction covering all the offences. R. v. Whifin, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 144, 3 Terr. L.B. 3.

Adjudication.

Justice may convict, make order, or dismiss.

726. The justice, having heard what each party has to say, and the witnesses and evidence adduced shall consider the whole matter, and, unless otherwise provided, determine the same and convict or make an order against the defendant, or dismiss the information or complaint, as the case may be.

Origin]-Sec. 858, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 52.

Two justices under special statutes]—If the prosecution be under a special statute requiring two or more justices to determine the case, the term "justice," used in the singular in sec. 726 as well as in other sections of Part XV, would have a corresponding plural meaning under the interpretation clause (Code sec. 2, sub-sec. 18). The judgment will be according to the opinion of the majority of the justices present at the hearing in such case, but if the court be equally divided one of the justices may withdraw his opinion leaving the remaining justices in a majority; Ex parte Evans, [1894] A.C. 16, 58 J.P. 260. But it would seem that if by special statute at least two justices were required to adjudicate, and only two sat, their disagreement should result in an adjournment for a re-hearing before a reconstituted court or if they refuse to so adjourn the case they should dismiss the charge. Bagg v. Colquhoun, [1904] 1 K.B. 554, 68 J.P. 159; R. v. Ashplant, 52 J.P. 474.

Hearing the witnesses]—Every witness at any hearing shall be examined upon oath or affirmation. Sec. 716.

[§726] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

View]—The magistrate must not, after the close of the evidence and without an adjournment for the purpose of a view with the opportunity for the parties to be represented thereat, go alone and take a view of the locus of the offence to assist in coming to a conclusion; and where such was done and so stated in the adjudication, a summary conviction made under the Indian Act (Can.) was set aside on certiorari. Re Sing Kee, 8 B.C.R. 20, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 86.

Territorial jurisdiction to be proved]—There should be evidence before the magistrate to show that the place of the offence is within the magistrate's territorial jurisdiction. R. v. Picard, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 1007 (B.C.); R. v. Oberlander, (1910) 15 B.C.R. 134, 13 W.L.R. 643; R. v. C.P.R. (1908), 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Alta.); R. v. McGregor, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 410; R. v. Cahill, 35 N.B.R. 240, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 204; R. v. McHugh, 13 B.C.R. 224.

It has been held that the warrant served on the defendant may be looked at to show in explanation of the depositions that the offence he was called upon to answer and of which he was convieted, was committed within the magisterial jurisdiction when such appeared in the warrant, but not in the information or conviction. R. v. McGregor, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 410.

There need not be evidence to prove a fact of local geography if the justice chooses to take judicial notice that the place referred to by name is within the limits of his territorial jurisdiction. R. v. C.P.R. 1 Alta. L.R. 341, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 1. And as judicial notice must be taken of all public statutes of Canada, (Can. Evidence Act, sec. 18) it would follow that the justice would be bound to take judicial notice of the location of places named in a federal Act as constituting part of an electoral division which was included in his commission as a justice. Judicial notice will be taken of local divisions into which a province is divided for purposes of government. Ex parte Maedonald, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 10, 27 S.C.R. 686.

Insufficiency of prosecutor's case]—If the evidence for the prosecution is not sufficient at the close of the case the magistrate's duty is to dismiss the charge and grant a certificate of dismissal. Re Green and Chew Deb, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 854, same case sub nom., R. v. Chew Deb, 18 B.C.R. 23, 23 W.L.R. 308, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 20; Bradshaw v. Vaughton, 30 L.J.C.P. 93; Code sec. 730.

Withdrawal of charge]—The informant cannot withdraw the case for the purpose of instituting fresh proceeedings, without the consent of the accused if the merits have been gone into further than the taking of formal evidence. Code secs. 720, 726; Re Green and Chew Deb, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 854; same case sub nom. R. v. Chew Deb, 18 B.C.R. 23, 23 W.L.R. 308, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 20; ex parte Wyman, 34 N.B.R. 608, 5 Can. Cr. [§ 726]

On the close of the prosecutor's case the defence may rest on the insufficiency of the evidence and require a decision. Having done so, it would be improper for the magistrate afterwards to take the personal consent of the accused in the absence of his counsel, to the withdrawal of the charge, and so to deprive the accused of his right to object, on fresh proceedings being begun, that he had once been put in jeopardy. Re Green and Chew Deb, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 854 (B.C.); Ex parte Wyman, 34 N.B.R. 608, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 58, not followed; Bradshaw v. Vaughton, 30 L.J.C.P. 93, applied.

No amendment of charge if defendant fails to attend on delivery of judgment]—A justice cannot, after adjourning a case for the sole purpose of considering his judgment, amend the information in the absence of the defendant at the time and place appointed to give judgment. R. v. Gough, 22 N.S.R. 516; R. v. Grant, 30 N.S.R. 368.

The proof necessary for a conviction]—It is a much lesser evil that the guilty sometimes escape than that the innocent be sometimes punished; no one is to be convicted upon suspicion alone, no matter how strong it may be; only those who are duly proved to be guilty, in accordance with the provisions of the law are to be punished. R. v. Borin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 248, 254, 29 O.L.R. 584, 5 O.W.N. 412.

The magistrate may go behind the form of the transaction to ascertain if the real transaction was of a prohibited kind earried out so as to give the appearance of legality. R. v. Richardson (1891) 20 Ont. R. 514; R. v. Stephens, 1 Sask. L.R. 509 (pretended separate sales of prohibited quantities of liquor).

The punishment is quite a different thing from the adjudication of guilt. So if the fact of the adjudication of guilt of the previous offence is proved, no defect or invalidity in the punishment awarded can affect the validity of the adjudication as evidence between the prosecution and the accused that the previous offence had been committed when proved on a charge of a second offence. R. v. Tansley (No. 2), [1917] 3 W.W.R. 70 (Alta.), affirming R. v. Tansley [1917] 2 W.W.R. 25.

Imprisonment as a direct punishment]—If the accused has proper notice of the proceedings, and is aware that judgment may be pronounced against him, and he might have been present, sentence of imprisonment in the first instance may be imposed in his absence. R. v. Kay, Ex parte Landry, 38 N.B.R. 332.

Term of imprisonment under Part XV counts from date of gaoler receiving prisoner]—The period of imprisonment under a summary conviction is to be calculated from the time of actual imprisonment. R. v. Gregg, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1344, 1347, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 51, 25 W.L.R. 183 (Alta.).

If a summary conviction imposes a penalty in excess of the actual sentence it would seem that the error may be corrected by the return [§ 726] of an amended conviction and commitment on the issue of a habeas corpus. Code sec. 1124; R. v. Daignault, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 374 (Man.); and see R. v. McGuire, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 312.

Concurrent sentences]-Sec. 746 provides for the case of sentencing a prisoner upon a summary conviction when he is already in prison undergoing imprisonment "upon conviction for any other offence." The former conviction is not necessarily a summary conviction, and the justice making the summary conviction for a later offence punishable by summary conviction is enabled if he thinks fit, to order that the imprisonment for such subsequent offence shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which the defendant was previously sentenced. Code sec. 746, sub-sec. (2).

If the defendant is being sentenced by a justice at the one time upon two separate charges punishable on summary conviction, a sentence of a fixed term upon each will be cumulative unless ordered to be concurrent, Ex parte Bishop, (1895) 33 N.B.R. 428.

Where special Act enables several offences to be tried together and included in one information]-The fact that several offences may be joined under a special Act does not raise a presumption that a complaint for a single offence covers all previous offences of the same class within the limitation period so as to bar separate prosecutions for them. Wentworth v. Mathieu, [1900] A.C. 212, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 429.

Defendant not to be punished twice for the same offence]-Where an act or omission constitutes an offence, punishable on summary conviction or on indictment, under two or more Acts, or both under an Act, and at common law, the offender shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of such Acts, or at common law, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence. Code sec. 15.

Time for paying fine]-If no time is specified for paying a fine imposed, it is payable forthwith. R. v. Caister, 30 U.C.Q.B. 247 (Ont.).

Separating the penalty as to each of several defendants]-Whether the offence is in its nature single or joint, a joint award of one fine against several defendants is erroneous. It ought to be severed against each defendant, even where the offence is joint, otherwise the effect would be that one who had paid or tendered his proportionate part might be imprisoned till the others had paid theirs or until he paid their proportion. R. v. Amyot, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 232; Morgan v. Brown, 4 A. & E. 515.

A summary conviction is invalid if it awards one fine against two or more persons for their separate acts. Gaul v. Township of Ellice. 3 O.L.R. 438, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 15.

A conviction of two persons in partnership for an offence several in its nature, and adjudging that they should forfeit and pay, etc., is bad for a joint conviction in such case is bad; the penalty ought to be imposed on the parties severally. R. v. Amyot, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 234;

A conviction against "Messrs. Harrison & Co." was held invalid even as against Harrison for the court could not tell upon the face of the proceedings but that the delinquency of Harrison's partners who were not before the court, might have been imputed to him. R. v. Harrison, 8 T.R. 508.

Where the members of a partnership firm are charged with an offence as to which each may be considered guilty the conviction should not describe them in the firm name alone, but should specifically name the persons adjudged guilty in the transaction. Re McDonald Bros. (1898), 34 C.L.J. 475 (B.C.).

Two persons who were doing business as co-partners were jointly convicted before a magistrate for keeping for sale intoxicating liquors contrary to the Canada Temperance Act. The conviction was as follows:—"And I adjudge the said G. H. and J. C. for their said office to forfeit and pay the sum of $30 to be paid and applied according to law, and also to pay to (the informant) the sum of $3.60 for his costs in this behalf; and if the said several sums be not paid forthwith, I order that the same be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said G. H. and J. C.; and in default of sufficient distress, I adjudge each of them the said G. H. and J. C. to be imprisoned." It was held that the offence charged was not a joint offence, and that the conviction was bad, for the magistrate ought to have adjudged a separate penalty upon each defendant. Ex parte Howard and Cringle, (1885) 25 N.B.R. 191.

Adjournment for judgment]—If the magistrate trying a criminal charge punishable on summary conviction adjourns the case sine die for deliberation and does not thereafter give the parties notice of the time and place at which he will give judgment, his decision is made without jurisdiction and will be set aside on certiorari. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719, 725 (Alta.); R. v. Quinn, 28 Ont. R. 224. R. v. Morse, 22 N.S.R. 298.

The justice has no jurisdiction to deliver judgment at a time of which the parties have not been notified so that they may have an opportunity of being present. Cairns v. Choquet, (1900) 3 Que. P.R. 25; R. v. Quinn, (1897) 28 Ont. R. 224; R. v. Hall, (1887) 12 P.R. 142 (Ont.); R. v. Alexander, (1889) 17 Ont. R. 458; R. v. Heffernan, (1887) 13 Ont. R. 616; R. v. Morse, 22 N.S.R. 298; Therrien v. McEachern, (1897) 4 Que. S.C. 87, 4 Rev. de Juris. 87.

But an adjournment for judgment only is not an adjournment of "the hearing" within sec. 722, and consequently is not limited to eight days. Plante v. Cliche, (1910) 38 Que. S.C. 535, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 43; R. v. Alexander, (1889) 17 Ont. R. 458; R. v. Hall, 12 P.R. 142 (Ont.).

[§ 726]

If at the close of the hearing, counsel for the complainant and for the accused respectively agree that judgment may be reserved without fixing a date for same, other than that the decision shall be given within one week, and shall be notified to the respective solicitors, and the magistrate acquiesces in and conforms to such arrangement, he does not thereby lose jurisdiction and a conviction made within the week should not be set aside. R. v. McKenzie, 44 N.S.R. 474, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 372.

Where neither the information nor the evidence taken in a case on which the justice had reserved judgment disclosed any offence in law, prohibition may be ordered without waiting for the judgment of the justice. R v. Breen, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 146.

If the adjudication is to be made by a bench of justices (see sees. 707 and 708), all of the justices should be present on delivery of judgment. Ex parte McCorquindale, P. v. Haines, (1908) 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 187, 39 N.B.R. 49. It has been do bted whether it is enough that both had signed written reasons for judgment and left it with one of themselves to read it at the time and place to which the case had been adjourned for delivery of judgment. Ex parte McCorquindale, R. v. Haines, supra, per Gregory, J., but such a course was considered proper in the same case by Barker, C.J., and by Boyd, C., in R. v. Armstrong, (1916) 36 O.L.R. 2, 9 O.W.N. 472, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 151.

Judgment with unauthorized conditions for suspension]—The judgment should not award a penalty along with a direction that the sentence would be suspended if defendant did certain acts which the justice would have no power to directly order him to do. R. v. Knight (1916), 11 O.W.N. 190, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 111.

Disposal of other charges based on same facts against same defendant]—A conviction may be set aside on the ground that the magistrate had before him at the time of hearing the case, another information against the accused for a similar offence covered by the same facts, and did not dispose of that before entering upon the hearing but kept it still open. R. v. Iman Din, 15 B.C.R. 476, 16 W.L.R. 130, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 82 (B.C.); R. v. McManus, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 3, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 122 (Alta.). A conviction for keeping liquor for sale was quashed where a charge of possessing in illegal premises laid in respect of the same liquor taken at the same police raid was held open for future adjudication. R. v. McManus, supra.

It is a well-known principle of criminal law that each case ought to stand on its own merits, and should be decided on the evidence given with relation to that particular charge; per Pollock, B., in Hamilton'v. Walker, [1892] 2 Q.B. 25, at p. 28. In that case the justices had two informations before them, and, having heard the evidence on one charge, they determined to proceed with the hearing of the second, and, having done so, thereupon convicted of the offence charged in the first. The conviction was quashed.

In Regina v. Fry (1898), 19 Cox C.C. 135, at the conclusion of the first case the justices postponed their decision thereon, and proceeded to hear the other informations, which related to a different charge of an offence committed on a different day. They dismissed the second and third informations. They then announced that they had decided to convict at the close of the first case, but that they adjourned their decision and the consideration of the amount of the penalty until after the other charges were disposed of, and that in adjudicating on each case they applied to that case the evidence that was given in reference to it, and no other. It was held that the postponement by the justices of their decision in the first case until they had disposed of the other cases did not, under the circumstances, render the conviction in the first case bad in law.

In Rex v. Lapointe (1912), 20 Can. Crim. Cas. 98, 3 O.W.N. 1469, the police magistrate told the solicitor for the defendant that all the evidence on the three charges was set out in the depositions forwarded. and that the said evidence was utilized by him on each and all of the said charges. The one ground taken to quash the conviction was that, having three informations before him, the police magistrate proceeded to hear evidence on all three cases, and did then find the defendant guilty in all three cases. It was held that if any of the evidence could not be applicable to one of the charges the conviction on that charge could not stand. If the evidence in the one case had any effect upon the mind of the magistrate in reaching a conclusion, the defendant was prejudiced in his trial. If the magistrate has not stated whether it had or had not, it is not necessary for the court hearing a certiorari to decide what the effect of such a statement might have been; it is sufficient that the defendant may have been prejudicially affected in the result by the admission of irrelevant evidence. R. v. Melvin (1916) 38 O.L.R. 231; R. v. Bracei (1918) 14 O.W.N. 305, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 351.

See also Rex v. Bullock and Stevens, (1903) 6 O.L.R. 663; Regina v. Hazen, (1893) 23 O.R. 387, reversed in appeal, 20 A.R. 633; Rex v. Haslam, (1916) 12 Cr. App. R. 10; R. v. McBerney, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 339; Rex v. Banks, [1916] 2 K.B. 621; Perkins v. Jeffery, [1915] 2 K.B. 702. But the mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it was relevant to any point before the Court: Makin v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, [1894] A.C. 57, at p. 65; Rex v. Bond, [1006] 2 K.B. 389, at p. 409; Regina v. Ollis, [1900] 2 Q.B. 758; Perkins v. Jeffery, [1915] 2 K.B. 702; R. v. Christie, [1914] A.C. 545; R. v. Kurasch, [1915] 2 K.B. 749; Director of Public Prosecutions v. Thompson, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 478.

quent day, the judgment then given, convicting defendant under one information and dismissing the other was bad and the conviction was quashed, as the evidence in the one case, although dismissed, was calculated under the circumstances disclosed, to influence the magistrate in the case in which defendant was convicted. It is not objectionable to try the same defendant upon several separate charges for similar offences by taking each case separately and announcing a conviction or acquittal as the case may be at the termination of each before commencing the next case, but reserving sentence on the convictions until all the trials are completed. R. v. Bigelow, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 132; ex parte Monahan, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 53.

Discretion as to penalty within the statutory limits]—Sec. 1028 of the Code applies as well to proceedings under the "Summary Convictions" clauses as to proceedings by indictment. Where both fine and imprisonment are provided as the authorized punishment for a statutory offence upon summary conviction, the magistrate may in his discretion impose either a fine alone or an imprisonment alone or both, unless the particular statute specially provides otherwise. Ex parte Kent, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 447.

Minimum fine under certain statutes]—If a special Act enacts that a fine may be imposed of "not less than $50" for a first offence and of "not less than $100" for a second offence, the magistrate cannot impose a fine of more than $50 for a first offence. Re Richard (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 204, 38 Can. S.C.R. 394.

It means "$50 and no less"; Reg. v. Smith, 16 O.R. 454; Reg. v. Porter, 20 N.S.R. 352; Reg. v. Rose, 22 N.B.R. 309.

Where a statute imposes a definite minimum penalty for an offence, a summary conviction awarding a lesser fine, and, in default of payment, a lesser term of imprisonment than that specified, is bad. R. v. Hostyn, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 138, 1 W.L.R. 113.

Minimum imprisonment under particular statutes]—Where a minimum term of imprisonment in default of paying a fine is imposed by statute, a summary conviction imposing a lesser term will be quashed. Ex parte Daigle, R. v. Charest, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 37 N.B.R. 492.

If the particular statute under which the conviction takes place makes a fixed term of imprisonment with hard labour obligatory, the prisoner has a right to object that the imprisonment ordered without hard labour is illegal. Poulin v. City of Quebee, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 391, 33 Que. S.C. 190.

Commitment in execution of a summary conviction]—Code secs. 739-747.

Alternative remedies of certiorari or appeal in summary conviction matters]—The mere existence of a right of appeal where no appeal was in fact taken does not absolutely prevent certiorari under the Code; certiorari in regard to summary proceedings before justices is distinguishable from certiorari to an inferior court of record in that the summary proceedings before justices may be removed after judgment. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719, 723, 724 (Alta.). A writ of error was the former remedy for review of the judgment of a court of record. In criminal matters an appeal under Code sec. 1013 et seq. has displaced the writ of error. Code sec. 1014; but sec. 1013 applies only to indictable offences where there has been a verdiet or judgment of a "court or judge" or of a magistrate acting under sec. 777, and not to proceedings under Part XV.

The existence of a right of appeal is sometimes referred to as a ground for refusing the exercise of the power of certiorari as a matter of judicial discretion unless there are exceptional circumstances. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719, 724 (Alta.); and particular statutes will be found which limit certiorari thereunder to eases in which an appeal would not afford an adequate remedy. Exceptional circumstances may always be said to exist where there is either (1) lack of jurisdiction, or (2) such irregularity in the proceedings as touches the substantial rights of the party so that he may be said really to have been aggrieved. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 719 (Alta.); ex parte Pelehat, (1916) 49 Que. S.C. 195, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 75.

Defects of form]-See sees. 723, 724, 753, 754, 1124, 1125.

Review of commitment by habcas corpus]—Habcas corpus lies in respect of commitments in summary conviction proceedings under the Code. Re Ching How (1912) 1 W.W.R. 674, 19 W.L.R. 891, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 176 (Sask.); R. v. Pepper, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 314 (Man.); R. v. Barnes, 18 W.L.R. 631 (Man.); R. v. Dora Johnson, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1045, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 203, 22 Man. R. 426; re Muschik, 9 Sask. Origin]-Sec. 859, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 53.

The memorandum of adjudication]—If it be desirable to postpone the preparation of the formal conviction, the justice may enter a memorandum of adjudication at the time of delivering his oral judgment, and later prepare or fill up the statutory form applicable to the case. The memorandum of adjudication may conveniently be subjoined to the depositions. A warrant' in execution may issue thereon prior to the formal conviction being drawn up and may be justified by the latter which will bear the date of the adjudication. Lindsay v. Leigh, 11 Q.B. 455; R. v. McCarthy, 11 Ont. R. 657.

On pronouncing the conviction and before entering up the minute of adjudication, the justice may, while the accused is still present, correct an error in the amount of costs he had orally imposed although the correction increases the amount the defendant is required to pay. R. v. Dickey (1915) 9 W.W.R. 142, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 55, 32 W.L.R. 404.

The minute or memorandum of conviction which the justice may make under Code sec. 727 at the time of the conviction is a document of a formal character to which reference may subsequently be made, if necessary, before the same tribunal. So it is said that where no formal conviction had been made out, the minute or memorandum will suffice to prove the fact of prior conviction on a charge of a second offence being heard by the same magistrate. R. v. Tansley, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 70 (Alta.), affirming R. v. Tansley, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1025, 1026 (Alta.); Commissioner of Police v. Donovan, [1903] 1 K.B. 895, 72 L.J.K.B. 545; London School Board v. Harvey, 4 Q.B.D. 451. But it was intimated that had the defendant been prosecuted in another court or "before another magistrate in a different place," it would have been necessary to have had the formal conviction made out and either the conviction itself or a certificate thereof would have been required to prove the fact of prior conviction. R. v. Tansley, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1025, 1026 (Alta.).

Where no formal conviction had been drawn up and the minute of conviction only was returned to a certiorari, the court may quash the conviction which it records, if it is found that the conviction is bad. R. v. Mancion, 8 O.L.R. 24, 3 O.W.R. 756, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 218.

In the case of a mere "order" enforceable by commitment or distress under Part XV under the authority of some special Act, a copy of the minute of the order is to be first served on the person against whom it is made. Code see. 731. But that provision does not apply to make it necessary to serve a minute of a summary conviction. Re Effice Brady, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 914, 23 W.L.R. 333, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 123 (Alta.).

The formal conviction]—A summary conviction need not state the name of the informant. Ex parte Van Buskirk, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 38 N.B.R. 335.

The absence of a seal from a summary conviction renders the conviction invalid as a formal conviction, but when brought up on certiorari it is proper to allow a continuance so as to permit of the filing of a conviction under seal. R. v. Dickey (1915) 9 W.W.R. 142 (Alta.); Bond v. Conmee, 15 Ont. R. 716.

There should be both a direction that the accused shall pay the fine and that the fine shall be forfeited. R. v. Burtress, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 536 (N.S.); R. v. Cyr, 12 P.R. 24 (Ont.).

If the jurisdiction depends on the fact of the justice acting at the request of the police magistrate or of his acting in case of absence or illness of another, the conviction should show this on its face as a fact on which his jurisdiction depends. R. v. Ackers, (No. 3) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 222, 21 O.L.R. 187.

The making out of the formal conviction complete in itself, dispenses with the necessity for entering a minute of adjudication on the record of proceedings. Ex parte Van Buskirk, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 38 N.B.R. 335; ex parte Flannagan, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 513, 34 N.B.R. 326.

Although a magistrate has delivered to the defendant a copy of conviction stated to be the justification for the proceedings which followed the adjudication, he is not precluded thereby from drawing up and returning a conviction in a formal shape, and the latter will be taken as the authentic record of the proceedings. R. v. Gratton, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 324, 326 (Que.); Basten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558; R. v. Huntington Justices, 5 D. & R. 588; R. v. Allan, 15 East. 333. But in that case the corrected statement must be conformable to the facts as they really took place; R. v. Simpson, 10 Mod. 382; R. v. Gratton, supra; whether the minute of adjudication correctly states these or not. R. v. McDonald, 26 N.S.R. 402; and see R. v. Hartley, 20 Ont. R. 485; R. v. Whiffen, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 141 (Terr.); R. v. McAnn, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 110, 4 B.C.R. 587; R. v. Brady, 12 Ont. R. 363.

So a sentence which made no mention of hard labour when actually pronounced is not to be changed in the absence of the accused by adding the words "with hard labour" to the conviction and commitment respectively. R. v. Kirwin, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 181; ex parte Carmichael, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 19 (N.S.).

Summary conviction to identify the offence]—The offence is to be definitely described so that it may be pleaded in the event of a second prosecution being brought for the same offence. R. v. Mabey, 37 U.C.Q.B. 248 (Ont.); R. v. Somers, 24 Ont. R. 244; R. v. Hoggard, 30 U.C.Q.B. 152 (Ont.); ex parte Dixon, 36 N.B.R. 109; R. v. Spain, 18 Ont. R. 385; R. v. Whelan, 4 Can. Cr. If a summary conviction is stated to be for defendant's said "offence" (in the singular) and only one penalty is imposed, but two offences are recited, the conviction is bad as it does not appear of which of the two he was found guilty. R. v. Aitken, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 781 (Alta.); R. v. Code, 1 Sask. L.R. 295, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372. The same result follows although one of the offences is improperly charged. R. v. Aitken, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 781 (Alta.), in which under a special statute two offences might be joined if certain particulars were included and these were included as to one offence only. The general rule applicable to summary convictions under the Criminal Code is that every complaint or information shall be for one offence only. Cr. Code sec. 710.

A charge of an offence committed "between" dates specified, excludes both dates. R. v. Emery, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, at 339 (Alta.); and see ex parte Wilson, (1908) 38 N.B.R. 503, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 32.

Warrant of commitment]-

[$ 727]

The issue of a warrant of commitment in execution of a summary conviction which awards imprisonment for the offence is a ministerial and not a judicial act. Re Lynch, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 141 (P.E.I.).

It will not invalidate the commitment that added therein to the term of imprisonment awarded are the words "or until delivered in due course of law." Such words do not indicate a possibly longer term, but a shorter one, as in the event of its being reduced on appeal, certiorari or other available methods for reducing the term of imprisonment. Disposal of penalties when joint offenders.

728. When several persons join in the commission of the same offence, and upon conviction thereof each is adjudged to pay a penalty which includes the value of the property or the amount of the injury done, no further sum shall be paid to the person aggrieved than such amount or value and costs, if any, and the residue of the penalties imposed shall be applied in the same manner as other penalties imposed by a justice are directed to be applied.

Origin]-Sec. 860, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 54.

Value of property or amount of injury]—Sec. 728 has special relation to the mischief or malicious injury clauses of Part VIII of the Code. See secs. 530, 533, 534, 535, 537 and 539.

First conviction in certain cases under Parts VI, VII and VIII.— Discharge on payment of damages and costs.

729. Whenever any person is summarily convicted before a justice of any offence against Part VI, or Part VII, except sec. 409 and secs. 466 to 508 inclusive, or against Part VIII, except secs. 542 to 545 inclusive, and it is a first conviction, the justice may, if he thinks fit, discharge the offender from his conviction upon his making such satisfaction to the person aggrieved, for damages and costs, or either of them, as are ascertained by the justice.

Origin]-Sec. 861, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 55.

Discretion to remit fine in certain cases if compensation made]— The discretion to remit the fine on a first conviction on compensating the party aggrieved applies to such summary onviction proceedings as are permitted under Part VI (Code secs. 24C-334; or under secs. 335-408, 410-465, 508A, 508B, of Part VII, or secs. 509-541 of Part VIII.

Exception as to sec. 409]—Sec. 409 deals with the offence of personation at a competitive or qualifying examination held under authority of law or in connection with a college or university.

Exception of summary convictions under secs. 466-508]—Offences which may be prosecuted under the summary conviction procedure of Part XV, either as the sole method or as an alternative to indictment, include the following:—Trade-mark offences and fraudulent marking of merchandise, secs. 488-491; falsely representing goods as manufactured for the government, sec. 492; unlawful importation of goods liable to forfeiture, sec. 493; wilful breach of certain contracts whereby public safety or service is endangered, sec. 499; intimidation, sec. 501; violence or threats to deter from certain lawful occupations, etc., sec. 503; receiving trading stamps, sec. 508. These offences are amongst those excepted from the conditional power of discharge conferred by sec. 729.

Summary convictions under secs. 542-545 are excepted]-These are the sections relating to cruelty to animals, cock-fighting, bull-fighting, failure to provide rest, feed, and water to cattle in transportation. The power to discharge on a first conviction on paying damages and costs is withheld as to these offences.

Order of dismissal.—Certificate of dismissal.—Form.

730. If the justice dismisses the information or complaint, he may, when required so to do, make an order of dismissal in form 37, and he shall give the defendant a certificate in form 38 which, upon being afterwards produced, shall without further proof, be a bar to any subsequent information or complaint for the same matter, against the same defendant.

Viet., Can., ch. 31, sec. 43.

Bar to any subsequent information or complaint for the same matter]—The dismissal will be an answer to a second information upon the same subject-matter. Kinnis v. Graves, (1898) 67 L.J.Q.B. 583, 78 L.T. 502. The defendant must show that the two charges are identical. R. v. Johnson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 172 (N.S.); Wemyss v. Hopkins, 44 L.J.M.C. 101, L.R. 10 Q.B. 378.

It is against the very first principles of the criminal law that a man should be placed twice in jeopardy upon the same facts. R. v. King, [1897] 1 Q.B. 214, 66 L.J.Q.B. 87.

Though not so worded, see. 730 is said to mean that it is the previous adjudication, of which the certificate is evidence, that constitutes the bar. Davis v. Feinstein, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 1003, 1014, 25 Man. R. 507. Bar in law is "a plea or objection of force sufficient to arrest entirely an action or claim at law."

The defence of a previous order of dismissal must, it is true, be pleaded and proved by the defendant, but, when it is established under the common law and the provisions of the secs. 726 and 730 of the Code, it puts an end to the matter in question and removes it from the authority and jurisdiction of the magistrate to try. Davis v. Feinstein, supra.

Except where it is otherwise provided by statute, a person who has been regularly tried and acquitted by a competent tribunal having full cognizance of his case, is not liable to be again tried for the same offence. R. v. Reddin, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 163 (P.E.I.); R. v. Quinn, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 422, 11 O.L.R. 242.

The dismissal must have been a dismissal upon the merits and not upon a mere informality or a lack of qualification of the informant to lay the information. R. v. Ridgway, 1 D. & R. 132, 5 B. & A. 527; Foster v. Hull, 29 L.T. 452.

It is not enough that the form of the information would have allowed proof of the second charge instead of the first, if only one charge could be adjudicated under it (sec. 710), and the evidence was in fact limited to the first. R. v. Mitchell, 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 O.W.R. 588, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; R. v. Johnson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 172 (N.S.); ex parte Flanagan, 34 N.B.R. 577, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 82.

Where charges of selling liquor and of keeping liquor for sale were improperly joined in one information, but the conviction was for keeping only and the charge of selling was not dealt with by the magistrate nor was the information amended, the defendant is not entitled to a certificate that the charge of selling was dismissed. Code form 37 provides an alternative form of order of dismissal in case the complaint does not appear, but no corresponding alternative has been inserted in Code form 38, the certificate of dismissal. But sec. 1152 authorizes a variation of the statutory forms to suit the case, and it may be that the certificate will be effective under a varied form corresponding with the part of form 37 applicable to a dismissal on default. Ex parte Phillips, (1884) 24 N.B.R. 119 [Contra: Hall v. Pettingell, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 196].

The dismissal is upon a trial of the merits if the prosecution failed because of non-compliance with a statutory condition requiring service of a certificate of analysis or the like under a statute regulating the Sale of Foods and Drugs. Haynes v. Davis, [1915] 1 K.B. 332, 84 L.J.K.B. 441; Grimble v. Preston, [1914] 1 K.B. 270.

When the objection or defence of a previous order or conviction or of a previous acquittal or discharge is raised, it is the duty of the magistrate to hear and determine the facts relevant to that issue. His jurisdiction necessarily goes to that extent. But when once the conclusion is clear that the matter before him has been previously disposed of by a competent tribunal then his jurisdiction is at an end. The offence or cause of action is gone and there is nothing before him to be dealt with. Davis v. Feinstein, [1915] 8 W.W.R. 1003, 1015, 25 Man. R. 507, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 160; R. v. Quinn, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 422.

If a certificate of dismissal of a prosecution for the same alleged offence is relied on as a bar to his proceeding, the justice has a right to inquire whether the previous prosecution was real and bona fide, or was instituted fraudulently and collusively, and in the latter case, to hold that it is of no effect. Ex parte Phillips, 24 N.B.R. 119.

An appeal lies on the part of the prosecutor from the dismissal of an information on the ground of autrefois convict. R. v. Bombardier (Cotton v. Bombardier), 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 216, 15 Que. K.B. 7.

If a conviction by a justice is quashed on certiorari on the ground that it is bad on its face by reason of the sentence pronounced being one which the justice had no jurisdiction to award, the case is to be treated as if the conviction had not been made. The accused may be put on trial again on the same charge, and he cannot successfully avail himself of the objection of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit, either CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV) of which must have for its basis an adjudication in fact within jurisdiction. Conlin v. Patterson, [1915] 2 Irish R. 169. 264

Leave to withdraw charge]-See note to sec. 726.

The dictum in Pickavance v. Pickavance [1901] P. 60, at p. 64, that the withdrawal of a summons by leave of the court puts an end to the complaint upon which the summons is founded, does not apply where the withdrawal is owing to a technical informality in the proceedings on the hearing of the complaint; Davis v. Morton, [1913] 2 K.B. 479, 82 L.J.K.B. 665, 23 Cox C.C. 359 (applied in Ethier v. Minister of Inland Revenue, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 12 (Ont.) and Minister, etc., v. Nairn, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 1).

Certificate of withdrawal because of doubt of justice's jurisdiction]— Where the hearing of a summary conviction matter was adjourned after the taking of formal evidence only, and no one appeared for the accused on the adjourned hearing, the prosecutor may be permitted to withdraw the information because of doubt as to the magistrate's jurisdiction; and a certificate of such withdrawal will not be equivalent to a dismissal and will not bar a subsequent prosecution before another magistrate for the same offence. Minute of order to be served but not to form part of warrant.

731. Whenever, by any Act or law, authority is given to commit a person to prison, or to levy any sum upon his goods or chattels by distress, for not obeying an order of a justice, the defendant shall be served with a copy of the minute of the order before any warrant of commitment or of distress is issued in that behalf.

2. If the justice finds the assault complained of to have been accompanied by an attempt to commit some other indictable offence, or is of opinion that the same is, from any other circumstance, a fit subject for prosecution by indictment, he shall abstain from any adjudication thereupon, and shall deal with the case in all respects in the same manner as if he had no authority finally to hear and determine the same.

Dismissal of complaint for assault.—As justified.—As too trifling for punishment.—Certificate of dismissal.

733. If the justice, upon the hearing of any case of assault or battery upon the merits where the information is laid by or on behalf of the person aggrieved, under the last preceding section, deems the offence not to be proved, or finds the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, he shall dismiss the complaint and shall forthwith make out a certificate under his hand stating the fact of such dismissal, and shall deliver such certificate to the person against whom the complaint was preferred.

Origin]—Sec. 866, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 75; 24-25 Vict., Imp., ch. 100, sec. 45; 9 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 31, sec. 27.

When disposal of assault case is a bar to further proceedings, civil or criminal]—Sec. 734 applies only to cases of assault on battery (sec. 734), where the information has been laid by or on behalf of the person aggrieved. It does not enure to the benefit of any one but the person against whom the information was laid. Dyer v. Munday, [1895] 1 Q.B. 742, 64 L.J.Q.B. 448.

In Wemyss v. Hopkins, L.R. 10 Q.B. 378, it was held that the defence of autrefois convict is a common law defence available in every case where a man is put in peril more than once for the same act, whether the charges are made before magistrates or tried before a jury; but that applied only to a subsequent criminal charge, while sec. 734 gives a defence also to a civil claim in the circumstances to which it applies.

Even if a second charge for the same cause be differently framed, but based on the same facts, it will be answered by the defence of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict. See R. v. Erlington, 31 L.J.M. C. 14. Compare as to indictments, with sec. 909.

If the assaulted party died from the effects of the assault, after laying the charge for common assault, a homicide charge is not for the same "cause." R. v. Morris, L.R. 1 C.C.R. 90; 36 L.J.M.C. 84.

To constitute an answer at common law, the defendant must have been placed in legal peril. R. v. Marsham, ex parte Lawrence [1912] 2 K.B. 362; R. v. Miles, 24 Q.B.D. 423.

The certificate of dismissal under sec. 734 may be put in in answer to a subsequent indictment for unlawful wounding or other offence of the nature of aggravated assault founded upon the same facts. R. v. Erlington, 31 L.J.M.C. 14, 9 Cox C.C. 86, 1 B. & S. 688; R. v. McIntyre, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 216 (N.B.); but the justice is not bound to proceed with the trial under Part XV if he finds that the assault complained of was accompanied by an attempt to commit some other indictable offence, or is of opinion that the assault is, from any other circumstance, a fit subject for prosecution by indictment. Code sec. 732.

If the charge laid was for the indictable offence of assault occasioning bodily harm (see. 295), the justice would have no jurisdiction without the complainant's consent to turn a preliminary enquiry into a trial under Part XV for common assault. Twiss v. Curry, (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 438; Miller v. Lea (1898) 25 A.R. 428, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 282 (Ont.); ex parte Duffy, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 277; Goodwin v. Hoffman, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 270.

A civil action for damages is barred on payment of the fine imposed on a trial of an information for common assault if the person assaulted laid the charge or some one else did so on his behalf and by his author-

The bar includes not only a personal injury claim, but injury to business occasioned by the assault; Masper v. Brown, 1 C.P.D. 97; Holden v. King, 46 L.J. Ex. 75; and loss of property from the person and damage to clothing because of the assault, these not being separate from the civil action intended to be barred by the Code. Hardigan v. Graham, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 437, explained in Larin v. Boyd, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 777. Sec. 734 does not apply to a conviction for common assault on indictment for a greater offence. Clermont v. The civil action is not barred if the magistrate was not acting under Part XV, but under Part XVI, as one of the class of magistrates qualified to try certain indictable offences under Part XVI, if the charge is brought under Part XVI. See Clarke v. Rutherford, 2 O.L.R. 206; Nevills v. Ballard, 28 Ont. R. 588; Larin v. Boyd, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 777 (Que.); Green v. Henneghan, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 658 (Alta); Grantillo v. Caporici, 16 Que. S.C. 44. The decision in Hardigan v. Graham, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 437 (Que.) does not apply under the Code in its present form. Larin v. Boyd, supra.

One who has been tried summarily for one of the indictable offences specified in sec. 773 (c) is entitled to immunity under sec. 792 "from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause," but that is all. Nevills v. Ballard, 28 O.R. 588; Green v. Henneghan, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 658 (Alta.).

Certificate on withdrawal of assault charge]—The certificate of dismissal must have been "upon the merits." Sec. 733. A certificate of dismissal by reason of a withdrawal of the charge before the hearing is not a bar to a subsequent indictment in respect of the same assault. Reed v. Nutt, 24 Q.B.D. 669, 59 L.J.Q.B. 711.

Order for recognizance to keep the peace]—If there is neither a conviction nor dismissal on the merits, but merely an order to enter into recognizances and find sureties to keep the peace, the civil action is not barred. Hartley v. Hindmarsh, L.R. 1 C.P. 553, 1 H. & R. 607.

Costs on conviction or order against defendant.

735. In every case of a summary conviction, or of an order made by a justice, such justice may, in his discretion, award and order in and by the conviction or order that the defendant shall pay to the prosecutor or complainant such costs as to the said justice seem reasonable in that behalf, and not inconsistent with the fees established by law to be taken on proceedings had by and before justices.

Origin]-Sec. 867, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 58.

Discretion to award costs]—The magistrates, in cases of summary conviction, can order the payment of costs in their discretion, by sec. 735. R. v. Rudolph, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 206 (Ont.).

There is no right to arbitrarily fix an unreasonably large sum for costs and the court on certiorari may, if it has the material on which to fix a proper sum, reduce the amount awarded by the magistrate, and, if it has not the material, may amend the conviction by striking out the award of costs. R. v. Palmer (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 20, 25 Man. R. 359.

In Regina v. Walsh, 2 O.R. 206, a sum of seven cents was inserted in the conviction over and above the amount of costs fixed by the minute of adjudication; and in Regina v. Elliott, 12 Ont, R. 351, a sum for rent of hall was charged. Both convictions were quashed on the ground that they included illegal costs, the court holding in the first case that there was a variance between the conviction and the minute of adjudication; and in the second case that they could not amend, as there would then be a variance between the conviction and the adjudication. Both of these cases were decided before the amendment to the Code giving power to amend where the punishment was in excess of that which might lawfully be imposed.

By sec. 1124 a conviction removed by certiorari is not to be held invalid in such a case, but the court shall have the like powers in all respects to deal with the case as seems just, as are by sec. 754 conferred upon the court to which an appeal is taken under the provisions of sec. 749. Section 754, amongst other things, gives the court power to make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as it thinks fit. This gives the court, on a motion to quash, power to amend as to costs, and to provide that the defendant is only to pay such costs as he is legally liable to pay under Part XV of the Code. R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask. L.R. 299.

Distress and commitment]-See sec. 741.

Costs on dismissal.

736. Whenever the justice, instead of convicting or making an order, dismisses the information or complaint, he may, in his discretion, in and by his order or dismissal, award and order that the prosecutor or complainant shall pay to the defendant such costs as to the said justice seem reasonable and consistent with law.

Origin]-Sec. 868, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 59. Distress and commitment for costs]-See sec. 742.

737. The sums so allowed for costs shall, in all cases, be specified in the conviction or order, or order of dismissal, and the same shall be recoverable in the same manner and under the same warrants as any penalty, adjudged to be paid by the conviction or order, is to be recovered.

Origin]-Sec. 869, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 60.

Correcting error in costs awarded]—In R. v. Dickey (1915) 9 W.W.R. 144, 32 W.L.R. 404, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 55 (Alta.), an affidavit on the certiorari motion proved that at the time of conviction the defendant was ordered to pay a fine of $200 and the "costs of the court, $4.50," and in default was ordered to be imprisoned for six months; but, on paying, the justice insisted on his paying $8.70 for costs. It was held that the fair inference, in the absence of anything appearing to the contrary, was that the payment was made before the applicant had left the presence of the justice, and that the justice was at liberty to correct any error in the calculation of the amount of the costs and to receive the larger amount, if correct, at least where there was no minute of adjudication.

Recoverable as "any penalty"]—The association of the terms "paid" and "recover" in secs. 737 and 738 indicate a pecuniary penalty. R. v. Johnston (No. 1) 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 6, 1 E.L.R. 95.

Recovery of costs only.

738. Whenever there is no such penalty to be recovered such costs shall be recoverable by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party, and in default of distress, by imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding one month.

Origin]-Sec. 870, Code of 1892; R.S.C. (1886), ch. 178, sec. 61.

Costs where no fine imposed]—On a summary conviction for common assault, the recovery of costs ordered under sec. 735 in addition to a term of two months' imprisonment awarded under Code sec. 291, but without any fine, would be subject to sec. 738. R. v. Daignault (1916) 10 W.W.R. 374, 34 W.L.R. 221 (Man.).

Costs ordered against a defendant on the hearing of a complaint to have a person bound over to keep the peace because of threats made by him are controlled by sec. 738. R. v. Power, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 378 (N.S.); Code sec. 748 (2). CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

739. Whenever a conviction adjudges a pecuniary penalty or compensation to be paid, or an order requires the payment of a sum of money, whether the Act or law authorizing such conviction or order does or does not provide a mode of raising or levying the penalty, compensation or sum of money, or of enforcing the payment thereof, the justice by his conviction, or order after adjudging payment of such penalty, compensation or sum of money, with or without costs, may order and adjudge,—
(a) that in default of payment thereof forthwith, or within a limited time, such penalty, compensation or sum of money and costs, if the conviction or order is made with costs, shall be levied by distress and.sale of the goods and chattels of the defendant, and if sufficient distress cannot be found, that the defendant be imprisoned in the manner and for the time directed by the Act or law authorizing such conviction or order or by this Act, or for any period not exceeding three months, if the Act or law authorizing the conviction or order does not specify imprisonment. or does not specify any term of imprisonment, unless such penalty, compensation or sum of money and costs, if the conviction or order is made with costs, and the costs and charges of the distress and of the commitment and of the conveying of the defendant to gaol are sooner paid ; or,

(b) that in default of payment of the said penalty, compensation or sum of money, and costs, if any, forthwith or within a limited time, the defendant be imprisoned in the manner and for the time mentioned in the said Act or law, or for any period not exceeding three months, if the Act or law authorizing the conviction or order does not specify imprisonment, or does not specify any term of imprisonment, unless the same and the costs, and charges of the commitment and of the conveying of the defendant to jail are sooner paid.

Alternative methods of enforcing fine]—Par. (b) deals only with imprisonment, on default of payment and without distress. Distress is dealt with under par. (a). Where distress is ordered and in default imprisonment, the magistrate is bound to order as the condition of discharge from the warrant of commitment which is to issue on default, that the accused pay not only the fine ordered and costs, if any, but also the costs and charges "of the distress and of the commitment and of the conveying of the defendant to gaol." Code sec. 739, sub-sec. (a); R. v. Vantassel (No. 1) 34 N.S.R. 79; R. v. Bengan, 36 N.S.R. 208. These may be ordered in the formal conviction, although not noted in the minute of conviction, as sub-sec. (a) imposes the absolute duty of ordering them upon the magistrate and he has no discretion in the matter. R. v. Vantassel, supra. But even an irregularity or excess in the punishment is now curable on certiorari (sec. 1124) as well as upon appeal (sec. 754).

A magistrate trying a case under the summary convictions clauses may, under this section, award imprisonment in default of payment of the fine without directing that a distress shall first be made upon the defendant's goods and chattels. Ex parte Gorman (1898), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 305 (N.B.); ex parte Casson, 34 N.B.R. 331.

Sub-sec. (1)-" Whether the Act or law . . . does or does not provide a mode"]-The Acts or laws here referred to are federal laws including provincial laws passed prior to Confederation, but in respect of which the Parliament of Canada has legislative authority. See see. 706, and sec. 2, sub-sec. (1). A provincial legislature may by its own legislation adopt such of the provisions of Part XV as it chooses for regulating procedure and for enforcing summary convictions for provincial offences. So it may be found in many provinces that the procedure of Part XV of the Code is made a part of the provincial law for the collection of fines thereunder, but with a limitation or exception in general terms that its application is subject to any express provisions of the provincial statutes. In that event a direction of the provincial law making imprisonment the sole alternative for enforcing the fine thereunder would, it seems, render inapplicable the alternative provision of sec. 739 for a distress. See Zimmerman v. Burwash, 29 Que. S.C. 250. In Saskatchewan, the general application of Part XV was held effective so that sec. 739 would apply to the enforcement by imprisonment in default if so ordered by the justice without any distress upon a conviction under a provincial law, although the provincial law provided a special mode of collecting the fine by distress. R. v. Schilling, (1915) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 380 (Sask.); R.S.S., ch. 108, sec. 51; R.S.S., ch. 62, sec. 8; R.S.S., ch. 1, sec. 52.

Sub-secs. (a) and (b)—If the Act authorizing the conviction "does not specify imprisonment," etc.]—Sec. 739 will apply where the Act under which the conviction is made does not specify what is to follow in default of payment of the money payment although it does specify a term of imprisonment which may be imposed in the first instance in lieu of a fine. R. v. Horton, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 84, 31 N.S.R. 217.

Commitment to enforce fine is a ministerial act]—The commitment in execution of the conviction is quite distinct from the adjudication in the conviction. The latter is a judicial act, the former is a ministerial one, being the authority to constables and jailers to take and hold the offender, that the sentence of the court may be enforced. So in R. v. McKinnon, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 414, it was held by Judge MacGillivray distinguishing the decision in Re Thomas Lynch, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 141, that a warrant of commitment for non-payment of a fine was not invalidated by a delay of 29 days in issuing it.

Levied by distress]—The distress is to be made by a constable or peace officer; see sec. 741 (2).

Power to detain or require recognizance pending attempt to levy on distress warrant]—Code sec. 745.

Dispensing with distress warrant in cases of hardship]—Code sec. 744.

Stay of distress warrant on tender of amount]-Code sec. 747 (1).

Endorsing distress warrant for levy in another magisterial jurisdiction]—Code sec. 743.

Costs of commitment and conveying to gaol]—The amount of the costs and charges of conveying the accused to gaol in default of payment of the fine need not be fixed in the summary conviction, but may be ordered in general terms; they may be fixed and stated in the warrant of commitment subsequently issued. R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask. L.R. 205; R. v. Corbett, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 499, 19 C.L.T. 251; R. v. McDonald, (1898) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 504 (N.S.).

The making up of the costs of commitment and conveying to gaol is a ministerial act, which does not go to the jurisdiction. If the magistrate, in making up the costs, has not acted bona fide, he is liable criminally; or if, with dishonest intention, he takes too much for costs, he may be made to refund, but the conviction is good: Ex parte Howard (1893), 32 N.B.R. 237; Ex parte Rayword, 1896), 34 N.B.R. 74, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 230; Ex parte Richard, (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183 at 207, 42 N.B.R. 596, per Barry, J. The court on certiorari has power under Code sec. 1124, to amend the conviction by reducing the costs to the proper amount. R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask. L.R. 295; R. v. Gage (No. 2), (1916) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 330 (Ont.).

If the commitment includes unauthorized costs to be paid as a condition of release, the court on habeas corpus will not discharge the prisoner on that ground alone, but will remand him for a sufficient time to have the erroneous judgment corrected. R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425 (N.S.); or leave him to his eivil action if the excess is not large; R. v. Berrigan, (1906) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 329 (N.S.). And if excessive costs have been included the court may on the return of a habeas corpus amend the commitment and the conviction brought up on certiorari by reducing such costs to the proper amount and then remand the prisoner. R. v. Morris, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (N.S.).

In an action against a justice of the peace to recover the sum of $15 paid to him as fine and costs, upon a conviction which was afterwards quashed, it must be presumed, in the absence of evidence of the facts, that the moneys were properly applied, and the costs paid over to the complainant for whom they were received by the justice on behalf of the complainant as agent. There is no duty imposed on the justice in such case to obtain a refund. The justice's personal fees when retained by him are in effect paid to him by the complainant against whom he had the right to retain them. Kaulitzki v. Telford, 5 Terr. L.R. 488.

The costs of conveying the defendant to gaol were formerly included without specific reference to the costs "of the commitment" the inclusion of which is now validated. See under the prior law, R. v. Townsend, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 153 (N.S.); R. v. Doherty, 32 N.S.R. 235, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 505; re J. W. King, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 426 (N.S.); R. v. Cantillon, 19 Ont. R. 197.

If the defendant delivers himself up at the place of imprisonment before the warrant is made out, under a conviction imposing imprisonment in default of paying a fine, the justice if aware of that fact should not include any costs of conveying to gaol in the warrant. R. v. Mitchell, (1911) 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113

Indian Act (Can.)]—A conviction for illegally selling intoxicants to an Indian in contravention of the Indian Act (Can.) may, under Code sec. 739, adjudge costs of commitment and conveying to gaol in default of payment of the fine. R. v. Verdi, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 47 (N.S.).

Concurrent commitments]—If several commitments are issued at the one time by the same justice for enforcing fines under several convictions of the same defendant, there should be included the costs of conveying to gaol in one commitment only. Ex parte Richard, (1914) 42 N.B.R. 596, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183.

Computing time of imprisonment under summary conviction]-The time from which the imprisonment is to be computed would seem to be the time when the prisoner is lodged in the gaol, which date may in outlying districts be several days later than the date when he is delivered to an officer to be conveyed to gaol. See Code forms 41, 42, 44, 46; 2 Hawk, P.C., ch. 18, sec. 4; 52 J.P. 419. The justice can, of course, take this into consideration in fixing the term of imprisonment to be ordered, it being essential that the warrant of commitment shall of itself give definite information to the gaoler as to the time of detention in the gaol. Henderson v. Preston, 21 Q.B.D. 362.

Imprisonment in default of paying fine may exceed that authorized as a direct punishment]—Although under the special Act a sentence of imprisonment in the first instance for the offence could not be for a term as long as three months, there is power under sec. 739 to make the imprisonment in default of paying the fine for any term not exceeding three months, unles the special Act makes express provision for the term which may be imposed on such default. Ex parte Richard, R. v. Steeves, (1914) 42 N.B.R. 596, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 183; R. v. Blank, 38 N.S.R. 337; R. v. Horton, 34 N.S.R. 217; R. v. Stafford, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 239 (N.S.); R. v. Leach, ex parte Fritchley, [1913] 3 K.B. 40, 82 L.J.K.B. 897.

Discharge from commitment issued for non-payment, on paying gaoler]—Code sec. 747, sub-secs. (2) and (3).

Costs awarded with imprisonment in first instance]—On a summary conviction awarding imprisonment, costs may also be awarded, and in default of payment imprisonment for a further term not exceeding three months. Ex parte Tierney, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 194, 17 Que. K.B. 486.

Appeal where imprisonment ordered in default]-See see. 750.

Stay of warrant of commitment pending an appeal]—If an appeal has been duly lodged against the summary conviction and security given (see, 750), the appellant cannot be re-arrested on the original warrant as its operation is suspended by the appeal. Rex v. Trottier, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 25 W.L.R. 663.

Forms]—Distress warrants under sec. 739 (a), Code forms 39 or 40. Distress warrants under sec. 739 (b), Code forms 41 or 42. See sec. 741.

Sub-sec. (2)—When imprisonment to collect fine may be with hard labour]—Imprisonment in default of payment or of distress may be with hard labour only where hard labour might have been imposed because of "imprisonment with hard labour" being a "part of the punishment" in the first instance; sub-sec. (2) applies where the special Act authorizes not only a fine but imprisonment with hard labour in addition to the fine. In that event the imprisonment for not paying the fine may be with hard labour in the same way as the imprisonment of first instance imposed as part of the punishment for the offence. R. v. McIver, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 183; R. v. Riley, (1905) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 346 (N.S.); R. v. Clark, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 17 (N.S.). The phraseology of sub-sec. (2) on that interpretation refers to phrase "part of the punishment" not to the words "hard labour," but to the phrase "imprisonment with hard labour." If it were intended that the enactment should apply when hard labour was part of the punishment, one would expect instead of the words "imprisonment with hard labour" the words "hard labour on imprisonment."

Excess of punishment may be corrected on certiorari]--Code sec. 1124. Case under prior law: R. v. Gavin, 30 N.S.R. 162, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 59, referred to in R. v. Brindley, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 170 (N.S.); R. v. Yantassel, 34 N.S.R. 79, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 128, 133; R. v. Beagan, 36 N.S.R. 208.

Mandamus to justice to issue commitment pursuant to the conviction]—The court has a discretion to refuse a mandamus to justices to issue a warrant of commitment on a conviction; Re Williams, 9 Q.B. 976; and a mandamus may be refused if there is a reasonable foundation to suppose that if the warrant be issued he will be subjected to an action of which the issue is doubtful; R. v. Buckingham Justices, 1 B. & C. 485; R. v. Broderip, 5 B. & C. 239; R. v. McConnell, 6 U.C.Q.B. (O.S.) 629 (Ont.); ex parte Gilbert, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 38 (N.B.); or if the conviction were open to grave objections going to his jurisdiction. R. v. Ray, (1878) 44 U.C.Q.B. 17 (Ont.).

Special statutes]—Where a fine is imposed under sec. 808 of the Shipping Act, R.S.C., 1906, ch. 113, upon a pilot instead of cancelling or suspending his license, payment may be ordered in instalments. Sec. 808 of the Shipping Act further provides for recovery of penalties thereunder in the name of His Majesty in a summary manner with costs under the provisions of Part XV of the Code.

By Con. Stat., N.B., e. 90, s. 11, it was enacted that, "where the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover in any action against a justice, he shall not have a verdict for any damages beyond two cents, or any costs of suit, if it shall be proved that he was guilty of the offence of which he was convicted, etc." In an action of false imprisonment brought against a magistrate, who without jurisdiction had committed to prison the plaintiff for making default in the payment of a fine imposed upon him for selling liquor without a license, evidence was offered and admitted in proof of the plaintiff's innocence of the charge. It was held that the evidence was properly received and that the plaintiff, in order to prove his innocence, was not confined to such evidence as had been given before the magistrate on the trial of the information. Labelle v. McMillan, 34 N.B.R. 488.

Warrant of distress]—It is not essential that a warrant of distress should be dated, and if it is not issued too soon, it is not material that it bears too early a date. R. v. Sanderson (1886), 12 O.R. 178; Newman v. Earl of Hardwicke, 3 N. & P. 368.

It is not necessary that the bailiff should go to the premises and search for goods on which he might distrain if he was otherwise satisfied that it would be useless to do so. R. v. Sanderson (1886), 12 O.R. 178.

A distress to enforce payment of a fine upon a conviction under the Canada Temperance Act is not a proceeding in right of the Crown, but goods seized under a distress warrant therefor are not repleviable unless the magistrate who issued it acted without jurisdiction. Hannigan v. Burgess (1888), 26 N.B.R. 99.

If there is not sufficient distress to cover the penalty and costs, the return upon the warrant of distress should state that fact, and upon that a warrant of commitment may issue, but if a portion of the penalty has been paid the amount should be returned to the party who paid it before the alternative punishment of imprisonment is resorted to. Sinden v. Brown (1890), 17 A.R. 173, 176 (Ont.).

For example, if one-half of the penalty had been made by distress the party convicted cannot be made to suffer imprisonment for a term in addition; and there is no provision in the law to graduate or reduce the term of imprisonment in proportion to the amount paid upon the penalty. Sinden v. Brown (1890), 17 A.R. 173, 176, per Burton, J.A.

False return to distress warrant]—The court cannot in certiorari proceedings try the truth of the return on affidavits. R. v. Sanderson (1886), 12 O.R. 178.

The magistrate is justified in acting upon the bailiff's return that sufficient distress cannot be found although it should subsequently appear that the return was untrue. R. v. Sanderson (1886), 12 O.R. 178; Hill v. Bateman, 2 Strange 710; Moffat v. Barnard, 24 U.C.Q.B. 498, 502. But the bailiff will be liable to an action if he makes an untrue return knowing it to be false. R. v. Sanderson, supra. But it may be shown that the constable's return to the warrant of distress, that there was not sufficient property to satisfy it, was known to the magistrate to be false, in which ease the commitment may be set aside. Ex parte Fitzpatrick (1893), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 191; 32 N.B.R. 182.

Commitment in lieu of distress]-See sec. 744.

Defective warrant cured by valid conviction]—Code sec. 1024. The warrant of commitment is subject to review on certiorari only upon grounds affecting the conviction. R. v. Melanson, ex parte Bertin, (1904) 36 N.B.R. 577. Where both the conviction and the commitment are brought up on certiorari, the warrant will not be quashed if the conviction is held valid. R. v. Melanson, supra; Code sec. 1124.

Habeas corpus is the appropriate process for determining the validity of detention under the warrant; R. v. Melanson, supra; but the various curative clauses of the Code applicable to the case have to be considered in determining whether or not the warrant of commitment is objectionable or insufficient. See Code sees. 723-725, 1124 (2).

If the warrant of commitment alone is attacked on habeas corpus, it seems that the prosecutor may apply for a certiorari to remove the conviction as well as the warrant, and then set up the validity of the conviction in answer to the habeas corpus motion and otherwise obtain the benefit of sec. 1124. See R. v. Gage (No. 1), 36 O.L.R. 183, 26

Can. Cr. Cas. 385; R. v. Gage (No. 2), (1916) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 330 (Ont.).

The court would thus be enabled to ascertain from the depositions whether the power of amendment conferred by sec. 1124 should be exercised, as it may be, in like manner as upon an appeal from the conviction. R. v. Gage (No. 2), (1916) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 330 (Ont.).

Imprisonment who and area of a addition to fine.—This and section 739 construed as if in special Act.

740. Where, by virtue of an Act or law so authorizing, the justice by his conviction adjudges against the defendant payment of a penalty or compensation, and also imprisonment, as punishment for an offence, he may, if he thinks fit, order that the imprisonment in default of distress or of payment, shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment awarded as a punishment for the offence.

2. The like proceeding may be had upon any conviction or order made in accordance with this or the last preceding section as if the Act or law authorizing the conviction or order had expressly provided for a conviction or order in the terms permitted by this or the last preceding section.

He will be liable for trespass if he remains on the defendant's premises an unnecessarily long time. Paley, 6th ed., 319. On that account it is advisable that any consent obtained should be in writing and signed by the defendant, and that his voluntary assent should further be capable of being verified by calling in some disinterested witness when the consent is taken.

745. Whenever a justice issues a warrant of distress as hereinbefore provided, he may suffer the defendant to go at large, or verbally, or by a written warrant in that behalf, may order the defendant to be kept and detained in safe custody, until return has been made to the warrant of distress, unless the defendant gives sufficient security, by recognizance or otherwise, to the satisfaction of the justice, for his appearance, at the time and place appointed for the return of the warrant of distress, before him or before such other justice for the same territorial division as shall then be there.

Commitment when party in prison.-Cumulative punishment.

746. Whenever a justice, upon any information or complaint, adjudges the defendant to be imprisoned, and the defendant is then in prison undergoing imprisonment upon conviction for any other offence, the warrant of commitment for the subsequent offence shall be forthwith delivered to the gaoler or other officer to whom it is directed.

2. The justice who issued the same, if he thinks fit, may award and order therein that the imprisonment for the subsequent offence shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which the defendant was previously sentenced.

Origin]—Code of 1892, sec. 877; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 69; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 25.

"And the defendant is then in prison undergoing imprisonment upon conviction for any other offence]—In R. v. Martin (1911) 75 J.P. 425, Pickford, J., said: "It was decided in R. v. Cutbush, (1867) L.R. 2 Q.B. 379, that at any rate two sentences may be passed, the second to commence at the expiration of the first. The reasoning on which that decision was based was that as sec. 25 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (Imp.), provides that where the justices adjudge the defendant to be imprisoned and the defendant is then in prison undergoing imprisonment upon a conviction for any other offence, the justices may order that the imprisonment for the subsequent offence shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which the defendant shall have been previously sentenced, the defendant being in court and being under such restraint that he may be considered to be imprisoned as soon as the first sentence has been passed, and the section then comes into operation and a second sentence can be passed to take effect upon the expiration of the first. But imprisonment for the second sentence does not begin till the expiration of the imprisonment for the first sentence, and therefore the defendant cannot be said to be in prison under the second sentence, and therefore there seems to me to be no power to impose a sentence beginning at the expiration of the second, because he cannot be said to be in prison under the second sentence as it, by its terms, does not begin till the expiration of the first. Therefore, there is no power to impose more than a second sentence to run consecutively to the first." R. v. Martin, 75 J.P. 427.

There is, however, sec. 1055 of the Criminal Code which directs that when an offender is convicted of more offences than one, before the same court or person at the same sitting, or when any offender, under sentence or undergoing punishment for one offence, is convicted of any other offence, the court or person passing sentence may, on the last conviction, direct that the sentences passed upon the offender for his several offences shall take effect one after another.

Tender or payment on distress warrant.—Payment when party in prison to keeper.—By him to justice.

747. Whenever a warrant of distress has issued against any person, and such person pays or tenders to the peace officer having the execution of the same, the sum or sums in the warrant mentioned, together with the amount of the costs and charges of the distress up to the time of payment or tender, the peace officer shall cease to execute the same.

2. Whenever any person is imprisoned for non-payment of any penalty or other sum, he may pay or cause to be paid to the keeper of the prison in which he is imprisoned, the sum in the warrant of commitment mentioned, together with the amount of the costs and charges therein also mentioned, and the keeper shall receive the same, and shall thereupon discharge the person, if he is in his custody for no other matter.

3. Such keeper shall forthwith pay over any moneys so received by him to the justice who issued the warrant.

Recognizance to keep the peace on a trial under Part XV.—And in case of complaint if threats made.—Procedure.—Imprisonment in default of sureties.—Forms.

748. Whenever any person is charged before a justice with any offence triable under this Part which, in the opinion of such justice, is directly against the peace, and the justice after hearing the case is satisfied of the guilt of the accused, and that the offence was committed under circumstances which render it probable that the person convicted will be again guilty of the same or some other offence against the peace unless he is bound over to good behaviour, such justice may, in addition to, or in lieu of, any other sentence which may be imposed upon the accused, require him forthwith to enter into his own recognizance, or to give security to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for any term not exceeding twelve months.

2. Upon complaint by or on behalf of any person that on account of threats made by some other person or on any other account, he, the complainant, is afraid that such other person will do him, his wife or child some personal injury, or will burn or set fire to his property, the justice before whom such complaint is made, may, if he is satisfied that the complainant has reasonable grounds for his fears, require such other person to enter into his own recognizance, or to give security, to keep the peace, and to be of good behaviour, for a term not exceeding twelve months.

3. The provisions of this Part shall apply, so far as the same are applicable, to proceedings under this section, and the complainant and defendant and witnesses may be called and examined, and cross-examined, and the complainant and defendant shall be subject to costs as in the case of any other complaint.

4. If any person so required to enter into his own recognizance or give security as aforesaid, refuses or neglects so to do, the same or any other justice may order him to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding twelve months.

5. The forms 48, 49 and 50, with such variations and additions as the circumstances may require, may be used in proceedings under this section.

Viet., Can., eh. 47; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, Imp., sec. 25.

Recognizance to keep the peace "for any term not exceeding twelve months"]—The recognizance should bind for a definite period. R. v. Edgar, 29 Times L.R. 512, 9 Cr. App. R. 13; re John Doe, (1893) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 370 (Que.). If the term exceeds twelve months the recognizance is void. Re Sarah Smith's bail, 31 N.S.R. 468.

Provocation for the threats]—It was said in Pouliot v. Descroisselles, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 243 (Que.), that binding over a person to keep the peace was dependent only upon proof of the complainant's fear of bodily harm based upon some reasonable ground, and that it was not an answer to show that there was provocation for the threats; but if the complainant had himself provoked the threat, it would be a circumstance to be considered by the justice in deciding how far to credit the complainant's story that he was in fear upon some reasonable ground. A conditional threat of violence followed on a subsequent occasion by additional misconduct may be a sufficient ground for requiring sureties where there is a fear of future violence. Ex parte Hulse, 21 L.J. 21. Likewise, a threat contingent upon complainant doing something which he had a right to do. R. v. Mallinson (1850) 20 L.J.M.C. 33.

Threats to burn buildings]—Threats verbally made to burn the complainant's buildings are not indictable under the Code, and give rise only to proceedings to force the offender to give security to keep the peace. Ex parte Welsh (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 35 (Que.).

Jurisdiction of justices as to binding over to keep the peace]-Justices of the peace had jurisdiction under the statute 34 Edw. III, c. 1, upon proper evidence before them that a person is guilty of conduct calculated to incite others to commit offences in violation of the law and in disturbance of the peace, to require such person to find sureties for his good behaviour, and in default of finding such sureties to be imprisoned; and apart altogether from the construction of that statute by the course of authoritative decisions for so many years the courts are now bound to hold that with proper materials before them justices have this power to bind a person over to be of good behaviour. In a recent English case it was said that the justices have this power to bind over; although no complainant comes forward to testify on oath that he has been threatened, or that he is actually under fear of bodily harm from the person sought to be bound over. Lansbury v. Riley, [1914] 3 K.B. 229, 83 L.J.K.B. 1236; Haylock v. Sparke, 1 E. & B. 471; and see R. v. Wilkins, [1907] 2 K.B. 380; Wise v. Dunning, [1902] 1 K.B. 167, 71 L.J.K.B. 165, 20 Cox C.C. 121.

The fact that threats, or an assault, which would authorize justices In requiring survives for the peace and good behaviour, arose by reason of a bona fide dispute as to title, does not oust the jurisdiction of the justices to require such survives. \mathbb{R} . v. Witnesses, etc., "as in the case of any other complaint"]—Sub-sec. (3) follows the English enactment in giving the complete right of examination and cross-examination on the merits of the matter set out in the complaint; see the Summary Jurisdictions Act, 1879, Imp., see. 27. Such was not the practice prior to that enactment. R. v. Doherty, 13 East 171. While see. 748 is now included in the Summary Convictions part to which it was transferred on the revision of 1906, it was embodied in a separate "part" of the Code of 1892 dealing with sureties.

Formerly all that the defendant was allowed to do in the way of showing cause was to show that the complaint is preferred by malice only, or explain any parts of the complaint that may be ambiguous. In other respects he was not allowed to controvert the truth of the facts stated in the complaint, for in this case there was an exception to the universal principle that a man may always be heard in his own defence. The reason of the exception (now changed by the Code) was that binding over a person against whom articles of the peace are exhibited is not in the nature of a punishment, but it is to prevent the apprehended danger of a breach of the peace being committed. Pouliot v. Descroiselles, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 243; Rex v. Doherty, 13 East 171. But if the complaint was for an assault, the defendant will be allowed to put in evidence for his justification, and if found guilty the magistrate might order him to give sureties for the peace if the circumstances justified him to do so in the interests of the peace. Pouliot v. Descroiselles, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 243 (Que.).

Repetition of offence against the peace feared after a summary conviction]—If a person under recognizance to keep the peace ordered by a justice under sec. 748 (2) on complaint of threats made, is afterwards guilty of a breach of the peace towards a person other than the complainant, the recognizance may be forfeited. R. v. Walker, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 179 (Que.).

Where a court of summary jurisdiction is satisfied that a person who is brought before it has been guilty of inciting others to commit breaches of the peace and intends to persevere in such incitement, the court may order him to enter into recognizances and to find sureties for his good behaviour or to be imprisoned in default of so doing. Lansbury v. Riley [1914] 3 K.B. 229.

Whatever the origin of that jurisdiction may be, whether it be derived from the common law, from the commission of conservators of the peace, or from the statute 34 Edw. III, e. 1, or otherwise, the practice of making such orders for the purpose of preventing apprehended breaches of the peace has been too well established for a long period of years to allow of its propriety being questioned at the present day. It is not essential to the exercise of that jurisdiction that the conduct of the defendant should have caused any individual person to go in bodily fear. Lansbury v. Riley, [1914] 3 K.B. 229; 83 L.J.K.B. 1226; 23 Cox C.C. 582.

Commitment on refusal or neglect to give recognizance]—A justice's order that the accused give security to keep the peace for one year, but not fixing any amount nor a term of imprisonment, in default, will not support a commitment thereunder. A warrant of commitment under this section can only be issued after the defendant's refusal or neglect to furnish the required security, proved and recorded subsequently to the order requiring the security, and it must recite such refusal or neglect. Re John Doe (1893), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 370 (Que.).

A warrant of commitment by a justice for default in finding sureties to keep the peace must show on its face that the complainant feared bodily injury because of the defendant's threat, and that the complaint was not made nor sureties required by the complainant from any malice or ill-will, but merely for the preservation of his person from injury. Code form 48; R. v. John McDonald (1897), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 64.

Release from imprisonment]—After two weeks' imprisonment in default of finding sureties, the defendant may apply to a judge of a superior court under Code sec. 1059 for a release. R. v. Mitchell, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 344 (Y.T.).

Review of order requiring surcties for the peace]—An appeal does not lie under sec. 749 from a justice's order made under sec. 748 (2) requiring a person to find surcties to keep the peace. R. v. Mitchell, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 344 (Y.T.); R. v. Doyle, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 69; but presumably the entire question of punishment would be reviewable where the finding of surcties was "in addition to or in lieu of any other sentence" in a summary conviction matter by virtue of sub-sec. (1).

Sec. 761, as to stated cases by justices on questions of law, would seem to be available to review on a point of law or excess of jurisdiction only, an order made under sec. 748; Lort v. Hutton (1876) 45 L.J.M.C. 95; 33 L.T. 730. While it is not a "conviction," it is an "order, determination or other proceeding of a justice." Sec. 761.

The court may, on habeas corpus, examine the allegations in the complaint, and if they are on the face of them insufficient, may discharge the prisoner held for default of sureties and supersede the commitment as made without jurisdiction; R. v. Dunn, 12 A. & E. 599; but not to review the decision of the justice as to the construction of the threats. R. v. Tregarthen, 5 B. & Ad. 678. And it seems probable that the court has jurisdiction to bring up on certiorari the order requiring surcties and the recognizance, if any, entered into, and to quash the order if the evidence was insufficient to maintain it. R. v. London-derry Justices, 28 L.R. Irish 440; Bent v. Ingle (1878) 66 L.T.N. 138.

Recovery of costs]-See Code sees. 736 and 738.

Action for maliciously and without cause requiring surveiues for the peace]—It is an actionable wrong to falsely and maliciously cause a person to be required to find surveiues for the peace. Steward v. Gromett, 7 C.B.N.S. 191, 29 L.J.C.P. 170.

Perjury in respect of false charge of threats]-Upon a charge of perjury in respect of testimony given before a justice on requiring sureties to keep the peace the false statement may be proved by oral testimony, although not recorded in the minutes of evidence then made by the magistrate. R. v. Doyle, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 69.

[§ 748]

Forfeiture of a peace recognizance in Quebec]—Forfeiture and estreat of a recognizance to keep the peace which had been required on proof of threats under sub-sec. (2) of Code sec. 748 may, in the province of Quebec, be applied for by another individual than the first complaining party or the party threatened, as the case may be; and this without the intervention of any public authority or erown officer. R. v. Walker, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 179 (Que.).

Form of complaint by the party threatened, for sureties for the peace]-Code form 48, following sec. 1152.

Form of recognizance to keep the peace]-Code form 49, following sec. 1152.

Form of commitment in default of sureties]-Code form 50, following see, 1152.

Blackmail, threats and intimidation]—See sees. 216 (h), 265, 332, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 501, 516, 538, 578, 748.

Surveties on summary trial of indictable offence]—Where the magistrate is acting under Part XVI of the Code (the summary trials clauses) see. 1058 will apply with more extended powers as to the time for which the surveties to keep the peace will be required from the accused.

British Columbia]—For the forms applicable on exhibiting articles of the peace in the Supreme Court of British Columbia see the B.C. Crown Rules (civil); and note to Code sec. 576.

Appeal.

Appeal in summary conviction matter.

749. Unless it is otherwise provided in any special Act under which a conviction takes place or an order is made by a justice for the payment of money or dismissing an information or complaint, any person who thinks himself aggrieved by any such conviction or order or dismissal, the prosecutor or complainant, as well as the defendant, may appeal,—

- (a) in the province of Ontario, when the conviction adjudges imprisonment only, to the Court of General Sessions of the Peace; and in all other cases to the Division Court of the division of the county in which the cause of the information or complaint arose;
- (b) in the province of Quebec, to the Court of King's Bench, Crown side;

- (c) in the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Manitoba, to the county court of the district or county where the cause of the information or complaint arose:
- (d) in the province of British Columbia, to the county court, at the sitting thereof which shall be held nearest to the place where the cause of the information or complaint arose;
- (e) in the province of Prince Edward Island, to the Supreme Court;
- (f) in the province of Saskatchewan or the province of Alberta, to the district court at the sittings thereof which shall be held nearest to the place where the cause of the information or complaint arose;
- (g) in the Northwest Territories, to a stipendiary magistrate; and,
- (h) in the Yukon Territory, to a judge of the Territorial Court.
- 2. (Repealed by Canada Statutes, 1908, chap. 18.)

3. In the case of the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory, the judge or stipendiary magistrate hearing any such appeal shall sit without a jury at the place where the cause of the information or complaint arose, or at the nearest place thereto where a court is appointed to be held.

Origin]—Sec. 879, Code of 1892; 51 Vict., ch. 45, sec. 7; 52 Vict., ch. 45, sec. 6; 4-5 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 3, sec. 16; ch. 10, secs. 1 and 2, ch. 27, sec. 8; ch. 42, sec. 16; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 749; 6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 18, sec. 9.

Offences under federal law]—The application of sec. 749 and of Part XV generally is controlled and declared by sec. 706. But the same procedure is by sec. 797 declared to apply to the limited appeal which that section affords on certain summary trials for indictable offences. And in many of the provinces of Canada, the procedure of appeal, as well as of trial, under Part XV has been adopted in whole or in part by provincial statute with reference to infractions of penal statutes of the province.

An appeal in Quebec under a pre-confederation statute of the former "province of Canada" relating wholly to matters within the present jurisdiction of the Quebec legislature is controlled by provincial and not federal law. Burroughs v. Paradis, (1915) 24 Que. K.B. 318, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 343; Town of Scotstown v. Beauchesne, 5 Que. Q.B. 554; The Queen v. Joseph, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 144, 11 Que. Q.B. 211; Lecours v. Hurtubise, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 521, 8 Que. Q.B. 439; Superior v. Montreal, R. v. Superior, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 379, 9 Que. Q.B. 138, and The Queen v. Racine, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 446, 9 Que. Q.B. 134.

Competency of inferior appellate courts designated although not constituted with criminal jurisdiction]—Where the Parliament of Canada has directed by statute that a provincial court may adjudicate on certain matters within federal legislative power, no provincial legislation is necessary in order to enable effect to be given to the federal enactment; re Vancini, 34 S.C.R. 621, S Can. Cr. Cas. 228; Gallagher v. Vennesland, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 860, 863, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 360 (Alta.). The constitution of the courts is a provincial matter under the B.N.A. Act; but if the court has already been constituted by the province, the added duties may be conferred by federal legislation. Ibid. For the sake of conformity these are usually included also in a provincial statute.

Effect of appeal on other remedies]—The statement of a case under sec. 761 is one form of appeal from a justice, and certiorari is prohibited if the defondant has "appealed" (sec. 1122). This applies both to the summary conviction and to the order made on appeal where the appeal is taken to a district or county court under sec. 749. Sec. 1122. And any right of appeal which a party may have under sec. 749, is taken to have been abandoned if he obtains a stated case under secs. 761-764. Code sec. 769.

When appeal not the appropriate remedy]—An appeal from a summary conviction is a re-hearing upon the merits (see. 754); and although the coart appealed to is to be the absolute judge as well of the facts as the "law" (see. 752) in respect to the conviction or order appealed from, it is said that the word "law" in this connection refers to the law applicable to the facts adduced in support of or against the proof of the charge and that if the defendant wishes to attack the jurisdiction of the magistrate over the person on the ground of an illegal arrest without warrant, recourse should be had to certiorari or habeas corpus and not to an appeal which in itself is a submission to a rehearing "upon the merits" (see. 754). Re Ruggles, 35 N.S.R. 57, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 163; Rand v. Rockwell, 2 N.S.D. 199; R. v. Miller (1913) 25 W.L.R. 296 (Alta.). It is to be noted that there was a reference of the latter case to the court en bane but this was never proceeded with.

Any person who thinks himself aggrieved]—The phrase "person who thinks himself aggrieved" means no more than if it read "person aggrieved," except possibly to convey the idea that the appellate tribunal and not the lower one is to determine whether or not he has the necessary status to complain that the decision sought to be appealed from was wrong.

The use of some such phraseology as "person aggrieved," " person who feels aggrieved" or "person who thinks himself aggrieved" is intended to exclude a stranger to the proceedings from taking an appeal in a matter with which he had no concern. R. v. Frankforth, (1904) 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 57. In a private prosecution a stranger might desire to intervene if he could because of enmity against the respondent or the magistrate, or from other ulterior motives than the rectification of the decision appealed against, but this is not permitted as the appeal can be taken only by a person who would be "aggrieved" if the decision appealed from happened to be wrong. Robinson v. Currey, L.R. 7 Q.B. 465. The person appealing must have "legal ground for saying he is aggrieved." Harrup v. Bayley, 6 Ell. & B. 218; Boyce v. Higgins, 23 L.J.C.P. 5; Verdin v. Wray, 2 Q.B.D. 608, 46 L.J.M.C. 171; Hollis v. Marshall, 23 L.J. Exch. 235; Drapers Co. v. Haddon, 57 J.P. 200, 9 Times L.R. 36; Garrett v. Middlesex Justices, 53 L.J.M.C. 81, 12 Q.B.D. 620; R. v. Andover Justices, 55 L.J.M.C. 23, 16 Q.B.D. 711.

The convicted person being directly affected by the conviction would be a "person aggrieved" if the conviction were wrong, but in case there had been no conviction and no order for costs against the private prosecutor it would not follow that in all cases and all circumstances the prosecutor could claim to have been "aggrieved" by the dismissal of the complaint. R. v. London County Justices, (1890) 25 Q.B.D. 357, 59 L.J.M.C. 146. Hence the express inclusion of "the prosecutor or complainant," as well as the defendant, in the first paragraph of sec. 749.

Although a person lays a complaint as the agent of a society, it does not follow that the society has a status to appeal in its own name on the complaint being dismissed; but the complainant personally may appeal as he is specially recognized by sec. 749 as a person entitled to appeal. Canadian Society v. Lauzon, (1899) 5 Rev. de Jur. 259, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 354 (Que.).

A person who has pleaded "guilty" to a charge, and has been summarily convicted, may raise a question of law in an appeal under sec. 749, but on such appeal his former plea of "guilty" estops him from calling upon the respondent to prove his guilt. So far as his guilt or innocence is concerned he is not a "party aggrieved" within the meaning of sec. 749. R. v. Brook, 5 Terr. L.R. 369, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216.

Compare Harris v. Cooke (1919) 88 L.J.K.B. 253.

Effect of stated case]—If a stated case is taken on a point of law under sec. 761, the right of appeal under sec. 749 is gone as regards the person for whom the case is stated. Sec. 769.

Restriction on certiorari where summary conviction affirmed on appeal]—Code sec. 1121.

Yukon Territory]—Sub-sec. 3 corresponds with sec. 104 of the Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63.

Court sitting nearest to the place where the cause of complaint arose]-The jurisdiction is limited in some of the provinces to a county or district court the sessions of which are held nearest to the place where the cause of the information or complaint arose. The distance is to be measured by a straight line regardless of the recognized mode of travel. Fanchaux v. Georgett, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 458, 8 Sask. L.R. 325, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 76, 32 W.L.R. 863, (Sask.) reversing R. v. Georgett, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 341 (Sask.). While the court will take judicial notice that a city or town is within a particular judicial district, it has not to take judicial notice of the distance of one place from another; Collison v. Kokatt, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 561, 8 Sask. L.R. 167, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 151. Evidence should be put in to prove the distance and so show that the appeal is being taken to the proper court. Collison v. Kokatt, supra. In a matter going to the jurisdiction the court has to be satisfied of its jurisdiction, and it is therefore well to call a witness in proof of the sitting being the nearest to the place or county or district, as the case may be, according to the paragraph of sec. 749 which may be applicable to the particular province; and this although the respondent's counsel admits the fact, unless the judge hearing the appeal also concedes that he will take notice of the fact as a matter of common knowledge.

In case of doubt as to which is the nearer place of sitting, it may be advisable to give two notices of appeal, one for each place. See R. v. Deer, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 410 (Sask.).

Waiving right of appeal]—There may be circumstances under which the right of appeal may be waived by the appellant's conduct; R. v. Neuberger, 9 B.C.R. 272, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 142; as by paying in fine in acquiescence with the decision appealed against without protest; R. v. Neuberger, supra. But the right is not to be held to be waived if a protest is made; ex parte Mason 13 U.C.C.P. 15; or if payment is compelled as where there is a liability to immediate imprisonment in default. R. v. Tucker, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 217.

Procedure on appeal.—Notice of appeal.—On conviction with imprisonment appellant remains in custody or gives recognizance or deposit.—Recognizance to value of property, when.

750. Unless it is otherwise provided in the special Act.—

(a) if a conviction or order is made more than fourteen days before a sittings of the court to which an appeal is given, such appeal shall be made to that sittings; but if the conviction or order is made within fourteen days of a sittings the appeal shall be made to the second sittings next after such conviction or order: Provided that in the province of Nova Scotia the appeal shall be to a sittings of the court in the county where the cause of the information or complaint arose; in the one case to the sittings next after and in the other to the second sittings after the conviction or order:

- (b) the appellant shall give notice of his intention to appeal by filing, in the office of the clerk of the court appealed to, a notice in writing setting forth with reasonable certainty the conviction or order appealed against, and the court appealed to, within ten days after the conviction or order complained of, and by serving the respondent and the justice who tried the case each with a copy of such notice.
- (c) the appellant, if the appeal is from a conviction or order adjudging imprisonment, shall either remain in custody until the holding of the court to which the appeal is given, or shall within the time limited for filing a notice of intention to appeal, enter into a recognizance in form 51 with two sufficient sureties before a county judge, clerk of the peace or justice for the county in which such conviction or order has been made, conditioned personally to appear at the said court and try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as are awarded by the court; or if the appeal is from a conviction or order whereby a penalty or sum of money is adjudged to be paid, the appellant shall within the time limited for filing the notice of intention to appeal, in cases in which imprisonment upon default of payment is directed either remain in custody until the holding of the court to which the appeal is given, or enter into a recognizance in form 51 with two sufficient sureties as hereinbefore set out, or deposit with the justice making the conviction or order an amount sufficient to cover the sum so adjudged to be paid, together with such further amount as such justice deems sufficient to cover the costs of the appeal; and, in cases in which imprisonment in default of payment is not directed, deposit with such justice an amount sufficient to cover the sum so adjudged to be paid, together with such further amount as such justice deems sufficient to cover the costs of the appeal; and upon such recognizance being entered into or deposit made the justice before whom such recognizance is entered into or deposit made shall liberate such person if in custody;

(d) in case of an appeal from the order of a justice pursuant to sec. 637 for the restoration of gold or goldbearing quartz, or silver or silver ore, the appellant shall give security by recognizance to the value of the said property to prosecute his appeal at the proper sittings of the court, and to pay such costs as are awarded against him.

Status of the justice on the appeal]—It would seem that the justice has a locus standi to appear as he is served with notice of appeal in like manner as the "respondent" specifically named; and there may be special eircumstances in some cases making it desirable that he should do so even at the risk of costs. Ordinarily he will do nothing more but transmit the notice of appeal served on him to the Department of the Attorney-General, if the appeal is in a criminal matter. Although served with the notice of appeal the justice is not subject to an order for costs if he does not appear on the notice. R. v. Goodall, L.R. 9 Q.B. 557, 43 L.J.M.C. 119.

If conviction made more than fourteen days before a sittings]—In R. v. Johnston (R. v. Judge of the County Court) 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 179, 42 N.S.R. 537, the opinions were in conflict as to the meaning of this phrase, it being held per Townshend, C.J., and Meagher, J., that in computing the time which must intervene between the conviction and the sittings of the court hearing an appeal under Code see. 750, the term "more than 14 days before the sittings" means that 15 days at least must intervene between the date of conviction and the date fixed for the sittings; but held, per Russell, J.: The term "more than 14 days before the sittings" means that 14 days only need intervene between the date of conviction and the date fixed for sittings.

It is not clear whether an adjourned sittings is to be considered or not in ascertaining whether a conviction or order was made "within fourteen days of a sitting." See Cotton v. Bombardier, 15 Que. K.B. 7, sub nom. R. v. Bombardier, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 216. The words "the sittings" which were there in question have since been amended to read "a sittings." (Code amendment of 1909).

In Nova Scotia appeal to be to sittings in the county, etc.]—This special provision introduced by the Amendment of 1909, was evidently intended to obviate the difficulty incident to the county courts for judicial districts in that province exercising jurisdiction in more than one county with separate sittings in each county. The amendment ensures that the appeal is to be taken to the sittings fixed for the county in which the complaint arose, although there may be a prior sittings of the same "court" in an adjacent county. A division of opinion under the former law had arisen in R. v. Johnson (R. v. Judge of County Court), 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 179, 42 N.S.R. 537.

Appeal to be lodged in due form]—See sec. 752, also sec. 755, which refers to the entering of the appeal.

Form of recognizance to try the appeal]-Code form 51, following sec. 1152.

Return of recognizance]—See sec. 757. The appellant should see that this recognizance is returned so as to be before the appellate court when he is called upon to maintain the competency of the appeal. See R. v. Gray, 5 Can Cr. Cas. 24; R. v. Hewa (1915), 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 386 (Sask.). [Contra: R. v. McKay, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 211.]

Transmitting the conviction on appeal]-See sec. 757.

Contents of notice of appeal from summary conviction]—The notice of appeal by the "person aggrieved" need not include a specific statement that the appellant is a "person aggrieved" (sec. 749) by the decision appealed against, at least where such would appear otherwise; R. v. Austin (1916) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 446 (Man.); Gates v. Renner, 9 W.W.R. 190 (Sask.); R. v. McKay, 23 W.L.R. 369, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 212 (Sask.); as where either the prosecutor or the defendant is the appellant. R. v. Jordan, 9 B.C.R. 33, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 438; R. v. Hatt, (1915) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 263 (N.S.). Unless the statutory form of notice of appeal from a summary conviction indicates that it should be addressed to the parties to be affected by it; Keohan v. Cook, 1 Terr. L.R. 125; Cragg v. Lamarsh, 3 Terr. L.R. 91; Hostetter v. Thomas, 4 Terr. L.R. 224; the address is not material although it is usual. Bezancon v. G.T.P. Development Co., [1917] 1 W.W.R. 436 (Alta.).

The signature to a notice of appeal, if otherwise complete as a notice, is in like manner a non-essential unless demanded by the statute or a statutory form or rule of court made under statutory authority. Bezancon v. G.T.P. Development Co., [1917] 1 W.W.R. 436 (Alta.); [§ 750]

R. v Nichol, 40 U.C.Q.B. 76 (Ont.); R. v. Bryson, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 398 (N.B.). Signature in the name of the solicitor, described as solicitor for the appellant, is sufficient. Bezancon v. G.T.P. Development Co., supra.

The authority to give the notice if not signed by the appellant himself or by his solicitor should be proved. In Scott v. Dalphin (1907) 6 W.L.R. 371, an appeal was quashed at the hearing on the ground that it purported to be signed for the appellant by her solicitor per a third party as attorney, such party actually signing being the advocate's clerk. The motion to quash was allowed as no authority for the clerk's signature was proved, thus distinguishing R. v. Kent Justices, 42 L.J.M.C. 112. Wetmore, J., held that while the notice of appeal might be signed by the solicitor, it could not validly be signed by the solicitor's clerk " unless it is expressly shown that he had authority to sign." But a notice might be so drawn as to be unintelligble without signature, as where it refers to the appellant as the undersigned, and does not disclose who the appellant is. The notice is to state at what sittings the appeal will be heard. R. v. Brimacombe, (1905) 2 W.L.R. 53, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 168 (Sask.).

Filing notice of appeal in court appealed to]—The time limit of ten days excludes the date of conviction or order, but if the tenth day falls on Sunday the notice may be given on the Monday. R.S.C. 1906, ed. 1, see. 31 (h); R. v. Trottier, 25 W.L.R. 663, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102; Sout v. Dickson, 1 P.R. 666 (Ont.). It must be filed within the time not merely mailed or otherwise transmitted, so that it would reach the filing office in the ordinary course. R. v. Green (1912) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 155 (B.C.).

Serving the notice of appeal]-In the interpretation of Code sec. 750, which gives directions as to the notice of appeal on appealing from a summary conviction there may be ground for difference of opinion as to the necessity of serving the notice of appeal within the ten days. It is clear that the notice of appeal must be filed in the office of the clerk of the court appealed to, "within ten days after the conviction or order complained of." This requirement is supplemented by the addition of the words: "and by serving the respondent and the justice who tried the case with a copy of such notice." Commonly all this may be done within the ten days, but it may be that either the prosecutor or the trial justice may be away from the district so that service of both within the ten days would not be practicable. The law requires in any case that where a right of appeal is given the acts required to be done by a party in order to entitle him to appeal must be done by him with reasonable strictness. Gallagher v. Vennesland, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 860, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 360 (Alta.). On the other hand a person does not forfeit his right of appeal unless he omits to do some act which he is expressly required to do in order to retain that right. Gallagher v. Vennesland, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 860 (Alta.). In that case it was held that Code sec. 750 (b) does not make it obligatory that the notice of appeal should be served upon the respondent and the convicting justice within ten days after the conviction. The notice must be filed within that time and a time limit is thereby fixed so that the opposing party may search in the clerk's office and ascertain whether an appeal has been launched. Gallagher v. Vennesland, supra. See to the same effect, R. v. McDermott, 7 W.W.R. 165, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 252 (Sask.). No reference is made in the Gallagher case to a prior decision of the same court in R. v. Wong Tun, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 15, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 8 (Alta.), where Simmons, J., delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court of Alberta, said: "Sub-see. (b) of sec. 750 of the Code requires notice of intention to appeal to be served upon the respon dent and upon the magistrate within ten days after the conviction or order complained of." In R. v. Wong Tun, supra, the application was by the Crown for a mandamus to re-open the dismissal of an appeal and the excerpt above given related to that part of the decision which held that any objection on the ground of want of service of notice on the Attorney-General, if required at all, had been waived by failure to object.

In R. v. Martinuik (1914) 6 W.W.R. 405 (Sask.), sub nom. R. v. Prokopate, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 189, 7 Sask. L.R. 95, it was assumed that the notice of appeal must be served within the ten days, and it was held that oral testimony was admissible to show the date on which the conviction actually took place where it was claimed that the conviction had been ante-dated. If the trial was before two or more justices, both or all should be served. R. v. Edelston, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 155; Hostetter v. Thomas, 4 Terr. L.R. 224.

Notice of appeal served on the substitute for the time being of a public officer who was the respondent, has been held valid. R. v. Trottier, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 25 W.L.R. 663.

Cash deposit instead of recognizance on appeal]—If the justice accepts a cheque as the equivalent of money for the cash deposit on an appeal, it will be sufficient in the event of the cheque being paid when presented. Bezancon v. G.T.P. Development Co., [1917] 1 W.W.R. 436, 439 (Alta.). But the justice could not dispense with the deposit nor accept in lieu thereof something that customarily does not pass as money. Bezancon v. G.T.P. Development Co., supra. (A diamond ring cannot be accepted as a deposit. Dictum, per Beck, J.).

Where imprisonment in default is not directed, a deposit must be made; a recognizance cannot be substituted. Switzer v. Foichuk, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 396 (Sask.).

What are conditions precedent]—Non-compliance with regulations as to appeal may in some cases deprive the appellate court of jurisdiction; the court is to ascertain from the construction of the regulations and the statute whether a regulation that notice of appeal shall be in a prescribed form is directory or imperative. R. v. Lineolnshire Appeal Tribunal, Ex parte Stubbins [1917] 1 K.B. 1; Lockhart v. St. Albans, [§ 750]

21 Q.B.D. 188; Re West Jewell Tin Mining Co., 8 Ch. D. 806. Regulations have in some cases been held to be imperative as to part and directory as to part. Hughes v. Wavertree Local Board, 10 Times L.R. 357.

An objection going to the jurisdiction may be raised at any time. R. v. Crouch, 35 U.C.Q.B. 433 (Ont.).

If the lack of jurisdiction appears on the face of the proceedings, the respondent cannot effectually waive it and prohibition would lie. Alderson v. Pallister, 70 L.J.K.B. 935; R. v. Doliver Mining Co. 10 Cau. Cr. Cas. 405; Clarke v. Knowles (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 189.

Where literal compliance with condition precedent is impossible]-Even a condition precedent to an appeal may be dispensed with when compliance is impossible in the nature of things or when it is impracticable, but the onus is upon the person seeking to be relieved from the condition to prove such impossibility or impracticability and to show that this condition arose without any default on his part. R. v. Hewa, 9 W.W.R. 689, (Sask.) distinguishing Wills v. McSherry, [1913] 1 K.B. 20, 82 L.J.K.B. 71, and disapproving R. v. McKay, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 211; and see Re McNeill and Saskatchewan Hotel Co., 17 W.L.R. 7; R. v. Turnbull, 2 Sask. L.R. 186; R. v. Mack Sing, (1915) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 158, 32 W.L.R. 649 (Sask.); R. v. Lincolnshire Appeal Tribunal, (1917) 86 L.J.K.B 292. So on an appeal from a summary conviction, if the return of the recognizance had not been made by the justices within the time limit nor was it shown that they had been asked to make the return, the appeal is not filed in due form. R. v. Hewa, 9 W.W.R. 689 (Sask.). In the last mentioned case it was suggested that had the justices been asked to return the recognizance and had refused or neglected to do so, it might be necessary to obtain a mandamus order against them before getting the benefit of the maxim "lex non cogit ad impossibilia aut inutilia." Ibid. at 693. Compare R. v. Deer, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 410 (Sask.).

But in re Kwong Wo, (1893) 2 B.C.R. 336, it was held that the hearing of the appeal would not be prevented by the failure of the justice to return the conviction after being required to do so.

Proving service of notice of appeal]—The appellant is to serve both the respondent and the justice with a copy of the notice. The proof of service of the notice of appeal upon the justice should be more than evidence that some one of the name of the justice was served; there should be evidence that the person served was the justice of the peace who tried the case. Pahkala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 247 (Sask.); R. v. Gray, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 24. It may be made by affidavit instead of calling a witness on the return day of the appeal to prove service. R. v. Curran, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 388.

Failure to give recognizance]—The giving of security is an essential part of the appeal, and unless it be done in the manner required by statute, the giving of a notice of appeal will be unavailing and the conviction may be prosecuted as if no notice had been given. R. v. Joseph, 11 Que, K.B. 211, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 144.

If imprisonment is imposed by the conviction as a direct punishment for the offence, sub-sec. (c) is explicit in requiring that a recognizance shall be given or the defendant shall remain in custody. A deposit of eash in lieu of a recognizance is not then authorized. R. v. Fraser, 42 N.S.R. 202. If an appeal has been irregularly entered not withstanding that the appellant condemned to imprisonment had not given the necessary recognizance, the validity of the entry of the appeal is to be questioned only by a direct and substantive application, as by a motion to the district court to quash the appeal; R. v. Gregg, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1345, 1346 (Alta.); or by an application to the superior court for prohibition; R. v. Gregg, (1913) supra; or by certiorari to the superior court in a proper case. R. v. Gregg, (1913) supra. Certiorari might be applicable if the appeal has been disposed of without jurisdiction; but otherwise see Cr. Code sees. 1121 and 1122.

Recognizance as a stay of proceedings]-A recognizance given in respect of the fine imposed operates as a stay of proceedings for enforcing the payment of the fine until the appeal is disposed of. Simington v. Colbourne, (1900) 4 Terr. L.R. 372; R. v. Trottier, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102. In cases where a fine is imposed and in default of payment imprisonment, the same form of recognizance (form 51), applies as where imprisonment in the first instance is ordered, the conditions being (1) to personally appear, (2) to try the appeal, (3) to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and (4) to pay costs as awarded. The condition as to abiding the judgment of the court may mean in case of an affirmance in the one case imprisonment forthwith and in the other payment of the fine with a liability to imprisonment in default. In the latter case the appeal is still one from "a conviction . . . whereby a penalty . . . is adjudged to be paid " (sub-sec. (c)); and it is submitted that his recognizance must (in like manner as if he made a cash deposit) cover both the penalty and the costs of the appeal. There is, however, authority for the contrary proposition that the imprisonment fixed in default is sufficient security for the payment of the penalty, and that an appeal is competent if the recognizance is given for the costs of appeal only although the defendant appealing is not in custody for the default and there has been no distress warrant issued as directed by the conviction to levy the fine. R. v. McDermott (1914) 7 W.W.R. 165 (Sask.), per Newlands, J.

If a person sentenced to imprisonment upon summary conviction gives a recognizance and is liberated under sec. 750 (c) pending an appeal from the summary conviction, the interval until his return to custody will not count on the term of "imprisonment as affirmed on the appeal. Collette v. The King, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 19 Que. K.B. 124.

On re-hearing, the party supporting the conviction to prove his case]-The appeal may be quashed or formally abandoned, but otherwise it is a re-hearing and the respondent supporting a summary conviction must prove his case, he being the complaining party, R. v. Gregg, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1345, 1348 (Alta.); Olson v. Cameron, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 193 (Terr.).

Appellant's liability for costs]—An appellant may formally abandon his appeal (see, 750); and on failure to prosecute it he is liable to costs (see, 755).

Power to adjourn hearing of appeal]—An appeal properly lodged from a summary conviction (sees, 749 and 750) is made to a permanent and continuing court, and it has an inherent power to adjourn in addition to the statutory power to adjourn from one sittings to another. R. v. Gregg, 4 W.W.R. 1344, 1347 (Alta.).

Restrictions on certiorari if appeal taken]—Sees. 1121 and 1122 contain special restrictions on the granting of certiorari in respect of summary convictions which have been appealed against. But if the notice of appeal is void for irregularity, certiorari is not barred. R. v. Becker, 20 Ont. R. 676; R. v. Caswell, 33 U.C.Q.B. 303 (Ont.). Where an appeal had lapsed, certiorari may be granted. R. v. Delegarde, cx parte Cowan, 36 N.B.R. 503, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 454; R. v. Alford, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 61.

Certiorari has been allowed where the appeal judge wrongly decided that he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. R. v. Deer [1919] 1 W.W.R. 410 (Sask.).

The prior service of a notice of appeal from the conviction will not prevent certiorari proceedings attacking the jurisdiction of the magistrate; Davis v. Felnstein (1915) 25 Man. R. 507; Johnston v. O'Reilly, 16 Man. R. 405, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 218; R. v. Starkey, 6 Man. R. 589; R. v. Starkey, 7 Man. R. 47, 489; re Ruggles, 35 N.S.R. 57; but the certiorari proceedings may be a waiver of his appeal. Denault v. Robida, 10 Que. S.C. 199, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 501.

If the appeal was dismissed on the ground that it was not perfected and without a consideration of the merits, the conviction may still be brought up on certiorari if the justice acted without jurisdiction as where it was proved before him that the title to land was in dispute on a charge of destroying a line fence. R. v. O'Brien, ex parte Roy, 38 N.B.R. 109, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 533.

Inspection and Sale Act]—Special provision as to appeals under Part VIII of the Inspection and Sale Act, R.S.C., ch. 85, relating to dairy products, are contained in sec. 317 of that Act. Such appeals are to be brought within ten days after the date of conviction and the trial must be within thirty days from the date of conviction unless the court or judge appealed to extends the time beyond such thirty days. In all respects not specially provided for in that Act the procedure under Part XV of the Code shall apply so far as applicable. A similar regulation affects appeals under Part IX of the Inspection and Sale Act, relating to the packing of fruit. See R.S.C., ch. 85, sec. 335.

Where affidavit of merits required under special Act as a condition of appeal]—See R. v. Curran, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 388 (Sask.); R. v. Marshall (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 180, 31 W.L.R. 702; B.C. Game Act, 1914, ch. 30, sec. 56; R. v. Labbe, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 417 (Que.); R. v. Hyndman, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 469; Quebee Motor Vehicles Act, 6 Edw. VII (Que.), ch. 13; R. v. McLeod, 4 Terr. L.R. 513; Cavanagh v. McIlmoyle, 5 Terr. L.R. 235.

Hearing of appeal.—Disposal of deposit.—Adjourning hearing.— Where conviction quashed, endorsement to be made.

751. The court to which such appeal is made shall thereupon hear and determine the matter of appeal and make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, including costs of the court below, as seems meet to the court, and, in case of the dismissal of an appeal by the defendant and the affirmance of the conviction or order, shall order and adjudge the appellant to be punished according to the conviction or to pay the amount adjudged by the order, and to pay such costs as are awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing the judgment of the court.

2. In any case where a deposit has been made as provided in paragraph (c) of sec. 750 if the conviction or order is affirmed, the court may order that the sum thereby adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction or order, and the costs of the appeal, shall be paid out of the money deposited, and that the residue, if any, shall be paid to the appellant; and if the conviction or order is quashed the court shall order the money to be repaid to the appellant.

3. The court to which such appeal is made shall have power, if necessary, from time to time, by order endorsed on the conviction or order, to adjourn the hearing of the appeal from one sittings to another, or others, of the said court.

4. Whenever any conviction or order is quashed on appeal, the clerk of the peace or other proper officer shall forthwith endorse on the conviction or order a memorandum that the same has been quashed.

5. Whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction or order is made, a copy of such memorandum shall be added thereto, and shall, when certified under the hand of the clerk of the peace, or of the proper officer having the custody of the same, be sufficient evidence, in all courts and for all purposes, that the conviction or order has been quashed.

Origin]—8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 751; 4-5 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 10, sec. 4; sec. 880, Code of 1892; 51 Vict., Can., ch. 45, sec. 8, 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37 sec. 24.

The provisions of sec. 750 are imperative, and a strict compliance with the provisions of the section is necessary to give jurisdiction.

In the case of Kent v. Olds, 7 U.C.L.J. 21, it was decided that an application to take the appellant's recognizance in court could not be entertained, on the ground that although the recognizance need not be entered into within ten days it must be entered into and filed before the sittings of the court in which the appeal is made. It was also decided in Re Myers & Wonnacott, 23 U.C.Q.B. 611, that a failure to comply with these conditions will not be waived by the respondent asking for a postponement after the appellant has proved his notice of appeal on the first day of the court.

After the court is opened for the hearing of the appeal, it is then too late for the appellant to file his recognizance. Bestwick v. Bell (1889), 1 Terr. L.R. 193.

Duty to hear and determine the appeal]-To hear and determine the appeal is not limited to the hearing and weighing of the evidence pro and con bearing on the subject matter of the appeal. If there is in fact an appeal taken and lodged in due form, it must be heard and disposed of, i.e., the appeal judge must hear it and determine what disposition is to be made of it. Pahkala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911, 917 (Sask.). But whether or not sec. 751 can be invoked to support an order dismissing an appeal for want of jurisdiction and ordering costs against the appellant who had given a recognizance, but against whom no notice of appeal is proved, seems not to be settled by authority. A case in favour of the jurisdiction on this ground is Pahkala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911, but it was held also that apart from sec. 751 there was jurisdiction by reason of the recognizance, citing London County Council v. West Ham, 61 L.J.M.C. 210, [1892] 2 Q.B. 173; R. v. Parlby (1889) W.N. 190, and Mackintosh v. Lord Advocate, 2 A.C. 41.

Motion to quash appeal]—The appeal is to be "lodged in due form" (sec. 752) and in compliance with the requirements of Part XV, sec. 752. The appeal may be quashed for non-compliance with the essential requirements as to notice of appeal or giving recognizance or other security. R. v. Gregg, (1912) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 51, 25 W.L.R. 183 (Alta.).

Continuances]—Code sec. 751 (3). Where the appeal is to a permanent and continuing court, it has inherent power to adjourn a case from one sittings to another, and may enter a continuance nune pro tune to carry a case on the list for hearing if justice demands it. R. v. Gregg, 25 W.L.R. 183, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 51 (Alta.); R. v. Westmoreland Justices, 37 L.J.M.C. 115; R. v. Oxfordshire Justices, 1 M. & S. 446.

A mandamus may be granted to require an inferior court to enter continuances and to hear the appeal if it has improperly refused to hear it on the merits and erroneously held against the sufficiency of the notice of appeal. Rex v. Trottier, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 25 W.L.R. 663.

The recognizance given on the release of the accused pending the appeal will remain in force for the purposes of continuances so ordered on mandamus. Ex parte Blues, 24 L.J.M.C. 138; Rex v. Trottier, supra.

Appeal where both conviction and information are invalid]-There is a difference of judicial opinion as to the strict form of disposing of an appeal from an invalid summary conviction based on an equally invalid information; some courts affirm the right to quash the conviction for objections appearing on its face and not cured by the depositions returned by the magistrate for the purposes of the appeal. R. v. Tebo, 1 Terr. L.R. 196; R. v. Brook (1902) 5 Terr. L.R. 369, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216; R. v. Koogo (1911) 19 W.L.R. 246, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 56 (Sask.). Other courts disclaim any jurisdiction on an appeal to entertain a motion to quash the summary conviction; R. v. Dunlap (1914) 6 W.W.R. 3 (B.C.); but would hear and determine the charge if the appeal has been lodged in due form and try both the facts and the law. R. v. Dunlap, supra. It has been held that the duty of the court to determine on the merits the charge on which the conviction was made (sec. 754), requires the dismissal of that complaint on the appeal where it does not appear from the papers sent up that the alleged offence took place within a statutory time limit for prosecutions. R. v. Dunlap, 6 W.W.R. 3 (B.C.). Code sec. 669 (and 711) do not extend to the appellate court so as to enable it to amend the defective information. R. v. Dunlap, supra, per Judge Thompson. A person who has pleaded guilty and has been summarily convicted on such plea may appeal and claim that the conviction is bad in law, but if this objection to its validity be based on an objection to the form of the information or complaint, he must have raised the objection before the magistrate or he cannot raise it on the appeal. R. v. Brook (1902) 5 Terr. L.R. 369, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216. Furthermore the plea of guilty before the magistrate will estop the accused from demanding on the appeal that the informant shall prove him guilty of the charge to which he pleaded. R. v. Gillis (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 160 (Y.T.). R. v. Brook (1902) 5 Terr. L.R. 369, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216.

Varied or substituted judgment on appeal]-If, instead of an affirmance, a different judgment has been pronounced on the appeal, the judgment so substituted may be enforced either by the process of the court appealed to (sec. 754, sub-sec. (3)), or by process issued by the convicting justice (sec. 754, sub-sec. (2)). Collette v. The King, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 19 Que. K.B. 124.

Costs of appeal]—In the matter of appeals from summary convictions or orders four sections of the Criminal Code deal with the question of costs; sees. 751, 754, 755, 760. One of these makes provision for a notice of abandonment of the appeal before the sittings at which it would be heard (sec. 760). Where the appellant fails to proceed with his appeal and has not formally abandoned it by notice, the appellate court may award costs against the appellant on proof of notice of appeal having been given to the person entitled to receive the same whether properly given or not (sec. 755). If the notice of appeal had been given, costs might be awarded against the appellant although he never entered the appeal (sec. 755).

While sec. 751 of the Code gives the court to which the appeal is made power to make such order, with or without costs to either party "as seems meet to the court," and while the allowance of costs is entirely discretionary with the court, yet the section must be interpreted only as giving the court or judge power to allow such costs as are strictly just and reasonable, in respect to the matter under consideration, and the power and discretion of the court should be exereised with caution, and in a manner absolutely just and right between the parties. R. v. Wilson, ex parte Cronkhite, 44 N.B.R. 70, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 224.

The jurisdiction to allow costs against an appellant who fails to prosecute his appeal after giving notice is limited by the express terms of sec. 755 to ordering the costs "at the same sittings for which the notice was given." Other cases are subject to the more general terms of sec. 751, sub-sec. (2). But even in cases under sub-sec. (2) there may have been such a disposal of the case on a prior date as makes the court functus officio as to the appeal.

It is well established law that every judgment or order when drawn up, passed and entered, puts an end to the controversy with respect to which it is given, whether it be of procedure or merits, unless and until the judgment is discharged, reversed, set aside or varied according to law. The judge, by whom it is pronounced, is on entry of the judgment functus officio as it is passed into matter of record which can be altered only by a higher court. R. v. Wilson, ex parte Cronkhite, 44 N.B.R. 70, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 224.

The costs of the appeal awarded against the defendant may be added to the costs awarded by the conviction, and payment enforced by the convicting justice by distress warrant and imprisonment in default of distress. R. v. Hawbolt, (1900) 33 N.S.R. 165.

No reversal for objection to form of information or of process unless objection taken below]—Code sec. 753.

No jurisdiction to state a case to provincial court of appeal]—On the hearing of an appeal under Part XV the county court judge has no jurisdiction to state a case for the opinion of the Court of Appeal. R. v. McIntosh, 14 W.L.R. 548, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 295; Mischowsky v. Hughes, 2 Sask. L.R. 219, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 364.

Unlawful and excessive punishment]-Code sec. 754.

Raising on appeal a question not raised below]—If the point of law raised by an appellant on an appeal from a summary conviction is not one respecting the information or for any alleged defect therein in substance or in form, it is not subject to the statutory restriction that it must first have been raised before the magistrate. Upton v. Brown (1912) 3 W.W.R. 626, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 190 (Alta.).

It does not apply where a conviction under an ordinance although made on a plea of guilty is bad in law because the municipality which enacted the ordinance had no power to do so; nor does it apply if the objection is that neither the conviction, nor the information, nor the depositions in support disclose any offence. R. v. Brook, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216 (Sask.). R. v., Koogo, 19 W.L.R. 246 (Sask.). In such cases the defendant's appeal from the conviction should be allowed without a re-hearing of evidence, there being no valid charge in the information or in the depositions looked at under sec. 753 in aid thereof, to which the defendant can be called upon to plead. If, however, the real defence has been concealed with the intention of first raisng it on appeal, costs of the successful appeal will be refused so as to discourage that practice, although the conviction must be quashed as invalid. Upton v. Brown (Alta.), supra.

No reversal for variance between information and evidence unless adjournment asked and refused below]—Code sec. 753.

Abatement]—On a charge of a criminal offence the appeal from a summary conviction does not abate by the death of the informant. R. v. Fitzgerald, (1898) 29 Ont. R. 203.

752. When an appeal against any summary conviction or order has been lodged in due form, and in compliance with the requirements of this Part, the court appealed to shall try, and shall be the absolute judge, as well of the facts as of the law, in respect to such conviction or order.

2. Any of the parties to the appeal may call witnesses and adduce evidence whether such witnesses were called or evidence adduced at the hearing before the justice or not, either as to the credibility of any witness, or as to any other fact material to the inquiry.

[§ 752]

3. Any evidence taken before the justice at the hearing below, certified by the justice, may be read on such appeal, and shall have the like force and effect as if the witness was there examined if the court appealed to is satisfied by affidavit or otherwise, that the personal presence of the witness cannot be obtained by any reasonable efforts.

Origin]-Sec. 881, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 25.

Court appealed to is absolute judge "as well of the facts as of the law"]—The re-hearing is without a jury, although the court is constituted as a jury court. R. v. Bradshaw, 38 U.C.Q.B. 564 (Ont.); R. v. Malloy, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 116 (Ont.).

The word "law" here refers to the law applicable to the facts adduced in support of or against the proof of the charge. R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R. 296 (Alta.). Sec. 753 applies only to the cases therein specifically mentioned. R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R. 296 (Alta.); Rand v. Rockwell, (1871) 2 N.S.D. 199.

Conviction appealed from to be before court hearing appeal]-Code sec. 757.

In Re Ryer and Plows, 46 U.C.Q.B. 206, Osler, J., at page 209, said: "There is nothing that I am aware of which makes it necessary that the formal conviction should have been returned and filed before the appeal is entered or even before the hearing has commenced. It must, no doubt, as the authorities show, be proved at some time during the hearing but at what time is a matter of practice and in the discretion of the court."

Subpoena for witness in another province]—See sec. 676, made applicable by sec. 711.

Deposition below may be received if witness not available]—Sub-sec. (3) enables the court to receive as evidence the deposition below of any witness whose presence at the re-hearing cannot be obtained. As to this the court is to be satisfied by affidavit or otherwise. If an affidavit has not been prepared, the witness who can testify to the fact should be called to give the preliminary evidence here made necessary. The deposition is admissible if certified by the justice (sub-sec. (3)). This, it is submitted, is provided as a convenient mode of proof not necessarily exclusive of proof by calling the justice as a witness; but see, contra, as to appeals under sec. 797, R. v. Hornstein (1912) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 127 (N.S.).

Procedure on the rc-hearing]—After the notice of appeal has been proved or admitted, the clerk of the court reads the conviction returned by the convicting justice; and if there are any objections raised as appearing on the face of the conviction, the appellant usually begins by stating all his objections thereto at once, so that they may be met by the other side. But if there are no such objections taken, or if when taken they are overruled, the respondent opens his case and calls witnesses; and, if the court thinks the case thus opened and proved requires an answer, the appellant then opens his case and calls his witnesses. And when the appellant's case is closed, the respondent has a general reply upon the whole case. R. v. May, 5 Q.B.D. 382, 49 L.J.M.C. 67, 44 J.P. 538; R. v. Washington, 46 U.C.Q.B. 221 (Ont.).

The appellate court tries the case de novo upon the merits; R. v. Baird, (1908) 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 240 (Sask.); Code sec. 754; and may impose a new sentence at its discretion within the limits provided by law. R. v. Baird, supra. If the punishment ordered below is greater than that provided by law it must be reduced to conform to the legal requirements; sec. 754; but not necessarily the legal maximum. R. v. Baird, supra.

The court on appeal will reduce the penalty awarded although affirming the adjudication of guilt if it deems the penalty unreasonably severe. Sing Kee v. Johnston, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 454 (B.C.).

If defendant pleaded guilty before the justice the appellate court will not hear evidence adduced for the purpose of having the punishment reduced unless it appears that the magistrate has acted oppressively. R. v. Bowan, 6 B.C.R. 271. The judgment on the appeal under see. 752 is a final judgment. R. v. Hamlink, 2 O.W.N. 186, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 162 (Ont.); R. v. Beamish, (1901) 8 B.C.R. 171.

Order as to costs]—The judge is to tax or fix any costs he allows on the appeal; R. v. Hamlink, 2 O.W.N. 186; 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 162, and direct them to be paid to the clerk of the court who will pay them over to the person entitled. Sec. 758. Payment may be enforced by a justice's distress warrant and in default of distress a commitment. Sec. 759.

The court must determine, on quashing a conviction, whether costs are to be paid; secondly, what costs, that is, costs of the court below, or magistrate's court, or costs of the appeal, or both; and when such costs should be paid. If it has been left to the clerk of the peace to tax the costs during the sessions the taxation is invalid unless adopted by the court. It should be included in the formal order disposing of the case. Re Rush and the Corporation of Bobcaygeon (1879), 44 U.C.Q.B. 201.

Where an appeal is heard, and determined against the appellant on the merits the formal order need not be drawn up at the same sittings, and the respondent's costs may be taxed mune pro tune at the next sittings, and included in a formal order then issued in pursuance of the direction therefor made at the previous sittings. Bothwell v. Burnside (1900) 31 Ont. R. 695, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 450.

But if no formal order was ever drawn up, the clerk's certificate of taxation and a subsequent order of the court of general sessions directing a distress for the costs taxed but not purporting to adopt the taxation or to dispose of the appeal, are irregular, and will be quashed on certiorari for want of jurisdiction. Bothwell v. Burnside, supra.

- [§ 752]

No reference of case to higher court]—An appeal from a conviction by two justices of the peace having been taken to the district court, and a question having arisen as to the regularity of the proceedings, the district court judge referred such question to the court en bane. It was held that in such matters the court appealed to, and in this case the district court, is the absolute judge of facts and law, and the court en bane had no authority to advise in the matter. Mischowsky v. Hughes, 2 Sask. R. 219, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 364.

Certiorari limited in review of order on appeal]—If the appeal be to a court of inferior jurisdiction and it has proceeded without jurisdiction because of conditions precedent to the appeal not having been complied with, its order may be set aside on certiorari. See R. v. Wedderburn, Ex parte Sprague, 36 N.B.R. 213, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 109.

The effect of Code sec. 1121 is to limit certiorari in respect of an affirmed conviction or a conviction amended on appeal, to cases where a want of jurisdiction is shown; and see sec. 1122 as to the conviction appealed from. See R. v. Chappus, 38 O.L.R. 576, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 157, affirmed in R. v. Chappus, 39 O.L.R. 329, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 411.

Limitation as to objections for defect in substance or in form.

753. No judgment shall be given in favour of the appellant if the appeal is based on an objection to any information, complaint or summons, or to any warrant to apprehend a defendant issued upon any such information, complaint or summons, for any alleged defect therein in substance or in form, or for any variance between such information, complaint, summons or warrant and the evidence adduced in support thereof at the hearing of such information or complaint, unless it is proved before the court hearing the appeal that such objection was made before the justice before whom the case was tried, and by whom such conviction, judgment or decision was given, nor unless it is proved that notwithstanding it was shown to such justice that by such variance the person summoned and appearing or apprehended had been deceived or misled, such justice refused to adjourn the hearing of the case to some further day, as in this Part provided.

Origin]—Sec. 882, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 79; Summary Convictions Act, 1848, Imp., ch. 43, sec. 1.

What defects are cured]—The statutory form of summons, Code form 5 (see. 658) indicates that a summons shall be under seal. The lack of a seal is a defect of form and is cured under sec. 753. R. v. Garrett-Pegge, [1911] 1 K.B. 880.

Limitation of curative provisions]—It has been held that the curative provisions of Code sec. 753 apply only to a variance between the information and the evidence at the hearing of the information or complaint, and not to the evidence on an appeal from such hearing. R. v. Dunlap (1914) 6 W.W.R. 3 (B.C.).

A person may plead guilty to an information under the summary conviction procedure, and be convicted on such plea and yet the conviction be bad in law and liable to be quashed. Sec. 753 is silent as to appeals based on other objections in point of law and therefore such appeals are not subject to the limitation that judgment cannot be given for an appellant with respect to them unless he has raised the objection before the justice of the peace, if the point raised by the appellant is not one respecting the information or for any alleged defect therein in substance or in form. R. v. Brook, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216, 5 Terr. L.R. 369; Upton v. Brown (1912) 3 W.W.R. 626 (Alta.); R. v. Koogo, 19 W.L.R. 246, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 56.

In R. v. Johnson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 172 (N.S.) County Judge Patterson said he would have great hesitation in extending the interpretation of sec. 753 so far as to deprive a defendant of any advantage there might be in an objection (though he had not raised it at the trial) that there had been no valid information, though it did not become necessary in that ease to decide the point.

A decision by the appeal judge that the information was insufficient and that the conviction appealed from should therefore be quashed, is not a decision upon a mere preliminary point, but one upon the merits, and whether right or wrong, a mandamus will not lie even where the appeal judge consents, to compel him to re-open the appeal. Re McLeod and Amiro, (1912) 27 O.L.R. 232, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 230; Long Point Co. v. Anderson, 18 A.R. 401 (Ont.); R. v. Middlesex Justices, 2 Q.B.D. 516; Strang v. Gellatly, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 17 (B.C.).

Judgment to be upon the merits.—May confirm, reverse or modify.— New conviction or order.—Enforcing,

754. In every case of appeal from any summary conviction or order had or made before any justice, the court to which such appeal is made shall, notwithstanding any defect in such conviction or order, and notwithstanding that the punishment imposed or the order made may be in excess of that which might lawfully have been imposed or made, hear and determine the charge or complaint on which such conviction or order has been had or made, upon the merits, and may confirm, reverse or modify the decision of such justice, or may make such other conviction or order in the matter as the court thinks just, and may by such order exercise any power which the justice whose decision is appealed from might have exercised, and may make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as it thinks fit.

2. Such conviction or order shall have the same effect and may be enforced in the same manner as if it had been made by such justice.

3. Any conviction or order made by the court on appeal may also be enforced by process of the court itself.

Origin]-Sec. 883, Code of 1892; 53 Viet., Can., ch. 37, sec. 26.

"To hear and determine"]—The powers conferred upon the appellate court (in case of defect in the conviction, or excessive punishment), are: (1) to hear and determine the charge upon the merits; (2) reverse or modify the decision; (3) make such other conviction as the court thinks just.

There is nothing in the expression, "hear and determine," which limits the investigation to oral testimony. The words, "hear," and "hearing," are expressions most commonly used to express the act of the court in disposing of cases upon evidence already taken. The expression, "heard and determined," on appeals from justices, is satisfied without a trial by witnesses. The King v. Cawston, 4 Dowl. & Ry., 445. R. v. McKenzie, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 435, 443 (N.S.).

A preliminary motion may be made to quash the conviction appealed from for the lack of any evidence below as to an essential part of the offence. R. v. Koogo, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 56, 19 W.L.R. 246; R. v. Brook, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 216; R. v. Baird, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 242. And if both the information and the conviction are defective in that respect, it has been doubted whether the appeal judge can amend the information for the purpose of the re-hearing even if the depositions show the omitted particulars. See R. v. Dunlap, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 3, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 245; R. v. Whelan, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 277; but see R. v. Boomer, 15 O.L.R. 321, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 98. An omission in the formal conviction of costs which the justice had ordered and had included in his minute of adjudication may be corrected on appeal, for the court is to hear and determine the charge notwithstanding any defect in the conviction. R. v. Murphy (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 445 (N.S.). An objection on a matter of form will not be allowed if the conviction can be supported on the merits. R. v. Sing Kee (1909) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 420 (B.C.).

The court is empowered by sec. 754 to make the order which the justice should have made, and if he imposes costs he may order commitment in default of payment. Re Sigurdson (No. 2) 26 Man. R. 209, 34 W.L.R. 53, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 313. Where the justice overruled an objection that the information charged several offences in contravention of sec. 710, and proceeded to take evidence on all until all but one were abandoned at the close of the prosecutor's case, it was held that the conviction should be quashed on appeal. R. v. Austin (1905) 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 34, 1 W.L.R. 71 (Terr.); and see R. v. Alward, 25 Ont. R. 519.

An information is to be for one offence only (sec. 710), but conviction made on defendant's non-appearance before the justice may be valid if it is for one of the offences only as to which the evidence was limited. If the record of proceedings does not show which of the two offences the conviction is for, it will be quashed on appeal. Simpson v. Lock, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 294.

It is not necessary that the defendant should be personally present to enable the judge to pronounce a modified sentence of imprisonment against him reducing the term imposed below. Johnston v. Robertson, 42 N.S.R. 84, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 452, and see R. v. Johnston; 41 N.S.R. 105, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 10.

At common law in case of misdemeanour, it was not necessary that the accused be present to enable sentence to be imposed, Archbold's Criminal Law, 227, and if not necessary at common law in cases of misdemeanour it can hardly be urged that on appeal under the Summary Conviction Act, it is necessary. Johnston v. Robertson, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 452, at 473. Per Drysdale, J.

Order to state time and place for paying the costs]-See sec. 758.

Remitting the conviction as affirmed to the justice]—See sec. 757 (4).

Order for repayment of fine if conviction reversed]—Upon the allowance of defendant's appeal, repayment of the fine and costs and payment of the costs of the appeal are properly ordered. Regina v. McIntosh (1897) 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 114, 28 O.R. 603; Rex v. Tucker. 10 O.L.R. 506, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 217.

Where special Act permits a further appeal]—See R. v. Barker, 47 N.B.R. 248, 12 E.L.R. 535, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 267.

Costs when appeal not prosecuted .- How recoverable.

755. The court to which an appeal is made, upon proof of notice of the appeal to such court having been given to the person entitled to receive the same, whether such notice has been properly given or not, and though such appeal has not been after wards prosecuted or entered, may, if such appeal has not been abandoned according to law, at the same sittings for which such notice was given, order to the party or parties receiving the same such costs and charges as are thought reasonable and just by the court, to be paid by the party or parties giving such notice.

2. Such costs shall be recoverable in the manner provided by this Act for the recovery of costs upon an appeal against an order or conviction.

Origin]—57-58 Viet., Can., ch. 57, sec. 1; sec. 884, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 81; 32-33 Viet., Can., ch. 31, sec. 69.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

Costs on dismissing an appeal for want of proscentions]-Costs can be awarded under Code sec. 755 only at the same sittings for which the notice was given. McShadden v. Lachance, (1901) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 43 (B.C.); Bothwell v. Burnside, (1900) 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 450, 31 Ont. R. 695. Under a statutory requirement that the notice of appeal shall be served upon the respondent as well as the justice (see sec. 750), it would seem necessary that the respondent should prove that notice of appeal had been received by him before coming to the court for costs. If he denied the receipt of any notice of appeal whether "properly given or not" (sec. 755), he had not been called upon to prepare for an appeal at all. If a notice of appeal had been served, the respondent might still object to its sufficiency in not identifying the conviction sought to be appealed from; R. v. Ah Yin (1902) 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 66; or for some other ground of insufficiency. R. v. Brimacombe (1905) 2 W.L.R. 53 (Terr.); Scott v. Dalphin (1907) 6 W.L.R. 371 (Terr.). If the objection were sustained it would seem that Code sec. 755 would apply to a notice of appeal not properly given.

In Pahkala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911 (Sask.), notice had been given and not formally abandoned, and it was held that the court appealed to had the authority under sec. 755 to award costs no matter how defective the notice may have been and whether the appeal was entered or not, or prosecuted or not. Sec. 755 applies on allowing a motion to quash an appeal for want of jurisdiction due to a defect in the notice of appeal. R. v. Doliver Mountain Mining Co., 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 405. Costs were disallowed under sec. 755 in R. v. Edleston (1910) 15 W.L.R. 279 (Sask.), because notice of the appeal had been served on only one of two justices; and, per Maclean, D.C.J., there was consequently a lack of proof of notice to "the person entitled to receive the same" (Code sec. 755). This interpretation was dissented from in Pahkala v. Hannuksela, supra. The justice who did receive the notice was a person "entitled" to receive it, and to hold that the fact that another person who was equally entitled to receive the notice did not receive it, prevented the court from awarding costs under sec. 755 to the person who appeared and contested the motion, was held to be putting much too narrow a construction on the section. Per Farrell. J.D.C., in Pahkala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911, 919 (Sask.).

In McNeill v. Saskatchewan Hotel Co. (1911) 17 W.L.R. 7 (Sask.) the objection was to the failure to have the deposit returned into the appellate court, but the objection to the jurisdiction was not taken until the notice of appeal was proved. The office of a notice of appeal is to inform the respondent that some particular conviction is appealed against, and care should be taken not to mislead. R. v. Ah Yin (1902) 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 66 (B.C.). A notice will be upheld if it substantially gives the requisite information as to the names of appellants, the intent to appeal, the sessions to which appeal is to be made and the nature of the conviction appealed against; R. v. Ah Yin, supra; but the notice will be bad if it describes an entirely different offence from that set out in the conviction. R. v. Ah Yin, supra.

Proceedings when appeal fails.

756. If an appeal against a conviction or order is decided in favour of the respondents, the justice who made the conviction or order, or any other justice for the same territorial division, may issue the warrant of distress or commitment for execution of the same, as if no appeal had been brought.

Origin]—Sec. 885, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 82; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 27.

Distress or commitment under affirmed conviction]—Sec. 756 enables the process in execution to be issued either by the convicting justice or by any other justice having power to act in the same territorial division, that is, within the convicting justice's territorial jurisdiction. It applies only after the appeal has been decided in favour of the respondent. Simington v. Colbourne (1900) 4 Terr. L.R. 372.

Conviction to be transmitted to appeal court.—Presumption.—Evidence of conviction.—Clerk of court to remit papers in certain cases.

757. Every justice before whom any person is summarily tried, shall transmit the conviction or order to the court to which the appeal is by this Part given, in and for the district, county or place wherein the offence is alleged to have been committed, before the time when an appeal from such conviction or order may be heard, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court.

2. The conviction or order shall be presumed not to have been appealed against, until the contrary is shown.

3. Upon any indictment or information against any person for a subsequent offence, a copy of such conviction, certified by the proper officer of the court, or proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove a conviction for the former offence.

4. In any case when a conviction or order is required by this Part after appeal to be enforced by any justice the clerk of the court to which the appeal was had or other proper officer shall remit such conviction or order and all papers therewith sent to the court of appeal excepting any notice of intention to appeal and recognizance to such justice to be by him proceeded upon as in such case directed by this Part.

Origin]—Sec. 888, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 86; 51 Vict., Can., ch. 45, sec. 9.

Transmitting the conviction appealed from for use on the appeal]— The provision of the first paragraph of sec. 757 is held to be directory only, and failure of the justice to transmit the conviction before the opening of the sittings, will not prevent the court from hearing the appeal, if the conviction is returned by the time the case is begun. Harwood v. Williamson, (1908) 1 Sask. L.R. 58, sub nom. R. v. Williamson, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 195. The neglect of the magistrate is not to prejudice the rights of the appellant. Wills v. McSherry, [1913] 1 K.B. 20, and see R. v. McKay, 21 W.L.R. 369, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 211.

Duty to return information and depositions]—The justice is also to return the information and depositions. R. v. Rondeau, 5 Terr. L.R. 483. These should include notes taken of objections and rulings thereon; R. v. Dominion Drug Stores [1919] 1 W.W.R. 285 (Alta.); but whether such notes were taken or not, affidavit evidence on certiorari is admissible to show the objections and the justice's rulings during the hearing before him. Ibid.; R. v. Richmond [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1200; R. v. Barlow [1918] 1 W.W.R. 499; R. v. James [1918] 2 W.W.R. 994.

Proof of previous conviction on charge of second offence under a special Act]—Proceedings before a justice of the peace may be certified under the hand or seal of such justice; and, if any such justice has no seal, or so certifies, then a copy purporting to be certified under the signature of such justice is admissible without any proof of the authenticity of such signature or other proof whatsoever. Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 145, sec. 23.

Further, by Code sec. 982, a copy of any summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court to which such summary conviction was returned, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of such conviction without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

The conviction before a justice may also be proved by the production of the formal conviction itself. Hartley v. Hindmarch, L.R. 1 C.P. 553; R. v. Curran (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 388 (Sask.).

Where a statute directs that the magistrate trying a charge of a second or subsequent offence shall first proceed with the enquiry and determination as to the latter and then "and not before" interrogate and take proof as to the alleged prior offence, a breach of such an imperative direction will deprive the magistrate of jurisdiction. R. v. Edgar, 15 Ont. R. 142; R. v. Van Zyl, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 212; R. v. Nurse, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 173, 7 O.L.R. 418, disapproving dietum in R. v. Brown, 16 Ont. R. 41; Ice Ellis, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 345 (P.E.I.); Faulkner v. Rex [1905] 2 K.B. 76; nor would jurisdiction be restored on the magistrate striking out the evidence of the prior conviction; Ibid. Nor would it be permissible to cross-examine the accused in regard to the prior conviction when called as a witness on the principal charge. R. v. Van Zyl, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 212; R. v. Dealtry, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 443. But where the legislature amends such a statute by leaving out the words " and not before" as was done with the Ontario Liquor License Act, by 9 Edw. VII (Ont.), ch. 82, sec. 209, it would seem that the provision becomes directory only instead of imperative and peremptory, and its contravention would not go to the jurisdiction. R. v. Graves, 21 O.L.R. 329, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 150, 318.

Part XV of the Code contains no provision in itself for dealing first with the later offence, and where the special Act on which the prosecution is based does not require it, the prosecutor must prove the prior conviction as part of his case along with the proof of the subsequent offence. R. v. Cruikshanks, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 524, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 7 Alta. L.R. 92.

In Ex parte Phillips, 26 N.B.R. 397, it was held that a certificate of a previous conviction for selling liquor under the Canada Temperance Act is sufficient evidence to prove the fact of such conviction. Usually this is supplemented by testimony to prove identity of the person; but where the issue of identity is not raised by the defence it would appear that an inference of identity may be drawn from the name and address corresponding with the name and address of the defendant. R. v. Batson (1906) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 62 (N.B.). Sec. 982 makes a certificate of a former conviction for an indictable offence proof of same "upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender"; but it has been doubted whether it has any application other than to the trial of indictable offences. R. v. Leach, 17 O.L.R. 643, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 375.

Yukon Territory]—In the Yukon Territory every justice of the peace or other magistrate holding a preliminary investigation into any criminal offence which may not be tried under the provisions of Part XV of the Criminal Code shall, immediately after the conclusion of such investigation, transmit to the clerk of the court, or the clerk of the court for the judicial district in which the charge was made, all informations, examinations, depositions, recognizances, inquisitions and papers connected with such charge, and such clerk shall notify the senior judge of the court or the judge for the district of such investigation and the result thereof. The Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, sec. 82.

Order as to costs.

758. If upon any appeal the court trying the appeal orders either party to pay costs, the order shall direct the costs to be paid to the clerk of the peace or other proper officer of the court, to be paid over by him to the person entitled to the same, and shall state within what time the costs shall be paid.

Origin]—Sec. 897, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 95; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 27.

Judge to fix the costs of the appeal]—Where upon an appeal from a summary conviction the county court judge purports to delegate the taxation of the costs of the appeal to the clerk of the court, instead of himself fixing the costs of the appeal, a superior court, on an application for prohibition from collecting the costs taxed by the clerk, may enlarge the motion to allow of an application to the county judge to fix the costs and amend his judgment accordingly. R. v. Hamlink, 2 O.W.N. 186.

Payment of costs out of cash deposit]-Code sec. 751, sub-sec. (2).

Recovery of costs on appeal]—The proceedings for enforcement of an order for costs provided by sec. 758 apply only to costs dealt with by the appellate court on affirming or quashing a conviction or order on appeal to that court, and not to costs in certiorari proceedings. R. v. Graham (1898), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 405, 29 Ont. R. 193.

The party who originally made the complaint need not always continue to be the party respondent to the appeal taken against the conviction; and some other person may take up the prosecution upon the complainant's death and may be held liable to pay costs if the appeal should be successful. R. v. Truelove (1880), 5 Q.B.D. 336, 340.

Recovery of costs.-Certificate.-Distress.-Commitment.

759. If such costs are not paid within the time so limited, and the person ordered to pay the same has not been bound by any recognizance conditioned to pay such costs, the clerk of the peace or his deputy, on application of the person entitled to the costs, or of any person on his behalf, and on payment of any fee to which he is entitled, shall grant to the person so applying, a certificate that the costs have not been paid.

2. Upon production of the certificate to any justice in and for the same territorial division, such justice may enforce the payment of the costs by warrant of distress, and in default of distress may by warrant commit the person against whom the warrant of distress has issued, for any term not exceeding one month, unless the amount of the costs and all costs and charges of the distress and also the costs of the commitment and of the conveying of the party to prison, if the justice thinks fit so to order, are sooner paid.

3. The said certificate shall be in form 52 and the warrants of distress and commitment in forms 53 and 54 respectively.

Origin]—Sec. 898, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 96; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 27.

Recovery of costs on appeal]—If a cash deposit has been made by the appellant (sec. 750) and the costs are ordered against him, the costs may be ordered to be paid out of the deposit. Sec. 751, sub-sec. (2). If a recognizance has been given by the appellant who is ordered to pay costs, the recognizance may be enforced; the certificate here provided will apply in cases where costs are ordered against the respondent on an allowance of the appeal. The special means which this section provides for enforcing payment is an alternative to the power conferred by sec. 754, sub-sec. (3) by which any conviction or order anade by the court on appeal may also be enforced by process of the court itself.

If an appeal is dismissed without any variance of the conviction or order appealed from, the enforcement of the affirmed conviction should be left to the court below, and the power to issue process from the appealate court should not be used except for recovering the costs of appeal. Collette v. The King, (1909) 19 Que. K.B. 124, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281.

Code forms 53 and 54 of warrants by justices in default of payment of the costs of appeal from a summary conviction may be varied under Code sec. 1152 so as to apply to warrants issued for the same purpose by the appellate court. Collette v. The King, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 19 Que. K.B. 124.

Form of certificate of clerk of the peace that the costs of an appeal are not paid]—Code form 52, following see. 1152.

Form of warrant of distress for costs of an appeal against a conviction or order]—Code form 53, following sec. 1152.

Form of warrant of commitment for want of distress for costs of appeal]—Code form 54, following sec. 1152.

Abandonment of appeal.

760. An appellant may abandon his appeal by giving to the opposite party notice in writing of his intention six clear days before the sitting of the court appealed to, and thereupon the costs of the appeal shall be added to the sum, if any, adjudged against the appellant by the conviction or order, and the justice shall proceed on the conviction or order, as if there had been no appeal.

Origin]-Sec. 899, Code of 1892; R.S.O. (1887), ch. 74, sec. 8.

"Six clear days before the sitting "]—In the computation of clear days, the date of giving the notice and the date of the sitting are both excluded, leaving six whole days intervening. See McQueen v. Jackson [1903] 2 K.B. 163.

Stating a Case.

Statement of case by justices for review.—Time limit for application. etc.—Error in law.—Excess of jurisdiction.

761. Any person aggrieved, the prosecutor or complainant as well as the defendant, who desires to question a conviction, order, determination or other proceeding of a justice under this Part, on the ground that it is erroneous in point of law, or is in excess of jurisdiction, may apply to such justice to state and sign a case setting forth the facts of the case and the grounds on which the proceeding is questioned, and if the justice declines to state the case, may apply to the court for an order requiring the case to be stated.

2. The application shall be made and the case stated within such time and in such manner as is from time to time directed by rules or orders made under sec. 576 of this Act.

3. If there be no rule or order otherwise providing,-

- (a) the application shall be made in writing to the justice and a copy thereof left with him, and may be made at any time within seven clear days from the date of the proceeding to be questioned;
- (b) the case shall be stated within three calendar months after the date of the application, and after the recognizance hereinafter referred to has been entered into; and
- (c) the applicant shall within three days after receiving the case transmit it to the court, first giving notice in writing of such appeal, with a copy of the case as signed and stated, to the other party to the proceeding which is questioned.

Origin]—Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28; Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, Imp., 42 and 43 Vict., ch. 49.

Conviction, order, etc., of a justice under this Part]-As to the application of Part XV, see sec. 706. It includes summary conviction proceedings before a justice under a special Act of the Canadian Parliament. R. v. Breckenridge, 12 Que. K.B. 474, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 180.

Stated case by justices]—The statement of the case is called a "stated case," but it differs from the case stated in respect of indictable offences under sec. 1015 on a refusal to grant a reserved case. The stated case by justices under sec. 761 in a summary conviction matter is to be to "the conrt" as defined by sec. 705, clause (b). See 761 (3), 762, 7624, 764-768.

"Erroneous in point of law"]—A similar limitation is made in sec. 1014, giving an appeal by way of reserved case after a trial for an indictable offence upon "any question of law arising either on the trial or on any of the proceedings preliminary, subsequent, or incident thereto, or arising out of the direction of the judge." It has been held under sec. 1014 that a question depending solely upon the weight of evidence is one of fact and not of law; R. v. McIntyre, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 413; R. v. McCaffery, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 193; but a question of the want of legal evidence to support a conviction is one of law. R. v. Winslow, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 215, 12 Man. R. 649; R. v. Lloyd, 19 Ont. R. 352.

As to questions of law, this remedy is open as well against the dismissal of a complaint as against a conviction. Davys v. Douglas, 28 L.J. Ex. 193, 4 H. & N. 180.

A case cannot be granted to decide a question of jurisdiction of the justices prior to any hearing of the information. Wakefield L.B. v. W. Riding Rail. Co., 30 J.P. 628. But a case may be stated although justices have declined jurisdiction. Muir v. Hore, 47 L.J.M.C. 17, 37 L.T. 15.

. Justices are not bound to state a case when the application discloses no point on which a case ought to be granted. R. v. Rutlandshire Justices, 13 L.T. 722.

The case should be stated so that the opinion of the court will finally dispose of it. R. v. St. Gile, 47 J.P. 756.

The court will not consider a question of law not taken before the justices unless the points of law are apparent on the face of the progeedings, though not raised before the justices. Knight v. Halliwell, L.R. 9 Q.B. 412; see also Kavanagh v. Glorney, Irish Rep. 10 C.L. 210.

The justices have no right to appear in support of their decision. Smith v. Butler, 16 Q.B.D. 349.

On a case stated for the superior court on the correctness of the justice's decision upon certain facts submitted the question (of law) for the decision of the court is not whether on the facts presented in the "case," the court would have arrived at the same conclusion as the justices did; but the question is whether the court can reverse the finding of the justices on the ground that there was in law no evidence to support it. Nock v. Malins (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 62; Kipps v. Lane (1917) 86 L.J.K.B. 735.

[§ 761] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

"The court"]—See definition in Code see. 705. The appeal by case stated in a summary conviction matter is to the superior court of criminal jurisdiction not to the "court of appeal" by which cases reserved upon indictable offences are heard. R. v. Henry, 20 O.L.R. 494, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 73.

Court rules or orders]-See Code sec. 576.

Written application for the "case"]—The application is for the purpose of bringing before the justice in a formal manner the request of the appellant to take an appeal by stated case, but the recognizance given and appeal itself relate to the case as stated and not to the application for the case. Yet there is authority for the proposition that a preliminary objection may be raised to a stated case, because the application was not made in due form as required by sec. 761 or by the rules of court. R. v. Earley, (1906) 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 336 (Terr.); R. v. Gaines, 43 N.S.R. 253.

The application for the case; Alberta Court Rules]—Alberta Rule 816 is as follows: "An application to a justice of the peace to state and sign a case under said section 761 shall be in writing and be delivered to such justice or left with some person for him at his place of abode within seven days after the making of the conviction, order, determination, or other proceeding questioned. Such application shall state the grounds upon which the proceeding is questioned, and whether the appeal is to be to the appellate division or to a judge."

And Rule $23 provides that "Slight deviation from strict compliance with these rules shall not invalidate any proceeding or thing if the court or judge sees fit to allow the same, either with or without requir; ing the same to be corrected."

It was held that these rules having been made by virtue of the power conferred by the Code, have themselves the same effect and must be construed as though embodied in the statute. The statutory conditions are obligatory and if not strictly complied with the appellant will lose his right to a case. R. v. Dean, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 943 (Alta.). Fors v. Best, 75 L.J.K.B. 575; [1906] 2 K.B. 105; 95 L.T. 127. The omission to indicate whether the appeal is to be to the appellate division or a judge is not a slight deviation under rule $23, but a substantial departure from a condition precedent to the applicant's right to a stated case, for the justice would not otherwise know to which office to forward the recognizance. R. v. Dean, supra.

No stated case where appeal prohibited]—No case is to be stated under the Code by a justice where an appeal under sec. 749 could not be had, e.g., where a particular statute prohibited an appeal from a conviction thereunder. Sec. 761.

So if an appeal has been taken and tried out under sec. 749, et seq., on which the court appealed to is by sec. 752 the "absolute judge as well of the facts as of the law," the decision is res judicate between the parties and the accused is not entitled thereafter to apply to the justice for a "stated case" to review a point of law decided on the appeal or which he might have raised on the appeal. R. v. Townshend, (1902) 35 N.S.R. 401.

Where a seaman's wages are recoverable up to a certain amount by summary proceedings, the general provisions of the summary jurisdiction clauses will be excluded by an enactment in the special Act declaring that the justice's order shall be "final." Wills v. McSherry, [1914] 1 K.B. 616, 83 L.J.K.B. 596; Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, Imp., 57-58 Vict., eb. 60, sec. 164; Westminster Corporation v. Gordon Hotels [1908] A.C. 142.

A statutory provision in a special statute for a stated case on appeal from the decision of justices thereunder would not of itself take away certiorari. Dierks v. Altermatt, [1918] 1 W.W.R, 719, 723 (Alta.).

Refusal to state a case]-See sees. 763, 764.

Recognizance on stated case by a justice]-See sees. 762, 1097-1101.

The recognizance required by sec. 762 must be entered into by the appellant "before a case is stated and delivered to him by the justice." Sec. 762 (1); R. v. Geiser, 8 B.C.R. 169; R. v. Kettle [1905] 1 K.B 212; Stanhope v. Thorsby, L.R. 1 C.P. 123; Walker v. Delacambo, 63 L.J. 77, 58 J.P. 88. Where an incorporated company are appellants the proper and established practice is for the recognizance to be entered into on behalf of the company by a director duly authorized by a resolution of the company for that purpose. An appeal was dismissed where a managing director entered into a recognizance without previous authority. Southern Counties Deposit Bank v. Boaler, 59 J.P. 536, 60 J.P. 34.

"Stated case" a mode of appeal]—The stating of a case upon a question of law arising in a summary conviction proceeding is a mode of appeal, and is therefore included in the procedure as to "summary convictions and appeals" made applicable to prosecutions under municipal by-laws or a special Act. Zeats v. Johnston, (1910) 3 Sask. L.R. 364; R. v. Simpson, 2 Can. Cr Cas. 272, 28 Ont. R. 231. The Ontario Statute, 1 Edw. VII, ch. 13, was passed to obviate the difficulty raised in the latter case. R. v. Harvey, 1 O.W.N. 1002.

The subject matter of a stated case]—An appeal by way of stated case may properly be taken when the summary conviction is bad on its face. R. v. Turnbull, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, 2 Sask. L.R. 186. But it will be for the court to determine whether the defect is curable by any of the various provisions of the Code which forbid the setting aside of convictions for certain informalities or defects.

The justice should state his findings of fact without making the whole evidence a part of the case or transmitting the same to the appellate court. R. v. Dominion Bowling and Athletic Club (1909) 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 105, 19 O.L.R. 107, per Riddell, J.; Jones v. Cotterall, 46 Sol, J. 396.

The court will rely on the justices and take the case as stated unless there is a patent defect upon the face of it, notwithstanding one of the parties disputes by affidavit the facts as stated, and declares they raise a different question. Musther v. Musther, 58 J.P. 53.

Serving notice of appeal and copy of stated case]-Service should made on the opposite party himself where that is practicable unless there is a rule of court authorizing service on his solicitor. But under exceptional circumstances, as where the respondent could not be found. service on the solicitor who appeared for him before the justices has been allowed. Hill v. Wright, 60 J.P. 312; Gloucester v. Chauder, 32 L.J. 66; Anderson v. Reid, 66 J.P. 564; Teddington v. Vile, 70 J.P. 381. While it has been said that notice of appeal is necessary to found jurisdiction; Foss v. Best, [1906] 2 K.B. 105; Rust v. St. Botolph, 94 L.T. 575; Edwards v. Roberts, [1891] 1 Q.B. 302; that proposition is no longer an absolute one, but is qualified so as to give jurisdiction to hear an appeal where all reasonable efforts to effect service have be unavailing and the respondents were at sea or abroad and without any known place of residence. Wills v. McSherry, [1913] 1 K.B. 20, 82 L.J.K.B. 71, 23 Cox C.C. 254. The appeal was finally dismissed as it was brought in respect of a claim for seamen's wages, the decision on which in the court below was made final by the Merchant Shipping Act and consequently the justices had no power to state a special case. Wills v. McSherry, [1914] 1 K.B. 616, 83 L.J.K.B. 596; Westminster v. Gordon Hotels, [1908] A.C. 142.

In Teddington Urban Council v. Vile, 70 J.P. 381, a preliminary objection that no copy of the special case with the notice of appeal had been served under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1857, Imp., and the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, Imp., was overruled where notice had been mailed and everything possible had been done but without success to locate and personally serve the respondent, and the court was satisfied that the respondent knew of the appeal. And see Syred v Carruthers (1858) E. B. & E. 469. And service is sufficient where given to and accepted by the respondent's solicitors duly authorized to accept service on the respondent's behalf. Goodman v. Crofton, [1914] 3 K.B. 803, 83 L.J.K.B. 1524; Pennell v. Uxbridge, 31 L.J.M.C. 92.

In order to displace the Code requirement of serving a written notice of appeal and a copy of the case stated by justices under Code see. 761, some express provision dealing with that requirement must appear in the court rules; Re Wood v. Hudson's Bay Co. [1918] 1 W.W.R. 731, (Alta.); it is not enough that there are court rules dealing with eases stated by justices. It is not to be assumed that court rules were intended to cover the whole practice which make no mention of the service of notice of appeal and of the case stated and which otherwise would not give the respondent any notice of the appeal until he was served with a notice or appointment of the time and place of hearing. Re Wood & Hudson's Bay Co., supra.

The service of a notice of appeal and a copy of the case where sec. 761 is not superseded by any court rule, forms a condition precedent to the right of the applicant to file the case and a good ground of preliminary objection to the hearing of an appeal by stated case. Re Wood & Hudson's Bay Co. [1918] 1 W.W.R. 731 (Alta.).

Conditions precedent in general to the appeal]—The conditions prescribed are conditions precedent to enable the court to hear the appeal only so far as relates to acts to be done by the appellant and are only directory as to the acts of the justices. Lockhart v. Mayor and Corporation of St. Albans, 21 Q.B.D. 188; Hughes v. Wavertree L.B., 10 T.L.R. 357, 58 J.P. 654.

The service of the notice of appeal and a copy of the case is a condition precedent to the right of the applicant to file the case. Re Wood & Hudson's Bay Co. [1918] 1 W.W.R. 731 (Alta.).

A provision by rule fixing a time limit within which the case must be lodged is so far directory, and not a condition precedent, that where the party has done all in his power to comply with the statutory requirement, and compliance has been impossible from the closing of the offices of the court, the appeal will be heard. R. v. Turnbull, 2 Sask. L.R. 186, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 1; Mayer v. Harding, L.R. 2 Q.B. 410, 16 L.T. 429, qualifying Morgan v. Edwards, 29 L.J. 108, 5 H. & N. 415, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 379; Woodhouse v. Wood, 29 L.J.M.C. 149; Pennell v. Uxbridge, 31 L.J.M.C. 92; Wills v. McSherry, [1913] 1 K.B. 20, 82 L.J.K.B. 71; Teddington v. Vile, 70 J.P. 381. But otherwise the transmission of the case within the time limit is a condition precedent. Cooksley v. Nakushiba, 8 B.C.R. 117, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 111.

It has been held also that a defect in the application, as where it was not made in writing as required, or although in writing, did not ask the justice to set forth the "facts of the case and the grounds on which the proceeding is questioned," goes to the jurisdiction to hear the stated case. R. v. Gaines, 43 N.S.R. 253; R. v. Earley, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 336 (Terr.). '

Signing the stated case]—If the case was tried by two justices sitting together both should sign the stated case. Barker v. Hodgson, (1904) 68 J.P. 310; Westmore v. Pain [1891] 1 Q.B. 482, 60 L.J.M.C. 89, 17 Cox C.C. 244.

Amendment of stated case]-See sec. 766.

No further appeal from decision on stated case]—There is no further appeal from the decision on the stated case, Code secs. 1013, et seq., not applying to give an appeal. Waller v. The King (1915) 24 Que. K.R 127, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 393.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XV)

Recognizance by applicant for a case.—Fees.—Discharge of applicant from custody.

762. The appellant at the time of making such application, and before a case is stated and delivered to him by the justice, shall, in every instance, enter into a recognizance before such justice or some other justice exercising the same jurisdiction, with or without surety or sureties, and in such sum as to the justice seems meet, conditioned to prosecute his appeal without delay, and to submit to the judgment of the court and pay such costs as are awarded by the same; and the appellant shall, at the same time, and before he shall be entitled to have the case delivered to him, pay to the justice such fees as he is entitled to.

2. The appellant, if then in custody, shall be liberated upon the recognizance being further conditioned for his appearance before the same justice, or such other justice as is then sitting, within ten days after the judgment of the court has been given, to abide such judgment, unless the judgment appealed against is reversed.

Origin]-Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28.

Recognizance on stated case by a justice]—The recognizance of the appellant alone may be accepted as security from an applicant for a stated case under sec. 762. R. v. Turnbull, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, 2 Sask. L.R. 186.

Crown Rules]—See sec. 761. Estreat of recognizance]—See secs. 1097-1101.

Proceedings when justice dies or quits office,-Recognizance on stated case.

762_A. Where, pending an application for the statement of a case, the justice dies or quits office the applicant may, on notice to the other party or parties, apply to the court to state a case itself, and if a case is thereupon stated it may be dealt with as if it had been duly stated by the said justice.

2. Before any such case is stated by the court the applicant shall enter into recognizances as provided by sec. 762.

Origin]-Code Amendment of 1909, 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2.

Refusal to state a case.-Exception.

763. If the justice is of opinion that the application is merely frivolous, but not otherwise, he may refuse to state a case, and shall on the request of the applicant sign and deliver to him a certificate of such refusal: Provided that the justice shall not refuse to state a case where the application for that purpose is made to him by or under the direction of the Attorney General of Canada, or of any province.

Origin]-Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28.

Refusal if application frivolous]—A case is to be stated on application unless the latter is merely frivolous. It is to be granted on a point going to the justice's jurisdiction although not previously raised before him. Ex parte Markham, 21 L.T.R. 748, 34 J.P. 150.

Application to compel case.--Rule therefor.--Case to be stated.

764. Where the justice refuses to state a case, it shall be lawful for the applicant to apply to the court, upon an affidavit of the facts, for a rule calling upon the justice, and also upon the respondent, to show cause why such case should not be stated; and such court may make such rule absolute, or discharge the application, with or without payment of costs, as to the court seems meet.

2. The justice upon being served with such rule absolute, shall state a case accordingly, upon the appellant entering into such recognizance as hereinbefore provided.

Origin]—Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28. To "the court"]—Sec secs. 705 (b).

Hearing of case stated .- Order final.- No costs against justice.

765. The court to which a case is transmitted shall hear and determine the question or questions of law arising thereon and shall thereupon affirm, reverse or modify the conviction, order or determination in respect of which the case has been stated, or remit the matter to the justice with the opinion of the court thereon, and may make such other order in relation to the matter, and such orders as to costs, as to the court seems fit; and all such orders shall be final and conclusive upon all parties.

2. No justice who states and delivers a case shall be liable to any costs in respect or by reason of such appeal against his determination.

Origin]-Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Viet., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28. Conditions precedent]-Code sec. 761.

Question of law on the sufficiency of the evidence]—On a case stated by a magistrate as to the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant the conviction, the appellate court will not deal with the question of the weight of evidence further than to satisfy itself that the case could not have been withdrawn from the jury if a jury trial had been possible. Zeats v. Johnston, (1910) 3 Sask. R. 364.

If no evidence by the defence, the conviction may be sustained on the relevant testimony although irrelevant testimony was improperly admitted. R. v. Nugent, (1904) 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

Question as to illegal excess of penalty]—If the penalty is held to be above the legal limit it may be reduced on the hearing of a stated case under the powers conferred by sec. 765. See R. v. Power, (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 264 (N.S.).

Question of law not raised below]—Unless a question of law raised for the first time on the hearing of the appeal is one which no evidence could alter, it will not be entertained. Kates v. Jeffery [1914] 3 K.B. 160, 83 L.J.K.B. 1760, explaining Giebler v. Manning, [1906] 1 K.B. 709, 75 L.J.K.B. 463; Knight v. Halliwell, (1874) L.R. 9 Q.B. 412; Simpson v. Lock, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 294.

"Shall be final and conclusive"]—Any right of appeal under sec. 749 is to be taken as abandoned. Code sec. 769.

Order as to costs]—The respondent may be ordered to pay costs of an appeal rendered necessary by the objection he had raised before the justice although he does not appear on the hearing of the stated case. Robinson v. Gregory, [1905] 1 K.B. 534.

"The court"]-See secs. 705 (b) and 766 (b).

Justice protected on enforcing conviction after affirmance or amendment]—Code sec. 1151.

Remitting case for amendment.-Practice as to hearing in Chambers.

766. The court for the opinion of which a case is stated shall have power, if it thinks fit, to cause the case to be sent back for amendment; and thereupon the same shall be amended accordingly, and judgment shall be delivered after it has been amended.

2. The authority and jurisdiction of the court for the opinion of which a case is stated may, subject to any rules and orders of court in relation thereto, be exercised by a judge of such court sitting in chambers, and as well in vacation as in term time.

Origin]—Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28. Judge of such court sitting in Chambers]—See sec. 705 (b). Crown Rules]—See secs. 576, 761.

Enforcement of conviction by justice.-By process of court.

767. After the decision of the court in relation to any case stated for their opinion, the justice in relation to whose determination the case has been stated, or any other justice exercising the same jurisdiction, shall have the same authority to enforce any conviction, order or determination which has been affirmed, amended or made by such court as the justice who originally decided the case would have had to enforce his determination if a case had not been stated.

2. If the court deems it necessary or expedient any order of the court may be enforced by its own process.

Origin]—Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 28. "The court"]—See secs. 705 (b) and 766 (2). Estreat of recognizance]—See secs. 1097-1101.

n

768. No writ of certiorari or other writ shall be required for the removal of any conviction, order or other determination in relation to which a case is stated as aforesaid for obtaining the judgment or determination of a superior court on such case.

Origin]-Sec. 900, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 8.

Statement of case precludes appeal.—No case to be stated when no appeal permitted.

769. Every person for whom a case is stated as aforesaid in respect of any determination of a justice from which he is entitled to an appeal under sec. 749, shall be taken to have abandoned his said right of appeal finally and conclusively and to all intents and purposes.

2. Where, by any special Act, it is provided that there shall be no appeal from any conviction or order, no proceedings shall be taken to have a case stated or signed as aforesaid in any case to which such provision as to appeal in such special Act applies.

Origin]-Sec. 900, Code of 1892.

"For whom a case is stated "]-It is not open to the party who has given a recognizance and obtained the justice to sign a stated case to so abandon it as to qualify him for thereafter appealing on both facts and law to the tribunal constituted under sec. 749.

Effect of awarding unauthorized or excessive costs]—Where a warrant of commitment includes unauthorized costs to be paid as a condition of release, the court will not discharge the prisoner on that ground alone, but will remand him for a sufficient time to have the erroneous judgment corrected. R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425 (N.S.); nor will a conviction be quashed on the ground of excessive costs. Ex parte Rayworth, 24 N.B.R. 74, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 230. The magistrate is liable in a civil action to refund that part of the costs imposed by him which is unauthorized. Ex parte Howard, 32 N.B.R. 237.

Where unauthorized costs are included in a "summary conviction," the court on certiorari has power, under Code sec. 1124, to amend the conviction by reducing the costs to the proper items. R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask. L.R. 295; R. v. Harris, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 398; R. v. Turnbull, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 5; R. v. Mah Sam, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 5. But it would seem that an order for costs against the informant is not a conviction or order within the scope of sec. 1124; R. v. Laird, 1 Terr. L.R. 179. Sec. 1124 relates to convictions or orders which evidence the commission of an "offence" and impose a "punishment" therefor.

The amount of the costs and charges of conveying the accused to gaol in default of payment of the fine (Code sec. 739), need not be fixed in the summary conviction; R. v. Code, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372, 1 Sask, L.R. 295.

Item 6 of the constable's fees was amended in 1917 so as to omit all reference to "disbursements" as an addition to the mileage. See, under the former item 6, the case of Re Hoskins, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 435, 13 E.L.R. 143.

Application of tariffs]—The tariffs of costs here are primarily for proceedings under Part XV; but the amendment made to the Constables tariff in 1917 makes it include certain costs and charges, applicable only to preliminary enquiries and summary trials under Part XVI. Costs ordered to be paid by the defendant on a summary conviction are to be reasonable and "not inconsistent with the fees established by law to be taken on proceedings had by and before justices." Code sec. 735. Tariffs, for similar services in regard to provincial offences and for services payable out of public funds of the province in the administration of the criminal law may be found in the statutes of the provinces

Ontario provincial laws]—By the Ontario Summary Convictions Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 90, sec. 4, the tariff provided in Part XV of the Crim. Code is made applicable to summary convictions under Ontario laws and fees of constables in such matters are governed by the Code tariff and not by the tariff in schedule A to the Administration of Justice Expenses Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 96.

Quebec provincial laws]—In Zimmerman v. Burwash, 29 Que. S.C. 250, a conviction under a provincial game law was held invalid because the costs were in excess of the authorized tariff. The proceeding was, however, by action to declare void the summary conviction, a procedure permitted in Quebec under article 50 C.P. Que., notwithstanding that an appeal against the conviction might have been taken to another tribunal. See also Ex parte Msadaquis, 16 Que. P.R. 26 (in which a commitment was held indivisible as to excess costs), and Ex parte Martin, 22 L.C.J. 88.

- (vi) in the Yukon Territory, any judge of the Territorial Court, any two justices sitting together and any functionary or tribunal having the powers of two justices,
- (vii) in all the provinces, where the defendant is charged with any of the offences mentioned in paragraphs (a) and (f) of sec. 773, any two justices sitting together;
- (b) 'the common gaol or other place of confinement,' in the case of any offender whose age at the time of his conviction does not, in the opinion of the magistrate, exceed sixteen years, includes any reformatory prison provided for the reception of juvenile offenders in the province in which the conviction referred to takes place, and to which by the law of that province the offender may be sent; and,
- (c) 'property' includes everything within the meaning of 'valuable security,' as defined by this Act.

2. In any case where the value of any valuable security is necessary to be determined it shall be reckoned in the manner prescribed by sec. 4.

Origin]—6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; 58-59 Vict., Can., ch. 40, sec. 1; Code of 1892, sec. 782; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 2; 32-33 Vict., Can. (1869), ch. 32.

Summary trial]—The procedure under Part XVI is commonly given the technical designation of "summary trial" (procès summaire) while that under Part XV is a summary proceeding, or more accurately, a summary conviction proceeding.

Police magistrates in Ontario]-Police magistrates in Ontario are appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, and hold office during pleasure. Every city must have one, and so must towns having a population of 5,000 or over. Special provision is made for the eity of Toronto, which may have three police magistrates. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88. A second police magistrate may be appointed for any other city, on a resolution passed on a two-thirds' vote of its municipal council, and the duties of the office may be divided by order-in-council. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 5. The salary is payable by the municipality and is subject to a statutory minimum. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint a police magistrate without salary for any incorporated town which has no salaried magistrate. In cities of not less than 40,000, a deputy police magistrate may be appointed by the like authority authorized to perform the duties of the office in case of the death, illness, or absence of the police magistrate. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 9. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may also appoint a police magistrate for a county or district, but his jurisdiction shall not extend to any city, town or village for which there is a police magistrate, "nor to any case in which the initiatory proceedings were taken by or before such last mentioned police magistrate." R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 15. Every police magistrate is ex officio a justice of the peace for the whole county or district in which the city or town for which he is police magistrate is situate. Ibid., sec. 24. Where one justice of the peace has jurisdiction, as in summary conviction matters, where the enabling statute does not require two justices or a police magistrate with the powers of two justices, and the case is pending before a police magistrate, a single justice of the peace may act in his place in case of his absence or illness or at his request; and in other cases two or more justices may in such event act in the place of the police magistrate. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, secs. 26 and 27. And in case of the illness or "absence from the county or district" of a police magistrate, any other police magistrate whether appointed for the county or district or for a city, town, village or other place therein, shall have all the powers and may perform all the duties of the police magistrate during such illness or absence from the county. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 88, sec. 34.

North-West Territories]-Separate provisions for summary trial of certain offences, including theft up to $200, are contained in the N.W.T. Act, R.S.C., ch. 62, sec. 38.

Fukon Territory]—For additional powers of summary trial in the Yukon, see the Yukon Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 63 and amendments; the Yukon Act controls in that territory under Code sec. 9. Every judge of the Territorial Court of the Yukon and every commissioned officer of the R.N.W. Mounted Police has by sec. 105 of the Yukon Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 63, all the powers of two justices of the peace. Sections 89-94 of the Yukon Act makes special provision in reference to the jurisdiction of police magistrates at Dawson, at Whitehorse, in the Yukon.

Dominion Elections Act]-Provisions of Part XVI apply to all proceedings under the Dominion Elections Act, R.S.C., ch. 6, under secs. 294-300 of that Act in charges of personation.

Application of Part.

Part XVII not affected.

[§ 771]

772. Nothing in this Part shall affect the provisions of Part XVII, and this Part shall not extend to persons punishable under that Part so far as regards offences for which such persons may be punished thereunder.

Origin]-Sec. 808, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 35.

When accused is a juvenile of sixteen or under]—Code sec. 805 and other provisions of Part XVII apply where the juvenile is charged before a justice with having committed or having attempted to commit any offence which is theft or punishable as theft (sec. 802). Part XVII does not apply in British Columbia or Prince Edward Island if the theft is of a class which is punishable by imprisonment for two years or upwards. Code sec. 801. See also the Juvenile Delinquents Act, 1908, Can., ch. 40 (and amendments) in districts in which the latter Act has been proclaimed to be in force.

Jurisdiction.

Summary trial.—Theft not exceeding ten dollars.—Attempt.— Aggravated assault.—Indecent assault.—Assault on peace officer.—Inmate of house of ill-fame.—Keeping disorderly house.—Betting offences.

773. Whenever any person is charged before a magistrate,—
(a) with theft, or obtaining money or property by false pretenses, or unlawfully receiving stolen property, where the value of the property does not, in the judgment of the magistrate, exceed ten dollars; or,

- (b) with attempt to commit theft; or,
 - (c) with unlawfully wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm upon any other person, either with or without a weapon or instrument; or,
 - (d) with indecent assault upon a male person whose age does not, in the opinion of the magistrate, exceed fourteen years, when such assault is of a nature which cannot, in the opinion of the magistrate, be sufficiently punished by a summary conviction before him under any other Part; or with indecent assault upon a female, not amounting, in the magistrate's opinion, to an assault with intent to commit a rape; or,
 - (e) with assaulting or obstructing any public or peace officer engaged in the execution of his duty, or any person acting in aid of such officer; or,
 - (f) with keeping a disorderly house under sec. 228 or with being an inmate of a common bawdy-house under sec. 229A; or,
 - (g) with any offence under sec. 235;

the magistrate may, subject to the subsequent provisions of this Part, hear and determine the charge in a summary way.

Origin]—5 Geo. V, Can., ch. 12, sec. 8; 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 773; sec. 783, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 3.

Jurisdiction generally]—The maxim omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta does not apply to give jurisdiction to an inferior court; on the contrary, nothing is to be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior court but that which is so expressly alleged. Falkingham v. Vietorian Railway Company [1900] A.C. 452; R. v. Taylor, 5 W.W.R. 1105, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652.

Where a magistrate has jurisdiction over the particular offence either as one for which a summary conviction may be made or as one for which he has power of summary trial as for an indictable offence without the consent of the accused, it is essential to the exercise of the latter jurisdiction that the magistrate should expressly declare on commencing the trial that he will proceed under the "summary trials" clauses of the Code. R. v. Belmont, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 89; R. v. Romer, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235.

The jurisdiction under Part XVI being purely statutory, it is open to collateral attack by evidence dehors the proceedings, whether or not the record of proceedings purports to show jurisdiction. R. v. Taylor, 5 W.W.R. 1105, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652.

"Subject to the subsequent provisions of this Part"]—Sec. 778 makes it a condition precedent to trial that the accused shall have elected summary trial under the formalities of sec. 778 in all cases in which there is no provision making the jurisdiction absolute without the consent of the accused. R. v. Crossen, 12 Man. R. 571; R. v. Helliwell, (1914) 30 O.L.R. 504, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 146. The conditions as to offences and locality which make the jurisdiction absolute are contained in secs. 774-776 inclusive, and in sec. 777, sub-sec. (5). And see R. v. Morton (1914) 7 W.W.R. 95, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 172.

Assault occasioning bodily harm]—It is doubted whether this offence is within sec. 773. See notes to secs. 274, 295; R. v. Law (1916), 9 W.W.R. 1075, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 251 (Alta.); R. v. Sharpe, 20 Man. R. 555; and see note to sec. 951.

Summary trials for theft]-See notes to sees. 386, 777, 782, 783.

Summary trials for receiving stolen property]—See notes to sec. 399, 777.

Summary trials for unlawful wounding]-See note to sec. 274.

Summary trials for inflicting grievous bodily harm]—See note to sec. 274.

Summary trials for indecent assault on male]-See note to sec. 293.

Summary trials for indecent assault on female]—See note to see. 292.

Summary trials for assaulting officer in execution of his duty]—See note to sec. 296.

Summary trials for keeping disorderly house]-See note to sec 228.

Summary trials for being inmate of bawdy-house]—See note to sec. 229A.

Summary trials for betting and "bookmaking" offences]-See note to see. 235.

Jurisdiction of two justices in any province for offences under paragraphs (a) and (f)]—See paragraph (VII) of sec. 771 and sec. 797, as to appeals. Sec. 771, paragraph (VII) is not intended to exclude the jurisdiction of officials qualified under any of the other paragraphs to try offences under 773 (a) and 773 (f).

Theft by person not over sixteen]—See sees. 802-821, under which a special jurisdiction is conferred on two justices and certain other functionaries. Neither see. 773 nor 777 apply to juveniles punishable under secs. 802-821. Sec. 772. And, as to localities in which the Juvenile Delinquents Act is in force, see that Act, 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 40; 2 Geo. V, ch. 30; 4-5 Geo. V, ch. 39.

Extended jurisdiction of certain police magistrates]—Code sec. 777. Restitution of property]—See Code secs. 795 and 1050.

Compensation of bona fide purchasers of stolen property]—Code sec. 1049.

When magistrate may send case for trial in higher court]—Special circumstances may weigh with the magistrate in declining jurisdiction to summarily try the accused and proceeding with a preliminary enquiry and committal for trial by indictment, in which case the accused may elect "speedy trial" under Part XVIII of the Code before the tribunal specified in Code sec. 823; but the magistrate must decide before the defendant has "made his defence" (Code sec. 784), which probably means before the evidence for the defence is entered upon. Ex parte Cook, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 72, B.C.R. 18; Code sec. 832.

An information for theft of property of less value than $10 may be laid and preliminary enquiry held before a justice of the peace in New Brunswick in his capacity as such, although he was also a county stipendiary magistrate with power of summary trial under Part XVI (Code sec. 773), without any obligation to give the accused an opportunity to elect for a summary trial before such county stipendiary magistrate. R. v. Howe, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 215, 42 N.B.R. 378.

As to appeal]—No appeal lies from the decision of a judge of the sessions, police magistrate, district magistrate or other single functionary mentioned in sec. 771, holding a "summary trial" under this section. R. v. Racine, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 446, 9 Que. Q.B. 134; R. v. Nixon, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 33 (Ont.). But where two justices of the peace exercise jurisdiction under this Part a special right of appeal in like manner as under Part XV is conferred by sub-sec. 797 as to offences under paragraphs (a) and (f) of sec. 773.

The same offences as are triable under paragraph (a) may be tried before the police magistrate of a city having a population of over 25,000, under sec. 777, sub-sec. (5) without the consent of the accused and in that event a reserved case may be obtained under sec. 1013 et seq. But if the same class of offence is tried by a police magistrate of a city with a lesser population or by a police magistrate for a county or district, under sec. 773, there can be no reserved case, for sec. 1013 provides an appeal of that class from police magistrates in cases only in which their jurisdiction is under sec. 777, and there is no appeal under sec. 797. R. v. Berenstein (1917) 24 B.C.R. 361; R. v. Robertson, (1915) 22 B.C.R. 13, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 239; R. v. Dubue, (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 426; R. v. Brown, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 695, 9 Alta. L.R. 494, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 97, 34 W.L.R. 575.

Although the police magistrate tries the case without defendant's election in a district where his jurisdiction is absolute without the consent of the party charged, there is no appeal either under sec. 797 or 1013. R. v. Berenstein, (1917) 27 B.C.R. 361.

A stipendiary magistrate summarily trying a charge of theft of goods of the value of less than $10 under Code sec. 773, and not under sec. 777, is not a "court or judge having jurisdiction in criminal cases" within Code sec. 1013 allowing an appeal by way of case reserved. R. v. Hawes, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 529, 33 N.S.R. 389.

[§773]

On a question of jurisdiction a proceeding under Part XVI under which the accused is imprisoned may be attacked on habeas corpus. R. v. St. Clair, (1900) 27 A.B. 308 (Ont.), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 551; R. v. Morgan, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 192, 20 B.L. 277 (Que.); R. v. Miller, 25 W.L.B. 296, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151 (Alta.); R. v. Wallace, 32 W.L.R. 264, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 370 (Alta.); R. v. Davis (1912), 3 W.W.R. 1, 5 Alta. L.R. 443, 22 W.L.R. 837; Re Baptiste Paul (No. 2) (1912), 2 W.W.R. 927, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 5 Alta. L.R. 442; R. v. Young Kee, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 442; R. v. Pollard, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 754, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 35 (Alta.).

Sec. 791 declares that a conviction under Part XVI shall have the "same effect" as a conviction upon indictment for the same offence; but this does not make a conviction by a "magistrate" under Part XVI a conviction by a court of record. R. v. St. Clair, (1900) 27 A.R. 308, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 551 (Ont.).

Attempts]—Under sec. 773 attempts to commit theft are included without limitation as to the value of the property which the accused attempted to steal. Jurisdiction attaches under sec. 773, where the charge preferred is for one of the offences designated; there is no authority under it for a magistrate to entertain as a substantive charge any other attempt but an attempt to commit theft. But on a trial for the completed offence, which in practice is charged in the terms of a sworn information, the magistrate on finding against the completed offence may, if the evidence warrants it, find the accused guilty of an attempt to commit it. Code sec. 949; R. v. Morgan (No. 1), 2 O.L.R. 413, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 272, 3 O.L.R. 356.

Fine in lieu of or in addition to other punishment]-See sec. 1035.

Constables' fees under Part XVI]—The amended constables' tariff under sec. 770 of Part XV as substituted by 7-8 Geo. V, Can., ch. 14, sec. 5, contains many items expressly applicable to proceedings under Part XVI.

What defects not to invalidate]—No conviction, sentence or proceeding under Part XVI shall be quashed for want of form, sec. 1130. No warrant of commitment upon a conviction under the Part XVI is to be held void by reason of any defect therein "if it is therein alleged that the offender has been convicted and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same." Sec. 1130, and the curative provisions of sec. 1124 also apply to convictions or orders made under Part XVI. Code sec. 797 (2).

Suspended sentence on summary trial]-Code sec. 1081.

Proceedings when corporation is charged.

Company defendant]—This procedure for the summary trial of a corporation for an indictable offence is similar to that provided upon a trial by jury under sec. 916 et seq. Compare sec. 720x in Part XV.

Absolute jurisdiction in respect to disorderly houses,—Inmates of bawdy-houses,

774. The jurisdiction of the magistrate is absolute in the case of any person charged with keeping a disorderly house, or with being an inmate or habitual frequenter of a common bawdy-house, and does not depend on the consent of the person charged to be tried by such magistrate, nor shall such person be asked if he consents to be so tried.

2. The provisions of this Part do not affect any absolute summary jurisdiction given to justices by any other Part of this Act.

Origin]-8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; sec. 784, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, secs. 4, 5.

When jurisdiction "absolute"]—The word "absolute" is used in the sense of "unconditional," that is to say, not dependent upon the conditions precedent to the right to exercise the jurisdiction which are prescribed by the Act as ordinarily applicable, and the words referring to the consent of the accused were added ex abundanti cauteld. R. v. Helliwell (1914) 30 O.L.R. 504, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 146.

"Disorderly house" defined]—The term disorderly house includes any common bawdy-house (sec. 225), common gaming-house (sec. 226), common betting-house (sec. 227), or opium joint (sec. 227A). See Code sec. 228; R. v. Jung Lee, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 63, 25 O.W.R. 63.

Absolute jurisdiction in disorderly house cases]—See secs. 228, 229A, 773 (f).

Habitual frequenter of bawdy-house]—This phrase formerly applied to the offence designated in sub-sec. (k) of sec. 238 (vagrancy), which has been repealed. Concurrently with the repeal, sec. 229 was amended so as to make it a summary conviction offence to be found in any disorderly house without lawful excuse.

The fact that sec. 774, relating to procedure, still, evidently by an oversight, contains the words, "or habitual frequenter," while subclause (f) of sec. 238, substantively constituting the offence ("(f) Is in the habit of frequenting such houses and does not give a satisfactory account of himself or herself,") has been repealed by sec. 7 of the Criminal Code Amendment Act 1915, cannot affect the application of sec. 774 to such substantive offences mentioned in it as still exist. R. v. James, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, at 24, 9 Alta. L.R. 66.

Jurisdiction as affected by illegality of arrest]—There are conflicting judicial opinions as to the right of a magistrate to try against his protest a man who, having been illegally arrested without a warrant, is brought before him for trial. The opinions negativing the right to try are based upon the theory that the magistrate is without, jurisdiction to try him in such case without his consent, which might be evidenced by his failure to take exception. R. v. Pollard, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 754, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 35 (Alta.), decided under a liquor law; R. v. Wallace, 32 W.L.R. 264, per Stuart, J. (Alta.); Re Baptiste Paul (No. 2) 2 W.W.R. 927, 5 Alta. L.R. 442, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 161 (Beek, J.); R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R 296 (Beck, J.); R. v. Young Kee, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 442, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 161 (Hyndman, J.); R. v. Young Kee (No. 2), [1917] 2 W.W.R. 654, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 236 (Alta.); R. v. Davis, (1912) 3 W.W.R. 1, 22 W.L.R. 837, 5 Alta. L.R. 443, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 293 (Walsh, J.).

The other view that the magistrate has jurisdiction notwithstanding the illegal arrest is based upon the theory that once the accused is actually before a magistrate having general jurisdiction over the subject matter, the jurisdiction over the particular charge and over the person accused has attached by reason of the presence of the latter before him, at least if no exception is taken. Re Baptiste Paul (No. 1), 2 W.W.R. 892, 5 Alta. L.R. 440, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 159 (Simmons, J.); R. v. Hurst (1915) 7 W.W.R. 994, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 389, 30 W.L.R. 176 (Simmons, J.); R. v. Pudwell, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 47 (Alta.). As to justification of arrest by a peace officer under secs. 30, 33, 648-652, sec Altman v. Majury, 37 O.L.R. 608, 11 O.W.N. 21, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 398. It is said that if the accused is brought before the justice on a warrant which could legally have been issued only upon a sworn information, and there is no such information, the accused may protest against the justice's jurisdiction and if convicted notwithstanding his protest of the jurisdiction the conviction will be set aside. R. v. Davis (1912) 3 W.W.R. 1, 120 Can. Cr. Cas. 293 (Alta.), eiting R. v. McNutt, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 186.

A person whose conviction was removed by certiorari and set aside for want of jurisdiction on a pure technicality, e. g., that the accused having been improperly arrested on a warrant under circumstances in which arrest without a warrant was not justified, was illegally brought before the court, may be again tried and convicted upon the same charge on being arrested under a proper warrant. R. v. Young Kee (No. 2), [1917] 2 W.W.R. 654 (Alta.). R. v. Weiss & Williams, 5 W.W.R. 48, 25 W.L.R. 351, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 42 (Alta.).

12) 'an. Jurisdiction in Ontario as to sentence of females to reformatory]— Whenever any female is convicted either under sec. 239 for vagrancy, or is convicted for an offence tried under Part XVI of the Code, she may be sentenced to the Reformatory for an indefinite term less than two years, and if any term exceeding six months is inflicted, no fine shall be imposed in addition. The Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 57, as amended, 3-4 Geo. V, 1913, ch. 39, sec. 3. The amended sec. 57, being in Part II of the Prisons Act, applies only to the province of Ontario. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 42.

Where two justices act, both to sign commitment]-

Where the trial under Code see. 773 takes place before two justices the warrant of commitment following a conviction made, should be signed by both justices, but if there be a valid conviction a commitment irregularly signed by only one justice is cured by Code see. 1130. R. v. James (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 239, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 32 W.L.R. 528.

Sentence dates from conviction]—A woman was convicted before a police magistrate of being an inmate of a disorderly house, and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. The warrant was held over for 48 hours to give her an opportunity, if she felt disposed to take advantage of it, to leave the city. No definite time was fixed as to how long she was to remain away. She left the city, and remained away for three months. Upon her return she was re-arrested upon a warrant based upon the above conviction, but was discharged on the ground that her re-arrest was illegal. R. v. Fitzpatrick, (1915) 9 W.W.B 191 (Man.).

It was held that at the expiration of the three months the effect of the conviction was spent, and no power existed to re-arrest the applicant on a warrant based on the old conviction. Ibid.

Absolute jurisdiction as to seafaring person.-No consent necessary.

775. The jurisdiction of the magistrate is absolute in the case of any person who, being a seafaring person and only transiently in Canada, and having no permanent domicile therein, is charged, either within the city of Quebec as limited for the purpose of the police ordinance, or within the city of Montreal as so limited, or in any other seaport city or town in Canada where there is such magistrate, with the commission therein of any of the offences in this Part previously mentioned, and also in the case of any other person charged with any such offence on the complaint of any such seafaring person whose testimony is essential to the proof of the offence. All

2. Such jurisdiction does not depend on the consent of any such person to be tried by the magistrate, nor shall such person be asked whether he consents to be so tried.

Origin]—Sec. 784, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, secs. 4, 5. Restitution of property]—See Code secs. 795 and 1050.

Jurisdiction absolute in certain provinces.-Exception.

776. The jurisdiction of the magistrate in the provinces of British Columbia, Prince Edward Island, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and in the Northwest Territories and Yukon Territory, under this Part, is absolute without the consent of the party charged, except in cases coming within the provisions of sec. 777, and except in cases under secs. 782 and 783, where the person charged is not a person who under sec. 775, can be tried summarily without his consent.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; sec. 784, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, secs. 4 and 5.

Absolute jurisdiction in certain provinces]—This absolute jurisdiction was originally limited to Prince Edward Island and Keewatin; Cr. Code, 1892, sec. 784 (2); but was extended in 1895. Re Worrell, 8 W.W.R. 230, affirmed, 8 W.W.R. 478. The exception referred to as contained in secs. 782 and 783, is the special power to summarily try only in case the plea is one of guilty for theft, false pretenses or receiving if the property exceeds $10 in value.

Summary trial by judge under the N.W. Territories Act]—Under the operation of the Alberta Act (1905, Can., ch. 3), the Supreme Court of Alberta which had been constituted a superior court of criminal jurisdiction, was to be governed by the procedure in criminal matters of the former Supreme Court of the N.W. Territories, until otherwise provided by competent authority. 1905, Can. Stat., ch. 3, sec. 16, subsec. 2. But the Governor-in-Council may, from time to time, declare all or any part of such procedure to be inapplicable to the Supreme Court of Alberta.

Similar provisions were contained in the Saskatchewan Act as regards the Supreme Court of Saskatchewan. The Saskatchewan Act, 1905, 4-5 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 42. The power of summary trial in Alberta and Saskatchewan under the N.W.T. Act gave a judge of the Supreme Court the powers of a justice of the peace or of any two justices, and also power to try summarily without a jury charges of theft, embezzlement or obtaining money or property by false pretenses, or receiving stolen property in any case in which the value of the whole property alleged to have been stolen, embezzled, obtained or received, did not, in the opinion of the judge, exceed $200. N.W.T. Act, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 66; 60-61 Vict., Can., ch. 28, sec. 14.

A Supreme Court judge might also try summarily without a jury a person charged with having committed an aggravated assault by unlawfully and maliciously inflicting upon any other person either with or without a weapon or instrument any grievous bodily harm or by unlawfully and maliciously wounding any other person. An assault upon any female when not amounting, in the opinion of the judge, to an assault with intent to commit rape might be tried by a Supreme Court judge summarily without a jury; N.W.T. Act, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 66; 60-61 Vict., Can., ch. 28, sec. 14; and likewise an assault upon any male not over fourteen years of age; escape from lawful custody; prison breach; assaulting or obstructing a peace officer in the lawful performance of his duty or with intent to prevent the performance thereof. N.W.T. Act, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 50, sec. 66; 60-61 Vict., Can., ch. 28, sec. 14.

Summary trial in other cases before police magistrates of certain places.

777. If any person is charged in the province of Ontario before a police magistrate or before a stipendiary magistrate in any county, district or provisional county in such province, with having committed any offence for which he may be tried at a court of general sessions of the peace, or if any person is committed to a gaol in the county, district or provisional county, under the warrant of any justice, for trial on a charge of being guilty of any such offence, such person may, with his own consent, be tried before such magistrate, and may, if found guilty, be sentenced by the magistrate to the same punishment as he would have been liable to if he had been tried before the court of general sessions of the peace.

2. This section shall apply also to district magistrates and judges of the sessions in the province of Quebec, and to police and stipendiary magistrates of cities and incorporated towns having a population of not less than two thousand five hundred

3. Sees. 780 and 781 do not extend or apply to cases tried under this section.

4. Where an offence charged is punishable with imprisonment for a period not exceeding five years the Attorney General may require that the charge be tried by a jury, and may so require notwithstanding that the person charged has consented to be tried by a magistrate under this section, and thereupon the magistrate shall have no jurisdiction to try or sentence such person under this section.

5. The jurisdiction of the magistrate under this section in cities having a population of not less than twenty-five thousand according to the last decennial or other census taken under the authority of an Act of the Parliament of Canada, is absolute, and does not depend upon the consent of the accused, in the case of any person charged with theft, or with obtaining property by false pretenses, or with unlawfully receiving stolen property, where the value of the property alleged to have been stolen obtained or received, does not, in the judgment of the magistrate, exceed ten dollars.

Origin]-8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; Code of 1892, sec. 785.

Judicial notice of census for purposes of jurisdiction]—Judicial notice will be taken of a Dominion census. R. v. Bahamat Ali (No. 2), 15 B.C.R. 175, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 193. As to official notices in the Canada Gazette, see Canada Evidence Act, sec. 30.

If any person is "charged before a police magistrate," etc.]—A person brought up on a preliminary inquiry before a magistrate qualified under sec. 777 stands "charged" before such magistrate upon the information or the charge sheet being read to him, as the case may be. See ex parte Seeley, 41 S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270. Sec. 777 must be read along with Code sees. 653-666 in this regard. Ex parte Seeley, supra.

The "charge" is contained in the information sworn to and lodged with the magistrate and upon which he issues his warrant, as well as in the depositions taken at the preliminary inquiry, if an inquiry is held;

but if the prisoner waives the inquiry and consents to be tried summarily, then the magistrate makes the charge for the purpose of that proceeding on the sworn complaint and information then before him and, when read to the prisoner for the purpose of enabling him to make his option, he is "charged" within the meaning of sec. 777 and the magistrate has jurisdiction to deal with him. Re Sceley (1908), 41 S.C.R. 5.

General sessions of the peace]-Sub-sec. 2 applies although in the particular province there may be no court of general sessions of the peace if the offence be one which, if committed in Ontario, would be triable by an Ontario court of general sessions. Re Vancini, 34 S.C.R. 621, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 164; R. v. Spates, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1136, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 69 (Alta.). Offences under pre-confederation statutes of other provinces although indictable there will not be within sec. 777 unless the like offence exists in Ontario and is within the jursdiction of the sessions. Ex parte Belyea, 39 D.L.R. 24 (N.B.)

For the offences triable at general sessions, see Code secs. 582 and 583.

When magistrate may send case for trial in higher court]-See sec. 784.

Extended jurisdiction of police magistrates in certain cases]-Sec. 777 confers a jurisdiction on a certain limited class of persons occupying judicial positions in certain limited areas to try summarily all cases which may be tried at a court of general sessions of the peace and to impose the penalty which could be imposed by such court in Ontario. R. v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 955, 22 W.L.R. 107, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49 (Alta.); R. v. Alexander (1913) 5 W.W.R. 17, 6 Alta. L.R. 227; R. v. McEwan, 17 Man. R. 477.

Sec. 777 is not to be construed as conferring upon the magistrate the jurisdiction he already has under sec. 773. Re Worrell, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 478; affirming re Worrell (1915) 8 W.W.R. 230 (Sask.). It confers upon the magistrates therein mentioned such additional jurisdiction within the limits of the general sessions as was not conferred by sec. 773. Re Worrell, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 478, affirming 8 W.W.R. 230 (Sask.); R. v. Hayward, 5 O.L.R. 65, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 399.

Consequently a person accused in B.C., Sask. or Alberta, or in the Territories, before a magistrate qualified both under secs. 773 and 777 in respect of an offence within sec. 773, for which otherwise he might elect, is not entitled to say that he should have been permitted to elect for or against summary trial, as the magistrate in those provinces is given absolute jurisdiction by sec. 776. Re Worrell (1915) 8 W.W.R. 478 affirming 8 W.W.R. 230. The punishment under sec. 773 is limited by secs. 780 and 781. R. v. Randolph, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 165.

Sec. 777 was, in its origin, special legislation applicable only to the province of Ontario and it conferred a general authority to police and stipendiary magistrates in that province to try offences which would be triable before an Ontario court of general sessions, provided the accused elected in favour of such summary trial and renounced his claim to a jury trial. That legislation was sought to reduce the expense of the jury trials at the general sessions and to facilitate the disposal of disputed cases in which the accused might not be able to furnish the usual ball. The scope of such legislation was afterwards extended so as to apply to the other provinces to a limited extent, so that police and stipendiary magistrates of cities and incorporated towns with an official census of 2,500 population or over in the other provinces of Canada have jurisdiction to try by consent any case which in Ontario would be triable at the general sessions.

While the consent of the accused is a feature of the extended jurisdiction of summary trial, Parliament has seen fit to incorporate one exception (sub-sec. (5)) and to make the jurisdiction absolute, that is to say, it shall exist without the consent of accused, if (1) the charge is theft, obtaining property by false pretenses, or unlawfully receiving stolen property, (2) the value of the money or property involved does not exceed $10, and (3) the case is one in a city of over 25,000 population. This amendment was effected by the Code amendment, 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2. The magistrate is to decide the question whether the value is or is not in excess of $10. Ibid.

It will be noticed that the offences designated in sub-sec. (5) are identical with those in sec. 773, sub-sec (a). Its effect may be said to be to supersede the operation of sec. 773, sub-sec. (a), in the events which sub-sec. (5) of sec. 777 contemplate so that a defendant who comes before the magistrate of a city of over 25,000 population and is convicted under sec. 777 instead of sec. 773, becomes liable to the heavier punishment for which sec. 777 provides. But if the same magistrate already has jurisdiction without consent for the offence because of the theft charge being against a "seafaring person" within the terms of sec. 775, it may be doubted whether sub-sec. (5) of sec. 777 would apply. As to the otherwise absolute jurisdiction in parts of Western Canada and in Prince Edward Island under sec. 776 it to cases with the exception, inter alia, of those " coming within the provisions of sec. 777."

Bringing up for election after committal]—Where a committal for trial for an offence alleged to have been committed in a city to which sub-sec. 2 of sec. 777 applies has been made by a county stipendiary not authorized to hold a summary trial in Nova Scotia under sec. 777, sub-sec. 2, the Superior Court may, for the purpose of enabling the prisoner to elect trial before the city stipendiary magistrate having the extended jurisdiction of sec. 777, grant his application for writs of habeas corpus and recipias corpus to transfer him from the gaol to the city magistrate's court. R. v. Foley (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 150 (N.S.).

What magistrates included]—Even though a stipendiary magistrate for a county or province may have conferred upon him by a provincial statute the powers of a police or stipendiary magistrate for a city or incorporated town, nevertheless he is not a police or stipendiary magistrate for the purpose of trying offences summarily under sec. 777 of the Criminal Code. R. v. Nar Singh, 14 B.C.R. 192, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 454; and see R. v. Kolember, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 341 (Y.T.).

But the one man may be appointed both a city and provincial magistrate. R. v. McEwan, 17 Man. R. 477.

Offence committed in another county]—If a person is brought before a justice of the peace charged with an offence committed within the province, but out of the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, the latter, in his discretion, may either order the accused to be taken before some justice having jurisdiction in the place where the offence was committed; sec. 665; or may proceed as if it had been committed within his own jurisdiction. The accused was brought before the stipendiary magistrate of the city of Halifax charged with having committed burglary in Sydney, N.S. It was held that the stipendiary magistrate could, with the consent of the accused, try him summarily under sec. 777. Re Charles Seeley, 41 S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270.

Sections 653, 665, 666 and 777 taken together, mean that when an offence is committed within the limits of a province any presence, however transitory, of the accused in any part of that province will justify the exercise of as full and complete jurisdiction as if the offence was committed where the offender is apprehended, leaving to the magistrate a discretionary power to send the prisoner for further inquiry or for trial before the justice having jurisdiction over the locus where the offence was committed. Re Seeley, (1908) 41 S.C.R. 5; and see R. v. McEwan, 17 Man. R. 477.

Power to order further particulars of charge]—It has been doubted whether any further particularity as to the place of the offence is required in an information or charge on a summary trial than to indicate that the offence was committed within the territory over which the justice had jurisdiction, but under some circumstances it would be proper for the magistrate to insist upon the prosecution giving particulars. R. v. James (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 32 W.L.R. 528; R. v. C.P.R., 1 Alta. L.R. 34; R. v. Crawford, (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49, 22 W.L.R. 107.

Right to make full answer and defence]-Sec. 786.

Fine in lieu of or in addition to other punishment]-See sec. 1035.

Punishment of whipping]—See secs. 80, 204, 216, 276, 292, 293, 301, 302, 446, 457, 1060.

Power as to costs]—Sec. 1044 is applicable both to the magistrate having the ordinaxy jurisdiction and to the eity or town magistrate having the extended jurisdiction of summary trial. It confers power to order costs in addition to the sentence. The magistrate may condemn the person convicted to payment of the whole or any part of the "costs or expenses" incurred in and about the prosecution and conviction if he sees fit so to do, including such moderate allowance to the prosecutor for loss of time as the magistrate, on affidavits or other inquiry, ascertains to be reasonable. Sec. 1044; R. v. Emery [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, 351.

Where there is an additional punishment for a second offence]—On a summary trial before a city police magistrate for theft (sec. 386) the maximum penalty is seven years' imprisonment unless a previous conviction has been charged in the information, by analogy to the procedure under Code sec. 851 for charging previous convictions in indictments in cases in which a greater punishment may be imposed by reason thereof. A sentence for more than seven years for theft where no previous conviction had been charged in the proceedings will be reduced on a case caserved to the sentence which it deems appropriate, notwithstanding the admission of the accused made to the magistrate after conviction that be had been previously convicted of theft. R. v. Edwards, 13 Can. Cr. Cus. 202, 17 Man. R. 288.

Restitution of property]-See Code secs. 795 and 1050.

Defects of form]—No conviction, sentence or proceeding under Part XVI shall be quashed for want of form; and no warrant of commitment upon a conviction under the said Part shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the offender has been convicted, and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. Code sec. 1130.

By the Code-Amendment of 1913 the provisions of sec. 1124 (vertiorari) were made applicable to convictions or orders made under Part XVI which relates to summary trials for indictable offences. Code sec. 797 (2).

Theft by juvenile offenders]—See also the special provisions of Part XVII for trial by two or more justices of juveniles of the age of 16 or under, charged with theft. Code sees. 800-821.

Appeal by reserved case where trial jurisdiction depends on sec. 777]—There is an appeal by reserved case, or by leave of the Court of Appeal under sec. 1015, from the judgment of a magistrate proceeding under Code sec. 777 on the trial of any person for an indictable offence, upon the application of such person if convicted. Code sec. 1013.

The fact that the police magistrate on a summary trial is one of the class of magistrates having extended powers under Code sec. 777 does not give a right of appeal by reserved case or by stated case on his refusal to reserve, if he had absolute jurisdiction without consent to summarily try the particular case under secs. 773 and 776. If the trial is without consent under sec. 777 (5) an appeal lies by reserved case, and presumably this absolute jurisdiction where available must be utilized and a magistrate empowered under sec. 778 (5) should not ask the election of the accused under sec. 778 nor assume to try a case under sec, 773 (a) with consent which he was competent to try under sec. 777 (5) without consent,

Sub-sections 1 to 4 inclusive of sec. 777 referring to cases which would be triable at a court of general sessions in Ontario relate only to cases other than those listed in sec. 773. R. v. Davidson, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 718, 720 (Alta.).

A summary trial before a police magistrate under sec. 777 for an indictable offence stands in much the same position as a trial before a judge of the Provincial Supreme Court; R. v. Emery, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, 349 (Alta.); and in case an appeal is taken by reserved case upon a question of law the evidence, or such parts of it as the magistrate thinks necessary, or as the Court of Appeal desires, must be sent up for the hearing of the appeal. Code sec. 1017.

Sentence of female to reformatory in Ontario]—Whenever any female is convicted under sec. 239 (vagrancy), or is convicted under Part XVI of the Criminal Code, of an offence triable under that Part, she may be sentenced to the reformatory for an indefinite term less than two years, and if any term exceeding six months is inflicted, no fine shall be imposed in addition. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 57, as amended, 3-4 Geo. V, 1913, ch. 39, sec. 3, and applying only to the province of Ontario. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 42; and see Code sec. 1057.

Jurisdiction in Yukon Territory]-By see. 777, jurisdiction is given in the Yukon Territory only to judges of the Territorial Court and In Rex v. Alexander, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 473, a police magistrates. charge of theft of an amount in excess of $10, it was held that the extended jurisdiction given by Criminal Code, sec. 777, sub-sec. (2), to "police and stipendiary magistrates of cities and incorporated towns" to try with the consent of the accused, is intended to apply only to a special kind of police or stipendiary magistrate whose official capacity is designated in terms conforming to the statute, and not to magistrates for a whole province or judicial district with merely consequent jurisdiction for a city or incorporated town within the territorial limits. A commissioned officer of the R.N.W. Mounted Police, although vested with the powers of two justices under the Yukon Act, has no jurisdiction under sec. 777. R. v. Kolember, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 341, 16 D.L.R. 146. The consent of the accused could not confer such jurisdiction. R. v. Breekenridge, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 116.

2. If the charge is not one that can be tried summarily without the consent of the accused, the magistrate shall state to the accused—

(a) that he is charged with the offence, describing it:

(b) that he has the option to be forthwith tried by the magistrate without the intervention of a jury, or to remain in custody or under bail, as the court decides, to be tried in the ordinary way by the court having criminal jurisdiction.

3. If the person charged consents to the charge being summarily tried and determined as aforesaid, or if the power of the magistrate to try it does not depend on the consent of the accused, the magistrate shall reduce the charge to writing and read the same to such person, and shall then ask him whether he is guilty or not of such charge.

4. If the person charged confesses the charge the magistrate shall then proceed to pass such sentence upon him as by law may be passed in respect to such offence, subject to the provisions of this Act; but if the person charged says that he is not guilty, the magistrate shall then examine the witnesses for the prosecution, and when the examination has been completed, the magistrate shall inquire of the person charged whether he has any defence to make to such charge, and if he states that he has a defence the magistrate shall hear such defence, and shall then proceed to dispose of the case summarily.

Stating option that accused may remain in custody or under bail as the court decides]—The accused is to have called to his attention the possibility of his release on bail, while retaining and exercising his right to a jury trial; and where the prisoner's consent to summary trial has been irregularly obtained without the statutory information being given him, he may repudiate it after conviction. The right thus given him to be informed by the magistrate that he has the option to remain in custody or under bail as the court decides, before he may be tried summarily by a police magistrate, was considered of sufficient importance by Parliament to justify an amendment to the Criminal Code. The accused may not be deprived of the benefit thereof, and its omission vitiates the conviction. R. v. Davis, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 34 (Que.); R. v. Howell (1910) 19 Man. R. 326, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 178.

The consent given by the prisoner that the charge be tried summarily, and his plea of guilty, does not confer upon the police magistrate a jurisdiction to try the case, unless the conditions imposed by law for that purpose upon the magistrate have been fulfilled. Ibid.; R. v. Walsh and Lamont, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, 7 O.L.R. 149; R. v. Harris, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 392, 4 S.L.R. 31, and R. v. Crooks, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 150, 4 S.L.R. 335.

Option may be stated by magistrate's clerk in open court]—The statutory question giving the option of mode of trial may legally be put by the magistrate's clerk acting in the magistrate's presence. R. v. Ridehough, (1903) 14 Man. R. 434, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 340.

Changing the election]—If when unrepresented by counsel the accused elects summary trial by the magistrate, he has no right, upon a postponed hearing when represented by counsel, to recall such election and to re-elect for a jury trial without the leave of the magistrate. R. v. Macdonald, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 121, 21 O.L.R. 38.

Election against summary trial]-An election under Code sec. 778 to be tried "in the ordinary way by the court having criminal jurisdiction" is not decisive in favour of a trial by a jury. The court having criminal jurisdiction has not to be selected until arraignment at the county or district court judge's criminal court which is a court having criminal jurisdiction as well as the assizes, although with the former there is no jury. R. v. Price and Burnett (1914) 7 W.W.R. 621, 25 Man. R. 26, 30 W.L.R. 1, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 285. After electing against a summary trial by a magistrate, upon a charge in which the accused is called upon to elect, he has still an election for trial at a county judge's criminal court without a jury. Code sec. 825; R. v. Price and Burnett, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 621, 25 Man. R. 26, 30 W.L.R. 1; R. v. Thompson, 17 Man. R. 608, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 27. A prisoner has a right to elect under Code sec. 825, even after the grand jury has found a true bill. R. v. Thompson, supra, (approved in R. v. County Judge's Criminal Court, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7 (Nova Scotia).

Recording the consent to summary trial]—A statement of the consent to summary trial appearing in a conviction is sufficient if it follows the statutory form (form 55) if there is nothing to impeach the record in that respect. R. v. Mali (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1047; and see R. v. Mali (1912) 1 W.W.R. 766 (Man.); R. v. Howell, 19 Man. R. 317. But a recital that the accused consented "to jurisdiction" is not an equivalent of the statutory form. R. v. Crooks, 17 W.L.R. 560 (Sask.). Specific consent to summary trial is quite different from a consent to some undefined jurisdiction. R. v. Mali (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1047, 1048 (Man.). 'n

In the absence of anything to impeach the record there would be a necessary implication that conditions precedent had been observed. R. v. Mali, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1047, 1048, and see R. v. Mali (1912) 1 W.W.R. 766; and see R. v. Howell, 19 Man. R. 317; R. v. Crooks, 17 W.L.R. 560; R. v. Burtress, (1900) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 556 (N.S.).

If the consent were actually given, the defect might be remedied under sec. 1130 on the fact being shown. R. v. Burtress, supra.

No waiver effective where jurisdiction depends on compliance]— The statutory notice to be given to the accused on taking his election is required for the protection of accused persons and the magistrate's jurisdiction is dependent upon compliance with these statutory directions; jurisdiction will not accrue upon a consent given without compliance with the formalities even where there was knowledge by the accused of his right to a jury trial. R. v. Cockshutt, [1898] 1 Q.R. 582, 67 L.J.Q.B. 467.

Magistrate to reduce the charge to writing and read it to the accused]—The information is superseded for the purposes of the trial by a separate "charge in writing" prepared by the magistrate as required by Code see. 778 (3). R. v. Gill, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 294, 18 O.L.R. 234. This "charge" may be written out before asking the accused to exercise his option. R. v. Shepherd, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 463; R. v. Graf, 19 O.L.R. 238, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193.

In police court proceedings the charge is commonly contained in a charge sheet made out by the clerk of the court containing the names of the different persons to be tried with the nature of the charge on which each is to be tried. The "information" is for the purpose of authorizing a summons or warrant, and having answered that purpose it ceases to have any signification as such, but may thereafter be treated (with any trivial unsworn amendments) as the "charge in writing." R. v. Crawford, (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952 (Alta.); R. v. James, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 32 W.L.R. 528. No particular formality is required in the "charge in writing," but natural justice requires that any person being tried should know what he is being tried for, and should have the fullest opportunity for meeting the charge. R. v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 954, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49, 22 W.L.R. 107 (Alta.). The magistrate may adopt the information as a reduction of the charge to writing under sub-sec. (3) and so constitute the reading of such adopted charge a compliance with the Code provision, R. v. James, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 237, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 32 W.L.R. 528; R. v. Graf, 19 O.L.R. 238, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193.

If the charge has been read to defendant in the terms of the written information, and defendant has pleaded guilty, it is not competent for him thereafter to say that he was not aware of the nature and particulars of the charge. R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 73. If the accused has been legally arrested without warrant and is brought before the magistrate and consents to summary trial, the magistrate may proceed on the written charge then made, although there is no sworn information. R. v. McLean, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 67.

Provisions as to count of an indictment apply to a "charge"]— Sec. 854 is as follows: "A count shall not be deemed objectionable on the ground that it charges in the alternative several different matters, acts or omissions which are stated in the alternative in the enactment describing any indictable offence or declaring the matters, acts or omissions charged to be an indictable offence, or on the ground that it is double or multifarious."

Clause.16 of sec. 2 of the Code, as amended by sec. 2 in ch. 8 of 1907, gives the following definition: "'Indictment' and 'count' respectively include information and presentment as well as indictment and also any plea, replication or other pleading, any formal charge under sec. 873a and any record." It has been held in Saskatchewan that the word "count" of sec. 854 includes a charge reduced to writing and to which the party is called upon to plead, as provided by sub-sec. 3 of sec. 778 of the Code, that sec. 854 is applicable to proceedings under part XVI. The charge which is made out by the police magistrate, and to which the party is required to plead, is a pleading within the meaning of clause 16 of sec. 2. R. v. Mah Sam, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, at 6 (Sask.).

Accused must be personally present]—The accused must be personally present; it is not competent for a magistrate to proceed with a summary trial in the absence of the accused, although his counsel is present on his behalf prepared to make option under Code sec. 778 as to mode of trial and although the latter produces a written authority in that behalf signed and sworn to by the absent defendant. R. v. Romer, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235.

Proceedings under plea of not guilty]—There is no specific direction as to the taking of depositions by the magistrate on a summary trial of an indictable offence; R. v. Emery, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, 348 (Alta.); but the situation is the same in effect as to their authentication, because sec. 797 directs the magistrate to transmit the conviction or certificate of dismissal along with "the depositions of witnesses," etc., to the district officer to be kept among the records of the district eriminal court. R. v. Emery, supra. Furthermore, by Code sec. 797 (2) the provisions of Code sec. 1124 are to apply to convictions or orders made under Part XVI (summary trials) and sec. 1124 so incorporated makes special reference to the depositions of availating an informal or irregular conviction. The depositions on a summary trial are by R. Emery intendment a part of the record. R. v. Emery [1917] 1 W.W.R.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XVI)

337, 349. If the trial be under Code sec. 777 (extended jurisdiction where defendant elects) the depositions may be needed on a case reserved or stated, Code sec. 1017. The omission to take down the depositions or notes of evidence is fatal to a conviction, and where no depositions are returned to a certiorari and there was a plea of not guilty, the conviction will be quashed in certiorari proceedings; R. v. Perron (1915) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 442; and see R. v. Harris (1911) 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 392; Re Lacroix (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 297; R. v. Jung Lee (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 63, 5 O.W.N. 80.

Adjournment of summary trial]—An adjournment of a summary trial must be, to a day, certain and fixed, and must be stated in the presence of the parties or their solicitors. R. v. Wilson (1914) 9 W.W.R. 160, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 256, 29 W.L.R. 515 (Alta.). A conviction was quashed where the adjournment was made sine die on a reservation of judgment by the magistrate, although the accused, who was held in custody, was brought up within a few days for sentence. B. v. Wilson (1914) 7 W.W.R. 160, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 256, 29 W.L.R. 515 (Alta.).

Right of magistrate to take a view on summary trial doubtful]— The right of the magistrate to take a view of the locus in quo, except probably by consent, has been denied in respect of a summary trial under Part XVI of the Code. R. v. Crawford, (1913) 3 W.W.R. 731, 18 B.C.R. 20, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 70, 22 W.L.R. 969, eiting R. v. Petrie (1890) 20 Ont. R. 317.

Remedial powers apply as upon indictment]—The same remedial powers given to the courts on a trial by indictment may be exercised by a magistrate's trying the same class of offence under the summary trials procedure. R. v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952; and see Cr. Code sees. 797, 1124.

Where there is an alternative mode of trial under Part XV or Part XVI under special Act]—Where a prosecution before a police magistrate for an offence under the Secret Commissions Act, 8-9 Edw. VII (Can.), ch. 33, is brought as for an indictable offence and is tried on the defendant's election under Part XVI, there is no right of appeal by the prosecutor from the dismissal of the charge, as there would have been had the proceedings been taken without consent under Part XV. Re Buchanan, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 200, 26 W.L.R. 447. But as to appeal by case reserved, see sees. 1013 and 1014 (3).

Proceedings when accused is a minor.—Notice to parents or guardian.

779. Whenever the person charged appears to be of, or about, or under the age of sixteen years, and is not represented by counsel present at the time, the magistrate shall not proceed under the last preceding section without first asking the person charged what his age is.

2. If such person then states his age as being sixteen years or less, the magistrate shall defer any further action, and shall at once cause notice to be given to the parent or parents of such person, living in the province, if any, or if he has no such parents, or if his parents are unknown, then to the guardian or householder, if any, with whom he ordinarily resides, of such person having been so charged, and of the time and place when such person will be called on to make his election as to whether he will be tried by the said magistrate.

3. Such notice shall allow reasonable time for the said parents, guardian or householder to be present and advise the said person charged before he is called on to so elect.

4. At the time fixed by such notice, or if it appears to the satisfaction of the magistrate that there is no person for whom notice is provided as aforesaid, or that all reasonable means to give such notice have been taken without success, then, at the earliest convenient time, the magistrate shall proceed as in the last preceding section provided.

5. If any person notified as aforesaid is present at the time so fixed, the magistrate shall afford him an opportunity to advise the person charged before he is called upon to elect.

6. The notice provided for by this section may be given by registered letter, if the person to be notified does not reside in the city, town or municipality where the proceedings are had.

Juvenile courts]—Where juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912, ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age. And see Code secs. 772 and 802 as to theft charges where there is no Juvenile Court.

Theft not over $10.-Attempt.-Penalty under (a) or (b) of s. 773.

780. In the case of an offence charged under paragraph (a) or (b) of sec. 773, the magistrate, after hearing the whole case for the prosecution and for the defence, shall, if he finds the charge proved, convict the person charged and commit him to the common gaol or other place of confinement, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XVI)

Origin]-Compare sec. 787, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 10.

Non-application to trials with consent before a police magistrate acting under sec. 777]—This section does not apply to cases tried under sec. 777. Sec. 777 (3).

Right to make full answer and defence]-Sec. 786.

If the magistrate "finds the charge proved"]—Code sec. 780 limits the imprisonment on a plea of guilty as well as where a conviction has followed on a plea of not guilty. R. v. Alexander, (1913) 5 W.W.R. 17, 6 Alta. L.R. 227, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 473, 25 W.L.R. 290.

Adding costs to punishment otherwise authorized]—A magistrate acting under Part XVI may add to such sentence as may otherwise be passed an order for payment of costs and expenses "incurred in and about the prosecution." Code sec. 1044. Payment of such costs may be ordered out of money belonging to the accused taken from him on his apprehension; Code sec. 1044; but otherwise payment of the costs is to be enforced, in like manner as in a civil action, at the instance of any person liable to pay or who has paid the same. A direction as to punishment is divisible so that that part of the sentence on a summary trial which is absolute may stand although there is an illegal order for commitment in default of paying same. R. v. Miller, 25 W.L.R. 296 (Alta.). Sections 735 and 736 do not apply as their operation is excluded by sec. 798.

Restitution of property]-See Code secs. 795 and 1050.

Fine in lieu of or in addition to other punishment]-See sec. 1035.

Female reformatory sentences in Ontario]-See the Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 57, as amended 3-4 Geo. V, ch. 39, sec. 3.

Penalty on summary trial under s. 773 .- Enforcing conviction.

781. In any case summarily tried under paragraphs (c), (d), (e), (f), or (g) of sec. 773, if the magistrate finds the charge proved, he may convict the person charged and commit him to the common gaol or other place of confinement, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding six months, or may condemn him to pay a fine not exceeding, with the costs in the case, two hundred dollars, or to both fine and imprisonment not exceeding the said sum and term.

2. Such fine may be levied by warrant of distress under the hand and seal of the magistrate, or the person convicted may be condemned, in addition to any other imprisonment on the same

Origin]-3-4 Geo. V, Can., ch. 13, sec. 27; sec. 788, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 11.

Case "summarily tried"]—This section is not applicable to summary convictions under Part XV (sees. 705 to 770 of the Code). R. v. Frizell, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 214, 15 D.L.R. 674, 5 O.W.N. 801, 25 O.W.R. 697.

Non-application to trials with consent before a police magistrate acting under sec. 777]—This section does not apply to cases tried under sec. 777. Sec. 777 (3).

Conviction with fine added]—Code sec. 799 refers to forms 55-57 which are silent as to costs but that section enables the magistrate in case of a fine to add the requisite words.

Further term unless fine paid]—By sub-sec. (2) it is provided that the person convicted may be committed to the common gaol or other place of confinement for a further term not exceeding six months unless such fine is sooner paid. Sec. 1057 gives power to impose hard labour, and, where a fine is imposed, it may be ordered that the alternative of imprisonment in default of its payment shall be with hard labour. R. v. Nelson (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 301.

Inclusion of costs and expenses]-See sec. 1044.

Costs]-Costs ordered under Cr. Code, sec. 781, on a conviction made under the summary trials clauses are to be awarded to the prosecutor and not to the clerk of the police court where he is not the prosecutor. R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R. 296.

Limitation as to costs]—Where the extended jurisdiction of Code sec. 777 is exercised, the punishment may be the same as in Ontario might have been imposed by the general sessions for the like offence. Sec. 778. But if the jurisdiction is being exercised under sec. 773, the punishment is limited by the provisions of secs. 780 and 781 read along with sec. 1044 dealing with the subject of costs generally. It is for the magistrate to fix the costs at a reasonable sum; there is no tariff. B. v. Emery, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, 351, 10 Alta. L.R. 139, 27 Gan. Cr. Cas 116 (Alta.). But the power to order costs, under sec. 1044, is necessarily subject as to the offences of unlawful wounding, etc., under subsecs. (v) to (g) inclusive of Code sec. 773 to the restriction imposed by Code sec. 781 that the fine shall not exceed " with the costs in the case" $\frac{*}{200}$.

Further term for non-payment of fine]—It has been said that the use of the words "in addition to" and "a further term" in Code sec. 781 (2), which apply inter alia, to convictions on summary trial for keeping a disorderly house, was probably intended to make it clear that even where imprisonment in the first instance, as well as a fine, is imposed, then further imprisonment in default of payment may also be imposed; but that it was not intended to provide that there must be imprisonment in the first instance (however short the term) before imprisonment in default of payment of the fine can be given. R. v. Davidson, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 160, 164. As was said by Stuart, J., in that case: "There does not seem to be anything in sec. 781 (2) which makes it necessary to impose imprisonment in the first instance, as well as a fine, before imprisonment in default of payment of the fine can be imposed."

Reducing excessive fine]—Sec. 1013 does not apply to give a right of appeal by reserved case if the magistrate acts under sec. 773, such appeals being limited to trials under sec. 777. It is therefore not competent for the Court of Appeal to entertain a motion under sec. 1016 to reduce an excessive fine under sec. 773 to the legal limit. R. v. Booth, (1914) 31 O.L.R. 539, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 224. The remedy is by certiorari. Code secs. 797 (2), 1124; R. v. Booth, supra.

Fine "not exceeding, with the costs in the case, $200 "]—If the conviction read that the accused should forfeit and pay $200 to be paid and applied according to law, the court may assume that the costs are included in the $200 and uphold the conviction; R. v. Stark (1911) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 67, 18 W.L.R. 419 (Man.). But if the $200 were designated a "fine," this would contravene sec. 781 unless the conviction showed on its face that there were no costs. R. v. Cyr, 12 P.R. 24 (Ont.). But see as to amendment secs. 1124, 797 (2).

Hard labour]—Hard labour may be imposed whether the punishment is imprisonment with or without a fine. R. v. Morton (1913) 7 W.W.R. 95, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 172.

Sentence of females to Reformatory in Ontario]-See the Prisons Act, R.S.C., ch. 148, sec. 57, as amended, 3-4 Geo. V, ch. 39, sec. 3, and Code sec. 1057.

What defects ourable]—See secs. 797 (2), 1124, 1130; R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R. 296; R. v. James, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23.

Theft, false pretenses and receiving stolen property exceeding ten dollars.

782. When any person is charged before a magistrate with theft or with having obtained property by false pretenses, or with having unlawfully received stolen property, and the value of the property stolen, obtained or received exceeds ten dollars, and the evidence in support of the prosecution is, in the opinion of the magistrate, sufficient to put the person on his trial for the offence charged, such magistrate, if the case appears to him to be one which may properly be disposed of in a summary way, shall reduce the charge to writing, and shall read it to the said person, and, unless such person is one who, under sec. 775, can be tried summarily without his consent, shall then put to him the question mentioned in sec. 778, and shall explain to him that he is not obliged to plead or answer before such magistrate, and that if he does not plead or answer before him, he will be committed for trial in the usual course.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; sec. 789, Code of 1892.

Application of secs. 782, 783]-In cities of over 25,000 the city police or stipendiary magistrate has an added power of trial without consent under sub-sec. (5) of sec. 777, for these offences, where the value does not exceed $10. Other magistrates under sec. 773, sub-sec. (a) may try such cases subject to Code secs. 774, 775, 776 and 778, the consent of the accused being essential unless one of these sections excludes it under special circumstances as to locality or class of offence. If the value is over $10 in a theft case, sec. 773 does not apply, but a magistrate authorized under sub-secs. (1) to (4) of sec. 777 could try the charge on defendant's consent given in pursuance of sec. 778. It has been held that secs. 782 and 783 do not restrict the right of a police magistrate to deal with the case under sec. 777, subsecs. (1) to (4). R. v. Macdonald, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 121, 21 O.L.R. 38; R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 73; R. v. Bowers, 34 N.S.R. 550, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 264. The magistrate acting under sec. 777 has not to enter upon a preliminary investigation to decide whether or not the case is one which can be disposed of in a summary way; R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108; R. v. Macdonald, 21 O.L.R. 38; but if the magistrate has no authority under sec. 777, such an investigation is essential. R. v. Williams, 11 B.C.R. 351, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 330.

Exception from absolute jurisdiction in certain provinces]—See sec. 776.

Seafaring persons in seaport towns]—Sec. 775, referred to in sec. 782, confers absolute jurisdiction in the cities of Montreal and Quebec and other seaport towns and cities to summarily try without consent transient seafaring persons charged with the offences specified in sec. 773, or cases in which the sailor is both a complainant and a necessary witness.

Consent and trial.

783. If the person charged as mentioned in the last preceding section consents to be tried by the magistrate, the magistrate shall then ask him whether he is guilty or not guilty of the charge, and if such person says that he is guilty, the magistrate shall then cause a plea of guilty to be entered upon the proceedings, and sentence him to the same punishment as he would have been liable to if he had been convicted upon indictment in the ordinary way; and if he says that he is not guilty, he shall be remanded to gool to await his trial in the usual course.

Origin]-7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 18, sec. 11; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; Code of 1892, sec. 790.

Trial on plea of guilty only by magistrate under sec. 773 for theft over $10]—Sees. 782 and 783 only enable the magistrate not authorized under sec. 777, but who otherwise could try the charge if the amount were not over $10, to try the case where the defendant pleads guilty. See R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 73, and note to see 782.

Restitution of property]-See Code secs. 795 and 1050.

Sentence of female to Reformatory in Ontario]—In Ontario whenever any female is convicted under sec. 239 for vagrancy or is convicted under Part XVI of the Code, of an offence triable under that Part, she may be sentenced to the Reformatory for an indefinite term less than two years, and if any term exceeding six months is inflicted, no fine shall be imposed in addition. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 57, as amended, 3-4 Geo. V, 1913, ch. 39, sec. 3.

Magistrate may decide not to proceed summarily.

784. If, in any proceeding under this Part, it appears to the magistrate that the offence is one which, owing to a previous conviction of the person charged, or from any other circumstance, ought to be made the subject of prosecution by indictment rather than to be disposed of summarily, such magistrate may, before the accused person has made his defence, decide not to adjudicate summarily upon the case; but a previous conviction shall not prevent the magistrate from trying the offender summarily, if he thinks fit so to do.

When magistrate may decide to send case to higher court]-Under certain circumstances the magistrate may, before the accused person has made his defence, decide not to adjudicate summarily upon the case. Code sec. 784. The right under this section can be exercised only in the terms of same. R. v. Hicks (1912) 2 W.W.R. 1100 (Alta.). It is not competent for a magistrate who is holding a summary trial after hearing all of the evidence on both sides to decide to commit for trial instead of disposing of the case himself. After the accused has made his defence, the magistrate is the only tribunal clothed with power to try the charge and he must dispose of it. R. v. Hicks (1912) 2 W.W.R. 1100, 22 W.L.R. 236, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 192 (Alta.).

So also where a person accused of perjury had, with his own consent, been summarily tried before a police magistrate under sec. 777, pleading "not guilty," and the magistrate, upon hearing the evidence, adjudicated summarily and dismissed the charge; it was held that the magistrate was right in refusing thereafter to bind the prosecutor over to prefer and prosecute an indictment against the defendant, as provided for in sec. 688, for the magistrate has, under sec. 784, to determine, before the defence has been made, whether he will try the case summarily or not. Re Rex v. Burns, 1 O.L.R. 341, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 330.

Electing trial by county judge]—If the magistrate or justices decide under sec. 784 not to proceed with the summary trial, and commit the accused for trial, the accused may afterwards with his own consent be tried under the provisions of Part XVIII. Code sec. 832.

Election of trial by jury to be stated on warrant of committal.

785. If, when his consent is necessary, the person charged elects to be tried before a jury, the magistrate shall proceed to hold a preliminary inquiry as provided in Parts XIII and XIV, and if the person charged is committed for trial, shall state in the warrant of committal the fact of such election having been made.

Origin]-Sec. 792, Code of 1892; B.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 15.

786. In every case of summary proceedings under this Part the person accused shall be allowed to make his full answer and defence, and to have all witnesses examined and cross-examined by counsel or solicitor.

Origin]-Sec. 793, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 16.

"Full answer and defence"]-This phrase appears also in Code secs. 715, 786, and 942, dealing respectively with summary conviction matters, summary trials and trials on indictment.

The French version of the Code translates the words "a full answer and defence" by the words equivalent to "a full and entire defence."

The word "answer" as used in sec. 786 has no special reference to the question to be put by the magistrate to the accused in certain cases on taking an election for or against summary trial, but applies alike to summary trial cases in which there is no right of election by the accused. R. v. Romer, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235.

The principle of English law is, that an accused person is presumed to be innocent until proved to be guilty, and, although there are cases where the prosecution may, by proving certain facts, raise a presumption of guilt which the accused must rebut, yet, generally speaking, the burden of proof lies on the prosecution, and any doubt as to the sufficiency of proof must be decided in favour of the accused. The right now enjoyed by the accused of giving evidence himself (Can. Evidence Act, see Appendix) has not shifted the burden of proof.

If by inadvertence a magistrate erroneously assumes that there is no evidence to be adduced in answer, and sentences a prisoner before hearing the defence, this may be corrected by forthwith withdrawing the sentence and offering to hear testimony; so where the offer was made but was declined by defendant's counsel on the excuse that it was too late as the conviction had been pronounced, the conviction was affirmed on certiorari. R. v. Cyr, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 849, affirming [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1185, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 77 (Alta.).

Open court.

787. Every court held by a magistrate for the purposes of this Part shall be an open public court.

Origin]-Sec. 794, Code of 1892.

Exclusion of public from trial]-See sec. 645 as to specific offences there mentioned, sec. 644 as to juveniles.

Procuring attendance of witnesses.

788. The magistrate before whom any person is charged under the provisions of this Part may, by summons or, by writing under his hand, require the attendance of any person as a witness upon the hearing of the case, at a time and place to be named in such summons, and such magistrate may bind, by recognizance, all persons whom he considers necessary to be examined, touching the matter of such charge, to attend at the time and place appointed by him and then and there to give evidence upon the hearing of such charge.

2. If any person so summoned, or required or bound as aforesaid, neglects or refuses to attend in pursuance of such summons or recognizance, and if proof is made of such person having been duly summoned as hereinafter mentioned, or bound by recognizance as aforesaid, the magistrate before whom such person should have attended may issue a warrant to compel his appearance as a witness.

Payment by county of magistrate's travelling expenses in Ontario]---Where the justice or police magistrate without salary, for the convenience of witnesses and others attends at a distance from his residence to hear the evidence on a criminal charge, he shall be entitled to a mileage allowance of 15 cents a mile one way for the distance necessarily travelled, to be paid by the county, or, in the case of a district, by the province. R.S.O. 1914, ch. 87, sec. 35.

Service of summons.

789. Every summons issued under the provisions of this Part may be served by delivering a copy of the summons to the person summoned, or by delivering a copy of the summons to some inmate of such person's usual place of abode apparently over sixteen years of age.

2. Every person required by any writing under the hand of the magistrate to attend and give evidence as aforesaid shall be deemed to have been duly summoned.

Origin]-Sec. 796, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 19.

Summons to witness]-Sub-sec. (2) validates an informal summons not under seal.

Dismissal of charge.

790. Whenever the magistrate finds the offence not proved, he shall dismiss the charge, and make out and deliver to the person charged a certificate under his hand stating the fact of such dismissal.

Origin]-Sec. 797, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 20.

Finds the offence not proved]—Only after a hearing on the merits is there jurisdiction to grant the certificate. R. v. Mann [1919] 1 W.W.R. 917 (Sask.).

Illegal remand " until oalled on "]--After hearing both sides, the magistrate is not to adjourn the trial and remand the accused " until called on," where the evidence does not satisfy the magistrate either of the guilt or innocence of the accused; the prisoner is in such case entitled to the benefit of the doubt and to an acquittal, and prohibition will be granted to restrain the magistrate from proceeding to hear further evidence alleged to have been discovered by the crown, and in respect whereof the accused was again summoned to receive judgment upon the original charge. R. v. White (1915) 24 Can: Cr. Cas. 277, 34 O.L.R. 370.

A magistrate holding a summary trial has power under Code sec. 1081, to suspend sentence in certain cases, but sentence cannot be suspended until there has been an adjudication of guilt. Ibid.

Effect of conviction on summary trial.

791. Every conviction under this Part shall have the same effect as a conviction upon indictment for the same offence.

Origin]-Sec. 798, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 20.

Inclusion of costs and expenses]-See sec. 1044.

Power to amend]—A conviction made under Part XVI of the Code, is not in the same position as a conviction made by the sessions, and may be amended to accord with the sentence pronounced before the return to a certiorari. R. v. Graf, 19 O.L.R. 238, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193; and see secs. 797 (2), 1124.

Where the sentence is in excess of the magistrate's jurisdiction, see. 1124 provides that this shall not affect the conviction but only the punishment, and places on the court the duty of imposing a sentence which is authorized. Rex v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49, 5 A.L.R. 204, 6 D.L.R. 380; R. v. Boardman (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 191, 6 W.W.R. 1304, 29 W.L.R. 176.

No conviction, sentence or proceeding under Part XVI shall be quashed for want of form; and no warrant of commitment upon a conviction under the said Part shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the offender has been convicted, and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. Code sec. 1130; R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 73.

The warrant of commitment following a summary trial is for the information of the gaoler and of a court hearing a habeas corpus application; and a reference therein to the section of the Code under which the charge was laid will be regarded in aid of the description of the offence. R. v. Gill, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 294, 18 O.L.R. 234.

Section 791 does not prevent certiorari and habcas corpus applications in respect of summary trial convictions]—Notwithstanding sec. 791 a conviction and commitment upon a summary trial for an indictable offence may be reviewed on habcas corpus. The prisoner will be discharged if the conviction on a plea of guilty is upon a charge which does not disclose a criminal offence. R. v. St. Clair, 27 A.R. 308, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 551; R. v. Leschinski, (1908) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 199. The decision in R. v. Marquis, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 346 (Que.) denying the right of certiorari in summary trials for indictable offences was disapproved in R. v. Leschinski.

In The Queen v. Racine, 9 Que. Q.B. 134, 3 Can. Crim. Cas. 446, (Que.) there was an attempt to bring a conviction under the Summary Trials Part of the Code before the court or a judge by way of appeal on both facts and law.

That right of appeal is confined entirely to summary convictions by justices of the peace under the part relating to summary convictions, and it was not extended to convictions under the Summary Trials Part, except in certain cases specially provided for in sec. 797. In giving judgment in The Queen v. Racine, Wurtele, J., refers to the then existing section of the Code of 1892, which corresponds with sec. 791 of the present Code, but, as is pointed out in R. v. Leschinski, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 199 (Sask.), he only does so incidentally; he does not decide whether or not there could be a review by way of certiorari.

He refers to it for the purpose of accentuating his conclusion that the appeal which is provided for under the Summary Convictions Part of the Code did not apply to convictions under the Summary Trials Part of the Code. R. v. Leschinski, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 199, 9 W.L.R. 602 (Sask.).

A recent Ontario decision favours the view that if the trial were under sec. 777 and a reserved case could therefore have been had to test the question of jurisdiction, certiorari proceedings will not lie, even on that ground. R. v. Sinclair, 38 O.L.R. 149, 11 O.W.N. 131, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 350. The decision in R. v. Racine, supra is cited in the Sinclair case as one in which the same conclusion was reached. It is submitted, however, that the Quebec decision in R. v. Morgan (Morgan v. Malepart), 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 192, 20 Rev. Leg. 277 (Que.), is to be preferred to that of R. v. Sinelair; 38 O.L.R. 149, and that R. v. Bacine (Que.) is correctly explained in the Leschinski case, supra (Sask.). In R. v. Morgan, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 192 (Que.), it was definitely affirmed that the right of appeal by reserved case on a summary trial under sec. 777 does not bar the remedy of habeas corpus on a question of jurisdiction of the magistrate, the summary trial court not being a court of record even where the presiding magistrate is a judge of a court of record. Where the question is not one of jurisdiction as to which certiorari or habeas corpus are uniformly considered appropriate remedies; R. v. Bissette, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 501 (Alta.); it may well be that the court's discretion to grant or refuse a certiorari may be exercised by refusing certiorari if a remedy of equal efficiency is available by any method of appeal. See R. v. Therrien, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 275, 17 Que. P.R. 285 (Que.); R. v. Amyot, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 15 Que. K.B. 22; R. v. McLatchy, 44 N.B.R. 402, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 277; R. v. Fuerst, (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 183, 26 W.L.R. 445 (Y.T.). On habeas corpus if it be found that the necessary formalities had not been complied with to give the magistrate jurisdiction, the court instead of discharging the accused, may remand him under sec. 1120 to be brought again before the magistrate to make his election. R. v. Fuerst, supra.

Certificate of dismissal or conviction.

792. Every person who obtains a certificate of dismissal or is convicted under the provisions of this Part, shall be released from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause.

Origin]—Sec. 799, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 23; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 20, sec. 45.

After a hearing on the merits]-The certificate is to be granted only if the justices "find the offence not proved," thus implying a hearing on the merits. R. v. Mann [1919] 1 W.W.R. 917 (Sask.).

Certificate as bar to further criminal proceedings]-Compare with sees. 730 and 734 in Part XV.

In Baxter v. Gordon Ironsides & Fares Co., 13 O.L.R. 598, it was held that in an action for malicious prosecution, although the prosecution may have in fact been terminated prima facie in favour of the plaintiff, it is competent to show that it did not in fact terminate in his favour, and that the termination of it was the result of a compromise or agreement to withdraw the prosecution. The production of the record of the dismissal of the complaint would be prima facie evidence only. Cockburn v. Kettle, (1913) 28 O.L.R. 417.

Under sec. 773, two justices of the peace have power to try an accused person of attempting to steal property of any value, no matter how large, if the charge is only for the attempt. R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070 at 1076, 7 Alta. L.R. 169, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 26 W.L.R. 659 (Alta.). So if a conviction is made for the attempt, it seems that the accused cannot afterwards be charged with the completed offence, although the justices would have had no jurisdiction to convict of the completed offence. R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070, 1076 (Stuart, J.). If the accused had been convicted at a jury court of an attempt, he could not afterwards be charged with the completed offence. Cr. Code sec. 950.

Result of hearing to be filed in court of sessions.

793. The magistrate adjudicating under the provisions of this Part shall transmit the conviction, or a duplicate of the certificate of dismissal, with the written charge, the depositions of witnesses for the prosecution and for the defence, and the statement of the accused, to the clerk of the peace or other proper officer for the district, city, county or place wherein the offence was committed, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the general or quarter sessions of the peace or of any court discharging the functions of a court of general or quarter sessions of the peace.

Origin]-1 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 42, sec. 2; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; Code of 1892, sec. 801.

Returning amended conviction to correct error]—It is the duty of the magistrates if they discovered that an irregular conviction—a conviction improperly a...wn—had been returned, to return and file a proper one in the place of it, and they are at liberty to do this at any time as long as the first conviction had not been attacked: Sellwood v. Mount, 9 C. & P. 75. The fact that the second conviction was filed only some few minutes before it was tendered in evidence cannot affect the question in any way. R. v. Taylor, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 244 at 249. (Alta.).

794. A copy of such conviction, or of such certificate of dismissal, certified by the proper officer of the court, or proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove a conviction or dismissal for the offence mentioned therein in any legal proceedings.

Origin]-Sec. 802, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 26.

How conviction on summary trial to be proved]—Where the conviction was by two justices, but only one had signed the formal conviction, it is defective as evidence. R. v. Taylor, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 244 (Alta.); and the defect is not cured by producing the memorandum of adjudication which both had signed because the memorandum is not proof of the conviction itself. Ibid. No provision is made in Part XVI for a memorandum of adjudication such as is contained in the summary convictions clauses, Part XV, by Code sec. 727. Nothing less than the formal conviction or a duly certified or proved copy thereof is sufficient; R. v. Bourdon, 2 C. & K. 336; R. v. Taylor, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 244 (Alta.); even where the trial on which it is to be proved is before the same magistrate as made the conviction. R. v. Legros, 17 O.L.R. 425, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 161.

Restitution of property.

795. The magistrate by whom any person has been convicted under the provisions of this Part may order restitution of the property stolen, or taken or obtained by false pretenses, in any case in which the court, before whom the person convicted would have been tried but for the provisions of this Part, might by law order restitution.

Origin]-Sec. 803, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, sec. 27.

Remand by justice to magistrate.

796. Whenever any person is charged before any justice or justices, with any offence mentioned in sec. 773, and in the opinion of such justice or justices the case is proper to be disposed of summarily by a magistrate, as in this Part provided, the justice or justices before whom such person is so charged may, if he or they see fit, remand such person for trial before the nearest magistrate in like manner in all respects as a justice or justices are authorized to commit an accused person for trial at any court: Provided that no justice or justices, in any province, shall so remand any person for trial before any magistrate in any other province.

2. Any person so remanded for trial before a magistrate in any city, may be examined and dealt with by the said magistrate or any other magistrate in the same city.

Origin]—Sec. 804, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 176, secs. 28, 29, 30.

Proper to be disposed of summarily by a magistrate]—The word "magistrate" is here to be interpreted by sec. 771 and not by the Interpretation Act, R.S.C., eh. 1, as the context of Part XVI shows that the definition of the Interpretation Act, declaring that a justice of the peace is a magistrate should not apply.

Where the trial was before two justices for an offence under sec. 773, an exception taken to the proceedings because of the information having been taken before one only of the justices was held to be answered by sec. 796, as the one justice would have jurisdiction to remand for hearing before the both constituting a statutory "magistrate" for the purposes of Part XVI. R. v. James (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 239, 9 Alta. L.R. 66, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 32 W.L.R. 528.

Provision of Part XV as to appeals applies.—Theft under $10.— Keeping disorderly house.—Being inmate of bawdy-house.— Appeal if tried by two justices.—Application of sec. 1124 to convictions under Part XVI.

797. When any of the offences mentioned in paragraphs (a) or (f) of sec. 773 is tried in any of the provinces under this Part before two justices of the peace sitting together, an appeal shall lie from a conviction for the offence in the same manner as from summary convictions under Part XV, and all provisions of that Part relating to appeals shall apply to every such appeal.

2. The provisions of sec. 1124 shall apply to convictions or orders made under the provisions of this Part.

Origin]-3-4 Geo. V, Can., ch. 13, sec. 28; 58-59 Viet., Can., ch. 40, sec. 1.

When any of the offences in 773 (a) or (f) is tried]—The offence tried is that set forth in the written charge or in the information used as a written charge. It should make no difference that the conviction was for the lesser offence of an attempt, and it is submitted that there would still be the appeal from that verdict; but see contra, R. v. Lyons (No. 2), 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 352 (Que.).

Appeal from two justices on theft charges under $10 or disorderly house charge]-Although Code sec. 771 interprets the word "magistrate" in Part XVI as including in certain provinces, "two justices," if does not follow that the words "two justices" in sec. 797 (relating to appeals from certain summary trials before two justices) shall be interpreted as including a police magistrate having the power of two justices. R. v. Berenstein, (1917) 24 B.C.R. 361; R. v. Brown (1916) 10 W.W.R. 695, 9 Alta, L.R. 494, 26 Can, Cr. Cas. 97 (Alta.): R. v. Merker and Daniels, 37 O.L.R. 582, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 113. The legislative intention in the amendment of sec. 797 was to withdraw the right of appeal for offences specified in sub-secs. (a) and (f) of sec. 773 where the conviction had been made by a district judge or a police magistrate and to retain it only where the conviction had been made by two justices of the peace. R. v. Brown, supra; R. v. Berenstein, supra; and see R. v. Robertson (1915) 22 B.C.R. 13, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 236; R. v. Dubue, (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 426.

Cases under prior law; R. v. McLennan (No. 2), 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 14; R. v. Pisoni, 6 Terr. L.B. 238.

Oral testimony is admissible to prove that the conviction appealed against is erroneously dated, and that an appeal taken therefrom under sec. 797 was not, in fact, too late, as it would appear to be because of the error. R. v. Martinuik (1914) 6 W.W.R. 405, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 275 (Sask.).

Bail pending appeal]—Code sec. 750 (c) provides for bail if given within the time limited for filing a notice to appeal. Presumably after the expiration of that time bail might still be granted on a habeas corpus by a superior court judge if he saw fit to grant it. R. v. Sands, 9 W.W.R. 129, 131.

An irregularity in accepting cash bail instead of a recognizance where a recognizance is required, has been held not to be fatal to the appeal where the course adopted was assented to by the prosecution. Robinson v. Saanich, 20 W.L.R. 235, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 241 (B.C.).

Submission to jurisdiction]—Where an appeal is permitted under Code sec. 797, from a conviction for keeping a common bawdy-house and the accused takes the appeal to the district court, the latter court acquires jurisdiction over the person of the appellant and may proceed to a re-hearing "upon the merits," notwithstanding defendant's objection that the magistrate had no jurisdiction because the arrest was illegally made without a warrant. R. v. Miller, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 25 W.L.R. 296.

"Any proceedings" under Part XVI]—A proceeding to enforce a penalty imposed by the magistrate, that is the imposition of imprisonment in default of payment, is a "proceeding" within the meaning of this section. R. v. Davidson (No. 1), [1917] 2 W.W.R. 160, 162, 11 Alta. L.R. 9, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 44.

Depositions need not be read over before defence]—Sec. 798 of the Code relieves the magistrate holding a summary trial under Part XVI from the duty of reading the depositions to the witnesses before the accused enters on his defence. R. v. Klein, 15 B.C.R. 165, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 501.

Constables' tariff []—The constables' tariff under Part XV, see sec. 770, was amended by the 1917 Can. Stat., ch. 14, sec. 5, so as to include various items specially concerning summary trial proceedings under Part XVI, and sec. 798 must be read subject to the later enactment.

Forms.

799. A conviction or certificate of dismissal under this Part may be in the form 55, 56, or 57 applicable to the case or to the like effect; and whenever the nature of the case requires it, such forms may be altered by omitting the words stating the consent of the person to be tried before the magistrate, and by adding the requisite words, stating the fine imposed, if any, and the imprisonment, if any, to which the person convicted is to be subjected, if the fine is not sooner paid.

- (v) in the Northwest Territories, any stipendiary magistrate, any two justices sitting together, and any functionary or tribunal having the powers of two justices, and
- (vi) in the Yukon Territory, any judge of the Territorial Court, any two justices sitting together, and any functionary or tribunal having the powers of two justices;
- (b) 'the common gaol or other place of confinement' includes any reformatory prison provided for the reception of juvenile offenders in the province in which the conviction referred to takes place, and to which, by the law of that province, the offender may be sent.

Origin]—6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; sec. 809, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 2.

Application of Part.

Not to apply to certain offences in B.C. or P.E.I.

801. The provisions of this Part shall not apply to any offence committed in the province of British Columbia or Prince Edward Island, punishable by imprisonment for two years and upwards; and in such provinces it shall not be necessary to transmit any recognizance to the clerk of the peace or other proper officer.

Origin]-Sec. 829, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 30.

Jurisdiction.

Theft by person not over sixteen.

802. Every person charged with having committed, or having attempted to commit any offence which is theft, or punishable as theft, and whose age, at the period of the commission or attempted commission of such offence, does not, in the opinion of the justice before whom he is brought or appears, exceed the age of sixteen years, shall, upon conviction thereof in open court, upon his own confession or upon proof, before any two or more justices, be committed to the common gaol or other place of confinement within the jurisdiction of such justices, there to be

Place of imprisonment]-See the exception in 803 applicable to Ontario.

Juveniles to be tried without publicity]—See sec. 644, and where a juvenile court has been established see sec. 10 of the Juvenile Delinquents Act, 1908.

Children's Aid Societies in Ontario]—Notice of the charge is to be given in Ontario to the Children's Aid Society, if there be one in the county, wherever an information is laid against a boy under 12 or a girl under 13, and an opportunity is to be given the Society for investigation. The Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, cb. 148.

No imprisonment in reformatory in Ontario.

803. The provisions of this Part shall not authorize two or more justices to sentence offenders to imprisonment in a reformatory in the province of Ontario.

Origin]-Sec. 830, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 30.

Not to prevent summary conviction.

804. Nothing in this Part shall prevent the summary conviction of any person who may be tried thereunder before one or more justices, for any offence for which he is liable to be so convicted under any other Part of this Act or under any other Act.

Origin]-Sec. 831, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 8.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XVII)

Procedure.

Procuring appearance of accused.

805. Whenever any person, whose age is alleged not to exceed sixteen years, is charged with any offence mentioned in sec. 802, on the oath of a credible witness, before any justice, such justice may issue his summons or warrant, to summon or to apprehend the person so charged, to appear before any two justices, at a time and place to be named in such summons or warrant.

Origin]—Sec. 811, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 4. Offence which is theft or punishable as theft]—Sec. 802. Mode of service of summons]—Code sec. 812.

Notice to parent or guardian]—In Ontario the magistrate may give notice of the charge to the parents or either of them or other person apparently interested in the welfare of the child; The Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 68; and must give notice to the Children's Aid Society for the county if the information is against a boy under 12 or a girl under 13.

Remand of accused.-Ball.

806. Any justice, if he thinks fit, may remand for further examination or for trial, or suffer to go at large, upon his finding sufficient sureties, any such person charged before him with any offence aforesaid.

2. Every such surety shall be bound by recognizance conditioned for the appearance of such person before the same or some other justice or justices for further examination, or for trial before two or more justices as aforesaid, or for trial by indictment at the proper court of criminal jurisdiction, as the case may be.

3. Every such recognizance may be enlarged, from time to time, by any such justice or justices to such further time as he or they appoint; and every such recognizance not so enlarged shall be discharged without fee or reward, when the person has appeared according to the condition thereof.

Origin]-Sec. 812, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, secs. 5, 6, 7.

Election.-Objection of accused or parent or guardian.

807. The justices before whom any person is charged and proceeded against under the provisions of this Part, before such person is asked whether he has any cause to show why he should not be convicted, shall address the person so charged in these words, or words to the like effect:—

[§ 805]

"We shall have to hear what you wish to say in answer to the charge against you; but if you wish to be tried by a jury, you must object now to our deciding upon it at once."

2. And if such person, or a parent or guardian of such person, then objects, no further proceedings shall be had under the provisions of this Part; but the justices may deal with the case according to the provisions set out in Parts XIII and XIV, as if the accused were before them thereunder.

Origin]-Sec. 813, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 8.

Re-election of speedy trial after electing jury trial]—Code secs. 828, 830 (Part XVIII).

When accused shall not be tried summarily.—Election to be stated in warrant.

808. If the justices are of opinion, before the person charged has made his defence, that the charge is, from any circumstance, a fit subject for prosecution by indictment, or if the person charged, upon being called upon to answer the charge, objects to the case being summarily disposed of under the provisions of this Part, the justices shall not deal with it summarily, but may proceed to hold a preliminary inquiry as provided for in Parts XIII and XIV.

2. In case the accused has elected to be tried by a jury, the justices shall state in the warrant of commitment the fact of such election having been made.

Origin]-Code of 1892, sec. 814; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 8.

Before accused has made his defence]—A similar restriction is stated in sec. 784 as to summary trials under Part XVI.

Charge a fit subject for prosecution by indictment]-Compare sec. 784 (Part XVI).

Re-election of speedy trial under Part XVIII]—Code secs. 828, 830, 832.

Binding over witness.

810. Any such justice may require and bind by recognizance every person whom he considers necessary to be examined, touching the matter of such charge, to attend at the time and place appointed by him and then and there to give evidence upon the hearing of such charge.

Origin]-Sec. 816, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 11.

Warrant when witness disobeys summons.

811. If any person summoned or required or bound, as aforesaid, neglects or refuses to attend in pursuance of such summons or recognizance, and if proof is given of such person having been duly summoned, as hereinafter mentioned, or bound by recognizance, as aforesaid, either of the justices before whom any such person should have attended, may issue a warrant to compel his appearance as a witness.

Origin]-Sec. 817, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 12. Warrant for defaulting witness]-Compare secs. 673 and 674.

Service of summons.

S12. Every summons issued under the authority of this Part may be served by delivering a copy thereof to the person, or to some inmate, apparently over sixteen years of age, at such person's usual place of abode, and every person so required by any writing under the hand or hands of any justice or justices to attend and give evidence as aforesaid, shall be deemed to have been duly summoned.

Discharge of accused .- Sureties for good behaviour.

813. If the justices upon the hearing of the case deem the offence not proved, or that it is not expedient to inflict any punishment, they shall dismiss the person charged, and make out and deliver to him a certificate in the form 58, or to the like effect, under the hands of such justices, stating the fact of such dismissal: Provided that if the dismissal shall be on account only of it being deemed inexpedient to inflict any punishment the accused shall be discharged only on his finding sureties for his good behaviour.

Origin]-Compare sec. 819, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 14.

Form of conviction.

71

S14. The justices before whom any person is summarily convicted of any offence in this Part previously mentioned, may cause the conviction to be drawn up in form 59, or in any other form to the same effect, and the conviction shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes.

Origin]-Sec. 820, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, secs. 16, 17.

Form of conviction]-Code form 59, following sec. 1152.

What defects cured]—No conviction under Part XVII shall be quashed for want of form or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any court of record; and no warrant of commitment under the said Part shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the person has been convicted and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same. Code sec. 1123.

Sentence to reformatory]—The court or person before whom any offender whose age at the time of his trial does not, in the opinion of the court, exceed sixteen years, is convicted, whether summarily or otherwise, of any offence punishable by imprisonment, may sentence such offender to imprisonment in any reformatory prison in the province in which such conviction takes place, subject to the provisions of any Act respecting imprisonment in such reformatory. Release from further prosecution]—Sec. 815 is similar to sec. 792 as to summary trials; compare sec. 734 as to proceedings under the summary convictions procedure of Part XV.

Conviction and recognizances to be filed.

816. The justice before whom any person is convicted under the provisions of this Part shall forthwith transmit the conviction and recognizances to the clerk of the peace or other proper officer, for the district, city, county or union of counties wherein the offence was committed, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, or of any other court discharging the functions of a court of general or quarter sessions of the peace.

Origin]-Sec. 822, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 18.

Quarterly return by clerk of the peace]—By Code sec. 1139 it is provided that every clerk of the peace or other proper officer shall transmit to the Minister of Agriculture a quarterly return of the names of offenders, the offenees and punishments mentioned in convictions transmitted to him under Part XVII of the Code.

Restitution of property .--- Value of property ordered to be paid.

817. No conviction under the authority of this Part shall be attended with any forfeiture, except such penalty as is imposed by the sentence; but whenever any person is adjudged guilty under the provisions of this Part, the presiding justice may order restitution of property in respect of which the offence was committed, to the owner thereof or his representatives.

2. If such property is not then forthcoming, the justices, whether they award punishment or not, may inquire into and ascertain the value thereof in money; and, if they think proper, order payment of such sum of money to the true owner, by the person convicted, either at one time or by instalments, at such periods as the justices deem reasonable.

3. The person ordered to pay such sum may be sued for the same as a debt in any court in which debts of the like amount are, by law, recoverable, with costs of suit, according to the practice of such court.

Origin]-Sec. 824, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, secs. 20, 21 and 22.

Restitution of stolen property]-Compare with secs. 795 and 1050.

Proceedings where penalty is not paid.

818. Whenever the justices adjudge any offender to forfeit and pay a pecuniary penalty under the authority of this Part, and such penalty is not forthwith paid, they may, if they deem it expedient, appoint some future day for the payment thereof, and order the offender to be detained in safe custody until the day so appointed, unless such offender gives security to the satisfaction of the justices, for his appearance on such day; and the justices may take such security by way of recognizance or otherwise in their discretion.

2. If at any time so appointed such penalty has not been paid, the same or any other justices may, by warrant under their hands and seals, commit the offender to the common gaol or other place of confinement within their jurisdiction, there to remain for any time not exceeding three months, reckoned from the day of such adjudication.

PART XVIII.

SPEEDY TRIALS OF INDICTABLE OFFENCES.

Application of Part.

Part only of Canada.

822. The provisions of this Part do not apply to the Northwest Territories or the Yukon Territory.

Origin]—6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 822; Code of 1892, sec. 762; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 3.

References to Speedy Trials Act]—A reference in any Act of the Parliament of Canada to the "Speedy Trials Act" is to be construed as a reference to Part XVIII of the Code, Interpretation Act, R.S.C. ch. 1, sec. 29.

North-West Territories]—Whenever any person charged with a criminal offence is committed to gaol in the North-West Territories for trial, the person in charge of such gaol shall, within 24 hours, notify the nearest stipendiary in writing, and the stipendiary shall cause the prisoner to be brought before him for trial either with or without a jury as the case requires. N.W.T. Act, R.S.C., ch. 62, sec. 53. Any police guardhouse or guardroom in the Territories is to be considered a gaol (sec. 55), and by sec. 56 the power is conferred on the Governor-in-Council to declare any building or any part thereof or any enclosure to be a gaol or lock-up.

Yukon Territory]—Special provisions are made by the Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, for summary trial without a jury as to certain offences specified in sec. 65 thereof without the consent of the accused, and as to other criminal offences with such consent (sec. 66); and by sec. 83 of that Act whenever any person charged is committed to gaol for trial, the sheriff or other person in charge of such gaol shall, within twentyfour hours, notify a judge of the court, in writing, that such prisoner is so confined, stating his name and the nature of the charge preferred against him; whereupon, with as little delay as possible, one of the judges of the court shall cause the prisoner to be brought before him for trial, either with or without a jury, as the case requires.

Definitions.

[§ 828]

823. In this Part, unless the context otherwise requires,-

- (a) 'judge' means and includes,
 - (i) in the province of Ontario, any judge of a county or district court, junior judge or deputy judge authorized to act as chairman of the general sessions of the peace,
 - (ii) in the province of Quebec, in any district wherein there is a judge of the sessions of the peace such judge of the sessions, and in any district wherein there is no judge of the sessions of the peace, but wherein there is a district magistrate, such district magistrate, or any judge of sessions of the peace; and in any district wherein there is no judge of the sessions of the peace and no district magistrate, any judge of the sessions of the peace or the sheriff of such district,

- (iv) in the province of Manitoba, the Chief Justice or a puisne judge of the Court of King's Bench, or any judge of a county court,
- (v) in the province of British Columbia, the Chief Justice or a puisne judge of the Supreme Court, or any judge of a county court;
- (vi) in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, a judge of the Supreme Court of the province, or of any district court;
- (b) 'prosecuting officer' includes in the province of Ontario, the County Crown Attorney, in the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, any clerk of a county court, and in the province of Manitoba, any Crown Attorney, the prothonotary of the Court of King's Bench, and any deputy prothonotary thereof, any deputy clerk of the peace, and the deputy clerk of the Crown and pleas for any district in the said province, and in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, any local registrar, clerk, or deputy clerk of the Supreme Court of the province, or any clerk or acting clerk of a district court, or any person conducting under proper authority the Crown business of the court.

Origin]—8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 45, sec. 6; 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 8, sec. 2; 63-64 Vict., ch. 46, sec. 3; 58-59 Vict., ch. 40, sec. 1; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 823; sec. 763, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., ch. 47, sec. 2.

Sub-sec. (b)—The "prosecuting officer"]—The word "includes" in sub-sec. (b) is not a term of restriction but of extension, as showing that in addition to something already existing there is a further inclusion; and the difference is well brought out and marked by the prior definition of "Judge" which "means and includes" etc., etc., and which therefore is primarily restricted to the "meaning" as defined: R. v. Jun Goon (1916), 10 W.W.R. 24, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 33 W.L.R. 761 (B.C.). R. v. Kershaw (1858), 6 E. & B. 999 at 1007; R. v. Hermann (1879), 4 Q.B.D. 284 at 288, wherein Lord Chief Justice Coleridge said:—

"The words 'shall include' are not identical with, or put for 'shall mean." The definition does not purport to be complete or exhaustive. By no means does it exclude any interpretation which the sections of the Act would otherwise have, it merely provides that certain specified cases shall be included." And see Dilworth v. New Zealand Com. of Stamps (1898) 68 L.J.P.C. 1, at 4.

Sub-sec. (b) of sec. 823 does not limit but rather extends the words "prosecuting officer" so as to include under that designation persons who otherwise would not be regarded as coming within the term. R. v. Jun Goon, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 24, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 33 W.L.R. 761. On the other hand the term "judge" under Code sec. 823 (a) is declared to "mean and include" the functionaries named therein. So, in a province as to which there is no applicable Code definition as to who is to be "included" in the term "prosecuting officer," the clerk of the peace or other officer appointed for the purpose under provincial law is the prosecuting officer, or an appointment may be made ad hoc by the provincial authorities authorizing a barrister to conduct the prosecution. R. v. Jun Goon, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 24, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415. Semble the clerk of the peace, where there is such an officer, has a common law jurisdiction to arraign prisoners in local courts. Ibid., per Martin, J.A.

2. In the province of Saskatchewan such court shall be called the district court judge's criminal court, and, in the province of Alberta, the district judge's criminal court of the district in which the same is held. [6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 45, sec. 6.]

3. The record in any such case shall be filed among the records of the court over which the judge presides, and as part of such records.

Origin]—8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; 6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 824; Code of 1892, sec. 764; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 4.

A court of record]—Although the criminal court constituted for the purposes of Part XVIII is a court of record, it is to be doubted whether the verity of a statement in the record in regard to a mixed matter of law and fact essential to the jurisdiction should be conclusively presumed on an appeal by reserved case under sec. 1013 et seq.; if the material filed in the court below and transmitted with the stated case discloses an absence of jurisdiction, it may be proper for the appellate court to determine the point adversely to a formal entry in the trial book. See Brunet v. The King, (1918) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16, 23, 57

But it has been held that on a habeas corpus motion, the recital in the record of facts necessary to confer jurisdiction is conclusive and cannot be contradicted by extrinsic evidence. R. v. Guay, (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 243, 21 Rev. de Juris. 253 (Que.).

In Ontario, the statutory writ of habeas corpus will not be issued to review a conviction made by a court of record. R. v. Murray, 28 Ont. R. 549, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 452; R. v. St. Denis, 8 P.R. 16 (Ont.); 29-30 Viet. (1866), ch. 45 (former province of Canada).

Territorial limits]—The Federal Parliament may impose upon existing provincial courts or judges the duty of administering the criminal law without further provincial legalation to specifically include the eriminal jurisdiction. Re Vancin, 34 S.C.R. 61, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 228; re Seeley, 41 S.C.R. 5, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 270. Where the jurisdiction is to be exercised by "any judge of a county court," it means any judge having, by force of the provincial law regulating the constitution and organization of county courts, jurisdiction in the particular locality in which he may hold a "speedy trial" under Part XVIII. Re County Courts of British Columbia, 21 S.C.R. 446. His jurisdiction may be extended beyond his own county in certain contingencies by provincial legislation, but sec. 823, taken alone, does not mean that the judge of any county may preside anywhere in the province for the purposes of Part XVIII. Re County Courts of British Columbia, supra.

The Judges Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 138, see. 30, deals with the jurisdiction of the judge of one county to sit pro tempore for the judge of another county by request or under special governmental authority.

It has also been held that it is competent for the provincial legislature to narrow or enlarge the territorial jurisdiction of any county court judge; and that, therefore, it may provide that the county judge of another county may preside pro tempore in the event of a vacancy occurring by death in the county in which, the proceedings are pending. R. v. Brown, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 133 (N.S.).

An allegation of the place of the offence is a material one to be proved so as to confer jurisdiction where the accused was not found or apprehended in the same county or district in which the trial is to take place, and there was consequently no jurisdiction upon that ground. R. v. O'Gorman, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173, 18 O.L.R. 427; Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que. K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; Code sees. 577, 580, 582.

An election of speedy trial without a jury in the County Court Judge's Criminal Court does not confer jurisdiction in a case in which there would be no jurisdiction over the accused if the trial were upon indictment before a jury in the same territorial district. R. v. O'Gorman, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173, 18 O.L.R. 427; Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que. K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 113. Compare R. v. Nevison [1919]

Alberta and Saskatchewan district courts]—The confusion in reference to the names of the courts in these provinces was probably due to the fact that by the statutes of 1907 certain amendments to the Code as regards these two provinces were made by a statute having the general title, "An Act to amend the statute law in its application to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta," 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 45. Sec. 824 was re-enacted in an amended form, the former sub-sec. (2) becoming sub-sec. (3) as above and a new sub-sec. (2) being introduced. This was probably overlooked on the Code Amendment Act, 8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9, being passed, for a somewhat similar provision in that Act became paragraph (a) without any amendment of sub-sec. (2). Paragraph (a) being the later enactment will control and practically supersede sub-sec. (2), although the official text of the statute (in 1919) includes both.

Ontario]—By the County Court Judges' Criminal Courts Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 61, the judge of every county and district court in Ontario, or the junior or deputy judge thereof, authorized to preside at the sittings of the court of general sessions of the peace (see Code sec. 582), is constituted a court of record for the trial out of sessions and without a jury, of any person committed to gaol on a charge of being guilty of an offence for which such person may be tried at a court of general sessions of the peace, and for which the person so committed consents to be tried out of sessions and without a jury; the court so constituted "shall have the powers and perform the duties mentioned in Part 18 of the Criminal Code," R.S.O. 1914, ch. 61, sec. 2. The court so constituted shall be called the county (or district) court judges' criminal court of the county (or district) in which the same is held. R.S.O., 1914, ch. 61, sec. 2.

Offences triable under this part by consent.—Entry of consent.— Trial out of sessions and term.—Committed for trial.

825. Every person committed to gaol for trial on a charge of being guilty of any of the offences which are mentioned in sec. 582 as being within the jurisdiction of the general or quarter sessions of the peace, may, with his own consent, be tried in any province of Canada, and, if convicted, sentenced by the judge.

2. An entry shall be made of such consent at the time the same is given.

3. Such trial shall be had under and according to the provisions of this Part out of sessions and out of the regular term or sittings of the court, and whether the court before which, but for such consent, the said person would be triable for the offence charged or the grand jury thereof is or is not then in session.

4. A person who has been bound over by a justice or justices under the provisions of sec. 696, and has been surrendered by his sureties, and is in custody on the charge, or who is otherwise in custody awaiting trial on the charge, shall be deemed to be committed for trial within the meaning of this section.

5. Where an offence charged is punishable with imprisonment for a period exceeding five years, the Attorney General may require that the charge be tried by a jury, and may so require notwithstanding that the person charged has consented to be tried by the judge under this Part, and thereupon the judge shall have no jurisdiction to try or sentence the accused under this Part.

6. A person accused of any offence within subsection 1 of this section, who has been bound over by a justice or justices under the provisions of sec. 696 and is at large under bail, may notify the sheriff that he desires to make his election under this Part, and thereupon the sheriff shall notify the judge, or the prosecuting officer, as provided in sec. 826.

7. In such case, the judge having fixed the time when, and the place where the accused shall make his election, the sheriff shall notify the accused thereof, and the accused shall attend at the time and place so fixed, and the subsequent proceedings shall be the same as in other cases under this Part.

8. The recognizance taken when the accused was bound over as aforesaid shall in such case be obligatory upon each of the persons bound thereby, as to all things therein mentioned, with reference to the appearance of the accused at the time and place so fixed and to the trial and proceedings thereupon, in like manner as if such recognizance had been originally entered into with reference thereto: Provided that notice in writing shall be given either personally or by leaving the same at the place of residence, as described in the recognizance, of the persons bound as sureties by such recognizance, that the accused is to appear at such time and place to make his election as aforesaid.

Origin]—8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; 6-7 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 45, sec. 6; R.S.C. 1906, ch. 146, sec. 825; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; Code of 1892, sec. 765; 32-33 Vict., Can. (1869), ch. 35.

Who may elect a speedy trial]—A person committed for trial, but released on bail and thereupon appearing before a county court judge's criminal court and electing a speedy trial without a jury is then in custody for the purposes of the jurisdiction of that court to hold the trial, although he was not placed under arrest by the sheriff or other officer attending the court. R. v. Jun Goon, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 24, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 33 W.L.R. 761.

Under sec. 825, every person committed for trial for an offence within the jurisdiction of the General or Quarter Sessions of the Peace may, with his consent, be tried under Part XVIII. A person in custody awaiting trial, however he may so find himself, is under s.s. 4 to "be deemed to be committed for trial within the meaning of the section." The accused is " in custody awaiting trial on the charge," when he surrenders himself for trial on the appointed date on making his election. Giroux v. The King, (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258, 267. Re Walsh, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7 at p. 9; R. v. Thompson, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 27, at 30. The "charge" means the charge mentioned in sub-sec. (1), i.e., a charge cognizable by the Court of Sessions. The interests of justice are protected, as far as parliament considered such protection necessary, by the provision of sub-sec. 5 that, where the offence charged is punishable with imprisonment exceeding a period of five years, the Attorney-General may require a trial by jury. Nothing precludes an election for trial under Part XVIII by an accused under indictment, no matter how or when presented, if he comes within the comprehensive terms of sec. 825. The difficulty which formerly existed owing to the supposed impossibility of complying with sec. 827 in the absence of depositions taken upon a magistrate's preliminary investigation in cases where such investigation had been waived and the accused had consented to be committed for trial without it, was overcome by the insertion of the words "if any" in sec. 827 by 8 and 9 Edw. VII, c. 9, s. 2. Any similar difficulty in cases of indictment, preferred under the section now numbered 873, was thus likewise removed. Giroux v. The King, supra. The special provision made by sec. 828 for re-election after indictment by a person who had already elected for trial by jury does not import an intention to preclude the right of election in other cases after indictment. The raison d'être of this provision was not to provide for the case of an indictment having been found, but to confer or make clear the right to a second election. Its terms, however, pointedly indicate that the presentment of an indictment was not regarded by parliament as a bar to the right of election. No good reason can be suggested why, if the man who has already elected for a jury trial should be allowed to re-elect after indictment and up to the moment when his actual trial begins, the man who has never elected should be debarred from doing so by the presentment of an indictment. Giroux v. The King, supra, (per Anglin, J.); re Walsh, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7, 16 D.L.R. 500; R. v. Thompson, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 27, 17 Man. R. 608.

Parliament has, in explicit terms provided for an election even after plea, since plea precedes the commencement of the trial. Giroux v. The King, supra; re Walsh, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7 (N.S.).

The fact that bail has been granted after the committal has been ordered does not alter the situation as regards the procedure to obtain the election. It is said in Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown (8th ed.) 138, Bk. 2, ch. 15, s. 3, that "A man's bail are looked upon as his gaolers of his own choosing, and that the person bailed is, in the eye of the law, for many purposes, esteemed to be as much in the prison of the court by which he is bailed, as if he were in the actual custody of the proper gaoler." And see Regina v. Lawrence (1896), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 295, 5 B.C.R. 160, at 164, applying R. v. Burke (1893), 24 Ont. 64, affirming the right to election "although the accused has never been received into custody at all except in the way of surrender merely for the purpose of appearing before the judge for election." It is not necessary that the "prisoners" when brought before the judge for election should be surrendered by their bail; so long as they are before the judge and still under bail that is sufficient to satisfy the statute and their election in such case is a valid one for they are both "prisoners" and "otherwise in custody" at that time within the true intent and meaning of secs. 825 (4) and 827. In the case of R. v. Day,

[§ 825] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XVIII)

20 Can. Cr. Cas. 325, 16 B.C.R. 323, the accused, having been bailed after committal, came voluntarily before the judge (not being brought up by the sheriff), and elected, and the court of appeal unanimously rejected as "altogether too technical" the submission that the election was thereby invalidated. R. v. Jun Goon, 10 W.W.R. 24, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 429; R. v. Cameron, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 169 (Que.). It has been held that a person being conveyed in custody from one district to another and temporarily detained at a place en route is not entitled to make his election at that place. R. v. Tetreault, (1909) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 259 (Sask.).

In the case of re-election, whatever the offence and however punishable, by the proviso to s. 828 after indictment the consent in writing of the prosecuting officer acting under sec. 826 (2), is required, and in any case either the judge or the prosecuting officer may prevent effect being given to a second election (sub-sec. 3). The fact that the indictment under which the accused was awaiting trial had been preferred under sec. 873 (1) of the Code, by leave of the jury court and without a preliminary enquiry having been held will not prevent his exercising the right of election either under sec. 825 or sec. 828. Giroux v. The King, 56 Sc.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258, affirming R. v. Giroux, 26 Que. K.B. 323.

Parliament, by one amendment after another, has overcome the several restrictions that judges have from time to time sought to place upon the right to elect for trial before a judge of the Court of Sessions, thus evincing its policy and determination that this mode of trial shall, as far as possible, be available within the limits and subject to the safeguards which it has prescribed, and its desire that the sections of the Code providing for it should receive a liberal rather than a narrow construction. Giroux v. The King, 56 S.C.R. 63, (per Anglin, J.).

See also R. v. McKeown (1912) 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 492 (Que.); R. v. Harrison, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 12, 10 Sask. L.R. 434; R. v. Nevison [1919] 1 W.W.R. 793 (B.C.).

"May" with his own consent be tried]—The word "may" in the first sub-section of section 825, read in the light of the other provisions, seems to create a duty on the part of the official to afford a prisoner the opportunity to exercise this option. R. v. County Court, re Walsh, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7 at p. 14, 48 N.S.R. 1.

Where the accused, after a preliminary investigation, was bound over by a justice under section 696 to appear for trial, and not being surrendered by his sureties, an indictment was preferred against him before the grand jury and a bench warrant was issued by a judge for his arrest as he had not appeared on his recognizance, he is in custody awaiting trial on the charge laid against him, and within the terms of sub-section 4 of sec. 825, so as to be entitled to elect summary trial. There is no difference in effect between the case of sureties rendering a defendant under a warrant (sec. 703) and the case of an arrest under a bench warrant. One is kindred to the other, and the words "or otherwise" ought to be held to cover such a case. R. v. County Judge's Griminal Court, re Walsh, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7, at p. 11, 48 N.S.R. 1. The accused does not get the privilege of electing for a speedy trial as a general right under all circumstances without effort on his part. If he is brought up on a bench warrant to answer an indictment preferred by leave of a jury court, and the latter is presided over by a judge not empowered under Part XVIII, it may be necessary for him to make formal application to the court under whose control he happens to be for an order that he should be taken by the sheriff before the County Court Judge's Criminal Court that he may elect trial there. If the accused is not in close custody, he must put himself in a position to claim the right. R. v. Sovereen, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 103 (Ont.); R. v. Burke, 24 Ont. R. 64.

Electing for or against speedy trial]—When the accused is first brought before the judge of the county court judge's criminal court (or under certain circumstances before the prosecuting officer) he is to be given the privilege of electing for or against a speedy trial without a jury. Sec. 827.

Election for trial by the court not by any particular judge of same]—The election of speedy trial is to be one for trial before the particular County Court Judge's Criminal Court, and is not to be limited to the judge before whom the election is made. R. v. McDougall, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 234 (Ont.); R. v. Stewart, 43 N.S.R. 353, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 331; R. v. Guay, (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 243, 21 Rev. de Juris, 253 (Que.).

Speedy trial under Part XXIII bars proceedings on pending indictment for same offence]-It may be that by pleading to the indictment when arraigned on an indictment preferred by leave of the court the accused chose his forum and acquired the privilege to be tried by But if he applies for and obtains leave to be tried by a jury. the judge of the sessions he waived this privilege and selected another forum which he had a right to do with the consent of the prosecuting officer. If the accused not only appeared voluntarily before the judge of the sessions to answer the charge, but at the trial he, with the assistance of counsel, cross-examined the Crown witnesses and examined witnesses on his own behalf, he cannot, after conviction there, raise objection to the proceedings before the sessions court on the ground that a bill of indictment had been already found against him at the Assizes for the same offence as that for which he was tried in the Court of Sessions nor object on the ground that such indictment remains undisposed of. Giroux v. The King, 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258, affirming R. v. Giroux, 26 Que. K.B. 323.

2. Where the judge does not reside in the county in which the prisoner was committed, the judge having received the notification and having obtained the depositions on which the prisoner was committed, if any, may forward them to the prosecuting officer with instructions to cause the prisoner to be brought before him instead of the judge, naming as early a day as possible for the trial in case the prisoner shall elect to be tried by the judge, without a jury, and the prosecuting officer shall, in such case, with as little delay as possible cause the prisoner to be brought before him.

Origin]-Sec. 766, Code of 1892.

Sheriff's notice to judge]—Sec. 826 provides that "every sheriff shall, within 24 hours after any person charged as aforesaid is committed to gaol for trial, notify the judge," etc. That means 24 hours, not after the justice has made the order committing, but 24 hours after the party is actually committed to prison and is taken in custody there. The language of a statute of this character is to be strictly construed. R. v. Tetreault (Sask.) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 259.

Duties of the prosecuting officer]—Under sec. 826 (2) and the first part of secs. 827-8, the duty which now may be discharged by the prosecuting officer in taking the election and re-election is one which was formerly discharged by the judge alone, and is of a judicial nature; then under sub-secs. 3 and 4 of 827 and 833 the duties are primarily those of a ministerial officer of the court; then under sec. 828 in the granting or withholding the consent for re-election after indictment, required by the provise, there is the discharge of a duty quite distinct from either of the foregoing and pertaining more to the powers of the Attorney-General as representing the Crown. R. v. Jun Goon, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 24, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 425, 22 B.C.R. 381, 33 W.L.R. 761.

Speedy Trials

Persons jointly accused]-See sec. 829.

Arraignment.—The charge.—The option.—Procedure where accused consents to trial without jury.—Prosecuting officer prefers charge.

827. The judge, having first obtained the depositions on which the prisoner was so committed, if any, or the prosecuting officer, as the case may be, shall state to the prisoner,—

- (a) that he is charged with the offence, describing it;
- (b) that he has the option to be tried forthwith before a judge without the intervention of a jury, or to remain in custody or under bail, as the court decides, to be tried in the ordinary way by the court having criminal jurisdiction.

2. If the prisoner has been brought before the prosecuting officer, and consents to be tried by the judge, without a jury, the trial shall proceed on the day named by the judge in the manner provided by the next following subsection.

3. In such case or if the prisoner has been brought before the judge and consents to be tried by him without a jury, the prosecuting officer shall prefer the charge against him for which he has been committed for trial, and if, upon being arraigned upon the charge, the prisoner pleads guilty, the prosecuting officer shall draw up a record as nearly as may be in form 60.

4. Such plea shall be entered on the record, and the judge shall pass the sentence of the law on such prisoner, which shall have the same force and effect as if passed by a court having jurisdiction to try the offence in the ordinary way.

Origin]-Sec. 767, Code of 1892.

Manner of taking option on arraignment]—The judge is to "state" to the accused what offence he is charged with, and the offence is to be "described." Sec. 827. There is no essential difference in the stating of the offence at this stage and the preferring of the charge on his Recording the consent]-An entry shall be made "of the consent at the time the same is given" (sec. 825).

In sec. 1152, it is declared that "the several forms in this Part, varied to suit the case or forms to the like effect, shall be deemed good, valid and sufficient in the cases thereby respectively provided for." Code form 60 is headed "sec. 827" and the recital is as follows: "and asked by me if he consented to be tried before me without the intervention of a jury, consented to be so tried." There is nothing about information of the chance of being admitted to bail. In view of these provisions it has been held that parliament did not contemplate that there should be any recital in the conviction of the fact that the prisoner had been given the information about the chance of bail, though it was the duty of the judge to give it, but that, on the contrary, it was intended that the recital in the statutory form would suffice to show the jurisdiction. R. v. Therrien (No. 1), 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 275 (Que.); R. v. Mali (No. 1) (1912) 1 W.W.R. 766, 22 Man. R. 29, 19 Can. Cr Cas. 184, 1 D.L.R. 256, and R. v. Mali (No. 2), (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1047; 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 188, 1 D.L.R. 484, 20 W.L.R. 601, 22 Man. R. 29.

Fixing day for trial is directory only and does not affect jurisdiction]-The County Court Judge's Criminal Court is a Court of Record, for the trial of certain criminal offences, and the judge thereof for all purposes and proceedings connected therewith and relating thereto, has all the powers of a Court of Record, and a prisoner who elects to be tried before such court submits himself not to the particular judge but to the County Court Judge's Criminal Court, which court does not lose jurisdiction over him until he is tried for the offence for which he is committed. R. v. Stewart, 43 N.S.R. 353, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 331. The mere fact that the judge of the court is not present on the day fixed for the trial cannot possibly affect the jurisdiction of the court, which arises and continues by reason of the prisoner's election to be there tried. The fixing of a particular day for the trial has nothing to do with giving jurisdiction; it is simply a matter of procedure of a directory character. The fact that the judge has named a day for the trial, and does not then try the prisoner as intended, in no way prevents or limits his power to fix another day on which the trial takes place. R. v. Stewart, 43 N.S.R. 353, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 331.

If prisoner consents to a speedy trial, the charge is to be preferred and tried]—To prefer a "charge" under the Speedy Trials sections of the Code is preferring a document very analogous to an indictment. The statute requires a statement which is an indictment to all intents and purposes. R. v. Lonar, 25 N.S.R. 124; R. v. Inglis, 25 N.S.R. 261; R. v. Cross (1909) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 171, 43 N.S.R. 320.

upon which he was committed for trial, and also such additional charges as may by leave of the judge be preferred by the prosecuting officer. Code sees. 827, 833, 834. When this is done the preferring of the charge is complete and constitutes the first part of the arraignment, the second part of which consists in asking the accused if he is guilty or not guilty. R. v. Jun Goon, 10 W.W.R. 24 at 29, 22 B.C.R. 381, 33 W.L.R. 761, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415.

Joinder of counts in the charge]—Sees. 856 and 857 will apply to the joinder of counts in the charge in like manner as they do to joinder of counts in an indictment. R. v. Cross (1909) 43 N.S.R. 320, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 171.

Added or substituted charges]-Code sec. 834.

Sub-sec. (3)—The "prosecuting officer" to prefer the charge]—The due appointment of a person as prosecuting officer is not a question of jurisdiction, using that word in its proper sense, namely, the authority which a court has to decide matters that are litigated before it or to take cognizance of matters presented in a formal way for its decision. R. v. Jun Goon, 10 W.W.R. 24, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415. Whether or not a matter is presented in a formal way under the speedy frials clauses by a person who professes to act as "Crown Counsel" is not a question of jurisdiction; the words "Crown Counsel" subjoined to the signature of counsel conducting the prosecution may, if necessary, be rejected as surplusage. E. v. Jun Goon, supra.

Counsel may be appointed ad hoc to prosecute cases at a session of the County Court Judge's Criminal Court without any formal appointment being produced or proved at the trial. The authority may be merely by telegram or telephone message and on counsel stating that he appears for the Crown it is competent for the judge to recognize his appointment as prosecuting officer, and to act upon the charge preferred by him if it is within the depositions. R. v. Jun Goon, 10 W.W.R. 24.

Prisoner may be bailed whether electing for or against speedy trial]—Code sees. 836, 837.

Form of record when the prisoner pleads guilty]-Code form 60, following sec. 1152.

Sentence may include costs and expenses]-See sec. 1044.

Defects of form]—The omission to affix a law stamp to a warrant of arrest would not affect the validity of the proceedings subsequent to the execution of the same, the defect, if any, being cured by sec. 669 of the Code. R. v. Hamelin, 16 Que. K.B. 501, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 333.

The accused who has pleaded to the information, given security for his appearance and asked for a speedy trial cannot attack the legality of his arrest on the ground that the warrant does not bear law stamps under the Quebec tariff, and if the proceedings are instituted by the Crown no stamps are required. [§ 827] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XVIII)

Where the information which preceded the preliminary enquiry was used in place of a formal "charge" on a speedy trial, and the accused moved to quash it as such, he thereby treats it as a de facto charge and cannot object to the lack of a formal document, at least where no prejudice is shown. Annexing a new count written on a separate paper to the formal charge signed by the prosecuting officer is sufficient where done by such officer to incorporate the new count in the formal charge upon an amendment made by leave of the trial judge. A speedy trial on the new count to which the accused gave his consent to speedy trial and pleaded will not be set aside for alleged informality in, or lack of signature of the prosecuting officer under such circumstances. R. v. Wilson, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 5 W.W.R. 620, 26 W.L.R. 148 (Sask.).

Demand of jury trial.-Re-election.-Procedure thereon.

828. If the prisoner on being brought before the prosecuting officer or before the judge as aforesaid demands a trial by jury, he shall be remanded to gaol.

2. Any prisoner who has elected to be tried by jury may, notwithstanding such election, at any time before such trial has commenced, and whether an indictment has been preferred against him or not, notify the sheriff that he desires to re-elect, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the sheriff and judge or prosecuting officer to proceed as directed by sec. 826.

3. Thereafter unless the judge, or the prosecuting officer acting under subsection 2 of sec. 826, is of opinion that it would not be in the interests of justice that the prisoner should be allowed to make a second election, the prisoner shall be proceeded against as if his said first election had not been made.

4. Provided that if an indictment has been preferred against the prisoner the consent of the prosecuting officer shall be necessary to a re-election, and in such case the sheriff shall take no action upon being notified of the prisoner's desire to re-elect unless such consent is given in writing.

Origin]-8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; sec. 767, Code of 1892.

When re-election permissible]—Under the Speedy Trials Act, as it was originally passed, it was held in Ontario that a person arraigned before a county court judge and electing against a speedy trial without a jury, had no absolute right, after being remanded, of re-election: Reg. v. Ballard (1897), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 96, 28 Ont. R. 489; while in British Columbia a different view prevailed. There it was held that a prisoner who had elected to be tried by a jury might afterwards re-elect in favour of a speedy trial on application for leave to abandon his former election: R. v. Prevost (1895), 4 B.C.R. 326.

Speedy Trials

Then Parliament, by the amendment of 1900, obviously for the purpose of overcoming these conflicting decisions, passed the section which is now sub-sec. 2 of sec. 828 of the Criminal Code. While a prisoner who has elected to be tried by a jury has the right of reelecting in favour of a speedy trial without a jury, the converse of the proposition is not true; a prisoner who has elected in favour of a speedy trial without a jury in the ordinary way before the court having criminal jurisdiction. Sub-sec. 2 of sec. 828 gives the accused the right of re-election only in case his first election was for trial by jury, and an election to be tried by a judge without a jury having once been made cannot be withdrawn. R. v. Keefer, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 122, 2 O.L.R. 572; R. v. Howe, 42 N.B.R. 378, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 215.

At any time before such trial has "commenced"]—Sec. 828, sub-sec. 2 provides that he may exercise "the election at any time before such trial has commenced."

In the sense of the common law the arraignment of the prisoner constitutes no part of the trial. It is a preliminary proceeding and, until the party has pleaded, it cannot be ascertained whether there will be any trial or not. Re Walsh (R. v. County Judge's Criminal Court), 48 N.S.R. 1, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7; Giroux v. The King, (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258.

Whether an indictment has been "preferred" or not]—In Re Walsh (R. v. County Court), 48 N.S.R. 1, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 7, it was safd: "This section provides that re-election may be made after an indictment has been 'preferred' and I think also after it has been found, because it may be after indictment preferred, and at any time before the trial has commenced. There is, of course, an intervening time between the finding of the indictment and the commencement of the trial; the trial cannot commence until after the prisoner has pleaded, and the re-election may be at any time before the commencement of the trial." (23 Can. Cr. Cas. 21).

If the accused has elected speedy trial and before the trial has begun in the county judge's criminal court he is arraigned on the same charge in the jury court on the indictment found against him while he was out on bail, the accused may object to plead on the ground of his prior election of speedy trial, and the jury court thereupon may postpone the arraignment to the next sittings pending the speedy trial before the county court judge so that the accused may plead the result of the speedy trial in answer to the indictment; R. v. Thompson, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 27, 17 Man. R. 608; or quash the indictment on due proof

Consent of prosecuting officer to a re-election after electing a jury trial]—The proviso which for convenience of reference is here num bered (4) was added by the statute 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2 but was given no number although it manifestly would not be limited to sub-sec. (3).

Persons jointly accused.

829. If one of two or more prisoners charged with the same offence demands a trial by jury, and the other or others consent to be tried by the judge without a jury, the judge, in his discretion, may remand all the said prisoners to gaol to await trial by a jury.

Election under Parts XVI or XVII.-Re-election.

830. If under Part XVI or Part XVII any person has been asked to elect whether he would be tried by the magistrate or justices, as the case may be, or before a jury, and he has elected to be tried by a jury, and if such election is stated in the warrant of committal for trial, the sheriff, prosecuting officer or judge shall not be required to take the proceedings directed by this Part.

2. If such person, after his said election to be tried by a jury has been committed for trial he may, at any time before the regular term or sittings of the court at which such trial by jury would take place, notify the sheriff that he desires to re-elect.

3. In such case it shall be the duty of the sheriff to proceed as directed by sec. 826, and thereafter the person so committed shall be proceeded against as if his said election in the first instance had not been made.

Effect of prior election of mode of trial]—In the case of theft by juveniles under the age of 16, prosecuted under Part XVII, the option of the accused or of his parent or guardian is, in the terms of Code sec. 807, to be that he objects to the justices deciding upon the charge. The statutory caution given by the justices is an invitation to hear the defence, but accompanied by notice that if the accused wishes to be tried by a jury he must "object now." Likewise before the amendment made by 8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9, sec. 2 to Code sec. 778, the election on a summary trial arraignment under Part XVI was for or against a jury trial but is now either for trial by the magistrate without a jury or for trial "in the ordinary way by the court having eriminal jurisdiction."

Formerly the accused might first elect trial by a jury when before the magistrate and later elect trial without a jury when arraigned before the district judge's criminal court. Sec. 785 in Part XVI still refers to an election to be "tried before a jury," in the clause directing the magistrate to proceed with a preliminary enquiry, but this is probably due to the appropriate amendment of that section being overlooked when the amendment of sec. 778 was made by 8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9. Under sec. 778, as amended, the magistrate is not empowered to take a more limited election of the accused to be tried by a jury as distinct from the election to be tried by "a court having criminal jurisdiction." Code sec. 778; R. v. Price and Burnett (1914) 7 W.W.R. 621, 25 Man. R. 26, 30 W.L.R. 1, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 285; and see R. v. Thompson, 17 Man. R. 608, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 27. An accused person, whose election is taken under sec. 778 as amended, must be dealt with as provided by secs. 825 and 827 without regard to sec. 830. Even the finding of an indictment on the charge will not bar the right to make an "election" of a speedy trial; Giroux v. The King, (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258; but if the accused has once made an election for a jury trial when arraigned under Part XVIII he may re-elect for a "speedy trial" only in the event of his obtaining the written consent of the prosecuting officer. Code sec. 828 (4).

Continuance of proceedings before another judge.

831. Proceedings under this Part commenced before any judge may, where such judge is for any reason unable to act, be continued before any other judge competent to try prisoners under this Part in the same judicial district, and such last mentioned judge shall have the same powers with respect to such proceedings as if such proceedings had been commenced before him, and may cause such portion of the proceedings to be repeated before him as he shall deem necessary.

Origin]-Sec. 770, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 30.

Substitution of another judge where trial judge unable to act]— Amongst other proceedings which see, S31 validates, is the enforcement of a conviction which had been stayed pending the hearing of an appeal taken on a case reserved. R. v. Brooks, 9 B.C.R. 13, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 372. the Election after magistrate has declined to try under Parts XVI or XVII.

832. If, on the trial under Part XVI or Part XVII of any person charged with an offence triable under the provisions of . this Part, the magistrate or justices decide not to try the same summarily, but commit such person for trial, such person may afterwards, with his own consent, be tried under the provisions of this Part.

Origin]—See. 771, Code of 1892; 52 Viet., Can., ch. 47, see. 10. Where magistrate has declined to try summarily]—See secs. 784 (Part XVI) and 808 (Part XVII).

Trial of accused.-Form of record.

833. If the prisoper upon being arraigned under this Part consents as aforesaid and pleads not guilty the judge shall appoint an early day, or the same day, for his trial, and the prosecuting officer shall subpœna the witnesses named in the depositions, or such of them and such other witnesses as he thinks requisite to prove the charge, to attend at the time appointed for such trial, and the judge may proceed to try such prisoner, and if he be found guilty sentence as aforesaid shall be passed upon him.

2. If he be found not guilty the judge shall immediately discharge him from custody, so far as respects the charge in question.

3. The prosecuting officer in such case shall draw up a record as nearly as may be in form 61.

Origin]-Sec. 772, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 11.

Private prosecutor has no status]—In Rex v. Gilmore (1903), 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 219, 6 O.L.R. 286, it was decided that a private prosecutor was "no party to" a prosecution in the county court judge's eriminal court for perjury, "nor indeed bound by any judgment that may be made in it," and that, though "he may, with the consent of the proper authorities, proceed in the name of the Sovereign," he has "against the will of both parties" (i.e., the Crown and the accused) "no power over, or voice in, the prosecution." To the same effect is the decision in R. v. Clark (1904) 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 925 (N.S.); and see R. v. Fraser, 30 O.L.R. 598, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 140.

Powers of court]—The judge of the county court judge's criminal court is fully invested in relation to the criminal jurisdiction of that court with all the powers which a judge of the supreme court would have in exercising the criminal jurisdiction of the supreme court. R. v. Burke, I Can. Cr. Cas. 539, 545. And by sec. 839 the judge has all the powers of amendment which are possessed by any court before which an indictment may be tried.

The judge trying the case without a jury is entitled to make the like inferences from the evidence as a jury might make. R. v. Ward (1914) 48 N.S.R. 204, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 75.

Code sec. 889 authorizes an amendment of the count in an indictment in certain cases of variance if the accused has not been misled or prejudiced by the variance. But if the amendment sought to be made has no reference to the same transaction and makes the charge a quite different one from that on which the accused gave his election for trial, he must again be put to his election on such new charge. R. v. Lacelle, 11 O.L.R. 74, 10 Can, Cr. Cas, 229.

Sentence in excess of legal limit]—Because of the limitations of the Habeas Corpus Act in respect of commitments in execution from a court of record (see. 824), the procedure by habeas corpus is not applicable to the reversal or correction (sec. 1120) of the illegal sentence. The proper remedy is that of an appeal by reserved case or case stated under sec. 1013 et seq. R. v. Kavanagh, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 507 (N.S.).

Jurisdiction at place of commitment although not locality of offence]—In R. v. Tetrault, 11 W.L.R. 305, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 259 (Sask.) it was held that the place of election for speedy trial is the district to the gaol of which the accused has legally been committed on the preliminary enquiry; this is not necessarily the district in which the offence was committed. R. v. Harrison [1918] 1 W.W.R. 12, 10 Sask. L.R. 436, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 159; R. v. Anderson [1918] 1 W.W.R. 12, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 176; R. v. Lynn, 4 Sask. L.R. 324, 16 W.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 129.

Intermixing of trials]—See R. v. McBerny, 26 N.S.R. 327, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 339; R. v. Burke, 36 N.S.R. 408, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 14. R. v. Sing, 9 B.C.R. 254, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 156; R. v. Bullock, 6 O.L.R. 663, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 8; R. v. Reid, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 352 (N.S.).

Where there are two or more charges against the same person to be tried before the same county judge under the speedy trials clauses it is desirable that the practice should be to dispose of one before taking evidence in the other. charge before the first charge pending before the same county judge was finally disposed of, is not of itself ground for setting aside the first conviction. Whether or not the trials have been intermixed so as to invalidate a conviction is a question depending upon the special circumstances relied upon to show that the accused has been prejudiced by that mode of procedure. R. v. Iman Din, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 82, 15 B.C.R. 476. The accused is prejudiced if the evidence on the one charge has been taken into consideration in finding him guilty on the other. R. v. McBerny, 26 N.S.R. 327. As to accepting the certificate of the trial judge that he was not so influenced, the authorities are in conflict. See R. v. Iman Din, supra; R. v. Bullock, 6 O.L.R. 633, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 8; R. v. Fry, (1898) 19 Cox C.C. 135, 67 L.J.Q.B. 712. For cases as to intermixing trials of summary conviction matters, see note to Code sec. 710.

Upon several charges of perjury in respect of one affidavit, the judge is bound to regard the whole affidavit as the sworn statement in respect of each charge, and should not treat each paragraph of the affidavit as an entire statement independently of the other paragraphs, as the one may qualify or explain the other. R. v. Cohon (or Cohn), 36 N.S.R. 240, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 386.

If found guilty sentence "as aforesaid" shall be passed]—This refers to the procedure under sec. 827 in case the accused had pleaded guilty. By sub-sec. Origin]-Sec. 773, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 12.

Consent of judge to prefer a new charge]—This consent must be obtained before the charge is preferred. R. v. Cohon, (1903) 36 N.S.R. 240, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 386. The right to add a second count for another offence is not dependent upon the first count being proved. R. v. Stickler, (1910) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 45 (B.C.).

Consent to trial on new charge]-The proviso added to the new sub-sec. (1) by the amendment of 1909 makes it clear that the prisoner's consent must be obtained in respect of the added or substituted charge under the formalities of sec. 827. If he refuses so to be tried he must remain in custody or under bail, as the court decides, to be tried in the ordinary way by the court having criminal jurisdiction (sec. 827) (1); that is, with a jury. He is in that event to be held for trial or admitted to bail in all respects as if such charge had been the one upon which he was committed for trial; sec. 834 (2); and an indictment preferred against him under secs. 872 and 873, or in Alberta or Saskatchewan a formal charge in lieu of an indictment. It is a matter of precaution in case of such new charge going to the jury court to obtain the consent under sec. 873 of the judge presiding over such court to the preferring of the indictment notwithstanding the consent already obtained in the county judge's criminal court under sec. 834. For cases prior to the 1909 amendment reference may be made to R. v. Carrière, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 5, 14 Man. L.R. 52; R. v. Douglas, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 120, 16 Man. R. 345. R. v. Lonar, 25 N.S.R. 124; R. v. Morgan, 2 B.C.R. 829; R. v. Smith, 25 N.S.R. 138; Cornwall v. The Queen, 33 U.C.Q.B. 119 (Ont.); Goodman v. The Queen (1883) 3 Ont. R. 18; R. v. Clark, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 125; R. v. Wener, 12 Que. K.B. 320, 6 Can, Cr. Cas. p. 406. The charge which may be added or substituted under that section and be tried by defendant's consent to speedy trial is not necessarily one which is cognate to the one for which the accused was committed or bailed, but may be for an offence wholly disconnected therewith under the present sec. 834. In this respect, R. v. Wener, supra, is superseded.

Reserved case from county court judge's criminal court]—It is not competent for the judge to submit the question "whether there is any legal evidence to sustain the conviction " and send up the whole evidence for the court of appeal to review. He may state the effect of evidence given to sustain a certain charge or give the material part of it, and reserve a question as to its sufficiency in point of law to convict, but it was never contemplated that he could send up the whole body of the evidence, and ask if that evidence is sufficient to convict. R. v. Cohon, 36 N.S.R. 240, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 386.

The question reserved cannot be whether the judge has come to a proper conclusion on the evidence; but he may ask a question in this form: "Was there any evidence upon which the prisoner could properly be convicted?" R. v. McBrady, (1919) 15 O.W.N. 369. The question should not be whether the trial judge "was right in law and on the evidence" in finding the accused guilty. R. v. McBrady, supra. Where certain findings of fact are made by the judge and a conviction entered thereon the appellate court on a case reserved may decide that upon the findings the verdict should have been an acquittal, and in that case the appellate court may order a verdict to be entered accordingly. R. v. Ayoup, 39 N.B.R. 598, 16 Can. Cr. Cas, 375.

Penitentiary sentence]—On a sentence to a penitentiary the authority of the sheriff to take the prisoner there and of the warden to receive him is a certified copy of the sentence taken from the minutes of the court which imposed it. Origin]-Sec. 779, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 29.

Recognizance to prosecute or give evidence]—See sees. 688, 692, 1094. See, 840 refers in terms only to see. 692, and it is an open question whether a private prosecutor who has been bound over at his own request when the magistrate discharged the accused and who thereafter has preferred an indictment by leave of the court, may not, on defendant's election of trial under Part XVIII without a jury, consider his obligation under his recognizance at an end. He may, of course, be subpænaed by the Crown prosecutor to give evidence, but his recognizance under sec. 688 was merely to "prefer and prosecute an indictment." If the recognizance be given under sec. 692, then sec. 840 operates as a statutory extension of the obligation so as to make it apply to Part XVIII subject to the proviso it contains. It is at least doubtful whether the like extension can be attached to sec. 688.

Witnesses to attend throughout trial.-Default or contempt of court.

841. Every witness, whether on behalf of the prisoner or against him, duly summoned or subpœnaed to attend and give evidence before the judge sitting on any such trial on the day appointed for the same shall be bound to attend and remain in attendance throughout the trial.

2. If he fails so to attend he shall be held guilty of contempt of court, and may be proceeded against therefor accordingly.

Origin]-Sec. 780, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 47, sec. 18.

Warrant may issue for witness.—Detention thereunder or release on recognizance.—Contempt.—Penalty.—Forms.

842. PART XIX.

PROCEDURE BY INDICTMENT.

General Provisions as to Indictments.

Records, etc., need not be on parchment.

843. It shall not be necessary for any indictment or any record or document relative to any criminal case to be written on parchment.

Origin]-Sec. 608, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 103.

The indictment]—An indictment is defined to be a written accusation of an offence preferred to and presented upon oath as true by a grand jury at the suit of the Government. If the grand jury are satisfied of the truth of the accusation, they write on the back of the bill "a true bill." The bill is then said to be found, and is publicly returned into court; the party stands indicted, and may then be required to answer the charge against him. R. v. Townsend, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 29 at 49, 28 N.S.R. 468.

When the jury have made the indorsements on the bills, they bring them publicly into court, and the clerk of the court calls each juryman by name, and then the clerk of the peace or assize asks the jury whether they have agreed upon any bills, and bids them present them to the court. The clerk then reads over the name of the offenders and offences, with the finding of the jury, which is either "a true bill" or "no bill," as the case may be. R. v. Townsend, supra. Unless the context otherwise requires, "indictment" includes an information and presentment, also a formal charge under sec. 873A. See Code sec. 1 (16). It also includes any "record," i.e., the written charge under secs. 825 and 827 of Part XVIII (speedy trials).

It is a privilege of the Attorney-General to bring before the grand jury an indictment against any person suspected of being guilty of an offence, and that without there having been any preliminary inquiry or any information whatever before a magistrate. Code sec. 873.

If there has been a valid commitment for trial, an indictment may be based thereupon and presented to the grand jury. The grand jurors hear the witnesses upon this indictment and decide whether or not the accused should be put on trial; they can do this even if the proceedings before the magistrate at the preliminary hearing have not been regular in every respect. R. v. Morin, (1917) 26 Que. K.B. 428, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 269.

If it is proposed to read to the grand jury or to the petit jury, on account of absence or illness of a witness, a deposition taken at the preliminary hearing, it may be necessary to show that the deposition has been regularly taken, but for other purposes it is too late to object to the regularity of the deposition because it was not authenticated by the magistrate and the stenographer in conformity with sec. 683, if, following the preliminary hearing, the accused made option under Part XVIII to go before the assizes for a jury trial. R. v. Morin, supra.

Presentation of true bill]—The mere presentation by the grand jurors of a bill forms no part of their deliberations and determination. That is disposed of in the grand jurors' room and the finding there written is simply handed in to the court. Often presiding judges direct that the foreman alone or such number of jurors as directed may do so, without the whole panel appearing. Veronneau v. The King, (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 216, per Idington, J.

Form of stating offences in indictment]—See Code forms 63 and 64 and Code sees, 852-857.

Two indictments for same offence]—It is unusual and useless to have two indictments for the same offence. The accused can complain of this and demand that the Crown elect between the two indictments and proceed only upon one of them. R. v. Morin, (1917) 26 Que, K.B. 428, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 269. If he does not make this demind the accused cannot escape the necessity of standing trial before the petit jury because one of the two indictments has not been withdrawn. It is certain that the accused cannot undergo two trials for the same offence. If the Crown thought of making him submit to a new trial upon the other indictment, the accused would succeed on the plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict. R. v. Morin, supra. If the accused has suffered no prejudice from the fact that there were two indictments upon which the grand jury found two true bills, leave to appeal will be refused where there has been a trial on one of them only. R. v. Morin, supra.

Special provisions governing trials in Yukon Territory]—See the Yukon Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 63, as amended 1907, ch. 53, 1908, ch. 76; 1909, ch. 37; 1912, ch. 56; and Code see. 9.

Trials at bar]—Trials "at bar" before three judges representative of the full court are now unusual. Examples may be found in A. G. v. Bradlaugh, 14 Q.B.D. 695; R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q.B. 425, 18 Cox, 392; R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K.B. 446; R. v. Castro, L.R. 9 Q.B. 350.

Statement of venue in margin of indictment.-Local description.

844. It shall not be necessary to state any venue in the body of any indictment, and the district, county or place named in the margin thereof shall be the venue for all the facts stated in the body of the indictment.

2. If local description is required such local description shall be given in the body of the indictment,

Origin]-Sec. 609, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 104; 14-15 Vict., Imp., ch. 100, sec. 23,

Objection to venue]—An objection to the jurisdiction in respect of venue had formerly to be raised by a special plea to the indictment. R. v. O'Rourke, 1 Ont. 464, which plea was required to be duly verified by affidavit or otherwise. R. v. Malott (1885), 1 B.C.R., pt. 2, p. 207; Malott v. R. (1886), 1 B.C.R., pt. 2, 212; but see. 905 abolishes that form of special plea, and any such ground of defence may now be relied on under the plea of not guilty. Section 905 (2). As to jurisdiction of criminal courts, see Code sees, 577-588.

Ordering change of venue]--See sec. 884-887.

"If local description is required "]—"This refers to offences such as burglary, housebreaking, theft from a dwelling-house, forcible entry, etc., where a more definite locality than the venue must appear in order properly to charge an offence. If the offence he one not requiring local description, it is assumed that the county or district named in the margin of the indictment, and which formerly indicated the district from which the grand jury had been drawn, is the county or district in which the erime was committed. Smitheman v. The King, 35 S.C.R. 490, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 17.

Jurisdiction]—If the offence be begun in one district and concluded in another, the indictment may be brought in either; R. v. Hogle, 5 Que, Q.B. 59, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 53; Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que, K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 108; R. v. O'Gorman, 18 O.L.R. 427, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 173; or may follow a committal for trial made in the same county on the accused being found or apprehended there, if the crime were committed within the same province. Code sec. 577; Fournier v. Attorney-General, 19 Que, K.B. 436, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 108.

Indictment charging previous convictions.

851. In any indictment for an indictable offence, committed after a previous conviction or convictions for any indictable offence or offences, or for any offence or offences, for which a greater punishment may be inflicted by reason of such previous conviction, it shall be sufficient, after charging the subsequent offence, to state that the offender was at a certain time and place, or at certain times and places, convicted of an indictable offence or offences, or of an offence or offences, as the case may be, and to state the substance and effect only, omitting the formal part of the indictment and conviction, or of the summary conviction, as the case may be, for the previous offence or offences, without otherwise describing the previous offence or offences.

Offences after previous conviction]—See secs. 370, 375-377, 386 (2), 465, 530, 533-535, 568, 851, 963, 982, 1053, 1081.

Indictment charging previous conviction]-Where a person is charged on an indictment, it is provided by sec. 851 of the Code that previous convictions may be alleged on the face of the indictment. Sections 963 and 982 provide a procedure for charging the accused in such cases with these former convictions, when so alleged on the face of the indictment, and for proving them if it should become necessary to do so. As regards proceedings by indictment, Richards, J.A., expressed the view in R. v. Edwards, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 202, 17 Man. R. 288, that it was the intention of Parliament, as shown by the above sections of the Code, that the alleging of former convictions on the face of the indictment is a condition precedent to charging the accused with them. He added, "It may be that it was intended that the need for alleging former convictions on the record, where it is intended to charge the accused with them, should only apply to proceedings by indictment. At any rate there is no provision in the Code for alleging them on the record, or for proving them, when a person, brought before a magistrate for a preliminary inquiry as to an indictable offence, elects to be tried by such magistrate. For the above reason a magistrate is placed in a doubtful position with regard to his power of considering previous convictions when such an election is made. If he cannot, after convicting a person for the offence for which he is trying him, refer to, and have proved before him, previous convictions against that person, then his power of dealing with the case is not so great in all respects as the power of a court where the trial is had on an indictment. On the other hand, the particularity of the above quoted sections of the Code and the care they show in providing that the accused and his counsel shall know that he is to be charged with them, and that the accused shall be protected from any mistake as to his identity with other persons previously convicted, or as to the existence of such previous convictions, prove such an intention on the part of Parliament to require those provisions, that it is difficult to find an intention to dispense with them on trials before a magistrate. It is a rule of administration of criminal law that the rights of an accused person shall be carefully protected. Where such rights are, as above, so fully safeguarded in the case of a trial upon an indictment, I cannot see my way, in the absence of express legislation, to hold that those safeguards are meant to be dispensed with on a trial by a magistrate."

In a later case it was held that sections 851 and 963 as to the procedure in case of a charge for a second or subsequent offence involving an increased penalty, do not apply to summary conviction offences. R. v. Cruikshanks, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 6 W.W.R. 524, 7 Alta. L.R. 92 The defendant is to be arraigned in the first instance upon so much only of the indictment as relates to the subsequent offence. Sec. 963. While there is no similar provision in Part XV of the Code relating to summary convictions, there are similar enactments to be found in both federal and provincial statutes as regards certain offences thereunder punishable on summary conviction. Cf. The Canada Temperance Act, R.S.C. 1906, eh. 152.

General Provisions as to Counts.

Stating substance of offence.—In popular language.—In the words of the enactment or otherwise.—Form.

852. Every count of an indictment shall contain, and shall be sufficient if it contains in substance, a statement that the accused has committed some indictable offence therein specified.

2. Such statement may be made in popular language without any technical averments or any allegations of matter not essential to be proved.

3. Such statement may be in the words of the enactment describing the offence or declaring the matter charged to be an indictable offence, or in any words sufficient to give the accused notice of the offence with which he is charged.

4. Form 64 affords examples of the manner of stating offences.

Origin]-Sec. 611, Code of 1892.

Application generally]—The general provisions of secs. 852 and 853 are not to be restricted in their operation because of any of the specific matters regarding which provision is made by sec. 855. See sub-sec. (2) of the latter section.

Manner of describing offences]-

All that is intended by sub-secs. 2 and 3 is that it is not necessary to set forth all the legal elements of the offence but that either popular or the statutory word or words may be used. R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415. For instance, it is not necessary in a charge of theft to use some such phrase as "did fraudulently and without colour of right convert to his use" a certain thing "with intent to deprive the owner of such thing." It is sufficient to say "did steal" such or such a thing, the property of so and so. Or, again, for instance, under sec. 448, it is sufficient to say that the accused at such a time and place did assault so and so with intent to rob him, without setting forth the legal ingredients of the crime of robbery. But the enactment does not mean that it is sufficient to say that the accused did on such a day "commit theft" or "steal," or "did commit an assault with intent to rob," without specifying the thing stolen or identifying the person assaulted, not necessarily by name but in some way or other. R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 10 Alta. L.R. 164, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232.

All that is meant is that the offence itself (i.e., the kind of offence, the nature of the crime) need only be described in words of the statute creating it. R. v. Trainor, supra; Smith v. Moody [1903] 1 K.B. 56, 72 L.J.K.B. 43; R. v. Stroulger, 17 Q.B.D. 327; R. v. Goodfellow, 11 O.L.R. 359, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 424.

Except for certain specific enactments in the Criminal Code, reference must be had to the common law for the rules and principles governing criminal pleading and procedure. R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203.

The first general rule respecting indictments is, that they should be framed with sufficient certainty: 1 Chitty's Criminal Law, 2nd ed., p. 169. For this purpose the charge must contain a certain description of the crime of which the defendant is accused, and a statement of the facts by which it is constituted, so as to identify the accusation, lest the grand jury should find a bill for one offence, and the defendant be put upon his trial in chief for another, without any authority: ib. These precautions are also necessary in order that the defendant may know what erime he is called upon to answer, and may be entitled to claim any right or indulgence incident as well as that the jury may appear to be warranted in their conclusion and that the court may see such a definite offence on record, that they may apply the judgment, and the punishment; they are also important in order that the defendant's conviction or acquittal may insure his subsequent protection; the certainty essential to the charge consists of two parts, the matter to be charged, and the manner of charging it: ib., p. 169. The indictment must state the facts of the erime, with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit: ib., p. 171. The cases of an indictment for keeping a disorderly house, or a common gambling-house, may be considered as exceptions to the general rule, but they differ materially from prosecutions for offences which consist of individual acts, as the very ground of complaint in these peculiar cases consists of a series of transgressions: ib.; R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203.

Sec. 855 removes objections for not naming or describing with precision any person, place, or thing; but the very preciseness of the word "precision" indicates that substantiality of description is not done away with. R. v. Bainbridge, supra.

Sec. 852 states that every count of an indictment shall contain, and shall be sufficient if it contains in substance, a statement that the accused has committed some indictable offence therein specified; by sub-sec. 2, the statement may be made without any technical averments or any allegations of matter not essential to be proved; and, by subsec. 3, such statement may be in the words of the enactment describing the offence or declaring the matter charged to be an indictable offence, or in any words sufficient to give the accused notice of the offence with which he is charged. But it is evident from sub-sec. 2 that matter which is essential to be proved is not to be omitted, and from sub-sec. 3 that the accused is to have notice of the offence and not merely of the character or class of the offence; while sub-sec. 1 requires that there is to be a substantial statement of an offence which, not the class of which, is specified, and which must be an indictable one. R. v. Bainbridge, supra.

Section 853 provides that so much detail of the circumstances of the alleged offence as to afford the accused reasonable information and to identify the transaction shall be given, but that the absence or insufficiency of such details shall not vitiate the count. And, by subsec. 2 of sec. 855, the general provisions of secs. 852 and 853 are not to be restricted or limited by other provisions in Part XIX as to matters therein mentioned. Sec. 853 relates only to details of circumstances and does not dispense with the substantial circumstances which constitute the offence.

None of these sections (852, 853, 855) dispenses with the necessity, which existed previous to the Code, of a substantial statement of facts constituting and showing by their statement that they constitute an offence. R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203, 215; R. v. Weir, 9 Que. Q.B. 253, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 499; R. v. Weir, 8 Que. Q.B. 521, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 102; R. v. Cameron, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 173 (Que.); R. v.  37 O.L.R. 27.

An indictment only states the legal character of the offence and does not profess to furnish the details and particulars. These are supplied by the depositions and the practice of informing the prisoner or his counsel of any additional evidence not in the depositions what it may be intended to produce at the trial. Mulcahey v. R. (1868), L.R. 3 H.L. 306; Downie v. The Queen, (1888) 15 S.C.R. 358, 375.

If the indictment alleges only a fact which might or might not, according to the circumstances, be sufficient to prove an offence, a plea of guilty will be struck out, and the indictment quashed. Rex v. Labourdette, 13 B.C.R. 443, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 379.

As a general rule the name of the person against whom an offence has been committed should be given, and any property which has been the subject of an offence should be described. But to prevent a crime going unpunished where it is impossible to give the name of the party, it is in such cases sufficient, as an exception to the general rule, for the grand jury to state that it has been committed against a person to the jurors unknown. R. v. Taylor, (1895) 4 Que, Q.B. 226.

A charge for doing an unlawful act on a railway in a manner likely to cause danger is bad if it does not disclose the nature of the unlawful act. R. v. Porte, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 238, 18 Man. L.R. 222.

In George v. The King, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 401, 35 S.C.R. 376, the charge was laid for "unlawfully stealing goods." There was no allegation that the offence was committed "fraudulently and without colour of right," which are the words used in see. 347 of the Code in defining the crime of theft or stealing. The words, "without colour of right," in the definition of theft, are apparently used in the same sense as the word "feloniously" in the common law definition of larceny. The Supreme Court of Canada held that the offence was sufficiently stated. See also Rex v. Yee Mock, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 400, 13 D.L.R. 220; Rex v. Yaldon, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 17 O.L.R. 179; R. v. Gill, 18 O.L.R. 234, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 294. Harris, J., in R. v. Morrison (1916) 49 N.S.R. 446, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 26 at 34, expressed the opinion that George v. The King has the effect of overruling R. v. Cohon (or Cohn) 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 386, 36 N.S.R. 240, in so far as the latter dealt with the form of the charge.

Where an indictment contains in substance a statement that the accused committed the indictable offence of perjury in a judicial proceeding, and in certainty and sufficiency complies with all the requirements prescribed by the section, it is not bad by reason of the omission to allege therein that the perjury was committed with intent to deceive or mislead. R. v. Yaldon (1908) 17 O.L.R. 179, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 489.

To state in the disjunctive the subject matter of the offence provided that all and every one of the matters or things set forth as the subject matter are capable of being the subject matter of the offence charged, does not make the indictment had. Sec. 854. R. v. Kelly, 10 W.W.R. 1345 (Man.) at 1352. Per Prendergast, J. Same case in appeal [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46; and Kelly v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282.

No count of an indictment is to be deemed objectionable or insufficient for the reason only that it does not state who is the owner of any property therein mentioned (see, 855); but particulars may be ordered in favour of the accused so as to give him reasonable information as to the act or omission to be proved against him and to identify the transaction referred to (sees. 853, 859). As to the application of see. 852 to particular offences, see the various sections dealing with offences.

Surplusage]—An unnecessary allegation in a court may be rejected as surplusage. R. v. Walker, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 197, at 200, 6 Terr. L.R. 276, 4 W.L.R. 288.

Form of examples of the manner of stating offences]-Code form 64, following sec. 1152.

Indictment.—Absence of details of circumstances.—Reasonable information to accused.—Reference to section of statute.—Each count for a single transaction.

853. Every count of an indictment shall contain so much detail of the circumstances of the alleged offence as is sufficient to give the accused reasonable information as to the act or omission to be proved against him, and to identify the transaction referred to: Provided that the absence or insufficiency of such details shall not vitiate the count.

2. A count may refer to any section or subsection of any statute creating the offence charged therein, and in estimating the sufficiency of such count the court shall have regard to such reference.

3. Every count shall in general apply only to a single transaction.

Origin]-Sec. 611, Code of 1892.

Limiting each count to a single transaction]-The practice is well established in England that several offences should not be charged in the same count, although opinions have been expressed which indicate that this is more a matter of uniformity of practice than of strict law. R. v. Thompson (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 252, at 259; and see Castro v. The Queen (1881) 6 A.C. at 244; note that sub-sec. (6) of Code see. 853 uses the qualifying words "in general." 8.00

Evidence that during a defined period of less than six months a deficiency had occurred equal to the amount by which the accused had falsified an entry in his employer's books at or about the date at which he is charged with having embezzled this sum, accompanied, as it was, by evidence warranting the inference that the money stolen had reached his hands and had been misappropriated by him, suffices to sustain a conviction for theft of the entire sum (although it may have been taken in numerous small amounts at different times during the period covered by the evidence) without proving the taking of each or any of such several amounts. The case may be treated as one continuous act of theft, although there were a number of distinct takings. R. v. Henwood (1870), 22 L.T.R. 486, 11 Cox C.C. 526; R. v. Bleasdale, 2 Car. & K. 765; R. v. Slack, L.R. 7 Q.B. 408; R. v. Balls, L.R. 1 C.C.R. 328, 40 L.J.M.C. 148; Minchin v. The King (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 414 at 420.

Count valid although certain statements omitted]—The general provisions of sees. 852 and 853 are not to be restricted in their operation because of any of the specific matters regarding which provision is made by sec. 855. See sub-sec. (2) of the latter section.

Dividing or amending counts]—Although it is directed by sec. 853 (3) that every count shall in general apply only to a single transaction, it should be noted that sec. 854 enacts that a count shall not be deemed objectionable on the ground, inter alia, that it is double or multifarious. Sec. 892 enables an application to be made by the accused at any stage of the trial to have the count divided or amended, if it is embarrassing to the defence because of its being double or multifarious, or because of its following the statute declaring the offence by charging in the alternative matters which are so stated in the statute.

Joinder of counts]-See Code sec. 856.

Certain technical averments dispensed with in indictment]-See secs. 844-859, 859, 861-869.

Order for particulars]-See secs. 859, 860.

Amendment of indictment]-See secs. 889-893.

"Absence or insufficiency of details"]—The words of the proviso to sec. 853, i.e., "provided the absence or insufficiency of such details shall not vitiate the count," mean only that the count cannot be quashed owing to the absence or insufficiency of the details but it does not mean that the accused is not entitled to demand them. R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 10 Alta. L.R. 164, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232.

Reference to the depositions for particulars]-It has been suggested rather than decided that if the essential information to which the accused is entitled has already been brought out in the depositions on a preliminary enquiry, it may be sufficient to reply to the demand in respect of the indictment laid in general terms, that the particulars are set out in the depositions; R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 419 (Alta.). So on a charge of seditious libel the accused would be entitled to a statement from the prosecution either that all the words quoted in the depositions were still charged against him or that some were dropped and some still charged, specifying the particular words so dropped or so retained. R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 419 (Alta.). For the sake of formality in the record it is preferable that the words which are the basis of a libel charge or the identity of the writing or paper containing them should appear in the indictment itself. Ibid. Although under Code sec. 861 the "words" do not need to be set out, the substance and effect should be stated. R. v. Trainor, supra; R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203. As depositions are often mislaid, the prosecutor in drawing up an indictment should not be content to leave the charge in a vague and indefinite form, but should include the information in the indictment itself. The accused should not be asked to plead to a charge merely saying that the accused "committed perjury" or "published a defamatory libel" or "uttered seditious words" without specifying at least the substance and effect of the language complained of. R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 419.

Offences may be charged in the alternative.

854. A count shall not be deemed objectionable on the ground that it charges in the alternative several different matters, acts or omissions which are stated in the alternative in the enactment describing any indictable offence or declaring the matters, acts or omissions charged to be an indictable offence, or on the ground that it is double or multifarious.

Origin]-Sec. 612, Code of 1892.

Summary trial "charge" is a "count"]—Code sec. 2 (16); R. v. Mah Sam, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

Where statute describes offence in the alternative]—For example, see. 384 creates the special offence of stealing "in or from" a railway building. A charge is not multifarious in describing the offence in the same way. R. v. White, 34 N.S.R. 436, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 430; and see re Patrick White, 31 S.C.R. 383.

Where a count is multifarious]—Under sec. 854 it is no objection to the indictment that a count is double or multifarious. There is, however, the direction of sub-sec. (3) of sec. 853 that every count shall "in general" apply only to a single transaction. The origin and development of the rule of practice requiring trial upon only one felony charge at a time is explained by Lord Blackburn in Castro v. The

It is now, however, the uniform and well-established practice in England that several offences should not be charged in the same count, R. v. Thompson (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 252 at 259. Code sec. 857 gives express power to direct a separate trial upon one or more separate "counts," while sec. 892 provides for the division of various charges which are included in one count if found embarrassing to the defence. th Dividing or amending a multifarious count]-See Code sec. 892.

Count not objectionable or insufficient on ground of omission of certain statements.

855. No count shall be deemed objectionable or insufficient for the reason only,—

- (a) that it does not contain the name of the person injured, or intended, or attempted to be injured; or,
- (b) that it does not state who is the owner of any property therein mentioned; or,
- (c) that it charges an intent to defraud without naming or describing the person whom it was intended to defraud; or,
- (d) that it does not set out any document which may be the subject of the charge; or,
- (e) that it does not set out the words used where words used are the subject of the charge; or,
- (f) that it does not specify the means by which the offence was committed; or,
- (g) that it does not name or describe with precision any person, place or thing; or,
- (h) that it does not in cases where the consent of any person, official or authority is required before a prosecution can be instituted, state that such consent has been obtained.

2. No provision obtained in this Part as to matters which are not to render any count objectionable or insufficient shall be construed as restricting or limiting in any way the general provisions of secs. 852 and 853.

Origin]-Sec. 613, Code of 1892.

Sub-sec. (b)-Not naming owner of property]-In practice, an indictment for theft should not be preferred in which it is stated that the goods are the property of a person unknown if the person is really known. R. v. Carswell, 10 W.W.R. 1027, at 1031. If, however, the prosecution lay the indictment with a stated ownership of the stolen goods, the charge is thereby restricted and such ownership would have to be proved. R. v. Carswell (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1027, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 288, 34 W.L.R. 1042; R. v. Murray, 75 L.J.K.B. 593; R. v. Nier, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 838, 9 Alta. L.R. 353, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 241, 33 W.L.R. 180.

Substance of offence to be charged]—See Code see. 852 and note to same; Smith v. Moody [1903] 1 K.B. 56; R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 10 Alta. L.R. 164, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 35 W.L.R. 415; R. v. Bainbridge, 42 O.L.R. 203.

Joinder of counts .- Exception of murder charge.

856. Any number of counts for any offences whatever may be joined in the same indictment, and shall be distinguished in the manner shown in form 63, or to the like effect: Provided that to a count charging murder no count charging any offence other than murder shall be joined.

Origin]-Sec. 626, Code of 1892.

Applicable to a charge tried under Part XVIII]—Secs. 856-860 are applicable to "speedy trials" under Part XVIII. R. v. Cross (1909) 43 N.S.R. 320, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 171.

No joinder with murder charge]—As to the latter, see secs. 259, 260, 263.

Form of headings of indictment]-Code form 63, following sec. 1152.

Persons jointly indicted]—When several persons are indicted jointly the Crown always has the option to try them either together or separately, but the defendants cannot demand as a matter of right to be tried separately. R. v. Murray and Mahoney, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 411 (Alta.); R. v. Weir (No. 4), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 351, 8 Que. Q.B. 521; R. v. McConohy, 5 Rev. Leg. 746 (Que.); 2 Hawk. P.C., ch. 41, see. 8. Upon good ground being shown for a severance the presiding judge may, in his discretion, grant separate trials to the persons jointly indicted. R. v. Littlechild, (1871) L.R. 6 Q.B. 293; R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox CC. 217; R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917]. 1 W.W.R. 404, 411 (Alta.). As a general rule the discretion of the trial judge on such a question cannot be reviewed. Ibid.; R. v. Martin, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 371, 383, 9 O.L.R. 218, 5 O.W.R. 317.

If one defendant on a joint indictment pleads guilty, he is then a compellable witness as well as a competent one for either the prosecution or the defence. R. v. Gallagher, 13 Cox C.C. 61; R. v. Jackson, 6 Cox C.C. 525.

And, of course, one defendant is both competent and compellable as a witness if the Crown consents to a verdict of acquittal against him before proceeding against the others. And, although acquitted, if it appears from his testimony or otherwise that he was an accomplice, the jury should be warned that it is inadvisable to convict on an accomplice's testimony without corroboration.

The general rule is that persons jointly indicted should be jointly tried, but when, in any particular instance, this would work an injustice to any of such joint defendants, the presiding judge should, on due cause being shown, permit a severance and allow separate trials. R. v. Murray and Mahonev, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404 at 411.

The discretion of the presiding judge must not be exercised in a desultory or immethodical manner, but it must be guided and regulated by judicial principles and fixed rules. R. v. Murray and Mahoney, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404 at 411.

Some of the usual grounds for a severance are: That the defendants have antagonistic defences; R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 412; that important evidence in favour of one of the defendants which would be admissible on a separate trial would not be allowed on a joint trial; R. v. Murray and Mahoney, supra; that evidence which is incompetent against one defendant is to be introduced against another and that it would work prejudicially to the former with the jury; R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 412; R. v. Martin, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 371, 9 O.L.R. 218, 5 O.W.R. 317; that a confession made by one of the defendants if introduced and proved would be calculated to prejudice the jury against the other defendants; R. v. Murray, supra; that one of the defendants could give evidence for all or some of the other defendants and would become a competent and compellable witness on the separate trials of such other defendants; R. v. Murray, supra; and see ex parte Ferguson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 437; R. v. Blais, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 6 O.L.R. 345; R. v. Connors (1893) 3 Que. Q.B. 100; 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 70.

If the Crown is to make use of a confession by one of the prisoners he will usually be tried separately. R. v. Weir (No, 4) 8 Que. Q.B. 521, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 351; R. v. Martin, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 371, 9 O.L.R. 218, 5 O.W.B. 317. But the omission to do this will not always entitle the accused to a new trial. R. v. Davis, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1340, 19 B.C.R. 50, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 431, 26 W.L.R. 912.

Where two prisoners are tried together and a written statement by one of them to the Attorney-General is put in by the counsel of that prisoner without objection by counsel of the other prisoner, but such statement contained nothing but what had been already brought out in the examination and cross-examination of the prisoner making the statement, the trial judge is justified in refusing a separate trial. R. v. Davis, supra.

If two persons are jointly indicted and tried together, the statements or admissions made by each are generally only evidence against him who makes them. In certain circumstances, they may be evidence against both; but, if they be only evidence against him who makes them, injustice to the other accused is guarded against by the présiding judge telling the jury that this is so. There is no sufficient reason to suppose that injustice to the necused could not be effectually guarded against by the judge instructing the jury that they should discard from their minds a statement not found to have been accepted by the accused as his own. Christie's Case, 10 Cr. App. R. 141, at 157 (H.L.).

In R. v. Joachim, (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 222, two women were held to be properly convicted for the misdemeanour of committing malicious damage to an amount exceeding five pounds, though the damage done by one was of lesser amount. The charge was laid for breaking windows in connection with suffragist disturbances, but there was evidence that neither of the defendants knew that the other was breaking windows. Both belonged to the same association of suffragists although but slightly acquainted with each other, nor did the appellant know until after breaking a window that the other had already broken another window of the same premises. Lawrence, J., for the Court of Criminal Appeal, said: "We think it was a question for the jury whether on all the evidence they were acting in concert and the jury was entitled to take all the facts into consideration. It is not necessary that each should have known the acts of the other, if, in fact, they were both acting under the direction or suggestion of a person whose orders they took, knowing that others were doing the same. They are equally guilty, although they had no knowledge of each other's actions or existence."

Where several offenders are found guilty of the same offence, it may often be proper to award different degrees of punishment.

do so, it may direct that the accused shall be tried upon any one or more of such counts separately: Provided that, unless there be special reasons, no order shall be made preventing the trial at the same time of any number of district charges of theft, not exceeding three, alleged to have been committed within six months from the first to the last of such offences, whether against the same person or not.

Origin]-Sec. 626, Code of 1892.

Joinder of counts]→Offences of the same character, though differing in degree, may be united in the same indictment, and the prisoner tried on both at the same time, and on the trial he may be convicted on the one and not on the other. Theal v. R. (1882), 7 S.C.R. 397, 405.

The former rule was that if different felonies were stated in several counts of an indictment, while no objection could be made to the indictment on that account in point of law, the judge, in his discretion, might quash the indictment, or require the counsel for the prosecution to select one of felonies and confine himself to that. That was technically termed putting the prosecutor to his election, and was done when the prisoner, by reason of two charges being inquired into at the same time, would be embarrassed in his defence, or, as it has been said, lest it should "confound" him in his defence, a matter however only of prudence and discretion, to be exercised by the judge. Per Ritchie, C.J., in Theal v. R. (1882), 7 S.C.R. 397, 405. A separate trial may now be directed under this section in respect of any of the counts instead of putting the prosecutor to his election.

But in misdemeanours it was no objection to an indictment that it contained several charges. Young v. The King, 3 Term. R. 98, 106.

In Rex v. Dunn, 1 Moody C.C. 146, it was held in an indictment for stealing several articles, it was no ground for confining the prosecutor's proof to some of the articles that they might have been and probably were stolen at different times, if they might have been stolen all at once; but on an indictment against a receiver for receiving several articles if it appear that they were received at different times, the prosecutor might, under the English practice, have been put to his election.

The English practice is to put the prosecutor to his election in felonies where the overt acts relied on as proving the different offences are in substance the same. R. v. Lockett, [1914] 2 K.B. 720, 30 Times L.R. 233, 9 Cr. App. R. 268.

A separate trial may now be directed under see. 857 of the Code, in regard to any of the counts of an indictment, instead of, as formerly, putting the prosecutor to his election, and in order to guard the accused against surprise at the trial, he may ask the prosecution to furnish the particulars of the several charges alleged in the various counts of the indictment, and then the court might, under sec. 859 of the Code, if satisfied that it was necessary for a fair trial, order the prosecution to furnish particulars, or direct a separate trial on each count. R. v. Michaud, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 89 (N.B.).

Where evidence admissible on one count is inadmissible on another]— If the court allows all charges to be tried together, then the evidence admissible upon each count is properly before the jury. If a part of the evidence is admissible to prove one count, but is wholly inadmissible upon another count, the judge ought to do his best to counterast any prejudice that might be caused in the trial of the latter count, by telling the jury to leave out of consideration the evidence which was not admissible upon that count. R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 140, 188; Kelly v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282. Reg. v: Paul, 25 Q.B.D. 202, at pp. 211-212, 59 L.J.M.C. 138, 54 J.P. 667, 62 L.T. 845, 17 Cox C.C. 111.

If the defence think that such a direction would not prevent the jury considering the evidence on one count in deciding the other, the remedy is to apply for a separate trial of one or more of the counts. R. v. Strong (1915) 43 N.B.R. 190, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 430, 26 D.L.R. 122.

It is to be noted that the provisions of the Criminal Code relating to the joinder and trial of distinct charges of theft, differ in an important respect from the corresponding sections of the English Larceny Act (24-25 Vict., Imp., ch. 96, secs. 5-6). R. v. Kelly, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 140, 182 (Man.). Per Perdue, J.A. Where five charges under several separate counts in an indictment for theft and false pretenses arose out of one continuous set of transactions, the trial judge's discretion is properly exercised in trying the five counts together and separating the trial as to a count for perjury involved with the other transactions. R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46 (Man.) at 51; same case on appeal, Kelly v. The King, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282; R. v. Cross, 43 N.S.R. 320, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 171.

Certain technical averments dispensed with in indictments]—See secs 844-857, 859, 861-869.

Order for particulars]-See secs. 859, 860.

Distinct charges of theft; "whether against the same person or not"]—The addition of the words "or not" in sec. 857, make the section distinguishable from the corresponding clause in the Larceny Act, I861 (Imp.), 24 and 25 Viet., ch. 96, sec. 5, under which it has been held that the distinct charges of theft included in the one indictment must not charge one defendant in one count singly and with another defendant jointly in another. R. v. Edwards (1912) 8 Cr. App. R. 128, [1913] 1 K.B. 267, 82 L.J.K.B. 347.

Doubt as to appeal from the discretionary order]-In R. v. Hughes, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 450 (Ont.), Maclaren, J.A., expressed the opinion that the discretion of the trial judge under sec. 857 to try the different counts separately or jointly would not be subject to review by the Court of Appeal.

Multifarious counts]—Sec. 892 permits of an application being made at any stage of the trial to "amend or divide" any count which is double or multifarious and embarrassing to the defence.

Disagreement on some counts]—As each count may be treated as a separate indictment the verdict on some counts may be accepted although there is a disagreement on others; leaving the latter for separate trial before another jury. R. v. Toronto Ry. Co. (No. 1), 34 O.L.R. 589, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 417 (reversed on other grounds, Toronto Ry. Co. v. The King, [1917] A.C. 6530, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 29.)

Order for trial separately,-Procedure on each count as if separate indictment.

858. Any order for trial upon one or more counts of an indictment separately may be made either before or in the course of the trial, and if it is made in the course of the trial the jury shall be discharged from giving a verdict on the counts on which the trial is not to proceed.

2. The counts in the indictment as to which the jury are so discharged shall be proceeded upon in all respects as if they had been found in a separate indictment.

Particulars.

Particulars may be ordered.

859. The court may, if satisfied that it is necessary for a fair trial, order that the prosecutor shall furnish a particular,—

- (a) of what is relied on in support of any charge of perjury, the making of a false oath or of a false statement, fabricating evidence or subornation, or procuring the commission of any of such offences;
- (b) of any false pretenses or any fraud charged;
- (c) of any attempt or conspiracy by fraudulent means;
- (d) stating what passages in any book, pamphlet, newspaper or other printing or writing are relied on in support of a charge of selling or exhibiting an obscene book, pamphlet, newspaper, printing or writing;

- (g) further describing any person, place or thing referred to in any indictment.

Origin]-Secs. 613, 615, 616, Code of 1892.

Order for particulars, if satisfied that it is necessary for a fair trial]-Code sec. 859 provides that particulars may be ordered if necessary for a fair trial and sec. 860 provides that on an application for particulars the court may have regard to the depositions. The purpose of the particulars is for information, and possibly the reference to the depositions is to see whether the information required is already contained therein. R. v. Leverton [1917] 2 W.W.R. 584, 590, 11 Alta. L.R. 355, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 61. But the depositions may also be referred to for ascertaining what is relied on in support of the charge or the means by which the offence was committed where further details should be supplied as necessary for a fair trial (Code sec. 859).

The ordering of particulars is a matter of judicial discretion. R. v. Stevens, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 387 (N.S.).

The indictment must contain a valid count identifying the charge. Then the court, being seized of the nature of the charge, may, if it thinks it essential to a fair trial, order the further particulars. R. v. Bainbridge, (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203.

An indictment for theft of money which discloses the date of the offence, the name of the person from whom taken and the amount, does not require particulars of the mode in which the alleged offence was committed, unless the defendant can show prejudice in his defence. R. v. Lemelin, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 109.

Effect of service of particulars]—If the trial judge orders particulars, the prosecution is bound by the particulars given in accordance with the order. R. v. Carswell (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1027, 1038, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 288, 34 W.L.R. 1042. And if without an order, the prosecutor furnishes particulars he is likewise bound. R. v. Carswell (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1027, 1038. The particulars served do not enlarge the scope of the indictment; there can be no conviction for something stated in the particulars which would not be within the indictment itself. R. v. Sinclair (1906) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 20 (Sask.). R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203.

Failure to ask particulars as affecting a variance]—If a person is convicted on an indictment for forging a promissory note, and the fact in evidence was an incomplete note form which nevertheless under Code see. 466 might be the subject of forgery, strict accuracy would require that the indictment be amended by calling the document an "incomplete promissory note" and setting forth in it a detailed description of the document. But if no question is raised on the trial when an amendment could have been ordered, the conviction will stand where the defendant made no application for particulars under sec. 859 and was not misled by the discrepancy, in calling the forged document a "promissory note." Ead v. The King (1908) 40 S.C.R. 273, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348, 360. Moreover the accused might plead autrefois convict if again indicted for forging an "incomplete promissory note" if it were in fact the same document as the matter on which the accused was given in charge on the former trial would have been the same had "all proper amendments been made which might then have been made." (Code sec. 907). Ead v. The King, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348, 40 S.C.R. 272.

Amendment of indictment]-See sees. 889-893.

Motion in arrest of judgment]-Code sec. 1007.

Particulars.-Copy to be furnished.

Special Cases.

Libel, etc.-Sufficiency.-Specifying sense.-What proof necessary.

861. No count for publishing a blasphemous, seditious, obscene or defamatory libel, or for selling or exhibiting an obscene book, pamphlet, newspaper or other printed or written matter, shall be deemed insufficient on the ground that it does not set out the words thereof.

2. A count for libel may charge that the matter published was written in a sense which would make the publishing criminal, specifying that sense without any prefatory averment showing how the matter was written in that sense.

3. On the trial it shall be sufficient to prove that the matter published was criminal either with or without such innuendo.

Origin]-Sec. 615, Code of 1892.

Criminal libel]—Seditious libel, secs. 132-134; blasphemous libel, sec. 198; defamatory libel, secs. 317-334, 861, 871, 888, 905, 910-913, 934, 947, 956, 1045.

Obscene publications]—See sec. 207.

Count for seditious libel]-A defendant was charged with publishing a seditious libel. The indictment as presented by the grand jury was that he did in a certain year and at a certain place " publish a seditious libel contrary to the Criminal Code sec. 184." The defendant pleaded "not guilty" to the indictment without making any objection. On a later date the case came on for trial, when the defendant sought to demur to the indictment or to move to quash it, for defects apparent on the face. The trial judge refused leave to raise the question, as the defendant had already pleaded. Particulars had been (without previous demand) delivered by the Crown after the plea had been made, stating that the defendant did "publish seditious libel by publishing the following pamphlets." Then followed pars. 1 to 7, mentioning respectively seven pamphlets, each bearing a different title to the others, except that the seventh was not stated to have any title, and the seditious character and the purpose of publishing each was stated separately in its own paragraph, but no reference was made to any particular part or passage of any of them. The publications mentioned had been before the grand jury when they found the indictment. In view of these facts and of secs. 859 and 860 of the Code, as to the delivery of particulars, the trial judge amended the indictment by changing the figures "184" into "134"-sec. 134 of the Code being obviously intendedand by adding the words "to wit the matters contained in the annexed particulars." The indictment was not sent back to the grand jury, nor was the defendant called upon to plead again. The trial then proceeded, and the petit jury found the defendant guilty on the amended indictment with regard to two of the publications mentioned in the particulars. It was held, upon a case stated, that the demurrer to the indictment and the motion to quash should have been allowed; that the verdict did not make the indictment good; that the amendments should not have been made without the privity and consent of the grand jury; that the accused had been tried upon seven libels and convicted upon two, when the grand jury had found a bill upon only one, which was not known to be either of the two; and that the accused was, therefore, entitled to be discharged notwithstanding the verdict of the jury, a motion in arrest of judgment having been made under sec. 1007 and disallowed. Perjury .- What statements unnecessary in count.

[§ 862]

862. No count charging perjury, the making of a false oath or of a false statement, fabricating evidence or subornation, or procuring the commission of any of these offences, shall be deemed insufficient on the ground that it does not state the nature of the authority of the tribunal before which the oath or statement was taken or made, or the subject of the inquiry, or the words used or the evidence fabricated, or on the ground that it does not expressly negative the truth of the words used.

Origin]-Sec. 616, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 107.

Particulars]—The prosecutor may be ordered under sec. 859 to furnish particulars of what is relied on in support of the charge, but by sec. 862 the count is not to be deemed insufficient, and the indictment could not therefore be quashed for not having included such particulars in the bill found by the grand jury. See also sec. 852, as to stating the substance of the offence. Sec. 862 makes it unnecessary to state the nature of the authority of the tribunal before which the oath was taken. R. v. Morrison, (1916) 49 N.S.R. 446, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 26.

Perjury and cognate offences]-See sees. 170-177.

"Procuring the commission of " perjury, etc.]—By secs. 69 and 70, aiders and abetters are declared to be parties to the offences procured to be committed. They may therefore be charged as principals with such particulars as are necessary or may be ordered under secs. 852-853, 859 and 860. Subornation of perjury is specially included in sec. 174 with the same maximum punishment as for the perjury itself (14 years).

Indictment.-False pretenses.-Fraud.

863. No count which charges any false pretense, or any fraud, or any attempt or conspiracy by fraudulent means, shall be deemed insufficient because it does not set out in detail in what the false pretenses or the fraud or fraudulent means consisted.

Origin]-Sec. 616, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 107.

False pretense or fraud]—See sees. 404-444. Sec. 405A as to fraudulently obtaining credit uses the phrase "under false pretenses or by means of fraud." The offence should, however, be described with sufficient particularity that the accused may know with what he is charged. Code sees. 852, 853 and 859, and notes to same.

Attempts to commit indictable offences]—See secs. 570, 571. Conspiracy by fraudulent means]—See sec. 444 and note to same.

How and in whom Property may be Laid.

Statements sufficient in certain cases in indictments.

864. An indictment shall be deemed sufficient in the cases following:---

- (a) If it be necessary to name the joint owners of any real or personal property, whether the same be partners, joint tenants, parceners, tenants in common, joint stock companies or trustees, and it is alleged that the property belongs to one who is named, and another or others, as the case may be;
- (b) If it is necessary for any purpose to mention such persons and one only is named;
- (c) If the property in a turnpike road is laid in the trustees or commissioners thereof without specifying the names of such trustees or commissioners;
- (d) If the offence is committed in respect to any property in the occupation or under the management of any public officer or commissioner, and the property is alleged to belong to such officer or commissioner without naming him;
- (e) If for an offence under sec. 371 the oyster bed, laying or fishery is described by name or otherwise, without stating the same to be in any particular county or place.

Court of record may order prosecution for perjury]—A committal of a witness pursuant to the judge's direction that he be held and prosecuted for perjury does not prevent the same judge from making an order for bail, and the judge is not functus officio by reason of the first order. Re Ruthven, 6 B.C.R. 115, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 39.

A police magistrate holding a summary trial under sec. 777 has been held not to be a "court of record" for the purposes of the Habcas Corpus Act. R. v. Gibson, 29 Ont. R. 660, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 302.

2. The accused may at any time before he is given in charge to the jury apply to the court to quash any count in the indictment on the ground that it is not founded on such facts or evidence, and the court shall quash such count if satisfied that it is not so founded.

3. If at any time during the trial it appears to the court that any count is not so founded, and that injustice has been or is likely to be done to the accused in consequence of such count remaining in the indictment, the court may then quash such count and discharge the jury from finding any verdict upon it.

Recognizance to prefer indictment]-See secs. 688, 689, 692.

Security for costs]—The court before which the indictment is to be tried or a judge thereof may in its or his discretion order that the prosecutor who has been bound over to prosecute under sec. 688 at his own request, shall not be permitted to prefer any such indictment until he has given security for the costs which might be ordered against him under sec. 689 (1) in favour of the accused, including the latter's costs of appearance on the preliminary enquiry. Sec. 689 (2).

Any one who is bound over to prosecute "any person"]—It would seem that corporations are now included as to offences of which a corporation can be guilty. See definition of person in Code sec. 2 (13) and Re Schofield (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 93, distinguishing the cases of Re Chapman and City of London, 19 O.R. 33, decided before the passing of the Code interpretation clause 2 (13) by which "person" includes all public bodies, bodies corporate, companies, etc., "in relation to such acts and things as they are capable of doing and owning respectively."

Motion to quash generally]-See sec. 898.

Crown counsel may prefer indictment.

872. The counsel acting on behalf of the Crown at any court of criminal jurisdiction may prefer against any person who has been committed for trial at such court a bill of indictment for the charge on which the accused has been so committed or for any charge founded on the facts or evidence disclosed in the depositions taken before the justice.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3.

Any charge founded on the depositions]—The Crown prosecutor representing the Attorney-General has a right to present bills to the grand jury for all the offences disclosed by the depositions taken before the police magistrate. There is no restriction that the bill shall be for only one offence disclosed. R. v. Mooney, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 333, at 340, 15 Que. K.B. 57.

If the depositions sent up by the magistrate were not taken in his presence but by a stenographer in another room, the indictment founded on same may be quashed, if sec. 872 is the only authority for bringing it. R. v. T ynor, 10 Que. Q.B. 63, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 410. The defect in the depositions might be cured by procuring a consent under sec. 873 to prefer an indictment without regard to the depositions. the proper court cannot be taken advantage of to support a contention that a charge should be quashed upon the ground that there had been no preliminary enquiry. R. v. McClain, (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1134, 8 Alta. L.R. 73, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488. As to indictments by direction of the Attorney-General or by leave of the court, see sees. 873, 873A.

A bill of indictment in Quebec preferred by the Crown prosecutor under Cr. Code, sec. 872, for a charge founded on the evidence taken before the committing justice, need not in addition to the signature of the Attorney-General's representative to the bill include a statement that he was in fact such representative. Gagnon v. The King, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 51, 23 Que. K.B. 390.

The right to prefer an indictment under sec. 872 is displaced by the quashing of the commitment in habeas corpus proceedings on the ground that there was no evidence to sustain the commitment. R. v. Mackey (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 419 (N.S.); R. v. Mackey, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 167 (N.S.). And the court may refuse its consent to an indictment under such circumstances. R. v. Mackey (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 419, in which defendant's coursel raised the point by way of preliminary objection to the bill being submitted to the grand jury.

What is indictable]—The law is thus stated in Hawkin's Pleas of the Crown, bk. 2, ch. 25, sec. 4: "Wherever a statute prohibits a matter of public grievance to the liberties and security of a subject or commands a matter of public convenience, as the repairing of the common streets of a town, an offender against such statute is punishable not only at the suit of the party aggrieved but also by way of indictment for his contempt of the statute, unless such method of proceeding do manifestly appear to be excluded by it."

This rule has been generally approved and followed. See R. v. Durocher, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 382; R. v. Buchanan, 8 Q.B. 883; R. v. Tyler and International Commercial Co. [1891] 2 Q.B. 538, at p. 592; R. v. Hall [1891] 1 Q.B. 747; In re E. v. Mechan, 3 O.L.R. 567.

North-West Territories]—By sec. 36 of the North-West Territories Act, B.S.C., ch. 62, no grand jury shall be summoned or sit in the Territories, and by sec. 52 the trial of any person charged with a criminal offence shall be commenced by a formal charge in writing setting forth as in an indictment the offence wherewith he is charged.

Yukon Territory]—The administration of criminal law in the Yukon Territory is subject to the special provisions of the Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, one of which (see, 63) is that no grand jury shall be summoned or sit in the Yukon Territory and that where there is a trial with a jury the jury shall be composed of six jurors (see, 67). The power of summary trial by a judge without a jury is conferred under see. 65 as to certain offences, while see. 66 provides for the summary trial of any other criminal offence without a jury on the defendant's consent to that mode of trial.

PREFERRING INDICTMENT

Attorney General may prefer indictment.—Any one by order.— Who may prefer an indictment.

873. The Attorney General or any one by his direction or any one with the written consent of a judge of any court of criminal jurisdiction or of the Attorney General, may prefer a bill of indictment for any offence before the grand jury of any court specified in such consent.

2. Any person may prefer any bill of indictment before any court of criminal jurisdiction by order of such court.

3. It shall not be necessary to state such consent or order in the indictment and an objection to an indictment for want of such consent or order must be taken by motion to quash the indictment before the accused person is given in charge.

4. Except as in this Part previously provided no bill of indictment shall be preferred in any province of Canada.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; sec. 641, Code of 1892. Attorney-General]-See definition in sec. 2, sub-sec. (2).

Application of sec. 873]-The omission in sec. 873 to restrict its operation to persons already before the court or any other class, if it was intentional as we must assume that it was, could reasonably have no other significance than that no restriction was intended. That the omission was intentional, and that it was therefore meant that the application of the section should be general, is shown by the great particularity with which secs. 871 and 872 specify the classes of persons to which they respectively apply, and the sharp contrast which exists in that respect between these sections and sec. 873 in question. Observing that the three sections come under the general heading "Preferring Indictments" and follow in numerical order, if on their plain reading the first two sections, as the fact is, are special in their application and the third of a general character, there is no reason or justification for introducing in the latter any restriction. R. v. Kelly. Moreover, in secs. 871 and 872 the particularity in defining the offences for which they may be so indicted are in perfect logical harmony; whilst with respect to sec. 873, no other construction than that any person may be indicted thereunder, could be consistent with the statement therein that the indictment may be preferred for "any offence." R. v. Kelly, 10 W.W.R. 1345, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 94 (Man.), and see same case in appeal, R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Man. R. 105, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 140 and Kelly v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282.

Limitation of indictments]—In considering the effect of secs. 871, 872 and 873, it is well to remember that at common law any person might prefer a bill before the grand jury against any one whom he accused of committing an indictable offence, and this might be done without previous enquiry before a magistrate, or by leave from the court or otherwise. This right was liable to be abused, and so the Vexatious Indictments Act, 22 Viet. (Imp.), chapter 17, was passed, and the right has been cut down so that now by virtue of sec. 873 no bill can be preferred in Canada except as provided in secs. 870, 871, 872, 873. R. v. In Ontario and Quebec there was the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1861, Can., expressly taking away the right to prefer indictments for certain misdemeanours except with the consent of certain judges or officers. Re Criminal Code, 43 S.C.R. 447, 448, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459.

Indictment by direction of Attorney-General]—Although an indictment under sec. 872 may have been set aside by the court for irregularities in procedure at the preliminary inquiry, nothing prevents the Attorney-General from presenting a new indictment which will be submitted to the grand jury without there having been any preliminary inquiry or any information whatever before a magistrate. R. v. Robert (No. 2), 12 Que. P.R. 9; R. v. Lepine, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 145.

The fact that an accused person has been sent up for trial pursuant to a preliminary inquiry, does not deprive the Attorney-General of the right to bring an indictment before the grand jury and to ignore altogether the proceedings already taken before the magistrate. R. v. Houle, 12 Que. P.R. 4, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 407; R. v. Pawliski (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 147, 31 W.L.R. 675.

In R. v. Dunean, (1918) 15 O.W.N. 163, an indictment for murder was preferred by consent of the court although the commitment was for manslaughter only. The case resulted in a verdict for manslaughter. An indictment not preferred with the consent of the judge or the direction of the Attorney-General under Code sec. 873 may be quashed if not founded upon facts disclosed in the depositions taken on the preliminary enquiry. R. v. Eliasoph, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 131, 19 Que. K.B. 232.

If the bill is preferred under authority of the Attorney-General's consent, the consent should be in writing and should be specific as to the offence. R. v. Townsend, 28 N.S.R. 468, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 29; R. v. Hamilton, 31 N.S.R. 322, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 178.

Indictment by leave of the judge]—The consent of the judge is to be in writing and obtained before the indictment goes to the grand jury. R. v. Beckwith, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 450 (N.S.); R. v. Weir, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 155 (Que.).

Leave to private prosecutor to prosecute]—When a person preferring a charge requires the magistrate, who has discharged the accused, to bind him over to lay and prosecute an indictment and does submit such an indictment to the grand jury, at the following sitting of the court, he has no right to appear, by himself or through counsel, before the grand jury without the permission of the court under the long-estab-

[§ 873]

Lost or stolen indictment]—If the original indictment to which the accused had pleaded at a previous sittings has been lost or stolen, the court may direct that a new indictment be preferred, to go before another grand jury. R. v. McAuliffe (1906) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 495 (Ont.).

Election of speedy trial notwithstanding indictment]-See notes to sees. 825-828.

Proceedings against a corporation for an indictable offence]-Leave to prefer an indictment may be applied for under sec. 873; R. v. Standard Soap Co., 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 290; and for offences triable summarily under sec. 773, the procedure of sec. 773A will apply. Sees. 918-920 deal with the notice of indictment to be served on a corporation defendant. As to summary conviction offences, see also sec. 720A.

Formal proceedings in jury courts in Ontario]—The following are the forms and instructions for the use of clerks of assize and criers:

Upon opening Court the Crier makes Proclamation:

Oyez, Oyez, Oyez.—All persons having anything to do before my Lord the King's Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario at its sittings of Assize and Nisi Prius Oyer and Terminer and general gaol delivery (if a Civil Court omit the words Oyer and Terminer and general gaol delivery), for the County of attendance.—God save the King.

Oyez, Oyez, Oyez.—Sheriff of the County of return the several writs and precepts to you directed returnable here this day that my Lord the King's Justice may proceed thereon.

The Crier then proclaims:

Oyez, Oyez, Oyez,—All persons are commanded to keep silence while my Lord the King's Justice delivers the charge to the Grand Inquest upon pain of imprisonment.

Judge charges Grand Jury.

A Bailiff is sworn to attend the Grand Jury as follows:

PROCEEDINGS UPON A TRIAL.

The accused being placed in the dock and standing he is arraigned by the Clerk as follows:

"You stand indicted by the name of ." The Clerk then reads the indictment (beginning at "The Jurors of our Lord the King, etc."), and asks the accused:

"How do you plead? Guilty or not guilty?"

If the accused pleads not guilty the Clerk marks on the indictment the words "Po Se" (Ponit se super patriam, i.e., Puts himself upon the country), and the date and signs it with his initials and asks the accused:

" Are you ready for your trial?"

If the accused pleads guilty the Clerk hands the indictment to the judge, who records the plea and returns it to the Clerk, who addresses the accused:

"Harken to your plea as the Court records it. You plead guilty as within charged."

Calling the Jury :--

The Clerk calls as many names of jurors as directed by the judge. Code sec. 927 (3) and addresses the prisoner thus:—

"These good men that you shall now hear called and who do appear are the Jury which are to pass between Our Sovereign Lord the King and you on your trial, if therefore you (or any of you) shall challenge them or any of them, you must do so as they come to the Book to be sworn, before they are sworn, and you shall be heard."

The clerk then proceeds to swear Jury, each Juror being sworn in the order in which his name is drawn (Code sec. 927, s.s. 4) as follows:

Oath:—" Prisoner look at the juror, juror look at the prisoner. (At this point pause to permit of challenge; if none the Crier should hand the Book to the juror and then proceed.) You shall well and truly try and true deliverance make between Our Sovereign Lord the King and the prisoner at the bar whom you shall have in charge and true verdiet give according to the evidence.—So help you God."

"Gentlemen of the Jury, look upon the prisoner and harken to his charge. He stands indicted by the name of (reads indictment). Upon this indictment he hath been arraigned,—Upon his arraignment he pleaded Not Guilty, and for his trial he hath put himself upon the Country, which Country you are. Your charge therefore is to enquire whether he be guilty of the indictable offence charged, or not guilty, and to harken to the evidence."

Oaths to Constable :---

On Jury retiring.—You swear you will keep every one of this Jury in some private and convenient place, you shall not suffer any person to speak to them or any of them, neither shall you speak to them yourself, unless it be to ask them whether they are agreed upon their verdict, without leave of the Court.—So help you God.

On a Jury retiring during trial.—You shall attend such of the Jury as wish to retire, remain with them and return them to court, suffer no one to speak to them, nor speak to them yourself with reference to this cause.—So help you God.

When Jury locked up for night on adjournment of case.—You shall attend this Jury and remain with them during the night and return them to the court to-morrow morning at o'clock; suffer no one to speak to them, nor speak to them yourself with reference to this cause.— So help you God.

When Jury comes in with verdict the Clerk calls over their names, and the Crier numbers them. The Clerk then asks:

"Gentlemen, have you agreed on your verdict? Do you find the prisoner at the bar guilty or not guilty?"

After the verdict has been recorded the Clerk says to Jury:

"Hearken to your verdict as the Court hath recorded it. You say the prisoner at the bar is guilty, (or 'not guilty'). So say you all."

If the verdict is guilty, and there are counts for previous convictions, Clerk reads them to prisoner, and then says:

"Are you the A.B. mentioned in this count of the indictment?" If "Yes," he says: "Do you admit this previous conviction just read to you?" If the answer is "Yes," Judge endorses: "admits previous conviction." If prisoner denies it, witnesses are sworn before the same jury, who remain in their box and try it, but are not resworn.

Oath to witness.—The evidence you shall give to the court and jury sworn between Our Sovereign Lord the King and the prisoner at the bar shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.— So help you God.

TRIAL PROCEDURE

[§ 873]

When a recognizance is to be estreated:

The Crier proclaims three times:

"A.B., come forth and answer to the charge preferred against you, or you forfeit your recognizance."

And to each surety three times:

"C.D., bring forth the body of A.B. to answer to the charge preferred against him as you undertook or you forfeit your recognizance."

Where a witness is to be placed in default the Crier proclaims:

"A.B.-Come forth and give evidence in The King v. ----, pursuant to your subpoena."

Juror's oath when issue of insanity tried (Code sec. 967).

You shall well and truly try whether A.B. is or is not on account of insanity unfit to take his trial.—So help you God.

Oath of triers.—You shall well and truly try whether A.B., one of the Jurors, stands indifferently to try the prisoner at the bar and a true verdict give according to the evidence.—So help you God.

Oath of witness before them.—The evidence you shall give to the Court and triers upon this inquest shall be the truth, etc.

Interpreter's Oath.—You shall well and truly interpret the oath to the witness, and all questions put to the witness, and his answers thereto, and all such matters and things as shall be required of you, to the best of your skill and understanding.—So help you God.

Formal charge in Saskatchewan and Alberta in lieu of indictment.

873A. In the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, it shall not be necessary to prefer any bill of indictment before a grand jury, but it shall be sufficient that the trial of any person charged with a criminal offence be commenced by a formal charge in writing setting forth as in an indictment the offence with which he is charged.

2. Such charge may be preferred by the Attorney General or an agent of the Attorney General, or by any person with the written consent of the judge of the court or of the Attorney General, or by order of the court.

Section 17 of the Lord's Day Act provides that "no action or prosecution for a violation of this Act shall be commenced without the leave of the Attorney-General for the province in which the offence is alleged to have been committed, nor after the expiration of sixty days from the time of the commission of the alleged offence." It was held that the deputy of the Attorney-General of a province has no authority to grant such leave.

In re Criminal Code and the Lord's Day Act, 43 Can. S.C.R. 434, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459; and see Abrahams v. The Queen, 6 S.C.R. 10.

Criminal courts constituted without a grand jury under provincial law]—While the territory now included in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan was, as part of the North-West Territories, subject in all matters to the legislative jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament, the statute in force provided that "no grand jury shall be summoned or sit in the Territories." R.S.C. (1886) ch. 50, sec. 65. The courts of criminal jurisdiction of the Territories were constituted without grand juries. The provincial legislatures of these two provinces continued this constitution of their courts.

Having to deal with courts so constituted, Parliament found itself obliged to provide some substitute for the methods of commencing criminal trials prescribed for other parts of Canada in which grand juries form part of the criminal courts as constituted by the provincial legislatures. In the North-West Territories trials were begun "by a formal charge in writing setting forth as in an indictment the offence charged" (54 and 55 Vict., ch. 22, sec. 11).

When the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were created Parliament thought proper to make a more formal and definite provision, and for this purpose enacted, in 1907, what is now clause 873A of the Criminal Code. This provision is a re-enactment of sec. 11 of the 2 of 54 and 55 Viet., and an application of sub-sec. 1, of sec. 873, of the Criminal Code to the criminal courts as constituted in these provinces. Parliament does not assume to deal with the constitution of these courts; it merely provides a procedure suited to the courts as it finds them constituted. Re Criminal Code, 43 Can. S.C.R. 434, at 456, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459, per Anglin, J.

The "charge" is equivalent to an indictment]—The term "indictment," as used in the Criminal Code, includes (unless the context shows otherwise) a formal charge brought in lieu of an indictment in Saskatchewan or Alberta. Code sec. 2 (16).

or divided because of charges brought in the alternative or because it is double or multifarious and embarrasses the defence. Sec. 892.

Charge by the Attorney-General]—In exercising a discretion as to whether a charge shall or shall not be preferred under Code sec. 873A (in Alberta and Saskatchewan), the Attorney-General is practically performing the functions of a grand jury. Re Criminal Code, 43 S.C.R. 434, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 549; R. v. Weiss (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1160 (Sask.).

A charge may be laid in Alberta by the agent of the Attorney-General without the holding of any preliminary enquiry before a justice. Re Criminal Code, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 459; 43 S.C.R. 434, overruling, on this point, R. v. Duff (No. 2), 2 Sask. L.R. 388, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 454; R. v. Leverton, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 584, 590, 11 Alta. L.R. 355, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 61.

This section continues the practice adopted from the Territories. R. v. Wallace, 8 W.W.R. 671, 673. The agent of the Attorney-General who signs a charge under Code sec. 873A does not examine witnesses like a grand jury, and Code sec. 876, as to indorsing the names of witnesses does not apply in Alberta or Saskatchewan where there is no grand jury. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488 (Alta.). It is not an objection to a trial on formal charge under Code sec. 873A that the Crown was permitted to call witnesses who were not called at the preliminary enquiry and whose names were not endorsed upon the charge. Ibid. Where sec. 873A applies, the case is not in the trial court until the charge is laid, so if the Attorney-General gives instructions that no charge is to be laid, there are no proceedings to stay as there would be on an indictment by a grand jury in provinces having grand juries. R. v. Weiss, (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1160, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 460 (Sask.). After a direction by the Attorney-General not to prefer a charge, a private prosecutor desiring to take up the prosecution would be required to show very strong reasons on applying under Code sec. 873A for the consent of the judge or an order of the court to permit him to prefer a charge. R. v. Weiss, 7 W.W.R. 1160 (Sask.). An abuse of the Attorney-General's discretion, or an attempt to stifle a proper prosecution would be sufficient. Haultain, C.J., in R. v. Weiss, supra.

In preparing a formal charge it is sufficient to use the Code forms or popular language to designate the class of offence with which the accused is charged. Code sec. 852; Code form 64 (manner of stating offences). R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 417, 10 Alta. L.R. 164, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232. For instance, it is not necessary in a charge of theft to use some such phrase as "did fraudulently and without colour of right convert to his use with intent to deprive the owner," etc. It is sufficient to say "did steal" such or such a thing the property of a person named. R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 417 (Alta.). So it is sufficient on a charge of assault with intent to rob (sec. 448), to say that the accused at such a time and place did assault a person [§ 873 A] named with the intent to "rob" him, without setting forth the legal ingredients of the erime of robbery. R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 417, 10 Alta, L.R. 164, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232. But the Code enactment dispensing with technical averments (sec. 852) was not intended to make it sufficient to merely indicate the class of offence in the indictment or charge; although after verdict it may be too late to raise an objection on that score if not raised at an earlier stage of the trial. R. v. Trainor [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415; R. v. Stroulger, 55 L.J.M.C. 137; R. v. Bainbridge, (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203. Absence or insufficiency of the details which might be supplied by particulars will not, however, vitiate the count (sec. 853). If there has been a preliminary examination, the depositions there may indicate the Crown's case and give the accused the reasonable information as to the act or omission to be proved against him to which he is entitled. R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 10 Alta. L.R. 164. So on a charge of seditious libel the accused would have a right to demand to be told what words he was charged with using. Ibid. at 419; R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203.

Every count should contain so much detail of the circumstances of the alleged offence as is sufficient to give the accused reasonable information as to the act or omission to be proved against him. Secs. 853, 860.

Fenue]—The place of trial will still be fixed by the local judicial district in like manner as in other provinces, but subject to a change of venue under sec. 884 on good cause being shown. R. v. Amendment of charge]-See secs. 889-893, and sec. 2, sub-sec. (16).

An amended charge in Saskatchewan or Alberta has the same validity as the original charge, if preferred as required by the Code by the Attorney-General or an agent of the Attorney-General or by any person with the written consent of the judge of the court or of the Attorney-General or by order of the court. Presentment by grand jury]—The statutory definition of "indictment" and "count" includes a presentment by the grand jury as well as an indictment, unless the context otherwise requires; Code sec. 2, sub-sec. (16); and sec. 918 provides for notice being given by the clerk of the court when an indictment against a corporation is founded on a presentment of the grand jury, while otherwise the notice of the indictment would be given by the prosecutor. Code sec. 918.

When the accusation for a criminal offence is found by a grand jury without any bill brought before them, and is afterwards reduced to a formal indictment, it is called a "presentment." R. v. Connor (1885) 1 Terr. L.R. 45, 2 Man. R. 235.

Sec. 873 restricts the "preferring" of bills of indictment, but, as a presentment emanates from the grand jury without being "preferred," it would seem that such restriction does not prevent a grand jury from calling witnesses of its own motion and making a presentment in respect of an offence on the evidence so secured. As pointed out in Verroneau v. The King, (1916) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 213, 54 S.C.R. 7, the duty of a grand juror is to diligently enquire and a true presentment make of all such matters and things as shall be given him in charge or shall otherwise come to his knowledge. Formerly grand jurors might make a presentment of their own knowledge and information, without examining any witnesses. R. v. Connor (1885) 1 Terr. L.R. 4, 2 Man. R. 235; Verroneau v. The King (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211. Possibly the right is still subsisting, but there seems to have been no reported case on the subject since the enactment of the Code. A pamphlet on the subject of grand juries, issued in 1898, gave the contrary opinion of Würtele, J., (Montreal), expressed in the charge to a grand jury, that this right of presentment had been taken away and that a grand jury under the Criminal Code could proceed only upon the indictments laid before it.

It has been held that the grand jury as a secret tribunal is not bound by any rules of evidence; R. v. Bullard, 12 Cox C.C. 353; R. v. Russell, C. & Mar. 247; R. v. Gerrans, 13 Cox C.C. 158; but they may insist upon the same strict proof as upon a trial. R. v. Clements, 20 L.J.M.C. 193, 2 Den. C.C. 251.

Oath administered by foreman.

875. The foreman of the grand jury or any member of the grand jury who may, for the time being, act on behalf of the foreman in the examination of witnesses, may administer an oath to every person who appears before such grand jury to give evidence in support of any bill of indictment; and every

876. The name of every witness examined, or intended to be examined, shall be endorsed on the bill of indictment; and the foreman of the grand jury, or any member of the grand jury so acting for him, shall write his initials against the name of each witness sworn by him and examined touching such bill of indictment.

"Examined or to be examined "]—It is held that the context shows that the examination of witnesses here referred to is that taken before the grand jury and has no reference to the examination at the trial before the petit jury. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 1139, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488, 8 Alta. L.R. 73.

Formal charge under 873A excluded]—The extended meaning given to the word "indictment" by Cr. Code, see. 2 (16), would be applicable to include a "formal charge" under see. 873A, only if the context were not inconsistent with that meaning as sees. 874 to 876 were held to be in R. v. McClain (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1134, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488, 8 Alta. L.R. 73.

Initialing names of witnesses a directory enactment only]—Dealing with the corresponding English law, Tindal, L.C.J., said in O'Connell v. The Queen, 11 Cl. & F. 155: "As a matter of convenience, at the trial, in order to ascertain at a glance whether the witness examined before the Crown jury was one of those who appeared before the grand jury, such direction ought undoubtedly to have been complied with; but it cannot be the law that, after the witness has been duly sworn and examined, and the bill returned a true bill upon his evidence, it can be deprived of its legal operation and character by reason of the foreman of the grand jury having neglected to comply with such direction of the statute."

GRAND JURY

[§ 877]

Names of witnesses to be submitted to grand jury.

877. The name of every witness intended to be examined on any bill of indictment shall be submitted to the grand jury by the officer prosecuting on behalf of the Crown, and no others shall be examined by or before such grand jury unless upon the written order of the presiding judge.

Origin]—Sec. 646, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 176; Grand Jury Act, 1856, Imp., 19-20 Viet., ch. 54.

"Every witness intended to be examined "]-This provision is directory only and an omission to endorse the names of the witnesses or of any of them does not invalidate the indictment. R. v. Holmes, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 402, 9 B.C.R. 294; and see R. v. Holmes, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 112.

"No others shall be examined unless upon the written order of the presiding judge"]—This is a limitation upon the action of the Crown officer prosecuting an indictment; but the grand jury may, nevertheless, require the attendance of other witnesses in support of the charge. If they examine other witnesses, the court will direct that the names of the others be indorsed and initialed so that the accused will know upon whose testimony the bill was found. R. v. Holmes, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 402. The grand jury may conduct their inquiry as they please, having regard to the oath each has taken. R. v. Mathurin, (1903) 12 Que. K.B. 494, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 1. They may not find it necessary to examine all the witnesses whose names are endorsed before finding a true bill, but they are not to find " no bill" without examining all the witnesses who are in attendance in respect of the charge. R. v. Mathurin, supra.

The grand jury may send for any depositions in the case and consider them whether or not the proof necessary, at a trial to make them admissible is given. R. v. Howes (1886) 1 B.C.R. pt. 2, p. 307; R. v. Gerrans, 13 Cox C.C. 158; R. v. Bullard, 12 Cox C.C. 353. But if it appears that certain ex parte depositions were taken by the committing justice without any opportunity by the accused for cross-examination, a motion by the prosecution to send them to the grand jury is properly disallowed. R. v. Carbray, 13 Que. L.R. 100.

Fees for swearing witnesses.

878. Nothing in this Act shall affect any fees by law payable to any officer of any court for swearing witnesses, but such fees shall be payable as if the witnesses had been sworn in open court.

Origin]-Sec. 647, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 177. Grand Jury Act, 1856, Imp., 19-20 Vict., ch. 54.

879. When any one against whom an indictment has been duly preferred and has been found, and who is then at large, does not appear to plead to such indictment, whether he is under recognizances to appear or not, the court before which the accused ought to have been tried may issue a warrant for his apprehension, which may be executed in any part of Canada.

2. The officer of the court at which said indictment is found, or, if the place of trial has been changed, the officer of the court before which the trial is to take place, shall, at any time after the time at which the accused ought to have appeared and pleaded, grant to the prosecutor, upon application made on his behalf and upon payment of twenty cents, a certificate of such indictment having been found which may be in form 65, or to the like effect.

Informalities of bench warrant]—A bench warrant directed to a sheriff and to all constables, etc., requiring them to arrest a man and bring him before the court to find securities for his appearance, was signed by the clerk of the peace, but had no seal. It was tested in open sessions at the court house, and was delivered by the clerk of the peace in court to the sheriff, who handed it to his deputy. It was held that the want of a seal did not make the warrant invalid. Fraser v. Dixon (1848), 5 U.C.Q.B. 231.

It is not a valid objection to a warrant issued for the arrest of the accused upon default under such recognizance, that the warrant directed incarceration in the gaol "until delivered in due course" and omitted any special direction to bring him before the judge presiding at the trial sittings then pending, as the prisoner would in such case have to be taken at once before the presiding judge. R. v. Keizer (No. 1), 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 32.

An order refusing the defendant's application to set aside a bench warrant for alleged default in the recognizance of bail is a proceeding in a criminal matter, and a provincial court has no jurisdiction to give leave to appeal from its decision to the Privy Council. R. v. Keizer (No. 2), 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 39.

Form of warrant to detain a person indicted who is already in custody for another offence]—Code form 68, following sec. 1152.

Place of Trial.

Order for removal of prisoner to place of trial.

883. If after removal by the Governor in Council or the lieutenant governor in council of any province of any person confined in any gaol to any other place for safe keeping or to any other gaol, a true bill for any indictable offence is returned by any grand jury of the county or district from which any such person is removed against any such person, the court into which such true bill is returned may make an order for the removal of such person from the place for safe keeping or gaol in which he is then confined to the gaol of the county or district in which such court is sitting for the purpose of his being tried in such county or district.

Origin]-Sec. 650, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 99.

Change of venue.

884. Whenever it appears to the satisfaction of the court or judge hereinafter mentioned, that it is expedient to the ends of justice that the trial of any person charged with an indictable offence should be held in some district, county or place other than that in which the offence is supposed to have been committed, or would otherwise be triable, the court before which such person is or is liable to be indicted may, at any term or sitting thereof, and any judge who might hold or sit in such court may, at any other time, either before or after the presentation of a bill of indictment, order that the trial shall be proceeded with in some other district, county or place within the same province, named by the court or judge in such order.

PLACE OF TRIAL

2. Such order shall be made upon such conditions as to the payment of any additional expense thereby caused to the accused as the court or judge thinks proper to prescribe.

Origin]-Sec. 651, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 102; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 29, sec. 11.

Riotous demonstrations at a trial at which the jury disagreed and attempts to intimidate the jurors form a good cause for ordering the change. R. v. Ponton, 18 P.R. 429.

Infringement by an official in charge of the jury list of a provincial law dealing with the constitution of the jury whereby the names drawn were to be kept secret by him until a few days before the opening of the court has been considered a good ground for changing the venue. R. v. Graves, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 402 (N.S.).

The power to change the venue is to be used with caution. R. v. Russell, (1878) Ramsay's Cases, 199 (Que.); ex parte Corwin, 24 L.C. Jur. 104; R. v. Roy, 18 Que. K.B. 506, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 368; R. v. O'Gorman, 18 O.L.R. 427, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 230, 13 O.W.R. 1189; R. v. Lynn, 3 Sask. L.R. 354, 15 W.L.R. 336, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 354.

The fact that the Crown did not challenge for cause nor exhaust the jury panel will be considered adversely to an application by the Crown. R. v. Stauffer, 4 Sask. L.R. 284, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 205. Nor is it enough that two abortive trials resulted in disagreement of the jury at the original venue. R. v. Nicol, 7 B.C.R. 278, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 1. It is not a ground for making the change that the court trying the case had jurisdiction only because the accused was arcested in its district and that the alleged offence was committed in another district of the same province. R. v. McKeown, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 492; Code secs. 577, 580, 582, 587, 653.

Second order changing place of trial]—There is power to make a second or subsequent order changing the venue following a first order; and a transfer may even be made back to the original venue on the judge being satisfied that the cause of prejudice has ceased which was the basis of the first change of venue. R. v. Roy, (1909) 18 Que. K.B. 506, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 368. After an abortive trial at the place fixed by the first order, the venue may again be changed if the court deems it in the interests of justice. R. v. Spintlum, (1913) 5 W.W.R. 977, 1199, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 483, 18 B.C.R. 606, 26 W.L.R. 849.

Sub-sec. (2)—Additional expense]—An order is valid which makes no provision for additional expense, if any, where terms in regard to the additional expense were not asked for by the objecting party. Re Sproule, 12 S.C.R. 140; re Sproule, 1 B.C.R. pt. 2, p. 219; R. v. Coleman, 30 Ont. R. 93, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 523.

Decision on the facts basing a change of venue not reviewable by reserved case]—By sec. 884 the judge is given power to change the place of trial whenever it appears to him to be expedient to the ends of justice to do so. When he is seized of facts from which it could properly be inferred that it is expedient to the ends of justice to make the change, his decision becomes one of fact, not one of law, and hence not open to review by way of case stated to the appellate court. Per Maedonald, C.J.A. in R. v. Spintlum, (1913) 5 W.W.R. 977, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 483, 18 B.C.R. 606, 26 W.L.R. 849.

Special provision as to Quebec]-Code sec. 887 applies where there is to be no sitting of the King's Bench, criminal side, in the ordinary trial district.

Transmission of record.

SS5. Forthwith upon such order being made by the court or judge, the indictment, if any has been found against the prisoner, and all inquisitions, informations, depositions, recognizances and other documents relating to the prosecution against him, shall be transmitted by the officer having the custody thereof to the proper officer of the court at the place where the trial is to be had, and all proceedings in the case shall be had, or, if previously commenced, shall be continued in such district, county or place, as if the case had arisen or the offence had been committed therein.

Origin]-Sec. 651, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 102.

Order sufficient authority for removal of prisoner,—Recognizance binding,—Notice to appear.

886. The order of the court, or of the judge, made as aforesaid shall be a sufficient warrant, justification and authority, to all sheriffs, gaolers and peace officers, for the removal, disposal and reception of the prisoner, in conformity with the terms of such order; and the sheriff may appoint and empower any constable to convey the prisoner to the gaol in the district, county or place in which the trial is ordered to be had.

Order in Quebec for changing place of trial.

887. Whenever, in the province of Quebec, it has been decided by competent authority that no term of the Court of King's Bench, holding criminal pleas, is to be held, at the appointed time, in any district in the said province within which a term of the said court should be then held, any person charged with an indictable offence whose trial should by law be held in the said district, may in the manner hereinbefore provided obtain an order that his trial be proceeded with in some other district within the said province, named by the court or judge.

2. All provisions contained in the three last preceding sections shall apply to the case of a person so applying for and obtaining a change of venue as aforesaid.

Newspaper libels]—The proviso to see. 888 was in itself an exception to a proviso in see. 640 of the Code of 1892. If the defendant resides in one province and the newspaper is "printed" in another, the prosecution may be in either of those provinces, but not in a third province in which also there may have been a "publication" of the libel. It would probably be held not to apply at all to the prosecution of a person temporarily in Canada but not residing there, for an alleged libel in a newspaper not "printed" in Canada, although in circulation throughout Canada.

Amendments.

In case of variance between evidence and charge.—Where indictment under wrong Act or contains defective statement.

- 889. If on the trial of any indictment there appears to be a variance between the evidence given and the charge in any count in the indictment, either as found or as amended, or as it would have been if amended in conformity with any particular furnished as provided in sec. 859, the court before which the case is tried may, if of opinion that the accused has not been misled or prejudiced in his defence by such variance, amend the indictment or any count in it or any such particular so as to make it conformable with the proof.

2. If it appears that the indictment has been preferred under some other Act of Parliament instead of under this Act, or under this instead of under some other Act, or that there is in the indictment, or in any count in it, an omission to state or a defective statement of anything requisite to constitute the offence, or an omission to negative any exception which ought to have been negatived, but that the matter omitted is proved by the evidence, the court before which the trial takes place, if of opinion that the accused has not been misled or prejudiced in his defence by such error or omission, shall amend the indictment or count as may be necessary.

3. The trial in either of these cases may then proceed in all respects as if the indictment or count had been originally framed as amended.

[§ 889]

Origin]-Sec. 723, Code of 1892.

What amendments permissible in indictment]---

The trial judge has a discretion to allow an amendment of the indictment before verdict so as to make it conform to the evidence. R. v. Nier (1915) 9 W.W.R. 838, 9 Alta. L.R. 353, 33 W.L.R. 180, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 241; R. v. Carswell, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1027, 1039, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 288, 34 W.L.R. 1042 (Alta.).

While great simplicity is introduced, the essential features of the former practice have not been changed. It is still necessary in every case, as expressly provided in Code form 64 (see sec. 852), that the indictment shall in itself reasonably identify not only the nature of the crime charged, but the act or transaction forming the basis of the crime named. R. v. Bainbridge, 42 O.L.R. 203. This is necessary, first in order that the accused may properly prepare for his trial, and shall be able to plead autrefois acquit if again charged, and that the accused may not, through mistake or otherwise, be put upon his trial on a charge which has not been passed upon by the grand jury, and that the trial judge may know the particulars of the very act passed upon by the grand jury, and not some act which the Crown or Crown officer may say was the very act or transaction. The accused is to have reasonable information identifying the act for which the grand jury has committed him for trial. R. v. Bainbridge, (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203, 220.

A charge may be laid in the words of the Code and a count of an indictment for theft is not bad for indefiniteness because of the use of the word "or other property" in charging the stealing of "money, valuable securities or other property," to a stated amount, from the Government, but particulars may be ordered by the judge. R. v. Kelly, 10 W.W.R. 1345 (Man.). This results entirely from the statutory definition of "theft" in the Criminal Code (sec. 347); and the words "other property" in an indictment for theft drawn in that form are to be read as if followed by the words "capable of being stolen." R. v. Kelly, 10 W.W.R. 1345, at 1351 (Man.), per Prendergast, J. Same case in appeal [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46 and 463. The maxim moscitur a socius may also apply. R. v. Kelly, 10 W.W.R. 1345 (Man.).

An indictment that "A.B. attempted to kill and murder C.D." suffieiently discloses an indictable offence; and the court has power to allow it to be amended so as to read that "A.B., with intent to commit murder, shot at C.D." R. v. Mooney, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 333, 15 Que. K.B. 57.

The true name of the rec on against whom the offence was alleged to have been committed may be substituted by the court in an indictment after the grand jury has found a true bill, where the name originally in the indictment was that by which the same person was commonly known. R. v. Faulkner, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 47, 16 B.C.R. 229.

The offence of conspiracy is not one upon which a person could under under n the or a fence, have by the if of eed in tment in all ramed have been convicted on the charge of cheating, and the change of the latter to the former charge is not such a "proper amendment" as is contemplated by sec. 907. R. v. Weiss and Williams (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1358, 1360.

If the amendment asked would substitute a different transaction from that first alleged, or would render a different plea necessary, it ought not to be made. R. v. Weir (No. 3), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 262 (Que.). But, on an indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed on a trial for burning a barn, an amendment was allowed to charge that such trial was for firing a stack. R. v. Neville (1852), 6 Cox C.C. 69. Where the ownership of stolen property is wrongly stated an amendment may be allowed. R. v. Vincent (1852), 2 Den. 464; R. v. Marks (1866), 10 Cox C.C. 367. And on a charge of theft of money the amount thereof may be amended to conform with the evidence. R. v. Gumble (1872), L.R. 2 C.C.R. 1.

When the false pretence in a charge of obtaining money under false pretences was erroneously laid in the indictment as being that there was in store "a large quantity of beans, to wit, 2,680 bushels of beans," instead of that there were in store "2,680 bushels of beans," as appeared from the depositions taken on the preliminary inquiry, the trial judge may allow an amendment of the indictment to conform with the proof. Although upon the indictment in its original form the charge would be merely upon a false pretence that there was in store "a large quantity of beans," and the number of bushels would not be required to be proved, the variance by reason of the amendment is not such as would mislend or prejudice the accused in his defence. R. v. Patterson (1895) 26 Ont. R. 656, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 339.

Amendment of date of offence]—The date can be amended only when the act or transaction which forms the foundation for the charge is the same, and a mistake was made in the information, evidence or indictment as to the true date of the occurrence. R. v. Lacelle, 11 O.L.R. 74, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 229, 233; Verroneau v. The King (1916) 25 Que. K.B. 275, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 278.

Apart from the effect of Code enactments, the general rule was that the date assigned as that of commission of the offence need not be the one actually proved; Archbold, Criminal Pleading and Ev. (23rd ed.), 297; Roscoe, Criminal Ev. (13th ed.), p. 73; Taylor on Evidence, see. 283 (4), note 5. But at common law there were certain exceptions and "if any material time stated in the pleading is to be proved by matter of record, it should be correctly stated. Any variance between the time so stated and that appearing from the deed or record when produced, will be fatal unless amended. See R. v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. 255. The effect of that exception to the rule, if it could be considered applicable under the operation of the Code, would merely be to establish that it was necessary that the amendment should be made. AMENDMENTS

It might happen, as in R. v. Lacelle, supra, that by reason of a legal characteristic of the particular offence (e.g., seduction) an amendment to change the date would be tantamount to charging a different offence.

When amendment may be made]—It is not too late to permit the amendment after the close of the taking of the evidence. The rule would appear to be that the amendments ought to be made before the defendant's counsel address the jury: Archold, 23rd ed., p. 296; R. v. Rymes, 3 C. & K. 326; R. v. Frost, Dears. 474; though in some cases an amendment may be made at any time before the case goes to the jury; Bowen-Rowlands, Criminal Proc. (2nd ed.), p. 245, Rule 263; or, even at any time before verdict: Russell on Crimes (Can. ed.), p. 1979; Verroneau v. The King (1916) 25 Que. K.B. 275, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 278; same case on appeal on other points; Verroneau v. The King, 54 S.C.R. 7, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211.

Omission to negative any exception]—The omission of the words "not being his wife" in describing an offence under sec. 301 was held to be an exception, the failure to negative which in the indictment, will not invalidate a conviction thereon where no objection was taken before plending. R. v. Wright, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 39 N.S.R. 103.

Objection to be taken for defects apparent on the face of the indictment]-Code sec. 898.

Amendment of indictment]-See secs. 889-893, 898, 915.

Adjournment if accused prejudiced.-How determined.

890. If the court is of the opinion that the accused has been misled or prejudiced in his defence by any such variance, error, omission or defective statement, but that the effect of such misleading or prejudice might be removed by adjourning or postponing the trial, the court may in its discretion make the amendment and adjourn the trial to a future day in the same sittings, or discharge the jury and postpone the trial to the next sittings of the court, on such terms as it thinks just.

2. In determining whether the accused has been misled or prejudiced in his defence the court which has to determine the question shall consider the contents of the depositions, as well as the other circumstances of the case.

3. The propriety of making or refusing to make any such amendment shall be deemed a question for the court, and the decision of the court upon it may be reserved for the Court of Appeal, or may be brought before the Court of Appeal by appeal like any other question of law.

Amendment to be endorsed on the record.

891. In case an order for amendment as provided for in the two last preceding sections is made it shall be endorsed on the record; and all other rolls and proceedings connected therewith shall be amended accordingly by the proper officer and filed with the indictment, among the proper records of the court.

Origin]-Sec. 724, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 240. Form of record where indictment amended]-See sec. 915.

Application to amend or divide counts.

892. The accused may at any stage of the trial apply to the court to amend or divide any count of an indictment which charges in the alternative different matters, acts or omissions, stated in the alternative in the enactment describing the offence or declaring the matters, acts or omissions charged to be an indictable offence, or which is double or multifarious on the ground that it is so framed as to embarrass him in his defence.

2. The court, if it is satisfied that the ends of justice require it, may order any such count to be amended or divided into two or more counts; and on such order being made such count shall be so divided or amended and thereupon a formal commencement may be inserted before each of the counts into which it is divided.

Alternative charges in one count]—Sec. 852 expressly enacts that the charge may be in the words of the enactment describing the offence; and sec. 854 that a count shall not be deemed objectionable on the ground that it charges in the alternative several different matters, acts or omissions, which are stated in the alternative in the enactment describing any indictable offence or declaring the matters, acts or omissions charged, to be an indictable offence, or on the ground that it is double or multifarious.

poration, between the statement in the indictment and the evidence adduced, may be amended at the trial.

If no owner is proved, the indictment may be amended by laying the property in His Majesty.

Origin]-Sec. 621, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 124.

Theft of minerals from mines]—Sec. 378 deals with the theft of ores or minerals from mines and of stone from quarries; and see secs. 852-855, 864-866, as to the sufficiency of certain statements in an indictment.

Gold and silver mines]—Sec. 424 deals with the offence of fraud on the owners of gold and silver mines, and the unlawful sale of mineral products of such mines; and see secs. 864-866, as to stating ownership of the minerals.

Inspection and Copies of Documents.

Right of accused to inspect depositions and have indictment read.

894. Every accused person shall be entitled at the time of his trial to inspect, without fee or reward, all depositions, or copies thereof, taken against him and returned into the court before which such trial is had, and to have the indictment on which he is to be tried read over to him if he so requires.

Origin]-Sec. 653, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 180.

Depositions returned into court]—The depositions here referred to are those taken on the preliminary enquiry at which there was a committal for trial under sec. 690, or the alternative order under sec. 696, requiring the accused to find sureties for his appearance to answer an indictment. The depositions are required to be transmitted to the trial court under sec. 695. Sec. 691 permits the accused at any time before the trial to obtain copies on payment of the fees for same. The indictment may be for the charge on which the accused was committed or for any charge founded on the facts or evidence disclosed in the depositions taken before the justice. Sec. 872. And by leave of the Attorney-General or of the trial court, an indictment may be preferred without any preliminary enquiry, and consequently without any returned depositions. See sec. 873.

Accused entitled to copy of indictment.

Arraignment]—The arraignment of prisoners against whom true bills for indictable offences have been found by the grand jury consists of three parts: first, calling the prisoner to the bar by name; seco.dly, reading the indictment to him; and thirdly, asking him whether he is guilty or not of the offence charged. As soon as the indictment has been read over to the prisoner, the clerk of the arraigns or officer of the court demands of him:

"How say you, are you guilty or not guilty?"

If the prisoner pleads guilty, and it appears to the satisfaction of the judge that he rightly comprehends the effect of his plea, his confession is recorded and sentence is forthwith passed, or he is removed from the bar to be again brought up for judgment. If the prisoner pleads "not guilty," his plea is recorded by the officer of the court, and the prisoner is said to have "put himself upon the country." If the accused wilfully refuses to plead or will not answer directly, the court may order the proper officer to enter a plea of not guilty. Sec. 900.

2. If a copy is not demanded before the opening of the assizes, term, sittings or sessions, the person indicted shall be entitled to such copy if the court is of opinion that the same can be made without delay to the trial, but not otherwise.

 The court may, if it sees fit, postpone the trial on account of such copy of the depositions not having been previously had by the person charged.

COPIES OF DOCUMENTS

indictment for treason.—Details to be furnished the accused.— Witnesses to delivery.

897. When any one is indicted for treason, or for being accessory after the fact to treason, there shall be delivered to him after the indictment has been found, and at least ten days before his arraignment,—

- (a) a copy of the indictment:
- (b) a list of the witnesses to be produced on the trial to prove the indictment; and,
- (c) a copy of the panel of the jurors who are to try him returned by the sheriff.

 The list of the witnesses and the copy of the panel of the jurors must mention the names, occupations, and places of abode of the said witnesses and jurors.

3. The documents aforesaid must all be given to the accused at the same time and in the presence of two witnesses.

4. This section shall not apply to cases of treason by killing His Majesty, or to cases where the overt act alleged is any attempt to injure his person in any manner whatever, or to the offence of being accessory after the fact to any such treason.

Origin]-Sec. 658, Code of 1892.

Details to be furnished prisoner in treason charge]—Compare the corresponding English statutes, 7 Anne, e. 21, sec. 11, 39-40 Geo. III, e. 93; 57 Geo. III, e. 6, s. 1, 6 Geo. IV, e. 50, sec. 21; 5 and 6 Viet., e. 51, sec. 3. The trial may be postponed if the ten days has not elapsed. R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. N.S. 85, 9 C. & P. 163.

The direction of sub-sec. 3 seems to be imperative and there would be a mis-trial if it were not complied with. R. v. Frost, supra (the Chartist's ease).

Treason]-See secs. 74, 75, 76.

Objections, Pleas and Record.

Objections before plea.—Amendments.—No motion in arrest of judgment for amendable defect, etc.

2. No motion in arrest of judgment shall be allowed for any defect in the indictment which might have been taken advantage of by demurrer, or amended under the authority of this Act.

Origin]—Sec. 629, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 143; 32-33 Viet., Can., ch. 29, sec. 32.

Amending indictment on demurrer or motion to quash]—There is a radical difference between sec. 898 of the Code and the English statute 14-15 Viet., Imp., ch. 100. That statute conferred similar powers in case of any "formal" defect, while the Code omits the word "formal" and consequently has a much wider scope. Ead v. The King, (1908) 40 S.C.R. 272, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348; R. v. Mason, 22 U.C.C.P 246, 250.

Demurrer]—By a demurrer the defendant refers it to the court to pronounce whether, admitting the matters of fact alleged against him to be true, they do, in point of law, constitute him guilty of an offence sufficiently charged against him. 1 Starkie, 315. The defendant cannot, as of right, plead and demur concurrently, but if the demurrer is overruled a motion may be made for leave to plead not guilty. At common haw a demurrer could be made either orally or in writing, but the provincial rules of court (see Code sec. 576) must be referred to for ascertaining whether the common law rule has been varied in the particular province or district by a rule making it essential that a demurrer should be in writing. The court has a discretion to allow a plea to be withdrawn, so that a demurror may be filed. R. v. Mitchel, 3 Cox C.C. 21; R. v. Odgers, 2 M. & Rob. 480.

Demurrer and joinder thereto]—The demurrers filed separately by the defendants in R. v. Weir (No. 1) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 102, 8 Que. Q.B. 521, were in the following form:—

"And the said W.W. (defendant), in his own proper person cometh into court here and having heard the said indictment read, saith, that the said indictment and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, do not disclose an indictable offence, and are not sufficient in law, and that he, the said W. W. is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same; and this he is ready to verify; wherefore, for want of a sufficient indictment in his behalf, the said W. W. prays judgment, and that by the court he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified."

The following joinder to the demurrer was filed by the Crown Prosecutor:---

"For answer to the demurrer to indictment in this case made on behalf of W. W. (defendant), without admitting the right of the accused to plead separately the Crown saith: that the said demurrer is unfounded and that the said indictment and the matters therein contained, disclose an indictable offence and are sufficient in law, and that the said W. W. is bound by the law of the land to answer the same: Wherefore, the said demurrer should be dismissed."

Defects apparent on the face of the indictment]—An indictment setting forth an offence which is not indictable will be quashed on motion to that effect. R. v. Beauvais, 28 Que. S.C. 498, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 494; R. v. Weir (No. 5), 9 Que. Q.B. 253, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 499; R. v. Bainbridge, 42 O.L.R. 203; R. v. Trainor, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 415, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 10 Alta. L.R. 164, 35 W.L.R. 415.

In charging an offence declared by statute, the omission of the words "against the form of the statute in such case made and provided" is not a defect and no amendment is necessary. R. v. Doyle, (1894) 27 N.S.R. 294.

899. No plea in abatement shall be allowed.

2. Any objection to the constitution of the grand jury may be taken by motion to the court, and the indictment shall be quashed if the court is of opinion both that such objection is well founded and that the accused has suffered or may suffer prejudice thereby, but not otherwise.

Forms of oath to grand jurors]-See note to sec. 873.

Motion to quash on ground that grand jury not properly constituted]—The fact of one member of a grand jury being disqualified from interest or bias with respect to one of the bills brought before that body for consideration, does not affect the constitution of the grand jury generally. Verroneau v. The King (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, affirming Verroneau v. The King, 25 Que. K.B. 275, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 278.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Such a disqualified person cannot take any part in the proceedings or findings of the jury with respect to the bill in which he is interested, but such disqualification is a personal and limited one and does not affect the constitution of the jury as a whole or the right of the juror so partially disqualified from taking part in all the proceedings or findings of the jury on other bills in which he has no interest or bias. Anything which destroys the competency of the grand jury as a whole or the competency of any of its members affects the constitution of that body and affords a ground of objection which may be raised by a motion to the court under sec. 899. A grand juror may be well qualified as to all the cases on the doeket save one and wholly unfit to pass upon that one. As to that case the jury would not be properly constituted while he sat upon it. Verroneau v. The King, (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 211. R. v. Gorbet, 1 P.E.I. Rep. 162; R. v. Upton St. Leonards (inhabitants of) 10 Q.B. 827; R. v. Hayes, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, disapproved.

Where one grand juror was a witness in the particular case, but took no other part in the proceedings, his mere physical presence in the grand jury room will not affect the result of the grand jurors' deliberations or constitute an interference with the privacy of their proceedings. Verroneau v. The King, (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7. There is no impropriety in some one or more proper persons being present with the grand jury during their inquiries on bills of indictment: Reg. v. Hughes, 1 C. & K. 519.

If an unauthorized person has been present in the grand jury room on the consideration of a bill, and returns into court with the grand jury (having been summoned to serve, but not having been sworn), the court may send back the grand jurors already sworn so that they may reconsider the bill. R. v. Kelly, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Que,). If the mode of summoning the grand jurors has been so irregular that persons not qualified to be grand jurors are returned for the consideration of an indictment, the indictment must be quashed. R. v. Kirwan, 31 St. Tr. 543; 11 Hen. 4, eb. 9.

The whole jury should be impanelled before the grand juror's oath is administered to any of them. R. v. Belanger, 12 Que. K.B. 69, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 295.

The number of grand jurors to be summoned may be fixed by provincial law as a part of the constitution of the court; but the number to find a bill is to be regulated by federal law as a matter of criminal procedure. R. v. Cox, 31 N.S.R. 311, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 207. Where there has been no limitation by statute of the number of grand jurors, twenty-three are to be sworn, but the summoning of more does not invalidate the panel. R. v. McGuire, 34 N.B.R. 430, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 12. Where the number on the panel is declared by provincial law to be thirteen, or a lesser number, but not less than seven, Code sec. 921 makes it possible for seven to find a true bill. It is probably sufficient that of the entire panel there are in attendance at least seven grand jurors, where there is legislation so reducing the panel. R. v. Girard, (1898) 7 Que. Q.B. 575, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 216; contra, see R. v. Hayes (1902) 9 B.C.R. 574, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 453.

"That the accused has suffered or may suffer prejudice thereby but not otherwise"]—Before the Code the question whether a motion to quash an indictment should be granted or not was largely in the discretion of the court. R. v. Belyea (1854) 2 N.S.R. 220. Under the Code, and when it is a question whether the grand jury was properly constituted or not, that discretion is taken away in the sense that if two conditions arise the indictment shall be quashed, but if either condition fails it is not to be quashed even if the objection is well founded. R. v. Morrow (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, at 318, 21 R. de Juris. 380 (Que.).

Specifying grounds of objection]—The objecting party must specifically set forth his grounds of objection, and will not be given the benefit of a ground not specified. R. v. Morrow, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, 21 R. de Juris, 380 (Que.).

Challenging the array]-See sec. 925.

Grand juries in British Columbia]—In judicial districts to which the Jurors Act, R.S.B.C. 1911, ch. 121, applies, it is necessary to summon only 15 grand jurors. As to the grand jury system of British Columbia, see R. v. Bonner (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1255, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 442, 25 W.L.R. 112.

Ontario]—If thirteen grand jurors do not appear, the court may require the sheriff to name and appoint from persons present or who can be found, a sufficient number to make up the deficiency. The Jurors' Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 64, sec. 67.

Procedure in jury courts in Ontario]-See note to sec. 873.

900. When the accused is called upon to plead he may plead either guilty or not guilty, or such special plea as is in this Part subsequently provided for.

2. If the accused wilfully refuses to plead, or will not answer directly, the court may order the proper officer to enter a plea of not guilty.

Origin]-Sec. 657, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 145.

Wilful refusal to plead or answer directly]—Compare the English statute, 7 and 8 Geo. IV, ch. 28, sec. 2; R. v. Bitton, 6 C. & P. 92; and see R. v. McAuliffe, (1906) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 495 (Ont.).

Trial as to sanity]-See sec. 967-970.

Leave to withdraw plea of guilty]-After pleading guilty to all the counts of an indictment, the accused will not without the consent of the Crown be given leave to withdraw that plea as to all but one so that he may plead autrefois convict as to the others. R. v. Lombard, (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 232, 5 W.W.R. 1089, 26 W.L.R. 647; and see R. v. Miles, 24 Q.B.D. 423.

A plea of guilty operates as an admission of all the essential facts which would be before the jury as necessary to constitute the offence charged in the indictment. R. v. Inglis (1917) 23 Argus L.R. (Austr.) 378. If the judge at the trial on looking at the depositions for the purpose of sentencing, comes to the conclusion that in point of law there is no case disclosed, he should advise the accused to withdraw his plea; but it is for the accused himself to decide whether or not he will do so. R. v. Inglis, supra.

The judge may properly advise and permit a withdrawal of the plea of guilty if the facts, though not inconsistent with the prisoner's guilt, show a very doubtful probability of their being proved so as to induce the jury to find him guilty. R. v. Inglis, supra.

Plea of guilty operates as conviction]—A plea of guilty operates in law as a conviction although no penalty is imposed. R. v. Blaby, [1894] 2 Q.B. 170, 18 Cox C.C. 5, 63 L.J.M.C. 133.

No one should be taken to have admitted his guilt except in the most unmistakable terms. A conviction should not be recorded on a doubtful plea. If there is any ambiguity, a plea of "not guilty" should be entered and evidence given in the ordinary way. R. v. Golathan (1915) 84 L.J.K.B. 758, 11 Cr. App. R. 79, 24 Cox C.C. 704, per Lord Reading; R. v. Ingleson, [1915] 1 K.B. 512, 84 L.J.K.B. 280, 11 Cr. App. R. 21. The court may of its own motion strike out a plea of guilty on its appearing that the indictment discloses no criminal offence, and order the indictment quashed. R. v. Labourdette, 13 B.C.R. 143, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 379.

Finding deaf mute insane if incompetent to understand the proceedings when interpreted]—See R. v. Dyson, 7 C. & P. 305; R. v. Berry, (1876) 45 L.J.M.C. 123, 1 Q.B.D. 447.

Right to counsel]-See sec. 942, 944.

Special pleas]-See secs. 905-913.

Time to plead to indictment.—Allowing further time to plead or demur.—Bail.—Witnesses to attend.

901. No person prosecuted shall be entitled as of right to traverse or postpone the trial of any indictment preferred against him in any court, or to imparl, or to have time allowed him to plead or demur to any such indictment.

2. If the court before which any person is so indicted, upon the application of such person or otherwise, is of opinion that he ought to be allowed a further time to plead or demur or to prepare for his defence, or otherwise, such court may grant such further time and may adjourn the trial of such person to a future time in the sittings of the court, or to the next or any subsequent session or sittings of the court, and upon such terms, as to bail or otherwise, as to the court seem meet, and may, in the case of adjournment to another session or sittings, respite the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses accordingly.

3. In such case the prosecutor and witnesses shall be bound to attend to prosecute and give evidence at such subsequent session or sittings without entering into any fresh recognizances for that purpose.

Time to plead]-Sec. 901 changes the practice whereby at common law a person indicted for misdemeanour was entitled to traverse or postpone the trial till the assizes or sessions next after the finding of the indictment. 4 Bl. Com. 351, 4 Chit. Cr. L. 278, 2 Pollock & Maitland Hist. Eng. Law 649.

Indictments for felonies were tried at the same assizes or sessions at which they are preferred to and found by the grand jury, but might be postponed to the next assizes or sessions at the instance of the prosecutor or the defendant, on showing to the court a sufficient cause. Archbold Crim. Pleading, 110.

Time of application to postpone]-An adjournment may be ordered prior to and contingent upon a true bill being found. R. v. Doran (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 67; R. v. Taylor, (1882) 15 Cox C.C. 8. But in general, a trial will not be postponed to the next assizes before a bill is found. R. v. Heesom, 14 Cox C.C. 40.

The court has power to adjourn the case, although the trial has commenced. R. v. Gordon, 6 B.C.R. 160, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 141.

Postponing trial because of prejudice of jury by newspaper item]-If the court is satisfied upon the affidavits that the minds of the jurymen have been affected to the prejudice of the accused by the publication of press notices stating that the accused had confessed the crime, a postponement is proper. The King v. Willis, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 761, 23 Man. R. 77, 23 W.L.R. 702, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 64. R. v. Davies, [1906] 1 K.B. 32.

Postponing trial because of absence of witnesses]-To grant a postponement of trial on the ground of absence of witnesses, three conditions are necessary: 1st, the court must be satisfied that the absent witnesses are material witnesses in the case; 2nd, it must be shown that the party applying has been guilty of no laches or neglect in omitting to endeavour to procure the attendance of these witnesses; and 3rd, the court must be satisfied that there is a reasonable expectation that the

It is no ground of "surprise" that the prisoner had no knowledge of the evidence to be produced against him, for no one is obliged, by pleading, or otherwise, to disclose the evidence by which his case is to be supported. It is sufficient that the party is fully apprised of the case or charge which it is proposed to prove against him, and he must then, being so informed, prepare himself to repel it. R. v. Slavin (1866), 17 U.C.C.P. 205.

Where it appears by affidavit that a necessary witness for the prisoner is ill (R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591), or that a witness for the prosecution is ill (R. v. Bowen, 9 C. & P. 509), or unavoidably absent or is kept out of the way by the contrivance or at the instigation of the prisoner, the court will postpone the trial, unless it appear that the requirements of justice can be satisfied by reading the witness's depositions before a magistrate. Roscoe Cr. Evidence, 11th ed., 185.

If the application is made on the ground of the absence of a material witness, the judge will require an affidavit stating the points which the witness is expected to prove in order to form a judgment whether the witness is a material one or not. R. v. Savage, 1 C. & K. 75.

Mode of proof on motion to postpone]—Proof should be made by affidavit; R. v. Mulvihill, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 154, 26 W.L.R. 955; R. v. Dougall (1874) 18 L.C. Jur. 85; but eiva voce testimony may be taken. R. v. Savage, 1 Car. & K. 257; R. v. Bridgman, C. & Mar. 271.

On an application by the Crown because of the absence of Crown witnesses, the court may accept the statement of the Crown counsel that reasonable efforts were made to procure their attendance without requiring proof upon oath; the accused is not entitled to particulars of the efforts made to procure their attendance. McCraw v. The King, (1907) 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 337.

Insufficiency of grounds for postponement]—It has been decided that a postponement will not be granted for the purpose of making inquiries respecting fresh witnesses not called before the committing justices: R. v. Mulvihill (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354; R. v. Johnson (1847) 2 Car. & K. 354; nor because the accused had no knowledge of the evidence to be produced against him: R. v. Slavin (1866) 17 C.C. at p. 205; but see as to exceptional circumstances. R. v. Flannagan (1884) 15 Cox C.C. 403, at p. 407.

It is not usual to postpone a trial for the purpose of obtaining character witnesses. R. v. Jones, 8 East 34.

While it is not incumbent on the prosecution to abstain from giving at the trial any additional evidence which may be discovered subsequently to the taking of the depositions, it is only fair that the prisoner's counsel should be apprised of the character of such evidence. R. v. Ward, 2 Car. & K. 759.

In R. v. Johnson (1847) 2 C. & K. 354, Alderson, B. refused to postpone the trial of a prisoner charged with murder, where the postponement was sought to give an opportunity of investigating the evidence and characters of certain witnesses for the prosecution who had not been examined before the committing magistrate, but who were to be called to prove previous attempts by the prisoner on the life of the deceased.

Revoking postponement order]-If the witness, because of whose absence a postponement has been ordered, soon afterwards appears in court, the judge has jurisdiction to order the trial to go on. R. v. Redd, 21 Man. R. 785, 20 Man. R. 645.

Refusal to postpone not generally reviewable as question of law]-There may arise cases in which it would be clear that there had not been any exercise of judicial discretion in granting or refusing postponement of trial, and in such cases there might be error of law which would be properly reviewable; but where, in what was clearly an exercise of his discretion, the trial judge has refused a postponement because he was "of the opinion" that further time should not be allowed (s. 901, s.s. 2), the propriety of that exercise of discretion is not reviewable by an appellate court and is not properly the subject of a reserved case under s. 1014. Mulvihill v. The King (1914) 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 194. Reg. v. Charlesworth (1861) 1 B. & S. 460, 31 L.J.M.C. 25; Winsor v. Reg., L.R. 1, Q.B. 390, 35 L.J.M.C. 65; Rex v. Special provisions as to Ontario]-See Code secs. 902-904.

Taking bail in open court]-The following is the Ontario practice in taking a recognizance of bail in open court :---

The persons entering into the recognizance must be severally asked if they are content to acknowledge to owe to Our Sovereign Lord the King, His Heirs and Successors, the sums in which they are severally to be bound, on the condition named in the recognizance, which must be fully stated. For this purpose they are each addressed in the second person, thus:--

"A.B. (the accused): Are you content to acknowledge to owe to Our Sovereign Lord the King, His Heirs and Successors, the sum dollars, of good and lawful money of Canada, to be made of and levied of your goods and chattels, lands and tenements respectively, to the use of Our Sovereign Lord the King, His Heirs and Successors, if you fail to personally appear at the sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario for the trial of criminal actions to be held in and for the County of at the city (or town) of on day of , then and there to take your trial on the (or plead to) a certain indictment found against you by the Grand 9" Jury of the said County on a charge of

And to C.D. (a surety): "C.D., are you content, etc., etc. ?"

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

[§ 901]

And to E.F. (the other surety): "E.F., are you content, etc., etc. "

The recognizance is then signed by the Clerk of Assize (it is not signed by the persons bound), and the following entry made by him in the Minute Book of the Assize:---

"A.B. this day in open court entered into his recognizance in the sum of dollars, with two sureties, C.D. and E.F., each in the sum of dollars, for the appearance of the said A.B. at the next sittings of this court to plead to (or to stand his trial) on an indictment for (naming the offence)."

The following form of bond may be used :---

902. If any person is prosecuted in any division of the High Court of Justice for Ontario for any indictable offence, by information there filed, or by indictment there found or removed into such court, and appears therein in term time in person, or, in case of a corporation, by attorney, to answer to such information or indictment, such defendant, upon being charged therewith, shall not impart to a following term, but shall plead or demur thereto within four days from the time of his appearance; and in default of his pleading or demurring within four days as aforesaid judgment may be entered against such defendant for want of a plea.

Origin]—Sec. 757, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 273. Formal proceedings in jury court in Ontario]—See note to sec. 873. Ordering further time to plead or demur]—See sec. 903.

When defendant appears by attorney.-Allowing further time.

903. If such defendant appears to such information or indictment by attorney, he shall not imparl to a following term, but a rule, requiring him to plead, may forthwith be given and served, and a plea to such information or indictment may be enforced, or judgment in default may be entered in the same manner as might have been done formerly in cases in which the defendant had appeared to such information or indictment by attorney in a previous term; but the court, or any judge thereof, upon sufficient cause shown for that purpose, may allow further time for such defendant to plead or demur to such information or indictment.

Origin]-Sec. 758, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 274.

Ontario.—Defendant may bring on trial.—Notice to Attorney General.

904. If any prosecution for an indictable offence, instituted by the Attorney General for Ontario in the said court, is not brought to trial within twelve months next after the plea of not guilty has been pleaded thereto, the court in which such prosecution is depending, upon application made on behalf of any defendant in such prosecution, of which application twenty days'

, before our said Afterwards, on the day of Lord the King at the (court) come as well the said Attorney-General , of our said for the province of Lord the King, in the (court), who for our said Lord the King in this behalf prosecutes in his proper person, as the said A.B., by his solicitor. And the said Attorney-General for our said Lord the King says that he will not further prosecute the said A.B. upon the indictment aforesaid. Whereupon all and singular the premises being seen and fully understood by the court now here, it is considered and adjudged, by the said court here, that all proceedings upon the said indictment against the said A.B. be altogether stayed, and that the said A.B. be discharged of and from the said indictment.

Stay of proceedings by Attorney-General]-See Code sec. 962.

Special pleas .- Autrefois acquit .- Autrefois convict -- Pardon.

905. The following special pleas and no others may be pleaded according to the provisions hereinafter contained, that is to say, a plea of autrefois acquit, a plea of autrefois convict, a plea of pardon, and such pleas in cases of defamatory libel as are hereinafter mentioned.

2. All other grounds of defence may be relied on under the plea of not guilty.

Plea of autrefois acquit]—This plea may be made ore tenus unless required by court rules to be in writing (see sec. 576); but is ordinarily made in writing and signed by counsel for the accused. The following form of plea is given by Archbold, 22nd ed., p. 157:—

"And the said J.S. in his own proper person cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment read, saith that our Lord the King ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against the said J.S., because he saith, that heretofore, to wit, at the general sessions of the peace holded at , in and for the county of , he the said J.S. was lawfully acquitted of the said offence charged in the said indictment. And this he, the said J.S., is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the premises in the present indictment specified."

Plea of autrefois convict]—This plea will be similar to that of autrefois acquit, but will state that the accused was "lawfully convicted" of the offence where the other form uses the phrase "lawfully acquitted."

Plea of pardon]—A plea of pardon is a plea that the Sovereign has pardoned the accused for the offence and unless it is a statutory pardon it must be specially pleaded at the earliest opportunity on arraignment or it will be considered as waived. R. v. Lord Norris, 7 Rolle R. 297. The accused will be allowed to plead over on the plea of pardon being disallowed. R. v. Strahan, 7 Cox C.C. 85.

Special pleas together.—Pleading not guilty afterwards.—Statement of previous acquittal or conviction.

906. The pleas of autrefois acquit, autrefois convict, and pardon may be pleaded together, and if pleaded shall be disposed of before the accused is called on to plead further.

2. If every such plea is disposed of against the accused he shall be allowed to plead not guilty.

3. In any plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict it shall be sufficient for the accused to state that he has been lawfully acquitted or convicted, as the case may be, of the offence charged in the count or counts to which such plea is pleaded, indicating the time and place of such acquittal or conviction.

Origin]-Sec. 631, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 146.

Pleading over]—A plea of not guilty and autrefois acquit cannot be made concurrently; R. v. Banks, 27 Times L.R. 575; but sec. 906 gives the absolute right to plead over after the plea of autrefois has been disallowed.

Issue on pleas of autrefois acquit and autrefois convict.—What determines.

907. On the trial of an issue on a plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict to any count or counts, if it appear that the matter on which the accused was given in charge on the former trial is the same in whole or in part as that on which it is proposed to give him in charge, and that he might on the former trial, if all proper amendments had been made which might then have been made, have been convicted of all the offences of

2. If it appear that the accused might on the former trial have been convicted of any offence of which he might be convicted on the count or counts to which such plea is pleaded, but that he may be convicted on any such count or counts of some offence or offences of which he could not have been convicted on the former trial, the court shall direct that he shall not be convicted on any such count or counts of any offence of which he might have been convicted on the former trial, but that he shall plead over as to the other offence or offences charged.

Common law defence of autrefois convict]—Autrefois convict is a common law defence applicable whether the charges were before a jury or before a magistrate or other tribunal trying the cases without a jury. Wemyss v. Hopkins, L.R. 10 Q.B. 378, 44 L.J.M.C. 101.

Sec. 907 a supplementary provision; its limitations]-Stuart, J., in R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 7 Alta. L.R. 169, 26 W.L.R. 659, said :--" The first thing that strikes one on looking at these provisions is that there is good reason for thinking that the "former trial" referred to is a trial upon indictment in a Superior Court and not a summary trial before a justice or justices of the peace. A comparison is instituted between what can be done in the present court and what could have been done in the former one. It seems to me that the two clauses proceed upon the supposition of identity of general jurisdiction and that they were not expressly intended to cover cases where the proceedings in the former court were necessarily limited in their scope by a narrow limitation upon the jurisdiction of that court, resting, not upon the absence of some ingredient of aggravation in the crime, but upon an arbitrary rule as to value only. This view is borne out by the use of the expressions "given in charge" and "proposed to give him in charge." It seems to me that the legislature was here thinking of giving in charge to a jury. That is the usual connection in which the expression 'given in charge' is used." . . . "The reference to 'all proper amendments which might have been made ' tends, although perhaps only slightly, to confirm the view that the legislature had in mind a previous trial upon indictment where the question of what proper amendments may or may not be made is a much more serious one and the subject of much more legislation and judicial decision than the question of amending an information before a justice of the peace. For this reason it seems to me that sec. 907 should be interpreted upon the assumption that the legislature had in mind only a former court of at least equal jurisdiction, and that impossibility of conviction on the former charge for the present offences, due merely to lack of jurisdiction, should not stand in the way of the present plea; nor should see. 907 be treated as absolutely exhausting the law upon the question, so that in no case can a person plead autrefois acquit or convict unless he brings himself within its terms." R. v. Pope (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 334, 5 W.W.R. 1070, 7 Alta. L.R. 169.

But it seems probable that a defendant, whose former trial was before a magistrate under Part XVI would be held entitled to the benefit of it in like manner as if he had a jury trial. R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070, 1075, (Stuart, J.).

Defence of autrefois in county judge's criminal court]—Under the speedy trials clauses (Part XVIII) there is no express provision for the tender or reception of the formal plea of autrefois convict, or for any plea other than those of guilty or not guilty. That Part of the Code created a special statutory jurisdiction and a special procedure; but there seems to be no doubt that an accused person upon pleading not guilty (assuming that no provision is made for a previous formal plea of autrefois convict) must have the right to raise as a defence the fact of a previous conviction for the same offence; otherwise the benefit of a speedy trial might be denied him in the very case where he should be particularly entitled to it. R. v. Taylor (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 7 Alta. L.R. 72, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234.

The special plea appears to have been received without objection on the part of the prosecution on "speedy trials" in R. v. Clark, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 125, and in R. v. Taylor, supra.

Common law defence of rcs judicata]—Although the plea of the accused under sec. 906 of the Criminal Code cannot be upheld, the circumstances may give him a good defence at common law which has been reserved to him by sec. 16 of the Code which reads as follows: "All rules and principles of the common law which render any circumstances a justification or excuse for any act, or a defence to any charge, shall remain in force and be applicable to any defence to a charge under this Act except in so far as they are hereby altered or are inconsistent herewith."

A maxim of the common law is Nemo debet bis vexari pro unâ et câdêm causâ. This has been held to govern in a case where a defendant was convicted of two offences under different statutes, which were different in form, but held to be the same in substance: Wenyss v. Hopkins (1875), L.R. 10 Q.B. 378. In that case Lord Blackburn said at p. 381: "The defence does not arise on a plea of autrefois convict, but on the well established rule at common law, that where a person has been convicted and punished for an offence by a court of competent jurisdiction, transit in rem judicatam, that is, the conviction shall be a bar to all further proceedings for the same offence, and he shall not be punished again for the same matter." The principle of res judicata applies equally to an acquittal as to a conviction. The substance of the issue rather than the form must be looked to. In R. v. Quinn, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 412 at 417, 11 O.L.R. 242, a second charge was laid for perjury in taking an election oath when personating a voter after an acquittal for the personation. It was held that the acquittal in the first case established that it was not the accused who had committed the personation, and this had become res judicata as between the Crown and the accused. The main issue in both trials was the same-a question of identity. At the first trial this issue was determined adversely to the Crown, and while that decision stood it was not open to the Crown to have it tried a second time. To arrive at the verdict which they did it was necessary for the second jury to find that it was the accused who had personated, and thus in effect to override and overrule the contrary verdict of the first jury. This defence is not one of autrefois acquit under sec. 906 of the Code, but under sub-sec. 2 may be relied on under the plea of "not guilty." Maclaren, J.A., said: "It is really a defence at common law as pointed out by Blackburn, J., in Wemyss v. Hopkins, L.R. 10 Q.B. 378, and by Hawkins, J., in Regina v. King, [1897] 1 Q.B. 214. There being nothing inconsistent with it in the Code, it is a defence that may still be claimed and exercised; indeed it is stated in the above cases that it is a well established rule and one of the very first principles of the criminal law."

It was held on a case reserved that the trial judge should, because of the first trial and acquittal, have directed the jury to find a verdict of "not guilty," and then have discharged the accused, although his ruling that the plea of autrefois acquit was not supported was correct in law. R. v. Quinn, supra. See also R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 7 Alta. L.R. 169, 26 W.L.R. 659; Wentworth v. Mathieu [1900] A.C. 212, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 429.

When a prisoner is discharged merely by reason of a defect in the commitment or in consequence of the want or excess of jurisdiction in the committing court, or in the committing magistrate, he can be again arrested and tried for the same cause before a competent magistrate. Ex parte Seitz (1899) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 127, 131, 8 Que. Q.B. 392; Attorney-General for Hong Kong v. Kwoka Sing, L.R. 5 P.C. 179, 42 L.J.P.C. 64, 12 Cox C.C. 565; R. v. Young Kee (No. 2), [1917] 2 W.W.R. 654, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 236.

An acquittal upon a charge of assisting a prisoner to escape from the charge of a constable is a bar to a subsequent charge of assaulting a police officer who was assisting the constable in the pursuit of such escaping prisoner if both charges depended upon the same facts. R. v. Stanhope (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 76 (N.S.).

It would seem that any question of res judicata under Cr. Code sec.

15 in favour of the accused, because of a prior conviction and not covered by a plea of autrefois convict will be barred by a plea of guilty entered for the accused after the dismissal of the plea of autrefois convict. R. v. Pope, (1914) 5 W.W.B. 1070, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 7 Alta. L.R. 169, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 26 W.L.R. 659.

The onus of proof]—The burden of establishing a plea of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit or a defence of res judicata is upon the accused; it is therefore necessary for him to make out all the facts requisite to support the plea. R. v. Carver [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1170, 1172, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 122 (Alta.); R. v. Taylor (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 7 Alta. L.R. 72, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652; R. v. Pope (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1070, 7 Alta. L.R. 169, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 26 W.L.R 659; ex parte Flanagan, 34 N.B.R. 577, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 327, 26 W.L.R 659; ex parte Flanagan, 34 N.B.R. 577, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 82; R. v. Mitchell, 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; R. v. Hill, (1903) 36 N.S.R. 240. Assumptions of facts requisite to support a plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict are not to be made in favour of the plea. R. v. Carver, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1170, 29 C.C.C. 122 (Alta.); R. v. Taylor, 5 W.W.R. 1105, 7 Alta. L.R. 72, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652.

Defence of prior conviction or acquittal]—Autrefois convict is a special plea in bar which goes to the merits of the indictment, and gives a reason why the prisoner ought not to answer at all, nor put himself on his trial for the alleged erime. No man shall be placed in peril of legal penalties more than once on the same accusation—nemo debet bis puniri pro uno delicto—and if a man is once fairly tried before a court of competent jurisdiction he may answer all subsequent proceedings for the same offence, or involving the same circumstances as the former prosecutions; and a difference in colour or degree, does not alter the rule of law, for it is not one of mere designation, but of substantial fact. R. v. Johnson, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 215.

To support the plea autrefois acquit, the defendant must have been in actual peril. A quashed indictment, a nolle prosequi, or a mistrial will not entitle a defendant to so plead, nor will it sustain such a plea. Reg. v. Mulholland, 4 P. & B. 512; Reg. v. Sirois, 27 N.B.R. 610.

"When we talk of a man being twice tried, we mean a trial which proceeds to its legitimate and lawful conclusion by verdict; and when we speak of a man twice put in jeopardy, we mean put in jeopardy by the verdict of a jury; and he is not tried or put in jeopardy until a verdict is given." Cockburn, C.J., in Reg. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 507.

The statement of law for which the case of R. v. Clark, 1 Brod. & B. 473, is often cited in support, has been much qualified by recent decisions. It was said on the authority of that case that the true test on a plea of autrefois was whether the evidence necessary to support the second indictment would have been sufficient to procure a legal conviction on the first. Archbold Cr. Pleading, 24th ed., 177; R. v. Magrath, 26 U.C.Q.B. 385; R. v. Johnson, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 215, 218 (N.B.); R. v. Mitchell, 24 O.L.R. 324. That such is not a correct statement of the law is pointed out in a recent English case holding that R. v. Clark, (1820) 1 Brod. & B. 473, is not an authority for the test as to the sufficiency of a plea of autrefois convict laid down in Archbold's Criminal Pleading, 24th ed., at p. 177. Rex v. Tonks, [1916] 1 K.B. 443. 85 L.J.K.B. 396, 11 Cr. App. R. 284. hast

It is not open to the Crown to proceed on a second charge in which a conviction could only be had by the second jury overruling the contrary verdict of the first jury. R. v. Quinn, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 412, 11 O.L.R. 242; R. v. Hill, (1903) 36 N.S.R. 240; R. v. Marsham, ex parte Pethick Lawrence [1912] 2 K.B. 362, 82 L.J.K.B. 665; R. v. Bulmer, 5 L.N. 92 (Que.).

In the case of R. v. King, [1897] 1 Q.B. 214, the head note states that a defendant who has been convicted upon an indictment charging him with obtaining credit for goods by false pretences cannot afterwards be convicted upon a further indictment charging him with larceny of the same goods. That head-note is criticized in R. v. Barron, (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 81, where it is pointed out that the decision in R. v. King was given either because in the exercise of his discretion the judge should not have permitted the trial for larceny, or because the verdict in the first trial was based upon a view of facts which was inconsistent with that necessary to support the further indictment. At the first trial the conviction implied that the property in the goods passed to the defendant with the consent of the owner who was induced thereto by false pretences, whereas conviction at the trial for larcenv implied that the defendant feloniously took the goods without the consent of the owner. The substantial identity of the offence was recognized in R. v. King as an essential condition to the validity of the plea of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit, and made no change in the well settled principle of law applicable to those pleas. The test is not whether the facts relied upon are the same in the two trials. An acquittal of the whole of an offence does not involve an acquittal of every part of it. R. v. De Salvi, 10 Cox C.C. 481 (n), 46 Cent. Cr. Court Papers 884. An acquittal on a graver charge does not necessarily involve an acquittal of the minor offence. R. v. Barron, [1914] 2 K.B. 570, 10 Cr. App. R. 81, at 89. But if the minor offence be one which is included in the greater, and there might, under sec. 951, have been a verdict for the lesser offence if proved, an acquittal of the greater offence will be in effect an acquittal of the lesser included offence.

A charge of theft does not by implication include that of having received the thing stolen, and a prisoner acquitted on indictment for theft cannot, on that account, plead autrefois acquit to an indictment for receiving. R. v. Groulx, 18 Que. K.B. 118, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 20.

The addition of statements merely aggravating the offence first charged and making the accused liable, if the aggravating circumstances had been first included and proved, to a more onerous penalty, but still for the same crime, will not deprive the accused of the benefit of the defence. Code sec. 909.

"If all proper amendments had been made"]—If a person is convicted on an indictment for forging a promissory note, and the fact in evidence was an incomplete note form which, nevertheless, under Code sec. 466 might be the subject of forgery, the accused might plead autrefois convict if again indicted for forging an "incomplete promissory note," as the matter on which the accused was given in charge on the former trial would have been the same had "all proper amendments been made which might then have been made." Ead v. The King, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348, 40 Can. S.C.R. 272.

If an indictment were so radically defective that it was not amendable (R. v. Bainbridge, 42 O.L.R. 203), the weight of authority seems to establish that in contemplation of law the accused was never in jeopardy; R. v. Drury, 18 L.J.M.C. 189, 3 C. & K. 193; Vaux's case, 4 Coke 44; because of the presumption that the court will set aside the proceedings before judgment, Hale, P.C. 248, 394; 1 Starkie, Cr. Pl., 2nd ed., 320; R. v. Weiss (No. 1) 4 W.W.R. 1358, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 438, 25 W.L.R. 286; R. v. Weiss (No. 2) 5 W.W.R. 48, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 42, (Alta.). There has been no jeopardy if the trial proves abortive, and the jury is discharged without a verdict. R. v. Charlesworth, 9 Cox C.C. 44, 31 L.J.M.C. 25, 1 B. & S. 460; R. v. Murphy L.R. 2 P.C. 584; Winsor v. The Queen, L.R. 1 Q.B. 311.

The previous indictment must have been one upon which his life or liberty was not merely in imaginary, but in actual, danger. R. v. Marsham, ex parte Pethick Lawrence, [1912] 2 K.B. 362, 82 L.J.K.B. 665.

Prior acquittal of complete offence an answer to second charge of attempt]—Where the full offence is charged, but only an attempt is proved, sec. 949 authorizes a conviction for the attempt upon the count for the complete offence. Code see. 949; R. v. McCarthy, 41 O.L.R. 153, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 448, 13 O.W.N. 210; R. v. Hamilton, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 251 (Ont.).

So, an acquittal on the charge of a completed offence is a defence to a subsequent charge of an attempt of that offence inasmuch as there might have been a conviction for the attempt, if proved, on the indictment for the completed offence. R. v. Weiss & Williams, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1358, 1360 (Alta.); R. v. Cameron, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 385.

Competency of court on the previous trial]—Where the plea of autrefois convict sets up the previous decision of an inferior court, the burden of proving that the court was a court of competent jurisdiction rests upon the party pleading the previous decision; the maxim "omnia præsumunter" does not apply to give jurisdiction. Falkingham v. Victorian Ry. Commissioners, 69 L.J.P.C. 89, [1900] A.C. 452, 463. R. v. Taylor (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 7 Alta. L.R. 72, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652.

[§907] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

So, a conviction for theft will not be quashed on the ground that a former conviction had been made upon the same charge, if the evidence on the later charge proves that the magistrates who had purported to make the former conviction had no jurisdiction in the matter. R. v. Taylor, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1105, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 234, 26 W.L.R. 652 (Alta.); Code sec. 773. h

So, also, if the magistrate making a summary conviction had no jurisdiction over the particular offence because a prior information for it had been laid before a magistrate with concurrent jurisdiction and was still pending before him. R. v. Bombardier, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 216 (Que.); same case sub nom. Cotton v. Bombardier, 15 Que. K.B. 7.

Statutory release in certain cases from further criminal proceedings for the same cause]—Code sees. 15, 730, 734, 792, 1079.

Effect of quashing previous summary conviction on certiorari]___ The quashing of a summary conviction on purely technical grounds in certiorari proceedings will not bar other proceedings based upon the same facts; in order to create a bar, the prosecution must have been disposed of upon the merits; R. v. Carver, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1170, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 122 (Alta.); R. v. Young Kee, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 654, 28 Can .Cr. Cas. 236 (Alta.); R. v. Weiss & Williams (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1358, 6 Alta. L.R. 163, 25 W.L.R. 286; and it has been doubted whether in any circumstances the quashing of a conviction on certiorari is equivalent to an acquittal for the purposes of a plea of autrefois. R. v. Weiss and Williams, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1358, 25 W.L.R. 286, 6 Alta. L.R. 163; R. v. Carver, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 1170, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 122 (Alta.). It would seem that, if the prosecution has given all the evidence it has and on certiorari the court on an examination of this evidence finds there is not sufficient to support the conviction, and orders it quashed, this should be equivalent to a trial on the merits in favour of the accused, even if the consequence may not in all respects be the same as an acquittal by the tribunal which alone is given jurisdiction to try the charge. R. v. Carver, supra.

Evidence to prove identity of charges.

908. On the trial of an issue on a plea of autrefois acquit or autrefois convict the depositions transmitted to the court on the former trial, together with the judge's and official stenographer's notes if available, and the depositions transmitted to the court on the subsequent charge, shall be admissible in evidence to prove or disprove the identity of the charges.

Origin]-Sec. 632, Code of 1892.

Exemplification as evidence]—See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 23, as to proof of judicial proceedings.

OBJECTIONS AND PLEAS

Indictment charging substantially same offence with circumstances of aggravation.-Murder.-Manslaughter.

909. When an indictment charges substantially the same offence as that charged in the indictment on which the accused was given in charge on a former trial, but adds a statement of intention or circumstances of aggravation tending if proved to increase the punishment, the previous acquittal or conviction shall be a bar to such subsequent indictment.

2. A previous conviction or acquittal on an indictment for murder shall be a bar to a second indictment for the same homicide charging it as manslaughter; and a previous conviction or acquittal on an indictment for manslaughter shall be a bar to a second indictment for the same homicide charging it as murder.

Same offence with aggravated circumstances or addition of some special intent]—Sec. 909 goes somewhat further than sec. 907 by providing that an acquittal or conviction on indictment shall be a bar to an indictment merely adding intention or aggravation except in the case of murder or manslaughter; but is probably a declaration only of the former law. See R. v. Erlington, 31 L.J.M.C. 14, 9 Cox C.C. 86, 1 B, & S. 688.

In Regina v. Miles, 24 Q.B.D. 423, a person had been convicted of common assault by a court of summary jurisdiction, and was afterwards indicted for aggravated assault in connection with the same circumstances. To the indictment he pleaded specially setting up the former trial and conviction, and alleging "that the 'assault and battery' of which the defendant was convicted and the wounding, assault and battery, in the . . . indictment, are the one and the same assault and battery." Upon a case stated the plea was held to be good.

Pollock, B., at p. 436, said: "In substance, . . . the plea and the evidence establish that there was but one offence, and that the acts done by the defendant in respect of which he was convicted, by whatever legal name they might be called, were the same as those to which the indictment referred, and therefore the rule of law Nemo debict bis puniri pro uno delicto applies, and if the prisoner were guilty of the modified crime only he could not be guilty of the same acts with the addition of malice and design."

Plea of justification in case of libel.—In two senses or in either sense.—Plea in writing.—Reply.—Plea of justification necessary to try truth.—Not guilty in addition.—Effect of plea on punishment.

910. Every one accused of publishing a defamatory libel may plead that the defamatory matter published by him was

Such plea may justify the defamatory matter in the sense specified, if any, in the count, or in the sense which the defamatory matter bears without any such specification; or separate pleas justifying the defamatory matter in each sense may be pleaded separately to each as if two libels had been charged in separate counts.

3. Every such plea must be in writing, and must set forth the particular fact or facts by reason of which it was for the public good that such matters should be so published.

4. The prosecutor may reply generally denying the truth thereof.

Form of plea of justification]-See note to sec. 334.

Libel; Replication to plea of justification]—The accused is not entitled to be acquitted on the ground that the plea of justification had not been traversed and must therefore be taken to be a good plea. R. v. Yousry, 84 L.J.K.B. 1272, [1914] W.N. 338. The omission to formally join issue on the plea of justification will not prevent the court from admitting and considering evidence disputing the averments of that plea. R. v. Yousry, supra; R. v. De la Porte, (1895) 59 J.P. 617, and Odgers on Libel, 5th ed., 725, criticized.

911. The truth of the matters charged in an alleged libel shall in no case be inquired into without the plea of justification aforesaid unless the accused is put upon his trial upon any indictment or information charging him with publishing the libel knowing the same to be false, in which case evidence of the truth may be given in order to negative the allegation that the accused knew the libel to be false.

2. The accused may, in addition to such plea, plead not guilty and such pleas shall be inquired of together.

912. Every person against whom any criminal proceedings are commenced or prosecuted in any manner for or on account of or in respect of the publication of any report, paper, votes or proceedings, by such person or by his servant, by order or under the authority of any legislative council, legislative assembly or house of assembly, may submit to the court in which such proceedings are so commenced or prosecuted, or before any judge of the same, upon twenty-four hours' notice of his intention so to do, to the prosecutor in such proceedings, or to his attorney or solicitor, a certificate under the hand of the speaker or clerk of such legislative council, legislative assembly or house of assembly, as the case may be, verified by affidavit, stating that the report, paper, votes or proceedings, as the case may be, in respect whereof such criminal proceedings are commenced or prosecuted, was or were published by such person, or by his servant, by order or under the authority of the legislative council, legislative assembly or house of assembly, as the case may be.

2. Such court or judge shall, upon such certificate being so submitted, immediately stay such criminal proceedings, and the same shall thereupon be deemed finally ended, determined and superseded.

913. In any criminal prosecution for or on account or in respect of the publication of any copy of such report, paper, votes or proceedings, the defendant may submit to the court or judge before which or whom such prosecution is pending a copy of such report, paper, votes or proceedings, verified by affidavit, and the court or judge shall immediately stay such criminal prosecution, and the same shall thereupon be deemed to be finally ended, determined and superseded.

Origin]-R.S.C. 1886, ch. 163, sec. 7.

Stay of proceedings on producing verified copy of parliamentary paper]—Sec. 913 applies in terms to a criminal prosecution "for or on account or in respect of the publication of any copy of such report, paper, etc., i.e., those parliamentary papers to which the preceding sec. 912 applies; and presumably an extract or abstract from a parliamentary paper will, when separately published under legislative authority, come under the protection of secs. 912 and 913.

Form of record of conviction or acquittal.—Entry of record.— Criminal court rules may apply to inferior courts.

914. In making up the record of any conviction or acquittal on any indictment it shall be sufficient to copy the indictment with the plea pleaded thereto, without any formal caption or heading.

2. The statement of the arraignment and the proceedings subsequent thereto shall be entered of record in the same manner as heretofore, subject to any such alterations in the forms of such entry as are, from time to time, prescribed by any rule or rules of the superior courts of criminal jurisdiction respectively.

3. Such rules shall also apply to such inferior courts of criminal jurisdiction as are therein designated.

Origin]-Sec. 726, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 244.

Record of arraignment and trial]—For the Crown Rules in the various provinces, see sec. 576.

If there is no "arraignment," as where no bill was found, no record is made up, and the fact that the grand jury found "no bill" may be proved by producing the original indictment endorsed in that manner. Tanghe v. Morgan (1905) 11 B.C.R. 455; R. v. Tanghe, 10 B.C.R. 297, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 160.

Proving termination of criminal proceedings]—The result of the more recent authorities is that the termination of the proceedings in favour of the accused may be proved by evidence other than a formal record or certificate of acquittal where there is no such record or certificate. For a long time in the Province of Ontario it was held to be the law that it was necessary to produce the record of the proceedings where the trial had been on an indictment and that before the record could be made up it was necessary to procure an order of the judge presiding at the criminal trial or the fiat of the Attorney-General before the Clerk of the Peace could make up the record. See Regina v. Ivy, 24 U.C.C.P. 78, and Hewitt v. Cane, 26 O.R. 133. These cases were in effect overruled by the decision in Attorney-General v. Scully, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 167, 4 O.L.R. 394. It was during the time when the stricter view of the law was adhered to that such cases as McCann v. Preveneu, 10 Ont. R. 573, was decided. But even during this time it had been held in Sinclair v. Haynes, 16 U.C.R. 247, where the charge had been before magistrates, that it was unnecessary to show any record or adjudication in writing. Tamblen v. Westcott, supra.

At one time it was also held that the entry of a nolle prosequi was not a sufficient termination to found an action for malicious prosecution, for the reason that a new charge might subsequently be laid: Goddard v. Smith, 6 Mod. 262. The contrary view was, however, held in Gilchrist v. Gardner, 12 N.S.W.L.R. 184, and it has been held in Saskatchewan that the direction of the Attorney-General to his agent not to prefer a charge after a committal for trial has been had is a sufficient termination. See Mortimer v. Fisher, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 454, 23 W.L.R. 905 (Sask.), 11 D.L.R. 77.

In Beemer v. Beemer, 9 O.L.R. 69, oral proof of an informal termination of the prosecution was admitted and held sufficient; and see Baxter v. Gordon Ironsides & Fares Company, 13 O.L.R. 598.

In Fancourt v. Heaven, 18 O.L.R. 492, it was held that the withdrawal of the charge in open court by the Crown Attorney was a sufficient termination.

The termination of the prosecution is not sufficiently pleaded by an allegation that the accused was discharged on a habeas corpus order, for that would not necessarily terminate the criminal proceedings. Mc-Kinnon v. McLaughlin Carriage Co., 37 N.B.R. 3.

Records in Ontario courts]—See the Judicature Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 56, sees. 132 and 151, and Re Chantler, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 245, 8 O.L.R. 111.

[$915] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Form of record in case of amendment.

915. If it becomes necessary to draw up a formal record, in any case in which an amendment has been made, such record shall be drawn up in the form in which the indictment remained after the amendment, without taking any notice of the fact of such amendment having been made.

Origin]—Sec. 725, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 243. Amendment of indictment]—Sec secs. 889, 890, 891, 915.

Proceedings in Case of Corporations.

Corporations may appear by attorney.

916. Every corporation against which a bill of indictment is found at any court having criminal jurisdiction shall appear by attorney in the court in which such indictment is found and plead or demur thereto.

Origin]-Sec. 725, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 244.

Indictment of corporation]—Any corporation convicted of an indictable or other offence punishable with imprisonment, may, in lieu of the prescribed punishment, be fined in the discretion of the court before which it is convicted. Code sec. 1035, sub-sec (3); Union Colliery Co. v. The Queen (1900) 31 S.C.R. 81, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 400.

Regarding Chapman's case (Re Chapman and City of London, 19 O.R. 33), Meredith, C.J.C.P., said, in Re Schofield and Toronto (1913) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 93, at 97, that since it was decided one of the strongest points made in it in support of the prohibition has been turned the other way by the legislation now contained in the Code, expressly making its provisions applicable to corporations: sec. 2, sub-sec. (13); so that it is difficult to imagine any good reason why a corporation may not now be duly summoned to and appear at a preliminary investigation of a criminal charge against it taken under the provisions of the Criminal Code.

But it was not necessary to determine the question in the Schofield case in view of the willingness of the corporation, expressed by counsel, that the ordinary course of procedure before a magistrate be taken. See Regina v. Birmingham and Gloucester R. Co. (1840), 9 C. & P. 469; and Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association Limited (1880), 5 App. Cas. 857. But even if there were power to hold a preliminary inquiry if the corporation appeared, it is still doubtful whether a corporation can be compelled to appear, or whether the procedure of a preliminary enquiry and committal for trial is adaptable to a corporation.

Corporations

Two or more corporations may be indicted for conspiracy in furtherance of a trade combine under sec. 498 of the Code, without joining a personal defendant. R. v. Central Supply; (R. v. Master Plumbers) 12 Cau. Cr. Cas. 371.

A corporation is not subject to indictment upon a charge of any erime the essence of which is either personal criminal intent or such a degree of negligence as amounts to a wilful incurring of the risk of eausing injury to others. R. v. Great West Laundry Co. (1900), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 514, 13 Man. R. 66.

The manager of a corporation is not criminally liable as for wilful disobedience of a statute under Code sec. 164 in respect of the corporation's neglect not due to any active participation on his part, to perform a statutory duty imposed upon it. R. v. Hays (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 423; R. v. Hendrie, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 208, 11 O.L.R. 202. Where the offence is non-feasance it is an offence only of the corporation or party upon whom the duty is imposed by statute. People v. Clark, 14 N.Y. Supp. 642.

Formal charge in lieu of indictment]—In Alberta and Saskatchewan, where there is no grand jury system, a formal charge is made by the Attorney-General or by his direction or by any person with his consent or the consent of the court. Code see. 873A. Such a formal charge is included in the statutory meaning given the words "indictment" and "count" by sec. 2, sub-sec. (16), unless the context otherwise requires. The procedure of sec. 918 et seq, applies to such a formal charge. R. v. Standard Soap Co. (1907) 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 290.

Certiorari not required.—Distringas not necessary.

917. No writ of certiorari shall be necessary to remove any such indictment into any superior court with the view of compelling the defendant to plead thereto; nor shall it be necessary to issue any writ of distringas, or other process, to compel the defendant to appear and plead to such indictment.

Origin]-57-58 Vict., Can., ch. 57, sec. 1, sec. 662, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 160.

Constitution of the grand jury]-A provincial legislature has power to determine the number of grand jurors to serve at courts of over and terminer and general sessions this being a matter relating to the constitution of the courts, but the selection and summoning of jurors, including talesmen, and fixing the number of grand jurors by whom a bill may be found, relate to procedure in criminal matters in respect of which the Dominion Parliament alone has power to legislate. The Dominion Parliament can exercise its power by adopting the provincial law and has done so by s. 662 of the Criminal Code of 1892 (now sec 921); R. v. Cox, (1898) 31 N.S.R. 311, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 207; R. v. Walton, 12 O.L.R. 1, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 269, 7 O.W.R. 312; R. v. O'Rourke (1882) 32 U.C.C.P. 38; R. v. O'Rourke, 1 Ont. R. 464; and see R. v. Battista 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Que.); R. v. Morrow (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310 (Que.); Brisebois v. The Queen, 15 S.C.R. 421; Chantler v. Attorney-General, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 465, same case, sub nom. re Chantler, 9 O.L.R. 529.

In Veronneau v. The King, (1916) 54 S.C.R. 7, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 211, 220, Anglin, J., whose dissent in the result was based upon other grounds, said: "Anything which destroys the competency of the grand jury as a whole, or the competency of any of its members, I think, affects the constitution of that body and affords a ground of objection which may be raised by a motion to the court under sec. 899. A grand juror may be well qualified as to all the cases on the docket save one and wholly unfit to pass upon that one. As to that case the jury would not be properly constituted while he sat upon it. In The King v. Haves, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, 11 B.C.R. 4, the contrary view was taken, apparently based largely upon what, with respect, would appear to have been a misconception of sec. 662 of the Criminal Code then in force. (Paragraph 1 of sec. 921 of the present Code.) Apart from any question as to the constitutional validity of this section as a provision dealing with the constitution of the court rather than with criminal procedure, it should be noted that the qualification which it declared sufficient was not merely that prescribed by the provincial statute law, but qualification "according to the laws in force for the time being in any province of Canada." I know of no law in force in any province which has taken away the common law right to object to a juror propter affectum or deprived an accused in the Province of Quebec, as in Ontario and the other older provinces, of the right, before conviction for an indictable offence, to have his case passed upon first by a body of impartial grand jurors and afterwards by a petit jury likewise composed of indifferent men. 4 Blackstone's Com., par. 306." R. v. Gorbet (1866) 1 P.E.I. Rep. 232 approved; R. v. Hayes, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 101, 11 B.C.R. 4, disapproved. And see R. v. Maguire, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 12. An objection to the constitution of the grand jury may be taken by motion to quash the indictment. Code sec. 899.

Qualification of petit jurors]-As to the omission of a name from the panel and other irregularities in the method of selection of jurors, see Code sec. 1010. The latter section does not, however, dispense with the necessity for qualification in a juror who acts; it does not deprive the prisoner of the right to be tried by a petit jury of twelve jurors having the required qualification; R. v. McCraw, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 253. 16 Que, K.B. 103; but objection must be taken at the trial and unless this is done it cannot be raised after verdict and sentence. Sec. 1010; R. v. Battista, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Que.); R. v. Morrow, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310 (Que.). On an appeal under secs. 1013-1015, if the court of appeal is of opinion that any challenge for the defence was improperly disallowed, a new trial must be granted. Sec. 1019. But in a civil case it has been laid down after a consideration of both civil and criminal cases that when the provisions of a statute relate to the performance of a public duty and the case is such that 'to hold null and void acts done in neglect of this duty would work serious general inconvenience or injustice to persons who have no control over those entrusted with the duty, and at the same time would not promote the main object of the legislature, such provisions are to be considered as directory only and the neglect of them though punishable will not affect the validity of the acts done. Montreal Street Ry. Co. v. Normandin [1917] A.C. 170. It was decided in the latter case that the verdict of a jury will not be set aside on account of irregularities in the due revision of the jury list unless the applicant proves prejudice. There had been no challenge to the array in that case and this the applicant sought to excuse on the ground that at the trial he had no means of knowledge of the irregularity, which was the failure to revise the grand jury list under R.S. Que. 1909, art. 3426, and the consequent omission of a revised civil jury list. The decision in Mulcahy v. The Queen, L.R. 3 H.L. 306, was distinguished upon the question of jurisdiction as in that case each list had been duly made and the question was merely which list should be taken. Montreal Street Ry. Co. v. Normandin [1917] A.C. 170 at 177; and see Belanger v. The King, 12 Que. K.B. 69; R. v. Leicester Justices (1827) 7 B. & C. 6; Margate Pier Co. v. Hannam, 3 B. & Ald. 266.

922. No alien shall be entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, but shall be tried as if he was a natural born subject.

Aliens]—An alien is declared by the Naturalization Act, 1914, Can., sec. 18, to be triable in the same manner as if he were a natural born British subject. The former right to a jury de mediatate was that an alien might demand that the jury should be half foreigners, if so many are found in the place. It did not apply to treason and it seems it could be waived. R. v. Courvoisier (1840) Ann. Reg. 229.

It has been held that this right to a mixed jury, conferred by 27-28 Vict., ch. 41, Statutes of the Province of Canada, still exists in criminal cases, notwithstanding the statute 46 Vict., ch. 16 (Que.), purporting to repeal the former Act. R. v. Yancey (1899), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 320, 8 Que. Q.B. 252. A statute of the former Province of Canada in force at the time of Confederation, which conferred the right to a mixed jury in Lower Canada, now the Province of Quebec, remains in force thereafter as a matter of "criminal procedure" as to that province, and can be varied or repealed only by the Parliament of Canada. B.N.A. Act, sec. 91 (27); R. v. Sheehan, supra; R. v. Yancey, supra. The prosecuted party may, upon arraignment, demand a jury composed for the one-half at least of persons skilled in "the language of his defence." whether French or English; but this does not give the accused an option to choose either language as the language of the defence, nor to have at least one-half of the jurors drawn from those skilled in the language in which counsel for the accused proposes to conduct the defence. The "language of the defence" in that connection means the language habitually spoken by the accused. R. v. Yancey, supra.

Where six English jurors had been sworn after several jurors had been directed to stand aside at the instance of the Crown, and the clerk recommenced to call the panel alternately from the English and the French lists, and one of them previously ordered to stand aside was again called, it was held that the previous "stand aside" stood good and did not need to be withdrawn until the panel was exhausted. R. v. Dougall (1874), 18 L.C. Jur. 242.

Mixed juries in Manitoba .- When panel exhausted, additional jurors.

924. Whenever any person who is arraigned before the Court of King's Bench for Manitoba demands a jury composed, for the one-half at least, of persons skilled in the language of the defence, if such language is either English or French, he shall be tried by a jury composed for the one-half at least of the persons whose names stand first in succession upon the general panel and who, on appearing, and not being lawfully challenged, are found, in the judgment of the court, to be skilled in the language of the defence.

2. Whenever, from the number of challenges or any other cause, there is in any such case a deficiency of persons skilled in the language of the defence the court shall fix another day for the trial of such case, and the sheriff shall supply the deficiency by summoning, for the day so fixed, such additional number of jurors skilled in the language of the defence as the court orders, and as are found inscribed next in succession on the list of petit jurors.

Origin]-Sec. 665, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 167.

Challenging the array.-In writing.-Objection in writing.

925. Either the accused or the prosecutor may challenge the array on the ground of partiality, fraud, or wilful misconduct on the part of the sheriff or his deputies by whom the panel was returned, but on no other ground.

2. Such challenge shall be by way of objection in writing, and shall state that the person returning the panel was partial, or was fraudulent, or wilfully misconducted himself, as the case may be.

3. Such objection may be in form 69, or to the like effect.

Form of written challenge to the array]—The statutory form 69 appears to allow the grounds of challenge to be stated in a general way without particulars such as are required under the English practice as to which see R. v. Hughes, 1 C. & K. 235.

Under form 69 the charge against the sheriff or his deputy may be alleged as partiality, fraud, or wilful misconduct in returning the panel; and by sée. 1152 a statutory form is to be deemed "good, valid and sufficient." This latter phrase, however, probably goes no further than to make the statutory form unassailable on a motion to quash, leaving it to the court to exercise its discretion to require particulars to be furnished or to give time to answer any matter brought up as to which the opposite party is taken by surprise.

In R. v. Morrow (1914) 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 310 (Que.), it was said to be the rule that the party challenging is not to have the benefit of any ground which he has not specifically set forth, but the effect of the statutory form 69 does not appear to have been considered, and moreover, the objection there was a double one as to the same default of the sheriff in respect of the petit jury list and the grand jury list as to which latter Code sec. 899 (2) governs and as to which there is no statutory form of objection.

Triers on challenge to the array]-See sec. 926.

Origin]-Sec. 666 (2), Code of 1892.

Misconduct of sheriff in drafting jury panel]-See sees. 925 and 1011.

Empanelling the jury.

927. The name of each juror on a panel returned, with his number on the panel and the place of his abode, shall be written on a distinct piece of card, and all such pieces of card shall be as nearly as may be of equal size.

2. The cards shall be delivered to the officer of the court by the sheriff or other officer returning the panel, and shall, under the direction and care of the officer of the court, be put together in a box to be provided for that purpose and shall be shaken together.

3. If the array is not challenged or if the triers find against the challenge, the officer of the court shall in open court draw out the said cards, one after another, and shall call out the name and number upon each such card as it is drawn, until such a number of persons have answered to their names as in the opinion of the court will probably be sufficient to provide a full jury after allowing for challenges of jurors and directions to stand by.

4. The officer of the court shall then proceed to swear the jury, each juror being called to swear in the order in which his name is so drawn, until, after substracting all challenges allowed and jurors directed to stand by, twelve jurors are sworn.

5. If the number so answering is not sufficient to provide a full jury such officer shall proceed to draw further names from the box, and call the same in manner aforesaid, until, after challenges allowed and directions to stand by, twelve jurors are sworn.

Origin]-Sec. 667, Code of 1892.

Duties of the Clerk of Assize]—A "record" book is kept by each clerk of assize in Ontario. In it are entered: the title of the cause; the names of the counsel; the motion to quash or for particulars; the request of the prisoner's counsel to have witnesses for the defence subpœnaed by the Crown; the finding by the grand jury of a true bill; the arraignment of the prisoner; the names of the jurors sworn, ordered to stand aside, and challenged; the names of the witnesses sworn for the Crown and for the prisoner; a statement of the exhibits produced; the hours at which the addresses for the Crown and for the prisoner and the judge's charge were delivered, and of the retirement and return of the jury, and their verdiet as recorded by the trial judge; and generally the course of the trial.

Calling the jury]—See note to sec. 873 as to formal proceedings in jury courts.

Challenges peremptory and for cause]—A challenge once allowed excludes a juror from serving on the jury being formed; for in cases of a peremptory challenge the other party might afterwards exhaust his peremptory challenges and the privilege of withdrawing it might therefore operate as a fraud upon him. Then in the case of a challenge for cause the withdrawal of the challenge would not change the decision of the triers that the juror did not stand indifferent, and that he, therefore, was an improper person to serve on the jury. R. v. Lalonde (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 188 (Que.).

When the accused does not challenge, the Crown may either challenge peremptorily, or may challenge for cause, or direct the juror to stand by.

Direction to stand by]—The direction to stand by is really a challenge by the Crown for cause without it being necessary to show and establish the ground on which it is founded until the panel has been exhausted without twelve jurors having been accepted and sworn. It is in fact a deferred challenge for cause; and the term "to stand by" means that the Crown shall have time to show the cause of challenge. R. v. Barsalou (No. 1) (1901) 10 Que, K.B. 180; 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 343; R. v. Geach (1839), 9 C. & P. 499; Mansell v. The Queen, 8 E. & B. 54.

Subject to see. 933, the Crown may direct any number of jurors to stand by, but when the panel is exhausted they cannot be stood by a second time. R. v. Boyd (1896), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 219; 5 Que. Q.B. 1; R. v. Morin (1890), 18 S.C.R. 407.

The order to stand by must be given at a time when a challenge could be made. R. v. Barsalou (No. 1) (1901), 10 Que. K.B. 180, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 343. The right to challenge must be excreted before the juror has taken the book, by direction of the clerk of the court, to be sworn. Ibid.; and sufficient time is always allowed before this order is given to allow the parties to exercise the right of challenge. After the book has been taken, the taking of the oath is deemed to have commenced, and then it is too late to challenge, and also too late to direct the juror to stand by. R. v. Frost (1839), 9 C. & P. 129. A limitation of the Crown's privilege to direct jurors to stand by is made by the proviso in sec. 933 (1) added in 1917 by 7-8 Geo. V, Can., ch. 13. The provision of the Code relating to the right of the Crown to have jurors stand aside is not inconsistent with the provisions of the North-West Territories Act in force in Alberta. R. v. Murray, (1915) 9 W.W.R. 804, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 214, 33 W.L.R. 148 (Alta.).

Irregularities of procedure]—The fact that the jurors were set aside, rejected or sworn as they were drawn, without first calling the full number required for a jury, does not invalidate the trial, nor constitute a deprivation of the full right of challenge. R. v. Weir (No 3) (1899), 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 262 (Que.).

Where, after the jury were sworn, it was learned that one of the Crown witnesses had disappeared and the prosecution could not proceed the judge discharged the jury and remanded the prisoner. It was held that the judge had a discretion to discharge the jury, and that the discharge under such circumstances was not equivalent to an acquittal, and that the prisoner might again be put on trial. Jones v. R. (1880), 3 Leg. News, 309 (Que.).

By sec. 929 (3) an omission to follow the directions of this section shall not affect the validity of the proceedings. And see secs. 1010 and 1011.

Yukon]—As to the Yukon Territory the provisions of the Yukon Juries' Ordinance passed under the authority of 3 Edw. VII (Can.), c. 73, superseded sub-secs. 2 and 3 of sec. 667 of the 1892 Code now part of sec. 927, as to the procedure on impanelling a jury. R. v. Brindamour, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 315.

Calling the jurors who have stood by.

928. If, by challenges and directions to stand by, the panel is exhausted without leaving a sufficient number to form a jury, those who have been directed to stand by shall be again called in the order in which they were drawn, and shall be sworn, unless challenged by the accused, or unless the prosecutor challenges them and shows cause why they should not be sworn: Provided that if before any such juror is sworn other jurymen in the panel become available the prosecutor may require the names of such jurymen to be put into and drawn from the box in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, and such jurors shall be sworn, challenged or ordered to stand by, as the case may be, before the jurors originally ordered to stand by are again called.

Origin]-Sec. 667, Code of 1892.

Irregularities in procedure]—By sec. 929 (3) an omission to follow the "directions" of this section shall not affect the validity of the proceedings. And see secs. 1010 and 1011 and note to sec. 929.

[§ 927]

JURIES

Crown may not peremptorily challenge a juror who has been stood aside]—After the list of jurors has been called and gone through, a number having been directed at the instance of the Crown to stand aside, and a complete jury not obtained, although the Crown may not have exhausted its number of peremptory challenges, it cannot challenge peremptorily on the names of those stood aside being called again following the first calling over of the panel. If it does so, the jury is improperly constituted and a substantial wrong done to accused entitling him to a new trial. R. v. Churton [1919] 1 W.W.R. 774 (B.C.).

The twelve men who in manner aforesaid are ultimately drawn and sworn shall be the jury to try the issues on the indictment, and the names of the men so drawn and sworn shall be kept apart by themselves until such jury give in their verdict or until they are discharged; and then the names shall be returned to the box, there to be kept with the other names remaining at that time undrawn, and so toties quoties as long as any issue remains to be tried.

2. If the prosecutor and accused do not object thereto, the court may try any issue with the same jury that has previously tried or been drawn to try any other issue, without their names being returned to the box and redrawn, or if the parties, or either of them, object to some one or more of the jurors forming such jury, or the court excuses any one or more of them, then the court may order such persons to withdraw, and may direct the requisite number of names to make up a complete jury to be drawn, and the persons whose names are so drawn shall be sworn.

Trial of challenge upon other grounds .- Triers.

931. If the ground of challenge be other than as last aforesaid, the two jurors last sworn, or if no jurors have then been sworn, then two persons present whom the court may appoint for that purpose shall be sworn to try whether the juror objected to stands indifferent between the King and the accused, or has been convicted as hereinafter specified or is an alien, as the case may be.

2. If the court or the triers find against the challenge, the juror shall be sworn.

3. If they find for the challenge he shall not be sworn.

4. If, after what the court considers a reasonable time, the triers are unable to agree, the court may discharge them from giving a verdict, and may direct other persons to be sworn in their place.

Origin]-Sec. 668, Code of 1892.

Oath of triers]-Where the issue is whether the juror stands indifferent or not (see, 935 (b)), the triers are sworn as follows:--

"You shall well and truly try whether A.B., one of the jurors, stands indifferently to try the prisoner at the bar and a true verdict give according to the evidence.—So help you God."

Challenge of second juror]—On the selection of the second juror, the first juror is not necessarily one of the triers. R. v. Mathurin, 12 Que. K.B. 494, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 1. And it has been doubted whether he may be one, although such was the former practice, because of the use of the word "jurors" (in the plural) in the phrase "or if no jurors have then been sworn" (see 931, sub-sec. Peremptory challenges by accused.

932. Every one indicted for treason or for any offence punishable with death is entitled to challenge twenty jurors peremptorily.

2. Every one indicted for any offence other than treason, or an offence punishable with death, for which he may be sentenced to imprisonment for more than five years, is entitled to challenge twelve jurors peremptorily.

3. Every one indicted for any other offence is entitled to challenge four jurors peremptorily.

Origin]-Sec. 668, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 163, 164.

Peremptory challenges for the defence]—Challenges to the polls are either peremptory, or for cause. Peremptory challenges are those which are made without any reason assigned and which the court is bound to allow to the number here limited.

The challenge must be before the juryman is sworn, and he cannot be challenged afterwards except by consent. R. v. Mellor (1858), 27 L.J.M.C. 121, 1 Dears. & B. 468; R. v. Frost, 9 C. & P. 129; R. v. Coulter (1863), 13 U.C.C.P. 299, 301. This rule will apply although the ground for challenge was not known at the time. R. v. Earl (1894), 10 Man. R. 307.

The moment the oath is begun it is too late, and the oath is begun by the juror taking the book, having been directed by the officer of the court to do so. If the juror takes the book without authority, neither party wishing to challenge is to be prejudiced thereby. R. v. Frost (1829), 9 C. & P. 129, 137.

The withdrawal of an unqualified or disqualified person who has been sworn as a juror, at the request of the prisoner and by the consent of the Crown, before the whole jury is completed and sworn does not reopen the right of challenge as to those previously sworn nor make it necessary that such jurors should be re-sworn. R. v. Coulter (1863), 13 U.C.C.P. 299.

As between different prisoners whichever begins to challenge must finish all his challenges before the other begins. Ibid., p. 49; Co. Lit. 158a. A prisoner is entitled to challenge for cause before he has made all or any of his peremptory challenges. Whelan v. The Queen (1868), 28 U.C.Q.B. 2.

If the prisoner whose challenge of a juror for favour has been disallowed, chooses then to challenge the juror peremptorily, he waives the benefit of any exception to the disallowance of his challenge for favour. Peremptory challenges by Crown.-Standing aside.-Accused challenges first if required.

933. The Crown shall have power to challenge four jurors peremptorily, and may direct any number of jurors not peremptorily challenged by the accused to stand by until all the jurors have been called who are available for the purpose of trying that indictment; provided that the Crown may not direct any number of jurors to stand by in excess of forty-eight, unless the judge presiding at the trial, upon special cause shown, so orders.

2. The accused may be called upon to declare whether he challenges any jurors peremptorily or otherwise, before the prosecutor is called upon to declare whether he requires such juror to stand by, or challenges him either for cause or peremptorily.

Origin]—1917 Can., ch. 13; sec. 668, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 163 and 164.

Crown's directions to juror to "stand by"]-See secs. 927, 928.

Alberta and Saskatchewan]—Sec. 9 of the Code declared that except in so far as they are inconsistent with the North-West Territories Act and amendments thereto as the same existed immediately before the first day of September, 1905, the provisions of the Code Act extend to and are in force in the Province of Saskatchewan and Alberta. So far as the Crown is concerned the number of peremptory challenges given by The North-West Territories Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 62, and by The Criminal Code are the same, namely, four; as to challenges for cause there is, naturally, no limit in either Act. The panel, that is the list of persons summoned as jurors, is prepared in accordance with provincial legislation as a matter relating to the organization of courts. The number summoned may vary in different provinces. Under The North-West Territories Act a judge summons such number as he thinks fit. The list of persons so summoned is the panel. The procedure in the province of Alberta is, therefore, substantially the same as in the other provinces, and there is a right in the Crown of directing jurors to stand aside. R. v. Murray and Mahoney, 9 W.W.R. 804, 811, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 214 (Alta.).

JURIES

No right to stand aside on private prosecution for defamatory libel.

934. The right of the Crown to cause any juror to stand aside until the panel has been gone through shall not be exercised on the trial of any indictment or information by a private prosecutor for the publication of a defamatory libel.

"By a private prosecutor"]—The "private prosecutor," as the term is here used, means the person who puts the criminal law in motion; and if there is a criminal proceeding to which the term private prosecutor is more applicable than another, it is in the case of a defamatory libel—a prosecution, as was said by Lord Campbell, uniformly instituted by the party injured. R. v. Patteson (1875), 36 U.C.Q.B. 129, at p. 141.

The fact that the Attorney-General or his representative conducts the prosecution in respect of a private defamatory libel does not make it a public proceeding or withdraw it from the operation of this section. R. v. Patteson (1875), 36 U.C.Q.B. 129, 143; R. v. Marsden (1829), 1 M. & M. 439; R. v. Bell, 1 M. & M. 440.

As to costs in defamatory libel cases, see sec. 1045; R. v. Fournier, 25 Que. K.B. 556, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 430.

Defamatory libel]—See secs. 317-334, 861, 871, 888, 905, 910-913, 934, 947, 955, 1045.

Challenges for cause.

935. Every prosecutor and every accused person is entitled to any number of challenges on the ground,—

- (a) that any juror's name does not appear in the panel: Provided that no misnomer or misdescription shall be a ground of challenge if it appears to the court that the description given in the panel sufficiently designates the person referred to; or,

2. No other ground of challenge for cause than those mentioned in this section shall be allowed.

Origin]-Sec. 668, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 163 and 164.

Sub-sec. (a)—Challenge because jurors' names not on panel]—This ground of challenge is triable by the court. Sec. 930.

Juror claiming he is disqualified]—Sec. 935 provides for challenges by the prosecutor and by the accused, but it seems that a juror may himself claim, at the time that a challenge would be in order, that he is disqualified and may then be examined upon oath as to the disqualification. 4 Hargr. St. Tr. 740.

Sub-sec. (b)—Challenge for favour; juror "not indifferent"]—If a defendant omit to challenge a juror on the ground that such juror entertains a hostile feeling against him, he cannot, after a verdict of guilty, ask on that ground to have the verdict quashed and for a new trial. R. v. Harris (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 75.

The ordinary course of proceeding when the prisoner challenges for cause is that the juror is tried for cause at once; but he may be required to stand aside for a time, and the cause be tried at a later stage, if it be more convenient as a matter of practice and procedure that it should be so, or the challenge for cause may be postponed until the peremptory challenges have been exhausted. After challenging for cause and failing to support his challenge, the prisoner may desire to exclude that juror in case he might be influenced against the prisoner by reason of the challenge for cause, and if he had been compelled to exhaust the whole of his peremptory challenges before that, he would then be unable to exclude the juror he had challenged for cause, whom he might have excluded if his peremptory challenges had not been completed. R. v. Smith (1876), 38 U.C.Q.B. 218 (Ont.); Whelan v. The Queen, 28 U.C.Q.B. 132 (Ont.).

It is a good ground of challenge of a petit juror that he was on the grand jury by which the indictment was found, the reason being that he may have been one of the twelve who found the indictment. R. v. Dowey (1869), 1 P.E.I. 291.

The judge may in his discretion for sufficient cause further postpone the time of assigning cause of challenge either for the Crown or the prisoner, but not as a matter of right on a mere request without sufficient cause. Mansell v. R. (1857), 8 E. & B. 54, 111.

In Canada there is no preliminary right of counsel to interrogate the juror when called up, in order to found a challenge for cause or to refrain from challenging him on being satisfied by his answers. The burden of proof of a challenge for cause is on the person who makes it. R. v. Savage, 1 Mood. C.C. 51. It is said that the challenged juror may himself be examined by the triers on the voire dire as to his qualification to be upon the panel or the "leaning of his affection"; R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr. N.S. 381; R. v. Cook, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 241 (N.S.); but not as to his conviction (sec. 935 (c)) for some offence forming an absolute ground of challenge. R. v. Edmonds, 4 B. & Ald. 471; R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr. N.S. 925; R. v. Stewart, 1 Cox C.C. 174. And it is a matter of doubt whether, if objection be taken, he is to be interrogated as to any matter going to his own discredit; Archbold's Crim. Pldg. 22nd ed., 185; R. v. Stewart, supra; R. v. Cuffy (1848) 7 St. Tr. N.S. 467.

The finding of the triers that the proposed juror is "indifferent" is conclusive; his capacity as a juror is not to be subject to attack afterwards merely because of proof that he had made statements which tended to show bias. R. v. Carlin, 12 Que, K.B. 368, affirmed, R. v. Carlin, 12 Que, K.B. 483.

Sub-sec. (c)-Juror's conviction for serious offence as cause of challenge]—See sec. 931 as to the mode of trying the challenge.

Alienage as ground of challenge]—The fact is to be tried by triers under sec. 931. The juror may be examined before them on the voir dire as to this ground. R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr. N.S. 381.

Under N.W.T. Act and Yukon Act]—On a trial before a jury of six the challenges for cause shall be the same as are provided for in the Críminal Code. Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, sec. 72; N.W.T. Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 62, sec. 45.

New trial if challenge improperly disallowed]—On an appeal under sees. 1013-1015, if the court of appeal is of opinion that any challenge for the defence was improperly disallowed, a new trial must be granted. Sec. 1019.

Requiring challenge in writing .-- Form .-- Denial.

936. If a challenge on any of the grounds aforesaid is made, the court may, in its discretion, require the party challenging to put his challenge in writing.

2. The challenge may be in form 70, or to the like effect.

3. The other party may deny that the ground of challenge is true.

Origin]—Sec. 668, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 163, 164. Form of challenge to poll]—Code form 70, following sec. 1152.

[§ 937] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Peremptory challenge in case of mixed jury.

937. Whenever a person accused of an offence for which he would be entitled to twenty or twelve peremptory challenges as hereinbefore provided, elects to be tried by a jury composed one-half of persons skilled in the language of the defence, under secs. 923 or 924, the number of peremptory challenges to which he is entitled shall be divided, so that he shall only have the right to challenge one-half of such number from among the English speaking jurors, and one-half from among the French speaking jurors.

Origin]-Sec. 670, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 166, 167.

Accused persons joining or severing in their challenges.

938. If several accused persons are jointly indicted and it is proposed to try them together, they or any of them may either join in their challenges, in which case the persons who so join shall have only as many challenges as a single person would be entitled to, or each may make his challenges in the same manner as if he were intended to be tried alone.

Origin]-Sec. 671, Code of 1892.

Persons jointly indicted may sever their challenges]—Under these provisions each defendant has a right to the full number of his peremptory challenges; but a corresponding privilege is not given to the Crown, and therefore the Crown is restricted, in the case of the trial of several defendants jointly, to the number of peremptory challenges allowed to it in the case of the indictment of a single person. But if the joint defendants refuse to join in their challenges, the Crown has the right to try them separately, and then the Crown has its four peremptory challenges at the trial of each defendant. R. v. Lalonde (1898), 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 188 (Que.).

Panel exhausted, further jurors summoned.—Names added to the panel.

939. Whenever after the proceedings hereinbefore provided for the panel has been exhausted, and a complete jury cannot be had by reason thereof, then, upon request made on behalf of the Crown, the court may order the sheriff or other proper officer forthwith to summon such number of persons, whether qualified jurors or not, as the court deems necessary and directs in order to make a full jury; and such jurors may, if necessary, be summoned by word of mouth.

2. The names of the persons so summoned shall be added to the general panel, for the purposes of the trial, and the same proceedings shall be taken as to calling and challenging such persons and as to directing them to stand by as are hereinbefore provided for with respect to the persons named in the original panel.

Origin]-Sec. 642, Code of 1892.

Depositions before coroner]-See secs. 667, 695.

Where N.W.T. Act applies]—Similar provisions as to coroners and inquests are contained in secs. 60-66 of the N.W.T. Act, R.S.C., ch. 62, and that statute also provides that the Indian Commissioner, the stipendiaries, the commissioner and assistant commissioner of the R.N.W. Mounted Police, and such other persons as the commissioner of the North-West Territories from time to time appoints, shall be coroners in and for the Territories.

Bringing prisoner up for arraignment.

941. If any person against whom any indictment is found is at the time confined for some other cause in the prison belonging to the jurisdiction of the court by which he is to be tried, the court may by order in writing, without a writ of habeas corpus, direct the warden or gaoler of the prison or sheriff or other person having the custody of the prisoner to bring up the body of such person as often as may be required for the purposes of the trial, and such warden, gaoler, sheriff or other person shall obey such order.

Origin]-Sec. 652, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 180.

[§942] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Full answer and defence.-Counsel.

942. Every person tried for any indictable offence shall be admitted, after the close of the case for the prosecution, to make full answer and defence thereto by counsel learned in the law.

Origin]—Sec. 659, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 178; 6-7 Wm. IV, Imp., ch. 114 (1836).

"Full answer and defence"]—This phrase appears in Code secs. 715, 786, and 942, dealing respectively with summary conviction matters, summary trials and trials on indictment.

The words "full answer and defence" mean that the accused can invoke every means both in law and in fact to meet the charge; the word "answer" being specially applicable to a defence on the facts and the word "defence" applying both to matters of testimony and matters of law. R. v. Romer, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 235 (Que.).

A person upon trial for a crime has a right to hear all the evidence adduced against him and to insist, as a matter of right, that the formalities of the law as to criminal trials are complied with; and when formal proceedings are in strict law required, ex. gr., an arraignment upon a specific charge made known to the prisoner at the hearing before a magistrate, the absence of the required proceedings is a ground for setting aside the conviction without regard to the question whether or not any substantial injustice had resulted to the accused. R. v. Boach (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 28, 6 O.W.N. 632; Martin v. Mackonachie, 3 Q.B.D. 730, 770.

Calling witnesses for the defence]-Code sec. 944 (2).

Even during the final address for the prosecution the court may permit fresh evidence to be called for the defence. R. v. Morrison, (1911) 75 J.P. 272, 22 Cox 214.

Statutory limitation of number of expert witnesses]—See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 7.

Right of accused to testify in his own defence]—See the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 145, sec. 4 (Appendix to this volume).

There is a conflict of judicial opinion as to whether the right to testify on his own behalf which the accused now has under the Canada Evidence Act, abrogates the right which he formerly had of making an unsworn statement. The right to make an unsworn statement is denied in Manitoba. R. v. Kelly, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Man. R. 105, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 94, and in R. v. Krafchenko, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 836, 24 Man. R. 652, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 277.

In British Columbia it is held that a prisoner at his trial has the option of making a statement not under oath, or of giving evidence under oath. R. v. Aho, 11 B.C.R. 114, S Can. Cr. Cas. 453.

Down until 1837, prisoners on trial in cases of felony were not allowed either to give evidence on their own behalf or (except in cases of treason) be defended by counsel, although they were allowed counsel to cross-examine witnesses. While the laws of evidence prevented the accused from giving evidence on his own behalf under oath, it was manifest that a great injustice might often be done unless the story of the accused was allowed to get before the jury in some form. To meet that difficulty, judges adopted the practice of permitting the prisoner to make an unsworn statement from the dock and to address the jury on his own behalf. Mathers, C.J.K.B. in R. v. Krafchenko, supra.

Competency of consort of accused as witness]-See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 4.

Right of defence counsel to "sum up" the evidence]-Code sec. 944; R. v. Cook, 48 N.S.R. 150.

The defendant may be allowed to reserve to himself the right to address the jury and to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to have his counsel argue any points of law that arise in the course of the trial and to suggest questions to him for the cross-examination of witnesses; R. v. Parkins, Ry. & M. 166; but the defendant will not be allowed to have counsel to examine and cross-examine the witnesses, and to reserve to himself the right of addressing the jury. R. v. White (1811), 3 Camp. 98.

Accused to have benefit of doubt]—The prosecution must sustain the burden of proving affirmatively, either by direct evidence or fair inference, a case which excludes any reasonable hypothesis upon which the accused may be innocent. R. v. Jennings (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1049, 1051, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 270, 34 W.L.R. 1058 (Alta.); R. v. Schama, 84 L.J.K.B. 396; R. v. Schurman (1914) 7 W.W.R. 680, 7 Sask. L.R. 269, 30 W.L.R. 56; R. v. Krafchenko (1914) 6 W.W.R. 836, 24 Man. R. 652; R. v. Shortall, 12 O.W.N. 94, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 98.

Alderson, B., in the case of R. v. Hodges, 2 Lewin C.C. 228, told the jury that the case was made up of circumstances entirely, and that, before they could find the prisoner guilty, they must be satisfied "not only that those circumstances were consistent with his having committed the act, but they must also be satisfied that the facts were such as to be inconsistent with any other rational conclusion than that the prisoner was the guilty person."

This passage from Alderson, B., has passed into almost invariable use, and it now constitutes one of the rules of evidence: 1 Taylor on Evidence, sec. 69; R. v. Cook, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 50 (N.S.).

Wills, on Circumstantial Evidence, 262, says: In order to justify the inference of guilt, the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt.

It is error to direct the jury that they cannot doubt that certain inferences are to be drawn from circumstantial evidence on points material to the issue. R. v. Collins, (1907) 38 N.B.R. 218, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 402.

In the consideration of circumstantial evidence the inculpatory facts must be incompatible with the innocence of the accused and incapable of explanation upon any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt, in order to justify the inference that he is guilty. R. v. Jenkins, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 14 B.C.R. 61.

Character evidence for the defence]—The accused may call witnesses to speak generally as to his character. The evidence, however, of such witnesses must be confined to the general reputation of the accused for good character, and evidence of particular cases of praiseworthy conduct in the accused is not properly admissible. The evidence of general good character cannot avail the accused against evidence of the fact, but where some reasonable doubt exists as to his guilt, it may tend to strengthen a presumption of innocence; and where intention is a principal element in the offence, or where only presumptive proof is adduced, evidence as to character, bearing on the charge, may be highly important, and serve to explain the conduct of the accused.

Mistake of counsel]—If a mistake is made by counsel, such as failure to take an objection, that does not relieve the judge in a criminal ensefrom the duty to see that proper evidence only is before the jury: R. v. Gibson (1887), 18 Q.B.D. 537; R. v. Saunders, [1899] 1 Q.B. 490; R. v. Petrie (1890), 20 O.R. 317; R. v. Brooks, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 188 at 192, 11 O.L.R. 525, 7 O.W.R. 533.

Trial after extradition]—If an extradited prisoner intends to object that the indictment is for a different charge than that on which he was extradited, it is for him to prove the extradition warrant and so place on the record the fact of the variance, so that a court of appeal may take cognizance of it. R. v. McNamara (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 351, 19 B.C.R. 175, 27 W.L.R. 33.

Joint indictments]—Where several persons are jointly indicted the order in which each of them shall enter upon his defence is generally subject to the discretion of the trial judge. R. v. Barsalou (No. 3), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 446 (Que.). Where there is a difference in degree of criminality with respect to the charge made against several persons jointly indicted, they should be called upon for their defence the greater before the less according to the seriousness of the charge against each as disclosed both by the indictment and the evidence for the prosecution, $ex \ gr.$, the principal before the accessory, and the thief before the receiver. R. v. Barsalou, supra.

Where there appears no such difference in degree of criminality in respect of several persons jointly indicted, the order of defence is the order in which their names appear in the indictment. R. v. Barber, 1 C. & K. 434; R. v. Meadows, 2 Jurist N.S. 718. On a joint indictment for one offence, when the evidence for the one would enure to the benefit of the other, the right to a general reply is with the prosecution, though only one defendant called witnesses in defence. R. v. Connolly (1894), 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 468, 25 Ont. R. 151; R. v. Hayes (1838), 2 M. & R. 155; R. v. Jordan (1839), 9 C. & P. 118. As to separate trial, see note to see. 856.

Presence of the accused at trial.-Permission to be out of court.

943. Every accused person shall be entitled to be present in court during the whole of his trial unless he misconducts himself by so interrupting the proceedings as to render their continuance in his presence impracticable.

2. The court may permit the accused to be out of court during the whole or any part of any trial on such terms as it thinks proper.

Granting permission to be out of court]—Sub-sec. (2) applies as well to trials in the county court judge's criminal court (under Code Part XVIII) as to trials with a jury. R. v. McDougall, 8 O.L.R. 30, 3 O.W.R. 750.

Prosecutor's right to sum up.—Accused may open defence and call witnesses.—Summing up.—Crown's right of reply.

944. If an accused person, or any one of several accused persons being tried together, is defended by counsel, such counsel shall, at the end of the case for the prosecution, declare whether he intends to adduce evidence or not on behalf of the accused person for whom he appears; and if he does not thereupon announce his intention to adduce evidence, the counsel for the prosecution may address the jury by way of summing up.

2. Upon every trial for an indictable offence, the counsel for the accused, or the accused if he is not defended by counsel, shall be allowed, if he thinks fit, to open the case for the defence, and after the conclusion of such opening to examine such witnesses as he thinks fit, and when all the evidence is concluded to sum up the evidence.

3. If no witnesses are examined for the defence the counsel for the accused, or the accused in case he is not defended by counsel, shall have the privilege of addressing the jury last, otherwise such right shall belong to the counsel for the prosecution: Provided, that the right of reply shall be always allowed to the Attorney General or Solicitor General, or to any counsel acting on behalf of either of them.

Origin]-Sec. 661, Code of 1892.

Duty of a prosecuting counsel]—The position of counsel prosecuting for the Crown in a criminal case is not that of an ordinary counsel in a civil case; he is acting in a quasi-judicial capacity and ought to regard himself as part of the court; he is to conduct the case at his discretion, but with a feeling of responsibility, not as if trying to obtain a verdict, but to assist the judge in fairly putting the case before the jury, and nothing more. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404 at 413 (Alta.); R. v. Berens, 4 F. & F. 842, Warburton's Lending Cases, 237.

Counsel for the prosecution are to regard themselves as ministers of justice and not to "struggle for a conviction" as in a case at nisi prius, nor to be betrayed by feelings of professional rivalry to regard the question at issue as one of professional superiority, and to "contest for skill and pre-eminence." R. v. Murray and Mahoney, supra; R. v. Puddick, 4 F. & F. 497.

If the Crown does not intend to call at the trial a witness whom it called on the preliminary inquiry, such witness should be made available to the defence unless his evidence is unquestionably immaterial. R. v. McClain, (1915) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 488 (Alta.).

Prosecuting counsel opening case]—Counsel for the Crown in a criminal prosecution may not, in opening the case to the jury, disclose the facts relied upon as constituting a confession by the accused until the court has decided that the evidence is admissible. R. v. Willis. (1913) 4 W.W.R. 761, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 64, 23 Man. R. 77, 23 W.L.R. 702; R. v. Yousry, 11 Cr. App. R. 13. Counsel should not suggest to the jury by questions put in cross-examination of a witness, the contents of a writing which if produced he could not put in evidence. R. v. Yousry, supra.

Oath or affirmation in licu of oath of witness] See Canada Evidence Act, sees. 13, 14 and 15.

Corroboration required by statute in certain cases]—See Code sec. 1002.

Evidence of child not under oath]—See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 16, and as to certain offences, Code sec. 1003.

Counsel opening defence]—In 1881, a resolution was come to by the English judges as follows:—"In the opinion of the judges it is contrary to the administration and practice of the criminal law as hitherto allowed that counsel for prisoners should state to the jury. as alleged existing facts, matters which they have been told in their instructions on the authority of the prisoner, but which they do not propose to prove in evidence."

Cross-examination as to previous conviction]—See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 12.

Cross-examining witness as to previous statement]—See Canada Evidence Act, secs. 10 and 11.

Cross-examination of witness as to bias]-Pollock, C.B., said, in Attorney-General v. Hitchcock (1847), 1 Ex. 91:

[§944]

"A distinction should be observed between those matters which may be given in evidence by way of contradiction, as directly affecting the story of the witness touching the issue before the jury, and those matters which affect the motives, temper and character of the witness not with respect to his credit but with reference to his feelings towards one party or the other. In Thomas v. David (1836), 7 C. & P. 350, on the witness being asked whether she was not connected in a particular way with one of the parties, and having denied it, the learned judge permitted evidence to be given to show that the connection which she swore had not existed, did in reality subsist. The object in doing so was, not to prove or disprove any part of her testimony, but the evidence was received on the same ground as it was in the case of Ex parte Yewin (1811), 2 Camp. 638 (note) where Mr. Justice Lawrence permitted evidence to be given to contradict a witness as to his having used expressions importing revenge. It is certainly allowable to ask a witness in what manner he stands affected towards the opposite party in the cause, and whether he does not stand in such a relation to that person as is likely to affect him and prevent him from having an unprejudiced state of mind. . . But those cases where you may show the condition of a witness or his connection with either of the parties are not to be confounded with other cases where it is proposed to contradict a witness on some matter unconnected with the question at issue."

The quotation above given was approved and followed in R. v. Finnessey, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 347, 11 O.L.R. 338.

Contradiction of own witness if adverse]-See Canada Evidence Act, sec. 9.

Defence counsel may sum up the evidence]—The prisoner's counsel at the close of the testimony may "sum up the evidence," (sec. 944), but it is in the judge's discretion whether counsel will be permitted in his address to the jury to read to them extracts from legal textbooks or law reports. R. v. Cook, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 50, 18 D.L.R. 706 (N.S.).

Crown's right of reply]—Where the defence calls no evidence the Attorney-General may sum up, if he chooses, before the address of prisoner's counsel and reply afterwards; R. v. Cook, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 241 (N.S.); but he is not bound to address the jury before the prisoner's counsel does so. R. v. Keirstead (1918) 42 D.L.R. 193, 200 (N.B.); R. v. Toakley, 10 Cox C.C. 406.

The right of reply preserved to the Attorney-General is similar to the right of reply exercisable in England by the Attorney-General as a prerogative right of the Crown. R. v. Martin, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 371; R. v. Keirstead (1918) 42 D.L.R. 193 (N.B.); R. v. King, 6 Terr. L.R. 139, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 426.

The Crown counsel should not attempt to controvert the ruling of the court in admitting certain testimony by telling the jury that it should not have been admitted. R. v. Webb, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 358, 24 Man. R. 437, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 424, 27 W.L.R. 313.

Waiving Crown's right to reply]....Where the defence calls no witnesses, the order of addresses to the jury is first the prosecution, second, the defence, and lastly, a right of reply to counsel representing the Attorney-General where the Crown is prosecuting; but the latter privilege is commonly waived, leaving the prisoner with the last word to the jury when he calls no witnesses; R. v. Cook, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 241; or calls witnesses only to prove his good character. R. v. Dowse, 4 F. & F. 492.

Continuous trial.—Adjournment.—Keeping the jury together.--Direction of court.

945. The trial shall proceed continuously subject to the power of the court to adjourn it.

2. The court may adjourn the trial from day to day, and if in its opinion the ends of justice so require, to any other day in the same sittings.

3. Upon every adjournment of a trial under this section, or under any other section, the court may, if it thinks fit, direct that during the adjournment the jury shall be kept together, and proper provision made for preventing the jury from holding communication with any one on the subject of the trial.

4. Such direction shall be given in all cases in which the accused may upon conviction be sentenced to death.

5. In other cases, if no such direction is given, the jury shall be permitted to separate.

6. No formal adjournment of the court shall hereafter be required, and no entry thereof in the Crown book shall be necessary.

Origin]-55-56 Vict., Can., ch. 40, sec. 1; sec. 673, Code of 1892.

Separation in a capital case]—If the jury in a capital case has illegally been allowed to separate and they are discharged, the same jurymen, or some of them, are liable to be drawn on the second jury and such is not a ground of error, at least where there is no challenge. R. v. Luparello, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 89, 25 Man. R. 233, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 24.

The objection should be raised before verdict. R. v. Peter, (1869) 1 B.C.R. pt. 1, p. 2.

Separation in non-capital cases]-Only in case substantial prejudice has resulted, will the temporary absence of a juror for a few minutes during the trial of a non-capital case, be a ground for reversing the verdict. R. v. MacLean, 39 N.S.R. 147, 1 E.L.R. 334, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 283; R. v. McClung, (1891) 1 Terr. L.R. 379.

Jury permitted to separate on adjournment]—The corresponding English statute, the Juries Detention Act, 1897, Imp., ch. 20, came up for consideration in R. v. Twiss, (1919) 88 L.J.K.B. 20, before the court of Criminal Appeal. Mr. Justice Darling said the tendency of the legislature had been to trust jurymen more and to relax the old rule with regard to them, and it could not be supposed that the legislature had not foreseen that jurymen would speak to outsiders about the case. While it is advisable that jurymen should not discuss the trial with any but their fellow jurors, and in particular should not discuss the case with any of the witnesses, the question on appeal is whether there may have been an injustice done to the accused. If nothing occurred to prejudice a fair trial, the verdict will stand. R. v. Twiss, supra.

Adjournment of court and jury to another place by consent]—With the consent of both the prosecution and defence counsel, the court and jury may adjourn to a private house to take the evidence of a witness who is incapacitated from attending elsewhere to give his testimony. R. v. Rogers, 36 N.B.R. 1, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 419.

Jurors may have fire and light and refreshments.

946. Jurors, after having been sworn, shall be allowed at any time before giving their verdict the use of fire and light when out of court, and shall also be allowed reasonable refreshment.

Origin]-Sec. 674, Code of 1892; 53 Viet., Can., ch. 57, sec. 21.

Jury to be supplied with refreshments]--Jurors while deliberating are to be allowed "reasonable refreshment"; and a jury ought always to be treated as needing food at usual times just as much as the officers of the court. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 405 (Alta.). But where the jury were kept without food from 2 to 10 p.m., at which time refreshments were served, and they brought in a verdict at 11 p.m., the verdict was upheld, as it did not appear that there had been any substantial wrong. R. v. Murray and Mahoney, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404 (Alta.). The court there held that the possibility of prejudice to the accused (sec. 1019) was not serious enough to consider. If there has been a failure to provide the jury with refreshments or the use of fire and light, and the trial judge learns of this before verdict, he should decide whether or not there has been a mistrial, and if of opinion that there had, he should then discharge the jury and direct a trial de novo. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, at 407, 10 Alta. L.R. 275, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 247.

947. In any criminal proceeding commenced or prosecuted for publishing any extract from, or abstract of, any paper containing defamatory matter, which has been published by order or under the authority of the Senate, House of Commons or any legislative council, legislative assembly or house of assembly, such paper may be given in evidence, and it may be shown that such extract or abstract was published in good faith and without ill-will to the person defamed, and if such is the opinion of the jury, a verdict of not guilty shall be entered for the defendant.

Origin]-Sec. 705, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 163, sec. 8. Libel in parliamentary papers]-Code sec. 321.

Evidence in case of polygamy.

948. In the case of any indictment under sec. 310 (b), (c) and (d), no averment or proof of the method in which the sexual relationship charged was entered into, agreed to or consented to, shall be necessary in any such indictment, or upon the trial of the person thereby charged; nor shall it be necessary upon such trial to prove carnal connection had or intended to be had between the persons implicated.

Origin]-Sec. 706, Code of 1892; 53 Viet., Can., ch. 37, sec. 11. Polygamous cohabitation]-Code sec. 310, sub-secs. (b), (c) and (d).

Full offence charged .- Attempt proved.

949. When the complete commission of an offence charged is not proved but the evidence establishes an attempt to commit the offence, the accused may be convicted of such attempt and punished accordingly.

Origin]—Sec. 711, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 183; 14-15 Vict., Imp., ch. 100, sec. 9.

Convicting for attempt on charge of full offence]—It is open to the jury to believe any part of any evidence and disbelieve any other part, and the evidence may be such that the jury trying a charge for a completed offence can find an intent, and with that intent an act done looking to the commission of the offence and that the act failed of effect; in that case a verdict may be rendered for the attempt. R. v. McCarthy, 41 O.L.R. 153. But if there was no reasonable evidence of any intention to commit the crime and the case on the particular facts was either the commission of the crime charged or nothing, a verdict for an attempt only is not warranted. R. v. Menary, 23 O.L.R. 323, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 237; R. v. Hamilton, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 251 (Ont.); R. v. Morgan (No. 2) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 272, 3 O.L.R. 356.

A man can be guilty of attempting to do what is in fact impossible. Code sec. 72; Welch v. Russell (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1038, 1039; R. v. Ring, (1892) 61 L.J.M.C. 116; R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q.B. 320. See as to attempts generally, Code sec. 72; R. v. Linneker, [1906] 2 K.B. 99, 21 Cox C.C. 196.

It may be a misdirection under some circumstances not to distinguish to the jury an attempt from an intention or a threat. R. v. Landow, (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 218; R. v. Robinson, (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 124; R. v. Eagleton, 1 Dears. C.C. 515, 24 L.J.M.C. 158.

Attempt charged .- Full offence proved .- Res judicata.

950. When an attempt to commit an offence is charged but the evidence establishes the commission of the full offence, the accused shall not be entitled to be acquitted, but the jury may convict him of the attempt, unless the court before which such trial is had thinks fit, in its discretion, to discharge the jury from giving any verdict upon such trial, and to direct such person to be indicted for the complete offence.

2. After a conviction for such attempt the accused shall not be liable to be tried again for the offence which he was charged with attempting to commit.

Origin]-Sec. 712, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 184.

Theft attempt is proved by evidence of full offence]—Where a prisoner is indicted for an attempt to steal, and the proof establishes that the offence of larceny was actually committed, the jury may convict of the attempt, unless the court discharges the jury and directs that the prisoner be indicted for the complete offence. R. v. Taylor, 4 Quc. Q.B. 226, (1895) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 39. R. v. Hamilton (1897) 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 251; R. v. McCarthy, 41 O.L.R. 153, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 448.

Offence charged.-Part only proved.-Conviction for manslaughter on charge of murder.

951. Every count shall be deemed divisible; and if the commission of the offence charged, as described in the enactment creating the offence or as charged in the count, includes the commission of any other offence, the person accused may be convicted of any offence so included which is proved, although the whole offence charged is not proved; or he may be convicted of an attempt to commit any offence so included.

2. On a count charging murder, if the evidence proves manslaughter but does not prove murder, the jury may find the accused not guilty of murder but guilty of manslaughter, but shall not on that count find the accused guilty of any other offence.

Origin]-Sec. 713, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 191.

Every count divisible]—A "count" includes any information, indictment, pleading or record, and therefore sec. 951 is held to apply to a summary trial under Part XVI. R. v. Coolen, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 157, 36 N.S.R. 510; R. v. McEwan, 7 Man. R 477, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 346.

Conviction for an included lesser offence which is proved]—Under the present sec. 951 of the Code on a charge of robbery with violence and wounding there is nothing to prevent the jury, if they acquit of the robbery, from finding a verdict of common assault under sec. 201 of the Code, or of unlawful wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm under sec. 274, for the prisoners are charged not only with an assault simpliciter in connection with the robbery "by means of violence then and there used by them against the person of the said T. M.," but the indictment concludes with the words: "and that at the time they so robbed the said T. M. as aforesaid they did wound the said T. M.," R. v. Edmonstone, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 125, 15 O.L.R. 325. Osler, J.A., said in that ease: If the judge allows the indictment to go generally to the jury it is not competent for him to withdraw from their consideration a verdict for any lesser included offence. R. v. Scherf, 13 B.C.R. 407, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 382.

Sec. 951 has been relied upon to support a conviction on summary trial for assault occasioning actual bodily harm on a charge of occasioning grievous bodily harm by an assault. R. v. Adonchuk [1919] 1 W.W.R. 987 (Alta.); compare R. v. Sharpe, 20 Man. R. 555, 18 W.L.R. 55, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 132; R. v. Prokopate, 6 W.W.R. 405, 7 Sask. L.R. 95; R. v. Law, 9 W.W.R. 1075 (Alta.).

Where a crime of less degree than that charged in the indictment and for which lesser crime a verdict might be given under Code sec. 951, is presented on the evidence, the jury must be instructed regarding such lesser crime as well as the greater crime stated in the indictment. R. v. Daley, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 168, 39 N.B.R. 411.

It is within the province of the jury to believe, if it sees fit to do so, a part only of a witness' testimony and to disbelieve the remainder of the same witness' testimony, and it may therefore credit the testimony in respect of a greater offence only in so far as it shows a lesser offence. R. v. Hamilton, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 251 (Ont.); R. v. McCarthy, 41 O.L.R. 153, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 448, 13 O.W.N. 210.

Where, on a trial for murder, the evidence was that the deceased had been killed by a gunshot wound inflicted through the discharge of a gun in the hands of the accused, and the defence was that the gun had been discharged accidentally, and no case of culpable homicide of less degree than murder was presented on the evidence, there could be no objection to a charge by the trial judge to the jury that the offence could not be reduced by them from murder to manslaughter but that their verdict should be either for acquittal or one of guilty of murder. Gilbert v. The King, 38 S.C.R. 284, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 127. To same effect, see R. v. Barrett, (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 464 (Sask.). It does not follow that because a lesser offence is included in the greater offence charged, that the judge must direct them on such lesser offence; he should do so where the interests of justice are not met without such direction. R. v. Parrott (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 186, 193.

At common law a defendant might be convicted of a less aggravated felony or misdemeanour on an indictment charging a felony or misdemeanour of greater aggravation, provided that the indictment contained words apt to include both offences. R. v. O'Brien, 27 Times L.R. 204; Archbold Cr. Pldg., 24th ed., 228.

On indictment for murder, conviction may be of concealment of birth.

952. If any person tried for the murder of any child is acquitted thereof, the jury by whose verdict such person is acquitted may find, in case it so appears in evidence, that the child had recently been born, and that such person did, by some secret disposition of such child or of the dead body of such child, endeavour to conceal the birth thereof, and thereupon the court may pass such sentence as it might have passed if such person had been convicted upon an indictment for the concealment of birth.

Origin]—Sec. 714, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 188; 24-25 Vict., Imp., ch. 100, sec. 60.

Concealment of birth]-See sec. 272.

Charge for cattle stealing.—Conviction for fraudulently dealing with cattle.

953. When an offence under sec. 369 is charged and not proved, but the evidence establishes an offence under sec. 392, the accused may be convicted of such latter offence and punished accordingly.

Origin]-Sec. 714A, Code of 1892; 1 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 42, sec. 2. Cattle stealing]-See sec. 369.

Fraudulently taking cattle or defacing brands]-See sec. 392.

[§954] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Trial of joint receivers.

954. If, upon the trial of two or more persons indicted for jointly receiving any property, it is proved that one or more of such persons separately received any part or parts of such property, the jury may convict, upon such indictment, such of the said persons as are proved to have received any part or parts of such property.

Trial for coinage offences.-General resemblance sufficient.

955. Upon the trial of any person accused of any offence respecting the currency or coin, or against the provisions of Part IX relating to coin, no difference in the date or year, or in any legend marked upon the lawful coin described in the indictment, and the date or year or legend marked upon the false coin counterfeited to resemble or pass for such lawful coin, or upon any die, plate, press, tool or instrument used, constructed, devised, adapted or designed for the purpose of counterfeiting or imitating any such lawful coin, shall be considered a just or lawful cause or reason for acquitting any such person of such offence; and it shall, in any case, be sufficient to prove such general resemblance to the lawful coin as will show an intention that the counterfeit should pass for it.

Offence respecting the currency]—See the Currency Act, 9-10 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 14, and the Dominion Notes Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 27, 1908, Can., ch. 23, 1914 Can. (2nd session) 4, 1915 Can., ch. 4.

Forgery of government notes]—See secs. 335 (h), 335 (i), 466-468. 471.

Verdict in cases of libel.—Jury may find special verdict.—Arrest of judgment.

956. On the trial of any indictment or information for the making or publishing of any defamatory libel, on the plea of not guilty pleaded, the jury sworn to try the issue may give a general verdict of guilty or not guilty upon the whole matter put in issue upon such indictment or information, and shall not be required or directed, by the court or judge before whom such indictment or information is tried, to find the defendant guilty merely on the proof of publication by such defendant of the paper charged to be a defamatory libel, and of the sense ascribed to the same in such indictment or information; but the court or judge before whom such trial is had shall, according to the discretion of such court or judge to the jury on the matter in issue as in other criminal cases; and the jury may, on such issue, find a special verdict if they think fit so to do.

2. The defendant, if found guilty, may move in arrest of judgment on such ground and in such manner as heretofore.

Origin]—Sec. 719, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 152; 7-8 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 18, sec. 12; 32 Geo. III, Imp., ch. 60.

"May give a general verdict"]—It is for the jury to say whether under the facts proved there is libel and whether the defendant published it. R. v. Dougall (1874) 18 L.C. Jur. 85.

"May find a special verdict"]--This is in accordance with the common law under which a jury in any criminal case had the right to find a special verdict. R. v. Staines, L.B. 15 Times L.R. 25, 52 J.P. 358, 60 L.T. 261; R. v. Dudley, 54 L.J.M.C. 32, 14 Q.B.D. 273.

Arrest of judgment]-See sec. 1007.

Ordering counterfeit coin to be destroyed.

957. If any false or counterfeit coin is produced on any trial for an offence against the provisions of Part IX relating to coin, the court shall order the same to be cut to pieces in open court, or in the presence of a justice, and then to be delivered to or for the lawful owner thereof, if such owner claims the same.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Origin]—Sec. 721, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 209. Proving coin to be counterfeit]—See secs. 955, 980.

Justification of person to whom tendered in cutting a counterfeit or diminished coin]-See the Currency Act, 1910, Can., ch. 14.

View.-Control of jury.

[§ 957]

958. On the trial of any person for an offence against this Act, the court may, if it appears expedient for the ends of justice, at any time after the jurors have been sworn to try the case and before they give their verdict, direct that the jury shall have a view of any place, thing or person, and shall give directions as to the manner in which, and the person by whom, the place, thing or person shall be shown to such jurors, and may for that purpose adjourn the trial, and the costs occasioned thereby shall be in the discretion of the court.

2. When such view is ordered, the court shall give such directions as seem requisite for the purpose of preventing undue communication with such jurors: Provided that no breach of any such directions shall affect the validity of the proceedings.

Origin]—Sec. 722, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 171; 15-16 Vict., Imp., ch. 76, sec. 114.

View by jury]-It is in the discretion of the court to allow a view or not; and in an English case it was held that there was no irregularity in allowing the jury to have a view of the premises where the offence was alleged to have been committed, even after the judge had summed up the case. Reg. v. Martin, L.R. 1 C.C.R. 378, 12 Cox C.C. 204, 41 L.J.M.C. 113. The defendant's counsel must have the opportunity of attending. R. v. Petrie (1890) 20 Ont. R. 317, 324. Sec. 958 applies only to views by a jury, and it is questionable whether a county judge's criminal court trying a case without a jury can take a view except by consent. R. v. Petrie, supra; R. v. Redman, 1 Kenvon, 384; R. v. Whalley, 2 Cox 231, 2 C. & K. 376. A magistrate holding a summary trial under Part XVI for an indictable offence has no power to take a view, at least without the consent of both the prosecutor and the accused. R. v. Crawford, (1912) 3 W.W.R. 731, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 70, 18 B.C.R. 20. A justice hearing a summary conviction matter is probably under the same disability. Re Sing Kee, 8 B.C.R. 20, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 86.

Jury considering verdict.

959. If the jury retire to consider their verdict they shall be kept under the charge of an officer of the court in some private place, and no person other than the officer of the court who has charge of them shall be permitted to speak or to communicate in any way with any of the jury without the leave of the court.

2. Disobedience to the directions of this section shall not affect the validity of the proceedings.

3. If such disobedience is discovered before the verdict of the jury is returned the court, if it is of opinion that such disobedience might lead to a miscarriage of justice, may discharge the jury and direct a new jury to be sworn or empanelled during the sitting of the court, or postpone the trial on such terms as justice may require.

Non-communication with jury while deliberating]—In R. v. Ketteridge, [1915] 1 K.B. 467, 84 L.J.K.B. 352, 11 Cr. App. R. 54, a juror had separated himself from his colleagues and left the building where the trial was being held, and had to be found and brought back before the jury could find a verdict. It was held that the whole proceedings should be begun afresh with a new jury. R. v. Ketteridge, supra, explained in R. v. Twiss (1919) 88 L.J.K.B. 20. Under sub-sec. (3) of sec. 959, such a course is necessary only if the court is of opinion that disobedience of the statutory direction might lead to "a miscarriage of justice."

No communication whatever may be made to a jury deliberating on its verdict except on the request or by the permission of the judge; and where the clerk of assize on being sent to find if the jury had agreed, was asked questions relating to the case by the jurymen, and discussed it with them, the conviction was quashed, where the appellate court was unable to find that, but for the discussion and advice given by the clerk of assize, the jury would have come to an unanimous conclusion. R. v. Willmont, (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 173; and see Goby v. Wetherill [1915] 2 K.B. 674; R. v. Barnes, (1907) 42 N.S.R. 55.

The illegal presence of a stranger in the jury room for a considerable time during the jury's deliberations may be a ground for setting aside the verdict and ordering a new trial if prejudice is likely to have resulted therefrom. Goby v. Wetherill [1915] 2 K.B. 674; 84 L.J.K.B. 1455; 31 Times L.R. 402, cited in Veronneau v. The King, 54 S.C.R. 7; and see Code sec. 1019. But a note sent by the jury to the judge may be answered without infringing the rule, if the answer is not in the nature of instructions. R. v. Batterman (1915) 34 O.L.R. 225, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 351.

Where the judge on request of the jury for further instructions went to the jury-room with the prisoner and the sheriff and gave further instructions in the absence of the Crown counsel, the verdict was upheld. Greer v. The Queen (1892) 2 B.C.R. 112. It is not expedient for the judge to communicate with the jury except in open court. Greer v. The Queen, supra.

As to communication with a jury when permitted to separate, see sec. 945.

Reasonable doubt]—As said by Coleridge, J., in R. v. Flood (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 227: "A jury must be sure beyond reasonable doubt, and they ought to be unanimous and clear in their belief in the 'identity of the man charged, before convicting. A compromise verdict is a very undesirable thing in any circumstances. In a criminal case involving the liberty of the subject, it is not only undesirable, it is wrong."

An accused person is presumed to be innocent until he is proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, and the presumption of innocence, therefore, cannot be shifted at the point where the evidence merely tends or inclines in the direction of guilt. R. v. Schurman, 7 W.W.B. 680. 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 365. In Reg. v. White, 4 F. & F. 383, at 384, Martin, B., is reported to have instructed the jury: "that, in order to enable them to return a verdict against the prisoner, they must be satisfied, beyond any reasonable doubt, of his guilt; and this as a conviction created in their minds, not merely as a matter of probability; and if it was only an impression of probability, their duty was to acquit."

This case, though decided in 1865, has always been regarded as laying down the rule correctly. R. v. Schurman, 23 Can. Cr Cas. 365, 19 D.L.R. 800, 30 W.L.R. 56, 7 W.W.R. 680, 7 Sask. L.R. 269; R. v. Krafchenko, 6 W.W.R. 836, 24 Man. R. 652, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 277.

Taylor on Evidence, 10th ed., lays down the rule as follows (p. 113):—" One of the most important of disputable legal presumptions is that of innocence. This, in legal phraseology, 'gives the benefit of a doubt to the accused,' and is so cogent, that it cannot be repelled by any evidence short of what is sufficient to establish the fact of criminality with moral certainty. In civil disputes, when no violation of the law is in question, and no legal presumption operates in favour of either party, the preponderance of probability, due regard being had to the burden of proof, may constitute sufficient ground for a verdict. To affix on any person the stigma of crime requires, however, a higher degree of assurance; and juries will not be justified in taking such a step, except on evidence which excludes from their minds all reasonable doubt."

Mathers, C.J., in the case of R. v. Krafchenko, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 836, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 277, at 296, 24 Man. R. 652, said:--- "I have told you that you should not convict if you have a reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt. By the term reasonable doubt I do not mean a possible doubt, but an actual and substantial doubt. A juror may not create materials of doubt by resorting to trivial suppositions and remote conjectures as to a possible state of facts different from that established by the evidence. If, after a fair and impartial consideration of all the evidence in the case both for the Crown and for the defence, you have an abiding conviction of the guilt of the defendant and are fully satisfied to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge made against him, then you are satisfied beyond reasonable doubt; but if the evidence has left you in that condition of mind that you cannot say you feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge, then you have a reasonable doubt." See also ex parte Feinberg, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 270 (Que.); R. v. Riendeau, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 293, 14 Que. K.B. S7; R. v. Fouquet, 14 Que. K.B. 97, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 265.

It is not necessary that each fact essential to a crime should be proven by direct evidence; it is sufficient if such fact can properly be inferred to exist from all the circumstances of the case. R. v. Davidson, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 160, 169, 11 Alta. L.R. 9, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 44; R. v. James, 9 W.W.R. 235, 32 W.L.R. 528, 9 Alta. L.R. 66; 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23.

A jury cannot properly find an accused person guilty unless the evidence is such as to establish his guilt with moral certainty or beyond a reasonable doubt or such as to exclude any other reasonable hypothesis than that of his guilt. R. v. O'Neil, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 1321, 1352, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 323, 9 Alta. L.R. 365, per Beck, J.; R. v. Styce, 20 N.L.L.R. 744; R. v. Schama (1914) 11 Cr. App. R. 45, 84 L.J.K.B. 396; R. v. Badash, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 732.

Polling the jury]—The judge may send the jury back for further deliberation when, upon being polled, one of them said, "not guilty," dissenting from the verdict of "guilty," as announced by the foreman. R. v. Burdell, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 365, 11 O.L.R. 440, 7 O.W.R. 164. When the jury is polled any juror may dissent from the verdict as announced, and where one or more of the jurors dissent therefrom there can be no valid verdict. R. v. Burdell, supra.

The rule is that until their verdict has been recorded, or they have been discharged as unable to agree, their connection with the case has not come to an end. R. v. Burdell, supra.

If no request was made to poll the jury and the verdict was duly assented to and recorded, the court will not receive the affidavit of a juror to impeach the same on the ground that he in fact dissented, but had assumed that ten carried the verdict as in civil cases in the same jurisdiction and therefore raised no protest. R. v. Mullen, 5 O.L.R. 373, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 363.

Reconsidering the verdict before verdict recorded]—A judge is not bound (unless the jury insist on having it recorded) to receive the first verdict which the jury give provided there is any ambiguity, but may direct them to reconsider it; and the verdict which the jury ultimately return is the verdict to be recorded. R. v. Crisp, (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 173, qualifying the statement of the law given in Archbold's Crim. Pleading, 24th ed., 234; R. v. Burdell, 11 O.L.R. 440, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 365; R. v. Meany, (1862) 9 Cox C.C. 231, 32 L.J.M.C. 24; R. v. Yeadon, (1861) 9 Cox C.C. 91, 31 L.J.M.C. 70, L. & C. 81. But where the verdict is free from ambiguity it should be accepted. R. v. Gray, (1891) 17 Cox C.C. 299; R. v. Wasvl Kapij, (1905) 15 Man. R. 110, 1 W.L.R. 130. Where the verdict on a charge of an attempt to commit suicide was "guilty, but of unconscious mind," Channell, J., thought that the jury intended to acquit and "the jury might possibly have insisted on its being taken as a verdict of not guilty." R. v. Crisp (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 173. It is said that a jury may correct their verdict, or that any of them may withhold assent and express dissent therefrom at any time before it is finally entered and confirmed. R. v. Ford, (1853) 3 U.C.C.P. 217 (Ont.); R. v. Rice (1902) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 509 (Ont.); and the judge presiding over a criminal court cannot be too cautious in being assured that, when a result so serious to the party accused as a verdict of guilty is arrived at, all the jury understand the effect and concur in the decision: and if at any moment, before the recording anything occurs to excite the judge's suspicion on this subject, he should carefully assure himself that there is no misapprehension in the matter. R. v. Ford, (1853) 3 U.C.C.P. 209, 217.

Where part of the verdict on a forgery charge was not clear as it found the accused guilty of participating in the forgery and its proceeds, but not of forging or uttering, the trial judge properly directed the jury to reconsider their verdict, and a general verdict of guilty thereupon returned on all counts was upheld. R. v. Hutchinson, (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 19.

Upon the trial of an indictment for wounding with intent to disable, a verdict of "guilty without malicious intent" is equivalent to a verdict of acquittal, although the jury were instructed that if intent to disable were negatived they might still convict of the simple offence of wounding. Such verdict is to be construed as a finding that the act of the accused which resulted in wounding the complainant was done without malice. Slaughenwhite v. The King, 35 S.C.R. 607, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 173.

Verdict on various counts for same act]—When the same act is differently charged in various counts, the court may construe a verdict of guilty upon all as if it was limited to the least offence alleged. R. v. Johnston, 9 Cr. App. R. 262; Kelly v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282; R. v. Norman, [1915] 1 K.B. 341; R. v. Lockett [1914] 2 K.B. 720.

Prisoner acquitted on one indictment but held on further charge]-

When a prisoner has been acquitted the judge has no right to deal with his previous convictions by announcing them to the jury he is discharging, particularly where there is another charge to be tried. R. v. Smith (No. 2) 87 L.J.K.B. 676.

[§ 959]

Discretion to discharge a jury on disagreement.

960. If the court is satisfied that the jury are unable to agree upon their verdict, and that further detention would be useless, it may in its discretion discharge them and direct a new jury to be empanelled during the sittings of the court, or may postpone the trial on such terms as justice may require.

2. It shall not be lawful for any court to review the exercise of this discretion,

Origin]-Sec. 728, Code of 1892.

Discharge of jury before verdict]—The discharge of the jury before they have given their verdict operates as if there had been no trial at all. R. v. Richardson, [1913] 1 K.B. 395, 8 Cr. App. R. 159, 162. It has been doubted whether it is essential that the accused shall be present when the jury is discharged. R. v. Richardson, supra.

"Direct a new jury to be impanelled "]—A new jury is to be impanelled for the trial of the charge, but it is not necessary that a second venire should issue. R. v. Gaffin, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 194 (N.S.). On a second trial at the same sittings on a disagreement of the first jury, it is unnecessary to again read the indictment to the accused or to ask him again to plead to it. R. v. Gaffin, supra.

Stay by Attorney General after indictment.

962. The Attorney General may, at any time after an indictment has been found against any person for any offence and before judgment is given thereon, direct the officer of the court to make on the record an entry that the proceedings are stayed by his direction, and on such entry being made all such proceedings shall be stayed accordingly.

2. The Attorney General may delegate such power in any particular court to any counsel nominated by him.

Origin]-Sec. 732, Code of 1892.

"After an indictment has been found"]-In Alberta and Saskatchewan where there is no grand jury system, the formal charge brought under sec. 873A is to be considered an indictment. Code sec. 2, subsec. (16). But until the formal charge is laid, there is no indictment against which to enter a stay under sec. 962. R. v. Weiss (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1160, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 460 (Sask.).

Recording a stay of proceedings]—This section provides a procedure which is substantially the same as that formerly known as nolle prosequi. It may be taken in lieu of an application by the Crown to discharge the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses. R. v. Treakley (1852), 6 Cox CC. 75.

The Attorney-General may stay the proceedings ex parte and without calling on the prosecutor to show cause why he should not do so. R. v. Allen (1862), 1 B. & S. 850. A stay is proper where any improper and vexatious attempts are made to oppress the defendant, as by repeatedly preferring defective indictments for the same supposed offence; 1 W. Bl. 545; or if it be clear that an indictment is not sustainable against the defendant. 1 Chitty Cr. Law, 479. It was also commonly granted in cases of misdemeanour where a civil action was depending for the same cause. R. v. Fielding (1759), 2 Burr. 719; Jones v. Clay (1798), 1 B. & P. 191. The party accused will remain liable to be again indicted upon the charge. Archabold Cr. Pl. (1900), 127; R. v. Spence (1919) 16 O.W.N. 9.

A nolle prosequi may be entered by the Crown in a libel prosecution instituted by a private prosecutor. R. v. Blackley, 13 Que. K.B. 472, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 405.

Nolle prosequi in Ontario]—Sec. 904, dealing specially with delays in prosecutions instituted by the Attorney-General of Ontario gives a right in that province to the defendant to bring on the trial "unless a nolle prosequi is entered to such prosecution."

Where previous offence charged.—Arraignment on subsequent offence.—Trial as to previous offence.

963. Upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions, the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and if he pleads not guilty, or if the court orders a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only; and if the jury finds him guilty, or if, on arraignment he pleads guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he was so previously convicted as alleged in the indictment.

2. If he answers that he was so previously convicted, the court may proceed to sentence him accordingly, but if he denies that he was so previously convicted, or stands mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions, and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall, for all purposes, be deemed to extend to such last mentioned inquiry.

Subsequent offence to be first determined]—Sees. 851 and 963 of the Code provide for the form of indictment and procedure in the case of a person charged with an offence for which a greater punishment may be inflicted by reason of such previous conviction. The indictment must state that the offence or offences (see. 851). Under sec. 963 the defendant shall be arraigned in the first instance upon so much only of the indictment as relates to the subsequent offence, and if he pleads not guilty the trial proceeds upon the subsequent offence, and, if convicted, the defendant then is asked if he was previously convicted, and if he does not admit it the jury shall then be charged to inquire as to such previous conviction. Archbold, Criminal Pleading, 24th ed., 564, 1066, 1081; R. v. Allen, Russ. and Ry. 512; R. v. Willis, L.R. 1 CC. 363; R. v. Thomas, L.R. 2 C.C.R. 141; R. v. Martin, 1 C.C.R. 214.

When a prisoner is convicted, on a summary trial before a police magistrate, of theft, he cannot be sentenced to the added penalty under sub-sec. 2 of sec. 386 of the Code, for theft after a previous conviction, although he had been previously convicted of theft, unless such previous conviction was charged in the information by analogy to sec. 851 and proved in accordance with sec. 963, and, where in such a case a greater punishment was inflicted than could be imposed without regard to sec. 386 (2), the Court of Appeal, upon an application under sub-sec. 2 of sec. 1016 of the Code, will set aside the sentence and pass what it considers a proper sentence. R. v. Edwards, 17 Man. R. 288, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 202.

Sections 851 and 963 of the Criminal Code as to the procedure in case of a charge for a second or subsequent offence involving an increased penalty, apply only to indictable offences. R. v. Cruikshanks (1914), 6 W.W.R. 524, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 23, 7 Alta. L.R. 92, 27 W.L.R. 759.

Part XV of the Criminal Code (summary convictions) contains no provision requiring the magistrate on the trial of a charge for a second offence involving a greater punishment than for a first, to proceed first as to the later offence charged, and not to ask the defendant whether he had been previously convicted for the like offence until after conviction for the alleged second offence. R. v. Cruikshanks, supra.

Cross-examination of accused as to prior convictions if he gives testimony]—It was held in R. v. D'Aoust (1902), 3 O.L.R. 653, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 407, that an accused person examined as a witness on his own behalf may be cross-examined as to whether he has been previously convicted of an indictable offence, whether or not the charge upon which he is being tried sets out the fact of a previous conviction, and although no evidence of good character has been adduced for the defence; it being held that the question is relevant to the issue as affecting the credibility of the accused as a witness.

The right, and if such it can be called, the privilege of the accused now is to tender himself as a witness. When he does so he puts himself forward as a credible person, and except in so far as he may be shielded by some statutory protection, he is in the same situation as any other witness as regards liability to and extent of cross-examination. R. v. D'Aoust, supra.

Correcting improper reference to a previous conviction]—Lord Alverstone, C.J., in delivering the judgment of the court consisting of five judges, in R. v. Bridgewater [1905] 1 K.B. 131, said: "It must not be thought that because counsel for a prisoner allows a question as to a previous conviction to be put without objection he can afterwards set aside the conviction on the ground of the inadmissibility of such a question. He cannot stand aside and allow an improper question to be put and afterwards rely upon that question as a ground for quashing the conviction. In this case and under the circumstances, if the learned recorder had told the jury that they were to disregard the prisoner's answer as to his having been previously convicted, this court would not, I think, have been inclined to interfere."

The latter dictum was expressly concurred in in Rex v. Hudson, [1912] 2 K.B. 464, 7 Cr. App. R. 256, by Lord Alverstone and four other judges.

But it may not be sufficient always for the judge to correct an improper admission of evidence by his direction to the jury. In Rex v Rose (1898), 18 Cox 717, in which an involuntary confession had been received which did go to the jury, the conviction was set aside. Lord Russell, C.J., in delivering the judgment of the court at 718, said:---"A question of some delicacy then arises as to the course which the magistrates ought to have adopted. It is clear that the evidence ought not to be admitted, but ought the court to tell the jury to disregard it, or ought the court to discharge the jury and try the case again?"

The question is only raised, but not answered, in Rex v. Rose, supra. The safe course is adopted by some judges of offering to discharge the jury, which offer frequently results in the prisoner's counsel waiving that right and accepting in lieu a proper direction to the jury on the point. But as is pointed out by Harvey, C.J., in his opinion in R. v. Hurd, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 185, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 98 at 104, there are cases when such a course would not fully protect the prisoner (e.g., where an involuntary confession of guilt has been received) for a jury of laymen might find difficulty in fully accepting the refinements which have resulted in the exclusion of confessions under some circumstances and might find it hard to persuade themselves that a man who had confessed his guilt under conditions which it would appear to them would justify them in thinking he was telling the truth, was in fact not guilty.

Added punishment on second or subsequent offence]—As to coinage offences, see sec. 568; as to theft after previous conviction, sec. 386 (2); as to offences against property rights generally, under Part VII, see sec. 465; and in cases where not otherwise provided for, see sec. 1053.

Offences after previous conviction]—See secs. 370, 375-377, 386 (2), 465, 530, 533-535, 568, 851, 963, 982, 1053, 1081.

Where previous offence charged .- Evidence of character.

964. If upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence, such person gives evidence of his good character, the prosecutor may, in answer thereto, give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences, before such verdict of guilty is returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence.

Subsequent offence]—The words "any such subsequent offence" refers to the next previous sec. 963 which relates to an indictment "for committing any offence after a previous conviction." Compare sec. 1053, as to punishment of indictable offences, "committed after a previous conviction."

Evidence of character]--Evidence of character can only be as to general reputation. R. v. Rowton (1865), 10 Cox C.C. 25; R. v. Triganzie (1888), 15 Ont. R. 294; R. v. Long, 11 Que. K.B. 328.

Where evidence is adduced on behalf of the accused as to his general good character, the witnesses may be cross-examined by the prosecution as to the grounds of their belief and as to the particular facts on the question of character of which they have knowledge. R. v. Barsalou (No. 2) (1901), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 347 (Que.); R. v. D'Aoust (1902) 3 O.L.R. 653, 1 O.W.R. 344, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 407.

Practice as to jury trials continued except as altered.

965. Nothing in this Act shall alter, abridge or affect any power or authority which any court or judge has hitherto had, or any existing practice or form in regard to trials by jury, jury process, juries or jurors, except in cases where such power or authority, practice or form is expressly altered by or is inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

Origin]-Sec. 675, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 170.

Administering oath to witness]—A witness who assents to the terms of the on h administered to him with the customary formula calling upon the Deity is bound by his oath although all usual formalities were not observel in its administration. Curry v. The King, 48 S.C.R. 532, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 191; R. v. Curry, 47 N.S.R. 176, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 273, 13 E.L.R. 11; R. v. Shajoo Ram, (1914) 8 W.W.R. 613, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 334, 30 W.L.R. 65.

It is for the witness to declare what religious ceremony of taking the oath is binding on his conscience. If attention is not called to the matter until after he has taken the oath in court in the customary form, he may still be asked whether he considers the oath he has taken to be binding on his conscience. If he answers in the affirmative, he should not be further asked whether any other mode of swearing would be more binding upon his conscience than the one which has been used. R. v. Lee Tuck (1912) 2 W.W.R. 605, 613, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 471, 21 W.L.R. 669 (Alta.); The Queen's case, 2 Br. & B. 284, 22 R.R. 662. Before he is sworn, the witness may be examined by the judge, not by the clerk of the court, as to the form of oath which is binding upon his conscience. R. v. Lee Tuck (1912) 2 W.W.R. 605, 614. If without such examination and without laying any foundation for practically forcing the witness to take an oath in a form at variance with his declared religion, the witness is sworn in a different mode although conformable with the mode of swearing pagan witnesses of his country of origin, such is an arbitrary deprivation of the right of the witness to swear in accordance with his declaration of religious belief and its result is that the witness has not been properly sworn and cannot be convicted of perjury thereon. R. v. Lee Tuck (1912) 2 W.W.R. 605. 614 (Alta.).

If however the judge taking the testimony finds it necessary to discover certain facts in order to determine what form of oath is to be administered, his finding in regard to those facts will not be enquired into by the jury on the subsequent trial of the witness for perjury. R. v. Lee Tuck (1912) 2 W.W.R. 605, 606.

Judicial discrction]—In disposing of matters arising at a trial a very great deal is, of necessity, committed to the discretion of the trial judge, and courts of appeal are very loath to interfere with the exercise of such discretion. R. v. Crippen (1911) 1 K.B. 149, at p. 157, 80 L.J.K.B. 290; R. v. Mulvihill, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 1235, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354.

The following examples of absolute discretion are mentioned in R. v. Mulvihill (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 1238 (per Martin, J.A.):-(1) The right of a judge to relax the general rule of evidence and allow the Crown to give further evidence after the close of the prisoner's case: R. v. Wong On (1904) 10 B.C.R. 555; also to allow leading questions: Lauder v. Lauder (1855) 5 Ir. C.L. 29, at p. 38, approved in Ex parte Bottomley [1909] 2 K.B. 14, at p. 21, 78 L.J.K.B. 547; and see also Ohlsen v. Terrero (1874) L.R. 10, Ch. 127, 44 L.J. Ch. 155; and cf. R. v. Crippen (1911) 1 K.B. 149, 80 L.J.K.B. 290, on another point of evidence. (2) The determination of the hostility of a witness (i.e., "in case the witness shall in the opinion of the judge prove adverse, because the judge's discretion must be principally, if not wholly, guided by the witness' behaviour and language in the witness box "): Rice v. Howard (1886) 16 Q.B.D. 681, 55 L.J.Q.B. 311. (3) The granting of a view under see. 958 of The Criminal Code. (4) The discharging of the jury after disagreement and postponing the trial "on such terms as justice may require " under sec. 960 Criminal Code, which discretion by s-s. 2 it is declared that "it shall not be lawful for any court to review," differing in this respect from the right on discharging the jury to postpone under the preceding s. 959, s-s. 3. (5) The discharging of the jury without giving a verdict because of the illness or drunkenness of one of them, or otherwise: R. v. Charlesworth (1861) 1 B. & S. 460, 31 L.J.M.C. 25, at p. 47; R. v. Conway (1845) 7 L.R.Ir. 149; R. v. Lewis (1909) 78 L.J.K.B. 722, 100 L.T. 976. (6) The keeping of the jury together under s. 945, s-s. 3. And (7) The admission of the unsworn evidence of children under s. 1003 Cr. Code and s. 16 of The Canada Evidence Act, whereby the matter rests " in the opinion of the Court" or justices, etc., which is the same expression as was held to confer an absolute discretion in the second illustration, supra; (but see contra R. v. Armstrong, (1907) 15 O.L.R. 47).

Judge's power to himself call witnesses]—A judge has power to call and examine a witness who has not been called by either of the parties and if he does so neither party can cross-examine without the judge's leave. Such leave ought, however, to be granted if the evidence given is adverse to either party, but the cross-examination should be confined to the answers given and a general cross-examination should be confined to the answers given and a general cross-examination should not be permitted. R. v. Hagel (1914) 6 W.W.R. 164, 24 Man. R. 19, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 151, 154; 27 W.L.R. 271; Roscoe, Crim. Evid., 13th ed., at p. 115. Oath to witness may be administered by the acting clerk]—It is quite sufficient if the witness be sworn by an acting clerk of the court under Mistrial by misconduct of juror]-Whenever, and so soon as it appears, that any juror is actuated by improper motives, then it is certain that justice cannot be done by such a tainted tribunal and it ought to be purged of that taint. It is impossible that a judge of fact or law can do that justice which he is sworn to do between the parties if he declares his bias or prejudice against one of them. Justice is not satisfied by a rebuke to the offender but prompt action must be taken to remove him from an office that he has shown himself unfit to fill, and it is the duty of the court of its own motion, upon the discovery of such gross impropriety, to protect its litigants from the baneful results of such a scandal, by then and there discharging the jury and summoning another, just as would have to be done in the case of a juror who was discovered to be insane or had received a bribe. The consequence would be a mistrial. (B.C.) Airey v. Empire Stevedoring Co. [1914] 20 B.C.R., 130; 6 W.W.R. 1465; 28 W.L.R. 956; Lucas v. Ministerial Union [1916] 23 B.C.R. 257, at p. 262; Howard v. B.C. Electric Ry. Co. [1918] 3 W.W.R. 409, 411.

Impanelling new jury]—The illness of a juror or the illness of the prisoner will constitute a sufficient ground for discharging the jury. Winsor v. R; L.R. 1 Q.B. 390. But if a juryman has merely fainted because the court room is hot and close, it would be proper to wait a short time for his recovery so as to proceed with the same jurors; but if a juror be taken so ill that there is no likelihood of his continuing to discharge his duties without danger to his life, the jury should be discharged. Ibid.

Where, during the course of a trial, it was discovered that one of the jurors had come from a house infected with smallpox, the jury were discharged and a new jury impanelled. R. v. Considine, 8 Legal News, 307 (Que.).

A jury sworn and charged may be discharged at the desire of the accused and with the assent of the prosecution. R. v. Charlesworth, 2 F. & F. 326.

Bail on delayed prosecution]—If a prisoner charged either with treason or with an offence which would formerly have been classified as felony, is not indicted at the first court of assize after his committal he is entitled in British Columbia to bail upon a writ of habeas corpus unless it appears to the court upon oath that the witnesses for the Crown could not be procured; and if not brought to trial at the second assize, he shall be discharged from his imprisonment. R.S.B.C. 1911, Vol. IV, ch. 2, sec. 7 (31 Car. II); R. v. Dean (1913) 3 W.W.R. 781. 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, 18 B.C.R. 18.

Defence of Insanity.

Insanity of accused at time of offence.—Defence.—Special finding. —Retention in custody.

966. Whenever evidence is given upon the trial of any person charged with an indictable offence, that such person was insane at the time of the commission of such offence, the jury, if they acquit such person, shall be required to find, specially, whether such person was insane at the time of the commission of such offence, and to declare whether he is acquitted by it on account of such insanity.

2. If the jury finds that such person was insane at the time of committing such offence, the court before which such trial is had shall order such person to be kept in strict custody in such place and in such manner as to the court seems fit, until the pleasure of the lieutenant governor is known.

Origin]-Sec. 736, Code of 1892, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174,-sec. 252; 14 and 15 Viet. (1851), ch. 83; Lunatics Act (Eng.) 1800; Lunatics Act (Eng.) 3 and 4 Viet., ch. 54; Trial of Lunatics Act 1883, Imp., ch. 38, sec. 2.

Acquittal on account of insanity]-A "special verdict" under clauses somewhat similar to Code secs. 966-969 contained in the English Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, that the accused did the act charged but was at the time insane so as not to be responsible for his actions, was held to be a verdict of acquittal as regards the crime, and, in consequence, the accused could not appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal against the finding of insanity. Felstead v. The King [1914] A.C. 534, 10 Cr. App. R. 129, 83 L.J.K.B. 1132 (H.L.), affirming R. v. Felstead, 9 Cr. App. R. 228; R. v. Machardy, [1911] 2 K.B. 1144, 28 Times L.R. 2, 6 Cr. App. R. 272. The decision in R. v. Ireland [1910] 1 K.B. 654. 4 Cr. App. R. 74 was overruled by the Felstead case. The Criminal Appeal Act (Eng.) only gave a right of appeal to a "person convicted" on indictment. If he was a lunatic at the time the act was committed, he is "not a criminal and is not convicted of any offence." Lord Reading, L.C.J., in R. v. Felstead (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 129, at 137 (H.L.), and see R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 550; 1 Hale's Pleas of the Crown, 28. But as the Code gives a right of appeal to the prosecutor (sees. 1014, 1015) as well as to the accused, a case may be reserved at the instance of the Crown upon the question of law whether there was any evidence of insanity to support the acquittal on that ground. R. v. Phinney, (No. 1), 36 N.S.R. 264; R. v. Phinney (No. 2), 36 N.S.R. 288. If there is any evidence of insanity to go to the jury, the weight of such evidence is entirely for them and cannot be reviewed on appeal; R. v. Phinney (No. 2), supra; and an application under sec. 1021 by leave of the trial court for a new trial on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence is available only to the accused and not to the prosecution. It is not enough that the evidence shows that the accused was "to a certain extent off his mental balance, if it appears that notwithstanding his mental infimity he knew the nature and quality of the act which he did." R. v. Jones, (1910) 6 Cr. App. R. 207; Code sec. 19 and notes to same; R. v. McLaren, (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 107; R. v. Alexander. 9 Cr. App. R. 139.

A plea of insanity need only be established by a preponderance of evidence; it need not be made out beyond any reasonable doubt. R. v. Anderson (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1052, 7 Alta. L.R. 102, 26 W.L.R. 783, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 455.

The defence is not bound to give previous notice that medical evidence of the prisoner's mental condition will be called on his behalf. R. v. Smith, (1912) 8 Cr. App. R. 72.

When it is clear from the cross-examination on behalf of the prisoner that the defence to a murder charge will be insanity, and it is ascertained that no witnesses will be called to prove it, it is the proper practice for the judge, at the close of the case for the Crown, to allow medical evidence as to the prisoner's sanity to be called by the prosecution. R. v. Abramovitch, (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 145. The practice where insanity is suggested is stated thus by Channell, J., in the last mentioned case: "In cases where there may possibly be a suggestion that the prisoner was insane, it is usual to consult a medical officer, and to get a report from him about the prisoner's state of mind. If the report says that the prisoner is, or is probably, insane, it may be useful evidence, for the defence, and the practice is to hand a copy of the report to the defending counsel, so that he may use it if he chooses to do so. If the report is adverse, and says that there is no reason to suppose that the prisoner is insane, it is of no use to the defence. It is not likely to be refused, if asked for, but there is no obligation to give it, and assuming it became necessary in the course of the trial to make it evidence, it is no objection to its admissibility that a copy of the report had not been given to the defence."

Sub-sec. (2)—"To be kept in strict custody"]—The detention is upon an indeterminate sentence of imprisonment and on a commitment to an insane asylum the asylum is a "prison" so as to constitute it a crime to assist in an escape therefrom. R. v. Trapnell (1910) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 346 (Ont.).

Insanity.-Incapacity to conduct defence.-Trial of issue.

967. If at any time after the indictment is found, and before the verdict is given, it appears to the court that there is sufficient reason to doubt whether the accused is then, on account of insanity, capable of conducting his defence, the court may direct that an issue shall be tried whether the accused is or is not then, on account of insanity, unfit to take his trial.

[§ 966]

2. If such issue is directed before the accused is given in charge to a jury for trial on the indictment, such issue shall be tried by any twelve jurors.

3. If such issue is directed after the accused has been given in charge to a jury for trial on the indictment, such jury shall be sworn to try this issue in addition to that on which they are already sworn.

4. If the verdict on this issue is that the accused is not then unfit to take his trial, the arraignment or the trial shall proceed as if no such issue had been directed.

5. If the verdict is that he is unfit on account of insanity, the court shall order the accused to be kept in custody till the pleasure of the lieutenant governor of the province shall be known, and any plea pleaded shall be set aside and the jury shall be discharged.

6. No such proceeding shall prevent the accused being afterwards tried on such indictment.

Origin]—Sec. 737, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 252, 255. Insanity of prisoner at time of trial]—No person can be rightly tried, sentenced or executed while insane. If there be sufficient reason to doubt whether an accused person is unable, on account of insanity, to conduct his defence, the question whether by reason of such insanity he is unfit to take his trial should first be tried. In the case of a deaf mute who fails to plead, there may be a preliminary issue sent to the jury on which they will be sworn to find whether or no he is mute by the visitation of God. R. v. Governor of Stafford Prison [1909] 2 K.B. 81. If they find that he is, the jury may be again sworn to try the issue as to sanity. Ibid. If he is unable to communicate with or be communicated with by others, he is properly found to be insane within Code sec. 967. R. v. Governor of Stafford Prison, supra. If the Crown moves for an inquiry as to prisoner's sanity, and the case is to be traversed to the next assize, the proper course is to leave the question of granting the inquiry under sec. 967 to the judge taking the next assize. R. v. Watt, 15 B.C.R. 466.

Trial of issue as to sanity]—Where an issue has been ordered and on a witness being examined for the Crown it is ruled that no sufficient foundation has been laid for receiving his opinion, the fact that he volunteered his opinion to a question properly propounded by the Crown prosecutor in a further unsuccessful effort to show that he was qualified to express an opinion, will not make it obligatory that the jury should be discharged and a new jury called. Trying sanity although prosecution discontinued.

968. If any person charged with an indictable offence is brought before any court before which such person might be tried for such offence to be discharged for want of prosecution, and such person appears to be insane, the court shall order a jury to be empanelled to try the sanity of such person, and if the jury so empanelled finds him insane, the court shall order such person to be kept in strict custody, in such place and in such manner as to the court seems fit, until the pleasure of the lieutenant governor is known.

Custody of insane persons.

969. In all cases of insanity so found, the lieutenant governor may make an order for the safe custody of the person so found to be insane, in such place and in such manner as to him seems fit.

Origin]-Sec. 740, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, secs. 253, 257. Order of Lieutenant-Governor as to persons found insane]-Where persons are confined in a criminal insane asylum upon an order of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, made under sec. 969 of the Criminal Code they are in custody as criminals; otherwise the enactment would be ultra vires; civil rights, and the establishment, maintenance, and management of asylums, are exclusively provincial matters Although in a sense acquitted by the juries by which they were tried, the acquittal was a part only of the verdicts; they were special verdicts under see. 966 of the Criminal Code, the full import of which was that each had committed the crime with which he was charged, but was insane at the time, and on that ground only was acquitted. If they had been found not guilty of the commission of the crime, they would have been entitled to their discharge out of custody; the Criminal Code makes no provision for detention in such a case. R. v. Trapnell, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 346, 349 (Ont.). Prisoners who are so insane as to be incapable of conducting their defences, and also those who have become insane after sentence are likewise subject to the order of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. (Sees. 966, 967, 968, 970.)

The order of the Lieutenant-Governor may be made in respect of a prisoner found same at the time of trial, but to have been insame at the time of the offence. Re Duclos, 8 Que. P.R. 372, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 278; Code sec. 966 (2).

Insane person arraigned for summary trial under absolute jurisdiction]—If there be sufficient reason to doubt whether an accused person is unable, on account of insanity, to conduct his defence, the question whether by reason of such insanity he is unfit to take his trial should first be tried. R. v. Berry, 1 Q.B.D. 447.

If the accused charged under Part XVI has, to the knowledge of the magistrate, been declared to be insane, by competent alienists, and proceedings are pending to commit him to an insane asylum, a conviction made by the magistrate will be set aside. R. v. Leys (1910) 17, Can. Cr. Cas. 198 (Ont.).

Insanity of person imprisoned.-Return to imprisonment when sane.

970. The lieutenant governor, upon such evidence of the insanity of any person imprisoned in any prison other than a penitentiary for an offence, or imprisoned for safe custody charged with an offence, or imprisoned for not finding bail for good behaviour or to keep the peace, as the lieutenant governor considers sufficient, may order the removal of such insane person to a place of safe keeping; and such person shall remain there, or in such other place of safe keeping as the lieutenant governor from time to time orders, until his complete or partial recovery is certified to the satisfaction of the lieutenant governor, who may then order such insane person back to imprisonment, if then liable thereto, or otherwise to be discharged.

971. Every witness duly subpœnaed to attend and give evidence at any criminal trial before any court of criminal juris. diction shall be bound to attend and remain in attendance throughout the trial.

Origin]—Sec. 677, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 210. Competency of witness]—See the Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 145.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

A witness is incompetent if, in the opinion of the court, he is prevented by disease affecting his mind, or any other cause of the same kind, from recollecting the matter on which he is to testify, from understanding the questions put to him, from giving rational answers to those questions, or from knowing that he ought to speak the truth: Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 107.

A witness unable to speak or hear is not incompetent, but may give his evidence by writing or signs, or in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible, but such writing must be written and such signs made in open court. Evidence so given is deemed to be oral evidence: Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 107, Can. Evid. Act, sec. 6.

Preliminary question as to admissibility]—Te admissibility of evidence is always a question of law, and is, therefore, for the judge. The weight or value of it, when admitted, is always a question of fact, and, therefore, for the jury. It is incumbent upon the judge to decide all preliminary questions which affect the admissibility of evidence; such, for example, as the sufficiency of proof to admit a document in evidence; the sufficiency of a search to let in secondary evidence; whether a document was properly stamped or not.

Where, however, the decision of the preliminary question of fact would decide the main issue, it seems that the judge should not decide the matter, but should admit the evidence provisionally, and leave the main question to the jury. Stowe v. Querner, L.R. 5 Ex., 155. That is, he simply passes upon its admissibility and leaves the rest to the jury. R. v. Dixon (No. 2) 29 N.S.R. 462, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 220.

Refreshing the memory]-A witness may not read his evidence or refer to notes of evidence already given by him, but he may while under examination refresh his memory by referring to any writing made by himself at the time of the transaction concerning which he is questioned, or so soon afterwards that the court consider it likely that the transaction was at the time fresh in his memory. The witness may also refer to any such writing made by any other person, and read by the witness within the time aforesaid if, when he read it, he knew it to be correct. Any writing so referred to must be produced and shown to the adverse party if he requires it, and that party may, if he pleases, cross-examine the witness upon it. But a witness who refreshes his memory by reference to a writing must always swear positively as to the fact, or that he has a perfect recollection that the fact was truly stated in the memorandum or entry at the time it was written. If on referring to a memorandum not made by himself he can neither recollect the fact nor recall his conviction as to the truth of the account or writing when the facts were fresh in his memory, so that he cannot speak as to the fact further than as finding it noted in a written entry, his testimony is objectionable, as hearsay.

Privilege of witness]-A legal adviser is not permitted, during or after the termination of his employment as such, unless with his client's express consent, to disclose any communication, oral or documentary, made to him as such legal adviser, by or on behalf of his client during, in the course of, and for the purpose of his employment, or to disclose any legal advice given by him to his client during, in the course of, and for the purpose of such employment. But the privilege is that of the client, not of the solicitor. R. v. Prentiee, 7 W.W.R. 271, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 436. The protection does not extend to: (1) Any such communication if made in furtherance of any criminal purpose; (2) Any fact with which the legal adviser became acquainted otherwise than in his character as such. See Anderson v. Bank of British Columbia, L.R. 2 Ch. 644; R. v. Prentice, 7 W.W.R. 271 (Alta.).

[§971]

The expression "legal adviser" includes barristers and solicitors, their clerks, and interpreters between them and their clients; Stephen Dig. Ev., art. 115. Subject to any exemptions conferred by provincial law (see Can. Evidence Act, sec. 35) medical men and clergymen are not privileged from the disclosure of communications made to them in professional confidence, but it is not usual to press for the disclosures of communications made to clergymen.

In cases in which the Government is immediately concerned, no witness can be compelled to answer any question the answer to which would tend to discover the names of persons by or to whom information was given as to the commission of offences. Humphrey v. Archibald, 21 Ont. R. 553, R. v. Sproule, 14 Ont. R. 375. It is, as a rule, for the court to decide, whether the permission of any question would or would not, under the circumstances of the particular case, be injurious to the administration of justice: Stephen, Dig. Ev., art. 113; Marks v. Beyfus, 25 Q.B.D. 494.

A husband is not compellable to disclose any communication made by his wife to him during the marriage; and a wife is not compellable to disclose any communication made to her by her husband during the marriage. Can. Evidence Act, sec. 4, sub-sec. 3; but sec. 4 of that Act further provides that nothing therein shall affect a case where the wife or husband of a person charged may at common law be called as a witness without the consent of the accused, and as to certain offences, including neglect to provide necessaries (Code sec. 244), and abandonment of a child under two years of age (Code sec. 245), the wife or husband of the person charged is declared to be a "competent and compellable" witness for the prosecution.

Cross-examination to disclose disputed points]—Where it is intended to suggest that a witness is not speaking the truth on a particular point, his attention should be directed to the fact by some questions put in cross-examination showing that that imputation is intended to be made, and not to take his evidence and pass it by as a matter altogether unchallenged, and then, when it is impossible for him to explain, as perhaps he might have been able to do if such questions had been put to him, the circumstances which it is suggested indicate that the story he tells ought not to be believed, to argue that he is a witness unworthy of credit. Browne v. Dunn, [1894] 6 R. 67.

There are of course exceptional cases in which a story told by a witness may have been of so incredible and romancing a character that the most effective cross-examination would be to ask him to leave the box. Ibid., at 79.

The right to re-examine follows necessarily upon cross-examination, even as to the matter clicited during the latter, which is both inadmissible and volunteered. Such matters should be expunged at the instance of the cross-examiner if it be desired to avoid re-examination. R. v. Noel, 6 O.L.R. 385, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 309.

Contradiction of witness on otherwise irrelevant matters showing bias]—The general rule is that a witness cannot be contradicted with regard to matters irrelevant to the issue, but to this there is an exception if the matter suggested by the question, though irrelevant, would tend to show that the witness was biased against the opposite party; Phipson on Ev., 5th ed., pp. 477-8; R. v. Prentice, 7 W.W.R. 271, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 436, at 445, 7 Alta. L.R. 479; R. v. Finnessey, 11 O.L.R. 338, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 347; Attorney-General v. Hitchcock, 1 Exch. 91.

Compelling attendance of witnesses.--Warrant on default.--Detention on warrant.--Disposing of charge of contempt.

972. Upon proof to the satisfaction of the judge of the service of the subpœna upon any witness who fails to attend or remain in attendance, or upon its appearing that any witness at the preliminary examination has entered into a recognizance to appear at the trial, and has failed so to appear, and that the presence of such witness is material to the ends of justice, the judge may, by his warrant, cause such witness to be apprehended and forthwith brought before him to give evidence and to answer for his disregard of the subpœna.

2. Such witness may be detained on such warrant before the judge or in the common gaol, with a view to secure his presence as a witness, or, in the discretion of the judge, he may be released on a recognizance, with or without sureties, conditioned for his appearance to give evidence and to answer for his default in not attending or not remaining in attendance.

3. The judge may, in a summary manner, examine into and Warrant against witness in the first instance.

973. Either before or during the sittings of any court of criminal jurisdiction, the court, or any judge thereof, or any judge of any superior or county court, if satisfied by evidence upon oath that any person within the province likely to give material evidence, either for the prosecution or for the accused, will not attend to give evidence at such sittings without being compelled so to do, may, by his warrant, cause such witness to be apprehended and forthwith brought before such court or judge, and such witness may be detained on such warrant before such court or judge or in the common gaol, with a view to secure his presence as a witness, or, in the discretion of the court or judge, may be released on a recognizance, with or without sureties, conditioned for his appearance to give evidence.

Origin]-Sec. 678A, Code of 1892, as amended 1900.

Witness in Canada but beyond jurisdiction of court.-Subpœna.

974. If any witness in any criminal case, cognizable by indictment in any court of criminal jurisdiction at any term. sessions or sittings of any court in any part of Canada, resides in any part of Canada, not within the ordinary jurisdiction of the court before which such criminal case is cognizable, such court may issue a writ of subpoena, directed to such witness, in like manner as if such witness was resident within the jurisdiction of the court.

Origin]-Sec. 679, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 212.

[§975] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Witness in Canada but beyond jurisdiction of court .-- Proceedings when subpæna disobeyed.

975. If such witness does not obey such writ of subpœna the court issuing the same may proceed against such witness for contempt or otherwise, or bind over such witness to appear at such days and times as are necessary, and upon default being made in such appearance may cause the recognizances of such witness to be estreated, and the amount thereof to be sued for and recovered by process of law, in like manner as if such witness was resident within the jurisdiction of the court.

Origin]-Sec. 679, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 212.

Criminal courts auxiliary to one another.-Proceedings against witnesses.

976. The courts of the several provinces and the judges of the said courts respectively shall be auxiliary to one another for the purposes of this Act; and any judgment, decree or order made by the court issuing such writ of subpœna upon any proceeding against any witness for contempt or otherwise may be enforced or acted upon by any court in the province in which such witness resides in the same manner and as validly and effectually as if such judgment, order or decree had been made by such last mentioned court.

Origin]-Sec. 679, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 212.

Procuring attendance of witness who is a prisoner.—Order.— Prisoner conveyed according to terms of order.

977. When the attendance of any person confined in any prison in Canada, or upon the limits of any gaol, is required in any court of criminal jurisdiction in any case cognizable therein by indictment, the court before whom such prisoner is required to attend, or any judge of such court or of any superior court or county court, or any chairman of General Sessions, may, before or during any such term or sittings at which the attendance of such person is required, make an order upon the warden or gaoler of the prison, or upon the sheriff or other person having the custody of such prisoner,—

- (a) to deliver such prisoner to the person named in such order to receive him; or,
- (b) to himself convey such prisoner to such place.

2. The warden, gaoler or other person aforesaid, having the custody of such prisoner, when so required by order as aforesaid, upon being paid his reasonable charges in that behalf, or the person to whom such prisoner is required to be delivered as aforesaid, shall, according to the exigency of the order, convey the prisoner to the place at which he is required to attend and there produce him, and then to receive and obey such further order as to the said court seems meet.

Origin]-Sec. 680, Code of 1892, as amended 1900.

Convict under death sentence]—The section places no limit on the words "any person confined in any prison," and there is nothing in it that puts a person, confined under a death sentence, in a different position from that of any other person confined in prison. It gives power to the judge to cause a person under sentence of death to be brought to court as a witness.

Sec. 1064 does not interfere with the exercise of the powers given by sec. 977. The two sections must be read together, so as to give effect to both. R. v. Kuzin (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 66, 25 Man. R. 218, 8 W.W.R. 166.

Evidence on the Trial.

Admissions of fact on trial.

978. Any accused person on his trial for any indictable offence, or his counsel or solicitor, may admit any fact alleged against the accused so as to dispense with proof thereof.

Origin]-Sec. 690, Code of 1892.

Counsel's admission of any "fact" so as to dispense with proof]— Sec. 978 deals only with admissions of fact. R. v. Brooks, 11 O.L.R. 525, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 188, 7 O.W.R. 533. But apart from this enactment there may be a waiver of more formal proof as by a consent of counsel to admit as evidence the depositions in a case against another person, at least where the offence would have been only a misdemeanour at common law. R. v. Brooks, supra; R. v. St. Clair, (1900) 27 A.R. 308, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 551 (Ont.); R. v. Daigle, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 92. There may be a valid consent to receive secondary evidence. Whelan v. The Queen, 28 U.C.Q.B. 2 (Ont.). And generally a consent of counsel which affects procedure only will, in the absence of any special circumstances forbidding it, establish a legal waiver. R. v. Janneau, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 360, 364 (Que.); R. v. Gibson, (1896) 29 N.S.R. 4, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 451; R. v. Hazen, 20 A.R. 633.

Special modes of proof; Identification of criminals]—By Order-in-Conneil of 21st July, 1908, in virtue of the provisions of the Identification of Criminals Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 149, the use of the system of identification known as the "finger prints," was sanctioned, and all the provisions of that Act were made applicable to the said system, 1917 Can. Stat. clxi (Orders-in-Council, 50 Can. Gazette, 3484).

By Order-in-Council of 20th March, 1911, the process or operation of photographing was sanctioned as an additional means of identification for the purposes of the Criminals Identification Act (Can.  Proof of perjury charge]—Code secs. 170-176.

Evidence of coin being false or counterfeit.

980. When, upon the trial of any person, it becomes necessary to prove that any coin produced in evidence against such person is false or counterfeit, it shall not be necessary to prove the same to be false and counterfeit by the evidence of any moneyer or other officer of His Majesty's mint, or other person employed in producing the lawful coin in His Majesty's dominions or elsewhere, whether the coin counterfeited is current coin, or the coin of any foreign prince, state or country, not current in Canada, but it shall be sufficient to prove the same to be false or counterfeited by the evidence of any witness.

Origin]-Sec. 692, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 229.

Offences relating to copper coins]—See sees. 2 (8), 546, 554-557, 559, 561-569, 623-626, 955, 980-981, 1041.

Evidence on proceedings for advertising counterfelt money.

981. On the trial of any person charged with any of the offences mentioned in sec. 569, any letter, circular, writing or paper offering or purporting to offer for sale, loan, gift or distribution, or giving or purporting to give information, directly or indirectly, where, how, of whom or by what means any counterfeit token of value may be obtained or had, or concerning any similar scheme or device to defraud the public, shall be prima facie evidence of the fraudulent character of such scheme or device.

Origin]-Sec. 693, Code of 1892.

Proof of previous conviction.-Certificate.

982. A certificate containing the substance and effect only, omitting the formal part, of any previous indictment and conviction for any indictable offence, or a copy of any summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court before which the offender was first convicted, or to which such summary conviction was returned, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of such conviction without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

Origin]-Sec. 694, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 230.

Application]—It has been doubted whether see. 982 applies to any other than indictable offences. R. v. Leach, 17 O.L.R. 643, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 375.

Proceedings when previous conviction charged in indictment]-Code see, 963.

Proof of identity]-A certificate of the previous conviction in the same locality of a person of the same name and description has been held to be some evidence of identity. R. v. Leach, 17 O.L.R. 643, 14

As to the Identification of Criminals Act, see note to see. 978.

Proving previous conviction made on a summary trial]—A copy of a conviction on summary trial under Part XVI by "a magistrate" as defined by Code sec. 771 is, by sec, 794, made sufficient evidence when proved to be a true copy (or when certified by the proper officer of the court, ex. gr., when a judge sits as a magistrate under sec. 771) to prove a conviction for the offence mentioned therein.

Offences after previous conviction]-See secs. 370, 375-377, 386 (2), 465, 530, 533-535, 568, 694, 757 (3), 851, 963, 982, 1053 1081.

Evidence at trial for child murder.

983. The trial of any woman charged with the murder of any issue of her body, male or female, which being born alive would, by law, be bastard, shall proceed and be governed by such and the like rules of evidence and presumption as are by law used and allowed to take place in respect to other trials for murder.

Origin]-Sec. 697, Code of 1892.

Proof of age of child in control of a society,-Entry or record.

984. To prove the age of a boy, girl, child or young person for the purposes of secs. 211, 215, 242, 243, 245, 294, 301, 302. 315 and 316, any entry or record by an incorporated society or its officers having had the control or care of the boy, girl, child or young person at or about the time of the boy, girl, child or young person being brought to Canada, if such entry or record has been made before the alleged offence was committed, shall be prima facie evidence of such age.

2. In the absence of other evidence, or by way of corroboration of other evidence, the judge, or, in cases where an offender is tried with a jury, the jury before whom an indictment for the offence is tried, or the justice before whom a preliminary inquiry thereinto is held, may infer the age from the appearance of the boy, girl, child or young person.

Origin]-Sec. 701A, Code of 1892.

Sub-sec. (2)—"In the absence of other evidence" as to age]—The proof, if any, of age is to be made in accordance with the requirements of provincial law. Canada Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 145, sec. 35.

If a certificate of birth is put in, there should be positive identification with the person certified. R. v. Rogers, 10 Cr. App. R. 217.

Credit may be given the evidence of the child's mother even if she is unable to state the year of the child's birth. R. v. Pieco [1917] 1 W.W.R. 892 (Alta.); R. v. Nieholls, 10 Cox C.C. 475.

If a parent is not available as a witness, credit may be given the testimony of persons who had known the child from infancy or early childhood. R. v. Spera, (1915) 34 O.L.R. 530, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 180; R. v. Cox, [1898] 1 Q.B. 179, 67 L.J.Q.B. 293, 18 Cox C.C. 672.

In Martin Hargreaves Co. v. Wrigley, 30 W.L.R. 92 (Sask.), it was decided that on a defence of infancy the defendant could not give evidence of the date of his birth. In that case the court followed Haines v. Guthrie, 13 Q.B.D. 818. And see R. v. Hauberg, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 297, 8 S.L.R. 239; R. v. Farrell, 21 O.L.R. 540, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 419.

Illegal sale of tobacco to juveniles]—In prosecutions under the Canada Statute of 1908, entituled An Act to Restrain the Use of Tobacco by Young Persons, the provisions of sec. 984 of the Code are to apply (7.8 Edw. VII, eh. 73, sec. 7); and for the purposes of such Act any person who appears to the justice dealing with an information or complaint thereunder to be under the age of 16 years, shall be presumed to be under that age, unless it is shown by evidence that he is in fact over that age.

"Common gaming house"]—See sees. 226, 228. Sec. 985 does not apply to the unlawful sale of lottery tickets under sec. 236. R. v. Hong Guey, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 366 (B.C.).

Evidence of disorderly house.

[§ 985]

986. In any prosecution under sec. 228 or under sec. 229 it shall be prima facie evidence that a house, room or place is a disorderly house if any constable or officer authorized to enter any house, room or place is wilfully prevented from or obstructed or delayed in entering the same, or any part thereof; and if any house, room or place is found fitted or provided with any means or contrivance for playing any game of chance or any mixed game of chance and skill or betting or for opium smoking or inhaling, or with any device for concealing, removing or destroying such means or contrivance it shall be prima facie evidence that such house, room or place is a common gaming house, common betting house or opium joint as the means or contrivance may indicate.

Origin]-Sec. 703, Code of 1892; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; Can. Stat., 1913, ch. 13, sec. 29; Can. Stat., 1918, ch. 16, sec. 5.

Officer "wilfully prevented, obstructed or delayed"]—The fact that the officer, on seeking admittance to the place suspected, finds the door locked, does not constitute a wilful prevention, obstruction or delay of his entrance sufficient to raise the prima facie presumption created by sec. 986; the presumption is created only when something active is done amounting to a wilful obstruction or prevention. R. v. Jung Lee (No 2) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 64, 25 O.W.R. 63.

In order to invoke the first part of see. 986 as to obstructing the entry of an officer, there would have to be evidence that the officer was "authorized to enter" and that at the moment of obstruction or delay there was knowledge that the person obstructed or delayed was an officer. R. v. Hung Gee, 4 W.W.R. 1128. As to the substantive offence of wilfully obstruction an officer entering any disorderly house when "duly authorized to enter," see see. 230.

House, etc., found fitted or provided]—There may be some doubt as to whether the second part of sec. 986 applies to a house, room, or place "found" with the contrivances referred to except upon the occasion of some constable or officer having authority to enter such as is Evidence of gaming in stocks or merchandise.

987. Whenever, on the trial of a person charged with making an agreement for the sale or purchase of shares, goods, wares or merchandise in the manner set forth in sec. 231, it is established that the person so charged has made or signed any such contract or agreement of sale or purchase, or has acted, aided or abetted in the making or signing thereof, the burden of proof of the bona fide intention to acquire or to sell such shares, goods, wares or merchandise, or to deliver or to receive delivery thereof, as the case may be, shall rest upon the person so charged.

Evidence of stealing ores or minerals.

988. In any prosecution, proceeding or trial for stealing ores or minerals the possession, contrary to the provisions of any law in that behalf, of any smelted gold or silver, or any gold-bearing quartz, or any unsmelted or otherwise unmanufactured gold or silver, by any operator, workman or labourer actively engaged in or on any mine, shall be prima facie evidence that the same has been stolen by him.

Origin]-Sec. 707, Code of 1892, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 164, sec. 30.

Evidence of property in cattle.—Possession of cattle with brand.— Prima facie evidence of theft.

989. In any criminal prosecution, proceeding or trial, the presence upon any cattle of a brand or mark, which is duly recorded or registered under the provisions of any Act, ordinance or law, shall be prima facie evidence that such cattle are the property of the registered owner of such brand or mark.

2. When a person is charged with theft of cattle, or with an offence under paragraph (a) or paragraph (b) of sec. 392, respecting cattle, possession by such person or by others in his employ or on his behalf of such cattle bearing such a brand or mark of which the person charged is not the registered owner, shall throw upon the accused the burden of proving that such cattle came lawfully into his possession or into the possession of such others in his employ or on his behalf, unless it appears that such possession by others in his employ or on his behalf was without his knowledge and without his authority, sanction or approval.

Origin]-Compare sec. 707A, Code of 1892; 1 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 42, sec. 2; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46.

Registered cattle brands as evidence]—Code see. 989, as to cattle brands, is intended specially for the protection of cattle owners in ranching districts where cattle run at large, and to prevent the appropriation and re-branding of stray cattle by other ranchers. Where the evidence shows that the accused stockman appropriated and re-branded with his own brand a stray three-year-old steer on which appeared the brand of another rancher, and turned the stray steer into his own herd on his home range, there is such proof of possession of the animal as throws upon the accused the onus under Code see. 989 of proving on a charge of stealing the steer that the same came into his possession lawfully. R. v. Dubois, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 485, 15 W.L.R. 238.

On the trial for the theft of certain cattle, the brands upon which had been obliterated, evidence that the brands upon other cattle had been similarly obliterated and that the prisoner had in his possession branding irons adapted to causing an obliteration of the character found, was admissible. R. v. Collyns, 3 Terr. L.R. 82, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 572; and see R. v. Forsythe, 4 Terr. L.R. 398, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 475.

Possession by the accused, or by others in his employ or on his behalf, of any such timber, mast, spar, saw-log, shingle bolt or other description of lumber so marked shall, in all cases, throw upon him the burden of proving that such timber, mast, spar, saw-log, shingle bolt or other description of lumber came lawfully into his possession, or into the possession of such others in his employ or on his behalf.

Evidence of enlistment in cases as to public stores.—Presumption when accused a dealer in stores.

991. In any prosecution, proceeding or trial under secs. 433 to 437 inclusive for offences relating to public stores, proof that any soldier, seaman or marine was actually doing duty in His Majesty's service shall be prima facie evidence that his enlistment, entry or enrolment has been regular.

2. If the person charged with the offence relating to public stores mentioned in sec. 435 was, at the time at which the offence is charged to have been committed, in His Majesty's service or employment, or a dealer in marine stores, or a dealer in old metals, knowledge on his part that the stores to which the charge relates bore the marks described in sec. 432 shall be presumed until the contrary is shown.

Evidence in cases of fraudulent marks on merchandise.

993. When proceedings are taken against any person for having received goods knowing them to be stolen, or for having in his possession stolen property, evidence may be given, at any stage of the proceedings, that there was found in the possession of such person other property stolen within the preceding period of twelve months, and such evidence may be taken into consideration for the purpose of proving that such person knew the property which forms the subject of the proceedings taken against him to be stolen, if not less than three days' notice in writing has been given to the person accused that proof is intended to be given of such other property, stolen within the preceding period of twelve months, having been found in his possession. 2. Such notice shall specify the nature or description of such other property, and the person from whom the same was stolen.

Origin]—Sec. 716, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 203; 34-35 Vict., Imp., ch. 112, sec. 19. Compare Larceny Act, 1916, Imp., 6-7 Geo. V, ch. 50, sec. 43.

Receiving stolen goods; giving evidence of finding other stolen goods within the previous twelve months]—Sec. 399 deals with the offence of receiving, i.e., the punishment for (with guilty knowledge) receiving or retaining in his possession "anything obtained by any offence punishable on indictment." Sec. 993 is limited to the receiving or retaining of stolen goods or property and so seems to exclude the class of cases which are not made statutory theft although punishable in like manner as theft under various Code provisions.

It has been held under a similar clause in the English Larceny Act, 1916 (6-7 Geo. V, Imp., ch. 50, sec. 43, sub-sec. 1 (a)), that on giving evidence of the finding of other stolen property in possession within the limited time, all the facts may be brought out which would be relevant if such other property were the subject-matter of the charges being tried. R. v. Smith, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1023. Such evidence was given also in R. v. Girod, 70 J.P. 514, 22 Times L.R. 720, without any question being raised.

If there is evidence that the property was stolen, it has to be tendered before the defence has to give an answer. R. v. Ballard (1916) 12 Cr. App. R. 1 at 5.

Sec. 993 does not apply to admit proof in respect of other property stolen within the twelve months and disposed of by the prisoner; it must be found in his possession at the time when he was found in possession of the property in respect of which the charge is laid; R. v.

Apart from the provisions of this section other instances of receiving similar goods which had been stolen from the same party may be proved. R. v. Dunn (1826), 1 Mood. C.C. 146; R. v. Davis (1833), 6 C. & P. 177; R. v. Nicholls (1858), 1 F. & F. 51.

Receiving stolen goods.—Possession.—Guilty knowledge.—Previous conviction.—Notice prior to trial.

994. When proceedings are taken against any person for having received goods knowing them to be stolen, or for having in his possession stolen property, and evidence has been given that the stolen property has been found in his possession, then if such person has, within five years immediately preceding, been convicted of any offence involving fraud or dishonesty, evidence of such previous conviction may be given at any stage of the proceedings, and may be taken into consideration for the purpose of proving that the person accused knew the property which was proved to be in his possession to have been stolen, if not less than three days' notice in writing has been given to the person accused that proof is intended to be given of such previous conviction.

2. It shall not be necessary for the purpose of this section, to charge in the indictment the previous conviction of the person so accused.

Previous conviction of receiver as evidence]—Proof of a previous conviction in the terms of sec. 994 is not conclusive as evidence that the prisoner knew the goods had been stolen, but is merely a circumstance to be taken into consideration in conjunction with other evidence tending to prove guilty knowledge. R. v. Davis, (1870) L.R. 1 C.C.R. 272, 11 Cox C.C. 578.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Evidence taken apart from Trial.

[§ 995]

Evidence of person dangerously ill may be taken under commission.

T

R

995. Whenever it is made to appear at the instance of the Crown, or of the prisoner or defendant, to the satisfaction of a judge of a superior court, or a judge of a county court having criminal jurisdiction, that any person who is dangerously ill, and who, in the opinion of some licensed medical practitioner, is not likely to recover from such illness, is able and willing to give material information relating to any indictable offence, or relating to any person accused of any such offence, such judge may, by order under his hand, appoint a commissioner to take in writing the statement on oath or affirmation of such person.

2. Such commissioner shall take such statement and shall subscribe the same and add thereto the names of the persons, if any, present at the taking thereof, and if the deposition relates to any indictable offence for which any accused person is already committed or bailed to appear for trial, shall transmit the same, with the said addition, to the proper officer of the court at which such accused person is to be tried.

3. In every other case he shall transmit the same to the clerk of the peace of the county, division or city in which he has taken the same, or to such other officer as has charge of the records and proceedings of a superior court of criminal jurisdiction in such county, division or city.

4. Such clerk of the peace or other officer shall preserve the same and file it of record, and upon the order of the court or a judge transmit the same to the proper officer of the court where the same shall be required to be used as evidence.

Origin]—Sec. 681, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 220; 30-31 Vict., Imp., ch. 35, sec. 6.

Failure to take exception before commissioner]—It is the duty of the presiding judge at a criminal trial to allow only admissible evidence to go to the jury. Where evidence has been taken on commission before the trial the mere fact of an omission to object before the commissioner cannot impair this rule. R. v. Hawkes (1915) 9 W.W.R. 445, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 29, 32 W.L.R. 720 (Alta.). Notice of reading depositions taken under sec. 995]—Code sec. 998. Unless written notice is given the deposition cannot be read at the trial. R. v. 996. Whenever a prisoner in actual custody is served with or receives notice of an intention to take the statement mentioned in the last preceding section the judge who has appointed the commissioner may, by an order in writing, direct the officer or other person having the custody of the prisoner to convey him to the place mentioned in the said notice for the purpose of being present at the taking of the statements; and such officer or other person shall convey the prisoner accordingly, and the expenses of such conveyance shall be paid out of the funds applicable to the other expenses of the prison from which the prisoner has been conveyed.

Origin]-Sec. 682, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 221.

Evidence may be taken out of Canada under commission.---Rules and practice same as in other cases.

997. Whenever it is made to appear, at the instance of the Crown, or of the prisoner or defendant, to the satisfaction of the judge of any superior court, or the judge of a county court having criminal jurisdiction, that any person who resides out of Canada is able to give material information relating to any indictable offence for which a prosecution is pending, or relating to any person accused of such offence, such judge may, by order under his hand, appoint a commissioner or commissioners to take the evidence, upon oath, of such person.

2. Until otherwise provided by rules of the court, the practice and procedure in connection with the appointment of commissioners, under this section, the taking of depositions by such commissioners, and the certifying and return thereof, and the use of such depositions as evidence, shall be as nearly as practicable the same as those which prevail in the respective courts in connection with like matters in civil causes.

4. Subject to such rules of court or to the practice or procedure aforesaid, such depositions may, by the direction of the presiding judge, be read in evidence before the grand jury.

Origin]-63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; 58-59 Vict., Can., ch. 40. sec. 1; sec. 683, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 23.

Commission to take evidence out of Canada]—A commission may be ordered to examine witnesses ex juris if the judge is satisfied: (1) That they reside out of Canada; (2) That they are able to give material information on behalf of the accused relating to the offence for which they have been committed for trial; (3) That it is highly improbable that any of them will voluntarily attend the trial to give evidence. R. v. Roblin, (1916) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 222, 26 Man. R. 97.

The application of the procedure in civil cases by the second subsection does not confer a like right of appeal as in civil cases from the order appointing the commissioners. R. v. Johnson, (1892) 2 B.C.R. 87. Any evidence taken under commission may be objected to at the trial on the ground of the irregularity of the commissioners' appointment. Ibid.

Foreign commission]—An order for a commission to take the evidence of any person residing out of Canada who is able to give material information relating to an indictable offence, or relating to any person accused thereof, may ordinarily be made any time after an information is laid charging such offence, and such evidence may be used at any stage of the inquiry at which evidence may be given. Such order ought to provide that the commission be returned to the court out of which it issues, and ought not to limit the use of the evidence. R. v. Chetwynd (1891), 23 N.S.R. 332; R. v. Gibson, 16 Ont. R. 704; R. v. Verral, 17 P.R. 61, Ont. R. v. Verral, 16 P.R. 444 (Ont.).

A commission to take the evidence of witnesses abroad in a libel prosecution is properly ordered at the trial where the evidence relates wholly to a plea of justification just entered of record. R. v. Nicol (1898), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 31 (B.C.).

An order for a commission to take evidence in a libel case should not be made before plea. R. v. Nicol, supra.

A foreign commission will not be denied the accused held on a serious charge if it seems probable that the refusal would deprive him of evidence to support the defence. R. v. Rispa (1915) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 94, 9 O.W.N. 50.

Where the application is by the Crown to take view voce testimony in the United States the Crown should bear the reasonable fees and expenses of counsel for the accused. R. v. Guilmette (1919) 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 276 (Que.). The payment may be recommended in the formal order.

and reservation made to make further order if the parties fail to agree on the amount. If the witness "resides out of Canada," sec. 997 applies so as to enable the court to order that his evidence be taken on commissior in Canada while he is temporarily therein as well as to take the evidence out of Canada. R. v. Baskett, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 61 (Ont.).

Admission on Trial of Evidence Previously Taken.

Deposition of person dangerously ill.-Notice of intention to read and opportunity of cross-examination.

998. If the statement of a sick person has been taken by a commissioner as provided in sec. 995, and upon the trial of any offender for any offence to which the same relates, the person who made the statement is proved to be dead, or if it is proved that there is no reasonable probability that such person will ever be able to attend at the trial to give evidence, such statement may, upon the production of the judge's order appointing the commissioner, be read in evidence, either for or against the accused, without further proof thereof, if the same purports to be signed by the commissioner by or before whom it purports to have been taken, and it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that reasonable notice of the intention to take 'such statement was served upon the person, whether prosecutor or accused, against whom it is proposed to be read in evidence, and that such person or his counsel or solicitor had, or might have had, if he had chosen to be present, full opportunity of cross-examining the person who made the same.

Deposition on preliminary inquiry may be read in evidence in certain events.

999. If upon the trial of an accused person such facts are proved upon oath or affirmation that it can be reasonably inferred therefrom that any person, whose evidence was given at any former trial upon the same charge, or whose deposition has been theretofore taken in the investigation of the charge against such accused person, is dead, or so ill as not to be able to travel, or is absent from Canada, or if such person refuses to be sworn or to give evidence, and if it is proved that such evidence was given or such deposition was taken in the presence of the person accused, and that he or his counsel or solicitor if present had a full opportunity of cross-examining the witness, then if the evidence or deposition purports to be signed by the judge or justice before whom the same purports to have been taken, it shall be read as evidence in the prosecution, without further proof thereof, unless it is proved that such evidence or deposition was not in fact signed by the judge or justice purporting to have signed the same.

Origin]—3-4 Geo. V, Can., ch. 13, sec. 30; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; sec. 687, Code of 1892; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, sec. 30; Indietable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., 11-12 Vict., ch. 42, sec. 17.

Application]—So far as sec. 999 makes express provision for receiving depositions in evidence, it supersedes the common law. R. v. Snelgrove, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 189.

Evidence given at any former trial on the same charge]—This evidently refers to cases in which a new trial has been ordered. See under sees. 1018, 1021, 1022.

Deposition therefore taken in the investigation of the charge]— A deposition taken before a justice having authority to hold a preliminary enquiry, but because of whose illness or absence the enquiry had to be taken de novo before another justice, will be included. R. v. De Vidal, 9 Cox C.C. 4.

The prior deposition must have been taken in the investigation of the "charge against such accused person." It would seem that see, 999 does not apply at all to depositions at coroners' inquests; R. v. Laurin, (No. 3), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 548 (Que.); R. v. Graham, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 388; the coroner not being a "judge or justice" (see, 999) even if the circumstances are such that it could be said that the coroner's inquest was an investigation of a charge against the accused (see, 999).

A coroner's court is, however, a criminal court and a court of record. R. v. Hendershott, 26 Ont. R. 678; R. v. Hammond, 29 Ont. R. 211; R. v. Williams, 28 Ont. R. 583; Davidson v. Garrett, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 200. And the deposition of any witness at the coroner's inquest may be used in cross-examination of that witness on the trial. R. v. Laurin (No. 3), 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 548 (Que.); R. v. Ciarlo, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 157 (Que.); R. v. Hammond, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 373.

Witness so ill as not to be able to travel]—The question as to whether or not the witness is unable to travel must in the main be left to the judgment and discretion of the trial judge. R. v. Wellings (1878), 47 L.J.M.C. 100, L.R. 3 Q.B.D. 42; R. v. Stephenson (1862), 31 L.J.M.C. 145; L. & C. 167.

Old

Old age or extreme nervousness of the witness will not be enough to admit the prior deposition without proof of illness. R. v. Farrell, 43 L.J.M.C. 94, L.R. 2 C.C.R. 116; R. v. Thompson, 13 Cox C.C. 181. Preferably the evidence of illness should be given by a medical man, but other evidence may be accepted as its equivalent, where it could not be expected that medical testimony would be available. R. v.Welton, 9 Cox C.C. 296, 27 J.P. 24; R. v. Ulmer, 4 Cox C.C. 442; R. v. Bull, 12 Cox C.C. 31; R. v. Wicker, 18 Jur, 252.

Proof that witness is absent from Canada]-The proof of absence of a witness from Canada, so as to let in his depositions taken on the preliminary enquiry is a matter of reasonable inference, determined by the probabilities of the case, and where the more probable conclusion is, in the opinion of the trial judge, that the witness is absent from Canada, and there is anything in the proof before him pointing to it, the court of appeal will not interfere with his finding on that collateral issue. R. v. Angelo (1914), 5 W.W.R. 1303, 19 B.C.R. 261, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 304, 27 W.L.R. 108; R. v. Forsythe, 4 Terr. L.R. 398, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 475; R. v. Pescaro, 1 B.C.R. pt. 2, p. 144; R. v. Frank (1913), 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 100 (Que.); R. v. Snelgrove, 39 N.S.R. 400, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 189; R. v. Morgan (1893), 2 B.C. R. 329; R. v. Nelson, 1 Ont. R. 500. But if there was a total absence of evidence or manifestly not sufficient evidence from which to infer that the witness was away, the court of appeal might interfere if of opinion that there had been a miscarriage of justice. R. v. Angelo (1914), 5 W.W.R. 1303, 1313 (per McPhillips, J. A.). If the depositions were wrongly admitted and might have influenced the verdict, the principle defined in R. v. Allen (1911), 41 S.C.R. 331, would apply. R. v. Angelo, supra, at 1312. And see Cr. Code sec. 1019.

It is not necessary that a witness should swear positively to such absence. To require positive proof would almost nullify this portion of see, 999 of the Code. R. v. Deloe, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 224 (N.S.). In R. v. Trefry, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 297, the facts did not appear to justify a reasonable inference of continued absence in a foreign country, as the absentee, a doctor, might have changed his mind and returned to Canada in the interval of time before the date of the trial. In R. v. Deloe, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 224, the absent witness was an ordinary sailor who had shipped for a long voyage out from Canada, and who was not free to change his mind. In the latter case Judge Wallace, of Halifax, said: "I do not consider that the decision in the case of R. v. McCullough, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 278, means that the Crown must show that the absence must be 'permanent' in the ordinary sense of that word, but that the Crown must show an absence to continue longer than merely a few days, or, in other words, such a period of absence as would involve an obstruction of justice if the trial were delayed until the expiration of the absence."

Deposition "purporting to be signed"]-In order that see. 999 should apply to make admissible at the trial a deposition taken at the preliminary inquiry of a witness, since deceased, the fact that the justice signed the deposition must appear from the document itself and cannot be proven by extrinsic evidence. At a preliminary inquiry adjournments were made from time to time, and the justice, after entering the adjournment entry. Except for a general heading to each day's proceedings, there was no caption to any deposition, and there were no signatures by the justice other than those mentioned. It was held that the deposition should be read together as one continuous document, but that what appeared on the document was not sufficient to enable the court to say that the deposition "purported to be signed" by the justice, and it was, therefore, inadmissible as evidence at the trial, and a conviction based thereon was quashed. Rex v. Thompson, 7 Terr. L.R. 188.

There is nothing said in sec. 999 as to the time when the evidence is to be signed by the judge, and there is no reason why it may not be signed at any time before it is admitted in evidence; it need not be signed at the time when or immediately after it is taken. R. v. Baugh (1917), 38 O.L.R. 559.

It was held in R. v. Hamilton (1898), 12 Man. R. 354, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 390, that the deposition of a deceased witness may be used in evidence apart from see. 999, although it does not "purport to be signed by the justices by or before whom the same purports to have been taken"; but, where it is not admissible by virtue of see. 999, it must be affirmatively shown that all the formalities required to be observed in taking depositions have been complied with.

Full opportunity to cross-cxamino]-The expressions "entitled to cross-examine" and "full opportunity to cross-examine," as used in sees. 682 and 999, imply for the accused the right to hear the evidence delivered in his presence, to catch the words as they fall from the lips of the witness, and to mark his expression and demeanor while testifying. R. v. Lepine (1900), 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 145 (Que.). When depositions in a preliminary enquiry, to which the accused was not a party, and, consequently, taken in his absence, are read to the same witness in a case against the accused, and the witness, after being sworn in the presence of the accused, either affirms that his former deposition contains the truth, or makes corrections, as the case may be, and then affirms its truth as corrected, the prosecutor, being then given permission to ask further questions, and the accused to cross-examine, such proceeding does not afford the accused the full and complete opportunity to cross-examine contemplated by law; R. v. Lepine, supra; where there has been no consent to that mode of procedure. See note to sec. 978. Unless there has been a full opportunity to cross-examine, the deposiwhere that evidence would have been properly received if an affidavit had been filed proving that the witnesses were absent or unable to attend, afterwards to obtain a new trial upon the ground that the evidence was improperly admitted. R. v. Hogue, 39 O.L.R. 427, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 419.

Where on a preliminary inquiry before a magistrate the witnesses were sworn by him and were then taken into another room and their evidence in chief taken by a stenographer and not in the presence of a magistrate, such depositions are illegally taken, although the prisoner's counsel had the opportunity of afterwards cross-examining the witnesses before the magistrate. R. v. Traynor (1901), 10 Que. Q.B. 63, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 410; R. v. Watts, 33 L.J.M.C. 63. The objection to the irregularity is not waived by the cross-examination of the witnesses on the prisoner's behalf on their return to the magistrate's presence, if the objection is taken by the prisoner's counsel before he proceeds to cross-examine. R. v. Traynor, supra.

Failure of counsel for the accused to attend on an adjourned enquiry to continue the cross-examination of the accused, which has been interrupted by the adjournment of a previous hearing, is not a waiver of the right to continue the cross-examination when the witness may be available if the witness was not in fact present at the adjourned hearing. R. v. Trevane (1902), 4 O.L.R. 475, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 124. The magistrate should not, under such eircumstances, obtain the signature of the absent witness to the incomplete examination, in the absence of the accused; and, if he does so, such deposition is not admissible at the subsequent trial on proof that the witness is too ill to attend. R. v. Trevane, supra; R. v. Mitchell (1892), 56 J.P. 218, 17 Cox C.C. 503; R. v. Prestridge, 72 L.T.N. 93.

Depositions may be used in trial for other offences.

1000. Depositions taken in the preliminary or other investigation of any charge against any person may be read as evidence in the prosecution of such person for any other offence, upon the like proof and in the same manner, in all respects, as they may, according to law, be read in the prosecution of the offence with which such person was charged when such depositions were taken.

1001. The statement made by the accused person before the justice may, if necessary, upon the trial of such person, be given in evidence against him without further proof thereof, unless it is proved that the justice purporting to have signed the same did not in fact sign the same.

Origin]—Sec. 689, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 223; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 30, sec. 33; Indictable Offences Act, 1848, Imp., sec. 18.

Defendant's statement not under oath]—The statement of the accused (not under oath) taken on the Code statutory form 20 under Code see, 684, upon the preliminary enquiry, is that to which reference is here made. When the statement purports to be signed by the magistrate, and also by the accused if he will (Code form 20), and is regular on its face, it may be given in evidence without further proof. R. v. Walebek, 4 W.W.R. 501, 507, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130, 23 W.L.R. 931 (Sask.). If the defendant did not understand what he signed or the warning given, it is open to him to establish that fact, and the significance of the statement would be correspondingly weakened. R. v. Walebek (1913), 4 W.W.R. 501, 507, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130 (Sask.), per Brown, J.

The statement may be taken through an interpreter where the accused is a foreigner who does not understand English. R. v. Walebek (1913), 4 W.W.R. 501, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 130, 23 W.L.R. 931 (Sask.).

Although the magistrate's record of proceedings does not show on its face that a statement made by the accused to him in answer to the charge was made after due caution in accordance with sec. 684, the fact that it was so made may be proved at the trial and the statement may then be put in evidence by the prosecution. R. v. Kalabeen (1867), 1 B.C.R., pt. 1, p. 1.

It seems that under the English practice the trial judge may order the statement to be read as part of the case for the Crown on the application of the defence when the defence is calling no witnesses, and so preserve the right of counsel for the accused to address the jury last (Code 944 (3)), subject to the right of reply of the Attorney-General or counsel on his behalf under Code sec. 944. Article in 42 8.J. 681.

- (d) Procuring feigned marriage, Part VI, sec. 309;
- (e) Forgery, Part VII, secs. 468 to 470 inclusive.

Origin]-See. 684, Code of 1892, as amended by Code Amendment Act, 1893, 56 Viet., Can., ch. 32, sec. 1; 32-33 Viet., Can., ch. 19, sec. 54.

For specified offences no conviction "upon the evidence of one witness unless such witness is corroborated," etc.]-The wording of sec. 1002 is inartistic in saying that no person shall be convicted upon the evidence of one witness, unless such witness is corroborated, etc. The usual corroboration is the evidence of another witness, though not necessarily so as it may consist of documentary evidence. But judicial interpretation has not restricted the application of the section to cases where the prosecution depended upon oral testimony given by one person. It is held rather to mean that at least some material particular must be proved by evidence in addition to the testimony of any one witness relied upon to make out the Crown's case. It is enough if there be other testimony to facts from which the tribunal trying the case, weighing them in connection with the testimony of the one witness, may reasonably conclude that the accused committed the act with which he is charged. R. v. Burr, 13 O.L.R. 485, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 103.

Apart from the Code, facts which tend to render more probable the truth of a witness's testimony on any material point are admissible in corroboration thereof, although otherwise irrelevant to the issue, and although happening before the date of the fact to be corroborated. Wilcox v. Gotfrey, 26 L.T.N.S. 481; R. v. Rabinovitch, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 496 (Man.); Green v. McLeod, 23 A.R. (Ont.) 676.

The English Perjury Act, 1911 (1 and 2 Geo. V, ch. 6) uses the words "A person shall not be liable to be convicted solely upon the evidence of one witness as to the falsity of any statement alleged to be false." This is held to mean that there can be no conviction on the evidence of one witness alone; there must be one witness and something else in addition. Reading, L.C.J., in R. v. Threlfall (1914), 10 Cr. App. R. 112. Furthermore, the jury is entitled to treat a letter written by the accused which is consistent either with the guilt or the innocence of the accused, according to the meaning which may be taken therefrom in conjunction with surrounding circumstances as in fact corroborative if the jury could draw the inference from it that it pointed to his guilt. R. v. Threlfall (1914), 10 Cr. App. R. 112; R. v. Everest (1909), 73 J.P. 269; 2 Cr. App. R. 130; R. v. Wilson (1911), 6 Cr. App. R. 125.

[§ 1002] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

Corroboration in some material particular implicating the accused]— Where corroboration of a witness is required at common law it is not requisite that it shall directly implicate the accused. Section 1002 imposes an additional condition as to the effect of such evidence which must be complied with. See Rex v. Willis, 12 Cr. App. R. 16; R. v. Pieco [1917] 1 W.W.R. 892, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 435.

Evidence in corroboration must be such that it confirms in some material particular not only the evidence that the crime has been committed, but also that the prisoner committed it. The test is the same as that applicable under the rule of practice at common law in dealing with the evidence of an accomplice. R. v. Baskerville, 86 L.J.K.B. 28, [1916] 2 K.B. 658, 25 Cox C.C. 524, 12 Cr. App. R. 81; R. v. Grosberger (1909), 152 Cent. Cr. Court 261, 267.

The weight or value of such corroboration as may have been given is for the jury, and the case should not be withdrawn from them unless the judge is satisfied that it is absolutely beyond the bounds of possibility to find corroboration. R. v. Wiltshire (1910), 152 Cent. Cr. Court Sess. papers 543, 546.

The corroboration required by sec. 1002 of the Code may result from any evidence which tends to give certainty to the contention in support of which it is advanced. Peterson v. The King, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 345, 55 S.C.R. 115, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 332; affirming R. v. Peterson, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 600, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 3 (Sask.); R. v. Scheller (1914), 6 W.W.R. 261, 27 W.L.R. 621, 7 Sask. L.R. 239, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 1.

Full corroboration is not required by sec. 1002; R. v. Bannerman, 43 U.C.Q.B. 547 (Ont.): R. v. Farrell, 1 Terr. L.R. 166. The complainant only needs to be "corroborated in some material particulars by evidence implicating the accused." R. v. Daun, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 244. It has been laid down that where there are several issues and the statute requires "corroboration by some material evidence," it does not mean corroboration on each issue, Parker v. Parker (1881), 32 U.C. C.P. 113. What is required is corroboration in some material respect that will fortify and strengthen the credibility of the main witness, and justify the evidence being accepted and acted upon, if it is believed and is sufficient. R. v. Daun, 12 O.L.R. 227; R. v. Wyse, 2 Terr. L.R. 103; R. v. Vahey, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 259 (Ont.). The corroboration required is not unlike that required in the case of accomplices. R. v. Daun, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 244, 12 O.L.R. 227. It is not necessary that there should be corroborative evidence as to the very fact; it is enough that there shall be such as shall confirm the jury in the belief that the witness is speaking the truth. R. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S. 311, 320.

Where there is a question as to the date of the offence it may frequently happen that the corroboration would be applicable as to one date only, and would disappear if the jury accepted the other date. R. v. Wann (1912), 7 Cr. App. R. 135.

CORROBORATION

Proof of opportunity not corroborative by itself]—Some extreme cases under which some remote acts have been held to be corroborative are to be found in decisions under the English Bastardy laws, but it has recently been affirmed that corroboration upon a bastardy charge is not to be predicated upon mere opportunity. Burbury v. Jackson (1916] W.N. 348, 80 J.P. 455, [1917] 1 K.B. 16.

The much-quoted case of Cole v. Manning, 2 Q.B.D. 611, must be read with the limitations imposed by later decisions. See Harvey v. Anning (1903), 87 L.T.R. 687; re Finch, 23 Ch. D. 267; Radford v. Macdonald, 18 A.R. 167 (Ont.).

It has been held in Scotland in a bastardy ease that proof of opportunity of intercourse may be corroborative evidence if of such a character as to establish suspicion. Dawson v. McKenzie (1908), S.R. 648. But when reliance is placed upon proof of opportunity, that proof must be supplemented by proof of circumstances of such a nature as to lead to the inference that it was probable that advantage would be taken of the opportunity. Ridley v. Whipp (1916), 23 Argus L.R. (Austr.) 129, 131, 22 C.L.R. 381.

Ruling at close of prosecutor's case]—Where there is question whether or not the statutory corroboration has been supplied by the evidence for the prosecution and the trial judge rules that it has, the defence has then to decide whether to rest the case and question the trial judge's decision by a reserved case to test the point; or whether to enter into the defence and call witnesses. If the defence chooses the latter course, and if corroborative evidence sufficient to satisfy the provisions of the Code appeared in the evidence adduced for the defence, the accused could not upon a reserved case any longer take advantage of the absence of corroborative evidence at the close of the prosecution. R. v. Wakelyn (1913), 4 W.W.R. 170, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 111, 23 W.L.R. 807 (Alta.); R. v. Girvin, 45 S.C.R. 167; R. v. Fraser, 7 Cr. App. R. 99.

Corroborative circumstances disclosed in testimony of accused given on his own behalf]—If the accused gives evidence on his own behalf, that evidence may be looked at for the statutory corroboration. R. v. Wakelyn (1913) 4 W.W.R. 170, 23 W.L.R. 807, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 111 (Alta.); R. v. Fontaine, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 159 (Ont.); R v. Scheller (1914) 6 W.W.R. 261, 263, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Sask.); R. v. Nash (1914) 6 W.W.R. 1390, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 38, 7 Alta. L.R. 449, 28 W.L.R. 960.

The corroboration in the testimony of the accused himself may consist of a circumstance admitted by the accused to which he offered an explanation of an exculpatory character, but which was of an implicating character were the testimony of the prosecutrix believed, if the court is of opinion that the explanation offered by the accused was an unreasonable one. R. v. Fontaine, (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 159.

Instruction of jury as to what evidence is of a corroborative character if believed]—Where corroborative evidence is required by the Code, it is the duty of the trial judge to instruct the jury as to what part of the evidence, if any, bears that character, if believed, and if he misinstructs them, the matter can be reviewed on a reserved case. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134 (Alta.); R. v. Bechtel (1912) 2 W.W.R. 624, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 40.

So also where there is no jury, if the judge has obviously treated as the corroborative evidence required by the Code, something which is not such, it would probably be fatal to the conviction. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 1137 (Alta.); per Stuart, J.

Conviction without corroborative evidence will be set aside where Code requires corroboration]—If there is not the corroboration which see. 1002 requires, a conviction will be quashed in a case to which that section applies. R. v. Magnolo, 22 B.C.R. 359, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 419; and see R v. Cohen (1914) 10 Cr. App. R. 91, 101; R. v. Akerley (1918) N.B.R., 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 343.

No statutory provision as to corroborating the testimony of an accomplice; practice as to accomplice evidence]—A jury not only may, but ought, to be told that while they ought not to convict on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice they are strictly in law at liberty to do so if they see fit. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134, 1137 (Alta.); R. v. Bechtel, (1912) 2 W.W.R. 624, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 40 (Alta.); R. v. Akerley (1918) 30 S.C.R. 343 (N.B.).

As to an accomplice the custom is to advise the jury that they should not find a verdict on an accomplice's evidence without corroboration in some particular material to the issue, R. v. Baskerville, [1916] 2 K.B. 658, 13 Cr. App. R. 81. So upon a charge of receiving stolen property, Bray, J., said, the doctrine (as to accomplices) would be done away with, if all that is required is to prove that the goods had in fact been stolen. R. v. Crane, (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 113; and see R. v. Wilson, (1911) 6 Cr. App. R. 125; R. v. Dimes (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 43.

The corroboration which the common law requires is corroboration in some material particular tending to show that the accused committed the crime charged. It is not enough that the corroboration shows the accomplice-witness to have told the truth in matters unconnected with the guilt of the accused. R. v. Baskerville [1916] 2 K.B. 658, 12 Cr. App. R. 81; 86 L.J.K.B. 28; R. v. Dumont, (1918) 54 Que, S.C. 9, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 442; R. v. Quinn, (1918) 43 O.L.R. 385.

On a trial by a judge without a jury a conviction upon the evidence of an accomplice will not be set aside for want of its corroboration. R. v. Frank, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 237, 21 O.L.R. 196.

There is no error in law in receiving the evidence of a confessed accomplice who had pleaded guilty and was awaiting sentence. He is a competent witness and his competency is not affected by the fact that sentence had not been passed. R. v. McClain, 7 W.W.R. 1134 (Alta.). There may, however, be circumstances in which the judge will prefer to pass sentence first so as to remove the inducement which the witness might feel in giving evidence in favour of the Crown in anticipation that the Crown would be lenient with him when moving for sentence in his ease. R. v. McClain, supra, at 1138, citing Winsor v. The Queen, L.R. 1 Q.B. 289, 35 L.J.M.C. 161, and R. v. Payne, L.R. 1 C.C.R. 349, 354.

Who is an accomplice]—An accomplice is one who knowingly, volun tarily and with common intent with the principal offender unites in the commission of a crime. R. v. Ah Jim (1905) 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 126.

The test by which to determine whether one is an accomplice is to ascertain whether he could be indicated for the offence for which the accused is being tried. R. v. Ratz (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1231, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 342, 24 W.L.R. 908 (Sask.). An accessory before the fact is an "accomplice" within the rule requiring that the jury be warned against accepting his uncorroborated evidence, R. v. Ratz, 4 W.W.R. 1231; and see R. v. Tate, [1908] 2 K.B. 680, 77 L.J.K.B. 1043.

Where on the trial of a charge of larceny the only evidence against the defendant is that of the person who receives the stolen property, and there is a suspicion that he knew that the property was stolen, his evidence must not be left to the jury as that of an untainted witness, but they should be warned that if they think that he was an accomplice there ought to be corroboration of his story. B. v. Jennings (1912) 7 Cr. App. B. 242.

Spies or informers distinguished from accomplices]—The detective or spy is in law wholly different from the accomplice. The rule that the evidence of an "approver" or accomplice requires corroboration is a rule of practice, not of law (except in certain cases where the statute is express). The rule does not apply to persons who have joined in or even provoked the crime as agents of the police or of the authoritics, as ordinary spies or informers: R. v. McCranor, (1918) 15 O.W.N. 260; Wigmore on Evidence, vol. 3, sec. 2060 (b); R. v. Mullins (1848), 3 Cox C.C. 526, 7 St. Tr. N.S. 1110; Regina v. Dowling (1848), 3 Cox C.C. 509, 516; Rex v. Despard (1803), 28 How. St. Tr. 346, 489; R. v. Bickley (1909) 73 J.P. 239, 53 Sol. J. 402.

Where because of zeal or other reasons an officer of the law has been led to make false statements to induce the commission of an offence in order that he may be able to prosecute the offender, his testimony must be weighed in the light of the possibility that the same motives may have a tendency to induce him to colour his testimony in order to secure a conviction. Amsden v. Rogers, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1337, 9 Sask, L.R. 323, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 389, 34 W.L.R. 1174.

Jury disregarding warning as to corroboration of an accomplice]— If, notwithstanding the caution as to an accomplice's testimony, the jury convict, without corroboration, the verdict will stand. R. v. Betchel (1912) 2 W.W.R. 624, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 40 (Alta.); R. v. Frank (1910) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 237, 21 O.L.R. 196, 16 O.W.R. 50; R. v. McNulty (1910) 22 O.L.R. 350, 17 O.W.R. 611, 17 Can. Cr. S.C. 9, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 442.

Evidence of wife of accomplice]—A strong caution should be addressed to the jury as to the reception of the evidence of the wife of an accomplice to corroborate his statement. R. v. Payne, (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 171, 29 Times L.R. 25.

On the trial of an indictment one of several accomplices in the crime charged was called as a witness against the accused. His evidence was corroborated by that of the wife of another accomplice who was not called. The wife was herself innocent of any connection with the crime. Under those circumstances it was held that the jury were entitled to rely upon her evidence as good corroboration, and that the mere fact that she was the wife of an accomplice, and that her evidence was not itself corroborated by an independent witness, did not disentile it to credit. R. v. Willis [1916] 1 K.B. 933, 85 L.J.K.B. 1129, 12 Cr. App. R. 44. The decision in R. v. Neale (1835) 7 C. & P. 168, is no longer to be considered authoritative. R. v. Willis, supra; R. v. Payne, supra.

Corroboration of confession]—A confession properly proved in law needs no corroboration to found a conviction, although in practice there is invariably some corroboration. R. v. Sykes, 8 Cr. App. R. 283.

Corroboration on perjury charge]-See secs. 170-174.

Where, upon the hearing or trial of any charge for carnally knowing or attempting to carnally know a girl under fourteen or of any charge under sec. 292 for indecent assault, the girl in respect of whom the offence is charged to have been committed, or any other child of tender years who is tendered as a witness, does not, in the opinion of the court or justices, understand the nature of an oath, the evidence of such girl or other child of tender years may be received though not given upon oath if, in the opinion of the court or justices, as the case may be, such girl or other child of tender years is possessed of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence and understands the duty of speaking the truth.

2. But no person shall be liable to be convicted of the offence, unless the testimony admitted by virtue of this section and given on behalf of the prosecution, is corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused.

3. Any witness whose evidence is admitted under this section is liable to indictment and punishment for perjury in all respects as if he or she had been sworn.

Origin]-Sec. 685, Code of 1892; 53 Vict., Can., ch. 37, sec. 13.

Corroboration of child's testimony not under oath]—It ought to be pointed out to the jury that they must not act on the evidence of the child alone, but that "there must be corroboration of it before they are entitled to regard the child's evidence at all." Per Isaacs, L.C.J., in R. v. Murray (1913) 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 248. The jury should be directed not to convict upon evidence given under see. 1003, unless it is corroborated as required by sub-sec. (2). R. v. Davies, 85 L.J.K.B. 208, 11 Cr. App. R. 272, 25 Cox C.C. 225. Corroboration may be found in the conduct of the prisoner when accused of the offence. R. v. Stevens (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 132.

That the child identified the accused after the offence may be shown by other witnesses although the child in giving unsworn testimony had not been asked about the previous identification. R. v. Christie [1914] A.C. 545.

The Annual Report of the Supt. of Neglected Children, Alta., 1917. page 62, says, as to the difficulty in cases where evidence must be given by children: "A child may give a very straight story, but under tense excitement and a cross-examination may fall down completely. The benefit of a doubt must be given to the accused, and because a child's evidence can be so shaken, many a guilty man goes free. From a layman's point of view, it would seem that some better way could be adopted for eliciting evidence from children. If the court itself were to ask all the questions at the suggestion of the attorneys interested in the case in an effort simply to get at the truth, greater justice would be done."

Corroboration of child's unsworn testimony by another child's unsworn testimony]—The question whether the evidence not given on oath of one child of tender years may be corroborated by the evidence not given on oath of another child of tender years is not yet authoritatively settled.

In Alberta the decision in R. v. Whistnant (1912) 3 W.W.R. 486, 22 W.L.R. 762, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 322, denies that such evidence is corroborative; and that decision was approved in R. v. McInulty (1914) 19 B.C.R. 109, 6 W.W.R. 315, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 347, 27 W.L.R. 464, ex-

An appeal in the latter case to the Supreme Court of Canada upon another question was dismissed but there being no dissent below on this point, the appellate court had not to consider it. R. v. Shorten, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 10, 57 S.C.R. 118. Similarly in R. v. Fontaine, (1914) 23 Cau. Cr. Cas. 159, the Appellate Division in Ontario found it unnecessary to consider that question because of other testimony being held sufficient to satisfy the Code provision.

Sub-sec. (2)—Some "other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused"]—In most cases the rule is that where there is a substantial corroboration of the evidence of an interested party, it confirms not only the statements which are expressly supported by the corroborating evidence, but all statements made: see Minister of Stamps v. Townsend, [1909] A.C. 633. That principle would be applicable to the corroboration spoken of in sec. 16 of the Evidence Act, R.S.C. 1906, eh. 145, but falls short of the "other" material evidence required by sec. 1003 (2) Crim. Code. R. v. McGivney (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 224 (B.C.); per Irving, J.A.; R. v. De Wolfe, (1904) 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 38 (N.S.); R. v. Iman Din, (1910) 15 B.C.R. 476, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 82

Weight of testimony of young child given on oath; rule as to corroboration]—That the child had been instructed on the nature of an oath only a few days before the trial will not prevent her evidence on oath being received where the judge finds her competent to be sworn. R. v. Armstrong, 15 O.L.R. 47, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 544. Even where no statutory corroboration is provided for, as to the particular offence, it is the custom of judges to warn juries not to convict a prisoner on the uncorroborated evidence of a child, although given under oath, except after the jury has weighed such evidence with extreme care. R. v. Dossi (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 1024, 1026; R. v. Graham (1910) 4 Cr. App. R. 218; R. v. Pitts (1912) 8 Cr. App. R. 126; R. v. Cratchley, (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 232.

Question of corroboration generally]-See note to sec. 1002.

Juvenile Courts]—Where Juvenile courts have been established under the Juvenile Delinquents Act, Can., 1908, ch. 40, as amended by 1912. ch. 30, and 1914, ch. 39, its provisions will control as to trials of children under sixteen years of age.

Counsel's address asking clemency]-It is at this stage of the proceedings that counsel for the prisoner addresses the court, to ask clemency for him and to advance such facts as might induce the trial judge to exercise any discretion he may have to impose a lighter sentence than the maximum, or to grant the prisoner a conditional release on "sus pended sentence" under Code sec. 1081 if the case is one which comes within the terms of the latter section. The question put by the judge before sentence is not, however, directed to appeals for elemency but to legal objections against any judgment being given upon the verdict. Matters in mitigation of the offence itself should be brought out in the evidence for the defence, but other matters, such as the effect on the family of the accused, or the condition of health of the accused himself, may influence the court in determining the extent of the imprisonment to be awarded. If the question of bad health is likely to be controverted by the Crown, it is advisable to have present the physician whose certificate is relied upon as showing the impaired health of the accused, to answer any questions the judge may choose to put in verifying or testing the physician's conclusions in that regard.

Social standing as affecting sentence]—Mr. Justice Channell, speaking for the Court of Criminal Appeal in R. v. Cargill (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 224 at 231, said: "It is very desirable, if possible, to pass a sentence on a man in a good position exactly the same as on a man in a different position; it is true the sentence is harder, but the offence is correspondingly greater; the man ought to know better, and the way of meeting that is to give exactly the same sentence; the sentence is worse, but by reason of the prisoner's position the offence is worse."

Disposing of other admitted offences at time of sentence]—The judge, in sentencing a prisoner for an offence, is entitled to, and it is desirable that he should take into consideration any other charge of the same character which the prisoner admits, even though the prisoner may not have been committed for trial on such other charge. Where the other offence is not admitted by the prisoner, the judge ought not to take it into consideration. In cases where the other offence of the same character is admitted, and there has been a committal in respect of it, the judgo should be satisfied that the prosecution consent to it being taken into consideration, and even then he ought not, as a matter of course, to take it into consideration. If there has been a committal in another county, or in respect of a different class of offence, and the prosecution does not consent, the other offence ought not to be taken into consideration; and, even where the prosecution consent, such other offence, although of the same class, if there has been a committal in respect of it in another county, should be left to be dealt with in the other county. Rex v. McLean, [1911] 1 K.B. 332, 27 Times L.R. 138.

Leave may be given to the Crown after verdict to adduce evidence of previous convictions of the accused for the information of the court in determining the punishment. R. v. Rowluk, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 127, 8 W.W.R. 995; R. v. Bonnevie, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 376.

It was said in a Manitoba case that when a previous conviction is not charged in the indictment or information, neither a judge nor a magistrate has any right to ask a prisoner, after conviction, whether he had been previously convicted or not, either with the view of ascertaining whether the prisoner is liable to any increased punishment in such case, or with the view of determininig what the proper sentence within the ordinary maximum provided by the statute in the particular case, should be. If a more onerous penalty is provided by statute in case there has been a previous conviction, it is to be applied only where the previous conviction has been charged in the indictment or information; for example, the additional punishment for theft after a previous conviction for theft. Code sec. 386 (2); Rex v. Edwards, 17 Man. L.R. 288, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 202.

The habit of acting on statements as to prior convictions shown in the police calendar, but not strictly proved or admitted, in deciding upon the punishment, was deprecated in R. v. Metcalfe, 25 T.L.R. 512. R. v. Everitt, 8 Cr. App. R. 156, and R. v. Palmer, 8 Cr. App. R. 245; so also as to statements made by a police officer as to offences supposed to have been committed by the prisoner, but not admitted by him where there had been no prosecution for them. R. v. Brooks, 8 Cr. App. R. 111, 29 Times L.R. 152; R. v. Everitt, 8 Cr. App. R. 156.

Evidence of motive after plea of guilty]-When a prisoner pleads guilty the judge may, before passing sentence, in order to form an opinion as to the degree of culpability, hear evidence as to the motive which induced the prisoner to commit the offence; but where the offence is, by statute, punishable by a more severe sentence if accompanied by circumstances of aggravation, such circumstances may be taken into account in passing sentence only if they have been charged in the indictment and been proved to the satisfaction of the jury or admitted by a plea of guilty. R. v. Bright, [1916] 2 K.B. 441, 12 Cr. App. R. 69. 115 L.T. 488.

Character evidence given by police as affecting sentence]-Police officers in giving evidence of a prisoner's character after conviction, must distinguish carefully between information within their own knowledge and information supplied to them, and between statements of fact and statements of opinion. R. v. Stratton, 10 Cr. App. R. 35.

For the purpose of sentence, previous acquittals should be wholly disregarded. R. v. Josephson, 10 Cr. App. R. 8.

Awarding costs of prosecution on conviction]-On conviction for any indictable offence, the court may add to the sentence an order that the Presence of accused at time of sentence]—The rule at common law is that when any corporal punishment is to be inflicted the defendant must be personally before the court at the time of pronouncing the sentence. 25 Am. & Eng. Encyc., 2nd ed., 296; Rex v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 267; Reg. v. Templeman, 1 Salk. 56. When a fine only is to be imposed it is discretionary with the court to require the presence of the defendant when sentence is rendered. Reg. v. Templeman, 1 Salk. 56; Duke's case, 1 Salk. 400; Rex v. Hann, 3 Burr. 1786; Reg v. Kinglake, 18 W.R. 806.

Maximum and minimum terms and cumulative punishments]—See sees. 1054, 1055.

Commencement of sentence]—The Penetentiaries Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 147, provides that every one who is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary shall be subject to the provisions of the statutes relating to such penitentiary, and to all rules and regulations lawfully made with respect thereto. Also that the term of imprisonment in pursuance of any sentence shall, unless otherwise directed in the sentence, commence on and from the day of passing such sentence; but no time during which the convict is out on bail shall be reckoned as part of the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced. (Sec. 43.)

A similar provision as to the commencement of sentence is made as regards sentences to prisons and reformatories by the Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 3.

Where the different counts in an indictment refer to and charge what is really the same offence the practice is either to render sentence on each count to run concurrently (Archbold's Crim. Pldg., 13th ed., 62), or to render a single sentence upon all the counts for the entire offence. Ryalls v. Reg., 11 Q.B. 795, 3 Cox C.C. 254; O'Brien v. Reg., 2 Cox C.C. 122; and see Kelly v. The King, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 250, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282; R. v. Kelly, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 94; R. v. Norman [1915] 1 K.B. 341; R. v. Lockett, [1914] 2 K.B. 720, 83 L.J.K.B. 1193.

Certified copy of sentence to penitentiary a sufficient warrant]—The penitentiary warden is to receive the convict without any further warrant than a copy of the sentence taken from the minutes of the court before which the convict was tried, and certified by a judge or by the clerk or acting clerk of such court. Penitentiaries Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 47, sec. 44.

The certified copy of sentence is sufficient warrant for the imprisonment of a convict in the penitentiary, and it is not necessary that it should contain every essential averment of a formal conviction. Where the venue is mentioned in the margin of a commitment, in the case of an offence which does not require local description, it is not necessary [§1004] that the warrant should describe the place where the offence was committed. A warrant of commitment to a penitentiary need not state the time from which the term of imprisonment shall begin to run, as under the Penitentiaries Act terms of imprisonment commence on and from the day of the passing of the sentence. Ex parte Smitheman (Smitheman v. The King) 35 Can. S.C.R. 189, 490, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 10, 17.

If the certificate of sentence to imprisonment in a penitentiary is irregular for omission of the date of sentence, leave may be given on a habeas corpus motion to return an amended certificate correcting the omission. R. v. Wright, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 461.

Punishments and disabilities]-See sec. 1027 et seq.

Remission in part for good conduct in penitentiary]—See Penitentiaries Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 147, sec. 64.

A convict in a penitentiary may provisionally earn a remission of part of his sentence by good conduct duly certified in pursuance of the Penitentiary Regulations of November, 1898; but remissions so earned are subject to forfeiture under such rules and this without any hearing in the nature of a trial or any right of the convict to be heard. R. v. Huckle, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 73, 6 O.W.N. 661.

Prima facic the warden and officers of a penitentiary are to determine questions of remission of part of sentence under the Penitentiary Regulations of November, 1898, for good conduct of the convict while in the prison, and also questions of the forfeiture of remissions earned, subject to review and sanction by the Minister of Justice under such regulations; it is not open to the court on habeas corpus to enquire into the validity of a direction contained in a report duly approved by the Minister forfeiting on the ground of misconduct the periods of remission previously earned by the convict. Ibid.

Proving previous convictions after verdict and before sentence]— After conviction, and on the accused coming up for sentence, the Crown may put in certified copies of previous convictions against the accused and proof of identity in each case with a view to asking a severe sentence. R. v. Rowluk, 8 W.W.R. 995, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 127 (Man.).

Sentence justified by any count.

Motion in arrest of judgment.—Sentence during sitting of court.— Recognizance to appear for sentence.

1007. The accused may at any time before sentence move in arrest of judgment on the ground that the indictment does not, after amendment, if any, state any indictable offence.

2. The court may in its discretion either hear and determine the matter during the same sittings or reserve the matter for the court of appeal as hereinafter provided.

3. If the court decides in favour of the accused, he shall be discharged from that indictment.

4. If no such motion is made, or if the court decides against the accused upon such motion, the court may sentence the accused during the sittings of the court, or the court may in its discretion discharge him on his own recognizance, or on that of such sureties as the court thinks fit, or both, to appear and receive judgment at some future court or when called upon.

5. If sentence is not passed during the sittings, the judge of any superior court before which the person so convicted afterwards appears or is brought, or if he was convicted before a court of general or quarter sessions, the court of general or quarter sessions at a subsequent sittings may pass sentence upon him or direct him to be discharged.

Motion in arrest of judgment]—Subject to the limitations of Code sees. 898 and 1010, the accused may, under sec. 1007, sub-sec. (1), before sentence, move in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the indictment does not, after amendment, if any, state any indictable offence. There seems to be another ground for arrest of judgment still open to the accused under uncommon circumstances, not affected by secs. 898 or 1010, namely that after indictment found and before judgment pronounced, the statute on which the indictment is framed had been re pealed. Bowen-Rowlands on Indictments, p. 161; R. v. St. Mawgan 8 A. & E. 496, 7 L.J.M.C. 98; R. v. Denton, 18 Q.B. 761, 21 L.J.M.C 20. The question of the court's jurisdiction is not properly raised by a motion in arrest of judgment. R. v. Hogle (1896) 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 53. 5 Que. Q.B. 59. See Code sec. 1015 as to appeal.

Sec. 942 declares the right of the accused to make full answer and defence after the close of the case for the prosecution. The jury having found the facts against him by a verdict of guilty, he may still apply to the court to withhold sentence, i.e., in arrest of judgment, on the ground that the indictment does not state any indictable offence (Ci Code sec. 1007), notwithstanding the objection taken before plea and notwithstanding any amendment made under Cr. Code sec, 898. In practice a formal defect apparent on the indictment is amended on the motion to quash or the filing of a demurrer. As to the scope of the statutory power of the court to amend the indictment, see note to see 898. A distinction is to be made between a count which imperfectly states the offence, and which is in that sense a defective count, and a count in which there is a total omission of a necessary averment. In the former case the defect is generally curable by amendment, and objection must be taken by demurrer or motion to quash; Code sec. 898; and the court may amend the defect apparent on the face of the indictment. Sec. 898. Failure to demur or to move to quash will prevent the accused from afterwards moving in arrest of judgment for such apparent defect which, had it been raised by demurrer or motion to quash, might have been amended by the court.

If, on the other hand, the indictment did not charge an offence at all, it would not be amendable; R. v. Flynn, (1878) 18 N.B.R. 321; R. v. Bainbridge (1918) 42 O.L.R. 203; R. v. Jackson (1917) 40 O.L.R. 173; and see R. v. Quinn (1918) 43 O.L.R. 385.

The verdict would not cure a total omission of an averment essential to disclose a crime as distinguished from its being essential to give particulars of the crime. See R. v. Silverlock, [1894] 2 Q.B. 766, 772, 63 L.J.M.C. 233; Heymann v. The Queen, L.R. 8 Q.B. 102, 12 Cox C.C. 383; R. v. Aspinall, 2 Q.B.D. 48, 58, 13 Cox C.C. 563, 46 L.J.M.C. 145, 149, affirming R. v. Aspinall, 1 Q.B.D. 730; R. v. Lynch [1900] 1 K.B. 144, 72 L.J.K.B. 167; R. v. Schaefer, (1918) 28 Que. K.B. 35, 31 Can. Cr. Cas, 22.

In cases in which the defect would not be cured by verdict, the accused might still move in arrest of judgment or take an appeal (sec. 1013 et scq.) in the manner which is now substituted for the former procedure on a writ of error (sec. 1014). Heymann v. The Queen, L.R. 8 Q.B.D. 102; R. v. Goldsmith, L.R. 2 C.C.R. 74, 42 L.J.M.C. 94. But it may be that such cases are not within the scope of sec. 1007 as regards arrest of judgment, and that the motion in arrest of judgment upon a non-amendable indictment is founded on the common law rather than upon sec. 1007. See opinion of Clute, J., in R. v. Quinn, (1918) 43 O.L.R. 385, 390; R. v. Carr, (1872) 26 L.C. Jur. 61 (Que.); R. v. Deery, (1874) 26 L.C. Jur. 129 (Que.); R. v. Flynn (1878) 18 N.B.R. 321.

SENTENCE

King (1908), 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348, at 365, 40 Can. S.C.E. 272, said: "This is not as clear as one would wish. Is it only in the case of an amended indictment that the motion lies? The very comprehensive language of section 898 shows how very limited a field is left for motions in arrest of judgment. It is quite possible that after a prisoner had pleaded instead of demurring, that the indictment might erroneously be amended by a trial judge in such a way as to render it bad in law. If he should, over-confident of his own judgment, make a mistake in refusing to allow a demurrer to an amended indictment, the only recourse the prisoner would have as of right, save objecting to the amendment and noting of it, would be this motion to arrest judgment."

New indictment may follow an arrest of judgment]—If judgment is arrested upon an insufficient indictment, the accused may be again indicted. Vaux's case, 4 Co. R. 44a, 45b; 4 Blackstone's Com. 375.

Prosecutor's appeal if judgment arrested]—If the court arrests the judgment and refuses to pass any sentence, the prosecutor may, without any preliminary motion for leave to appeal, move the court of appeal (sec. 2, sub-sec. (7)) to pass a proper sentence. Sec. 1016, sub-sec. (2).

What objections must be taken before plea]-See sec. 898.

Sentence deferred to another sittings of court]—If the trial judge is prevented by illness from attending the sittings to which sentence had been deferred, the judge assigned to take his place may pass the sentence. R. v. Bourret (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 65.

Arrest of judgment in defamatory libel]-See sec. 956 (2).

Review of verdict and sentence]-The accused has a limited right of appeal on questions of law (Code sec. 1013) and may apply to the trial judge for a reserved case (Code sec. 1014) for the opinion of the Court of Appeal. If a reserved case is refused he may move for leave to appeal on the questions of law desired to be raised (Cr. Code secs. 1015-1017). If leave is granted, the Court of Appeal directs the trial judge to "state" a case, and the case so "stated" is brought up in much the same manner as a case "reserved" by the trial judge. The motion for leave to appeal is sometimes called an appeal from the refusal to reserve a case; though sub-sec. 2 uses the words "move the court of appeal for leave to appeal." This appeal, whether by case reserved or case stated, has an important qualification as regards objections to the admission or rejection of evidence and to objections that the jury was misdirected or that "something not according to law was done at the trial," and that is, that no conviction shall be set aside or new trial directed unless the appellate court is of opinion that some "substantial wrong or miscarriage" was occasioned at the trial. Code sec. 1019. It is specially provided, however, that the improper disallowance of a defendant's challenge of a juror shall entitle him to a new trial apart from this limitation as to substantial wrong. To attack the verdict on the ground that it is against the weight of evidence requires the concurrence of the trial judge. If the trial judge thinks the verdict against the accused is perverse, he may give him leave to apply to the Court of Appeal for a new trial on the ground that "the verdict was against the weight of evidence," and the court of appeal may then direct a new trial "if it thinks fit." Code sec. 1021. Again, there is always the remedy of an application to the Crown for a remission or commutation of the sentence. For offences against the Criminal Code or other federal laws, the application will be made to the Department of the Minister of Justice, Ottawa, and the Minister has a statutory power under Code sec. 1022 to direct a new trial in certain contingencies.

The unanimous opinion of the Court of Appeal on a reserved or stated case is final, subject to a possible prerogative appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council (see note to sec. 1025), but if there is a dissent in the Court of Appeal and one or more judges answer in favour of the accused some of the questions submitted, so that the court cannot be said to be "unanimous in affirming the conviction," a further appeal will lie from the affirmance ordered by a majority in the Provincial Court of Appeâl to the Supreme Court of Canada, sitting at Ottawa. See note to Code sec. 1024.

Punishment only after being duly convicted]-See Code sec. 1027.

Discretion as to penalty]—See Code sees. 1028 and 1029, 1035, 1044, 1048-1057.

Woman sentenced to death while pregnant.-Inquiry as to pregnancy.

1008. If sentence of death is passed upon any woman she may move in arrest of execution on the ground that she is pregnant.

2. If such a motion is made the court shall direct one or more registered medical practitioners to be sworn to examine the woman in some private place, either together or successively, and to inquire whether she is with child of a quick child or not.

3. If upon the report of any of them it appears to the court that she is so with child, execution shall be arrested until she is delivered of a child, or until it is no longer possible in the course of nature that she should be so delivered.

- (b) by reason that the jury process has been awarded to a wrong officer, upon an insufficient suggestion;
- (c) for any misnomer or misdescription of the officer returning such process, or of any of the jurors; or,
- (d) because any person has served upon the jury who was not returned as a juror by the sheriff or other officer.

2. Where the offence charged is an offence created by any statute, or subjected to a greater degree of punishment by any statute, the indictment shall, after verdict, be held sufficient, if it describes the offence in the words of the statute creating the offence, or prescribing the punishment, although they are disjunctively stated or appear to include more than one offence, or otherwise.

Origin]—7 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 64, sec. 21, and see 14 and 15 Vict. (Imp.), ch. 100; 4-5 Vict. (Can.), ch. 24, sec. 47; C.S. Can. (1859), ch. 99, sec. 85; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 246; Code of 1892, sec. 734.

Similiter]—The English Criminal Law Act of 1826 provided that the want of a similiter should not be a cause for reversal or stay of judgment. But even prior to that statute the objection that there was no joinder of issue for want of a similiter was not allowed in capital cases. R. v. Oneby, 2 Str. 766, 755; 1 Chitty's Crim. Law (1826 ed.) 481. And in misdemeanours the court would order the similiter to be interlined on the record. R. v. Yousry, [1914] W.N. 388 (n).

Irregularities in forming the jury]—Sec. 1011 prevents certain objections to the regularity of the proceedings in selecting the jurors or preparing the jurors' book from being raised for the first time after verdict and judgment although the manner of selection involves an omission to observe statutory directions in the preparation of the jurors' book, the selecting of jury lists, the drafting of panels from the jury lists, and although the omission to observe the directions of the provincial law concerning juries may have been one in respect of the qualification of jurors. Sec. 1011 goes only to delinquencies or mistakes of the officials. See R. v. Brown and Diggs, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 237, 45 N.S.R. 473, and under prior law, R. v. Feore, (1877) 3 Que. L.R. 219.

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

While sec. 1010 applies only to objections after verdict, it remains a dispated point whether sec. 1011 is similarly limited. In the majority opinion in R. v. Morrow, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, 320, it is intimated that it is not so limited, stress being laid upon the words "shall be allowed for error upon any appeal" as indicating an objection before trial which would have to go on the record to be effective under the former writ of error. Sec. 1019 is to be read along with sec. 1011 as to grounds of challenge "to the array" and if the court of appeal is of opinion that any challenge for the defence was improperly disallowed, a new trial will be granted. Sec. 1019; R. v. Morrow, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310, 320.

It is provided in sec. 1010, sub-sec. (d), that the judgment will not be quashed "because any person has served upon the jury who was not returned as a juror by the sheriff or other officer." This provision means that the omission of the name of a person on the panel for the term would not nullify the verdict, but the article of the Code should be construed strictly and it does not dispense with the qualification of a juror who acts. It does not deprive the prisoner of the right to be tried by twelve jurors having the required qualification. Sec. 921 of the Criminal Code enacts that: "Every person qualified and summoned as a grand or petit juror according to the laws in force for the time being in any province of Canada shall be duly qualified to serve as such juror in criminal courts in that province." Sec. 1010 dispenses with the summons (as a pre-requisite) but not with the qualification. Lacoste, C.J., in R. v. McCraw, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, at 274, 16 Que. K.B. 193.

Mere irregularity in calling together the jury, such as mere misnomer of a juryman, is not sufficient to avoid the proceedings. But where a man duly summoned and also qualified to serve, was personated by a man who was not qualified and was not summoned, it has recently been held in England that there is a mistrial, for the accused was deprived of his legal right of peremptory challenge in respect of twelve qualified persons and of his legal right of trial by qualified jurors. R. v. Wakefield (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 319, explaining R. v. Mellor, 27 L.J.M.C. 121, 1 Dears. & B. 468; R. v. Tremearne (1826), 5 B. & C. 254. [Contra, R. v. Battista, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Que.)]

But it may be that the objection must have been taken in some way before the verdict was rendered and sentence passed although a challenge of a juror may be an appropriate procedure only as regards persons on the jury list. R. v. McCraw, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 253, 16 Que. K.B. 193, 204; R. v. Battista, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 1 (Que.); Brisebois v. The Queen, (1888) 15 S.C.R. 421; R. v. Morrow, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 310 (Que.). As was said in R. v. Battista, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 1, at 5 (Que.); "once the verdict has been rendered all those who served on the jury without objection are deemed to have been competent to serve."

1011. No omission to observe the directions contained in any Act as respects the qualification, selection, balloting or distribution of jurors, the preparation of the jurors' book, the selecting of jury lists, the drafting of panels from the jury lists or the striking of special juries, shall be a ground for impeaching any verdict, or shall be allowed for error upon any appeal to be brought upon any judgment rendered in any criminal case.

Origin]—Sec. 735, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 247. Irregularities in jury lists or drafting of panels]—See note to sec. 1010.

Appeal from conviction by judge of trade conspiracy.

1012. An appeal upon all issues of law and fact shall lie from any conviction by the judge without the intervention of a jury for any offence mentioned in sec. 498 to the court of appeal in the province where such conviction is made; and the evidence taken upon the trial shall form part of the record in appeal, and, for that purpose, the court before which the case is tried shall take note of the evidence, and of all legal objections thereto.

Origin]-52 Vict., Can., ch. 41, sec. 5.

Appeal on both fact and law in trade combine case under sec. 498]— See notes to sees. 496-498, 581. The court of appeal is to decide whether the judgment appealed from should have been an acquittal of the accused instead of a conviction, or whether, on the other hand, the judgment against him can reasonably be supported. R. v. Clarke (No. 2), 1 Alta. L.R. 358, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 57, 9 W.L.R. 243.

Appeals generally.—When appeal shall lie.—Decision final when. —Appeal in case of dissent.

1013. An appeal from the verdict or judgment of any court or judge having jurisdiction in criminal cases, or of a magistrate proceeding under sec. 777, on the trial of any person for an indictable offence, shall lie upon the application of such person if convicted, to the court of appeal in the cases hereinafter provided for, and in no others.

2. Whenever the judges of the court of appeal are unanimous in deciding an appeal brought before the said court their decision shall be final. [§ 1013]

CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

3. If any of the judges dissent from the opinion of the majority, an appeal shall lie from such decision to the Supreme Court of Canada as hereinafter provided.

Origin]-Sec. 742, Code of 1892.

"To the court of appeal"]-See definition in sec. 2, sub-sec. (7).

Finding of insanity]—The words "if convicted," used in sec. 1013 would appear to bar an appeal against the finding of insanity brought on behalf of a person acquitted on the ground of insanity when the act was committed. Felstead v. The King [1914] A.C. 534, 10 Cr. App. R. 129 (H.L.), affirming R. v. Felstead, 9 Cr. App. R. 228; R. v. Machardy, [1911] 2 K.B. 1144, 28 Times L.R. 2, 6 Cr. App. R. 272, R. v. Ireland [1910] 1 K.B. 654, 4 Cr. App. R. 74 was overruled in Felstead's case; R. v. Larkins, 27 Times L.R. 438; and see Code secs. 966-969.

Appeals from summary trials under sec. 777]-See note to see, 777.

Judicial comity between the provinces]—Macdonald, C.J.A., of the British Columbia Court of Appeal, said, in R. v. Sam Jon, (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 334, 20 B.C.R. 549: "Unless I were convinced beyond reasonable doubt that a decision of a Court of Appeal in another Province was erroneous, I should follow it, not only from considerations of judicial comity, but as well to the end that uniformity of decision should prevail as far as possible in respect of laws which are common to all parts of Canada."

But a decision of the highest courts in England will be followed rather than a decision at variance with it in another province. Berlin Hardware Co. v. Colonial Investment Co. [1918] 1 W.W.R. 378, 11 Sask. L.R. 46. Compare Pacific Lumber v. Imperial Timber, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 507 (B.C.).

Appeal from Court of Appeal to Supreme Court of Canada]-Code see, 1024.

Fukon Territory Appeals]--For the purpose of Part XIX of the Criminal Code the court of appeal from the verdict or judgment of the Territorial Court or a judge thereof, shall be the Supreme Court of Canada. The Yukon Act, R.S.C. ch. 63, sec. 102. For the purpose of Part XIX of the Criminal Code the court of appeal from the judgment of a police magistrate in a case where his jurisdiction is dependent upon the provision of the said Part with respect to police magistrates of cities and incorporated towns shall be the Territorial Court en banc. The judgment of the Territorial Court upon any such appeal from a police magistrate shall be final and conclusive if the judges of the court are unanimous therein, otherwise there shall be an appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court of Canada. Writ of error abolished.- Reserving questions of law.

1014. No proceeding in error shall be taken in any criminal case.

2. The court before which any accused person is tried may, either during or after the trial, reserve any question of law arising either on the trial or on any of the proceedings preliminary, subsequent, or incidental thereto, or arising out of the direction of the judge, for the opinion of the court of appeal in manner hereinafter provided.

3. Either the prosecutor or the accused may during or after the trial, either orally or in writing, apply to the court, to reserve any such question as aforesaid, and the court if it refuses so to reserve it, shall nevertheless take a note of such objection.

4. After a question is reserved the trial shall proceed as in other cases.

5. If the result is a conviction, the court may in its discretion respite the execution of the sentence or postpone sentence till the question reserved has been decided, and shall in its discretion commit the person convicted to prison or admit him to bail with one or two sufficient sureties, in such sums as the court thinks fit, to surrender at such time as the court directs.

6. If the question is reserved, a case shall be stated for the opinion of the court of appeal.

Origin]-8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 2; sec. 743, Code of 1892.

Limitations of the right of appeal]—The right to invoke the jurisdiction of the courts by way of appeal from a conviction after a trial at the assizes given by sec. 1014 of the Criminal Code is a strictly limited one. The Code does not contemplate that an accused person should be entitled as of right to claim redress by way of appeal in every case in which it alleged that the trial judge has made a mistake as, for instance, in respect of a question which is left to his discretion; the appeal given is by way of case stated and the case must present some question of law. In respect of cases not falling within sec. 1014 or sec. 1021 a right is given by sec. 1022 to apply to the Minister of Justice who has power to order a new trial. Mulvihill v. The King, 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 194 at 196, 18 D.L.R. 217; per Duff, J.; same case below, R. v. Mulvihill, 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 26 W.L.R. 955.

It has been doubted whether the remedy by case reserved under sec. 1014 and that by application for a new trial under sec. 1021 should both be open to the accused at the same time. R. v. McIntyre, 31 N.S.R. 422; R. v. MacCaffery, 33 N.S.R. 232, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 193.

If the accused is not satisfied with the case reserved, it is his right to apply to have some other question reserved; and, in the event of refusal, it is his right to move for leave to appeal (see. 1015), and "on any appeal," the Court of Appeal would have power to require the evidence, or any part of it, to be sent to it. R. v. Beboning, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 405, 412.

Appeals from justices on cases stated in summary conviction matters go to the tribunal defined by sec. 705, though it may in some provinces consist of the same court. See secs. 705 and 761, and as to appeals both on the law and the facts in summary conviction cases, see Code secs. 749-760.

"Either the prosecutor or the accused" may apply]—Where the trial judge has erred in withdrawing the case from the jury and directing a verdict of not guilty, a new trial may be ordered on a case reserved on the Crown's application. R. v. Duggan, 16 Man. R. 441, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 147.

The prosecution may appeal if the judge trying a case under the "speedy trials" clauses erroneously declines to receive material evidence. R. v. Judge (M.), (1915) 24 Que. K.B. 115, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 354.

An informant, although bound over to prefer the indictment for an offence against public order cannot appeal on the dismissal of the case at the trial where the proceedings on the indictment were conducted by the Crown prosecutor; the informant is not the "prosecutor" within sec. 1014, and has no locus standi to appeal at least when not authorized to represent the Crown. R. v. Fraser, 30 O.L.R. 598, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 140.

Application during or after the trial]—Prior to 1909, sub-sec. (3) did not contain the words "or after." The amendment of that year, 8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9, sec. 2, supersedes the decisions in Ead v. The King (1908) 40 S.C.R. 272, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 348; R. v. Pertella (1908) 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 208, 14 B.C.R. 43, and R. v. Toto, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 410 (Terr.), on the interpretation of the former sub-section. But even before the amendment the trial judge might, after the date of the judgment, reserve a case of his own motion. R. v. Paquin, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 134 (Que.); R. v. McGuire, 36 N.B.R. 609, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 554.

questions of law must be stated. It is not a proper form of question to submit in book form before the court of appeal a record of the proceedings and evidence and to ask a general question whether or not there is anything in it which entitles the accused to have the verdict against him reversed or a new trial ordered. R. v. Moke, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575, 584, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (Alta.); and see R. v. Fong Soon [1919] 1 W.W.R. 486 (B.C.).

It is not proper to state a reserved case questioning the weight of evidence or the jury's verdict when there is evidence to submit to the jury. Whether there is any evidence at all to submit to the jury is a question of law for the judge to determine, but as to the sufficience of the evidence when there is evidence to submit it is for the jury to find. R. v. Brindamour, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 315; R. v. Lloyd, 19 O.R. 352; R. v. Winslow, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 215; R. v. McIntyre, 3 Can. Crim. Cas. 413; R. v. Letang, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 505; R. v. McCaffery, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 193 (N.S.).

If the trial judge has no doubt that there was evidence to go to the jury he should not reserve a case asking whether there was sufficient evidence to sustain the conviction, but should leave the accused to his remedy of an application to the court of appeal for leave. R. v. Brindamour, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 315; R. v. Letang, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 505; R. v. Batterman, (1915) 34 O.L.R. 225, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 351.

The appellate court cannot interfere merely on the ground that a conviction is against the weight of evidence: R. v. Bowman, 3 Can. Crim. Cas. 410. But if there is no evidence to bring the charge within the terms of the Code, the conviction is contrary to law, and cannot be sustained. R. v. Wilkes, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 226 at 229, 7 O.W.R. 854.

Where the question is not merely as to the sufficiency of evidence but of no evidence, it is a question of law which may be raised by an appeal. R. v. Lai Ping, (1904) 11 B.C.R. 102; R. v. DeMesquito (1915) 9 W.W.R. 113, 117; R. v. White (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 74.

The Crown will not be given leave to appeal as on a question of law when the case was dismissed for insufficiency of the evidence adduced to prove an essential ingredient of the offence. R. v. Jacobs, (1917) 26 Que. K.B. 382, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 80; R. v. White, (1914) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 74, 21 Rev. Leg. 23 (Que.).

But the lack of legal evidence to support a conviction raises a question of law on which the person convicted may appeal. R. v. Howe, (1913) 42 N.S.R. 378, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 215; R. v. Winslow, 12 Man. R. 649, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 215, R. v. McIntyre, 31 N.S.R. 422, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 413. The question of law on a trial without a jury is not whether the judge came to a proper conclusion on the evidence, but whether there was any evidence upon which the accused could properly be convicted. R. v. McBrady (1919) 15 O.W.N. 369; R. v. Green, (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 425 (Alta.).

tion of tion or A direction to the jury that there was competent evidence raises a question of law as to the competency. Rivet v. The King, 24 Que. K.B. 559, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 235, 27 D.L.R. 695.

As to the regularity of a magistrate's inquiry, after conviction, into previous convictions against the accused upon a question of suspended sentence under Code sec. 1081, doubt was expressed in R. v. Bonnevie, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 376, 38 N.S.R. 560, whether such was a proper subject for a reserved case.

Where a reserved case is improperly framed, so as to ask a mixed question of law and fact, it should be remitted for correction. R. v. Wakelyn, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 170, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 111, 23 W.L.R. 807.

In R. v. Barnes, 42 N.S.R. 55, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 301, the majority opinion was for declining jurisdiction on a case reserved in respect of a statement alleged by affidavits of two jurors to have been made to the jury by the sheriff having them in charge (but denied by him) because the case reserved sent up the affidavits to the court of appeal without any finding of the disputed fact. It was considered that the appeal court had no jurisdiction to decide the preliminary question of fact which the trial judge had referred to it along with the question of law which would arise only if the finding of fact was in accord with the jurors' affidavits. R. v. Barnes, supra.

Where a reserved case before the court of appeal does not reserve all the questions which that court thinks should have been reserved it may direct that a case be re-stated by the trial court so as to bring up all the questions. R. v. Bleiler, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1459, 1463, 10 Alta. L.R. 520, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 9.

If some of the questions reserved for the court of appeal are based upon an incorrect statement of the facts disclosed by the accompanying records of the trial so that the objections raised fail because such questions import premises inconsistent with the facts, the court of appeal will give no answer to the objectionable questions, but deal only with the others. R. v. Moke, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575, 583, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296.

Whether second appeal lies on other grounds]—It is doubtful whether there is power to entertain a second appeal brought on new grounds after the disposal of the first appeal. R. v. Bela Singh (1915) 22 B.C.R. 321, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 40. Whether there is power or not to entertain successive appeals, such a practice is not to be encouraged. R. v. Bela Singh, supra.

Misdirection and non-direction]—Under some circumstances nondirection to a jury upon a particular point may be, substantially and in effect, a misdirection, and so involve a question of law founding an appeal under Code secs. 1013, 1014. R. v. Murray and Mahoney, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 805; 11 Alta. L.R. 592, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 247.

As to misdirection in particular circumstances, see the section of the Code dealing with the punishment of the particular crime.

Question of law as to attempts]—The question whether an act done or omitted with intent to commit an offence is or is not only preparation for the commission of that offence, and too remote to constitute an "attempt" to commit it, is a question of law. Code sec. 72.

Discretion as to trial of various counts separately or jointly]—In R. v. Hughes, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 450 (Out.), it was said that the discretion of the trial judge under Code see, 857 in trying the different counts of an indictment jointly or separately is not subject to review by the Court of Appeal.

Discretion in discharging a jury]—In R. v. Lewis (1909), 78 L.J.K.B. 722, it was held that the discretion of a judge in discharging a jury was not a question of law for the Court of Appeal to deal with.

So also in R. v. Bordenink [1919] 1 W.W.R. 968 (Sask.).

Discretion as to postponement of trial]—Where there has been an exercise of judicial discretion in granting or refusing the postponement of a trial (e.g., where the trial judge has refused a postponement, because he was of the opinion that further time should not be allowed) the propriety of the exercise of his discretion is not reviewable by an appellate court and is not properly the subject of a reserved case under sec. 1014. Mulvihill v. The King, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 194; R. v. Mulvihill (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 26 W.L.R. 955; R. v. Blyth, 19 O.L.R. 386, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 224. But if it were clear that there had not been any exercise of judicial discretion, such might constitute an error of law upon which an appeal would lie. Mulvihill v. The King, 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587.

Review of amendment or refusal of amendment to indictment]---Code sec. 890. Under 890 (3) the Code has made a determination of the judge as to allowing an amendment a question of law which may be reviewed.

Appeal after as well as before completion of sentence]—There appears to be no good reason why an appeal should not be had even after completion of the punishment. Leave to appeal was granted under the English Act after the sentence was served, and on the hearing the conviction was set aside. R. v. Williams, (1912) 8 Cr. App. R. 71 and 84.

Bail pending appeal]—If the trial judge has ordered bail and has fixed the amount and the method of testing the sufficiency of the sureties, the taking of the recognizance is a ministerial act which may be delegated to justices of the peace; the recognizance is subject to estreat in the trial court. Johnston v. Attorney-General; The King v. Johnston, (1910) 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (N.S.).

In Quebee, it is held that the court of King's Bench of that province exercising a general criminal jurisdiction and on its appeal side being a court of criminal appeal under sec. 1014, can admit the accused to bail pending a further appeal on disposing of the case adversely to him, if there is a dissent entitling him to take a further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. R. v. Brunet, (1917) 27 Que. K.B. 224, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 9. The jurisdiction exists at common law, if not conferred by the Code; R. v. Brunet, supra; but if the application is not made until after the case has been transferred to the Supreme Court of Canada, the King's Bench is then disseized of the case and will not entertain the application but leave the prisoner to apply to the Supreme Court of Canada. R. v. Brunet, supra.

Writ of error abolished]—The procedure by writ of error for which is now substituted the procedure by case reserved or other appeal under the Code was formerly the only mode of attacking a conviction of a court of record. Re O'Cain, 13 R.L. Court of appeal in Ontario]—A divisional court of the appellate division of the Supreme Court of Ontario has jurisdiction as provided by the Criminal Code. Jurisdiction Act, R.S.O. 1914, ch. 56, sec. 26.

Yukon Territory Appeals]—See the Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, sees. 102 and 103, and note to Code sec. 1013.

Refusal to reserve.-Notice of motion for leave to appeal.

1015. If the court refuses to reserve the question, the party applying may move the court of appeal as hereinafter provided.

2. The Attorney General or party so applying may, on notice of motion to be given to the accused or prosecutor as the case may be, move the court of appeal for leave to appeal.

3. The court of appeal may, upon the motion and upon considering such evidence, if any, as it thinks fit to receive, grant or refuse such leave.

Origin]-Sec. 744, Code of 1892.

If the trial court refuses to reserve]—Possibly an unreasonable delay by the trial judge in disposing of the application to reserve a case might be considered as a refusal. See. 1016A provides that if the judge or magistrate "refuses or neglects" to state a case after having granted a motion for a reserved case, the appellant may, on notice, apply to the court of appeal to state a case, and if a case is stated by the court of appeal it shall be dealt with as if duly stated by the judge or magistrate. Each point which is to be raised on the appeal must be first brought before the trial judge on an application that he state case in respect thereof; if the trial judge is applied to in respect of certain points and refuses to reserve them, those and no others are to form the g (No. and M Cr. the grounds upon which leave to appeal may be asked. R. v. Carlin (No. 2), 12 Que. K.B. 483, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 507, and see R. v. Murray and Maloney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 10 Alta. L.R. 275, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 247; R. v. Jennings (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1073, 11 Alta. L.R. 290, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 164. If he grants a reserved case on some of the questions and declines to grant as to others, the court of appeal on giving leave to appeal on the others, will direct that the whole case be argued at the one time, so that the questions reserved and the questions stated may be disposed of in the one judgment. Giroux v. The King, 25 Que. K.B. 505, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 366; compare R. v. Bela Singh, (1915) 22 B.C.R. 321, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 40, in which a doubt was raised as to the jurisdiction to hear a second appeal from the same conviction although founded on different grounds.

Trial judge should certify reasons for refusing a reserved case]-Where the trial judge refuses to reserve a case it is expedient that he give his reasons for refusal and, in doing so, certify the facts sufficiently to show the court whether the question of law has a foundation in fact. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 410, 10 Alta. L.R. 275, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 247. In default of the trial judge so certifying the grounds for refusing to reserve a case, it would be proper for the appeal court to request him to do so for the purpose of informing the court of appeal sufficiently to enable it to decide whether or not the trial judge should be directed to reserve the question. R v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, at 410, per Beck, J. But whether or not this practice is followed, the court of appeal may, on a survey of the certified evidence brought before them. direct the trial judge to state a case on any point which he had previously declined to reserve. Ibid. And without bringing up the entire evidence and in default of any certificate of the trial judge's reasons for refusing a reserved case, the facts assented to by the prosecution and the defence on the motion for leave to appeal, may be a sufficient foundation for directing the trial judge to state a case. R. v. Murray and Mahoney (No. 2), [1917] 1 W.W.R. 404, 410, per Beck, J.

Affidavits will not be received at the instance of the Crown to prove that the trial judge in his oral judgment acquitting the accused did so upon points of law alleged to have been wrongly decided, if the written notes of such judgment certified by the judge and filed at a later date place the ground of acquittal upon an insufficiency of proof raising a pure question of fact. R. v. Jacobs, (1917) 26 Que. K.B. 382, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 80.

Serving the notice of motion for leave to appeal]—Where the Crown is the prosecutor the notice of motion by defendant for leave to appeal will be served on the Attorney-General for the province. R. v. Lai Ping, 11 B.C.R. 102, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 467; R. v. Swett, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 608, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 272, 29 W.L.R. 887 (Sask.). Swett (1914) 7 W.W.R. 608 (so held as to a habeas corpus notice required by court rule to be served "upon the Attorney-General"); and see Lawler v. City of Edmonton (1914) 7 W.W.R. 291. Service on the local agent of the Attorney-General is not sufficient unless it appears that the local agent was authorized to receive service or unless counsel appears for the Attorney-General and wrives the objection. R. v. Swett, supra, per Stuart, J.

"Service" of a notice need not be personal service unless the enactment so requires in terms, as "service "simpliciter is not so restricted; R. v. Trottier, 5 W.W.R. 263, 6 Alta. L.R. 451; Re Lawler and City of Edmonton, 7 W.W.R. 291 (Alta.); the notice at the person's residence or place of business would be equally good service. Lawler v. City of Edmonton, 7 W.W.R. 291; R. v. Trottier, supra.

If the Crown appeals, the notice should be served on the accused personally, as it is to be presumed that his solicitor's authority terminated with the acquittal at the trial. R. v. Williams, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 9 (Ont.).

Notice to include grounds of appeal]—The grounds of appeal should be set out in the notice of motion. R. v. Lai Ping, 11 B.C.R. 102, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 467.

Granting or refusing leave to appeal on point of law]—Unless the court is unanimous in refusing leave to appeal, the refusal may work a possible injustice to the accused as regards his right of further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada under see. 1024. The latter section gives the convicted person a further appeal from a judgment of the court of appeal affirming a conviction if there is a dissent by any of the judges, but not otherwise. Sec. 1013, sub-sec. 3; sec. 1024. And it is doubtful whether a motion for leave to appeal although commonly called an appeal from the refusal to reserve, is within sec. 1024.

In R. v. Angelo (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1303, 1306, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 204, 19 B.C.R. 261, 27 W.L.R. 108, the court of appeal refused to accede to the request of counsel on both sides on a motion for leave to appeal under sec. 1015, to hear and deal with the appeal upon the agreement of counsel and upon the evidence, in like manner as though a case had been stated under Code sec. 1016. It was there held that the court of appeal is not to substitute itself nor allow counsel to substitute themselves for the tribunal which, under sec. 1016, is to exercise the statutory duty of "stating" a case. R. v. Angelo, supra, per Martin, J.A., at 5 W.W.R. 1306.

In some jurisdictions the entire case will be disposed of on the motion for leave, if the parties consent, and it appears to the court that there is no necessity for obtaining a formal stated case. See R. v. Armstrong, 15 O.L.R. 47, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 544, 546; R. v. Blythe, 19 O.L.R. 386 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 224; R. v. Daley, 39 N.B.R. 416, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 168, 177.

in case of dissent is a question which does not appear to have been decided. In case the conviction were affirmed, but one or more judges dissented, the right of further appeal might be protected by the order being made for a stated case, and on the stated case being returned, a further order being made disposing of the case in terms of the majority opinion.

In a New Brunswick case it was held that after directing a case to be stated on certain questions the court of appeal could proceed on consent of the parties to hear argument on the questions by reference to the record and evidence. R. v. Belyea, (1915) 43 N.B.R. 375, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 395. [Contra, see R. v. Angelo, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1303, 19 B.C.R. 261, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 304, (Martin, J.A.); R. v. Fong Soon, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 486, 489, (Martin, J.A.).]

Refusing leave if no substantial wrong or miscarriage]—Leave to appeal will be refused if the court is of opinion that no substantial wrong or miscarriage was occasioned within the terms of Code see. 1019, and that consequently the appeal could not be successful. R. v. McLean, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 283, 39 N.S.R. 147; R. v. Lai Ping, 11 B.C.R. 102, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 467; R. v. Menard, 2 O.W.R. 900, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 80; R. v. Burns, 1 O.L.R. 336; R. v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220; Thrahim v. The King [1914] A.C. 599.

Motion for leave not prosecuted]—If the appellant files his motion but makes default in proceeding with it, the court may hear the other side and dispose of it in the appellant's absence. Abeles v. The King, 24 Que. K.B. 260, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 308.

Specific questions may be ordered to be stated]—The court of appeal may formulate the questions which the trial court shall include in the stated case, or order that the precise questions he had refused to reserve shall be stated. R. v. Coleman (1898) 30 Ont. R. 93, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 523; R. v. Tansley, (1911) 3 O.W.N. 411, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 42; and see R. v. Sam Chak (No. 1), 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 495, 42 N.S.R. 372; R. v. Furthermore, the court of appeal may order that the whole record and evidence shall be sent up and that the trial judge shall certify whether or not the reasons for his judgment or ruling as set forth in the stenographer's extended notes, is correctly reported. Giroux v. The King, (1916) 25 Que. K.B. 505, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 366.

[§ 1016] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

2. If the sentence is alleged to be one which could not by law be passed, either party may, without leave, upon giving notice of motion to the other side, move the court of appeal to pass a proper sentence.

 If the court has arrested judgment, and refused to pass any sentence, the prosecutor may without leave make such motion.

Origin]-Sec. 744, Code of 1892.

Trial judge to state a case]—See notes to sees. 1013-1015. Motion to revise illegal sentence]—R. v. Edwards, 17 Man. R. 288, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 202.

Procedure where judge or magistrate dies, quits office or refuses to state case.

1016_A. If pending the statement of a case upon a question reserved the judge or magistrate before whom the trial was had dies or quits office, or if such judge or magistrate, having reserved a question, refuses or neglects to state a case, the party upon whose application the question was reserved may on notice of motion to be given to the accused or prosecutor, as the case may be, apply to the Court of Appeal to state a case, and if a case is thereupon stated, it shall be dealt with as if it had been duly stated by such judge or magistrate.

Origin]-8-9 Edw. VII, ch. 9, sec. 2.

Evidence for court of appeal.—Judge's notes.—Other evidence.— Sending back stated case to be amended.

1017. On any appeal or application for a new trial, the court before which the trial was had shall, if it thinks necessary, or if the court of appeal so desires, send to the court of appeal a copy of the whole or of such part as may be material of the evidence or the notes taken by the judge or presiding justice at the trial.

2. The court of appeal may, if only the judge's notes are sent and it considers such notes defective, refer to such other evidence of what took place at the trial as it thinks fit.

Papers accompanying the case reserved or stated]—In stated or reserved cases there should be included a statement of the judge or magistrate, naming the material submitted as part of the case, such as: indictment, charge sheet, information, evidence; in fact, all papers that may furnish information to the court.

A defendant bringing an appeal by case stated or reserved, or a motion to state a case, ought not to be prejudiced because of any part of the material, e.g., stenographer's notes of evidence, upon which he has a right to base his appeal, becoming unavailable without fault on his part, but through some omission of the Crown or of the Attorney-General's department or of the officers of the court. R. v. Jennings (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1049, 1050, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 270, 34 W.I.R. 1058 (Alta.); R. v. Rimes, (1912) 28 Times L.R. 409.

It should not be left to the court of appeal to examine the Criminal Code to see if the indictment is good under some section other than that to which the nature of the charge relates, nor to find out from the book of evidence what the facts were on which the trial judge relied. The case should be stated so as to raise the real point involved. R. v. Davis, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 130; R. v. Cohen, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 386, 393 (N.S.); R. v. Footier, (1903) 13 Que. K.B. 308, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 417. But, if of opinion that it is inexpedient to send the case back to be re-stated, the court of appeal will dispose of it although not stated with the particularity that is desirable. R. v. Davis, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1340.

The verity of a statement in the record in regard to a mixed matter of law and fact essential to his jurisdiction, made by or under the direction of a judge of a court of inferior jurisdiction, although it be a court of record, is not to be conclusively presumed. Mayor of London v. Cox, L.R. 2 H.L. 239, 262; Falkingham v. Vietorian Railway Commissioner [1900] A.C. 452. And on a reserved case in a criminal matter, where the jurisdiction of a substitute judge depended on the absence of the regular judge, the entry in the trial book is not conclusive evidence of the latter's absence. Brunet v. The King, (1918) 57 S.C.R. 83, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 16, 23.

Reference to evidence other than the judge's notes]—See note to sec. 1015. Sec. 1017, sub-sec. (2) applies where "only the judge's notes" of the evidence at the trial are available. Many magistrates trying cases under sec. 777 have to take their own notes of the evidence in long-hand; but courts of record usually have an official stenographer whose notes, or the material portion of them, may be certified and forwarded to the court of appeal along with the record and questions submitted.

The reference in sec. 1017 to the notes taken by the judge applies to the notes of the evidence of witnesses and the notes of objections taken at the trial, but not to the address made by the judge to the jury. Di Lena v. The King (1915) 24 Que, K.B. 262, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 301. The appellate court is bound to receive and accept the charge of the judge to the jury as transmitted by the latter with his report and has no power to order the taking of evidence or to receive evidence for the purpose of establishing that this report does not conform to what was really said by the judge to the jury. Di Lena v. The King, supra; compare R. v. Angelo, 19 B.C.R. 261, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 304, 5 W.W.R. 1303, 27 W.L.R. 108; R. v. Jun Goon, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 25, 22 B.C.R. 381, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 415, 33 W.L.R. 761.

A copy of the whole or of the material parts of the evidence taken at the trial, which must always be necessary where one question is whether there was any evidence on which the necused could have been lawfully convicted, or, which is another way of putting it, whether there was reasonable evidence of gailt to support a conviction. R. v. Beboning, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 405, 408.

Powers of court of appeal upon hearing.

1018. Upon the hearing of any appeal under the powers hereinbefore contained, the court of appeal may,---

- (a) confirm the ruling appealed from; or,
- (b) if of opinion that the ruling was erroneous, and that there has been a mis-trial in consequence, direct a new trial; or,
- (c) if it considers the sentence erroneous or the arrest of judgment erroneous, pass such sentence as ought to have been passed or set aside any sentence passed by the court below, and remit the case to the court below with a direction to pass the proper sentence; or,
- (d) if of opinion in a case in which the accused has been convicted that the ruling was erroneous, and that the accused ought to have been acquitted, direct that the accused shall be discharged, which order shall have all the effects of an acquittal, or direct a new trial; or.

(e) make such other order as justice requires.

Re-stating the case reserved]—See sec. 1017.

Reducing an illegal sentence]—In reducing an excessive sentence under sec. 1018, the court may either impose such new sentence as it considers proper under the circumstances or may discharge the accused if it considers his interim punishment to have been ample for the offence. R. v. Williams, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 482, 21 O.L.R. 467.

In R. v. Dupont, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 566, the court gave effect to the principle that an offender shall not escape by reason of a wrong or even clearly ultra vires sentence if there has been a valid adjudication of guilt, but that it is the duty of the appellate court to pronounce the proper sentence; And see R. v. Edwards, 17 Man. R. 288, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 202; or to remit the case to the trial court with directions. R. v. Sperdakes, (1911) 40 N.B.R. 428, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 210.

Mistrial—A new trial may be directed if there has been a mistrial in consequence of an erroneous ruling. This corresponds with the English practice of awarding a venire de novo; see R. v. Ingleson (1914) 11 Cr. App. R. 21; R. v. Baker (1912) 7 Cr. App. R. 217.

Misdirection or non-direction]-See note to sec. 1019.

Ordering a new trial]—The Code gives the court of appeal express power to order a new trial, a power which was not included in the English Criminal Appeal Act. The lack of that power has to be borne in mind when considering judgments of that tribunal cited as precedents for quashing a conviction. The Court of Criminal Appeal, in R. v Ellson (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 4, expressed regret that power to order a new trial had not been included and added: "If a sufficient legal reason is advanced against the conclusion of a judge and jury, we have no alternative but to quash the conviction and no further proceedings can be had." Per Darling, J., in R. v. Ellson (1911) 7 Cr. App. R. 4 at p. 8.

The considerations influencing the exercise of the discretion to grant a new trial in one class of cases may differ materially from those affecting it in another class. Especially may this be so in cases where the accused has been discharged and the Crown is appealing. There the considerations that would govern where the accused was convicted and was the appellant, would not necessarily be applicable: Rex v. Karn (1903), 5 O.L.R. 704, 6 Can. Crim. Cas. 479; R. v. Burr, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 104, 13 O.L.R. 485.

Bail on granting new trial]-Code sec. 1023, sub-sec. (3).

If no substantial wrong, conviction stands.-Proviso as to challenges.

1019. No conviction shall be set aside nor any new trial directed, although it appears that some evidence was improperly admitted or rejected, or that something not according to law was done at the trial or some misdirection given, unless, in the opinion of the court of appeal, some substantial wrong or mis-

"Substantial wrong or miscarriage"]—Where evidence has been improperly admitted or something not according to law has been done at the trial which may have operated prejudicially to the accused upon a material issue, although it has not been shown and cannot be shown that it did in fact so operate, the court of appeal may order a new trial. R. v. Hoo Sam (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1059 (Sask.); R. v. Holderman (1914) 7 W.W.R 729, 7 Sask. L.R. 279, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 369; R. v. Daley, 39 N.B.R. 411; R. v. Doyle, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 197, 28 D.L.R. 649. But to come within that principle as regards errors in the judge's summing up, to the jury, it must appear that the portion of the charge objected to might have operated prejudicially to the accused upon a material issue. R. v. Hoo Sam, (1912) 1 W.W.R. 1049, 1059, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 259, 20 W.L.R. 571 (Sask.); R. v. Theriault, (1894) 32 N.B.R. 504; R. v. Letain, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 505, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. S89 (Man.).

The trial judge in his summing up in a criminal case may express his own opinion upon the facts upon which the jury has to pass, but he is not to make an improper use of that right, for it is one which is capable of being abused. R. v. Moke, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575, 583, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (Alta.); R. v. Swyryda, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 138. The charge is to be read as a whole and not by taking isolated sentences and expressions apart from their context; and if, along with his own opinion he made it plain that the jury were to be the judges of the facts and that they were not bound to accept his views, but must exereise their own judgment, this negatives any improper use of the trial judge's right to tell the jury his own opinion of the facts. R. v. Moke, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 575, 583, 584, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (Alta.).

The court will exercise its discretion by dismissing an appeal where the improper admission of evidence or other irregularity was so trivial that it may safely be assumed the jury was not influenced by it. Allen v. The King, 44 S.C.R. 331; R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220; R. v. Murray & Mahoney, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 805; R. v. Spain, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465, 477, 27 Man. R. 473, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 113; R. v. Baugh (1917) 38 O.L.R. 559.

If the eircumstances are such that it is impossible to say that the minds of the jury may not have been prejudicially affected by the evidence complained of, then a substantial wrong has been occasioned. This result is accomplished if what has been improperly done may have influenced the jury adversely to the accused upon a material issue; Allen v. The King (1911) 44 S.C.R. 331, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 31; R. v. May (1915) 7 W.W.R. 1261, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 469 (B.C.).

It would seem that the appellate court is not to take up the task of weighing evidence which it is the function of the jury to weigh and decide upon. Allen v. The King, 44 S.C.R. 331. [Contra: R. v. Romano. (1915) 24 Que, K.B. 40, 24 Can, Cr. Cas. 30.]

The test as to whether there has been a miscarriage of justice by the improper admission of evidence must be whether the jury would have come to the same conclusion if the evidence had been properly excluded. The conviction will be quashed if the appellate court is unable to say that the jury would have come to the same conclusion, and it is insufficient that the appellate court can say that the jury "might" have done so. R. v. Christie (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 169. But if it would be the "merest speculation" to suppose that the jury was substantially influenced by the inadmissible evidence, if it was "highly improbable although not impossible" that such was the case, the preponderance of unquestioned evidence may be so great that the appellate court cannot conclude that there has been any miscarriage of justice substantial or otherwise. Ibrahim v. The King, [1914] A.C. 599, 614, 83 L.J.P.C. 185; Makin v. Attorney-General of New South Wales. [1894] A.C. 57, 70, 63 L.J.P.C. 41; R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 54 S.C.R. 220; R. v. Spain, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 465, 469, 27 Man. R. 473, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 113. So if substantial evidence against the defendant has been improperly admitted, the court will quash the conviction, where it cannot say that the jury would have returned the same verdict on the admissible evidence alone. R. v. Campbell (1912) 8 Cr. App. R. 75, distinguishing R. v. Gray (1911) 6 Cr. App. R. 242; and see Vaithanatha v. King-Emperor (1913) 29 Times L.R. 709 (P.C.).

Before the appellate court can set aside a conviction or order a new trial, it must be of the opinion that "some substantial wrong or miscarriage was . . . occasioned on the trial" by something "not according to law" which "was done at the trial," or by the "misdirection given." "Miscarriage" means here, "miscarriage of justice," the terminology used in the Imperial Criminal Appeal Act of 1907, 7 Edw. VII, eh. 23, sec. 4 (1). R. v. Duckworth, 37 O.L.R. 197, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 314. As is shown in many cases, there are instances of errors which are not of sufficient importance to induce the court to say that there has been a "miscarriage of justice:" per Lord Reading, L.C.J., in Rex v. Murray, 9 Cr. App. R. 248, at p. 249; the error "could not have affected the result:" per Bankes, J., in Rex v. King, 10 Cr. App. R. 44, at p. 49; in some cases of misdirection the court "cannot think that, if the jury had had a proper direction . . . they would have come to any other conclusion:" per Lord Reading, L.C.J., in Rex v. Curnock, 10 Cr. App. R. 207, at pp. 208, 209; but it is thoroughly established that "once it comes to the conclusion that a wrong decision has been given during the course of the case, the court should never allow the conviction to stand unless it comes to the conclusion that the jury would certainly have convicted even if such wrong decision had never been given:" per Lord Reading, L.C.J., in Rex v. Smallman, 10 Cr. App. R. 1. at p. 4. That this applies to a case of misdirection or nondirection as to the applicability of evidence, is clear from Rex v. Curnock, supra; had the court not been convinced (in the Curnock case) that the jury would have convicted even had they been charged that the evidence, admissible as it was, was not evidence of the truth of the facts stated, it would have set aside the conviction. R. v. Duckworth, 37 O.L.R. 197, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 314, 347, per Riddell, J.; and see Rex v. Morgan, 7 Cr. App. R. 63; Rex v. Monk, 7 Cr. App. R. 119; Rex v. Higgins, 36 N.B.R. 18, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 68; Rex v. Brooks (1906), 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 188, 11 O.L.R. 525; Rex v. Paul (1907), 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 219; Rex v. Lew, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 281; Eberts v. The King (1912), 20 Can. Cr. The King, [1914] A.C. 599.

Question of misdirection]-Where there has been a misdirection in law, the court of appeal will not interfere if it is satisfied that the jury on a proper direction in law must have found the same verdict, but if the court comes to the conclusion that the jury might, but not that they must, have returned the same verdict, the court must give effect to its view of the summing up, and if this was a misdirection on the onus of proof (e.g., where the words used were to the effect that possession of stolen goods placed on the accused the onus of proving the truth of his explanation) the conviction cannot stand. R. v. O'Neil, 9 W.W.R. 1321, 9 A.L.R. 365, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 323; R. v. Kleparczuk [1918] 1 W.W.R. 695, 698 (Beck, J.); R. v. Schama, (1914) 84 L.J.K.B. 396, 11 Cr. App. R. 45; R. v. Badash, (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 732; Eberts v. The King, 47 S.C.R. 1, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 273; R. v. Jagat Singh (1915), 9 W.W.R. 514, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 32 W.L.R. 637, 21 B.C.R. 545; R. v. Hopper, [1915] 2 K.B. 431, 11 Cr. App. R. 136; R. v. Schurman, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 680, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 365, 30 W.L.R. 56; R. v. Bleiler, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 1459, 1460, 11 Alta. L.R. 550, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 9.

If the trial judge misdirected the jury as to the evidence given by the accused in his own behalf so that it was not a fair presentation of his evidence on a material point, and, on exception taken by counsel to the charge, the judge declined to alter it, the court will hesitate to say that no substantial wrong has been done. R. v. Kleparczuk [1918] 1 W.W.R. 695 (Alta.).

Erroneous comment on secondary matters not prejudicing the accused will not be a ground for granting leave to appeal. R. v. Shayanez (1916) 25 Que. K.B. 316, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 438; R. v. Smith (1915) 11 Cr. App. R. 229, 238.

verdiet of the jury is not founded upon any evidence except that which the law allows, and to warn the jury not to act upon evidence which is not legal evidence against the prisoner. If a mistake had been made by counsel, that would not relieve the judge from the duty to see that proper evidence only was before the jury. R. v. Gibson, 18 Q.B.D. 537; R. v. Saunders [1899] 1 Q.B. 490; R. v. Bridgewater, 74 L.J.K.B. 35 at 37; R. v. Long, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 493; R. v. Law, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 382; R. v. Doyle, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 197 (N.S.); R. v. Brooks, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 188; R. v. Walker, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 77.

On a trial without a jury if the trial judge has evidently been affected by an erroneous view of the law, stated in his reasons for judgment, on a material question as to the necessity of certain evidence and the appellate court is of opinion that if he had not entertained that erroneous view, he might have reached a different conclusion on the question of guilt, it is then open to the appellate court, on a case stated or reserved, to consider the evidence and to reverse the verdict if it finds it is not supported by the evidence. R. v. Carswell, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 1027, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 288, 34 W.L.R. 1042 (Alta.).

Receiving inadmissible evidence at trial]—If the written statement of one prisoner be put in by the Crown as evidence on a joint trial, and no objection was made, the fact that such statement contained nothing but what had already been brought out on the examination and cross-examination of the prisoner signing the statement may be considered as removing any cause of prejudice to the other defendant. and a conviction of the latter may be sustained although the trial judge had not eautioned the jury that a confession by one not made in the other's presence was not evidence figurist that other, if the court on a review of the entire case with the admissible evidence finds that there was no substantial wrong. R. v. Davis, (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1340, and 6 W.W.R. 12, 19 B.C.R. 50, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 431, 26 W.L.R. 912.

When the judge below trying a case without a jury cannot say whether certain evidence improperly rejected would have affected his decision, it may reasonably be supposed that, if given, it might have affected the mind of the trial judge in deciding whether or not the defendant was guilty, and so the exclusion resulted in "some substantial wrong" on the trial. R. v. Prentice and Wright, (1914) 7 W.W.R. 271, 277, 7 Alta. L.R. 479, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 436 (Beck, J.).

If a conviction were obtained on the evidence of a witness who had not been properly sworn, or who was illegally allowed to affirm, that would seem to be a good ground for setting it aside or ordering a new trial. R. v. Deakin, 16 B.C.R. 271, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 62, 19 W.L.R. 43; R. v. Lee Tuck (1912) 2 W.W.R. 605, 614 (Alta.). Doctrine of substantial wrong as applied to specific crimes]—Other cases dealing with specific offences and irregularities will be found by reference to the appropriate section dealing with the punishment of the offence or with the procedure, as the case may be.

Only one count affected .- Sentence as to rest.

1020. If it appears to the court of appeal that such wrong or miscarriage affected some count only of the indictment, the court may give separate directions as to each count, and may pass sentence on any count unaffected by such wrong or miscarriage which stands good, or may remit the case to the court below with directions to pass such sentence as justice may require.

2. The order or direction of the court of appeal shall be certified under the hand of the presiding chief justice or senior puisné judge to the proper officer of the court before which the case was tried, and such order or direction shall be carried into effect.

Origin]-Sec. 746, Code of 1892.

Verdict on inconsistent counts]-

If a verdict be not sustainable on several counts because of their inconsistency and it is clear that the accused is guilty of one of them, the court of appeal on determining that there should be punishment as for one crime only, may remit the case with a direction that punishment be imposed for that one of the various counts on which the accused was convicted, as to which the maximum sentence is the lowest and leave it to the discretion of the trial judge to fix a lower punishment as for that one offence if so disposed. Kelly v. The King [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 483, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282, varying R. v. Kelly, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 27 Man. R. 105, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 140. The formal judgment of the court of appeal that the penalty to be imposed shall be limited to the lesser offence, i.e., that for which the maximum penalty is the least of all those upon which there was a verdict of guilty, makes it unnecessary for the court to consider objections relating solely to the other charges, because, if no punishment is to be imposed in respect of such others, there is ordinarily no ground to claim "substantial wrong" under Cr. Code sec. 1019, and the questions on the other charges would be academic only. Kelly v. The King, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 463, 484; dismissing appeal from R. v. Kelly [1917] 1 W.W.R. 46, 54 S.C.R. 220, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 282.

Motion for new trial by leave of trial judge.—Verdict against weight of evidence.

1021. After the conviction of any person for any indictable offence the court before which the trial takes place may, either during the sitting or afterwards, give leave to the person convicted to apply to the court of appeal for a new trial on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence.

2. The court of appeal may, upon hearing such motion, direct a new trial if it thinks fit.

3. In the case of a trial before a court of general or quarter sessions such leave may be given, during or at the end of the session, by the judge or other person who presided at the trial.

Appeal by leave on the weight of evidence]—A motion for a new trial on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of evidence can only be made before the Court of Appeal upon leave granted by the court before which the trial has taken place. R. v. Fouquet, 14 Que. K.B. 87, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 255.

A motion with leave under sec. 1021 may be combined with a reserved case under sec. 1014. R. v. O'Neil, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 1321, 9 Alta. L.R. 365; R. v. Jenkins, 14 B.C.R. 61, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 221. It is a procedure available only to "the person convicted," and not to the prosecution. R. v. Phinney (No. 2), 36 N.S.R. 288.

The power of the court under sec. 1021 is limited to granting a new trial. If there was no evidence to go to the jury, and furthermore no evidence on the whole case having regard to the evidence given after the refusal to take the case from the jury, an appeal under sec. 1018 would lie as the entire lack of evidence to support the conviction raises a question of law; and under sec. 1018 the court may direct an acquittal or direct a new trial.

Where there is substantial evidence either way in a civil case, the Court of Appeal would not be entitled to substitute what was in fact their verdiet for the verdiet of the jury. Millar v. Toulmin, 12 A.C. 746, 57 L.J.Q.B. 301; Winterbotham v. Sibthorp (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 527; and see Paquin v. Beauclerk, [1906] A.C. 148, 75 L.J.K.B. 395. Some doubt was expressed in R. v. Murray, 4 O.W.N. 368, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 197, 8 D.L.R. 208, as to whether sec. 1021 applied at all to trials without a jury because of the word "verdiet" therein, but a new trial was granted on an appeal by leave from a speedy trial under Part XVIII, the Crown not raising the point, and the court acceding the benefit of the doubt to the accused on that question. In R. v. O'Neil, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 1321, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 323, 352, 9 Alta. L.R. 365, it was considered that sec. 1021 was available as well in respect of a triaj without a jury as to one with a jury.

It is within the province of the jury to refuse credit to testimony and leave to apply for a new trial will be refused if that is all that can be said against the verdict. R. v. Molleur, 15 Que. K.B. 1; R. v. Harris, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 75 (Que.).

The same rule applies in a criminal as in a civil case, on an application for a new trial on the ground that the verdict of the jury is against the weight of evidence; the question is whether the verdict was such that the jury, viewing the whole of the evidence reasonably could find a verdict of guilty. R. v. Jenkins, (1908) 14 B.C.R. 61, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 221; R. v. Jagat Singh (1915) 9 W.W.R. 514, 32 W.L.R. 637, 21 B.C.R. 545.

It is not enough that the trial judge favoured a different verdict from that which the jury found: R. v. Brewster (1896), 2 Terr. L.R. 353; nor that the appellate court would have been better satisfied with a different verdict, unless it can say further that the jury arrived at an erroneous conclusion. R. v. Hamilton, 16 U.C.C.P. 340; R. v. Greenwood, 23 U.C.Q.B. 255; R. v. Jenkins, 14 B.C.R. 61; R. v. Clark, (1901) 3 O.L.R. 176; Metropolitan Ry. v. Wright, 11 A.C. 152, 55 L.J.Q.B. 401. But the rule as to the burden of proof in criminal cases is different from that in civil cases, because of the doctrine of reasonable doubt, and although an appellant might fail in a civil case where the probabilities based on the evidence were equal, a defendant appealing on the weight of evidence should succeed because of the onus cast on the Crown to establish the crime beyond reasonable doubt. R. v. Schama, (1914) 84 L.J.K.B. 396, 11 Cr. App. R. 45; R. v. Badash (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 732; R. v. Hamilton (1918) 87 L.J.K.B. 734. In cases tried without a jury, sec. 1021 may afford a convenient means of redress where the trial judge finds that the testimony to which he gave credence was unworthy of credence, and therefore gives leave to apply to the Court of Appeal for a new trial which he himself could not give. But the fact of the very conviction which is the subject of appeal should not create a presumption against the accused casting upon him the onus of showing a balance of probability in his favour. See R. v. Schama, supra; R. v. Badash, supra. [Contra: opinion of Stuart, J., in R. v. O'Neil, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 1321, 9 Alta. L.R. 365.]

Direction as to bail on granting leave to appeal]-Code sec. 1023.

Whether the refusal of leave is reviewable as a question of law]— In R. v. Di Francesco, (1918) 15 O.W.N. 138, an application was made to the trial judge for leave to apply to the court of appeal for a new trial in a manslaughter case upon an affidavit of a witness contradicting testimony given by that witness on the trial. Leave was refused, but a case was reserved for the court of appeal on the question whether the trial judge was bound as a matter of law to grant the leave, and sentence was suspende R. v. Ti defen after a clai subse King

The second trial]—Probably under Part XVIII (speedy trials), the defendant could re-elect for a trial by the county judge's criminal court after the verdict of the jury at the first trial had been set aside. Such a claim was denied in R. v. Coote (1903) 10 B.C.R. 285; but see as to subsequent amendments of the speedy trials clauses: Giroux v. The King, (1917) 56 S.C.R. 63, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 258.

New trial by order of Minister of Justice.

1022. If upon any application for the mercy of the Crown on behalf of any person convicted of an indictable offence, the Minister of Justice entertains a doubt whether such person ought to have been convicted, he may, instead of advising His Majesty to remit or commute the sentence, after such inquiry as he thinks proper, by an order in writing direct a new trial at such time and before such court as he may think proper.

Suspension of sentence in case of appeal.—Suspension in case of sentence of death or whipping.—Bail.

1023. The sentence of a court shall not be suspended by reason of any appeal, unless the court expressly so directs, except where the sentence is that the accused suffer death or whipping.

2. The production of a certificate from the officer of the court that a question has been reserved, or that leave has been given to apply for a new trial, or of a certificate from the Minister of Justice that he has directed a new trial, shall be a sufficient warrant to suspend the execution of any sentence of death or whipping.

[§ 102 F] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XIX)

may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada against the affirmance of such conviction: Provided that no such appeal can be taken if the court of appeal is unanimous in affirming the conviction, nor unless notice of appeal in writing has been served on the Attorney General within fifteen days after such affirmance or such further time as may be allowed by the Supreme Court of Canada or a judge thereof.

2. The Supreme Court of Canada shall make such rule or order thereon, either in affirmance of the conviction or for granting a new trial, or otherwise, or for granting or refusing such application, as the justice of the case requires, and shall make all other necessary rules and orders for carrying such rule or order into effect.

3. Unless such appeal is brought on for hearing by the appellant at the session of the Supreme Court during which such affirmance takes place, or the session next thereafter if the said court is not then in session, the appeal shall be held to have been abandoned, unless otherwise ordered by the Supreme Court or a judge thereof.

4. The judgment of the Supreme Court shall, in all cases, be final and conclusive.

Origin]—Sec. 750, Code of 1892; 50-51 Vict., Can., ch. 50, sec. 1; 38 Vict., Can., ch. 11, sec. 49.

Bail pending the appeal]—See R. v. Brunet (1917), 27 Que, K.B. 224, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 9; and notes to sees. 1013, 1014.

Extension of time for appeal]—The extension may be granted even after the expiration of the preseribed period. Gilbert v. The King, (No. 1), (1907) 38 S.C.R. 207, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 124; applying Vaughan v. Richardson, 17 S.C.R. 703.

In Mulvihill v. The King, 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 194, 18 D.L.R. 217, the defendant applied to extend the time for service of notice of appeal. He had the right to give notice of appeal within the fifteen days which section 1024 allows. But, having permitted that time to expire without giving notice, he asked indulgence on the ground that he had not until quite recently the means to launch or prosecute the appeal which he desires to take. Anglin, J., said, that before granting an extension of time to serve the notice it is the duty of the Supreme Court of Canada to satisfy itself that the proposed appeal involves a question of law which could be reserved under section 1014 of the Code and would properly form the subject of an appeal to that court, and to refuse the leave on determining that the question is not an appealable one.

It is doubtful whether anything except the point upon which there was a judicial dissent in the provincial court, on a case reserved, can be made the subject of a further appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. Eberts v. The King, (1912) 3 W.W.R. 37, 47 S.C.R. 1, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 273; Minchin v. The King, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 800, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 414; Viau v. The Queen, 29 S.C.R. 90; McIntosh v. The Queen, 23 S.C.R. 180. But a reasonable latitude will be allowed counsel on the argument in going into the case below for the purpose of elucidating the appealable ground and the question of substantial wrong under sec, 1019. Minchin v. The King, supra. It is available only to the person convicted, not to the prosecution; Viau v. The Queen, 29 S.C.R. 90. And the conviction must have been for an indictable offence. Ellis v. The Queen, 22 S.C.R. 7. Contempt of court may be either civil or criminal, and if both criminal and indictable, the restrictions of sec. 1024 will apply. Ellis v. The Queen, supra; Copeland-Chatterson Co. v. Business Systems, 16 O.L.R. 481.

If the conviction is found to be bad, the court may itself order the discharge of the accused; R. v. Laliberté, 1 S.C.R. 117; or may remit the case to the lower court with directions.

Certiorari and prohibition]—There is no appeal in a certiorari or prohibition matter arising out of a criminal charge. R. v. Davidson. [1917] 2 W.W.R. 718, 719, 11 Alta. L.R. 491, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 56, arguendo. (Alta.); Gaynor and Greene v. U.S.A. 36 S.C.R. 247.

Habcas corpus jurisdiction of Supreme Court of Canada]—Judges of the Supreme Court of Canada have by statute a concurrent jurisdiction with the provincial courts to issue writs of habcas corpus for the purpose of an inquiry into the cause of commitment in "any criminal case under any Act of the Parliament of Canada," extradition matters excepted. Supreme Court Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 139, sec. 62.

The Supreme Court jurisdiction in that respect extends only to those cases in which the commitment has followed upon a charge of a criminal offence which is a criminal offence by virtue of some statutory enactment of the Parliament of Canada. Re Dean, 3 W.W.R. 1037, 48 S.C.R. 235, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 374; re McNutt, 47 S.C.R. 259, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 157, 13 E.L.R. 109.

The case of re Dean, supra, appears to support the theory that a federal statute which merely changed the punishment under a pre-confederation law of the province is not enough to cause jurisdiction to attach under the words, "commitment in any criminal case under any Act of the Parliament of Canada"; but see re Sproule, 12 S.C.R. 140. The habeas corpus jurisdiction of the Supreme_Court of Canada includes criminal cases in Canada under the Army Act, Imp., made a part of the law of Canada by Canadian legislation. Re Grey, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 111, 57 S.C.R. 150; Militia Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 41; Military Service Act, 1917, Can., ch. 19; The Army Act, 44-45 Vict., ch. 58, Imp. So a commitment made by a court-martial under the authority of the Army Act, is reviewable. Re Grey, supra.

It does not extend to cases in which the commitment is for an offence at common law or an offence under a statute which was passed prior to Confederation and is still in force. Re Dean, supra; re Sproule, 12 S.C.R. 140.

The special habeas corpus jurisdiction under the Supreme Court Act, Can., as to criminal matters, is in no case more than a co-ordinate jurisdiction with a judge of a provincial superior court. Re Patrick White, 31 S.C.R. 383. A judge of the Supreme Court of Canada may refer a habeas corpus application made to him to the full court. Re Grey [1918] 3 W.W.R. 111, 57 S.C.R. 150; re Richard, 38 S.C.R. 394. This habeas corpus jurisdiction does not include the power to issue a certiorari, and a case may therefore have to be decided solely upon the return to the writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Macdonald, 27 S.C.R. 686; re Trepanier. 12 S.C.R. 113.

Canada Supreme Court Rules applicable to criminal matters]---(65.) Criminal appeals may be heard on a written case certified under the seal of the court appealed from, and in which case shall be included all judgments and opinions pronounced in the courts below. The appellant shall also file six typewritten or printed copies of the case, with the memorandum of the points for argument, except in so far as dispensed with by the registrar. In appeals in habeas corpus cases under Sec. 62 of the Act, a printed or typewritten case containing the material before the judge appealed from and the judgment of the said judge, together with a memorandum of the points for argument, except in so far as dispensed with by the registrar, shall be filed.

(66.) In criminal appeals and in appeals in cases of habeas corpus under Sec. 62 of the Act, unless the court or a judge in chambers shall otherwise order, the case shall be filed fifteen clear days before the day of the session of the court at which the appeal is proposed to be heard.

(67.) In cases of criminal appeals and appeals in matters of habeas corpus under Sec. 62 of the Act, notice of hearing shall be served at least five days before the day of the session at which the appeal is proposed to be heard.

(72.) Applications for writs of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum shall be made by motion for an order which, if the judge so direct, may be made absolute ex parte for the writ to issue in the first instance; or the judge may direct a summons for the writ to issue, and the judge in his discretion may refer the application to the court. Such summons and order may be in the forms D. and E. respectively set out in the schedule to these rules.

(74.) On the argument of the summons for a writ to issue, the judge may, in his discretion, direct an order to be drawn up for the prisoner's discharge instead of waiting for the return of the writ, which order shall be a sufficient warrant to any gaoler or constable or other person for his discharge.

(75.) The writ of habeas corpus shall be served personally, if possible, upon the party to whom it is directed; or, if not possible, or if the writ be directed to a goaler or other public official, by leaving it with a servant or agent of the person confining or restraining, at the place where the prisoner is confined or restrained, and if the writ be directed to more than one person, the original delivered to or left with such principal person, and copies served or left on each of the other persons in the same manner as the writ. Such writ of habeas corpus may be in the form F. set out in the schedule to these rules.

(76.) If a writ of habeas corpus be disobeyed by the person to whom it is directed, application may be made to the judge or the court, on an affidavit of service and disobedience, for an attachment for contempt. The affidavit of service may be in the form G. set out in the schedule to these rules.

(77.) The return to the writ of habeas corpus shall contain a copy of all the causes of the prisoner's detention endorsed on the writ, or on a separate schedule annexed to it.

(78.) The return may be amended or another substituted for it by leave of the court or a judge.

(79.) When a return to the writ of habeas corpus is made, the return shall be first read, and the motion then made for discharging or remanding the prisoner, or amending or quashing the return.

Yukon Territory Appeals]—By the Yukon Act, R.S.C., ch. 63, secs. 102 and 103, the Supreme Court of Canada is the court of appeal from the verdict or judgment of a territorial court or a judge thereof.

Appeals to Privy Council abolished.

1025. Notwithstanding any royal prerogative, or anything contained in the Interpretation Act or in the Supreme Court Act, no appeal shall be brought in any criminal case from any judgment or order of any court in Canada to any court of appeal or authority, by which in the United Kingdom appeals or petitions to His Majesty in Council may be heard.

Origin]-Sec. 751, Code of 1892; 51 Vict., Can., ch. 43, sec. 1. "Notwithstanding any Royal prerogative"]-It is still a matter of [§ 1025] doubt whether an appeal by special leave of the Judicial Committee is abolished by sec. 1025, or whether the section is limited in its application to appeals as of right. The question was raised in Toronto Ry. v. The King, [1917] A.C. 630, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 29, 33, 117 L.T.R. 579, but the Judicial Committee found it unnecessary to express an opinion on the question, as they arrived at the conclusion that on the true construction of the Code the offence was a non-criminal one, although the process of indictment (Code sec. 223) was continued in respect thereof; and that sec. 1025, "which purports to limit the prerogative," did not apply. And see Townsend v. Cox [1907] A.C. 514, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 509: compare Webb v. Outrim [1907] A.C. 81; Commissioners v. Baxter (1908) 24 Times L.R. 249. The point does not appear to have been raised in Wentworth v. Mathieu (1900) 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 429, [1900] A.C. 212, in which summary convictions under the Temperance Act of 1864. Can., were reviewed on special leave being granted. But sec. 1025 refers only to an appeal in any "criminal case from any judgment or order of any court in Canada," and this may, of itself, exclude summary convictions by justices as distinguished from a "court." A provincial court has no jurisdiction to give leave to appeal in a case to which see, 1025 applies. R. v. Keizer (No. 2) 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 39.

The original statute, 51 Viet., Can., ch. 43, was transmitted by the Governor-General of Canada, who had assented to it, to the Principal Secretary of State for the Colonics, and was allowed by her late Majesty Queen Victoria without comment. Toronto Ry. v. The King, supra.

Privy Council practice as to criminal appeals]—For the practice of the Judicial Committee in regard to appeals in criminal matters as to which the Royal prerogative may remain unaffected by legislation, reference may be made to Arnold v. King-Emperor, [1914] A.C. 644, 83 L.J.P.C. 299; Lanier v. The King [1914] A.C. 221, 83 L.J.P.C. 116; Balmukand v. King-Emperor [1915] A.C. 639, 84 L.J.P.C. 136; Vaithinatha v. King-Emperor, 29 Times L.R. 709; Dal Singh v. King-Emperor, (1917) 86 L.J.P.C. 140.

It is well settled that the unwritten principles of the constitution of the British Empire restrain the Judicial Committee from being used in general as a court of review in criminal cases. Dal Singh v. King-Emperor (1917) 86 L.J.P.C. 140. But while the Sovereign in Council does not interfere merely on the question whether the court below has come to a proper conclusion as to guilt or innocence, such interference ought to take place where there has been a disregard of the proper forms of legal process, grievous and not merely technical in character, or a violation of principle in such a fashion as amounts to a denial of justice. Dal Singh v. King-Emperor, (1917) 86 L.J.P.C. 140.

Extradition appeals]—Orders of discharge in habeas corpus in extradition proceedings have been reversed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on an appeal by leave to that tribunal. Attorney-General of Canada v. Fedorenko [1911] A.C. 735; United States v. Gaynor [1905] A.C. 128, 74 L.J.P.C. 44. PUNE 1026. In the sections of this Part relating to suspended sentence, unless the context otherwise requires, 'court' means and includes any superior court of criminal jurisdiction, any judge or court within the meaning of Part XVIII and any magistrate within the meaning of Part XVI.

Origin]—See. 974, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 44, see. 1. Suspended sentence]—The sections of the Code specially referred to are sees. 1081, 1082, and 1083.

Punishment Generally.

Punishment only after conviction.

1027. Whenever a person doing a certain act is declared to be guilty of any offence, and to be liable to punishment therefor, it shall be understood that such person shall only be deemed guilty of such offence and liable to such punishment after being duly convicted of such act.

Origin]-Sec. 931, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 1.

"After being duly convicted"]—Certain defects in conviction are curable. See sees. 1120-1132.

Degrees in punishment.—Discretion.

1028. Whenever it is provided that the offender shall be liable to different degrees or kinds of punishment, the punishment to be inflicted shall, subject to the limitations contained in the enactment, be in the discretion of the court or tribunal before which the conviction takes place.

[§1028]

Origin]-Sec. 932, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 2.

Application also to summary convictions]—Sec. 1028 applies to summary convictions for offences under the Code or other federal statute, as well as to indictable offences. Ex parte Kent, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 447; R. v. Robidoux, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 19 (Que.).

Subject to the limitations]—When a penal statute provides everything for which the offender can be condemned thereunder it is illegal for the court to convict him otherwise than according to the precise terms of the Act. Poulin v. Quebec, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 391 (Que.). Where the statute stipulates the amount of the fine and the obligation for payment of costs, and in default of payment, imprisonment for six months at hard labour, a summary conviction which states that in default of payment of the fine and the costs, the offender shall be "imprisoned for six months, according to law," is void, as not following the terms of the statute and for uncertainty in leaving it to the gaoler to interpret the law. The prisoner has a right to object that his imprisonment without hard labour is illegal if the statute under which he is condemned makes hard labour obligatory. Poulin v. City of Quebec, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 391, 33 Que. S.C. 190.

Unless there is express provision to the contrary, an enactment which authorizes both fine and imprisonment for a summary conviction offence is to be construed as giving a discretion to the magistrate to impose a fine or imprisonment or both. Ex parte Kent, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 447.

If a conviction imposes a fine and in default to be imprisoned, it may be inferred that the imprisonment was for the purpose of enforcing the fine, and was not a substantive punishment, and the accused would be entitled to his release on paying the fine, although the commitment or conviction did not add the usual limitation of the imprisonment by stating the detention to be "unless such fine is sooner paid." Nelson v. The King (1914) 6 W.W.R. 706 (Sask.).

Fine or penalty in discretion of court.

1029. Whenever a fine may be awarded or a penalty imposed for any offence, the amount of such fine or penalty shall, within such limits, if any, as are prescribed in that behalf, be in the discretion of the court or person passing sentence or convicting, as the case may be.

Origin]—Sec. 934, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 33. Fine of corporation]—Sec secs. 247, 248, 284, 920, 1035 (3).

1030. Outlawry in criminal cases is abolished.

Origin]-Sec. 962, Code of 1892.

Outlawry abolished]—Outlawry was a punishment inflicted upon an offender for contumacy in refusing to render himself amenable to the justice of the King's courts; 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 347; An outlawry in treason or felony amounted to a conviction and attainder of the offence charged in the indictment, as much as if the offender had been found guilty by a jury; 4 Bl. Com. 319; 2 Hawk. C. 48, s. 22; 33 and 34 Vict. (Imp.), c. 23, s. 1; but an outlawry, in case of a misdemeanour, did not enure as a conviction for the offence, but merely as conviction of the contempt for not answering. R. v. Tippen, 2 Salk. 494.

Outlawry proceedings in England are practically obsolete, although provided for in the Crown Office Rules of 1886.

Solitary confinement or pillory, abolished.

1031. The punishment of solitary confinement or of the pillory shall not be awarded by any court.

Origin]—Sec. 963, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 35, 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 29, secs. 81 and 94.

Deodand abolished.

1032. There shall be no forfeiture of any chattels, which have moved to or caused the death of any human being, in respect of such death.

Origin]-Sec. 964, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 35; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 29, sec. 54; 9-10 Vict. (Imp.), ch. 62.

Decodands]—The ancient rule was that any animate or inanimate thing that caused the death of a human being should be deco dandum, that is, given to God, which in practice meant that the deadly thing, or its value, was handed over to the King, so that the price of blood should be, at least theoretically, devoted to pious uses or objects of charity. For this reason the ancient form of indictment for homicide stated the value of the weapon which caused the death.

No attainder.

1033. No confession, verdict, inquest, conviction or judgment of or for any treason or indictable offence, or felo de se shall cause any attainder or corruption of blood, or any forfeiture or escheat: Provided that nothing in this section shall affect any penalty or fine imposed on any person by virtue of his sentence, or any forfeiture in relation to which special provision is made by any Act of the Parliament of Canada.

[§ 1083] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XX)

Origin]--Sec. 965, Code of 1892; 33-34 Vict. (Imp.), ch. 23, secs. 1, 5 and 6.

Felo de se]—An attempt to commit suicide is now viewed in England as an attempted felony. R. v. Mann (1914), 10 Cr. App. R. 31; R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258, explained. See Code sees. 269 and 270; Stone v. World newspaper, 44 O.L.R. 33.

Abolition of attainder]—Formerly a man already under sentence for a "felony" could always plead to a subsequent indictment the plea of autrefois attaint, which operated as a bar to any further proceeding until the attainder should be reversed. See 1 Chitty Cr. Law, (1826) 464; Stephen Cr. Dig., 6th ed., 19. The plea of autrefois attaint was abolished in England by the statute 7 and 8 Geo. IV, ch. 28. Besides the abolition of the attainder itself by Code sec. 1033 there is the restriction of special pleas by Code sec. 905.

Convict under penitentiary sentence]—A convict serving his term in a penitentiary for an indictable offence, can make a contract dealing with his goods and lands, where there is no disability under provincial law. Young v. Carter, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 26 O.L.R. 576, 3 O.W.N. 1486. The Forfeiture Act (Imp.) 33 and 34 Viet., ch. 23, did not apply to Quebee or Ontario. Dumphy v. Kehoe (1891) 21 Rev. Leg., 119.

The variation from the word "felony" in the English Act to the phrase "indictable offence" in the Code, is because of sec. 14 of the Canadian Code, whereby the distinction between felony and minimeanour is abolished, and all are treated as indictable offences. The grade of crime is determined under the Code by the gravity of the offence and the degree of punishment attached.

"The effect of this section of the Code is equivalent to that of the English Act, leaving undisturbed in the possession of the convict all his property. The law in Canada has not gone further, as has been done in England, so as to interpose certain obstacles on the action of the convict with respect to his property and to vest the administration thereof in a statutory official. A convict offender serving his term may deal with his goods and lands as other men who are free from custody may deal with theirs; and no disability or restraint is put upon the convict, so far as dealing with his property is concrend, beyond that which attaches to other owners." Boyd, C., in Young v. Carter, (1912) 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 489, 26 O.L.R. 576, 3 O.W.N. 1486.

Convict under death sentence competent as witness]—A person under sentence of death is now held to be competent as a witness on the trial of another for a criminal offence. R. v. Kuzin (1915), 24 Can. Cr.

Cas. 19 In I under a to allow In t it was death y evidenc Times. to in T of deal caused It was In was do from th ch. 85. Act, 33 " N. or felo difficult death. the con Sub Code u above (24 Can

In R. v. Webb, 11 Cox C.C. 133, Lush, J., in 1867, held that a person under sentence of death was attainted and civilly dead, and refused to allow him to be called as witness.

In the civil action of Graeme v. Globe Printing Co., 10 C.L.T. 367, it was held, following Reg. v. Webb, that a person under sentence of death was not a competent witness. In 1865, Byles, J., admitted the evidence of a person under sentence of death. R. v. Mogni, London Times, March 3, 1865, and R. v. Fitzgerald (1884), unreported, referred to in Taylor on Evidence, sec. 1347. Formerly a porson under sentence of death was not a competent witness. The conviction and sentence caused him to be attaint, and the attainder destroyed his competency. It was not the sentence of death that destroyed the competency.

In 1867, When Lush, J., ruled as above in The Queen v. Webb, it was doubtful whether the disability imposed by the attainder resulting from the sentence of death, had been removed by statutes 6 and 7 Vict., ch. 85, sec. 1. But in 1870, there was passed in England the Forfeiture Act, 33 and 34 Vict., ch. 23, the first section of which says:--

"No confession, verdict, inquest, or judgment of or for any treason or felony or felo de se shall cause any attainder." This removed all difficulty in the way of calling, as a witness, a person under sentence of death, or under any other sentence, as it prevented the following, from the conviction, of those consequences which destroyed the competency.

Substituting "indictable offence" for "felony," sec. 1033 of our Code uses exactly the same language as the English statute of 1870 above quoted. R. v. Kuzin, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 166, 25 Man. L.R. 218, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 66.

Conviction of public official vacates office.

1034. If any person hereafter convicted of treason or any indictable offence for which he is sentenced to death, or imprisonment for a term exceeding five years, holds at the time of such conviction any office under the Crown or other public employment, or is entitled to any pension or superannuation allowance payable by the public, or out of any public fund, such office or employment shall forthwith become vacant, and such pension or superannuation allowance or emolument shall forthwith determine and cease to be payable, unless such person receives a free pardon from His Majesty, within two months after such conviction, or before the filling up of such office or employment, if given at a later period.

[§1084]

2. Every such person sentenced to imprisonment as aforesaid or on whom sentence of death has been passed which has been commuted to imprisonment, shall become, and, until he undergoes the imprisonment aforesaid or suffers such other punishment as by competent authority is substituted for the same, or receives a free pardon from His Majesty, shall continue incapable of holding any office under the Crown, or other public employment, or of being elected, or sitting, or voting, as a member of either House of Parliament, or of exercising any right of suffrage or other parliamentary or municipal franchise.

3. The setting aside of a conviction by competent authority shall remove the disability by this section imposed.

Fines and Forfeitures.

Fines in lieu of other punishment.—Fines in addition to other punishment.—Fines upon corporations.

1035. Any person convicted by any magistrate under Part XVI or by any court of an indictable offence punishable with imprisonment for five years or less may be fined in addition to, or in lieu of any punishment otherwise authorized, in which case the sentence may direct that in default of payment of his fine the person so convicted shall be imprisoned until such fine is paid, or for a period not exceeding five years, to commence at the end of the term of imprisonment awarded by the sentence, or forthwith as the case may require.

2. Any person convicted of an indictable offence punishable with imprisonment for more than five years may be fined, in addition to, but not in lieu of, any punishment otherwise ordered, and in such case, also, the sentence may in like manner direct imprisonment in default of payment of any fine imposed.

3. Any corporation, convicted of an indictable or other offence punishable with imprisonment, may in lieu of the prescribed punishment be fined in the discretion of the court before which it is convicted.

Origin]-Sec. 958, Code of 1892; 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9. Application]-Sec. 1035 is limited in its application to the summary trial able Cas. :

As to the offence of common assault, sub-sec. 1 of sec. 1035 is subject to the limitations of Code sec. 291, so that a fine for that offence must not exceed $100 upon indictment, whether or not it is intended to be in lieu of a sentence of imprisonment. R. v. Johnson, (1913) 24 W.L.R. 468 (Alta.).

Perjury being an offence punishable with imprisonment for more than five years (sec. 174), there is no jurisdiction to impose, as the punishment therefor, a fine in lieu of imprisonment, but both imprisonment and fine may be awarded under sub-sec. 2 of sec. 1035. R. v. Legros, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 17 O.L.R. 425.

A fine imposed on a summary trial for theft was upheld in R. v. Sinclair, 10 O.W.N. 119.

Corporations]—Before the amendment of 1909, adding sub-sec. 3, the power of imposing a fine in lieu of imprisonment was limited to cases where the maximum term of imprisonment is five years. The amendment is intended to extend this, in the case of corporations, to offences which, if committed by an individual, would be punishable with imprisonment, no matter what the maximum is.

(b) all fines, penalties and forfeitures imposed for whatever cause in any proceeding instituted at the instance of the Government of Canada or of any department thereof in which that Government bears the cost of prosecution, and the proceeds of all recognizances estreated in connection with such proceedings, shall belong to His Majesty for the public uses of Canada, and shall be paid by the magistrate or officer receiving the same to the Minister of Finance and form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

2. Nothing in this section contained shall affect any right of a private person suing as well for His Majesty as for himself, to the moiety of any fine, penalty or forfeiture recovered in his suit. 3. The Lieutenant Governor in Council may from time to time direct that any fine, penalty or forfeiture, or any portion thereof paid over to the treasurer of the province under this section be paid to the municipal or local authority if any, which wholly or in part bears the expenses of administering the law under which the same was imposed or recovered, or to be applied in any other manner deemed best adapted to attain the objects of such law and secure its due administration.

Origin]-Sec. 927, Code of 1892; 8-9 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9.

Where application of fine is controlled by statute]—If the application of a penalty imposed in a conviction is fixed by statute, the conviction itself need not specify how it is to be applied. Nelson v. The King (1914) 6 W.W.R. 706 (Sask.).

(4.) That each Crown Attorney shall be entitled to an allowance of four per cent, on the moneys so collected, such percentage to be deducted by him on the transmission of the moneys to the Treasurer of Ontario. Unless where legal proceedings are instituted under the direction of the Attorney-General, the said allowances are to cover all charges by the Crown Attorney against the Province for services under this Order.

(5.) That each sheriff shall be required to give to the Crown Attorney of his county, from time to time, without charge, full information of all process in his hands in respect to any fine, penalty or estreated recognizance to which the Province is entitled.

(6.) That the Orders-in-Council as to collection of fines, penalties and forfeited recognizances dated 9th October, 1885, and 12th November, 1912, be resended.

Direction to pay fine, penalty or forfeiture to municipality.

1037. The Governor in Council may, from time to time, direct that any fine, penalty or forfeiture, or any portion thereof, which would otherwise belong to the Crown for the public uses of Canada, be paid to any provincial, municipal or local authority, which wholly or in part bears the expenses of administering the law under which such fine, penalty or forfeiture is imposed, or that the same be applied in any other manner deemed best adapted to attain the objects of such law and to secure its due administration.

Origin]--Sec. 928, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 180, sec. 3.

May direct that any fine, penalty, or forfeiture be "paid," etc.]— In the Criminal Code the words "forfeit" and "forfeiture" are used in different senses. They are used sometimes in connection with goods or things and sometimes in connection with fines, penalties, or compensation. In Code forms 32, 39, 41 and 59 the words "forfeit and pay" are used with regard to fines, penalties or compensation. And in construing the words "fine, penalty or forfeiture" as used in sec. 1037, the word "paid" shows that the words are used in a restricted sense, as meaning only pecuniary fines or forfeitures. Christian v. Christian, (1916) 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 260 (N.S.); and see R. v. Johnston (No. 1) 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 6.

Recovering by civil action when no other provision.-Molety to private party when no other provision.

1038. Whenever any pecuniary penalty or any forfeiture is imposed for any violation of any Act, and no other mode is prescribed for the recovery thereof, such penalty or forfeiture shall be recoverable or enforceable, with costs, in the discretion of the court, by civil action or proceeding at the suit of His Majesty only, or of any private party suing as well for His Majesty as for himself in any form of action allowed in such case by the law of the province in which it is brought, and before any court having jurisdiction to the amount of the penalty in cases of simple contract.

2. If no other provision is made for the appropriation of any penalty or forfeiture so recovered or enforced, one moiety shall belong to His Majesty, and the other moiety shall belong to the private party suing for the same, if any, and if there is none, the whole shall belong to His Majesty.

Costs against private prosecutor on dismissal of prosecution for criminal libel]—If the charge or complaint for defamatory libel was brought by a private prosecutor, see. 1045 leaves the judge no option, because that section declares that in such case the accused has an absolute right to recover from the complainant the costs that have been incurred, if judgment is given for the defendant. R. v. Fournier, (1916) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 430, 25 Que. K.B. 556; R. v. Gouilliould, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 432.

If the costs are taxed at the criminal trial, they may be included in the judgment of the criminal court and realized as such; R. v. Fournier, 25 Que, K.B. 556; or may be taxed either at the criminal trial or afterwards and made the subject of a separate civil action to realize the amount. Mackay v. Hughes, 19 Que, S.C. 367; Nichol v. Pooley, 9 B.C.R. 21; Nichol v. Pooley, 9 B.C.R. 363; R. v. Nichol, 8 B.C.R. 276.

The amount taxed in the criminal court will control. Mackay v. Hughes, 19 Que. S.C. 367; and the civil action may be stayed to enable the plaintiff to have the costs taxed in the criminal court if he prefers to have them taxed there. Mackay v. Hughes, supra. The person claiming the costs is not to be allowed to pursue both remedies at once, and if he moves an order for costs in the criminal court but gets only a part of what he asks and does not wish to adopt the order made and from which there is no provision for an appeal, he will be put on terms in commencing and prosecuting a civil action that he will abide by any order made as to the costs of the abandoned proceedings in the criminal court. Nichol v. Pooley, 9 B.C.R. 363, affirming Nichol v. Pooley, 9 B.C.R. 21.

The objection that the indictment is laid in the name of the King, and that his representative, the Attorney-General, has absolute control over the procedure, cannot avail to relieve the private prosecutor.¹ The procedure was instigated at his instance and he must be held responsible for its incidents and its result. As was pointed out in Regina v. Patterson (1875) 36 U.C.Q.B. 129 (Ont.) the enactment as to costs would be a dead letter, if the use of the King's name relieved the private prosecutor from such responsibility, in as much as every criminal charge is prosecuted in this country in the name of the Sovereign and the article of the Code, to be of any use, must be read as applicable to the person at whose instance the procedure in the name of the Sovereign was set in motion. R. v. Blackley, 13 Que. K.B. 472; R. v. St. Louis, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 144 (Que.).

Discharge on a nol. pros.]—As in case of a trial and verdict, it is the discharge pronounced upon a nolle prosequi which constitutes the judgment of the court, and the discharge pronounced by the court upon a nolle prosequi may constitute "the judgment for the defendant" mentioned in sec. 1045, and render the private prosecutor liable for defendant's costs. The discharge on a nol. pros. is not the equivalent of an acquittal, and defendant, although not liable to be further prosecuted under the existing indictment is exposed, in law, to the renewal of it for the same alleged offence, yet his discharge is a substantial judgment in his favour quoad that indictment, and the very fact that the prosecution may be renewed is an additional reason why effect should be given in such cases to the stipulation in the defendant's favour as to the costs incurred by him in his defense, as otherwise such right of renewal might be exercised so as to operate as an intolerable abuse. Application of sec. 1050]—At Common law the larceny of a chattel did not alter the ownership; the owner was entitled to recover it, if he could. But there was this curious provision, that unless the thief was attainted by appeal of felony at the suit of the owner on fresh pursuit, the property was forfeited to the Crown. If the thief was attainted of felony the owner then had his property restored to him; and that was the only mode of recovering his property at that time. An indictment of the thief at common law did not enable the owner to get back his property. Chichester v. Hill (1882) 52 L.J.Q.B. 160, 15 Cox C.C. 258.

The court in Chichester v. Hill, supra, in deciding upon the English statute in the same terms, said that in its opinion this proviso was intended to protect the bona fide holder of a "valuable security" not only against an order for restitution but against all proceedings. Ferguson v. Kemp [1919] 1 W.W.R. 537 (Alta.).

Stealing or knowingly receiving "any property"]—By see. 2, subsee. (32), the term property includes not only such property as was originally in the possession or under the control of any person, but also any property into or for which the same has been converted or exchanged and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange whether immediately or otherwise. Howe v. Schroeder (1905) 1 W.L.R. 174.

"Property" includes documents giving a right to recover or receive any money or goods, the money itself or any other personal property. Sec. 2, sub-sec. (32).

Summary order for restitution]—While the summary order for restitution authorized by sub-sec. 2 can be made only by the court or tribunal before which the trial takes place, there still remains the alternative of a civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction to establish the title of the original owner even against an innocent purchaser. Lapointe v. Charlebois, 42 Que, S.C. 57; Vezina v. Brosseau. 30 Que, S.C. 493; Horwood v. Smith, 2 T. R. 570; Scattergood v. Sylvester, 19 L.J.Q.B 447, 15 Q.B. 506; Moss v. Hancock, [1899] 2 Q.E. 111; White v. Spettigue, 13 M. & W. 603, and see R. v. Horan, Irish R., 6 C.L. 293; R. v. Mayor, etc., of London, L.R. 4 Q.B. 371 (Walker v. Mayor, etc., of London, 38 L.J.M.C. 107).

If the theft be of money, evidence of the identity of the money sought to be restored will be necessary; R. v. McIntyre, 2 P.E.I. 154; R. v. Haverstock, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 133; but an order may be made ) case)rney, under sec. 1049 for compensation out of money found on the prisoner although its identity with that stolen cannot be shown.

Exceptions]—Section 358 referred to in paragraph (5) declares guilty of an indictable offence one who steals anything by any act or omission amounting to theft under secs. 355, 356 or 357, which deal respectively with theft by person required to account (sec. 355), theft by person holding power of attorney (sec. 356), and misappropriation of proceeds held under direction (sec. 357). Sec. 390 deals with the offence of criminal-breach of trust by a trustee of any property for the use or benefit of another either in whole or in part, or for any public or charitable purpose. Such trustee is guilty of an indictable offence if, with intent to defraud, and in violation of his trust, he converts anything of which he is trustee to any use not authorized by the trust. Sec. 390.

Transfer of property to innocent purchaser]—Whether or not a "lawful title" has been acquired by the innocent purchaser is a question of civil law and subject to provincial statutes dealing with sales of goods. If goods are obtained on false pretences and there is a conviction for that offence, the case will not come under section 1050, but the provincial law will apply to determine the ownership, and apart from statute there would be no reversion of title to the vendor to enable him to recover from an innocent purchaser taking them from the person convicted merely of obtaining them fraudulently. But if there was a theft by a trick and the actual delivery was with the intention of parting only with the temporary possession of the goods, the property did not pass, and sec. 1050 would apply. R. v. Walker, 65 J.P. 729; R. v. Russett, [1892] 2 Q.B. 312, 17 Cox C.C. 534.

Current coin in the hands of an innocent person and taken for value would not be returned to the original owner, although identified. Moss v. Hancock [1899] 2 Q.B. 11., 68 L.J.Q.B. 657.

Restitution on summary trial under Part XVI]-Sec. 795 in the summary trials clauses makes applicable to summary trials the provisions of sec. 1050 on a conviction under Part XVI.

Juvenile offenders charged with theft]—Sec. 817 provides that no conviction under the authority of Part XVII (Juvenile offenders) shall be attended with any forfeiture, except such penalty as is imposed by the sentence; but whenever any person is adjudged guilty under the provisions of this Part, the presiding justice may order restitution of property in respect of which the offence was committed, to the owner thereof or his representatives. If such property is not then forthcoming, the justices, whether they award punishment or not, may inquire into and ascertain the value thereof in money; and, if they think proper order payment of such sum of money to the true owner, by the person convicted, either at one time or by instalments, at such periods as the justices deem reasonable. The person ordered to pay such sum may

Sale of Goods Act. Man.]-Section 25 of the Sale of Goods Act. R.S.M. 1902, c. 152, is as follows: "Where goods have been stolen and the offender is prosecuted to conviction, the property in the goods so stolen reverts to the person who was the owner of the goods, or his personal representative, notwithstanding any intermediate dealing with them." "(a) Notwithstanding any enactment to the contrary, where goods have been obtained by fraud or other wrongful means not amounting to theft, the property in such goods shall not re-vest in the person who was the owner of the goods, or his personal representative, by reason only of the conviction of the offender." In considering this statute in Harding v. Johnston (1909) 8 Man. R. 625, Howell, C.J., said: "This section (25) in no way relates to the sale of goods and seems out of place. Its prototype is sec. 24 of the English Act which was passed for the purpose of restoring to the owner stolen property, sold in market overt. The English section closes with the words "whether by sale in market overt, or otherwise." The "otherwise" is thought to refer to cases where stolen goods are purchased in a foreign state where such purchase passes property and perhaps to cases where rights are acquired under an inn-keeper's lien at Common Law, a right which probably does not exist here because of our statute. Sub-section (a) of section 25 was also copied from a sub-section to the English section and the reason of the English clause was to over-ride the decision in Bentley v. Vilmont, 12 A.C. 471, and change the criminal law. Our sub-section is meaningless and, although the Sale of Goods Act is a code of law and must be so construed, I think, as section 25 does not relate to sales of goods in any way, I must look at the former law and endeavor to find out what the legislative intent was.

"The section declares that upon conviction of the thief the property in the goods "reverts" to the owner. Under our law the property never passed out of the owner and so cannot revert. A consideration of the history of the section above referred to and the conditions of the law when the section was enacted leads me to hold that the legislature did not intend to prevent the owner from recovering his property before the conviction of the thief.

"Section 1050 of the Criminal Code has no application; it merely provides for summary restitution at the criminal trial. Perhaps some day the constitutionality of sub-sec. 3 may come up, as the power of Parliament to legislate as to the recovery of goods, where the thief has been acquitted, may be questioned." Review of restitution order]—The order for restitution may be the subject of review by certiorari proceedings. R. v. Forbes, ex parte Selig (1910) 39 N.B.R. 592, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 70; R. v. Wightman, 29 U.C.Q.B. 211.

Restoration of money or goods taken from accused]—Money or goods taken from the accused on his arrest may be ordered to be restored to him if not connected with the offence nor required as evidence. R. v. Harris, 1 B.C.R. pt. 1, p. 255; R. v. McIntyre, 2 P.E.I. 154; Ex parte McMichael, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 549; United States v. Tounder (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 76 (an extradition case).

Imprisonment.

Offences not capital how punished.

1051. Every one who is convicted of any offence not punishable with death, shall be punished in the manner, if any, prescribed by the statute especially relating to such offence.

Origin]-Sec. 950, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, secs. 34, 35. Commencement of Term of Imprisonment]-The term of imprisonment in pursuance of any sentence shall, unless otherwise directed in the sentence, commence on and from the day of passing such sentence, but no time during which the convict is out on bail shall be reekoned as part of the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced. Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, sec. 3, and Penitentiaries Act, ch. 147, sec. 43.

Hard labour]—See the Prisons Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 148, secs. 12-15, and the Penitentiaries Act, ch. 147, sec. 62.

Punishment for second offence committed after previous conviction.

1053. Every one who is convicted of an indictable offence not punishable with death, committed after a previous conviction for an indictable offence, is liable to imprisonment for ten years, unless some other punishment is directed by any statute for the particular offence.

2. In such latter case the offender shall be liable to the punishment directed, and not to any other.

Origin]-Sec. 952, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 25.

Proof of prior conviction]—As to the mode of proving the prior convictions, see secs. 757 (3) and 982.

Offences after previous conviction]—See secs. 370, 375-377, 386 (2), 465, 530, 533-535, 568, 851, 963, 982, 1053, 1081.

Maximum term may be shortened.-Minimum term.

1054. Every one who is liable to imprisonment for life, or for any term of years, or other term, may be sentenced to imprisonment for any shorter term: Provided that no one shall be sentenced to any shorter term of imprisonment than the minimum term, if any, prescribed for the offence of which he is convicted.

Origin]-Sec. 953, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 26.

Discretion of court where different kinds of punishment authorized]— See sec. 1028.

Maximum sentence]—Where the imprisonment has commenced under a sentence for ninety days and at a time of the year which would not include the month of February, and, consequently, the sentence would not in the ordinary course exceed three months, which was the maximum penalty allowed for the offence, it is not a ground for discharge on habeas corpus that a ninety day sentence may, under certain contingencies, exceed the statutory limit of three months. Rex v. Governor of City Prison; Ex parte Green (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 293 (N.S.).

Cumulative punishments.

1055. When an offender is convicted of more offences than one, before the same court or person at the same sitting, or when any offender, under sentence or undergoing punishment for one offence, is convicted of any other offence, the court or person passing sentence may, on the last conviction, direct that the sentences passed upon the offender for his several offences shall take effect one after another.

Origin]-Sec. 954, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 27; 7-8 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 28, sec. 10.

Consecutive imprisonments]—Sec. 1055 appears to be an adaptation of the English statute 7 and 8 Geo. IV, ch. 28, sec. 10, which, however, was limited to cases of felony. The effect of the English statute, which also abolished the plea of autrefois attaint, was to place felonies in this regard in the position in which misdemeanours had always been at common law. See R. v. Wilkes, 19 St. Trials 1131; Stephen's Dig. Cr. Law, 6th ed. 19 (n); R. v. Castro (1880), 5 Q.B.D. 490, at pp. 515, 516, 49 L.J.Q.B. 759. "Unless otherwise directed in the sentence" the term of imprisonment commences on and from the day of passing sentence. See note to Code sec. 1051.

Where imprisonment less than two years.

1056. Every one who is sentenced to imprisonment for a term less than two years shall, if no other place is expressly mentioned, be sentenced to imprisonment in the common gaol of the district, county or place in which the sentence is pronounced, or if there is no common gaol there, then in that common gaol which is nearest to such locality, or in some lawful prison or place of confinement, other than a penitentiary, in which the sentence of imprisonment may be lawfully executed: Provided that,—

(a) when any one is sentenced to imprisonment in a penitentiary, and at the same sittings or term of the court trying him is sentenced for one or more other offences to a term or terms of imprisonment less than two years each, he may be sentenced for such shorter terms to imprisonment in the same penitentiary, such sentences to take effect from the termination of his other sentence; and,

(b) when any one is sentenced for any offence who is, at the date of such sentence, serving a term of imprisonment in a penitentiary for another offence, he may be sentenced for a term shorter than two years to imprisonment in the same penitentiary, such sentence to take effect from the termination of his existing sentence or sentences;

(c) in the province of Manitoba and the province of British Columbia any one sentenced to imprisonment for a term of less than two years may be sentenced to any one of the common gaols in the province, unless a special prison is prescribed by law.

Origin]-Sec. 955, Code of 1892; 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3; 1 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 42, sec. 2; 1909, Can., ch. 9.

Imprisonment with or without hard labour.

1057. Imprisonment in a common gaol, or a public prison, other than a penitentiary or the Central Prison for the province of Ontario, the Andrew Mercer Ontario Reformatory for females or any reformatory prison for females in the province of Quebec, shall be with or without hard labour, in the discretion of the court or person passing sentence, if the offender is convicted on indictment, or under the provisions of Parts XVI or XVIII, or, in the province of Saskatchewan or Alberta, before a judge of a superior court, or in the Northwest Territories, before a stipendiary magistrate or in the Yukon Territory, before a judge of the Territorial Court.

2. In other cases such imprisonment may be with hard labour, if hard labour is part of the punishment for the offence of which such offender is convicted, and if such imprisonment is to be with hard labour, the sentence shall so direct.

Origin]-Sec. 955 (6), Code of 1892.

Imprisonment with or without hard labour]—The Penitentiaries Act and the Prisons and Reformatories Act make sentences of imprisonment in penitentiaries and the reformatories mentioned in Cr. Code, see. 1057, equivalent to sentences of imprisonment with hard labour in all cases whether the sentences of increts or not. R. v. Davidson, [1917] 2 W.W.R. 160, at 163, 11 Alta. L.R. 9, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 44. The result is that when an offender is convicted on indictment or under Part XVI (summary trial of certain indictable offences) or by a superior court judge in Saskatchewan or Alberta, or a judge of the Yukon Territorial Court, the imprisonment may be either with or without hard labour, in the discretion of the court, so long as the offender is not sentenced to a penitentiary or the prison or reformatories excepted, and this apparently without regard to the terms of the statute fixing the punishment. if the conviction is made by a lower tribunal and does not impose a penitentiary or reformatory sentence, then hard labour may be imposed only if the statute fixing the punishment says that it may be imposed, and the sentence given must, in such cases, specifically mention "hard labour." The discretion of the court under sec. 1057 of the Code includes the imposition of imprisonment with hard labour in default of payment of a fine as well as where imprisonment is the direct punishment for the offence either with or without a fine. Provisions as to Sureties.

Persons convicted may be bound over to keep the peace.—Committal in default.

1058. Every magistrate under Part XVI and every court of criminal jurisdiction before whom any person is convicted of an offence and is not sentenced to death, shall have power, in addition to any sentence imposed upon such person, to require him forthwith to enter into his own recognizances, or to give security to keep the peace, and be of good behaviour for any term not exceeding two years, and that such person in default shall be imprisoned for not more than one year after the expiry of his imprisonment under his sentence, or until such recognizances are sooner entered into or such security sooner given.

2. Any such recognizance may be in form 49.

Origin]-Sec. 958, Code of 1892.

Surveties for good behaviour]—The provisions of sec. 1058 take the place of the former common law powers under which a misdemeanour might be punished at the discretion of the court by fine and imprisonment, and by adding a direction that the defendant should find surveties for a reasonable time and be imprisoned until he did so, the time of the imprisonment being, however, limited, at common law, only to the period for which the surveties were to be found. R. v. Trueman, (1913) 9 Cr. App. R. 45.

1059. Whenever any person who has been required to enter into a recognizance with sureties, to keep the peace and be of good behaviour, or not to engage in any prize-fight has, on account of his default therein, remained imprisoned for two weeks, the sheriff, gaoler or warden shall give notice, in writing, of the facts, to a judge of a superior court, or to a judge of the county court of the county or district in which such gaol or prison is situate, or, in the cities of Montreal and Quebec, to a judge of the sessions of the peace for the district, or, in the Northwest Territories, to a stipendiary magistrate.

2. Such judge or magistrate may order the discharge of such person, thereupon or at a subsequent time, upon notice to the complainant or otherwise, or may make such other order as he sees fit, respecting the number of sureties, the sum in which they are to be bound and the length of time for which such person may be bound.

Whipping.

Sentence of punishment by whipping.—Number of strokes.—Instrument.—When whipping to take place.—Not on female.

1060. Whenever whipping may be awarded for any offence, the court may sentence the offender to be once, twice or thrice whipped, within the limits of the prison, under the supervision of the medical officer of the prison, or if there be no such officer, or if the medical officer be for any reason unable to be present, then, under the supervision of a surgeon or physician to be named by the Minister of Justice, in the case of prisons under the control of the Dominion, and in the case of other prisons by the attorney general of the province in which such prison is situated.

2. The number of strokes shall be specified in the sentence; and the instrument to be used for whipping shall be a cat-o'-ninetails unless some other instrument is specified in the sentence.

3. Whenever practicable, every whipping shall take place not less than ten days before the expiration of any term of imprisonment to which the offender is sentenced for the offence.

4. Whipping shall not be inflicted on any female.

Origin]-Sec. 957, Code of 1892, as amended, 63-64 Viet., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3.

When sentence includes whipping]—The fixing of the time or times for punishment by whipping ordered to take place during the convict's term of imprisonment is left by Cr. Code, see. 1060, in the discretion of the prison surgeon under whose supervision the whipping is to be done; and it is an excess of jurisdiction on the part of the magistrate holding a summary trial to order in the sentence that ten lashes be imposed six weeks after imprisonment and ten lashes six weeks before expiration of the term of six months' imprisonment imposed; but the court hearing a habeas corpus application may amend the conviction under Cr. Code see. 1124, by imposing the proper sentence where satisfied of the offence. R. v. Boardman, 6 W.W.R. 1304, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 191; R. v. Crawford, 5 A.L.R. 204, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49. The failure to direct in the conviction that the whipping shall take place under the medical supervision which see. 1060 prescribes, will not invalidate the conviction, and quarewhether the conviction should so state in any event. Ibid.

The magistrate imposing the punishment of whipping is to specify in the sentence the number of strokes and also whether it is to be at one time, or in two or three whippings, during the term of imprisonment. R. v. Boardman, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 1304, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 191,

No authority is given the magistrate to fix the time or times of the whipping, even by declaring that half of the lashes shall be within the first six weeks and the second half within the last six weeks of a six months' term. R. v. Boardman, 6 W.W.R. 1304 (Alta.). An excess of jurisdiction in that respect is, however, curable on certiorari or habeas corpus, if a perusal of the depositions satisfies the court as to the offence. Code sees, 797 (2), 1124; R. v. 2. If the judge thinks such prisoner ought to be recommended for the exercise of the royal mercy, or if, from the non-decision of any point of law reserved in the case, or from any other cause, it becomes necessary to delay the execution, he, or any other judge of the same court, or any judge who might have held or sat in such court, may, from time to time, either in term or in vacation, reprieve such offender for such period or periods beyond the time fixed for the execution of the sentence as are necessary for any of the purposes aforesaid.

3. In the Northwest Territories and in the Yukon Territory, when any person is convicted of a capital offence and is sentenced to death the judge or stipendiary magistrate who tried the case shall forthwith forward to the Secretary of State of Canada full notes of the evidence with his report upon the case, and the execution shall be stayed until such report is received and the pleasure of the Governor General therein is communicated to the Commissioner of the Northwest Territories or of the Yukon Territory, as the case may be.

4. Secs. 69 and 70 of chapter 50 of the Revised Statutes, 1886, intituled An Act respecting the North-West Territories, and sec. 43 of The Northwest Territories Act, chapter 62 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, are repealed.

Origin]—Sec. 937, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 8; 3-4 Geo. V, ch. 13, sec. 31; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 29, sec. 121.

Reprieve after death sentence]—Reprieves were granted under this section in R. v. Capelli, 10 O.W.R. 443, and R. v. Blythe, 19 O.L.R. 386, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 224; and refused in R. v. Cook (No. 2) (1914), 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 86.

Reprieve under Royal prerogative]—A reprieve ex mandato regis was formerly grantable by the Crown at its mere discretion; 1 Chitty Cr. Law 758, and see Code see. 1080; but the standing royal instructions to Governors-General of Canada under letters patent of 1878 provide that the Governor-General shall not pardon or reprieve after a sentence of death without the advice of the Privy Council of Canada, and in other cases shall not do so without the advice of one at least of his Ministers. Attorney-General of Canada v. Attorney-General of Ontario, 19 A.R. (Ont.) 31; and in appeal 23 Can. S.C.R. 458. The remission of fines and sentences imposed under provincial laws are controlled by the provincial and not the federal law. Ibid.

Prisoner under sentence of death to be confined apart.

1064. Every one who is sentenced to suffer death shall, after judgment, be confined in some safe place within the prison, apart from all other prisoners; and no person except the gaoler and his servants, the medical officer or surgeon of the prison and a chaplain or a minister of religion, shall have access to any such convict, without permission, in writing, of the court or judge before whom such convict has been tried, or of the sheriff.

Origin]-Sec. 938, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 9.

Safe keeping of convict under sentence of death]—Sec. 1064 is directory, and was enacted for the purpose of safely keeping the person who was under death sentence until the sentence is carried out. The section is subject to see. 977, under which the convict may be produced as a witness on another prosecution. R. v. Kuzin (1915), 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 66, 25 Man. R. 218, 8 W.W.R. 166; R. v. Rules and regulations as to executions.-Orders in council.

1075. The Governor in Council may, from time to time make such rules and regulations to be observed on the execution of judgment of death in every prison, as he, from time to time, deems expedient for the purpose, as well of guarding against any abuse in such execution, as of giving greater solemnity to the same, and of making known without the prison walls the fact that such execution is taking place.

2. All such rules and regulations shall be laid upon the tables of both Houses of Parliament within six weeks after the making thereof, or, if Parliament is not then sitting, within fourteen days after the next meeting thereof.

Pardon.

Any person imprisoned under statute although for non-payment of money.—Discharge under pardon with performance of conditions if any has effect of pardon under great seal.—No effect on punishment for subsequent offence.

1076. The Crown may extend the royal mercy to any person sentenced to imprisonment by virtue of any statute, although such person is imprisoned for non-payment of money to some other person than the Crown.

2. Whenever the Crown is pleased to extend the royal mercy to any offender convicted of an indictable offence punishable with death or otherwise, and grants to such offender either a free or conditional pardon, by warrant under the royal sign manual, countersigned by one of the principal Secretaries of State, or by warrant under the hand and seal-at-arms of the Governor General, the discharge of such offender out of custody, in case of a free pardon, and the performance of the condition

3. No free pardon, nor any discharge in consequence thereof, nor any conditional pardon, nor the performance of the condition thereof, in any of the cases aforesaid, shall prevent or mitigate the punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any offence other than that for which the pardon was granted.

Origin]—See. 966, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, secs. 38, 39; 32-33 Viet., Can., eh. 29, secs. 125, 126; 7-8 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 28, sec. 13 (1827).

Partiamentary pardons]—The pardons under the sign manual pursuant to the corresponding English statute of 1827 were known as parliamentary pardons as distinguished from royal pardons passed under the Great Seal. Its effect was to give legal recognition of a conditional pardon for felony on other terms than that of undergoing a sentence of transportation which was the customary condition of a conditional pardon prior to 1827. Pardon or reprieve by the Crown]—See note to see. 1063 as to death sentences. A pardon, or the alternative of the remission of the remainder of the sentence, is commonly asked on the ground of the discovery of new facts casting doubt on the propriety of a conviction, or that a convict can no longer be confined without his life being endangered because of his extreme ill-health, or on the ground of his having assisted the prison authorities in a murderous attack on them by another prisoner. Sibley on Criminal Appeals (1908), p. 102.

Commutation of sentence.-Authentication.

1077. The Crown may commute the sentence of death passed upon any person convicted of a capital offence to imprisonment in the penitentiary for life, or for any term of years not less than two years, or to imprisonment in any gaol or other place of confinement for any period less than two years, with or without hard labour.

Undergoing sentence equivalent to a pardon.—No effect on punishment for subsequent offence.

1078. When any offender has been convicted of an offence not punishable with death, and has endured the punishment adjudged, or has been convicted of an offence punishable with death and the sentence of death has been commuted, and the offender has endured the punishment to which his sentence was commuted, the punishment so endured shall, as to the offence whereof the offender was so convicted, have the like effect and consequences as a pardon under the great seal.

2. Nothing in this section contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any other offence.

Origin]-Sec. 968, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 181, sec. 41; 32-33 Vict., Can., ch. 29, sec. 128.

Subsequent conviction]—The second sub-section is intended to preserve the added penalties which are provided throughout the Code and in other statutes for persons who commit offences after previous conviction for some indictable offence not necessarily of a similar character.

Release from all further criminal proceedings for same offence.

1079. King's prerogative of mercy]—This refers to royal pardons under the great seal, but by sec. 1076 the statutory pardon under the sign manual or the Governor-General's warrant shall have the same effect as a pardon under the great scal. The practice in dealing with petitions for pardons or remission of sentence conforms closely with that which prevails in England on application to the Home Secretary. good conduct, the court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, and during such period as the court directs, to appear and receive judgment when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour.

2. Where the offence is punishable with more than two years' imprisonment the court shall have the same power as aforesaid with the concurrence of the counsel acting for the Crown in the prosecution of the offender.

3. The court may, if it thinks fit, direct that the offender shall pay the costs of the prosecution, or some portion of the same, within such period and by such instalments as the court directs.

4. Where one previous conviction and no more is proved against the person so convicted and such conviction took place more than five years before that for the offence in question, or was for an offence not related in character to the offence in question, the court shall have the same power as aforesaid with the concurrence of the counsel acting for the Crown in the prosecution of the offender.

Origin]-Sec. 971, Code of 1892.

"Convicted," meaning of]—The word "convicted" is verbum aquivocum. It is sometimes used as meaning the verdict of a jury, and at other times in its more strictly legal sense for the sentence of the court. Burgess v. Boetefeur, 7 M. & G. 481; R. v. Rabjohns (1913), 9 Cr. App. R. 33 at 38. But a binding over by the court to come up for judgment when called upon is the judgment of the court for the purpose of completing a conviction. Jephson v. Barker, 3 Times L.R. 40. And there has been a "conviction" within the English Penal Servitude Act, 1864, whenever a person has been found guilty on indictment by a jury or on his own confession, and has been bound over to come up for judgment when called on. R. v. Rabjohns (1913), 9 Cr. App. R. 33.

There must be first an adjudication of guilt before a magistrate holding a summary trial can suspend sentence under sec. 1081. R. v. White (1915), 34 O.L.R. 370, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 277.

Convicted before any "court"]—Sec. 1026 specially provides that in secs. 1081-1083 the word "court" means and includes not only any superior court of criminal jurisdiction, but also a judge or court holding a speedy trial (Part XVIII), or a magistrate holding a summary trial under Part XVI. Recognizance to keep the peace and be of good behaviour]-As to further proceedings in the event of default, see sec. 1083.

Conditions of release on suspended sentence.

1082. The court, before directing the release of an offender under the last preceding section, shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the county or place for which the court acts, or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

Origin]-Sec. 972, Code of 1892; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 44, sec. 4.

Warrant when recognizance not observed on suspension of sentence.

1083. If a court having power to deal with such offender in respect of his original offence or any justice is satisfied by information on oath that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, such court or justice may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

2. An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall, if not brought forthwith before the court having power to sentence him, be brought before the justice issuing such warrant or before some other justice in and for the same territorial division, and such justice shall either remand him by warrant until the time at which he was required by his recognizance to appear for judgment, or until the sitting of a court having power to deal with his original offence, or admit him to bail, with a sufficient surety, conditioned on his appearing for judgment.

3. The offender when so remanded may be committed to a prison, either for the county or place in or for which the justice remanding him acts, or for the county or place where he is bound to appear for judgment; and the warrant of remand shall order that he be brought before the court before which he was bound to appear for judgment, or to answer as to his conduct since his release.

"Court"]—Sec. 1026 declares that "court" in this section, unless the context otherwise requires, shall mean and include any superior court of criminal jurisdiction, any judge or court within the meaning of Part XVIII (speedy trials clauses), and any magistrate within the meaning of Part XVI (summary trials).

Default under recognisance given on suspension of sentence]— Unless the defendant is before the same court on another charge and is there convicted of same, there must be an information under oath, charging a breach of the recognizance, and an opportunity afforded the defendant to make answer in respect of the alleged breach, before imposing the sentence which had been suspended. R. v. Siteman, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 224 (N.S.). If the prosecution has been conducted by the Crown, the informant will have no status to proceed for the breach of the recognizance. R. v. Remitting Penalties.

Governor in Council may remit penalty or forfeiture under Canada laws, 1084. The Governor in Council may at any time remit, in whole or in part, any pecuniary penalty, fine or forfeiture imposed by any Act of the Parliament of Canada, whether such penalty, fine or forfeiture is payable to His Majesty or to some other person, or in part to His Majesty and in part to some other person, and whether it is recoverable on indictment, information or summary conviction, or by action or otherwise.

Origin]-2 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 26, sec. 1.

Remitting fines]—Sec. 1084 applies only to offences under Dominion statutes. Costs incurred by a private prosecutor and ordered to be paid by the defendant are not to be remitted although the fine itself may be. Sec. 1085. The remission of penalties under provincial statutes is under provincial control. Attorney-General of Canada v. Attorney-General of Ontario, 23 S.C.R. 458.

Terms of remission.-Costs.

PART XXI.

RENDER BY SURETIES, AND RECOGNIZANCES.

Interpretation.

Definition.—" Cognizor," in secs. 1113-1119.

1086. In the sections of this Part relating exclusively to the province of Quebec, unless the context otherwise requires. 'cognizor' includes any number of cognizors in the recognizance whether as principals or sureties.

Origin]-Sec. 926, Code of 1892, R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, secs. 21, 22, 23.

Division of Part.

Certain sections apply only to Quebec, and others not to Quebec.

1087. Secs. 1088 to 1101 inclusive are general in their application. Secs. 1102 to 1112 inclusive do not apply to the province of Quebec. Secs. 1113 to 1119 inclusive apply to the province of Quebec only.

Origin]-Sec. 926, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, secs. 21, 22, 23.

General.

Render of accused by surety.-Arrest by sureties.

1088. Any surety for any person charged with any indictable offence may, upon affidavit showing the grounds therefor, with a certified copy of the recognizance, obtain from a judge of a superior court or from a judge of a county court having criminal jurisdiction, or in the province of Quebec from a district magistrate, an order in writing under his hand, to render such person to the common gaol of the county where the offence is to be tried.

[§ 1088] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XXI)

2. The sureties, under such order, may arrest such person and deliver him, with the order, to the gaoler named therein, who shall receive and imprison him in the said gaol, and shall be charged with the keeping of such person until he his discharged by due course of law.

Origin]—Sec. 910, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, secs. 1, 2. Common law rights preserved]—See Code sec. 1093.

Proving sheriff's certificate of render]-See see. 1090.

Bail after committal for trial]—Secs. 703 and 704 in Part XIV also provide a summary method by which the sureties for a person committed for trial as a result of a preliminary enquiry under Part XIV may obtain from a magistrate an order for the arrest of such person for whom they are bail on showing that he is about to abscond for the purpose of evading justice.

Bail after render.

1089. The person rendered may apply to a judge of a superior court, or in cases in which a judge of a county court may admit to bail, to a judge of a county court, to be again admitted to bail, who may on examination allow or refuse the same, and make such order as to the number of the sureties and the amount of recognizance as he deems meet.

2. Such order shall be dealt with in the same manner as the first order for bail, and so on as often as the case requires.

Discharge of recognizance after render.

1090. On due proof of such render, and certificate of the sheriff, proved by the affidavit of a subscribing witness, that such person has been so rendered, a judge of a superior or county count, as the case may be, shall order an entry of such render to be made on the recognizance by the officer in charge thereof, which shall vacate the recognizance, and may be pleaded or alleged in discharge thereof.

Origin]-Sec. 912, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 5.

Render of accused in court by sureties.

1091. The sureties may bring the person charged as aforesaid into the court at which he is bound to appear, during the sitting thereof, and then, by leave of the court, render him in discharge of such recognizance at any time before trial, and such person shall be committed to gaol, there to remain until discharged by due course of law; but such court may admit such person to bail for his appearance at any time it deems meet.

Origin]-Sec. 913, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 5.

Sureties responsible for appearance of accused.—Committal or new sureties.

1092. The arraignment or conviction of any person charged and bound as aforesaid, shall not discharge the recognizance, but the same shall be effectual for his appearance for trial or sentence, as the case may be.

2. The court may nevertheless commit such person to gaol upon his arraignment or trial, or may require new or additional sureties for his appearance for trial or sentence, as the case may be, notwithstanding such recognizance.

3. Such commitment shall be a discharge of the sureties.

Origin]-Sec. 914, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 6.

Right of surety to render not affected.

1093. Nothing in the foregoing provisions shall limit or restrict any right which a surety now has of taking and rendering to custody any person charged with any such offence, and for whom he is such surety.

Origin]—See. 915, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 7. Common law rights of bondsmen]—The defendant when bailed is placed in the custody of his bondsmen and they may re-seize him if they have reason to suppose that he is about to flee from justice and may bring him before a magistrate who will commit him to close custody. R. v. Butcher, 3 R.R. 678.

Officer to prepare list of persons under recognizance making default.

1094. If any person bound by recognizance for his appearance to prosecute or give evidence on the trial of any indictable offence, or to answer for any common assault, or to articles of the peace, or for whose appearance any other person has become so bound, makes default, the officer of the court by whom estreats are made out, shall prepare a list in writing, specifying the name of every person so making default, and the nature of the offence in respect of which such person, or his surety, was so bound, together with the residence, trade, profession or calling of every such person and surety.

2. Such officer shall, in such list, distinguish the principals from the sureties, and shall state the cause, if known, why each such person did not appear, and whether, by reason of the nonappearance of such person, the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed.

Origin]—Sec. 917, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 10; C.S.C. (1859) ch. 99; 7 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 64, sec. 31.

Recognizance to answer for common assault]—See Code secs. 291, 709, 732.

Bail in other cases by accused to appear and take his trial]—A recognizance of bail conditioned for the appearance of the necused for trial at a jury court is not within Code sees. 1094 and 1095, except where the charge is one of common assault; and no preliminary order of the presiding judge for the estreat is required in cases to which Code sees. 1094 and 1095 do not apply. The special provisions in that regard were intended to remedy the hardship of indiscriminately estreating recognizances given for appearance to prosecute or give evidence, or to answer for common assault or to articles of the peace or the appearance of another person for that purpose. R. v. Zarkas, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 323, 328 (Sask.).

Proceedings on forfeited recognizance.

1095. Every such officer shall, before any such recognizance is estreated, lay such list before the judge or one of the judges who presided at the court, or if such court was not presided over by a judge, before two justices who attended at such court, and such judge or justices shall examine such list, and make such order touching the estreating or putting in process any such recognizance as appears just, subject, in the province of Quebec, to the provisions hereinafter contained. ing, is he heard

2. No officer of any such court shall estreat or put in process any such recognizance without the written order of the judge or justices before whom respectively such list has been laid.

Origin]—Sec. 918, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 11; C.S.C. (1859) ch. 99; 7 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 64, sec. 31.

Estreating recognizance]—This section applies only to the recognizances referred to in sec. 1094 and does not apply to a recognizance whereby the bail became bound for the appearance of their principal to stand his trial upon an indictment other than for common assault. Re Talbot's Bail (1892), 23 O.R. 65.

Judges should be careful to see that an estreat of bail is ordered only upon material justifying it. Re Hopfe's bail (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, 23 W.L.R. 751 (Alta.).

Notice of estreat]—The Code does not require any notice to be given before the estreating of a recognizance and at least where there is no express Crown Rule requiring a notice it is unnecessary. R. v. Sullivan, 29 W.L.R. 115, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 174 (Y.T.). Nor is notice such as is provided in the English Crown Office Rules demanded by any such general provision that the latter shall regulate the practice so far as may be where no other provision is made. R. v. Zarkas, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 323 (Sask.). Compare Re Barrett's bail, 36 N.SR. 135, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 1; Re Burns' bail, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 292; R. v. Creelman (1893) 25 N.S.R. 404. Where no notice has to be given the surety before estreating, the recognizance, whatever may be the ground on which the notice is held unnecessary, there is still an opportunity for the surety to be heard after the estreat has been ordered. Code secs. 1109, 1110.

Proceedings for enforcing recognizance on certiorari.

1096. The like proceedings may be had for enforcing the condition of a recognizance taken under sec. 1126 as might be had for enforcing the condition of a recognizance taken under the Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, passed in the fifth year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Second, and chaptered 19.

Origin]—Code of 1892, sec. 893; R.S.C. 1886, eb. 179; 49 Vict., Can., eb. 49, sec. 6.

"The like proceedings," etc.]—What is now sec. 1096 was, in the prior Code, a part of an enactment which formally repealed as to Canada, sec. 2 of the English statute, 5 Geo. II, ch. 19, and declared what is now sec. 1126 to be in substitution for sec. 2 of the English statute. It is not clear whether the reference to the like proceedings as "might be had," etc., was to be limited under the original Canadian Act, 49 Vict., Can., ch. 49, to the proceedings which the English statute itself [§1096] CR provided, namely, a writ of attachment, or whether the supposed alternative method of a writ of scire facias was also available. The statute of 5 Geo. II was introduced into Ontario and Quebec as part of the Criminal law of England. See Code sec. 10 and note to same. Code secs. 11 and 12 state the different dates upon which the English law was introduced in British Columbia and Manitoba. The opinion is hazarded that the intention of the present section is to preserve in each province the practice which at the time of the passing of 49 Vict., Can., ch. 49, was available in the particular province for the enforcement of a certiorari recognizance given under the English statute there in force. In those provinces in which sec. 3 of the English Act had the force of law and had not been superseded or repealed by provincial legislation prior to Confederation, the procedure by attachment would apply. If, however, in any province a different procedure had become operative, such local procedure would be continued in its application to the substituted law (now sec. 1126) in like manner as it had subsisted under the statute of Geo. II in that province.

The operation of sec. 1096 may also be supplemented by rules of court passed under the statutory power conferred by sec. 576 and 1126, though probably such rules could not repeal or abrogate the effect of sec. 1096. See R. v. Townshend, 43 N.S.R. 1, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 209.

Justices to certify default .-- Form of certificate.

1097. Whenever a person gives security by or is discharged upon recognizance and does not afterwards appear at the time and place mentioned in the recognizance, or whenever the conditions or any of them in any recognizance entered into by an applicant to whom a case stated by a justice under this Act has been delivered, have not been complied with, the justice who took the recognizance, or any justice who is then present, having certified upon the back of the recognizance the non-appearance of the person or the non-compliance with the condition, as the case may be, may transmit such recognizance to the proper officer in the province appointed by law to receive the same, to be proceeded upon in like manner as other recognizances.

2. Such certificate shall be prima facie evidence of such nonappearance or non-compliance.

3. Such certificate shall be in form 73.

The certificate of default will be good if the defendant was not present, although the usual mode of calling him three times in the courtroom and three times outside, was not adopted. R. v. Sullivan (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 174, 29 W.L.R. 115, 18 D.L.R. 535.

Recognizance to be transmitted to the "proper officer" in the province]—See secs. 1098 and 1099. The magistrate's certificate is prima facie evidence of non-compliance with the condition of a recognizance to appear before the magistrate; sec. 1097 (2); and it was said by Irving, J., in R. v. Harvie (1913) 3 W.W.R. 727, 18 B.C.R. 5, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 369, that if the certificate is to be reviewed, this should be done by certiorari. On the roll being transmitted to the sheriff by the proper officer designated by sees. 1098 and 1099, along with a conditional writ of execution (Code form 75), the bondsmen have the opportunity to be heard on the return day before the judge, and relief may be granted in a case of hardship, sec. 1110; R. v. Harvie, 3 W.W.R. 727, supra. On transmission of a recognizance to a court of civil jurisdiction it would seem that the enforcement of it is a civil matter for the collection of a debt due to the Crown; Re Talbot's Bail, 23 Ont. R. 65; Re McArthur's Bail, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 195; R. v. Harvie, 3 W.W.R. 727; but if the judge of a criminal court such as the County Judge's Criminal Court, makes an unauthorized order for estreat and the issue of an unconditional writ of fieri facias and capias, and there is no right of appeal because made in a criminal matter, certiorari proceedings might be taken to have the order quashed after an application to the judge to discharge his own order, R. v. Harvie, supra.

A recognizance illegally taken by justices without jurisdiction is not summarily enforceable by estreat proceedings and a writ of fi. fa. and capias. Re Hopfe's bail, (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, 23 W.L.R. 751 (Alta.).

Estreat of recognizance in Ontario.

1098. The proper officer to whom the recognizance and certificate of default are to be transmitted in the province of Ontario, shall be the clerk of the peace of the county for which such justice is acting.

2. The court of general sessions of the peace for such county shall, at its then next sitting, order all such recognizances to be forfeited and estreated, and the same shall be enforced and collected in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as any fines, forfeitures or amercements imposed by or forfeited before such court.

Origin]-Sec. 878, Code of 1892, as amended, 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, sec. 3.

1099. In the province of British Columbia, such proper officer shall be the clerk of the county court having jurisdiction at the place where such recognizance is taken, and such recognizance shall be enforced and collected in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as any fines, forfeitures or amercements imposed by or forfeited before such county court.

2. In the other provinces of Canada such proper officer shall be the officer to whom like recognizances have been heretofore accustomed to be transmitted under the law heretofore in force; and such recognizances shall be enforced and collected in the same manner as like recognizances have heretofore been enforced and collected.

Origin]-See. 878, Code of 1892, as amended, 63-64 Vict., Can., ch. 46, see. 3.

Manner of estreat.

1100. All recognizances taken or entered into under any provision of this Act which are forfeited or in respect to which the conditions of such recognizances, or any of them, have not been complied with, shall be liable to be estreated in the same manner as any forfeited recognizance to appear is by law liable to be estreated by the court before which the principal party thereto was bound to appear.

Origin]-Sec. 598, Code of 1892; 48-49 Vict., Can., ch. 7, sec. 9.

Objection to form of recognizance]—The alleged recognizance is irregular if it does not acknowledge an indebtedness in the amount of the penalty, as by the omission of the words "to owe" in the customary form. R. v. Hoodless, 45 M.C.Q.B. 556 (Ont.). It has been held that a recognizance taken on Sunday by a justice upon a committal for trial then made, is valid. Ex parte Garland, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 385.

Where a recognizance of bail is taken at an assize court and then verbally acknowledged by the sureties in open court to bind the sureties for the appearance of their principal to stand his trial upon an indictment, notice of the recognizance to the sureties is unnecessary. Re Talbot's Bail (1892), 23 Ont. R. 65. The practice which prior to the Code demanded the giving of notice at the time the recognizance was entered into (B.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 81) no longer prevails. R. v. Zarkas, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 323 (Sask.).

Motion to vacate an estreat]-A long delay in moving to vacate an estreat upon a mere irregularity or informality may disentitle the applicant to relief. R. v. May, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 529, 5 O.W.R. 67. If the affidavits are conflicting upon a question extrinsic of the record, the court ordinarily will refuse to vacate the estreat upon a point not arising on the record. R. v. Bole, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 500. The surety for the accused as well as the accused himself may effectually waive irregularities in matters of mere procedure. Re Burns' Bail, (1906) 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 292 (N.S.); R. v. Sullivan, (1914) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 174, 29 W.L.R. 115 (Y.T.).

Discretion of court as to estreat.-Procedure.

1108. Except in the case of persons bound by recognizance for their appearance, or for whose appearance any other person has become bound to prosecute or give evidence on the trial of any indictable offence, or to answer for any common assault, or to articles of the peace, in every case of default whereby a recognizance becomes forfeited, if the cause of absence is made known to the court in which the person was bound to appear, the court, on consideration of such cause, and considering also, whether, by the non-appearance of such person the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed, may forbear to order the recognizance to be estreated.

2. With respect to all recognizances estreated, if it appears to the satisfaction of the judge who presided at such court that the absence of any person for whose appearance any recognizance was entered into, was owing to circumstances which rendered such absence justifiable, such judge may make an order directing that the sum forfeited upon such estreated recognizance shall not be levied.

3. The clerk of the court shall, for such purpose, before sending to the sheriff any roll, with a writ of fieri facias and capias, as directed by sec. 1105, submit the same to the judge who presided at the court, and such judge may make a minute on the said roll and writ of any such forfeited recognizances and fines as he thinks fit to direct not to be levied.

4. The sheriff shall observe the direction in such minute written upon such roll and writ, or endorsed thereon, and shall forbear accordingly to levy any such forfeited recognizance or fine so directed not to be levied.

RECOGNIZANCES

Origin]—Sec. 919, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sees. 12, 13. Liability of sureties for the default, although defaulter since taken into custody]—Relief was granted to the sureties in respect of an estreat of their recognizance for defendant's appearance, when the defendant was subsequently taken into custody and so remained at the time of the application, but only upon condition that the sureties pay the Crown's costs of the application. R. v. Bailly, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 289, 3 E.L.R. 74.

Judge may defer consideration of estreat record to next sittings]— It is not essential to the validity of an estreat of bail given for appearance for trial that the record of proposed estreats should be made and passed upon at the same sittings at which the default occurred; the trial judge may direct that the estreat record may be held over until the following sittings, and it may then be dealt with. R. v. Bailly, 18 Can. Cr. Cas. 289, 3 E.L.R. 74.

Discharge from custody on giving security.—Writ of fieri facias and capias on non-appearance.

1109. If any person on whose goods and chattels a sheriff, bailiff or other officer is authorized to levy any such forfeited recognizance, gives security to the said sheriff or other officer for his appearance at the return day mentioned in the writ, in the court into which such writ is returnable, then and there to abide the decision of such court, and also to pay such forfeited recognizance, or sum of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, together with all such expenses as are adjudged and ordered by the court, such sheriff or officer shall discharge such person out of custody, and if such person does not appear in pursuance of his undertaking, the court may forthwith issue a writ of fieri facias and capias against such person and the surety or sureties of the person so bound as aforesaid.

Origin]—Sec. 921, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, sec. 16; 3 Geo. IV, Imp., ch. 46, sec. 5.

Discharge of forfelted recognizance.

1110. The court, into which any writ of fieri facias and capias issued under the provisions of this Part is returnable, may inquire into the circumstances of the case, and may in its discretion, order the discharge of the whole of the forfeited recognizance, or sum of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, and make such order thereon as to such

The court into which the writ is returnable]-The court here specified, although it may be a civil court, is given a discretionary power to discharge the recognizance itself. When the order is made by a civil court it is held to be a civil and not a criminal proceeding. Re McArthur's Bail (1897), 3 Terr. L.R. 37, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 195; re Talbot's Bail, 23 Ont. R. 65. The rules of practice will determine whether the application should be made to the court en bane or to a indge. It was held in re Pippy, (1908) 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 305, that an application in Nova Scotia under sec. 1110 should be made to the judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia (see sec. 1104 (b)) presiding at the criminal sittings of that court; but see re McArthur's Bail (1897), 3 Terr. L.R. 37, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 195, where an order made by the superior court judge who presided at the criminal trial, relieving the bail on payment of certain compensation and costs, was reversed on appeal, on the ground that sec. 1110 gave jurisdiction only to the full court.

Return of writ by sheriff.

1111. The sheriff, to whom any writ is directed under this Part, shall return the same on the day on which the same is made returnable, and shall state, on the back of the roll attached to such writ, what has been done in the execution thereof; and such return shall be filed in the court into which such return is made.

Roll and return to Minster of Finance.

1112. A copy of such roll and return, certified by the clerk of the court into which such return is made, shall be forthwith transmitted to the Minister of Finance, with a minute thereon of any of the sums therein mentioned, which have been remitted by order of the court, in whole or in part, or directed to be forborne, under the authority of sec. 1108.

RECOGNIZANCES

Provisions Applicable only to the Province of Quebec.

Estreat on default in Quebec.

1113. Whenever default is made in the condition of any recognizance lawfully entered into or taken in any criminal case, proceeding or matter, in the province of Quebec, within the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada, so that the penal sum therein mentioned becomes forfeited and due to the Crown, such recognizance shall thereupon be estreated or withdrawn from any record or proceeding in which it then is, or, where the recognizance has been entered into orally in open court, a certificate or minute of such recognizance, under the seal of the court, shall be made from the records of such court.

Origin]—Sec. 926, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, secs. 21, 22.
 Compare R.S. Que. 1909, article 3394.

Transmission of recognizance, etc., to Superior Court in Quebec.

1114. Such recognizance, certificate or minute, as the case may be, shall be transmitted by the court, recorder, justice, magistrate or other functionary before whom the cognizor, or the principal cognizor, where there is a surety or sureties, was bound to appear, or to do that by his default to do which the condition of the recognizance is broken, to the Superior Court in the district in which the place where such default was made is included for civil purposes, with the certificate of the court, recorder, justice, magistrate or other functionary as aforesaid, of the breach of the condition of such recognizance, of which, and of the forfeiture to the Crown of the penal sum therein mentioned, such certificate shall be conclusive evidence.

Origin]—Sec. 926, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 179, secs. 21, 22, 23. Compare R.S. Que., 1909, article 3395.

"Shall be conclusive evidence"]—The certificate of forfeiture is "conclusive evidence" only for the purposes of the entry of the cx parte judgment authorized by see. 1115; after such entry is made, the certificate as well as the judgment thereon may be attacked. R. v. Edwards, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 296 (Que.). It may be attacked either before or after the issue of a writ of fi. fa. and capias. R. v. Edwards, supra.

EXTRAORDINARY REMEDIES.

Ordering further detention of person accused on inquiry as to legality of imprisonment.

1120. Whenever any person in custody charged with an indictable offence has taken proceedings before a judge or criminal court having jurisdiction in the premises by way of certiorari, habeas corpus or otherwise, to have the legality of his imprisonment inquired into, such judge or court may, with or without determining the question, make an order for the further detention of the person accused, and direct the judge or justice, under whose warrant he is in custody, or any other judge or justice, to take any proceedings, hear such evidence, or do such further act as in the opinion of the court or judge may best further the ends of justice.

Origin]-Sec. 752, Code of 1892; Code Amendment Act, 1908, ch. 18.

"In custody charged with an indictable offence"]—There is a division of opinion in Canadian courts as to whether the sec. 1120 applies after a conviction, and while a prisoner is serving a sentence thereunder, as well as to a commitment which is not one in execution. That it does so apply was affirmed in R. v. Frejd, 22 O.L.R. 566; R. v. Graf, 19 O.L.R. 238, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 193; R. v. Macdonald, 21 O.L.R. 38, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 121; ex parte Carroll, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 213 (Que.); re Le Blanc, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 208 (N.S.). Compare under a similar provincial law R. v. Ackers, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 222 (Ont.); R. v. Morgan, 2 O.L.R. 413, affirmed by R. v. Morgan, 3 O.L.R. 356.

Doubt was expressed as to its application to convicted persons in R. v. Goldsberry, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 159 (Que.); and in the later case of R. v. Morgan, (1913) 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 192, 20 R.L. 277 (Que.), it was held that a person "charged" does not mean a person sentenced although the trial was illegal.

"May make an order"]—The word "may" is to be construed as permissive. R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 34 (24). If no application be made by the prosecution or by the Crown for the further detention of the prisoner and for time to bring in a new warrant in substitution for the defective one, there is nothing to prevent the court from ordering his discharge. Re Le Blane, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 208, distinguishing R. v. Corbett, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 499.

[§1120] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XXII)

If a penalty imposed by the magistrate did not exceed the authorized maximum and the conviction and commitment were regular, the court, on habeas corpus, has no jurisdiction to revise the sentence. O'Neil v. Carbonneau, (1918) 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 340 (Que.).

If a valid cause of detention appears at the time of the return to the writ of habeas corpus, a discharge must be refused although the commitment was illegal at its inception. R. v. Mitchell, (1911) 24 O.L.R. 324, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 113.

Direction for amended commitment to cure defect appearing on habeas corpus]—In Coté v. Morin, (1917) 53 Que. S.C. 124, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 59, see. 1120 was referred to as the basis of the practice of permitting the substitution of a new warrant of commitment for another when the latter is irregular; and was applied to a commitment following a summary conviction; and see R. v. Morgan, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 63; R. v. Barre, 15 Man. R. 420, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 1; R. v. Wright, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 461; re Plunkett, 1 Can. Cr. Cas. 365, 3 B.C.R. 484; R. v. Maedonald, 21 O.L.R. 38, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 121,

Under some circumstances powers analogous to those conferred by see. 1120 may exist apart from the statute, and, whether or not the section applies to commitments in execution, it is said that there is an inherent power in a court exercising the powers of the former Court of King's Bench in England to retain the prisoner in custody until a formal defect is remedied. Ex parte Carroll, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 213 (Que.); R. v. Frejd, 22 O.L.R. 566; R. v. Richards, 5 Q.B. 1126.

An amended commitment in execution of a conviction must conform to the conviction itself, and if the conviction be defective there may be a direction for an amended conviction in cases in which an amendment of the conviction would be permissible on a certiorari. See Code sec. 1121-1125, 1128-1132.

For examples of directions that the magistrate file an amended conviction see also re Le Blane, (1914) 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 208; R. v. Macdonald, 21 O.L.R. 38; R. v. Smith, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 425.

The power of amending a conviction under see. 1124 now extends to convictions on summary trial (Part XVI), as well as to summary convictions (Part XV). Code see. 797 (2); and see R. v. Crawford, (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 49 (Alta.). Cases under the prior law—R. v. Randolph, 4 Can. Cr. Cas. 165, 32 Ont. R. 212; R. v. Shing, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 463—are no longer of authority for refusing to order further detention in respect of a summary trial conviction and commitment, under the like circumstances as upon a summary conviction.

Compare R. v. Payne, 30 Can. Cr. Cas. 382 (Que.).

Further detention may be refused and the prisoner's discharge ordered if there has been a gross miscarriage of justice both as to the illegal term imposed and the class of imprisonment. R. v. Hayward, 5 O.L.R. 65, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 399.

HABEAS CORPUS AND CERTIORARI [§1120]

Apart from sec. 1120 the court has the power to receive an amended commitment at the hearing of the habeas corpus motion; R. v. Richards, 5 Q.B. 926; but under sec. 1120 if an amended commitment is not produced, but the court is of opinion that the defect might be eured by an amended commitment, and that such will "best further the ends of justice," it will give a direction that such be filed, and remand the prisoner to custody to be further detained as if such direction had already been complied with. R. v. Macdonald, 21 O.L.R. 38, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 121.

Like all other powers of this nature bestowed upon or inherent in the judges of the King's Bench, it is not to be exercised as a matter of course, but only when such action is necessary in the interest of justice. Ex parte Carroll, 29 Can. Cr. Cas. 213 (Que.); R. v. Kolember, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 341 (Y.T.).

Remands to custody for further proceedings or proceedings de novo]—If the magistrate had jurisdiction to hold a preliminary enquiry, but proceeded without jurisdiction to hold a summary trial, the jurisdiction is properly exercised by an order remanding the accused to be dealt with upon a preliminary enquiry. R. v. Manzi (1915), 8 O.W.N. 533, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 359; R. v. Frejd, 22 O.L.R. 566. [Contra, R. v. Kolember, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 341 (Y.T.); R. v. Blucher, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 278; R. v. Alexander, (1913) 5 W.W.R. 17, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 473, 25 W.L.R. 290 (Alta.).]

Conversely, if the magistrate, after hearing evidence on both sides in a summary trial (Part XVI), illegally renounced his summary trial jurisdiction and committed for trial, the court on habeas corpus may discharge the accused if it considers that the ends of justice have been served by the imprisonment he has undergone under the committal for trial, R. v. Hicks (1912), 2 W.W.R. 1100, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 192, 22 W.L.R. 236 (Alta.).

If hard labor has been imposed where not authorized, that part of the conviction is severable and the direction of hard labor may be quashed on habeas corpus or certiorari and an amended conviction substituted. Re Muschik, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 1285, 9 Sask. L.R. 1, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 170; R. v. Atkinson, (1914) 6 W.W.R. 1055, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 149, 28 W.L.R. 412 (Man.); R. v. McAnn, 4 B.C.R. 587, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 110. But the substitution of a valid conviction will not validate the hard labor already suffered under the illegal direction. R. v. McAnn, supra.

[§1121] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XXII)

Want of form.—Summary conviction affirmed on appeal, validated notwithstanding defect.—Defective commitment validated if conviction valid.

1121. No conviction or order made on summary conviction which has been affirmed, or affirmed and amended, in appeal. shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into any superior court, and no warrant or commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it is therein alleged that the defendant has been convicted, and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

Origin]-Sec. 886, Code of 1892.

Summary convictions or orders against defendant affirmed on appeal]—An order dismissing a complaint is not included. R. v. Laird, 1 Terr. L.R. 179.

Where the defendant has appealed against a summary conviction and it is affirmed on appeal, he may still have a certiorari upon any ground which impeaches the jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Starkey, 7 Man. R. 43; Johnston v. O'Reilly, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 218, 16 Man. R. 405; Fanchaux v. Georgett (1915) 9 W.W.R. 458, 8 Sask. L.R. 324, 32 W.L.R. 863, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 76; (R. v. Georgett, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 341, reversed on appeal).

A commitment in respect both of the imprisonment imposed in a summary conviction for the offence and of the costs of the unsuccessful appeal therefrom is severable, and if the unexpired term under either has been legally awarded, it will constitute an answer in habeas corpus. Collette v. The King, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281, 19 Que. K.B. 124.

Summary conviction.-Appeal taken is a bar to certiorari

1122. No writ of certiorari shall be allowed to remove any conviction or order had or made before any justice if the defendant has appealed from such conviction or order to any court to which an appeal from such conviction or order is authorized by law, or shall be allowed to remove any conviction or order made upon such appeal.

Origin]-Sec. 887, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 84.

"If the defendant has appealed"]—In Reg. v. Lynch, 12 O.R. 372, and in Johnston v. O'Reilly, 16 Man. R. 405, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 218, it was held that serving a valid notice of appeal is appealing.

W

If the appeal proceedings were abortive because of some defect which deprived the appeal tribunal of jurisdiction to hear the appeal, certiorari is not taken away. R. v. O'Brien, 38 N.B.R. 109; Fanchaux v. Georgett (1915) 9 W.W.R. 458, 8 Sask. L.R. 325, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 76; R. v. Alford, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 61; R. v. Caswell, 33 U.C.Q.B 303; R. v. Becker, 20 Ont. The statutory right to appeal and its exercise do not preclude the court from granting certiorari where want of jurisdiction is shown; R. v. Starkey, 7 Man. L.R. 43; Johnston v. O'Reilly, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 218, 16 Man. L.R. 405; Davis v. Feinstein (1915) 8 W.W.R. 1003, 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 160, 24 D.L.R. 798, 25 Man. R. 507.

In R. v. Asheroft, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 385, it was held that a party has always a right to a writ of certiorari on the ground of want of jurisdiction, no matter whether an appeal is pending or not. And see re Ruggles, 35 N.S.R. 57; Denault v. Robida, 10 Que. S.C. 199; Pakhala v. Hannuksela (1912) 2 W.W.R. 911, 921; R. v. Haines, ex parte McCorquindale, 39 N.B.R. 49, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 187; R. v. Chappus, 39 O.L.R. 329, affirming 38 O.L.R. 576.

"Court to which an appeal is authorized by law"]—If the notice of appeal is given to the court of the wrong district (see, 749) it is not within this phrase. R. v. Deer, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 410 (Sask.); R. v. Delegarde, 36 N.B.R. 503; same case, ex parte Cowan, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 454.

Theft by juvenile not over 16.—Conviction or warrant under Part XVII.

1123. No conviction under Part XVII shall be quashed for want of form or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any court of record; and no warrant of commitment under the said Part shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the person has been convicted and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

Origin]-Sec. 820, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 177, sec. 15. Juvenile Offenders]-Part XVII deals with the summary trial of juveniles for theft or offences punishable as theft. Sec. 802.

Validation of summary convictions, etc., notwithstanding irregularity or insufficiency under certain conditions.—Same power to amend on certiorari, as on an appeal.—Sufficiency of statement in information, warrant, etc.

1124. No conviction or order made by any justice, and no warrant for enforcing the same, shall, on being removed by certiorari, be held invalid for any irregularity, informality or insufficiency therein, if the court or judge before which or whom the question is raised, upon perusal of the depositions, is satisfied that an offence of the nature described in the conviction, order or warrant, has been committed, over which such justice has jurisdiction, and that the punishment imposed is not in excess of that which might have been lawfully imposed for the said offence: Provided that the court or judge, where so satisfied, shall, even if the punishment imposed or the order made is in excess of that which might lawfully have been imposed or made, have the like powers in all respects to deal with the case as seems just as are by sec. 754 conferred upon the court to which an appeal is taken under the provisions of sec. 749.

2. Any statement which, under this Act or otherwise, would be sufficient if contained in a conviction, shall also be sufficient if contained in an information, summons, order or warrant.

Origin]—R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 87; 53 Vict., ch. 37, sec. 27; sec. 889, Code of 1892.

"Conviction or order made by any justice "]—Sec. 797, sub-sec. (2) added by 3-4 Geo. V, Can., ch. 13, sec. 28, enacts that the provisions of sec. 1124 shall apply to convictions or orders made under Part XVI, a question upon which there were conflicting decisions before that enactment. R. v. Shing (1910) 20 Man. R. 214, 15 W.L.R. 714, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 463; R. v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952, 22 W.L.R. 107; R. v. Stark (1911) 18 W.L.R. 419, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 67; R. v. Randolph, 32 Ont. R. 212.

As regards summary trials the application of sec. 1124 is not limited to the special appeals under secs. 773, sub-secs. (a) and (f) for which sec. 797 provides; and an excess of punishment in the conviction may be corrected in a manner analogous to that exercisable on an appeal taken from a summary conviction under Part XV. See R. v. Boardman (1914) 4 W.W.R. 1304; R. v. Crawford (1912) 2 W.W.R. 952. But a doubt is raised by one Ontario case as to whether ecrtiorari is applicable as an alternative to an appeal by a case reserved or stated under sec. 1013 et seq. following a summary trial based upon the extended jurisdiction of sec. 777, even to test the question of jurisdiction. R. v. Sinclair, 38 O.L.R. 149.

"On being removed by certiorari"]—This phrase includes a process for removal of convictions on notice substituted for a writ of certiorari by Crown Rules. R. v. Jackson, (1917) 40 O.L.R. 173; R. v. Titchmarsh (1914) 32 O.L.R. 569.

Crown Rules on certiorari practice]-Code sec. 576.

"Upon perusal of the depositions"]--Where there is no limitation upon the right to certiorari, the court will look at the depositions, and if there be no legal evidence at all to support the finding, will quash a summary conviction. R. v. Barber Asphalt Co., 23 O.L.R. 372; R. v.

A proper test is whether the facts from which the magistrate's conclusion was drawn would be sufficient to submit to the jury if the offence had been triable by a jury instead of by the magistrate. R. v. Kolotyla, 21 Man. R. 197; R. v. Davidson, 8 Man. R. 325. But it will not consider the weight of conflicting evidence if the conviction is otherwise regular. Re Trepanier, 12 S.C.R. 111 at 129 (Can.); R. v. McPherson, supra; R. v. Nickerson, (1909) 39 N.B.R. 428; R. v. Reinhardt, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 445 (Ont.).

The effect of sec. 1124 construed with secs. 754 and 749, was held in R. v. Toy Moon, (1911) 1 W.W.R. 50, 21 Man. R. 527, to be that the Court shall, notwithstanding any defect in the conviction, determine the complaint on the merits, and it is empowered to confirm, reverse, or modify the decision of the justice or make such other conviction as the Court thinks just: sec. 754. Under these provisions, the Court should look at the evidence to ascertain if an offence of the nature described in the conviction was committed for which the accused might have been convicted by the magistrate; and the conviction may be modified or a new conviction may be made, so as to declare the accused guilty of the offence warranted by the evidence. R. v. Dickey, (1916) 9 W.W.R. 142, 144, per Beck, J.; R. v. Barb [1917] 2 W.W.R. 326; 28 Can. Cr. Cas 93; R. v. Emery [1917] 1 W.W.R. 337, 10 Alta. L.R. 139, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 116, overruling R. v. Carter, 9 Alta. L.R. 481, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 51, 34 W.L.R. 448; R. v. Covert, [1917] 1 W.W.R. 919, 10 Alta, L.R. 349, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 25, and see R. v. Morin, [1917] 3 W.W.R. 693, 28 Can. Cr. Cas. 414.

If the depositions apart from physical exhibits not returned with them do not show that an offence was committed, the court should continue the certiorari proceedings so that the exhibits may be produced. R. v. Dickey (1916) 9 W.W.R. 142, 146 (Alta.).

If there is an irregularity which apart from sec. 1124 or other curative sections would impel the court to quash the conviction, and of the class to which sec. 1124 applies, then the direction of this enactment to the court is such that the court is not compelled to overlook the irregularity if it would not have made any conviction on the evidence which the magistrate had before him. R. v. Tystad, 15 Can. Cr. Cas. 236 (Y.T.); R. v. Law Bow, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 468; R. v. Melvin, 38 O.L.R. 231; R. v. Schooley, 11 O.W.N. 341, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 444; R. v. offences by the statute governing them, and the certiorari is therefore limited strictly to matters of jurisdiction of the magistrate, it is said that the court on certiorari will not look at the depositions to see if there was any evidence upon which to convict as that would be reviewing the erroneous finding by the magistrate that there was sufficient evidence, and it is to be assumed that the statute taking away certiorari prohibited such a review, R. v. Davis, (1913) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 33 (N.B.); ex parte Daley, 27 N.B.R. 129; R. v. Hornbrook, 39 N.B.R. 298; R. v. Holyoke, 42 N.B.R. 135; R. v. Hoare (1915) 49 N.S.R. 119; R. v. Walsh, 29 N.S.R. 53; ex parte Coulson, 33 N.B.R. 341; R. v. Wallace (1883) 4 Ont. R. 127; R. v. Cantin, 39 O.L.R. 20; R. v. Berry (1916) 38 O.L.R. 177; R. v. Chappus, 39 O.L.R. 329, affirming 38 O.L.R. 576. But that limitation is not to be taken as depriving the court of jurisdiction if the conviction is manifestly against natural justice and upon evidence not directed to the real question raised by a plea of not guilty to the offence. If there is a manifest defect in the jurisdiction of the tribunal or a manifest fraud in the party procuring the conviction, the court will review those grounds notwithstanding a statute taking away certiorari. Colonial Bank v. Willan, (1874) L.R. 5 P.C. 417, 442, and see R. v. Morn Hill Camp, [1917] 1 K.B. 176; R. v. Bolton, 1 Q.B. 66. So also a review may be granted in respect of the improper conduct of the magistrate, or the failure to observe the fundamental principles entitling the defendant to a fair trial. Re Sing Kee, 8 B.C.R. 20; ex parte Legere, 27 N.B.R. 292.

And although certiorari is taken away in respect of summary convictions under a special statute (as the Opium and Drug Act, 1-2 Geo. V, ch. 17), it seems that the depositions may be looked at in determining whether costs should be granted or refused on dismissing the motion. R. v. Featherstone [1919] 1 W.W.R. 829 (Alta.).

Magistrate may return an amended conviction]—Apart from the provisions of sec. 1124, permitting the court, in certain events, to amend the conviction brought up, it is permissible for the convicting magistrate to return an amended conviction in substitution for the original or for that already returned as a part of the record, so long as the new conviction conforms to the actual adjudication and furthermore is supported by the evidence. R. v. Bissette [1917] 3 W.W.R. 501 (Alta.); R. v. Smith, 45 N.S.R. 517; R. v. Nelson (1914) 6 W.W.R. 706, 7 Sask. L.R. 92, 28 W.L.R. 102; R. v. Barre, 15 Man. R. 420; R. v. McAnn, 4 B.C.R. 587; R. v. certiorari. R. v. Little (1915) 10 W.W.R. 893 (where neither the information nor the conviction described anything criminal); R. v. Roach, (1914) 6 O.W.N. 632, 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 28; Smith v. Moody [1903] 1 K.B. 56; R. v. Lamothe 18 O.L.R. 310; R. v. Aikens, (1915) 23 Can. Cr. Cas. 467 (N.S.); R. v. Hayes, 5 O.L.R. 198; R. v. Bridges, 13 B.C.R. 67; R. v. Reedy, 18 O.L.R. 1; R. v. C.P.R., 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 549 (Terr.).

Reducing illegal and excessive punishment]—The power of reducing the punishment where in excess of the legal maximum is exercisable upon the material returned; a trial de novo is not necessary for the purpose of revising a punishment in that event. R. v. McKenzie, 41 N.S.R. 178. It may be reduced either to the statutory maximum or below it, in like manner as an appeal judge might deal with an appeal under sec. 754. R. v. McKenzie, supra; R. v. Rudolph, t O.W.N. 257, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 206; R. v. Gavin, 30 N.S.R. 162; R. v. Spooner, 32 Ont. R. 481; R. v. Van Fleet, [1918] 1 W.W.R. 332 and 432 (Alta.); R. v. Code, 1 Sask. L.R. 295, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 372.

And on a habeas corpus with which no certiorari in aid had been issued, the decision may either be delayed for the purpose of allowing the Crown to bring the conviction and proceedings before the court upon certiorari, or if these are produced to the court the conviction may be amended without that formality. R. v. Avon (1919) 16 O.W.N. 162.

The imposition of illegal costs may be cured by striking out the clause of the conviction dealing with costs, thus amending the conviction in the manner authorized by see. 754. R. v. Gage (1916) 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 330, 10 O.W.N. 364.

The court may quash the conviction instead of reducing the illegal punishment if the ends of justice are better served in that way. Code sec. 1120; and cases there cited.

A conviction containing an illegal penalty was quashed where evidence was irregularly given of a previous offence and the court was not satisfied that the accused was guilty of the charge. R. v. L'Hirondelle, (1916) 10 W.W.R. 837, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 71 (Alta.).

If a summary trial was held on a plea of not guilty, but the depositions were not taken down in writing as they should have been, the conviction must be quashed. Perron v. Senecal, (1915) 24 Can. Cr. Cas. 358, 17 Que. P.R. 134.

If the plea were one of guilty, although there were no depositions, it would seem that the same powers of amendment as the appeal judge would have under sec. 754 might the more easily be applied. A perusal of the depositions is required solely for the purpose of satisfying the court that notwithstanding the irregularity in the proceedings or the excess in the punishment the accused was really guilty; and it seems incorrect to say that the words "upon perusal of the depositions" create a condition precedent barring an amendment of the conviction where depositions had been unnecessary because of defendant's plea.

Recognizance on certiorari]—A separate section of the Code (sec. 1126) confers power on the court having authority to quash a conviction, etc., before a justice, to provide by a general order for security by recognizance or deposit. Sec. 1096 relates to the enforcement of the recognizance.

Ordering restitution of fine on quashing conviction]—On making the order to quash, the court may also direct that the fine and costs still in the custody of the magistrate or other local authority shall be returned to the defendant. R. v. Hung Gee (No. 2), (1913) 4 W.W.R. 1133, 24 W.L.R. 862, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 411; R. v. Wightman, 29 U.C.Q.B. 211 (Ont.); Mercier v. Plamandon, 6 Can. Cr. Cas. 223 (Que.).

Irregularities curable under sec. 1124.

1125. The following matters amongst others shall be held to be within the provisions of the last preceding section:—

- (a) The statement of the adjudication, or of any other matter or thing, in the past tense instead of in the present;
- (b) The punishment imposed being less than the punishment by law assigned to the offence stated in the conviction or order, or to the offence which appears by the depositions to have been committed;
- (c) The omission to negative circumstances, the existence of which would make the act complained of lawful, whether such circumstances are stated by way of exception or otherwise in the section under which the offence is laid, or are stated in another section.

2. Nothing in this section contained shall be construed to restrict the generality of the wording of the last preceding section.

court by certiorari, shall be entertained unless the defendant is shown to have entered into a recognizance with one or more sufficient sureties, before a justice or justices of the county or place within which such conviction or order has been made, or before a judge or other officer, as may be prescribed by such general order, or to have made a deposit to be prescribed in like manner, with a condition to prosecute such writ of certiorari at his own costs and charges, with effect, without any wilful or affected delay, and, if ordered so to do, to pay the person in whose favour the conviction, order or other proceeding is affirmed, his full costs and charges to be taxed according to the course of the court where such conviction, order or proceeding is affirmed.

1127. If a motion or rule to quash a conviction, order or other proceeding is refused or discharged, it shall not be necessary to issue a writ of procedendo, but the order of the court refusing or discharging the application shall be a sufficient authority for the registrar or other officer of the court forthwith to return the conviction, order or proceeding to the court or justice from which or whom they were removed, and for proceedings to be taken thereon for the enforcement thereof, as if a proceedendo had issued, which shall forthwith be done.

Conviction not to be set aside for defect in form.

1129. Whenever it appears by any conviction made by a justice or stipendiary magistrate that the defendant has appeared and pleaded, and the merits have been tried, and the defendant has not appealed against the conviction, where an appeal is allowed, or if appealed against, the conviction has been affirmed, such conviction shall not afterwards be set aside or vacated in consequence of any defect of form whatever, but the construction shall be such a fair and liberal construction as will be agreeable to the justice of the case.

Origin]-Sec. 896, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, sec. 94.

"Defects of form" cured if merits have been tried and defendant has not appealed]—Sec. 1129 has reference to certiorari proceedings. R. v. Hostyn, 1 W.L.R. 113. Compare secs. 1121-1124, 1132.

Validation of proceedings under Summary Trials Part notwithstanding want of form.

1130. No conviction, sentence or proceeding under Part XVI shall be quashed for want of form; and no warrant of commitment upon a conviction under the said Part shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the offender has been convicted and there is a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

Defects of form in summary trial proceedings]—This section is sufficient in its terms to cover even so serious a defect as the absence of the signature and seal of one of the two justices, if there is a valid conviction in other respects. R. v. James (1915) 9 W.W.R. 235, 9 A.L.R. 66, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 23. A defective commitment is not cured by sec. 1130 if it recites a conviction invalid on its face; R. v. Gibson, 29 Ont. R. 660. An omission to state in the conviction that the accused consented to summary tral in a case where such consent was essential to the jurisdiction, has been held to be a matter of form curable by this section if, in fact, the consent was given. R. v. Burtress, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 536. And the use of the information as a "charge in writing" if a defect at all is one of form only. R. v. McLeod, 39 N.S.R. 108; and see R. v. Gill, 18 O.L.R. 234, 14 Can. Cr. Cas. 294; R. v. Wong Joe, [1918] 3 W.W.R. 672 (B.C.).

No action against official when conviction quashed.

1131. If an application is made to quash a conviction, order or other proceeding made or had by or before a justice or stipendiary magistrate, on the ground that such justice or stipendiary has exceeded his jurisdiction, the court or judge to which or whom the application is made, may, as a condition of quashing the conviction, order or other proceeding, if the court or judge thinks fit so to do, provide that no action shall be brought against the justice or stipendiary by or before whom such conviction, order or other proceeding was made or had, or against any officer acting thereunder or under any warrant issued to enforce any such conviction or order.

Origin]-Compare sec. 891, Code of 1892.

"As a condition of quashing the conviction"]—The protection order under sec. 1131 can be made only in a proceeding in which the conviction is being quashed. In habeas corpus proceedings in Ontario an order for discharge ex debito justitiæ could not be accompanied by an order for protection, unless the conviction was before the court for review. R. v. Lowery, (1907) 15 O.L.R. 182, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 105; R. v. Peart, 7 O.W.N. 126; and see R. v. Tunnheim, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 480 (Sask.). But protection might be granted when the conviction itself came up on a motion to quash and not merely on a certiorari in aid of the habeas corpus. Meanwhile the conviction, if valid on its face, would be available in defence of an action brought against the magistrate or officer.

A protection order was refused under the special circumstances set out in R. v. Hackam, 15 O.W.N. 190 and 345.

"As a condition of quashing"]—In R. v. Morningstar, 11 O.L.R. 318, the view was taken that the applicant might reject the condition and that, in that event, the order would be for dismissal of the certiorari.

PART XXIII.

RETURNS.

Quarterly returns of summary convictions by justices.

1133. Every justice shall, quarterly, on or before the second Tuesday in each of the months of March, June, September and December in each year, make to the clerk of the peace or other proper officer of the court having jurisdiction in appeal, as herein provided, a return in writing, under his hand, of all convictions made by him, and of the receipt and application by him of the moneys received from the defendants.

2. Such return shall include all convictions and other matters not included in some previous return, and shall be in form 75.

3. If two or more justices are present, and join in the conviction, they shall make a joint return.

4. Every justice, to whom any such moneys are afterwards paid, shall make a return of the receipt and application thereof, to the court having jurisdiction in appeal as hereinbefore provided, which shall be filed by the clerk of the peace or the proper officer of such court with the records of his office.

5. In the province of Prince Edward Island such return shall be made to the clerk of the court of assize of the county in which the convictions are made, and on or before the fourteenth day next before the sitting of the said court next after such convictions are so made.

6. Every such return shall be made in the district of Nipissing, in the province of Ontario, to the clerk of the peace for the county of Renfrew, in the said province.

[§1134] CRIMINAL CODE (PART XXIII)

Neglect or false return or taking unlawful fees.—Penalty.—Disposition of penalty.

1134. Every justice, before whom any conviction takes place, or who receives any such moneys, who neglects or refuses to make such return thereof, or wilfully makes a false, partial or incorrect return, or wilfully receives a larger amount of fees than by law he is authorized to receive, and every justice who upon or in connection with, or under colour or pretense of, any information, complaint or judicial proceeding or inquiry had or taken before him, wilfully exacts, receives, appropriates or retains any fees, moneys or payments which he is not by law authorized to receive or to be paid, shall incur a penalty of eighty dollars, together with costs of suit, in the discretion of the court, which may be recovered by any person who sues for the same by action of debt or information in any court of record in the province in which such return ought to have been or is made.

2. One moiety of such penalty shall belong to the person suing, and the other moiety to His Majesty for the public uses of Canada.

3. Nothing in this section shall have the effect of preventing any person aggrieved from prosecuting, by indictment, any justice, for any offence, the commission of which would have subjected him to indictment immediately before the first day of July, 1893.

Origin]-4 Edw. VII, Can., ch. 9, sec. 1; secs. 902 and 905, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 178, secs. 100, 101, 105.

"Wilfully exacts, receives," etc.]—A "wilful" receiving is an intentional receiving with knowledge that he is not legally entitled. McGillivray v. Muir (1903) 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 360, 6 O.L.R. 154; R. v. Tisdale, 20 U.C.Q.B. 272; R. v. Graham, 2 O.W.N. 306, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 264; Parsons v. Crabbe, 31 U.C.C.P. 151.

Public works .- Return by justice of certificates under Part III.

1135. When any certificate is granted under sec. 118 of this Act, the justice granting it shall forthwith make a return thereof to the proper officer in the county, district or place in which such certificate has been granted for receiving returns under this Part.

Posting up of returns.--Copy of returns to Minister of Finance.

1137. The clerk of the peace of the district or county to whom returns under this Part are made, or the proper officer, other than the clerk of the peace, to whom such returns are made, shall, within seven days after the adjournment of the then next ensuing general or quarter sessions, or of the term or sitting of such other court having jurisdiction in appeal as aforesaid, cause the said returns to be posted up in the courthouse of the district or county, and also in a conspicuous place in the office of such clerk of the peace, or other proper officer, for public inspection, and the same shall continue to be so posted up and exhibited until the end of the next ensuing general or quarter sessions of the peace, or for the term or sitting of such other court as aforesaid.

2. For every schedule so made and exhibited by such clerk or officer, he shall be allowed such fee as is fixed by competent authority.

3. Such clerk of the peace or other officer of each district or county, within twenty days after the end of each general or quarter sessions of the peace, or the sitting of such court as aforesaid, shall transmit to the Minister of Finance a true copy of all such returns made within his district or county.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

Prosecutions for Crimes.

Limitation of time for prosecutions for certain offences.

1140. No prosecution for an offence against this Act, or action for penalties or forfeiture, shall be commenced,—

- (a) after the expiration of three years from the time of its commission if such offence be
 - (i) treason, except treason by killing His Majesty, or where the overt act alleged is an attempt to injure the person of His Majesty—sec. 74,
 - (ii) treasonable offences—sec. 78,
 - (iii) any offence against Part VII relating to the fraudulent marking of merchandise; or,
- (b) after the expiration of two years from its commission if such offence be
 - (i) a fraud upon the government-sec. 158,
 - (ii) a corrupt practice in municipal affairs-sec. 161,
 - (iii) unlawfully solemnizing marriage-sec. 311; or.
- (c) after the expiration of one year from its commission if such offence be
 - (i) opposing reading of Riot Act and continuing together after proclamation—sec. 92,
 - (ii) refusing to deliver weapon to justice-sec. 126,
 - (iii) coming armed near public meeting—sec. 127,
 - (iv) lying in wait near public meeting—sec. 128,
 - (v) seduction of girl under sixteen—sec. 211,

 - (ii) being unlawfully drilled—sec. 99,
 - (iii) having possession of offensive weapons for purposes dangerous to the public peace—sec. 115,
 - (iv) proprietor of newspaper publishing advertisement offering reward for recovery of stolen property —sec. 183, par. (d); or,
- (e) after the expiration of three months from its commission if the offence be
 - (i) cruelty to animals—sees. 542 and 543,
 - (ii) railways and vessels violating provisions relating to conveyance of cattle—sec. 544,
 - (iii) refusing peace officer or constable admission sec. 545; or,
- (f) after the expiration of one month from its commission if the offence be improper use of offensive weapons under secs, 116 and 118 to 124, inclusive.

2. No person shall be prosecuted, under the provisions of sec. 74 or 78 of this Act, for any overt act of treason expressed or declared by open and advised speaking unless information of such overt act, and of the words by which the same was expressed or declared, is given upon oath to a justice within six days after the words are spoken and a warrant for the apprehension of the offender is issued within ten days after such information is given.

Origin]-See. 551, Code of 1892.

Time limit for prosecution in certain cases]—Where there is an information before a magistrate that is the commencement of the prosecution. R. v. Smith (1862) L. & C. 131, 9 Cox C.C. 110; R. v. O'Connor (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 167; R. v. Brown (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 173; Thorpe v. Priestnell [1897] 1 Q.B. 159; Radeliffe v. Bartholomew [1892] 1 Q.B. 161, 61 L.J.M.C. 63; R. v. Lennox, 34 U.C.Q.B. 28; R. v. S.—, [1919] 1 W.W.R. 977 (Snsk.).

LIMITATIONS

Where there is no statutory provision such as is here contained for certain offences, a prosecution by indictment is not barred by lapse of time; R. v. Sovereen, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 103; even where summary proceedings under Part XV for the same offence would have been barred under sec. 1142. R. v. Edwards, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 96, 29 Ont. R. 451; R. v. Coolen, 36 N.S.R. 510, 7 Can. Cr. Cas. 22; R. v. Lougheed, 8 Can. Cr. Cas. 184; R. v. Muma, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 285, 22 O.L.R. 227; R. v. Lartie, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 300.

If an indictment can be preferred without a preliminary enquiry before the magistrate, ex. gr. by leave of the Attorney-General or of the presiding judge (Code see, 873), or a charge in lieu of indictment in provinces which have no grand jury system (Code see, 873 Λ), and that course is followed, then the prosecution is deemed to commence when such indictment or charge is preferred. See R. v. Parker, 9 Cox 475, L. & C. 459; 33 L.J.M.C. 135.

Sec. 1140 imposes a limitation on the prosecution under sec. 213 for the offence of seduction of a ward or of an employee but not upon the prosecution for seduction of a step-child or foster child of the accused, no corresponding amendment having been made to sec. 1140 on the amendment of sec. 213 to include the latter offence. R. v. 8.— [1919] 1 W.W.R. 977 (Sask.); 1917 Can. Stat., ch. 14, sec. 2.

Time for suing claim for penalty or forfeiture.

1141. No action, suit or information shall be brought or laid for any penalty or forfeiture under any Act, except within two years after the cause of action arises or after the offence for which such penalty or forfeiture is imposed is committed, unless the time is otherwise limited by any Act or by law.

Origin]-Sec. 930, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 180, sec. 5.

Action, suit or information for any penalty or forfeiture]—Punishments imposed for indictable offences are not included in this limitation; R. v. Elliott, 9 O.L.R. 648, 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 505; nor the penalty or fine which may be imposed on summary conviction, which latter is dealt with by see, 1142.

Penalties concerning the importation and employment of aliens mentioned in 1 Edw. VII, c. 13, s. 1, have been held to be subject to this prescription of two years. Montreal Harbour Commissioners v. Recorder's Court, 8 Que, P.R. 63.

the particular case, the complaint shall be made, or the information laid, within six months from the time when the matter of the complaint or information arose, except in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory, in all which Territories the time within which such complaint may be made or such information laid shall be twelve months from the time when the matter of the complaint or information arose.

Origin]—Sec. 841, Code of 1892; 61 Vict., Can., ch. 6, sec. 9; 6-7 Edw. VII, ch. 8, sec. 2; 52 Vict., Can., ch. 45, sec. 5.

Time limitation for summary conviction prosecutions]—Summary conviction proceedings will be barred under see, 1142, although the offence may be one for which there is an alternative procedure by indictment which is not affected. R. v. Lartie, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 300; R. v. Edwards, 29 Ont. R. 451; R. v. McKinnon, 3 O.L.R. 508.

Faults of procedure may generally be waived by the person affected by them. These are irregularities, and if one who may insist on them waives them, submits to the judge, and takes his trial, it is afterwards too late for him to question the jurisdiction which he might have questioned at the time. It would be otherwise if jurisdiction had not existed ab initio as, for example, if the offence had been prescribed when the complaint has been sworn to; in that case the presence of the accused would not be sufficient to give jurisdiction to the tribunal; but it is otherwise when the question is about a mere irregularity of procedure. R. v. Kay, ex parte Le Blane, 41 N.B.R. 99, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 221; Dixon v. Wells, 25 Q.B.D. 249, 255, 17 Cox 48, 59 L.J.M.C. 116; Bedard v. The King, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 99, 106; Ex parte Dolan, R. v. Kay, 26 Can. Cr. Cas. 171 (N.B.); R. v. Limerick, ex parte Johnson (1916) 44 N.B.R. 353, 27 Can. Cr. Cas. 421.

An information laid within the time may be so radically defective that it cannot be amended after the limitation period; as where it discloses no offence. R. v. Guertin, 19 Man. R. 33; R. v. Speed, 20 Man. R. 33; R. v. O'Connor, 20 Can. Cr. Cas. 75; R. v. Hawthorne, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 468. But if the defect be one of form only, the amendment may be made. R. v. Ayer, 17 O.L.R. 509. If the information or complaint was laid in time, the summons may follow within a reasonable time thereafter, although the limitation period has elapsed. R. v. Hudgins, 14 O.L.R. 139, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 223; R. v. Peek, ex parte Beal, 9 E.L.R. 501; R. v. Le Blanc, 21 Can. Cr. Cas. 221, 12 E.L.R. 66, 41 N.B.R. 99.

A penalty on a plea of guilty was supported without amendment of the summary conviction in R. v. Graves, Nov. 30, 1918 (N.S.), where the charge was absence as a deserter from a date long prior to the six months period, Mellish, J., favoring the view that the plea and punishment should on habeas corpus be assumed to felate only to the offence within the six months.

LIMITATIONS

Actions against Persons Administering the Criminal Law.

Actions against persons administering the criminal law.-Limitation of time.-Venue.

1143. Every action and prosecution against any person for anything purporting to be done in pursuance of any Act of the Parliament of Canada relating to criminal law, shall, unless otherwise provided, be laid and tried in the district, county or other judicial division, where the act was committed, and not elsewhere, and shall not be commenced except within six months next after the act committed.

Origin]-Sec. 975, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 185, sec. 1.

Legislative power]—The constitutionality of the legislation contained in secs. 1143-1148 has been upheld. Mack Sing v. Smith, (1908) I Sask. L.R. 454, 461; Zimmer v. G.T.R., 19 A.R. 693 (Ont.); Levesque v. N.B. Railway, 29 N.B.R. 588.

Liability of police officers]-Police constables appointed by a municipality under statutory authority for the purpose of administering the general law of the land are public officers with such powers and duties as the State confers on them, rather than servants or agents of the municipality. McCleave v. City of Moneton, 32 S.C.R. 106; Pon Yin v. City of Edmonton, (1915) 8 W.W.R. 809 (Alta.). So, if the wrong complained of was not committed by the police constable in the exercise of a duty imposed upon him by its direction or authority, the municipality is not liable under the doctrine of respondent superior. McCleave v. City of Edmonton, 32 S.C.R. 106; Pon Yin v. Edmonton, supra. Police constables are said to be servants of the Crown and acting in the interests of the public, and not merely as servants of the appointing authority or paymaster, when they are doing the things prescribed for them in the Criminal Code. Pon Yin v. City of Edmonton, 8 W.W.R. 809, 813 (Alta.). But in carrying on their work the police "must act strictly within the law, and will be held liable personally for any breach of it, and cannot fall back on their employers for indemnity in case of a judgment against them for damages." Hyndman, J., in Pon Yin v. City of Edmonton, 8 W.W.R. 809 at 814.

Compare McKenzie v. Chilliwhack 15 B.C.R. 256, 14 W.L.R. 621, in sppeal [1912] A.C. 888, 82 L.J.P.C. 22; Nettleton v. Prescott, 16 O.L.R. 538; Matson v. Leask [1919] 2 W.W.R. 59 (B.C.); Bowles v. Winnipeg [1919] 1 W.W.R. 198 (Man.).

1144. Notice in writing of such action and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one month at least before the commencement of the action.

Notice of action]-Similar legislation to that contained in sec. 1144 will be found in the statute law of the various provinces. The provincial law as to notice will, of course, apply where the alleged illegal act of the magistrate or other official purported to be done under a provincial statute. And where the similar provincial legislation as to notice of action is not in conflict with sec. 1144, it may be necessary to refer to both the federal and the provincial law to ascertain the full scope of the protection afforded to persons administering the criminal law as regards civil actions brought against them for misfeasance. A provincial statute might possibly amplify this protection, although the province would have no legislative power to lessen it nor to abrogate any of the provisions of the Criminal Code as to matters dealt with by sees, 1143 to 1147 inclusive, and sees, 1149 to 1151. The class of action to which sec. 1144 applies is an action or prosecution for anything "purporting to be done in pursuance of an Act of the Parliament of Canada." Sec. 1143. By sec. 1148 express provision is made that these provisions of the Criminal Code shall not prevent the operation of provincial laws for the protection of justices or other officers from vexatious actions for things purporting to be done in the performance of their duty.

If the magistrate or officer does something quite outside of and beyond his jurisdiction, he will not be entitled to notice of action. Spurrell v. Lauder (1914) 6 W.W.R. 1051; Agnew v. Jobson (1877) 13 Cox 625, 42 J.P. 424; Kelly v. Barton, 26 Ont. R. 608, and in appeal 22 A.R. (Ont.) 522; Cook v. Leonard, 6 B.C.R. 351; Mack Sing v. Smith, 1 Sask. L.R. 454; Linden v. Brown, 17 A.R. 173 (Ont.); McGuiness v. Dafoe, 3 Can. Cr. Cas. 139, 147, 23 A.R. 704 (Ont.); White v. Hamm, 6 N.B.R. 237; Friel v. Ferguson, 15 U.C.C.P. 584; McIver v. MeGillivray, 24 C.L.T. 142, 237, distinguishing Mott v. Milne, 31 N.S.R. 372.

If the act complained of is based upon a summary conviction the notice may be given before the conviction has been quashed; Haylock v. Sparke, 1 E. & B. 471, 22 L.J.M.C. 67; although the conviction, if valid on its face, might be an answer until set aside. Gates v. Devenish, 6 U.C.Q.B. 260; Eastman v. Reid, 6 U.C.Q.B. 611. The purpose of the notice is to give the defendant an opportunity to tender amends. The action itself must be commenced within six months after the "act committed" (sec. 1143); and the clear one month's notice must intervene before the action is commenced (sec. 1144). "At least" one month 1146. No plaintiff shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends is made before such action brought, or if a sufficient sum of money is paid into court by or on behalf of the defendant after such action brought.

Judgment if action not brought in time, etc.—Costs.—No costs unless action approved by judge.

1147. If such action is commenced after the time limited as aforesaid for bringing the same, or is brought or the venue laid in any other place than as aforesaid, a verdict shall be found or judgment shall be given for the defendant; and thereupon, or if the plaintiff becomes non-suit or discontinues any such action after issue joined, or if upon demurrer or otherwise judgment is given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall, in the discretion of the court, recover his full costs as between solicitor and client, and shall have the like remedy for the same as any defendant has by law in other cases.

2. Although a verdict or judgment is given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant, unless the judge before whom the trial is had certifies his approval of the action.

PART XXV.

FORMS.

Statutory forms validated.-Variation.

1152. The several forms in this Part, varied to suit the case, or forms to the like effect, shall be deemed good, valid and sufficient in the cases thereby respectively provided for; and may, when made for one class of officials, be varied so as to apply to any other class having the same jurisdiction.

Origin]—Secs. 541, 982, Code of 1892; R.S.C. 1886, ch. 174, sec. 7; 32-33 Viet., Can., ch. 30.

Effect of statutory forms and of variances therefrom]—This section has been held to authorize the variance of Code forms 53 and 54 in such particulars as may be necessary where warrants to the like effect are issued to enforce a judgment on appeal from justices instead of the summary conviction itself from which the appeal was taken. Collette v. The King, 16 Can. Cr. Cas. 281; ex parte Hilchie, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 85. The forms given are not imperative; R. v. May (1905) 9 Can. Cr. Cas. 529, 5 O.W.R. 67; R. v. Hamilton, 12 Man. L.R. 354, 2 Can. Cr. Cas. 390; and it seems that a statutory notice will be valid as being "to the like effect" where it states on its face by whom it is given, although signature, as indicated in the statutory form, was omitted. R. v. Bryson, 10 Can. Cr. Cas. 398.

In addition to the special enactment here contained as to the Code forms, there is the general provision of the Interpretation Act, R.S.C. 1906, ch. 1, sec. 31, applicable to all Dominion statutes, that "whenever forms are prescribed, slight deviations therefrom, not affecting the substance or calculated to mislead, shall not invalidate them."

Illustrations appended to sections of a statute should be accepted if that can be done as being of relevance and value in construing the text; they should only be rejected as repugnant to the section as the last resort of construction. Mahomed v. Yeoh [1916] 2 A.C. 575 As to particular offences, see also the notes to the Code section dealing with the offence.

5. No witness shall be excused from answering any question upon the ground that the answer to such question may tend to criminate him, or may tend to establish his liability to a civil proceeding at the instance of the Crown or of any person.

2. If with respect to any question a witness objects to answer upon the ground that his answer may tend to criminate him, or may tend to establish his liability to a civil proceeding at the instance of the Crown or of any person, and if but for this Act, or the act of any provincial legislature, the witness would therefore have been excused from answering such question, then although the witness is by reason of this Act, or by reason of such provincial act, compelled to answer, the answer so given shall not be used or receivable in evidence against him in any criminal trial, or other criminal proceeding against him thereafter taking place, other than a prosecution for perjury in the giving of such evidence.

Incriminating answers where compelled after protest]—See note to Code see. 263; re Ginsberg, 40 O.L.R. 136; R. v. Coote (1873) 42 L.J.P.C. 45 (Quebec appeal); R. v. Van Meter, 11 Can. Cr. Cas. 207 (Terr.); R. v. Lovitt, 13 Can. Cr. Cas. 15 (N.S.); ex parte Ferguson, 17 Can. Cr. Cas. 437 (N.S.).

Evidence of mute.

6. A witness who is unable to speak, may give his evidence in any other manner in which he can make it intelligible.

Expert witnesses.—Not more than five without leave.—When leave to be obtained.

7. Where, in any trial or other proceeding, criminal or civil, it is intended by the prosecution or the defence, or by any party, to examine as witnesses professional or other experts entitled according to the law or practice to give opinion evidence, not more than five of such witnesses may be called upon either side without the leave of the court or judge or person presiding.

2. Such leave shall be applied for before the examination of any of the experts who may be examined without such leave.

Adverse witnesses may be contradicted.-Previous statements.

9. A party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character, but if the witness, in the opinion of the court, proves adverse, such party may contradict him by other evidence, or, by leave of the court, may prove that the witness made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony; but before such last mentioned proof can be given the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, shall be mentioned to the witness, and he shall be asked whether or not he did make such statement.

CANADA EVIDENCE ACT

Cross-examination as to previous statements in writing.—Deposition of witness in criminal investigation.

10. Upon any trial a witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, or reduced to writing, relative to the subject-matter of the case, without such writing being shown to him: Provided that, if it is intended to contradict the witness by the writing, his attention must, before such contradictory proof can be given, be called to those parts of the writing which are to be used for the purpose of so contradicting him; and that the judge, at any time during the trial, may require the production of the writing for his inspection, and thereupon make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as he thinks fit.

2. A deposition of the witness, purporting to have been taken before a justice on the investigation of a criminal charge and to be signed by the witness and the justice, returned to and produced from the custody of the proper officer, shall be presumed prima facie to have been signed by the witness.

Previous written statement of witness]—See R. v. Benjamin, (1913) 8 Cr. App. R. 146; R. v. Troop, 30 N.S.R. 339; R. v. Prasiloski, 15 B.C.R. 29, 13 W.L.R. 298, 16 Can. Cr. Cas 139.

Cross-examination as to previous oral statements.

11. If a witness upon cross-examination as to a former statement made by him relative to the subject-matter of the case and inconsistent with his present testimony, does not distinctly admit that he did make such statement, proof may be given that he did in fact make it; but before such proof can be given the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, shall be mentioned to the witness, and he shall be asked whether or not he did make such statement.

Previous oral statement of witness]—See R. v. Clark, 12 Can. Cr. Cas. 299 (N.B.); R. v. Mulvihill (1914) 5 W.W.R. 1229, 19 B.C.R. 197; Mulvihill v. The King (1914) 6 W.W.R. 462, 49 S.C.R. 587; R. v. Prentice and Wright (1914) 7 W.W.R. 271, 7 Alta. L.R. 479; R. v. Walker, 6 Terr. L.R. 276.

12. A witness may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any offence, and upon being so questioned, if he either denies the fact or refuses to answer, the opposite party may prove such conviction.

- 2. The conviction may be proved by producing,—
 - (a) a certificate containing the substance and effect only omitting the formal part, of the indictment and conviction, if it is for an indictable offence, or a copy of the summary conviction, if for an offence punishable upon summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court in which the conviction, if upon indictment, was had, or to which the conviction, if summary, was returned; and,

(b) proof of identity.

Cross-examination of witness as to his previous conviction]—A defendant electing to give testimony on his own behalf becomes subject to this provision. R. v. D.Aoust, 3 O.L.R. 653, 5 Can. Cr. Cas. 407, 1 O.W.R. 344; R. v. Mulvihill, 6 W.W.R. 462, 19 B.C.R. 197, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 354, 49 S.C.R. 587; R. v. McCranor (1918) 15 O.W.N. 260.

OATHS AND AFFIRMATIONS.

Who may administer oaths.

13. Every court and judge, and every person having, by law or consent of parties, authority to hear and receive evidence, shall have power to administer an oath to every witness who is legally called to give evidence before that court, judge or person.

Mode of taking the oath]—See notes to Code sees. 170-175; Curry v. The King, 48 S.C.R. 532; R. v. Lai Ping, 11 B.C.R. 102; R. v. Wilson, 22 Can. Cr. Cas. 161, 26 W.L.R. 148; Shajoo Ram v. The King (1916) 8 W.W.R. 613, 25 Can. Cr. Cas. 69, 51 S.C.R. 392.

Affirmation by witness instead of oath.

14. If a person called or desiring to give evidence, objects, on grounds of conscientious scruples, to take an oath, or is objected to as incompetent to take an oath, such person may make the following affirmation :---

[§12]

CANADA EVIDENCE ACT

'I solemnly affirm that the evidence to be given by me shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.'

2. Upon the person making such solemn affirmation, his evidence shall be taken and have the same effect as if taken under oath.

Affirmation in certain cases]—See R. v. Deakin, 16 B.C.R. 271, 19 Can. Cr. Cas. 62, 19 W.L.R. 43.

Affirmation by person making affidavit or deposition.

15. If a person required or desiring to make an affidavit or deposition in a proceeding or on an occasion whereon or touching a matter respecting which an oath is required or is lawful, whether on the taking of office or otherwise, refuses or is unwilling to be sworn, on grounds of conscientious scruples, the court or judge, or other officer or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, shall permit such person, instead of being sworn, to make his solemn affirmation in the words following, viz.: 'I, A. B., do solemnly affirm, etc.'; which solemn affirmation shall be of the same force and effect as if such person had taken an oath in the usual form.

2. Any witness whose evidence is admitted or who makes an affirmation under this or the last preceding section shall be liable to indictment and punishment for perjury in all respects as if he had been sworn.

Evidence of child.-Corroboration.

16. In any legal proceeding where a child of tender years is offered as a witness, and such child does not, in the opinion of the judge, justice or other presiding officer, understand the nature of an oath, the evidence of such child may be received, though not given upon oath, if, in the opinion of the judge, justice or other presiding officer, as the case may be, such child is possessed of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence, and understands the duty of speaking the truth.

2. No case shall be decided upon such evidence alone, and such evidence must be corroborated by some other material evidence.

Evidence of child not under oath]-See note to Code sec. 1003.

JUDICIAL NOTICE.

Judicial notice of Imperial and Provincial Acts, etc.

17. Judicial notice shall be taken of all Acts of the Imperial Parliament, of all ordinances made by the Governor in Council, or the lieutenant governor in council of any province or colony which, or some portion of which, now forms or hereafter may form part of Canada, and of all the acts of the legislature of any such province or colony, whether enacted before or after the passing of the British North America Act, 1867.

Judicial notice of Canada Public Acts.

18. Judicial notice shall be taken of all public Acts of the Parliament of Canada without such Acts being specially pleaded.

DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

Statutes printed by King's Printer.-Evidence.

19. Every copy of any Act of the Parliament of Canada, public or private, printed by the King's Printer, shall be evidence of such Act and of its contents; and every copy purporting to be printed by the King's Printer shall be deemed to be so printed, unless the contrary is shown.

Imperial proclamations, etc.-Evidence.

20. Imperial proclamations, orders in council, treaties, orders, warrants, licenses, certificates, rules, regulations, or other Imperial official records, Acts or documents may be proved,—

- (a) in the same manner as they may from time to time be provable in any court in England; or
- (b) by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette, or a volume of the Acts of the Parliament of Canada purporting to contain a copy of the same or a notice thereof; or,
 - (c) by the production of a copy thereof purporting to be printed by the King's Printer for Canada.

CANADA EVIDENCE ACT

Orders in Council.-Proclamations, etc., of Governor General.

21. Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, made or issued by the Governor General or by the Governor in Council, or by or under the authority of any minister or head of any department of the Government of Canada, may be given in all or any of the modes following, that is to say:—

- (a) By the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette, or a volume of the Acts of the Parliament of Canada purporting to contain a copy of such proclamation, order, regulation, or appointment or a notice thereof;
 - (b) By the production of a copy of such proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, purporting to be printed by the King's Printer for Canada; and,
 - (c) By the production, in the case of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made or issued by the Governor General or by the Governor in Council, of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the clerk, or assistant or acting clerk of the King's Privy Council for Canada; and in the case of any order, regulation or appointment made or issued by or under the authority of any such minister or head of a department, by the production of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the minister, or by his deputy or acting deputy, or by the secretary or acting secretary of the department over which he presides.

Proclamations, etc., of Lieutenant Governor.

22. Evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made or issued by a lieutenant governor or lieutenant governor in council of any province, or by or under the authority of any member of the executive council, being the head of any department of the government of the province, may be given in all or any of the modes following, that is to say,—

(a) By the production of a copy of the official gazette for the province, purporting to contain a copy of such proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, or a notice thereof;

2. Prima facie evidence of any proclamation, order, regulation or appointment made by the lieutenant governor or lieutenant governor in council of the Northwest Territories, as constituted previously to the first day of September, 1905, or of the commissioner in council of the Northwest Territories as now constituted, or of the commissioner in council of the Yukon Territory may also be given by the production of a copy of the Canada Gazette purporting to contain a copy of such proclamation, order, regulation or appointment, or a notice thereof.

Evidence of judicial proceedings, etc.-Authentication.

23. Evidence of any proceeding or record whatsoever of, in, or before any court in the United Kingdom, or the Supreme or Exchequer Courts of Canada, or any court in any province of Canada, or any court in any British colony or possession, or any court of record of the United States of America, or of any state of the United States of America, or of any state of the United States of America, or of any other foreign country, or before any justice of the peace or coroner in any province of Canada, may be made in any action or proceeding by an exemplification or certified copy thereof, purporting to be under the seal of such court, or under the hand or seal of such justice or coroner, as the case may be, without any proof of the authenticity of such seal or of the signature of such justice or coroner, or other proof whatever.

2. If any such court, justice or coroner, has no seal, or so certifies, such evidence may be made by a copy purporting to be certified under the signature of a judge or presiding magistrate of such court or of such justice or coroner, without any proof of the authenticity of such signature, or other proof whatsoever

Official or public documents of Canada.—Municipal by-laws or regulations.—Evidence.

24. In every case in which the original record could be received in evidence,—

- (a) a copy of any official or public document of Canada or of any province, purporting to be certified under the hand of the proper officer or person in whose custody such official or public document is placed; or,
- (b) a copy of a document, by-law, rule, regulation or proceeding, or a copy of any entry in any register or other book of any municipal or other corporation, created by charter or statute of Canada or of any province, purporting to be certified under the seal of the corporation, and the hand of the presiding officer, clerk or secretary thereof; shall be receivable in evidence without proof of the seal of the corporation, or of the signature or of the official character of the person or persons appearing to have signed the same, and without further proof thereof.

Extracts from public books and documents .- Evidence.

25. Where a book or other document is of so public a nature as to be admissible in evidence on its mere production from the proper custody, and no other statute exists which renders its contents provable by means of a copy, a copy thereof or extract therefrom shall be admissible in evidence in any court of justice, or before a person having, by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, if it is proved that it is a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the officer to whose custody the original has been entrusted.

Entries in books of Government departments .- Evidence.

26. A copy of any entry in any book kept in any department of the Government of Canada, shall be received as evidence of such entry and of the matters, transactions and accounts therein recorded, if it is proved by the oath or affidavit of an officer of such department that such book was, at the time of the making of the entry, one of the ordinary books kept in such department, that the entry was made in the usual and ordinary course of business of such department, and that such copy is a true copy thereof.

Copies of notarial acts in Quebec.

27. Any document purporting to be a copy of a notarial act or instrument made, filed or enregistered in the province of Quebec, and to be certified by a notary or prothonotary to be a true copy of the original in his possession as such notary or prothonotary, shall be received in evidence in the place and stead of the original, and shall have the same force and effect as the original would have if produced and proved : Provided that it may be proved in rebuttal that there is no such original, or that the copy is not a true copy of the original in some material particular, or that the original is not an instrument of such nature as may, by the law of the province of Quebec, be taken before a notary or be filed, enrolled or enregistered by a notary in the said province.

Notice of using copy under secs, 23 to 27.

28. No copy of any book or other document shall be received in evidence, under the authority of any of the last five preceding sections, upon any trial, unless the party intending to produce the same has before the trial given to the party against whom it is intended to be produced reasonable notice of such intention.

2. The reasonableness of the notice shall be determined by the court or judge, but the notice shall not in any case be less than ten days.

Order signed by Secretary of State.

29. Any order in writing, signed by the Secretary of State of Canada, and purporting to be written by command of the Governor General, shall be received in evidence as the order of the Governor General.

Official notices .-- Copies printed in Canada Gazette.

30. All copies of official and other notices, advertisements and documents printed in the Canada Gazette shall be prima facie evidence of the originals, and of the contents thereof.

Proof of handwriting of person certifying not required.

31. No proof shall be required of the handwriting or official position of any person certifying, in pursuance of this Act, to the truth of any copy of or extract from any proclamation, order, regulation, appointment, book or other document.

2. Any such copy or extract may be in print or in writing, or partly in print and partly in writing.

Proving certain documents without the attesting witness.

32. It shall not be necessary to prove by the attesting witness any instrument to the validity of which attestation is not requisite.

2. Such instrument may be proved by admission or otherwise as if there had been no attesting witness thereto.

Forged instrument may be impounded.

33. Whenever any instrument which has been forged or fraudulently altered is admitted in evidence the court or the judge or person who admits the instrument may, at the request of any person against whom it is admitted in evidence, direct that the instrument shall be impounded and be kept in the custody of some officer of the court or other proper person for such period and subject to such conditions, as to the court, judge or person admitting the instrument seems meet.
