POETRY.

A Prayer.

It there be good in that I wrought, Thy hand compelled it, Master, thine; Where I have failed to meet thy thought I know, through Thee, the blame is mine.

One instant's toll to Thee denied Stands all eternity's offence. Of that I did with Thee to guide, To Thee, through Thee, be excelled.

Who, lest all thought of Eden fade, Bring'st Eden to the craftsman's brain, Godlike to weave o'er his own trade, And make his work his God again.

The depth and dream of my desire, The bitter paths wherein I stray, Thou knowest who has made the fire, Thou knowest who has made the clay.

One stone the more swings to her place In that dread temple of Thy worth, It is enough that through Thy grace I saw naught common on Thy earth.

Take not that vision from my ken; Oh whatsoever may spoil or speed, Help me to need no aid from men That I may help such men as need!

—Rudyard Kipling.

SELECT STORY.

Pretty Miss Smith.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

CHAPTER II.

HILARY GOLD's dramatic appearance and disappearance made a profound and lasting impression on at least three of us—Mary, Tom and myself.

Mr. Marshall also showed much kindly sympathy with "the poor lad," as he called him; but then, as he said, as a man makes his bed, so he must lie upon it, and Hilary had known perfectly well that his fortune could not hold out at the rate in which he had been squandering it.

I was glad that Tom took Hilary's part very warmly; it was only logical that he should, considering how extravagant his own tastes were. On Mary the young fellow's earnestness, and perhaps his good looks, had left quite a deep effect; and I could see how anxious she became when Mr. Marshall mentioned that the young man had gone no one knew where.

For my part, though I felt sorry for Hilary's disappointment, I did not think he had taken it in the best or most manly way. He should not have at once given up the idea of winning Mary when he found he had no money, but should have held his tongue and set about making some; at least, that was my opinion. But Tom said I was too hard.

When I went back home to the vicarage a week later the subject was no longer talked about, and I thought it better in my letters thence not to allude to it. I wanted Mary to marry somebody else, somebody nice—anybody but Tom.

I don't think I ever received such a surprise in my life as I did some weeks later, one May morning, when the post brought a big bulky letter, with wide black edge, from Mary. The very first words prepared me for a thunderbolt.

"It began, My DEAREST GEORGE,— I am going to take your breath away, so sit down in an armchair and hold fast to the sides before you get any further. Now then for it. Ready? Well, then, my Uncle Thomas has died and left me all his money. I am richer than Uncle Charles, richer than anybody, except the Queen and Barmess Burdett Coote, and a few other people like that. At least so it seems to me. I can't realize it a bit. Never have you to look at a frock any more and to say, 'Well, it's rather shabby here, and it won't do a bit of fresh trimming there, but I'll have to do it. Never to have to pass a confectioner's shop where the larks look particularly nice with your head turned; the other way because your allowance is getting low! Never to take an omnibus instead of a hansom, nor to wear English boots instead of French ones. Never in fact to have to do anything you don't like to do any more! Isn't the prospect stupendous? And the worst of all is, I can't be sorry for poor Uncle Thomas, when I ought to be crying my eyes out just out of gratitude. But how can I? I can only just remember his coming to me one once when I was a little girl at school, when I took him for a 'booby,' and was so hurriedly frightened that I wouldn't take the bright half-crown he offered me. I do try hard to be sorry, but I can't, I can't, I can't. Try to imagine it, George! All the shops of Bond-street and Regent-street full of things all for oneself, if one pleases! I am sending you a present, just to show you it's all real!—a little diamond brooch. Ha, ha! I am going to look down upon you now, and patronise you, and tell people 'Georgie Oliver's a very good girl in her way!' I'm proud, George, and I feel it growing on me. You are good, and unselfish, and clever, and witty; but I am rich, rich, and so generous you will have to take quite 'a back seat.' I can use what I like now, nobody will dare to say it is 'had form' in 'Rich Miss Smith.'

Write to me at once, and tell me what you think.

Yours ever affectionately, MARY.

P. S.—I am going to marry Hilary Gold. I met him one day; he didn't want to speak to me, but I made him. I told him my good fortune. We talked quite a long time. We went to Kensington Gardens. When I went back I told Uncle Charles I was engaged to Hilary. He was very angry, indeed, I think, though he did not say so.

Write and tell me what you really think.

I did not write and tell what I really thought, as it would have been rather too straight to the point. What I thought was that Mr. Marshall was quite right, and that Hilary ought to be ashamed of himself. To give up all idea of winning Mary when he found he had spent his own money, but to be quite ready to marry her and live on hers, seemed to me to give evidence of a nature too weak and worthless to give adequate support to Mary's which was far more sweet than strong. I wrote the best letter I could in the circumstances, thanking her for her present, which was too handsome an ornament for me to wear, and hoping she would be very happy in her new life. I suppose the letter seemed cold and unsatisfactory to her in all the pride and glow of her good fortune, for nearly three months passed without my once hearing from her again.

The next news I got from Mary came one August evening in a most unexpected manner. Hearing Bonnie, our old retriever, barking at someone coming up the garden, I looked out of the window, tea-caddy in one hand and caddy-spoon in the other, and saw Tom Marshall making passes at the old dog with his umbrella.

"Hallo!" said Tom. "You're not dead, Georgie?"

"Not quite—yet," stammered I, coming to the French window and holding out the hand with the caddy-spoon in my bewilderment.

Tom took the spoon, examined it, murmured "Silver," and put it in his pocket.

"How are you?" I stammered.

"Not so well as you will be when you hear the magnificent prospect that's in store for you."

"What's that?"

"To be my wife. I don't say at once, but some day. These treats are too splendid to come quickly. My Uncle Thomas' money will do the trick for us."

"Didn't it go to Mary then, after all?"

"Yes, in the first place. But if she dies unmarried, it comes to my father, and consequently to me."

I laughed derisively.

"Mary disunmarried? The prettiest girl in London! Engaged too!"

"That's as good as 'off.' A lunatic can't marry."

"A lunatic?"

Tom nodded.

"Yes, poor girl. She's going, or I might say gone, off her head."

"Mary—mad? It's not true. I'll not believe it."

"Go and see her, and then you will."

"Trampling from head to foot, and too miserable to say more without danger of bursting into tears, I signed to him to come into the house, to give me an explanation."

"You know, papa, Minnie is quite able to keep house for you now," said I reassuringly. "And her hand at pastry is lighter than mine."

Minnie was the next in age to me, and a good clever girl.

"If she can only keep the children quiet I don't mind," said my father reluctantly. "And tell the Marshalls they mustn't keep you long; I want you back."

He thought I had an invitation from Baywater. I hope I am a fairly honest person—but I did not undecisive.

"Besides, I really was going to Mr. Marshall's first, for I wanted his advice."

I went up to the town the very next day, left my small trunk at Liverpool street, and took an omnibus to Mr. Marshall's office, in Lincoln's Inn. The heat was intense, and when I got inside the enclosure I was obliged to wait very slowly. For this reason I had time to notice the few people I met, and to remark especially the appearance of a woman who was walking even more slowly than I, up and down, up and down a short "beat" which she seemed to have marked out for herself. The first things I noticed about her were her tall figure and her pretty fair hair. Next I saw that she was young, about seven or eight and twenty I should have guessed; that she was so very, very fair that if she had not slightly darkened her eyelashes and eyebrows with cosmetic they would scarcely have been seen at all; and lastly, that there was something indefinable about her face which at one moment fascinated and at the next repelled me. She was dressed neatly and quietly in grey, with a black bonnet and veil, and her dress and walk were quite ladylike; yet I did not think she was a lady.

It was chiefly because there was no body else now in sight that, as I drew nearer to my destination, I still watched this woman. I noticed next that when her back was turned to me she went rather fast, and that it was in returning only that she walked so slowly. She was apparently waiting for someone, and every now and then she raised her eyes, which were generally fixed upon the ground, and shot a sort of stealthy, cat-like look at one of the houses. And it proved to be the house to which I was going. When I found this out, some feeling which I hope and believe was not all vulgar curiosity made me drag my feet along still more slowly, and the woman, then seeming to see me for the first time, refrained from any more glances at the house until a gentleman came out from it.

Upon this gentleman the woman fixed her eyes with a curious light which seemed to give her face an unpleasant hungry look. I remember that the expression of her face gave me an odd sort of feeling that I was sorry for the stranger, whoever he was, on whom her gaze lighted like that, so that I glanced curiously from her to the gentleman.

New Lines of Activity For Women.

Since the English have experimented artfully with feminine sextons and bellringers, and in Chicago a young lady is employed on salary as a "pastor's aid," it appears rational enough to believe that two new channels of industry have been opened for female energy. Indeed, recognizing the strong religious sentiment that inspires many women and their ardor in all concerning church work, the new movement seems eminently proper. Not only enthusiasts, but the larger proportion of the sex feel strongly on matters relating to church institutions and temporal affairs. In every parish the buildings are more or less supervised by women, who in choir, choir, and improvement committees, labor faithfully for the mundane good of both temple and priest.

Why, then, a strong-armed woman would not be fittingly employed selling the congregation to service and preparing the place of worship beforehand, it is hard to see. Women are physically equal to the labor required, and would make quite as acceptable sextons as the majority of men.

As for curates, this Chicago innovation is worthy of all praise. The introduction of women preachers is too new for general acceptance, and even the broadest minded view so radical a measure with disfavor. But as an assistant, a young, vigorous woman prepared for the work and filled with love for her calling would prove of benefit to any pastor and parishioners.

She would bring to her labor a devotion, a sympathy, and a tenderness rarely found among men to-day; and now, when all the churches are complaining loudly of the scarcity of theological students and young divines, a feminine enforcement of the ranks might be strengthening and stimulating.

There is a story that some children had a discussion concerning the services in one of our fashionable temples. One youngster who had reached the mature age of seven, said: "I'd just like to know what preaching is for." "Oh don't you know," enquired his forty-year-old sister, "it's to give the singers a rest, of course."

Good Advice.

To use this terse and homely phrase, my friend, let us mind our own business. There is no need to decide in our own lives; let us be unmindful of the affairs of others, except in so far as we can be helpful of real benefit. Let us be charitable in all our conclusions, mindful of the fact that we so often need the cloak of charity ourselves. As we would wish to be judged, so let us judge others—always with a kindly spirit, ever with a belief in the better part of self. Strive a flower where others throw a stone. Fill your life so full of sunshine that evil reports will find no place where you are. Stop petty scandals by some pretty story of womanly kindness. Make your life a bright spot in this world, and where you see a frown there throw a smile, and whether it be moon, dusk or night, let the sunny side of your nature always be at full meridian.

APPLE Pudding.—Pare, quarter and core a pudding dish half full of tart apples. Cut a piece of butter as large as a hickory nut in small bits and spread it over the surface. Grate nutmeg over it, and add enough water to cook the apples nicely. Make a batter stiff enough to drop from a spoon, use one egg, one teaspoonful of milk, a tablespoonful of soft butter and flour, into which a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder has been sifted. Pour the batter on the apples, cover with a basin the same size of the pudding dish, stand on the top of the range and cook fifteen minutes; then remove the cover and bake until done. Serve hot, with a hard sauce.

Each stake open to trotting colts, geldings and fillies, owned in the Maritime Provinces (no matter where bred) previous to November 1st, 1891. In making entries name of animal, color, sex, name of sire and dam, names of owner and nominator to be given. Six entries the property of different owners, to fill each stake: any person nominating to have the privilege of declaring out at any time, forfeiting the payment made.

The "Empire's" Premium.

The "Empire" is sending out a premium with its Weekly this fall which will be highly prized by the friends and followers of the late Premier of the Dominion. It is in the shape of a Memorial Album, illustrating the career of Sir John Macdonald, from his birthplace in Glasgow to his last resting place in Cataragui Cemetery. The series of handsome view-able prints in photograph, executed in a manner that is a credit to Canadian art, and comprise an excellent photograph of the old Chief, taken a short time previous to his death; a handsome portrait of his devoted widow, the Baroness Macdonald; his birthplace in Glasgow, being a view of Brunswick Place near the Turragate, which will be recognized by all who are familiar with that city; a portrait of Sir John as a young man, being a fac simile of the earliest photograph known to be in existence; an excellent and striking likeness of his mother, from whom he inherited his force of character and genius; the old home on Rideau street, Kingston, in which he lived during the rebellion of 1837; the finest view ever published of Earncliffe, his well known residence in Ottawa; interior view of the Senate Chamber, as it appeared with the body lying in state, showing the floral tributes and members of Parliament guarding the remains, with the Queen's wreath resting on the coffin; view of Parliament Buildings, with funeral procession forming in front; the funeral passing the Eastern block, with fine view of the buildings; magnificent view of the City Hall, Kingston, draped as it appeared on morning of funeral; beautiful photograph of the grave at Cataragui Cemetery, with the floral offerings and cadets guarding it; exterior and interior of the old home in which a memorial service was held, from a celebrated etching; photographic view of St. Paul's Cathedral, in which it is proposed to erect memorial tablet; interior of St. Paul's Cathedral. The cover of this collection of photographs is a beautiful work of art, the title being richly embossed in silver, with a medallion of the Chief in relief, surrounded by his now memorable words. "A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die," while the background shows shield with the British arms, and the whole is surmounted with drapery in royal velvet, fringed with silver. A premium like this has never before been offered by a newspaper in Canada, and will no doubt be eagerly sought after, as it will be an ornament to a parlor table as well as a valuable souvenir of the old Chief.

How Londoners get their Fruit.

A great number of the people of this valley are interested to some extent in the London fruit market. The following article from an English paper handed us by Mr. F. A. Dixon, of this town, may therefore be of interest to them:—More fruit is probably imported into London than any other city in the world, and the trade is of course, one of enormous dimensions. To Londoners the sight of the fruit ships unloading almost without cessation at the wharves below London Bridge must be a familiar one, but how many pause to think of the strange lands from which the great supply of green fruit is being ceaselessly gathered. A considerable quantity of fruit is dispatched to London by growers in the English fruit-producing counties, but compared with the enormous total shipped from other countries, the supply becomes but a small one. Last year the quantity unloaded at London Bridge was no less than 17,719,000 bushels, the value of which was estimated at $5,788,000. This chiefly consisted of apples, oranges, lemons, onions and potatoes, the two latter, though not strictly coming under the appellation of "fruit," being reckoned in with the rest.

NEWSPAPERS AND POLITICS.

The St. John evening Gazette has a timely article in a recent issue under the heading: "Too much politics." The Gazette reminds us that a few persons among us get their living out of politics, but that the vast majority of the people, must earn their bread by some other calling. Many newspapers have been called into existence and are sustained by political parties, for purely party purposes. They exist solely that they may advance the cause of their party, and denounce everything appertaining to the opposing party. They have never a good word for a political enemy, and never a word of commendation for the more pronounced men of their side. These newspapers have, to a great extent, so educated the public mind that most persons take sides with one or the other of the more prominent parties of the day. Some persons seem to believe that it is impossible the average citizen to hold himself aloof from bondage to one party or the other. All this we think is wrong. There is too much politics abroad. There is too much partisanship in the air. They ought to be slaves to no party. They ought ever to be free to find the right and to condemn the wrong, irrespective of party dictation and of the clamorous of partisan journals.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough, and Bronchitis. Sold by Geo. V. Rand, druggist.

Going to be a Dandy!

Grip's Comic Almanac '92 will be the thirteenth issue of that popular annual, and the publishers have determined that it shall break the record for brilliancy, humor and typographic beauty. Amongst the features of it will be a double cartoon, entitled, "The Dickens Christmas Party," in which a large number of our public men will figure in more or less appropriate characters, from the works of the great novelist. Special illustrations are being prepared for the Almanac by Mr. Wm. Bengough, Mr. S. J. West, Mr. E. S. Bisbee, Mr. Chas. Broughton, Mr. Bert Thompson, Mr. Chas. W. Bradley, Mr. A. H. Howard, and many other artists, and the letterpress will be, as usual, of a light and amusing character. The work is to be brought out in the highest style of the printer's art, though there will be no increase of price—10 cents. Keep Grip's forthcoming Almanac in your mind. It will be out sometime in November.

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., NOV. 6, 1891.

Local and Provincial.

Yesterday was Gay Fawkes day.

A cargo of Springhill coal arrived here last week, for the Kentville Electric Light Co.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated in St. Andrew's (Presbyterian) church on Sunday next.

On the 12th Oct., a small, probably from Wolfville and Gasperau, was returning to this office or to Mr. K. F. Freeman, Gasperau, will suitably rewarded.

We are headquarters for Trunks and Valises.

It is reported that the four-masted steamer Empire, Capt. Parsons, of Boston, stranded near Boston a few days ago, and all on board, nine of crew and one passenger, were lost.

The day occupied by J. E. Mulloney has been removed to the lot next the house of Mr. J. W. Caldwell, and the application for Mr. Martell's residence is being prepared.

The Rev. O. Cocking, returned missionary from Japan, will conclude his interesting discourse on that interesting country in the Methodist church, on Monday evening, the 11th inst, at 7 o'clock. Admittance as usual.

The steamer City of Montserrat leaves for Digby and Annapolis every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, and for Annapolis to St. John on Tuesdays. International steamer leaves for Boston every Monday and Friday.

The local government has appointed Judge A. H. McKay, formerly of the Academy but more recently of the position of Superintendent of Education. Principal McKay is a man of fine attainments and of long experience as a teacher. The choice is with universal approbation.

If you want Clothing call on C. H. Borden & Co. They are selling very the argument in appeal from the judgment given by the Supreme Court in Nova Scotia in regard to the preliminary orders of the defence in the election petition against the return of Dr. F. Borden, was heard at Ottawa on Monday last week. The appeal was dismissed with costs. This necessitates a trial which is set down for Nov. 16th, 1891.

Monday morning at the close of the trial of Miss Cummings, on behalf of the State Department, presented their case, Mr. Porter, with a handsome sum of $100. A little later in the day, the gift of the same department, being his with a handsome sum of $100. Mr. Porter would like to say to all his friends that he highly appreciates their kind wishes and remembrances. Mr. Porter and family took the early train this morning for Wolfville.—Travel News.

The new brigantine Winifred, which was built at Fort Williams on the 15th of August, with potatoes, has proceeded on this, her first voyage. She is in charge of Capt. Vance and is bound for St. John's. The vessel was put into Kingsport and Capt. Vance took command. On the 15th the Winifred put into Halifax, loaded with her deck swept clear of any movable thing. Her cargo is valued. It will take a week to refit her for her voyage again.

Don't fail to see the newest and best in town, a man's seamless lace boot for $1.75. The greatest bargain offered.

C. H. BORDEN & CO.

On Saturday morning the junior class "Acadia" went on the usual geological excursion to Windsor. In the afternoon the football team played a match with Kings College team on the ground near the latter. The Acadia boys kicked within fifteen minutes. Wyman scored a touchdown. The game ended in the Kings field, and the half time, Moore carried it across the line. Cheisty made it during the second half, in spite of valiant efforts of the Kings half-backs. The time was called the score stood, the juniors, 6; against 0. The Kings boys played a fine game; but their ends were weak and scarcely a match for the junior forwards.

Local and Provincial.

Firemen will do well to remember the regular monthly meeting of the company on next Tuesday evening. A full attendance is desired.

A candy factory has recently been established in Kentville by Mr. A. C. More. The product of this establishment compares favorably both in appearance and flavor with the best imported.

We understand that there is prospect of a match game of foot-ball on the 12th inst., between the teams of Acadia and Dalhousie, on the ground of the latter. Considerable interest will be manifested in it.

Next Sunday, Nov. 8th, service in St. John's church will be at three in the afternoon. The subject of the sermon will be—"The Four Marks of the members of the Holy Catholic Church given by St. Luke, in Acts II:42."

Look at our stock of Winter Caps.

A big strike of gold is reported to have been made at Oldham, N. S., by J. E. Harding. It is said there are 25 tons of quartz in sight which it is estimated will yield at least 100 ounces to the ton, or 2,500 ounces to the 25 tons.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance has had its annual session at Halifax this week. The various reports show the order to be in a good condition. Rev. Dr. Lathern is elected Grand Worthy Patriarch for the coming year.

It is understood that the mail route from Berwick via Grafton, Wolford, Demsey Corner and Weston, will soon be run four times per week instead of twice as at present. A new post office will be established at Wolford and another at Weston. This will be a great convenience to the residents along this route.—Register.

Our Men's and Boys' Wool Underwear and Top Shirts are the cheapest in town.

Harvest Festival.—Thursday next, Nov. 12th, being appointed by the government of Canada as a Day of National Thanksgiving for God's mercies, there will be service on that day in St. John's church, Wolfville, at eleven A. M. The thank-offering will be given to the Supplication Fund of the Diocese of Nova Scotia.

Garfield Tea restores the complexion.

The Paradise Lumbering Co. are beginning operations for prospecting business on the waters of the Paradise stream. Already some twenty men have been engaged, and are now busy at work repairing the dams, making comfortable winter camps, etc. It is the intention of Mr. John Healey, the manager, to cut about two million feet during the coming season.—Monitor.

Two Hob-nobs and an Ayrshire Cow, for sale low by A. A. Jones, Horton Lane.

Digby will be lighted by electricity in three weeks at the latest. The poles are now erected on the streets, and electricians are at work stringing wires. All the shops with the exception of three, have decided to use the light already, and a large number of offices and residences are among the list of subscribers. All the churches and hotels will use the light.

Amongst the crew of the American war-ship Baltimore, assaulted at Valparaiso recently by the Chileans, was a Charlotonian named William Turnbull twenty-three years old. Turnbull was a coal heaver in the Baltimore. He enlisted at Boston on the 8th of September, 1890. During the disturbance Turnbull was wounded in the back eighteen times, and has since died from his injuries. The father of the deceased was a veteran coasting captain well known in Nova Scotia.

"The Young Recruits" is the title of an oil painting by Mr. Charles Patterson, one of the most gifted representatives of the younger branch of Canadian artists. Mr. Patterson has displayed undoubted genius in the conception and execution of his charming picture, which will appeal to every lover of childhood as well as to every lover of art. "The Young Recruits" is one of the four supplements to be given away with the Christmas number of the Acadian, which the publishers are sparing neither pains nor expense to make the most magnificent holiday souvenir ever issued in Canada and far surpassing even their own brilliant effort of last year.

Kentville News.

Dr. P. W. Borden was in town on Wednesday.

W. M. Christie, Esq., Barrister, etc., of Windsor, gave Kentville a call on Tuesday of this week.

Work on the Roman Catholic Chapel is not progressing very rapidly at present. Only one side and one end of the foundation has been erected. It is not probable that very much will be done at it this fall.

A movement is on foot to get all the merchants in town to close their shops on Thanksgiving Day. It has met with some opposition, and it has not yet been decided what is to be done in the matter.

Mr. Watson Bishop is at present wearing an unique necktie. It is covered with the skin of a rattle-snake, and the rattle is placed on the front as a pin or ornament.

Mr. D. McLeod, proprietor of the Lyons Hotel, contemplates building a new hotel near the C. V. R. station. There is a large embankment on the site and he has tendered for a contract to remove the dirt. Mr. William Hatherston has taken the contract and will begin work quite soon.

Work on the new electric light station is progressing quite rapidly. The site chosen is on the street leading from the Porter House up to the Episcopal church. Over sixty thousand bricks are to be used in its construction, and they are being supplied from Bridgetown. Considerable delay in getting the bricks is now keeping the workmen back. Messrs John and R. Campbell have charge of the work.

The Largest assortment of Fall and Winter Gloves.
C. H. BORDEN & CO.
Notes from Berwick.

The rumeller at the Station, Mr. Kirkpatrick, had an auction on Monday last to effect a clearing-out sale, by proxy. A hundred dollar fine under the Scott Act is against him, which he intends to get rid of by paying by leaving the place.

Miss Nina Hood has the primary school at Berwick.

The new addition to the school-house is completed, which gives the house a very much improved appearance. Mr. L. D. Robinson has the advanced department, Mrs. Chute, the efficient teacher of the primary school for the past four or five years, has taken the preparatory department, Miss Ida Parker still holds the intermediate; and Miss Emma Fisher teaches the primary department.

Mr. J. M. Patterson has the old stand of C. P. & S. Halsey and has opened a select stock of general merchandise.

Rev. E. E. Daley is getting out again, but is not able to preach. His pulpit was filled last Sunday by Mr. F. M. Shaw, B. A.

The women of the Baptist church are supporting a table woman on the Visitation grass mission field, India.

The Episcopal church has been placed upon a new basement and is undergoing repairs.

Mr. Peter Middlemas is finishing his house.

CURED AGAINST HIS WILL.

After ten years of suffering a Hamilton man is restored to health. A case rivaling the marvellous cure of John Marshall.

They are also a specific for the ill peculiar to women, such as suppression, bearing down pains, displacements, etc.

Help pays when it is needed. Raise more crops on less land. Machinery is condensed labor.

There are no braver men than those who are never afraid to speak the truth. King among liniments is Johnson's Anodyne.

There is nothing like pinning faith to a strong idea and being scratched by the wind.

There is nothing which man so much hates as to be told the truth about himself.

There is something lacking where weeds and rubbish accumulate. Some people try so hard to keep up that they keep themselves down.

There is a good rule to pay you go. But some people must be going very slow if they go that way.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Minard's Liniment cures Dandruff. If thou wouldst be borne with, bear with others.
