WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXI

The Avenger.

"Handsome tucker—jeweled back. You always were fond of that kind of thing. I've lost mine." She slipped the watch into her waistband and smiled, and Mr. Bartley Bradstone bore the appropriation of his property without a protest.

"So you won't come?" she said. "Very well. But you haven't done with me yet; don't flatter yourself I'm going to let you off so easy! Let me see; I'm going to stay here till to-morrow night, just for change of air," and she laughed. "Meet me here at four o'clock to-morrow afternoon."

He started, and his face reddened.

"That's impossible, Bella," he said, quickly. "I've got an—important engagement."

"Oh! you've got an—important—engagement, have you?" she said, with slow contempt; "then you'll have to put your important engagement off for one more important still."

The sweat started on his forehead, and he wiped it away covertly.

"Don't be absurd, Bella," he said, with a sickly smile. "I tell you I can't meet you to-morrow—not at that time. I'll meet you at night, or the next day."

"No you won't; to-morrow night I shall be gone. Four o'clock in the afternoon, please; and you may as well bring a few notes with you—say for a hundred. I'm rather short just now."

He affected consternation.

"A hundred pounds! You must think I'm made of money! Well, you shall have it, for—for the sake of old times. But you needn't trouble to come for it, Bella. I'll send it to you here—"

She smiled.

"No, you won't. I've a fancy for making you bring it—just for the sake of old times! You seem very disinclined to meet me to-morrow; what's your reason, I wonder?" and she eyed him suspiciously.

The lids of his downcast eyes quivered.

"There can't be much pleasure in our meetings now," he said. "I don't care to be reminded of the past; you must feel that. Look here, you shall have the money. I'll make it a hundred and fifty, though I can't very well spare it, but only on condition that you let me send it to you."

She shook her head, and, with a laugh, caught at a branch of the tree with one hand and drew herself up, hanging for a moment gracefully motionless, then dropped like a feather to the ground, and kissed her hand to him.

"No, I'll have my way. Bring it here to-morrow at four o'clock, or—I'll go with you now! I'm not exactly in evening dress; but you can explain—you're good at explaining, you know."

His face paled, and his breath came fast for a moment, as he thought of this woman with her cigarette in her mouth, her stage smile, and loud, defiant voice, accompanying him into the pure presence of Olivia; then he nodded.

"Very well," he said, sullenly. "I'll come. And now I must be going."

He put out his hand for his watch, and she laughed mockingly.

"I'll tell you the time," she said. "No, I can't see. Off with you. Remember, four o'clock, and you can make it the extra fifty. Here! wait! Give me the rest of those cigarettes."

He held out the silver case, and she was about to pick out the cigarettes, then looked up at him exasperatingly, and put the case in her pocket.

"Perhaps I'll give it back to you to-morrow, perhaps I won't. Good-night," and with a nod she motioned him to go on.

She stood looking after him for a few minutes, puffing at the cigarette, and thinking with half-closed eyes. very much like a lithe, graceful cat.

"I wonder what your little game is down here, Master Bartley," she muttered. "No good, I'll bet. You never did anything but mischief wherever you went. Well, it doesn't matter to me. So long as you keep up my allowance and yourself quiet you may do what you please."

Then she pinned her shawl round her, and, walking quickly out of the wood, went down the lane, and stopped in front of The Dell.

"This ought to be the place," she said. "Yes, it's like him to choose a place like this. I should die of the doldrums in a week. But he—"

She stopped a moment or two, standing before the gate as if she were collecting her courage or her mind, then put her hand on the gate.

"Locked!" she said, with a smile. "I don't think that will keep me out!" and, resting her strong hand on the side post, she sprang over the low gate as easily as a boy of fifteen could have done.

As she did so, the dog came bounding down the path with a threatening growl.

She drew herself together, tightening every muscle, just as she did before one of her dangerous feats on the trapeze, and waited for him, her teeth set, her fist closed. The dog came up to her, and sniffed at her, then wagged his tail.

She laughed softly.

"You're a fraud, my friend," she said, stooping down and patting him; then suddenly she gave him a kick, exclaiming: "I'll make you afraid of me before many hours are passed, bow-wow!"

The dog retreated with a yell, and she walked up to the door and knocked.

The servant, in his game-keeper suit, opened it.

"Is Mr. Faradeane at home?" she asked.

The man held a small lamp above his head, and surveyed her, then looked beyond her at the gate with not unreasonable surprise.

"No, he isn't," he said. "What do you want?"

"I want to see him," she returned, firmly.

"My master is not at home," he said. "What name shall I say, ma'am?"

She thought a moment, her dark eyes flashing past him into the small hall.

"It's of no consequence, my name; if he's at home"—and she raised her voice—"he'd see me, I know."

"But he is not at home," said the man, in a matter-of-fact voice.

"I'll come in and wait, then," she said, and she made a forward movement.

He quickly filled up the doorway.

"You can't do that," he said.

Will You Take Two At Our Risk?

So many customers who suffer from run down nervous condition with its consequent ill of insomnia, indigestion and general debility are being greatly helped by Zoslic—the nerve tonic, that we wish to have every alling person in this town try this really famous remedy. It is all that a tonic should be and more than any other tonic is. It combines the most precious of health-building substances. Glycer Phosphates are the actual element of the human body in most assimilative form. You know the value of Cod Liver Oil and the invigorating effects of tonic wine. In Zoslic these are combined into an exceedingly pleasant tonic which in two weeks will work quiet wonders in your health. If at the end of two weeks honest trial you cannot report real progress toward health we will refund the purchase price. Doesn't this convince you that you should start trying it to-day? Sold by T. M. Murdo & Co., Sole Distributing Agents for Newfoundland.

"Why, what are you afraid of, you and your master?" she demanded, scornfully, a spot of red burning on each cheek. "Do you think I want to steal something?"

"I don't think and I don't care," he retorted, much less respectfully; "I know what my orders are, and I'm carrying them out. If you want to see my master leave your name, ma'am, and when he comes back I'll tell him. You can't come in, that's certain."

Her white, even teeth clinched viciously.

"Oh!" she said, with a sneer. "Perhaps you'll tell me where he's gone."

"I don't know," said the man, phlegmatically, "and I shouldn't tell you if I did."

"You insolent—" she began, furiously; then she pulled up short, and, eyeing him closely, put her hand in her pocket and held something out to him.

The man shook his head.

"No, thank you, ma'am. I'm acting under orders, and I can't break them."

"You'll be sorry for this, my fine fellow," she said, between her teeth; "when your master comes home and finds who it is you've been treating like a dog, you'll sing a different tune."

The man looked at her grimly.

"What am I to do?" he said; "I'm only obeying my orders, I tell you. I don't know who you are, or what right you have to come in; I only know I can't let you. If you'll take my advice, you'll leave your name and come again."

She thought a moment or two.

"Tell your master— No, I'll wait for him outside if I can't wait in," and she leaned against the door-post, and folded her arms in sullen defiance.

The man looked perplexed and non-plussed.

"Well, I can't help it," he said at last, and he leaned against the other door-post, with his hands thrust into his pockets.

She remained in her attitude of stubborn patience for some minutes, then she walked down the path.

The man followed her.

"That's right, ma'am," he said, soothingly; "you'd better go. I'll open the gate— Why, dash it all, it's locked! How did you come in?"

She vouchsafed no answer, but turned and walked up the path again. He stepped past her and guarded the door as before; and she, with an angry snarl, went down the garden path and leaned on the gate. There she remained till the darkness wrapped the lonely lane.

The man spoke to her two or three times urging her to go, but she made no reply, and took no notice of him whatever. The weary hours rolled along, then suddenly a firm step was heard in the lane, the man hurried to the gate and held up the lamp, and its light fell upon Faradeane.

It shone, too, upon the woman's face, defiant still, but now pale with some new emotion, as the black eyes flashed up at the handsome face of the man for whom she had been waiting.

He did not start, but into his grave, weary eyes came a strange look, as if the long-expected had come to pass at last.

"So I've found you," she breathed. "Do you know," she panted, "that that fellow has kept me out here—that he has treated me like a dog?"

"I beg your pardon, sir," the man broke in. "I told the lady she mustn't come in—she wanted to. I asked her to leave her name."

Faradeane unlocked the gate, took the lamp from the man, and signed to him to go in; then he turned to the woman and regarded her with a dead calmness.

"Yes, you have found me," he said, not defiantly, but in a still, steady voice. "What is it you mean to do—what is it you want?"

Her black eyes flashed up at him, and her lithe, strong hands clinched at her side.

"You talk as if I were nobody—nothing!" she said, hoarsely.

"You are as nothing to me," he responded, with no trace of scorn, but with something in his tone that cut her more deeply than any outspoken contempt.

"Oh, I am, am I?" she retorted. "I'll show you differently presently. Do you think I am afraid of you? You'd like to kill me—you wish me dead—I know that! I can see it in your face. But I'm not dead, worse luck for you."

He turned his head slightly. Some one was passing in the lane. The footstep stopped as if the passer-by had heard the words and had paused to listen.

Faradeane raised the lamp. "Good-night, Alford," he said.

Alford—for it was he—glanced from Faradeane to the dimly seen figure of the woman with an air of surprise; then, touching his hat, returned the "good-night" with deep respect, and walked on.

"Do you think I'm afraid of you?" she repeated. "You're mistaken if you do! You've got more cause to fear me. You know the secret between us. Drive me too hard with your cursed coldness and I'll shout it out here and now!" and she raised her clinched fist and shook it at him.

He looked down at her in silence, with an impassive face, but with a strange expression in his eyes; a mixture of loathing and something like pity—the expression a man might wear who looks upon a wild, furious animal.

The look seemed to madden her.

"Why don't you speak?" she demanded. "Are you going to keep me standing out here any longer. Do you know how long I have been kept waiting by that brute of yours?"

"Say what you have to say here," he said, quietly.

"And suppose I refuse? Suppose I use the power I've got over you and insist upon going in? I've got my rights."

"No," he said; "you forfeited them long ago. Why have you come here? What benefit can you gain by tracking me down?"

"Tracked you down! Yes, you're right. That's just what I have done!" she retorted, with a laugh of triumph.

"And now I've found you, I don't mean to leave you! You can't force me to, either."

"No," he said, as quietly as before, with an accent of weariness, "you are quite right; I cannot force you to leave me, but I can leave you. You demand, by the right of the secret between us, to enter that cottage; do so if you will, but I shall never cross the threshold again. You know that."

"You—you hard devil!" she panted, with impotent fury.

"Am I so hard? Think!" he said, sternly. "Do I treat you hardly or unjustly? I have yielded to all your demands—all of them. All I asked of you in return was that you should leave me in peace to live out the life you have degraded and ruined. Can you not do this? Are you not satisfied?"

LONDON, Aug. 21st, 1916.
LORD LANSLOWNE.

One paper said this morning that Lord Lansdowne, because of falling health, is shortly to leave the Cabinet. Now I saw him walking along Piccadilly the other morning looking as fit as a fiddle and I noticed him on August 10th in the House of Lords alert and active, so I incline to accept the story that he knows nothing at all of his reported resignation. Of course, Lord Lansdowne joined the Coalition with grave doubts about his health, and could only undertake Ministerial rank without a portfolio. Should he think, now the darker days of the war are passing, that he need no longer strain himself to support the national unity, then none will grudge him his rest.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH WOMEN MUNITIONEERS.

I am told that French women munition workers are viewing with much interest the influx of English girls who, it is said, are, to the number of several thousands, to come to their assistance. The immediate occasion for this movement is understood to be the disinclination shown by unmarried women in France to engage in some of the processes involved in the manufacture of explosives, on the ground that it leads to a temporary discoloration of the skin. The girls' hands and to a lesser degree their faces turn in the end a bright yellow. Hence the factory nick-name "Canaries." No physical harm is said to result. It is merely a matter of appearance. English girls, who have observed the same result, are apt to console themselves with the knowledge that they are earning more than ever previously. The presence of English side by side with French labor in the munition and other factories of Northwest France, already, however, has brought about an interchange of ideas which may have a far-reaching effect on the international industrial relations of the future.

LIKE OLD TIMES.

Piccadilly is "up." That used to be the conclusive sign that the season was over. Every August when the clubs were closed the Westminster City Council use to tear up Piccadilly, stack the wood pavements, and then do nothing in particular with the job for a month or so. To see the "buses struggling along a narrow track and the rest of the street occupied with watchmen's huts, urispe concrete, stacks of creosoted blocks, and gangs of elderly and leisurely men in corduroys, is a soothing sight. One feels that the world must be in its senses again, and Society now hurrying between Cowes and the moors. All is as it used to be in those days. Unfashionable people from the suburbs and the provinces share the pleasures of the Park with a native population of sparrows and hairy caterpillars. I won't say that Society has gone to the moors. We know that a good many fashionable people are working hard in town, and the others aren't supposed to take any holiday. But the fact remains that Mayfair is strangely quiet.

ELECTRIC VEHICLES AND THE PETROL SHORTAGE.

The restrictions on the supply of petrol give an added importance to the question of extending the use of the storage battery electric vehicle, but the difficulty remains of getting such vehicles manufactured on a large scale in this country during the war. The petrol restrictions, in fact, have created a new situation since the Government prohibited the importation of motor vehicles in order to save shipping space. Great interest therefore attaches to the fact that the Electric Vehicle Committee (which represents the Municipal Electrical Association and other bodies) is making efforts to get the prohibition removed so far as electric vehicles for commercial purposes are concerned. In the United States, where battery-driven wagons, lorries, etc., are very largely used, there are extensive facilities for their manufacture. It is, accordingly, apparent that an easing of the prohibition in this direction would get many manufacturers, traders, and others in this country out of the petrol difficulty, and petrol would be saved for the purposes of the war. The Board of Trade are now considering the subject. Two other points will weigh with all concerned—namely, that the cost of electric power is much lower than that of petrol, and that the driving and control of the electric vehicle are extremely simple.

JOHN BUCHAN IN THE ARMY.

It is not generally known that that well-known novelist, essayist, historian, and man of affairs, Mr. John Buchan, is also at the front. Very few people know that the "Second Lieutenant John Buchan" attached to Headquarters Staff for special service in a recent "London Gazette" was John Buchan, partner in the firm of Nelson, the publishers (and incidentally the originator of the sevenpenny novels series), editor of "Nelson's History of the War," and the author of many well known books including latterly some highly sensational ones. It used to be said that Buchan knew more about the British army and its dispositions than any living civilian. It is likely that he will soon know more than any other military man. He had previously been out at the front several times. He was correspondent there for a short time for the "Times" and "Daily News" in the spring of last year. The many very useful services he has rendered to the nation can only be told at the termination of the war.

SENTIMENT AND SAFETY.

One of the first suggestions put forward on behalf of those who have been broken in the war was that partially disabled men should be licensed as drivers of public motor vehicles in London. There was a generous impulse prompting the idea, which obtained such a volume of support that the Home Secretary appointed a Committee to consider the question from all points of view. The report of this body has been issued and it is, as might have been expected, not favourable to the general adoption of such a scheme. It is pointed out that under the present standard of efficiency required of drivers of public vehicles in the Metropolis there is no margin of safety to spare in the busy streets, and that any lowering of it would mean an increase in the very high number of accidents and a serious additional toll of fatalities. The members of the Committee are far from unsympathetic to the project, but, looking to the safety of the public as the first consideration, they can do no more than recommend that each application for a license should be considered strictly on its merits by the Commissioner of Police, without regard to sentiment. Incidentally the Committee strongly express the opinion that as regards men discharged from the Army or Navy partially disabled, these should, whenever possible, return to their original occupations. Where the disabilities have rendered them incapable of following their previous employment, and it is necessary to teach them a new trade, the Committee suggest that motor-driving is one of the least suitable.

OPENINGS FOR MIDDLE-AGED WOMEN.

The discovery that the supply of female clerks has run short will perhaps lead to an improvement in the treatment of middle-aged women who apply at the Labor Exchanges for posts in either Government departments or commercial houses. Imbued with the idea that the adaptable age has come to an end with the attainment of the thirtieth birthday, the Labor Exchanges—which supply most of the Government departments—all most invariably tell older applicants that there is no opening for them.

ROUND THE BANDSTAND.

The look of things round the bandstand in Hyde Park these brilliant afternoons gives you some measure of the pulse of London in the third War August. It needs an effort to remember what this everyday scene was like in the August before the war, with the wide circle of chairs crowded with tourists from all corners of the earth. This afternoon the sight of an American of the lavish type (broad hat, no waistcoat, and check trousers) was as startling as a butterfly at Christmas. It was a home crowd, three-parts women and convalescent soldiers, taking its ease far more quietly and with less display in dress than in the old days, but still a crowd reacting naturally to the lighter mental atmosphere that has come with the recent good news. There has come about quite recently a noticeable thinning in the usual afternoon stream of glossy, motors with flower-like women inside. The Petrol Control Committee is having its way with these and leaving more room for the old-fashioned landaus to amble out into the sunshine. There was a row of these sedate vehicles ranged up near the bandstand as in former times, all with silver coachmen on the box. Hyde Park has not yet come down to girl ticket collectors for the chairs, as Brighton has, but the ticket men are all ancient beyond reproach. The scarlet bandmen looked like a bunch of geraniums under the theatrical trees and compensated for the absence of flowers in the beds and in the Park Lane windows. The fashionable colour in Piccadilly balconies now is hospital blue. It will take more than a European war to banish the London tramp. I was told he had been tidied away by the broom of war, but the hot weather has brought him out of his obscure retreats to sleep once more on the shady slopes of the Green Park.

Spears of straight ostrich, laid to form a band around the crown, are a novel trimming.

WALTON MASCH

Contentment isn't often seen where men have long green. The more a man requires, it seems, the more does worry haunt his dreams, and every millionaire I know looks like a cheap type of woe. I have a friend who once was broke; then he considered life a joke; he filled the air with gladsome song, and no one laughed so loud or long. It was a joy to meet him then; he was a tonic to sad men. But fortune slipped around, by stealth, and loded him with unearned wealth. He comes to see me now and then—I wish he'd never come again—and talks so much of dole and gloom, of properties that ceased to boom, of plants requiring ready cash, investments which have gone kormash, the grief that capital endures, the grief no legislature cures—he talks so much along this line, and puts up such a bitter whine, that when he leaves my humble door, my feet are chilled, my heart is sore. Your wealth will buy a lot of things; all kinds of luxuries it brings, but you can't take it to the mart, and buy a glad, contented heart.

Von Tirpitz and America.

The sinking of the British steamer Kelvin, if it can be proved to have been the work of a German submarine, may possibly have a greater effect than long familiarity with such acts may have led most of us to anticipate. The fact that some Americans were on board is, of course, an accident so far as the submarine is concerned and the theoretical guilt, the "mens rea," of its commander. But America, though denouncing the whole practice of sinking ships on sight and demanding its cessation, does not pretend to be influenced by the theoretical principle of the thing but only by its effect upon herself. Her attitude says, in effect to Germany, "Continue your piracy if you like, but the moment it endangers or injures the lives and rights of my citizens, you must stand the consequences." Wherever it is quite possible that Washington may take more serious notice than ordinary of the case of the Kelvin.

It is known that ever since the Chancellor won his victory over Von Tirpitz and Berlin reluctantly conceded Washington's demands, or at least tacitly acquiesced in them, the numerous supporters of the Admiral have waged a steady campaign for his recall and the resumption of his handsome methods. The unfavorable military position of Germany, made patent by Roumania's decision, and the growing unrest which has been assisting her propaganda; a change, of whatever sort, is always welcome to popular discontent. If the Kaiser and Bethmann-Hollweg have their hands forced, it will take very little to bring about the severance of relations between the two countries. And notwithstanding much that has been said at America's expense, it will be a bad day for Germany when that happens.

Missing Crew Were Picked Up.

The Deputy Minister of Customs received the accompanying message last evening from Little Bay Islands: "Schooner Maggie M., Capt. Kennedy, of Carbonara, bound to Bonnaville, coal laden from Sydney, founded 25 miles North East of Sydney; crew rescued by schooner Arthur J. Skinner, Capt. J. Hollwell, Spotted Islands, Labrador; Phillip Loder, Chas. Saunders, Cook's Hr., Straits of Belle Isle."

As will be seen by the names given the young men of the Straits of Belle Isle and Labrador have realized that the Empire needs their services. It is expected a large number will join up as soon as the fishery is over.

To-day's Wedding

PINSENT-DICKINSON.
 St. Thomas's Church was the scene of a quiet, but pretty and popular society wedding this morning. The contracting parties were Mr. E. S. Pinsent, partner of the law firm of Messrs. Clift and Pinsent, and son of Mrs. and the late Mr. Charles S. Pinsent, and Miss Beatrice Dickinson, youngest daughter of Mr. G. H. and the late Mrs. Dickinson. Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of the Parish, officiated. At 3.30 the bride, who was charmingly costumed, entered the church, leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away, to the strains of the wedding march, which was appropriately rendered by Mr. Herbert Stirling who presided at the organ. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ethel Dickinson, who was also handsomely attired. The groom was supported by Mr. William Goodridge. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of guests, including Mr. G. H. Dickinson and Mrs. C. S. Pinsent, the father and mother of the bride and groom, respectively; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Clift, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hutchings, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Herder.

On leaving the church the wedding march was again beautifully rendered by Organist Stirling. Following a reception at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Harry Dickinson, the bridal party left by motor car amid showers of confetti and good wishes. Their many friends trust that Mr. and Mrs. Pinsent will spend many years of conjugal happiness.

Naval Reservists Returning on Furlough

ONE INVALIDED.
 Eleven Royal Naval Reservists, 9 on furlough, one invalided and one whose time has expired, crossed from England to Quebec and are now on board the International East bound express, due at North Sydney to-night, whence they will cross to Port aux Basques on the s.s. Kyle, and joining to-morrow's incoming express will reach the city about noon on Saturday. Practically all the men have been in action in the North Sea and Eastern waters. Some of the number received slight wounds and were for a short while confined to the naval hospital at Portsmouth but have since reported for duty. Their names are as follows:—Reuben Pike, 137 Cabot Street, City; Alfred Foods, Water Street; S. Emberley, Lamaline; John Burrage, New Perlican, T.B.; John C. Joffe, Old Perlican, T.B.; Joseph A. Norman, Beachy Cove; Bay Roberts; Chas. P. Rendell, Little Bay Islands; Benjamin H. Pittman, Rocky Harbor, Bonno Bay; Thomas Purcell, St. Phillips; Stanley Brett, Joe Batt's Arm; Frederick J. Edwards, Lawn, (time expired). Reservist Emberley who passed through some trying experiences in the North Sea is invalided home. The others have been granted one month's furlough, starting from Saturday. The Ladies' Reception Committee will be at the station to welcome the boys in blue.

Stole a Watch.

Last night Detective Sergeant Byrne arrested under warrant an 18 year old laborer of Torbay, charging him with the larceny of a twenty dollar silver watch, the property of a man named Joseph Churchill. It appears that both were working on the new water works at Portugal Cove Road, and that Churchill left his watch in a pocket of his vest, which he put in the camp where he slept. On Tuesday last the "riker" disappeared as did also a lad named Manning, who was hovering around the place. Suspicion rested on him and he was rounded up by our local "Sherlock," the watch being found in his possession when searched. The accused was arraigned before Judge Hutchings to-day, convicted and a fine of $20 or 30 days imposed, as it was his first offence.

Women Fight

Man Interferes and is Brought to Task.
 A couple of women of the Lower Battery had a free fight at that place yesterday morning, during which the pugilistic aspirants resorted to such unfair tactics as hair-pulling, knocking down, etc. Broom-handles and longers were being brought into play when a man, who was spreading fish nearby, took sides in the bout and struck one of the belligerents, who was putting it all over her opponent. The fisherman was arraigned before Judge Hutchings this morning for the assault, which he admitted, and was fined $20 or 30 days and costs. The defendant, after being lectured briefly by His Honor, resolved that in future he would let the women have it out to a finish.

Driver's Head Cut Off

In Automobile Race at Kalamazoo When Eleven Cars Were Piled in a Heap.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 28.—Marion Arnold, of Chicago, and Jack Peacock, of Brooklyn, were killed, and eight other drivers and mechanics were injured when eleven racing cars piled into a heap at the quarter turn of the recreation Park mile track here on Sunday on the gateway of the third annual auto Derby in this city.

The overturning of the Sunbeam 12, driven by Peacock, as it rounded the first turn of the track, caused the accident. Peacock's car struck the fence, swerving lengthwise across the track and tipped over on its side. Track officials immediately made an effort to flag the thirteen cars that were thundering up from behind, but without success.

Burt's Stutz was the first to strike the wrecked Sunbeam 12. Then nine other cars piled one after another in the smoking death heap. Four of the cars were far enough in the rear to avoid smashing into the wreckage.

Track officials from the track and the judges' stand started for the pile-up and at the same time the crowds made a rush from the grand stand. When the first reached the scene Arnold's headless body was found beneath the battered Stutz.

Peacock, who had his hips and thigh fractured, died immediately after reaching hospital.

The fatally injured are F. E. Marquette, Peacock's mechanic, head badly crushed, left leg broken below knee in three places; Al W. Downs, driver of Buick, head cut.

BEAUTY IN LAUGHS.

The woman with a keen sense of humor is not only a pleasure to her friends, but she is an endless source of amusement for herself.

Study the children on the beach or in the nursery, and hear their mad shouts of delight over a scrap of nonsense. Children have more humor in their hearts than we grown ups, but as they develop into maturity the humor is stifled by reproving guardians who tell them not to be "foolish."

A good laugh is worth more than a tonic, and you cultivate the spirit of laughter until it peals forth without restraint. Let it gurgle up from the very depths of your soul and burst forth in the form of your eyes and mouth curls in the abandonment of delight. Laugh and rejoice and your beauty will take care of itself.

How often we hear women grum about being slaves to housework. Each day they take up their brooms and dusters with this depressing point of view, and each night they retire more convinced than ever that housework is the greatest drudgery in the world.

Start the day right. You cannot be happy in a slovenly wrapper with your hair at angles and awry. Don a chic little house dress of gingham, and brush your hair becomingly as you would attend a matinee. Then with your broom and duster and a light heart, begin your work with a song. Glance at yourself occasionally in the mirror. Notice the color that has beautified your cheeks since you beat the rugs in the crisp air. Note the brilliancy of your eyes, fired with ambition and happiness. Don't be a sullen slave who drags herself around the house with a long face and a bad temper.

Your Boys and Girls.

There are a few things that every mother should know: Babies should never be held sitting up straight until they sit up of their own accord and can hold their heads erect. Children should never be "laughed" to walk. They will walk quick enough of their own accord without teaching when their leg bones are strong enough. To try to make them walk before there is almost certain to cause them to become bowlegged. Noise and excitement are very bad for babies.

Babies cannot be out of doors too much during fine weather. They may safely sleep out of doors in the daytime if warmly wrapped up and sheltered from sun and wind. Fresh air tranquilizes a baby's nerves better than anything else. The weaning from the breast should be done very gradually. To change suddenly from breast milk to bottle feeding may be productive of much mischief.

Healthy babies begin to cut their first teeth between the sixth and seventh month. That occasionally they cut them earlier than this. That very late teething is usually an evidence of "rickets." That a doctor should be consulted when a baby has no sign of teeth at 10 months old.

Talking very much to infants, and inducing them to "take notice" continually, is very bad for the proper development of their brains.

Everyday Etiquette.

"Shall I proceed a caller into the living room from the hall, or let the called go ahead?" inquired puzzled Jane.

"It does not make a great deal of difference whether you lead the way into the living room or request your guest to go ahead of you. When there are servants the maid or butler leads the way and stands while the guests enter the room," answered her married sister.

The Funniest Jest.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON.

A letter friend wants me to say what I think constitutes a really amusing jest. One might as well ask what flower is the most lovely or what type of beauty is the most attractive.

In other words, "a jest's prosperity lies in the ear of him that hears it," as well as in its intrinsic character.

The element of absurdity and exaggeration is said to be the prime characteristic of the typical American jest.

The Element of Absurdity.

Take, for instance, the old story of the man who dislikes the household cat. Doubtless you remember it.

Wife: "Did we remember to leave anything for kitty to eat while we are gone?"

Husband: "Oh, yes, I put a can of salmon on the floor with the can opener beside it!"

That is a typical American jest. The more liberal type of mind would probably assure us that the cat couldn't open the salmon.

There is one type of humor that appeals particularly to men. This is what I call the clown humor—that is, the sort of jest in which someone gets knocked down or outwitted or left behind or something of the sort. For instance, read to a man the passage in "Three Men in a Boat" in which, while the three are swimming, one of their shirts is knocked out of the boat and George (or is it Harris?) thinks this is wonderfully funny until he finds it is his own shirt. There isn't a man living who won't chuckle heartily over George's chagrin. A woman wouldn't find it half so amusing.

Puns Have Been Much Discredited. Puns have been pretty thoroughly discredited by the surprising universality of the saying, "A pun is the lowest form of jest." I can well imagine who said that first—some one who had the terrible faculty of making a pun a dozen times a day and who expected a laugh for every one. Personally, although they do not greatly amuse me, the ability to make puns seems so wonderful that I never accomplished but two in my life that I would scarcely call them the lowest form of wit. Besides, I reserve that distinction for another form of so-called wit. But that's another story.

The Jest That Makes You Think. A jest that makes you think is my own favorite type of humor. You laugh and then you think. A splendid example of this is the following story quoted by Agnes Repplier:

"A woman who had been a very wealthy and fashionable person goes to Heaven. St. Peter leads her first through the beautiful streets, then into a less desirable neighbourhood, and, finally, into a narrow, unlovely street. He stops before a miserable little house. "This," says St. Peter, "is your habitation." But I could not possibly live in any place so shabby and inadequate. "I am sorry, Madam; but we have done the best we could with the materials you furnished."

The Mailed Fist Heavy on Bulgars

Nation, Cut Off From World, Kept In Ignorance By German Masters.—Food Is Very Scarce.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 28.—Particularly interesting is the present Bulgarian situation. The only communication between this country and the outside world is through Rumania, Austria, Germany and Turkey, but as these countries, too, are isolated, nothing but news of continued German, Austrian and Turkish victories comes in through the Balkan Agency Wolf Bureau, while a strict military censorship keeps us in the dark as to the real situation of not only the Balkan front, but of the interior of Bulgaria as well. Nevertheless, if one wants to study the general situation it is reflected in what news one is able to gather here in the capital of the kingdom. He will have ample proofs to justify a growing pessimism as regards the future of the country.

In the first place, Bulgaria having entered the war on the side of Germany, never suspected that hers was to be a position of a vassal at the hands of the German General Staff; yet this is precisely what happened from the earliest days of the war. Military Bulgaria was placed on the same level as Turkey by the superior Teuton command. In every post of a certain importance and responsibility a German officer with a small staff was appointed. Bulgarian forts on all borders passed into German hands, the railroads of the country were submitted to German control, and instead of the Bulgarian policeman, it is the German oberst who rattles his sword in even the regimental headquarters of the little Czar's bodyguard.

One has only to know how proud every Bulgarian is of the national army, to understand the impression created by the employment of such Teuton methods in the country of an ally. But this is not all. The Department of Posts, Telegraph and Telephones has passed into the hands of German experts, who keep an eye on what is happening hourly in and out of Bulgaria, and keep the German staff posted on everything. Even the local press censorship is in many instances in German hands. This is what happens in the military or semi-military administration of the country.

Food Scarce and Costly.

As far as meat is concerned only beef is allowed to be butchered, and this is of a non-eatable quality; twice a week no meat is sold to private individuals, while only the hospitals can have it. Mutton is allowed, provided it weighs more than thirty pounds when slaughtered, while no cattle less than six years old are permitted to be killed for culinary purposes. Pork, potatoes, and vegetables of any description are not to be found in any market, being used exclusively for the feeding of the German and Austrian troops now in Bulgaria. Bread costs seven to eight cents a loaf, but it is not eatable. An idea of the cost of other commodities may be had from the fact that an ordinary pair of shoes costs anywhere from $17 to $20.

The army having taken twenty-six classes of reservists there are not enough hands to till the soil, and in the rural districts is increasing at an alarming rate. The Government foreseeing a famine gave three and four weeks' furlough to the farmers under the colors, but there is a lack of cattle, of horses, of vehicles, and in many instances of seed as well which makes any agricultural work well nigh impossible. Bulgaria to-day has nearly 350,000 men on her southern frontier, while the German forces scarcely amount to more than 60,000 troops. According to what is known here, immediately after the Serbian resistance had been broken and the Anglo-French forces repulsed, the Bulgarian army established small garrisons in most of the occupied Serbian cities, and after sending 20,000 troops to Albania to co-operate with the Austrian forces, centred all of its available forces especially in the lines between Petrich, Sofia, Germany and Turkey, and Strumitza, Valandovo, Dobran, and Gueghell. From Dobran to Monastir the German and Austrian troops held the line, while between Ochrada and Monastir the Eighth Bulgarian Division was stationed. From the latter part of February this year to the end of June, as far as it is possible to learn there have been few important changes in the disposition of the Bulgarian forces, which were thus apportioned.

Between Deleagach and Zanthi the Tenth Bulgarian Division. At Skopje the Third Division. In Albania one division, probably the second from Ochrada and Monastir the Eighth Division. This total of four divisions numbers approximately 100,000 to 120,000 men, to which 60, 000 Teutons must be added, making in all a force of 180,000 troops facing the Allies in the Balkans in March this year.

But Bulgaria had also to attend to the safety of her other frontiers, therefore she sent three divisions the First of Sofia, the Sixth of Widin, and the Fourth of Preslava, to the Rumanian border. Following Rumanian peace assurance and the withdrawing of a corresponding Rumanian force from the border Bulgaria despatched two more divisions to Macedonia, while the Eleventh Independent Macedonian officers and troops, is held ready for any emergency.

Therefore one may be quite exact in saying that the Bulgarian troops facing the Allies in the Balkans, together with their Teuton allies, amount at this time of writing pretty near to 400,000 men all told.

Attitude of the Army.

Are these troops eager to fight? That is a question which can be answered with difficulty. The Bulgarian people, as a whole, are tired of war. What they see is not the brilliant side of the Balkan campaign, but the dustiest part of it. They entered it hoping that it would end soon, and leave them the masters of Serbia and of the Balkan Peninsula. Once there they expected the Allies to withdraw. This was not done, and what was more, the allied contingent in Macedonia was strengthened. Then for a time they hoped that Greece and Rumania would remain neutral to the end of the conflict, and this is no more certain to-day than it was ten months ago.

Germany had promised them to end the war by a Balkan victory. The victory was pretty nearly complete, but it did not end the war. Bulgaria now is asking Germany whether this thing is to continue any longer, and Germany, in all probability, is answering that Bulgaria must prepare for other blows. Bulgaria would welcome another blow, provided this would put an end to the Balkan campaign and the sufferings she has had to endure on account of it.

AVIATOR ROBINSON'S STORY.

LONDON, Sept. 6. (By Lieut. W. L. Robinson.)—"I had been up something over an hour when I saw a Zeppelin. She was flying high. I followed and climbed to get a position above her, but in the heavy fog she escaped me. I fired at her at long range, but she made off before I could see if any damage had been done. I determined that the next ship I saw I would attack from the first position I found. I met her just after 2 o'clock. Soon she appeared to catch fire forward in her petrol tank. The flames spread rapidly along the whole body. She made off to the eastward on fire. In a few minutes she dipped by the nose and dived slowly to earth. I was so pleased that in my excitement I looped the loop several times, and then showed my signal to stop firing and came back."

Sudden Death.

Lieut. William and Lance-Corporal Robert Clare mourn the loss of their mother, who passed away suddenly at her home last night. She was a devoted mother and wife. Letter Written in Prison

Eighty Years Ago by R. J. Parsons, Esq., M. H. A., After Being Sentenced to Three Months and to Pay a Fine of Fifty Pounds for Contempt of Court.

(By JAMES MURPHY.)

(Concluded.)

His Honour said "the rabble" were buying me up with false hopes of remuneration for lost time and injured health, but declared his (the Judge's) conviction that I would never receive the slightest compensation. Why, said the Judge, should your brother suffer for the evil doing of another. Let him (said he) give up the writer of the article: "Stick a Pin Here" and I will protect him, the respectable part of the community will protect him, and his having done so, will never tarnish his character. My sister here made some allusion to the fine, and expressed a belief that if I were liberated that would be paid. Oh (said the Judge), a fine is no punishment, the rabble would pay that. The Judge in the most feeling manner regretted that he could not accede to my sister's suggestions, and that, in the absence of any relief unless upon the conditions he had named, dwelt on the respectability of my family, and that he would be proud to have the name of the person or persons, who had committed the offence, placed on Nova Scotia or elsewhere where a young man like him might obtain a livelihood with every facility. FRENCH GAINS SOUTH OF SOMME.

PARIS, To-day. Further French gains are reported in an official statement issued by the War Office last night, these being entirely south of the Somme, where the greater part of the village of Bery was captured, as well as the northern portion of Vermandoy-Bois.

A SCHEME FOR REHABILITATION.

LONDON, To-day. Dr. Robertson, Ottawa, crossed France as Canadian delegate for the Agricultural Relief Allies Fund; he will visit the ravaged areas. The Duke of Portland has a scheme for the whole Empire, making a vast effort to lend assistance for the rehabilitation of these lands in Belgium, France and Serbia at the conclusion of hostilities, by the provision of seed, implements and money.

STRIKE ON THE INTERBOROUGH LINES.

NEW YORK, To-day. A strike was declared at 9 o'clock last night by the unionized employees of the subway and elevated railway lines operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. in this city. About 1,500 of the 11,700 car men in the company's pay voted at a mass meeting to quit work immediately. Officers of the union asserted that with the possible exception of the lines in Brooklyn, the New York electric transportation facilities would be completely paralyzed by the morning. Thomas F. Shonta, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co., declared that with adequate police protection the company would be able to cope successfully with the situation and guarantee transportation to the public. He said that only a small number of the Co.'s employees had become unionized.

ON ALL FRONTS.

LONDON, To-day. While their operations were busy on Wednesday night of the Somme mainly warding off German attacks or engaged in artillery duels, the French south of the river drove their attack further into the German lines and made additional gains. In stubborn fighting over a front of four miles between Vermandoy-Bois and the French occupied the outskirts of the railway junction town of Caumes and have thrown their forces along the railway running from Chaumes to Roye between Chaumes and Chilly. To the north the operations by the French, which have been continuing steadily for some time, are being met with success. Southeast of Belloy-en-Santerre further German gains were captured in the greater portion of the village of Bery-en-Santerre fell into the hands of the French during the day's fighting. According to Paris, the number of the prisoners taken was apparently large. Berlin admits the loss of the town of Clercy which lies a short distance northwest of Peronne. In Galicia on the front of the Zlota-Lipa and Dnestr rivers the Russians have driven out the Teutonic Allies from fortified positions and taken 4,500 prisoners, among them about 2,000 Germans. Berlin concedes a victory for the Russians in this region. Violent fighting is still going on around Brezany south of Lemberg, but Berlin says that the Russians suffered heavy losses and made no advance. Similarly Russian attacks near Zhorov in Northern Galicia and Volhynia failed, according to Berlin. Fighting is still going on in the marshy regions where the Russians claim to have captured additional heights. In the Romanian theatre German and Bulgarian troops are still engaged with Roumanians in the Dobruja region. Berlin reports the capture of seven of the Turakun works together with their armoured batteries. The Russians who are fighting Germany, and it believes that German defeat is as essential to the United States as to Europe; but having said this, the Tribune, in an editorial, expresses surprise at the action in Washington. It has been inevitable from the start, unless the British and French statesmen are sufficiently wise to avoid an unnecessary dispute and forego unessential interests.

2.00 P.M.

WELL SAID, TRIBUNE!

NEW YORK, To-day. Commenting editorially on the proposed measures of reprisal to be directed by this country against the Entente Powers to-day's Tribune says: "We sincerely regret the course of Congress in adopting measures of reprisal directed at the Entente Powers. The Tribune resents the action because it believes that American interests, American principles and American ideals are being served by the Nations who are fighting Germany, and that German defeat is as essential to the United States as to Europe; but having said this, the Tribune, in an editorial, expresses surprise at the action in Washington. It has been inevitable from the start, unless the British and French statesmen are sufficiently wise to avoid an unnecessary dispute and forego unessential interests."

RUSSIA'S AIMS.

LONDON, To-day. According to a News Agency despatch from London published here, Russia is to settle the eastern question by eliminating Turkey and Bulgaria entirely from the war, and obtaining for the use of Russian troops, the Bulgarian Black Sea port of Varnor, Constantinople itself, and using it as a base for cruising. A strong new Russian Army is taking the field with this special mission, says a correspondent of the Morning Post at Petrograd. When the army has gained one of these ports as a base of supply, Russia will be able to strike the Teutons with fifty per cent more power, he says.

EARLY THIEVING.

LONDON, To-day. The light engined gentry visited the King's wharf at an early hour this morning and once again have been out all night and "lifted" a fine balm, which had been left there yesterday evening by two men, who found it drifting out into the harbor when they took it in tow of their motor boat and brought it to land.

BRUSSILOFF'S CONFIDENCE.

LONDON, To-day. Writing from a town in Southern Russia, George Mowss says in a despatch, to the Daily Mirror: "In company with Stanley Washburn, I recently motored to the headquarters of General Brussiloff who received us, he talked to us for nearly an hour. The fighting at Verdun, he said, filled him with admiration for the soldiers of France; for his recent successes have given all the credit to the Russian soldiers. Washburn asked the General if Warsaw would be retaken this year. He replied: "Why not?" Brussiloff has implicit faith in the Russian soldiers. Last year he retreated owing to the lack of ammunition, and is a

Will the Channel Tunnel Be One Of the Results of the War?

Promoters Feel Confident It Will Experts Declare It Could Be Constructed More Easily Than the East River Tunnel at New York.—The Project More Popular Than Ever—May Have Trial Tube First—Project a Hundred Years Old.

London, Aug. 25.—Whatever danger and fears may have been felt by the minority with regard to the boring of a tunnel under the Channel between England and France have been dispelled, strangely enough, by two years of war, the very event which it was feared, would be a danger to Britain.

Unquestionably the project is more popular than ever. It is even now recognized that England in this war is being punished for her neglect, and its advocates on both sides of the Channel, are preparing now, in order to be ready on the advent of peace. Both the Italian and Belgian Governments will join with the French in urging the British Government to give early sanction to the Channel tunnel. Another new fact is that the Northern of France Railway Company, which hitherto has been quiescent on the subject, is now taking definite steps to make known the opinion that France entertains.

PETROGRAD, To-day.

The recent attack at Svinjuchi, 20 miles southeast of Vladimir-Volynski, was heralded by a dramatic incident, namely the artillery preparation. In this part the Teutons were treated liberally to the new Russian gas shells. The Austrian fire was suddenly silenced. The Russians rushing forward found the trenches tenanted only by dead, grimly grotesque figures lying or leaning, evidently killed instantly by the fumes of gas. The number of Austrians who thus perished is several hundred. On Thursday morning there was a five hour artillery preparation; by two o'clock in the afternoon three lines of Teuton trenches had been captured along a front of 20 miles. Three thousand prisoners, many of them Germans, have arrived at Lutsk.

STRIKING GERMAN ADMISIONS.

LONDON, To-day. The Daily Express prints these extracts from the Berlin Socialist organ Vorwaerts: "If the central authorities still have any doubts as to the real sentiments of the people in regard to the continuance of this frightful struggle, they should personally attend some of the crowded meetings during the business days of the Empire. At all of these gatherings the demand for speedy peace without any annexations is received with thunderous cheers. At one of these gatherings Deputy Kappler declared that the only real guarantee against the repetition of such a catastrophe lay in the disarmament of all States and the establishment of an international compulsory arbitration court. In the meantime, however, he added, a truce should be sought, and even at the sacrifice of some of Germany's chief ambition." The Schwabische Tagwacht of Stuttgart is quoted as saying: "Even if the Russians, Italians and all of the continental Allies were beaten, England's naval supremacy would not be destroyed and our island would not be invaded unless a miracle happens this object will never be realized, not even though the last thirty years. A prolongation of the war can only plunge us into deeper misery and expose us to the gravest perils."

TRIAL TUBE FIRST.

As the result largely of thousands of soundings taken by Mr. Searious, an eminent engineer, it is accepted as a fact that the floor of the Channel is composed of gray chalk, impervious to water and forming a favorable stratum for the building of the tunnel. It is proposed to construct a trial tube eleven feet in diameter to prove the ground and to ascertain the precise location of any possible fissures or faults. Then two tubes eighteen feet in diameter will be built, with connections at frequent intervals as a provision against break downs. The trial tube will be used for the centre of the Channel so that the water will flow down in each direction and be pumped up at Dover and Sangatte.

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL'S GREATEST CLAIM TO DISTINCTION.

The Channel tunnel's greatest claim to distinction, aside from the well known measureless possibilities it will open up, will be its length. It will be from twenty-one to twenty-three miles long or more than twice the length of the Simplon tunnel through the Alps, now the largest traffic bore in the world.

PERFECTLY FEASIBLE.

Robert Ridgway, engineer of subway construction, said yesterday: "The Channel tunnel would be a long step in advance because of its great length, but it is a perfectly feasible project. Except in the most general sense the building of the New York subway affords no criterion for the construction of a tunnel of this sort. It would be like comparing mince pie with pea soup. They are comparable only in that both are articles of food."

"But the construction of the tunnel would be a straight job, which the subway was not. In three important particulars it would not be so trying as subway building has been. In its construction there would be an escape from traffic troubles, the underpinning of buildings and annoyance to the public, with all of which subway work has been beset continuously. "The only problems in connection with the tunnel would arise from the nature of the materials of which the bed of the Channel consists. Air pressure, with its limitations, could be avoided by going deep enough into rock. If rock is found all the way everything would go smoothly and the tunnelling would be reduced to a simple and exact engineering work. But if rock containing water or partly earth and partly rock, such as were encountered in tunnel building here, should be met, construction would be complicated considerably. "It is necessary, however, the builders of the Channel tunnel could go much deeper than was possible with the tunnel here. The soil layers in England and France could be made several miles long to accommodate a great depth, while here it would have been impossible to obviate too steep a grade by resort to such an expedient. We built a water supply tunnel 1,100 feet deep under the Hudson River at Storm King and many men traversed it before the water was let in. I should not want to bid on the construction of the Channel tunnel until I knew the geological conditions more exactly. At their worst, however, they would mean only increased time and cost, which would be insufficient to affect the feasibility of the project."

FINE PICTURES AT THE CRESCENT

"My Own Iona" is the ballad Mr. Sam Rose sings at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day, and the picture programme is one of the finest. Miss Jackie Saunders is presented in "The Child of the West," a beautiful feature produced in three reels by the Knickerbocker stars; features superb photography and settings. "Her Bad Quarter of an Hour" is a fine Vitagraph comedy drama featuring Lillian Walker. "The Selig Tribune" the world's greatest news film contains in to-day's issue several scenes of the French Army in the trenches at Verdun. Professor W. C. Barry plays a new and classy musical programme for this great show. Don't miss seeing "The Child of the West"; to-day is the last chance.

MILLIONAIRE BABY AT NICKEL THEATRE

There was a record attendance at the Nickel Theatre last evening. By 7 o'clock every seat was occupied and hundreds were obliged to stand until the intermission. The attraction was the brilliant picture by the Selig artists entitled "The Millionaire Baby." Grace Dormond who is said by many to be the prettiest actress on the stage to-day is in the leading role. The story is highly interesting and the settings and photography are grand. It is certainly one of the best productions of the Selig Co. and all lovers of the Nickel should attend to-day and see it. The comedy "Fatty's Magic Trousers" is exceptionally funny and kept the audience in roars of laughter.

DON'T MISS THE CONTEST AT THE BRITISH THEATRE.

There is a wonderful programme at the British Theatre to-night; complete change of everything, songs, jokes, gags, stories, dances, costumes. On Friday night Mrs. Rosley has secured the services of a tiny dwarf who promises to appear. This little wonder says he will impersonate Lauder, Wilkie Baird, Cameron and others. He has promised faithfully to appear; should he back out that's no fault of the Rossleys, but he says "Rosley, I'm a man of my word." He stands thirty-six inches high. Any person winning first prize and does not want to keep it can hand it over to the Cot Fund. Be on hand to see the fun. Only one show that night, pictures first then the Rosley troupe, then the first, then the Rosley troupe, then the
