"Flowers of the Valley,"

MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XVII.

GIRL IN TEN THOUSAND.
As he spoke he opened the envelope and took out a sheet of paper.

"Good Heavens, Barrington!" he exclaimed, a scarlet flush rising to his face, then leaving it pale and disturbed; "look at this!—listen!" and he read aloud:

I resign any claim I may have to the estates and property left by Godfrey Knighton, of Knighton Revels. If Lord Coverdale, to whom they now belong, considers that he owes me anything for this resignation, he can best admit his indebtedness by refraining from any attempt to learn the place of refuge of one who was known as IRIS KNIGHTON.

Mr. Barrington took the note and read it, his hand trembling, his face pale.

"As I thought!" he said. "Just what I expected! There, my lord, is the last obstacle to your succession removed, and by her own hand!" Lord Coverdale took the paper, and would have torn it, but Mr. Barrington stopped him. "Pardon me, my lord," he said, grimly; "that is a legal document, and I am a lawyer. Besides, what would be the use of destroying it? You could not effect its annulment, and I know that, my lord! I know that, a nobler, more high-spirited girl—!" he stopped, and turned away his head.

Lord Coverdale went to the window; for his eyes were moist.

"What is to be done now?" he said.

"One thing only," said Mr. Barrington. "This settles my course of action; my client's will is law to me! Whatever may be done afterward, whatever may be made, I am not to acknowledge you as my client."

"My lord, I thank you!" he said, with simple dignity. "And now, will you come to luncheon. We can talk while we eat."

As they passed once more into the hall, Mr. Barrington beckoned to the butler.

"Please understand," he said, "that the Earl of Coverdale is master here. You will obey his orders from this moment on."

"The butler stared, and his face flushed; the footmen and a maidservant who were passing drew nearer; but before they could speak, Lord Coverdale, with a suppressed emotion, held up his hand.

"What Mr. Barrington has told you," he said in a voice that he could scarcely keep firm, "is, I am afraid, true! I say afraid, because I know that you it will be only for that reason. I regard myself a guardian of the estate for the person I still consider its rightful—natural owner—this poor girl!"

"Not rightful," said Mr. Barrington, with stern justice.

"She must be found at once!" said Lord Coverdale.

Mr. Barrington pointed his thin forefinger to the last portion of the note.

"You have no right to disregard her injunction, my lord," he said; "but I shall not give up the search, though I feel it to be hopeless."

"Impossible! A young girl, who has disappeared a few days ago only?"

"A young girl! Yes. But a girl very different from the ordinary run of young women!" said Mr. Barrington, with sorrowful pride. "Miss Knighton—for I must call her so still, my lord!

—Miss Knighton is no ordinary young girl moved to the course she has taken by a fit of hysterical grief and excitement! I have known her since she was a child, have watched her grow into girlhood, womanhood! Most beautiful women are, I am told, foiled; no one could be more removed from a fool than Iris Knighton! With the knighton pride she has inherited her father's resolution and self-reliance. She is not only an accomplished girl, with every charm a girl could possess, but—" he paused and emphasized his words by striking his finger on the table, his wrinkled face flushed and agitated—"she is a girl of sense—of sense, my lord! She is one in ten thousand!"

Lord Coverdale listened gravely, a feeling of surprise overwhelming him. How did this description of the acute and dispassionate man of law agree with that he had received from the girl he had met!

"Forgive my warmth, my lord," said the old man, wiping his forehead; "but I feel so strong an admiration for that gentle, beautiful young creature—"

There, there! To business, my lord."

"The first business I transact as—" heir to Knighton, Barrington," said Lord Coverdale, gravely. "Is to instruct you to draw up a deed of gift, handing over the half of the income to Miss Iris Knighton!"

Mr. Barrington stetched out his hand.

"My lord, I thank you!" he said, with simple dignity. "And now, will you come to luncheon. We can talk while we eat."

As they passed once more into the hall, Mr. Barrington beckoned to the butler.

"Please understand," he said, "that the Earl of Coverdale is master here. You will obey his orders from this moment on."

"The butler stared, and his face flushed; the footmen and a maidservant who were passing drew nearer; but before they could speak, Lord Coverdale, with a suppressed emotion, held up his hand.

"What Mr. Barrington has told you," he said in a voice that he could scarcely keep firm, "is, I am afraid, true! I say afraid, because I know that you would rather have seen Miss Knighton in her old place, as mistress here. I wish it as heartily. You may yet welcome her back; but until that time comes—if it should come—I take her place. You are at liberty to tell your fellow servants."

One or two of the footmen—young men and comparative strangers—made an attempt at a cheer, but Lord Heron held up his hand and looked round sternly, and in silence the group dispersed.

Mr. Barrington led Lord Coverdale into the dining-room and lunch was served.

"Surely, never before has a man taken possession under such painful circumstances!" said Lord Heron, pushing his plate from him.

"I can sympathize with you; I fully understand what you feel, my lord," said Mr. Barrington. "But my hope—my fervent hope—is that things will yet come right. At any rate, you have to do your duty! You are here, with hope to oppose you, and—" he smiled rather sadly—"though the affair will be a ten days' wonder, on the eleventh the world will find something else to amuse it, and the circumstances attending your succession will be forgotten."

"But I shall not forget, Barrington," said Lord Heron, moodily regarding the handsome room, with its paneled walls and old-time furniture. "I shall know no peace until Miss Knighton has accepted what I offer."

"I would to Heaven we could persuade her!" said Mr. Barrington. There was silence for a minute or two, each dwelling on his own thoughts, then the lawyer roused himself. "I suppose you know no one in this place; none of the county people, who are now your neighbors, my lord? But, of course, you do not!"

"No," said Lord Heron. "I have heard of them, but know no one. Lord Montacute—"

Mr. Barrington sighed.

"A most excellent gentleman, my lord," he said. "This revelation and trouble of Miss Knighton has gone near to break his heart."

"I understand," said Lord Heron in a low voice. "Poor fellow! He was engaged?"

"No; by no means. Lord Montacute proposed a few days before Mr. Barrington's death, but Mr. Knighton put him off."

"And Miss Knighton?"

Mr. Barrington shook his head.

"I think not. I do not think she cared—my lord, to Lord Montacute's honor, be it spoken, that he repeated his proposal to Miss Knighton after he knew of her misfortune!"

"He is a noble fellow!" said Lord Heron, earnestly. "Thank Heaven, I have such a neighbor!"

Mr. Barrington inclined his head in solemn assent.

"If any one can find her in London, or wherever she is, he will do so!" he said; "he or Felice!"

"No time must be lost!" said Lord Heron, earnestly, "and no money spared. Please Heaven before the week is out—"

Mr. Barrington sighed.

"Will you come round the house, my lord?" he said after a minute or two. "I should like to take you over it. There are one or two things—leases, and so on—that must be seen to at once."

"In a minute or two," said Lord Heron, absently; then he looked up with a faint flush and marked hesitation. "Who is there, in the immediate neighborhood, what other families?"

"There are the Gomershalls at the Grange."

"Lord Gomershall—yes, I know. He has no family, has he?"

"No," said Mr. Barrington. "And the Derrells at the Towers."

"Have they any family?" asked Lord Heron.

"Yes; two boys," said Mr. Barrington. Lord Heron looked still unsatisfied.

"Well?"

"Well, the only other people who live appreciably near are the Waltons—Sir Hildinge Walton; he is a widower, with one daughter. They live at Coombe Walton."

"What is she like?" demanded Lord Heron, flushing, and raising his wine-glass. "A tall girl, with dark hair and eyes—a very beautiful girl?"

"Miss Walton is pretty, yes," said Mr. Barrington, "but she is not tall by any means; and she is fair, very fair. Why did you ask; do you think you know her?"

"No, no," replied Lord Heron, hurriedly. There was silence for a moment, then he said: "There is a tall, dark, young lady, answering to my description, living somewhere here, is there not?"

Mr. Barrington pondered a moment. "Near here?" he said, thoughtfully.

"Yes, near enough to be riding in the neighborhood," said Lord Heron. Mr. Barrington shook his head.

"No," he said. "I know of no one. Why, my lord?"

"Well," said Lord Heron, hesitating with all a lover's reluctance to speak of the woman of his heart. She seemed so sacred to him that he could scarcely force himself to mention her. Besides, he had almost promised not to try and discover her name, though his altered circumstances might be considered to release him from even the most distinct promise. "Well," he said at last, "I have met a young lady—twice—near here. She was tall, and very beautiful!"

DEALERS IN FORD CARS. Ford Service Station, Catherine Street, St. John's, Nfld.

OF VITAL INTEREST TO EVERY FORD OWNER: We wish to point out to you a few very important things which should be borne in mind when having your Ford car overhauled. Regardless of where you have this work done, be certain that none but GENUINE FORD PARTS are used. Spurious parts are being handled by a great many repair shops, who buy them at a large reduction, and charge you the same price as if GENUINE FORD PARTS were used. This practice is not only unscrupulous, but positively dangerous, as these parts are made from inferior quality and have not the very necessary strength or wearing qualities.

We would also like to point out that, as FORD DEALERS, nothing but GENUINE FORD PARTS are used by us in making replacements. Another unit of great importance in your battery, which should never be touched except by an expert in this work, who should be equipped with all the special tools. We have a complete outfit for this work—Lead-burning outfit, storage battery tester, Tungar rectifier, Cadmium tester, and special plate and rack holders.

Get your Ford car overhauled by your FORD DEALERS, then you are sure of getting nothing but GENUINE FORD PARTS installed.

We handle the very best lines. Tires, Tubes, Chains and all Ford Accessories, all sold under a guarantee. Yours sincerely, DODD'S GARAGE LIMITED, Authorized Exclusive Ford Dealers.

Japanese Premier Stabbed to Death by Insane Youth.

Deed Was Done in Tokio Railway Station--British Post Master General Has Forebodings--Well Known Montreal Dry Goods Firm Sells Out.

JAPANESE PREMIER ASSASSINATED. TOKYO, Nov. 4. Premier Hara was fatally stabbed to-day at the railroad station in Tokio. The assassin, who is nineteen years old and demented, was arrested.

A LOSS OF WORLD-MAGNITUDE. WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. The Japanese delegation to the Disarmament Conference was thrown into sorrow and confusion and official Washington, including delegates from other lands to the Conference, was profoundly shocked by the announcement from Tokio that Takashi Hara, Japanese Premier, had been assassinated. Admiral Baron Kato, ranking member of the Japanese delegation, and Mr. Hara's most intimate friend, was so affected by the announcement that he burst into tears, something most unusual for a Japanese, who is trained from childhood to conceal his emotions. Japanese policy at the forthcoming conference is a very serious loss at a time when that country is passing through a period of intense transition. Emperor Yoshihito is incurably ill, mentally and physically. It is understood that plans have been under consideration to establish a regency under Crown Prince Hirohito. Mr. Hara and Viscount Makino, household minister, have been trying to solve the problem of modernizing the Japanese Court, and seeking means to bring it nearer to the people of Japan, who are clamoring for development of their country along the lines of Democracy. New social ideas, even Bolshevistic, have been coming in, influencing the thought of the people, ninety-five per cent. of whom are able to read and write. Mr. Hara frequently referred in public addresses to the dangers of too rapid absorption of western social ideas into Japanese life, believing that this country could not digest, successfully, western concepts of society. Gradually his influence began to grow until the Japanese began to look on him as the popular leader at a rather critical moment of their history. Premier Hara frequently addressed the Japanese Diet concerning the serious work of the Washington Conference; and on October 6th expressed the view that Japan's chief aim would be to put an end to race barriers. Soon afterwards he announced at a meeting of the Government party that Japan was willing to compromise on the Shantung question with China. Premier Hara declared in recent statements that Japan was ready to accept limitation of her naval establishment, always keeping in mind the necessity of her national defence. Before the Japanese delegation left Japan threatening letters were received by its members. Mr. Hara has been Premier of Japan since 1918, and has had a long and distinguished political career.

TEMPORARILY SUSPENDED. CHICAGO, Nov. 4. Action of the United States Court of Appeals here to-day in suspending that part of the injunction, issued by Judge Anderson of Indianapolis, applying to the "check off" system until further order of the court, was proclaimed to-night by officials of the United Mine Workers of America as a declared victory. The court's action allows the holding out union dues and assessments from coal miners' pay to be continued by operators temporarily. Appeal hearing was granted the Union for Wednesday, November 16th.

GOOD NEWS FOR IMMIGRANTS. WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. A complete inquiry is being conducted at the instance of the State Department into alleged hardships suffered by British subjects at Ellis Island Immigration Station at the port of New York, to the end that difficulties encountered through administration of the immigration laws may be reduced to a minimum.

ANOTHER STEEL RAIL ORDER. MONTREAL, Nov. 4. It was announced here to-day that the Dominion Steel Corporation has received on account of the Canadian National Railways, an order for 20,000 tons of steel rails.

GAULT BROS. CO. BOUGHT OUT. MONTREAL, Nov. 4. By a transaction involving a consideration of $1,000,000, Greenshields Limited have purchased the merchandise of the Gault Bros. Co., the most important sale of dry goods stock recorded in Canada. Gault Bros. Co., Ltd. will continue in existence until all the details of the business are completed, but will no longer engage directly in trade. The firm has been continuously engaged in business in Montreal for sixty-seven years.

AN OMINOUS FORECAST. LONDON, Nov. 4. The sequence to a breakdown in the Irish conference would be a war which will cost 250,000,000 pounds, declared Frederick G. Kellaway, Postmaster General, addressing a political meeting to-day. He believed it probable that 50,000 lives would have to be sacrificed to conquer the Sinn Fein Irish should such a war be started.

NOVEMBER 15TH THE EARLIEST DATE. LONDON, Nov. 4. Two weeks from the present is the earliest date now considered possible for Prime Minister Lloyd George to go to Washington for the Armaments Conference, according to his secretary.

APPEAL ALLOWED. CHICAGO, Nov. 4. The Federal Court of Appeals to-day granted an appeal of the United 55,000,000 British-Americans.

"When Mr. Page, the American Ambassador, spoke in commemoration of the 'Mayflower' Pilgrims at Southampton in August, 1913, he stated in very graceful and eloquent language facts which cannot be disputed because they are part of history," says the Spectator.

"Blood," he said, "carried with it that particular trick of thought which made Americans English in the last resort." Thus, in spite of all the fusion of races in America the American nation was still "English-led and English-ruled." These last words caused a great outburst of anger in the United States, and it was only the first of several similar outbursts. Yet every serious historian acknowledges that the structure of American life, both political and social, is built upon English origins, upon an English form of religion and above all, perhaps, upon the English Common Law. That is why Americans are "English-led and English-ruled."

"As Mr. W. S. Rosier, who was for many years chief clerk of the United States Census, has pointed out, 55,000,000 Americans trace their origin, however far back, to England, Scotland, and Wales. And among their names are to be found those of most of the great political leaders."

CORNS Lift Right Off without Pain

Magic! Drop a little "Freezone" on an itching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Doesn't hurt a bit. Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses.

Are Women Too Critical

Many people claim that women are altogether too critical. But it is sometimes overlooked that this is more often a virtue than a fault, because by being particular, women create the demand for something better all the time. In the early days of Toilet requisites, smelly, ill-smelling face powders were all that could be obtained. But the critical, sophisticated woman insisted upon something better. By degrees a better standard was noticed in all toilet articles, until the last word in fastidiousness was reached with the appearance of Richard Hudnut's toilet products. "Here," said all ladies of good taste, "is what we have been looking for: here are toilet powders and perfumes that do not advertise to the whole town the fact that we have used perfumes," and from this well-merited recognition sprang a great demand for Hudnut's different toilet items, until to-day no fashionable lady considers her beauty complete without one or more of those high-class toilet aids. In St. John's ladies were about tired of the same old thing, so an enthusiastic reception awaited Hudnut's marvelous perfumes and powders. Thus far, the "Three Flowers" odor which is supplied in Perfume, Toilet Water, Face Powder and Vanishing Cream, seems to be the most popular. There is a wide difference between Hudnut's odors and some of those on sale here previously: a difference which ladies of distinction quickly appreciate. An assortment of Hudnut's goods is now carried at the following stores: Kennedy's Drug Store, Jas. Baird's, Ltd., O'Mara's Drug Store, Rawlins' Cross; Kielly's Drug Store, Stafford's Drug Store, Wabana Drug Store, Wabana, and Thompson's Drug Store, St. John's. The local representative, for Hudnut's line is Mr. Gerald S. Doyle, in whose hands the distributing and advertising campaign for Newfoundland has been placed.

LAUGHABLE COMEDY BY GLADYS KLARK CO. The bride came and saw, but did not conquer. The plot and motion of this screamingly funny comedy had best be exhibited by the players themselves, and it to-night's rendition is as good as last night's then this week will have been ended in laughter for those who attend the Casino, to see Miss Ellen Andrews in the role of "the Bride". There is a swing with this play that carries the audience along with it through every line of the dialogue, and every action of motion, and the performers themselves live their parts. The chief characters in the cast are Carlton (Mr. Fred Carmel), Sinclair (Mr. Louis Lytton), Fred Tite (Mr. Leroy H. Bailey), Benson (a lawyer) Mr. LeRoy Kenneth, Miss Gladys Klark gave an excellent portrayal of Ethel Sinclair, while Miss Dot E. Jewel as her sister Nora was an able second. Miss Nita Pearl as a Buenos Aires senora was great. Mr. J. E. Balfour as D'Alvarez, and Mr. W. Everaine as Serris, both from Buenos Aires were quite at home in their parts. Ashley (Mr. Harry P. Ford) made a good bit as the inventor-creator of "Tite", while "Awkins the English butler" was impeccably played by Mr. Harry Ford. Judge Husbelt, who was made up by Mr. Harry "Suzar" Serris, a whole lot of fun by his stammering ability to marry couples on short notice. Altogether "Here Comes the Bride" is the best yet. The C.L.B.C. Band rendered the usual fine musical selections, the overture being "Here Comes the Bride". On Monday night "The Confession" will be put on, by request.

Let the Women Tell Their Story

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 179 Dublin St., Peterboro', Ont., writes: "My daughter of 15 lost appetite, color and was on the verge of nervous collapse. Five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food completely restored her health and strength."

Mrs. Wm. Woods, Coldwater, Ont., writes: "After the birth of my baby I was run down, nervous and could not eat nor sleep, jumping at the least noise. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food built me up and made me strong and well again."

Mrs. H. Alchorn, 23 Gerald St., Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food was recommended to me by an aunt who used it while passing through the change of life and was completely built up by its use."

Mrs. Jos. Lalonde, Hydro Glen, Ont., writes: "I was so run down and nervous last summer that I was in bed most of the time. After using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I am able to do my housework and, though 76 years old, feel better than I have for years."

"From my experience as a wife and mother I find that the majority of users of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are women, especially women passing through the change of life; next by young mothers to regain strength after baby comes, and also by mothers for their young daughters entering their womanhood. While it is good for all classes of humanity, I am sure it is especially so for women, as they seem to be troubled most by nervous diseases."—Mrs. H. Alchorn, 23 Gerald Street, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Every woman is interested in another woman's letters, and we shall give the women a chance to present their experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by quoting from their letters.

If you do not find anyone you know among these ladies, write us for references from people in your community, or ask your friends and neighbors for particulars about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

There is scarcely a town, village or hamlet in this great country but can produce splendid evidence as to the restorative, upbuilding influence of this well-known treatment for the blood and nerves.

Mrs. Jennie Haywood, 98 Turner St., Ottawa, Ont.: "After 16 weeks in a hospital with rheumatic fever I returned home a complete nervous wreck. I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and have had no return of nervous trouble or rheumatism."

Mrs. W. H. McIntyre, Gananoque, Ont.: "About five years ago I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when in a state of absolute collapse, and continued its use until I had taken fourteen boxes. I cannot praise it enough, for it worked a miracle in my case."

Mrs. May W. Taylor, 1309 Davie Street, Vancouver, B.C.: "Ten of my circle told me that they take Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for that all-in feeling attendant on the care of children and performance of housework. I myself take it for nervous irritability, and absolutely depend on it. I give my children the Nerve Food during 'examination week,' and am sure it helps them."

Mrs. Annie Bellamy, 12 Pauline Avenue, Toronto, Ont.: "Since the 'flu' epidemic people are resorting to preventive measures more than ever, and find that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food gives protection against the 'flu' and all other germ diseases."

Mrs. W. H. Stoker, 88 Robert Street, Hamilton, Ont.: "A young mother told me she was so glad I advised her to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after her baby was born. She had tried many things, but after no success with them I told her just how much benefit I had gained with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so she also used it with the same wonderful results."

Mrs. R. I. Scott, Teacher, Clear, Alta.: "After teaching school for two years my nerves were in a shattered condition, and I had almost incessant headaches. The doctor told me I would have to quit, but a teacher friend told me how she was restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food under similar conditions. My nerves were completely restored, so that I thoroughly enjoy life."

Mrs. John O'Donnell, 50 Colonial Street, St. John, Nfld.: "While some used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for run-down condition, ragged nerves and sleeplessness, there was one ailment which predominated—nervous headache. In combating nervous headache Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has no rival."

Is gentle in action and wonderfully potent in forming new, rich blood and building up the nervous system.

It is woman's greatest friend at every critical stage in her life and is endorsed by women everywhere. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

THRILLING TALE OF LOSS AT SEA.

(Acadian Recorder)

A most thrilling account of a shipwreck on the coast of Newfoundland was published in the Recorder near the close of 1816. On the night of the 10th November, the transport "Harpooner," Joseph Bryant, from Quebec, bound to England, was totally lost at St. Shott's near Cape Pine (where H. M. ship "Comus," Capt. Bramer, had been wrecked before). The following particulars of the sad event were given:

"The Harpooner sailed from Quebec, having on board 385 men, women and children, independent of the ship's company, principally the 4th Royal Veteran Battalion under command of Captain Prime and Lieut. Myrles, one of the oldest subalterns in His Maesty's service. He was 70 years of age, and was the last person who quitted the wreck, having remained there 19 hours. His daughter was drowned in his arms. There were also on board detachments of the Royal Artillery, Artillery Drivers, 70th, 76th, 99th, 102nd, DeVatteville's and O'Leary's Fencibles, under the command of Captain Willock, 103rd Regiment. Many of these soldiers had fought in the American war and a number were still suffering from wounds. The Harpooner had moderate weather down the River and Gulf, and at the time she went on shore was going about 5 knots; supposing they had been much to the eastward, the fog for several days had prevented an observation being taken. She struck about 9 o'clock at night, when the master, calling all hands forward, brought the vessel by the head and occasioned her to swing round, with her stern to the shore. The wind increased in violence and blew a heavy gale; the masts were cut away, and the large boats stove to pieces soon after she struck. The stern boat having been lowered down, some of the crew succeeded in getting on shore, but could not return through the great surf. The vessel lay on her beam ends, and the sea made a passage over her. At this time she took fire in the cabin by the candle or some spirits and by the fire from the cabin stove. The water soon extinguished it. The people collected on deck, clinging to the weather side and other parts of the ship, forming a solid mass.

After many fruitless attempts they at last succeeded in getting a rope on shore from the stern by tying it to a dog, which happened to be on board, who swam with it to the shore about daylight—when the strongest made their way over the heads of the rest, to take advantage of the only means left to save themselves by this rope. Many perished on the deck; others were washed overboard with part of the wreck when the ship fell to pieces about 11 o'clock in the morning. Her parting was noticed by those on shore, and signified by them with the most dreadful cry of "Go forward!" it is difficult to paint the horrors of the scene: Children clinging to their parents for help; parents themselves struggling with death, and stretching out their feeble arms to save their children within their grasp. After getting on shore the survivors remained on the rocks for the night, and next day found a house about a mile distant, occupied by a fisherman, who could afford them no other relief but fire and shelter, and that but for a few. A couple of the military officers, with the master of the vessel, succeeded in getting to Trepassay, and at once sent back provisions for the rest. The man who carried the timely aid returned with the survivors to Trepassay, through a morass of 15 miles. This walk, in their weak state, was almost more than the poor sufferers could stand. Two hundred and eight of the total number of passengers—385—on board the vessel, were lost."

St. Shott's the scene of this melancholy disaster, covers the bones of many a noble craft, and many a poor

Inkerman, the Soldiers' Battle.

November 5, 1854, saw one of the most famous battles in the history of the British Army. More than any other, it was a soldier's battle and showed the courage and resourcefulness of the men of the ranks. The British and French were besieging Sebastopol, and the battle of Inkerman was really a sortie in force by the Russians. The Allies held the ridge of a confused group of hills intersected by deep ravines. The British force on the spot was only about 3,000 men, with another 3,000 within a mile and a half. They were commanded by Lord Raglan. Against this force the Russian commander Todleben sent three powerful columns, each of 15,000 men, and having between them more than 200 guns. They started in the night with muffled gun wheels, and came near the British position in the dawn of a dark and foggy morning. At last the British sentries saw the huge grey columns crawling up out of the ravines and opened fire upon them. Now the proper course would have been to withdraw the pickets, but Fennell, the general in command, was a fighting Irishman, and withdrawing was not in his line. Instead he reinforced his pickets and soon there was a series of little fights going on all along his front. Meanwhile the Russians had got some guns unlimbered, and woke up the British camp by firing shot and shell into it. Soon more British troops came into action—Scots, Fusiliers, Grenadiers and Coldstreams—and hurled back the Russian columns which threatened to drive them off the ridge. What with fog and drizzling rain and battle smoke no man could see many yards in front of him, and generally on any great scale was impossible. Fennell could occasionally be seen riding about in the fire and swearing in English and French, but for the most part the British army was broken up into little groups, each fighting their own, led by a captain or even a private. The British could not see the great numbers of the enemy and frequently thirty men would charge into several thousand of them. On the other hand the Russians did not know how few the British were. As the morning wore on it became somewhat lighter and the fire of the Russian guns became more accurate. Lord Raglan answered this by bringing up some heavy leg guns which quickly silenced the Russian artillery. By one o'clock the Russians had enough, and drew off, leaving the Allies masters of the ridge. The British and French loss was about 4,250 killed and wounded, that of the Russians more than 11,000.

Bat Masterton Falls Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25 (Canadian Press).—"Bat" Masterton, former gunner of the West, and well-known sporting writer of New York had his wish to-day. He "died with his boots on," falling dead of heart disease in the office of the Morning Telegraph, where he had acted as sporting editor for the past decade.

66 years ago, and hale and hearty to the last, "William B. Masterton" was as picturesque a figure in American life as the late Buffalo Bill. In his youth, when he lived in an atmosphere of "survival of the fittest," Masterton adopted as his motto "never to forget a friend or forgive an enemy." He carried out this axiom to the end. In the frontier days "Bat" is supposed to have killed twenty-five or thirty men in gun fights. The fact is that he did kill a number of so-called bad men who acted as Marshall of Dodge City. If he hadn't, they would have killed him. The only gun exploit of which Masterton talked in later years was his avenging the death of his brother, who was killed by four drunken cowboys who rode into Dodge City to shoot up the town. "Bat" killed all four of them before the night was over. That was back in 1878.

was at last persuaded to eat the forbidden fruit, a piece of the apple stuck in his throat, and every man now possesses this as a warning to be wary of women.

Ten Commandments for Motoring.

The following rules might properly be termed the Ten Commandments for motorists and, it is observed, indicate the good driver.

- 1—Be courteous. If a man wants to pass you on the road, give him room.
- 2—Put out your hand before you stop or turn. An old rule—perhaps that has been forgotten it.
- 3—Top the front wheels in toward the curb, or block them with a stone, when parking on a hill. No kind providence looks after standing automobiles.
- 4—If a driver passes you when you are going as fast as you think you will reach your destination soon enough; he may never get to his.
- 5—Keep at least fifteen feet behind the car ahead when driving in traffic. Your radiator is not indestructible—neither is his gas tank.
- 6—You may get home a minute earlier if you fail to stop. Look and Listen at the railroad crossing. The minutes you save are nothing compared with the extra years you may have to spend in eternity.
- 7—If some speed enthusiast tries to pass you with a curve close ahead or another car approaching, slow up and watch the fireworks.
- 8—Be generous. Let the fellow who is coming uphill have the right of way. It's no fun climbing a long hill in low gear.
- 9—Use diplomacy. Give the other fellow the benefit of the doubt (especially if it happens to be heavier than you). You may have a perfectly good case—but there may be nothing left of you to collect the damages.
- 10—There's no law against running slow when the road is not clear ahead. At twenty miles an hour you are going twenty-nine feet a second—and even the best brakes cannot operate instantaneously.

Mr. Churchill Asked to Explain.

(From London Daily Mail)
At Dundee Mr. Churchill urged that the disastrous influence of war debt on current trade must somehow be neutralised in order to give industry a fresh start. To-day we are told that Mr. Churchill has reached the conclusion that "no nation lies only along the lines of the stabilisation of exchanges by the mutual remission of debt. He is even against large reparation payment from Germany."
If Mr. Churchill really has come to this conclusion, his countrymen will expect him to state clearly and without undue delay the reasons which have led him to it. He has only just returned from a visit to France. We doubt whether anything that he may have been told in that country can have encouraged him to form the opinion attributed to him, but it will be all to the good if he will tell us plainly what he has in his mind.

While we on our side are striving to restore trade and employment, Germany on her side is full active. Following the Wiesbaden agreement, under which Germany is to supply goods and materials for rebuilding devastated France, Dr. Wirth, the Imperial Chancellor, is apparently feeling his way towards a similar agreement with Great Britain, under which Germany would pay part of her debt to this country also in goods.
That won't do at all.
German-made goods sent to this country on such terms would take the bread even out of the mouths of those British workers who are fortunate enough to be in employment. The problem before the Government to-day is to reopen the markets for British goods. Any German proposal to flood this country with goods made on a collapsed currency as a debt-payment could only, if accepted, have the effect of checking the recovery of our trade and of making our unemployment problem still worse.

Who Was "Jack the Ripper?"

Among all the mysteries of the British police, covering a period of several centuries, there is none which surpasses that of "Jack the Ripper," the name applied to someone who was guilty of the series of atrocious Whitechapel murders in London—no fewer than a dozen persons being killed in cold blood and under circumstances which made it apparent that the same man had been concerned in each case.
The throats of the victims were cut, while each of the twelve women who were killed had been mutilated in precisely the same manner, indicating at least an elementary knowledge of anatomy and surgery.
But this clue, which was followed by the police unceasingly during the five years in which the murders occurred, was the only indication as to the identity of the murderer ever discovered by the hundreds of detectives, amateur and professional, who worked upon the different cases.

Killed Them Without Cause.

No matter how closely the police investigated the lives of the murdered women or how thoroughly they searched the surrounding sections of London, they were unable to lay their hands on the slightest trace of the man who apparently slashed and killed without cause; the man who was named "Jack the Ripper" by the newspapers which reported the crimes and whose nicknames sent a shiver of terror through two continents—for his blood-thirsty exploits were detailed by the Press of America as well as that of England.
When after the fifth crime had been committed, it became apparent that the police were unable to put a stop to the wholesale slaughter, many of the most prominent citizens of the British capital enlisted in the pursuit, and applied their amateur talents to following "clues" of their own discovering.
Even one of the directors of a world-famous bank went so far as to disguise himself as a labourer, haunting the places where "Jack the Ripper" would be expected to show himself, but without avail.

The murders continued unabated, no fewer than seven of them occurring in one year, while the twelfth took place more than fourteen months after the eleventh.
One of the semi-professional investigators was L. Forbes Winslow, the celebrated criminologist, who spent night after night in the Whitechapel district and even inserted advertisements in London papers, worded so as to attract the attention of the "Ripper." There were several replies to these advertisements, all of them purporting to be from the criminal, though they were in widely different handwriting.

"Jack's" Last Murder.

This, however, was the last of the series of crimes, for a slip of paper was found near the unfortunate victim bearing the words: "Jack the Ripper will never commit another periodical epilepsy."
Dr. Winslow himself declared that he was certain from an examination of the handwriting in his possession that the "Ripper" was a man of education and apparent refinement, possibly a member of one of London's leading clubs, who was subject to fits of insanity. But if so, how could he definitely predict that the true murderer would be his last?
This, however, is only one of the minor questions in a case which attracted worldwide attention, and

NOVEMBER.

Novembris was the name given, the ninth month of the old Roman year, which began with March, and hence November has been retained throughout all the changes in the calendar, although its name at present is a misnomer, it being the eleventh month. The 11th day of November was held to mark the beginning of winter, by the early Romans and a sacred banquet to Jupiter was held on the 13th. The Anglo-Saxon name for this month was Blot-month, or "blood month," meaning the month in which oxen, sheep and swine were slaughtered and afterwards salted down for winter use. Some idea of the enormous number of animals thus killed may be gathered from the fact that the elder Spencer in the year 1327, when the season was over had a surplus, in May, of "80 salted beaves, 500 bacons and 600 muttons." November is the month of Indian Summer, one of the best descriptions of which was published in the "National Intelligencer" of November 26, 1857, and was printed to settle a dispute on the matter between readers of that publication. We give it in full as it is as equally interesting and informative to-day as it was sixty-four years ago:

"The short season of pleasant weather, usually occurring about the middle of November, is called Indian Summer from the custom of the Indians to avail themselves of this delightful time for harvesting their corn and the tradition is that they were accustomed to say they always had a second summer of nine days just before the winter set in.

"It is a bland and genial time, in which the birds, insects and plants feel a new creation and sport a short-lived summer ere they shrink finally from the rigor of the winter's blast. The sky in the meantime is generally filled with a haze of orange and gold intercepting the direct rays of the sun, yet possessing enough light and heat to prevent sensations of gloom or chill while the days grow sharp and frosty and the nights give cheerful forecast of the social winter evenings near at hand."

The principal November festivals in the ecclesiastical calendar are: All Saints Day on the 1st, All Souls Day on the 2nd, St. Martin's on the 11th, Presentation of the Virgin on the 21st, St. Cecilia's on the 22nd, St. Catherine's on the 25th and St. Andrew's (Scotland's Patron Saint) on the 30th. All Saints Day or All Hallows was probably celebrated by Pope Boniface IV., 607 A.D., in the Pantheon and added to the calendar by Pope Gregory IV., 830. It is in commemoration of all the Saints and Martyrs to whom no particular day had been assigned. All Souls Day is a festival instituted by Odilo, Abbot of Cluny, who died 1048, to commemorate the souls of the faithful departed. In the chronological record for November there is a wealth of events. The death list shows the passing of many famous men, John Milton dying on the 8th, 1674; Sir Stanley Maude (chevalier sans peur et sans reproche) on the 19th, 1917; Richard Hakluyt, voyager on the 23rd, 1616; Sir Henry Havelock of Indian Mutiny fame on the 25th, 1857; Sir Robert Ball (astronomer) on the same day, 1917, and Cardinal Wolsey on the 28th, 1830. In geographical discoveries, that of Tasmania occurred on the 24th, 1642, while in Engineering the Suez Canal was opened on the 16th, 1869. The frustrating of Gunpowder Plot (1605) is commemorated on the 5th—Bonfire Night or Guy Fawkes' Night—and the landing of William of Orange at Torbay took place on that date, 1688. In early history it is recorded that the Domesday Book of William the Norman, was completed on the 15th one year before his death, viz., 1086. The Battle of Inkerman (Crimean War) the "Soldiers' Battle," was fought on the 6th, 1854. Colenso and Modder River (South African War) on the 15th and 28th respectively, 1899, while Mandalay (Burmese War) was occupied by the British on the 28th, 1885. From amongst the historical battles and incidents of the Great War, the following, as being of most importance, are selected: Naval engagement off Coronel (Chilian Coast) when German squadron destroyed Sir Christopher Craddock's ships, on the 1st, 1914; German cruiser Emden, sunk by His Majesty's Australian ship Sydney on the 9th, 1914; abdication and flight of Kaiser William the 10th, 1918; Armistice Day, 11th, 1918 and German Fleet surrendered voluntarily on the 21st, 1918. In the United States the 29th of this month is observed as a general day of Thanksgiving and is kept as a whole holiday throughout the Union. November therefore is, as has been said, rich in records, and chiefly so perhaps because of the fact that it is the month of the laying down of their arms by the Germans in the fated year of 1918.

The Use of Tact. Last week I was very glad to meet, once again, an old friend of mine, Skipper John H., a well-to-do planter hailing from the North side of Conception Bay. Skipper John is in the habit of making periodical trips to St. John's on business, and while here, generally spends some time in the mercantile district needed for his large growing family. He has a great eye for a bargain and finds strange delight when time permits in wandering in and out of stores viewing the different lines of goods that storekeepers have to offer. When he chances upon something that appeals to him, he buys it readily expounded to me his method of dealing with people who bother him by buy articles he doesn't want. He explained that he put off the persistent would-be-salesman by asking for some improbable article, such as a pair of Ladies' Rubbers, No. 12. After two or three enquiries of that nature he is generally left alone to continue his exploration in peace.

"The First Five Hundred."

A HISTORY OF THE IMMORTALS. The history of the first five hundred, the gallant "Blue Puttees" of glorious memory, has at last been written and comes to us in the form of a most elaborately bound and printed book. The volume was compiled by R. J. Cramm, himself, a soldier, and is published by C. F. Williams and Son, Inc., of Albany, New York, U.S.A. It is printed on highly glazed paper and each page has a border in pearl grey, consisting of the following inscription: "Royal Newfoundland Regiment, 1914-1918." The crest of the regiment is at the top of each page. A review of the text will appear later but a cursory glance through the pages assures us that a better history of the first five hundred will not be written.

A Midnight Blaze. Last midnight the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to Henry Street where a slight blaze was discovered in the store owned by Mr. W. Barrett. Very little damage was done the premises and the "all out" was rung in about 15 minutes after the alarm. The cause of the blaze was an uninculcated portion of lighting wire coming into contact with some workwork.

MINARD'S LINIMENT LUMBER-MAN'S FRIEND. On motion of H. A. Winter for plaintiff and by consent of F. A. Mears for defendant this matter is set for Thursday, December 8th.

Feildian Club Meeting. HOCKEY OFFICERS ELECTED. A general meeting of the Feildian Club was held last night in Bishop Feild College Hall, and officers for the coming hockey season were elected. They are as follows: Captain, T. V. Payne; Vice-Captain, M. G. Winter; Manager and League Delegates, H. V. Hutchings; Secretary, H. C. Hayward. Amongst other matters discussed at the meeting was the dance which will be held toward the end of the month. The Club executive held a short meeting after the general meeting was over.

Wreck Picked Up. A vessel which is believed to be the Mary Flood owned by William Harris & Son, Long Beach, was picked up on Saturday last at Charlston, B.E. There was nothing on board of any value. It is believed that the vessel was driven out of Long Beach harbor during the storm and struck Dock Rock in her drift.

"The First Five Hundred."

A HISTORY OF THE IMMORTALS. The history of the first five hundred, the gallant "Blue Puttees" of glorious memory, has at last been written and comes to us in the form of a most elaborately bound and printed book. The volume was compiled by R. J. Cramm, himself, a soldier, and is published by C. F. Williams and Son, Inc., of Albany, New York, U.S.A. It is printed on highly glazed paper and each page has a border in pearl grey, consisting of the following inscription: "Royal Newfoundland Regiment, 1914-1918." The crest of the regiment is at the top of each page. A review of the text will appear later but a cursory glance through the pages assures us that a better history of the first five hundred will not be written.

A Midnight Blaze. Last midnight the Central and East End Fire Companies were called to Henry Street where a slight blaze was discovered in the store owned by Mr. W. Barrett. Very little damage was done the premises and the "all out" was rung in about 15 minutes after the alarm. The cause of the blaze was an uninculcated portion of lighting wire coming into contact with some workwork.

MINARD'S LINIMENT LUMBER-MAN'S FRIEND. On motion of H. A. Winter for plaintiff and by consent of F. A. Mears for defendant this matter is set for Thursday, December 8th.

Body of Nfld.-American Soldier on Rosalind. The American authorities have notified the relatives of the late Private Kennedy of Hr. Grace that his body is being brought home on the Rosalind, due Monday morning. Arrangements are being made to convey the body of our gallant countryman from the pier to the Railway Station in transit to his home in Hr. Grace. A representation from the G. W. V. A. will accompany the cortege, and it is hoped that all service men and the public who have an opportunity will attend the funeral. Further information will be given in the Daily News on Monday morning as to the time set for the funeral. Anyone who desires to forward a wreath can have same addressed c/o the G. W. V. A. office, where it will be cared for and placed upon the casket immediately prior to the funeral.

Wreck Picked Up. A vessel which is believed to be the Mary Flood owned by William Harris & Son, Long Beach, was picked up on Saturday last at Charlston, B.E. There was nothing on board of any value. It is believed that the vessel was driven out of Long Beach harbor during the storm and struck Dock Rock in her drift.

GRAND CARNIVAL, Prince's Rink, on Wednesday next, Nov. 9th. See A. McNamara's window, Water Street, with the display of twenty prizes to pick from, and all beauties.

Bible Class Programme. The programme committee of George Street Adult Bible Class has finalized a very attractive programme of addresses, debates and Bible studies to cover the period beginning to-morrow and ending March 3, 1922. The special item scheduled for to-morrow is an address "The Present Status of Prohibition" by Mayor Morris, and we bespeak for the Class a very interesting discourse.

The Use of Tact. Last week I was very glad to meet, once again, an old friend of mine, Skipper John H., a well-to-do planter hailing from the North side of Conception Bay. Skipper John is in the habit of making periodical trips to St. John's on business, and while here, generally spends some time in the mercantile district needed for his large growing family. He has a great eye for a bargain and finds strange delight when time permits in wandering in and out of stores viewing the different lines of goods that storekeepers have to offer. When he chances upon something that appeals to him, he buys it readily expounded to me his method of dealing with people who bother him by buy articles he doesn't want. He explained that he put off the persistent would-be-salesman by asking for some improbable article, such as a pair of Ladies' Rubbers, No. 12. After two or three enquiries of that nature he is generally left alone to continue his exploration in peace.

GRAND CARNIVAL, Prince's Rink, on Wednesday next, Nov. 9th. The decorations will be worth the money. A regular Fairy Garden; Chinese Lanterns, Balloons, Confetti, Flags, Colored Lights, Trees, etc.

Helping Housewives. The Telegram Guides Women Shoppers.

As an informative guide to women shoppers, and a correct index to ruling prices, the Telegram is now filling a long-felt want, and its pages of interesting advertisements are daily perused by shoppers of both sexes. These advertisements are all displayed in a manner which is bound to attract attention and they offer for sale everything that a woman shopper could possibly want. From the full page and other large advertisements for wearing apparel, groceries and other household necessities down to the smallest want ad, there is always something of interest to the housewife. In short, no more reliable guide than the advertising columns of the Telegram could be found by those who have to see that every dollar is expended to the very best advantage. ARTICLE XI

ROMANCE OF PIONEER DAYS. The above topic has been purposefully chosen for the closing article of a series of our Week-End Notes...

REAL LIFE ROMANCE.

But these things only represent the more material side of pioneer life; and while they are full of interest, they fall short of that romance which is embodied in some love tale of the pioneers themselves.

These conditions tended to create a life of daring among the more venturesome of the colonists, and in cases where love was the incentive, the results were laughable as well as pathetic. The story of the Old World seemed to expel thousands of the people. Thus with many it was a case of necessity; but each case had its own history; and was instrumental in making us what we are.

Of Interest to Horsemen.

It will be interesting to those who have patronized "Burt Axworthy 2,683," Department of Agriculture, to know that his fine young daughter Edith Axworthy 2,244, took this mark at the conclusion of her maiden races over a slow half mile track in October. It is therefore reasonable to assume that some fast young animals will result in his coming to this country.

Nomenclature and Geography.

Dear Sir.—A notice relative to the changing of the name of Horse Cove to that of St. Thomas has been issued on recommendation of the Nomenclature Committee. It describes Horse Cove as being near Portugal Cove, Conception Bay. Now Portugal Cove is in St. John's East. About four miles west is St. Phillips (formerly Broad Cove) in St. John's West. A mile or two further West is Horse Cove in the District of Harbour Main.

Experience of a Telegrapher

And Some Reminiscences.

(H. F. SHORTLIFF.)

The present published in the Evening Telegram, during the recent few days, a small craft had been driven out to sea, and had to buffet with wind and waves, and I remember that I was a young telegraph operator in the seventies of the last century. I have told the story many times, but I am sure it will bear repetition, and here it is:—

Perhaps the most interesting episodes of the dead past, then, the telegraph operator of the early days of the Island of Newfoundland. Go back to the days of the New York Newfoundland, London Telegraph Company when operators were few and far between—stationed from Cape Race to Cape Ray—the labor and miscellaneous expenses of those days would, in themselves, fill a very large volume, and to do full justice to such a task would require the words of such experienced telegraphers as the late Superintendent, M. Mackay or Alexander Saunders—or repairer William Tobin, at present hale and hearty after over fifty years connected with telegraph construction in this country. Wm. Tobin and Wm. Savin are now the only remaining connecting links of the old school, who saw telegraphy in its cradle, and who taking it by the hand helped it over the numerous difficulties, until it has attained its present position of connecting the two hemispheres—the Old World and the New. All their old associate telegraphers such as Abbott, Lerner, Goswami, Henderson, Lilly, George Lemoine and Tom Foley, have passed away. It is impossible for me, in one article, to compare the present condition of telegraphic communication with that in practice when Stott, Henshaw, Jim Hagen, Adam Martin and I were the last of the Old Guard to be over half a century ago.

I remember when a single line was strung in many places, under the name of "wire", and insulators were made of zinc and other materials, and were nearly as large as the old-fashioned coffee-mills. The late Superintendent, William Tobin, who was my mentor, and who, from his experiences in the old West Line, was a man of the old school, and who, in the various anecdotes that he told me, and the numerous matters that have come under my hand, I have decided to write, which shall never be forgotten, which emphasizes the fact that the old days were indeed a time of trial, and that the telegrapher of that time was indeed a man of the old school, and that the telegrapher of that time was indeed a man of the old school, and that the telegrapher of that time was indeed a man of the old school.

packed to its utmost capacity. Scores of people drove from all the neighboring towns and settlements in sleighs or walked the distance; in fact, by any and every means, so as to be in time for the performance. Hundreds had to go away from the doors, not being able to gain admittance. There was not a kink in any of the proceedings. The talent of the performers was well-known and their fame as musicians had penetrated every town in the Island. Seven o'clock came—the curtain was to rise at eight, sharp. I remember, it was a cold, foggy evening, the wind being about southeast, with rain and snow at intervals. I believe that I was the only person in the town at work that evening, but I had made arrangements as to a mode of admission by a private door, should I be detained too late on duty. The hands of the clock were drawing towards the appointed time, and I called up St. John's office to let me off, five or ten minutes earlier than usual, as there was nothing doing—all hands being at the hall. That was all right; but before I finish this part of the story, I must describe where I was, also the respective surroundings. The Drug Store and Telegraph Office were under the same roof. The former was closed at an early hour, and any person requiring to enter the office should ring the bell at the hall door, and, if he had business, pass through the hall, inside the shop counter, and into the office, which had a glass door, and also a wicket about four and a half feet high. This wicket was the last entrance to the office. No person but one of the household or privileged person, would dream of entering without ringing the door-bell, or knocking at the outside door entering the shop. There, in array, stood scores of bottles, of all sizes and shapes, like grim sentinels guarding the entrances, and dangerous customers were those silent sentinels for a person to interfere with. In a word they contained drugs—from the simple opium salts up to deadly poison—from the sweet perfume of attar-of-roses to the villainous assafoetida. The gas in the shop was turned on, so as to give me sufficient light to get out and lock the door. I have now endeavored to describe my position and the surroundings. Ten minutes to eight, by the clock, and I wished St. John's office "good night," fixed myself for the road, and as lively as a merry widow for a second marriage, I lowered the gas, so as just to leave the boss sufficient light when he would come in after the performance, and made for the entrance. Great Scott! Shall I ever forget it? There, leaning on the wicket, was the face and form of Skipper Charlie Matthews, his face aglow with good-nature and dirt; his teeth shining like polished ivory, and his eyes scintillating with happiness—the whites being more than ordinarily visible, owing to the outward coating of black. There he was with his unkempt hair, a broad grin illuminating his visage. I don't think I'm able to describe my feelings. I am sure I am not. I remember something went through me like a current from half a dozen galvanic batteries; my upper and lower jaws clapped together like a rat-trap by hair stood out like porcupine quills (or at least I thought so); my face must have been like marble, while my legs refused to support my body and my hands and arms refused to move. I must have presented a pretty picture!

NO GHOST, BUT SOLID FLESH.

What happened for a short time I know not; yet it seemed a life-time. There I was staring at Skipper Charlie's ghost, as I thought, with eyes glassy, unable to move, a fit model for one of the idols for a Brahmin temple, should one be started. I was as cold as ice. Skipper Charlie laughed heartily, reached out his hand, which I had not the power to take at the time, and, in a stentorian voice, so well remembered by me, exclaimed,—"How is yer, Mr. S.—mortal starmy wedder we's 'avin—how be all the folks?" Somehow I managed to get to a chair, and fall into it—still keeping my glassy eyes riveted on the ghost. I said I had no power to describe my feelings, and I shall not attempt it; the reader's imagination must do the rest. However, everything is bound to have an ending, and it was so, with my trance. By the kindness and assistance of Skipper Charlie, I rose from the chair to circulate the news over the wires, but not a letter could I make for a long time. When I did so, somehow, such seemed incredible to those at the office at Hearst's Content. But at last I convinced them that Skipper Charlie was alive and kicking, and at my elbow at the time. Then messages were despatched in all directions, people were called out of their beds (people in outports retire early), salves of musketry and artillery rang out, and the clergyman hurried to tell the glad tidings to the sorrow-stricken families. There was not an eye closed in the neighborhood for that night.

THRILLING RESCUE.

In the meantime, Charlie, in his own imitable manner, described his adventures to me. The night after leaving they encountered a heavy gale of wind. The canvas was torn in atoms from the bolt rope, and the little vessel was at the mercy of the wind and waves. They were drifting about for four or five days, when they were seen by the brigantine Arctic. Capt. Grestie Foot, which sailed from Harbour Grace some days after they were taken on board (more too soon for the Flash was sinking) and brought to the West Indies. It must be remembered there was no direct telegraph communication with West Indies in those days. In the night of the concert, the Arctic arrived in port, the boat was launched, and skipper Charlie was landed immediately opposite the Telegraph Office, and having the run of the house, noiselessly entered the office, to give me one of the greatest freights it has ever been in my experience to undergo. After a few minutes, and taking the necessary stimulants for strengthening our nerves—his being overtaxed with laughing, whilst mine were sprung amander with fright—we proceeded to the hall, to make an interesting addition to the audience. As we entered, it was then the cheering, clapping of hands, etc., were indulged in. People could not believe their eyes. The concert had to be cut short—the history of the voyage, escape and arrival had to be given, and it was late at night when we dispersed to dream of the well remembered by me, exclaimed,—"How is yer, Mr. S.—mortal starmy wedder we's 'avin—how be all the folks?" Somehow I managed to get to a chair, and fall into it—still keeping my glassy eyes riveted on the ghost. Herring Fishery.

There was very good herring fishing at French Island and vicinity on Monday.

It was reported on Monday that the price of herring commenced at $3 per barrel from the nets.

Herring have entered Humber Arm, and there were two tubs to the fleet yesterday off Davis Cove.

One to two tubs of herring were taken at Melvers on Monday. Many of the fish, however, were badly eaten by squid.

At Middle Arm on Monday one boat secured fifty tubs of herring and other boats who had gear set, did well. There were only a few nets, however, set.

The schooner Donald Silver will take salt bulk herring.

The schooner T. M. Nicholson, Capt. N. Ross is loading bulk codfish at Port aux Basques.

The schooner Judica, Capt. J. Hackett, is at Wood's Island. We understand she will take away a cargo of herring for her owners.

There was a sign of herring at Green Island and Red Rocks on Friday, boats getting from about half a tub to a tub per feet and at Middle Arm on Sunday boats had from eight to ten tubs. The herring on Sunday were up to Wossil Cove. The storm prevented the hauling of the nets on Saturday, and when the storm abated the fishermen who had gear set went out and picked them—Western Star.

Luggage Law.

The railways have always urged that "ordinary luggage" is personal luggage, and not articles carried for profit in the passenger's business. Judges, however, do not seem able to make up their minds on the subject. For instance, in the Westminster County Court, it was held that a sewing machine was personal luggage, yet in an earlier case the decision was just the opposite.

There is always a similar doubt about a typewriter, and most companies have been in the habit of charging excess upon them.

One thing is very certain—the railways can legally refuse to carry household goods as personal luggage. You as a passenger, cannot carry a pair of blankets as your own luggage. The companies have been upheld in their refusal to carry children's toys as personal luggage, but as a matter of fact it is only rocking horses and similar bulky toys to which the objection is made.

An interesting point is this—that a servant may not take his employer's goods with him as his own luggage. Of course, this is done, and, so long as the articles are not overweight, no objection is made by the company's servants, but if such luggage is lost, the company is not liable for compensation.

You know Clara Green, don't you? WELL SHE WANTED TO BE A NURSE. SHE WAS SIMPLY TRYING TO APE A SISTER OF MINE. However, she left for Toronto taking her maid Topsy to carry her baggage. When they got to the station she turned back and SHE RAN SO FAST TOSPY RUFFURED A BLOOD VESSEL IN HER LEG. However Clara came on the train right behind me. What do you think happened? SHE TUMBLED AND FELL FELL-AMEL ON HER BAGGAGE. Isn't that funny? I BET SHE WANTED TO BAN A NASTY ENGINER FOR JERKING THE TRAIN SO. She soon got herself in order and reached her seat safely. SHE TOOK OUT A BOOK BY CHARLES LAMBS READ A PAGE AND FELL ASLEEP. On arriving in Toronto she works with a start, and hurried off. Her baggage was heavy and

FIND ABOVE THE NAMES OF 12 ARTICLES SOLD IN A GROCERY STORE

John Simpson was amazed when he read the above letter, which Betty Beatty had headed "Dear Mr. Simpson". He hid the names of each article I've come to buy in each of the "underlined" words. "Well," said Simpson, "I'll find the names of a dozen articles in my store, that is mentioned in your note." "Of course you can't," said Betty. "I've hidden one in each, and you must find them in each sentence. The letters aren't joined and all you have to do is to start on the letter 'B' in the fifth word of the first sentence.

Fatal Case for Witnesses

LONG DRAWN OUT SUIT MAY GO TO PRIVEY COUNCIL

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. (Canadian Press)—The recent decision of the supreme court in favor of the heirs of Captain J. Alexander and the notice of appeal, which it is believed will take the case ultimately before the Privy Council, marked another stage in the long-drawn out legal battle waged for control of the famous engineer gold mine claims. The claims are on the east side of Taku Arm, fifteen miles from Atlin, B.C., and are said to be the richest in free gold in the world, with a valuation of three million dollars. The defendants in the case were James Alcea Fraser, administrator of Captain Alexander's estate and of the estate of Allen I. Smith, sole beneficiary of Alexander, and also Veda Smith, wife of Allen Smith; Louisa Smith, his mother, and Charles C. Smith, his brother. The plaintiffs were the Engineering Mining Company, consisting of 150 shareholders and His Majesty's attorney-general for British Columbia.

The decision in favor of Alexander's heirs was given on the ground that certain requirements of the Mineral Act were not complied with before commencing the action. The plaintiffs alleged that the late Captain Alexander and his associates "dumped" the claims, and that although the defendants might have an apparently good Crown grant, this claim was nevertheless based upon a trespass in the first place; and that so long as the root of the title was bad the whole structure fell to the ground. On the other hand, the defendants rested their case largely on the regularity of the proceedings, and the opportunity afforded the plaintiffs to object in the early stages and their acquiescence during a long period of years.

Six of the leading witnesses in the case met death during the course of the legal struggle. Captain Alexander and his wife went down on the Princess Sophia, wrecked on Vancouver Reef. Alexander's heir, Allen I. Smith, committed suicide in Philadelphia in 1919. Edwin Brown, secretary for the shareholders, disappeared mysteriously

MY COLUMN

AUCTION SALES

Whenever I am at a loss for some means of amusing myself, I go to an auction sale and I can safely say that this source of entertainment has never yet failed me. I have often wondered why more people do not follow my example when they are at a loose end, for the worst ground could not possibly be bored at a sale. And not only does one find amusement there, but there is even sufficient material for the most advanced student of human nature. Believe me, I know, it is seldom that one goes to an auction without finding a huge crowd there. A market place is to an auction sale what Charlie Chaplin's monstrosity is to a Bolshevik's whistles. In no other place could one find such a dense, seething, chattering, excited mass of femininity. No woman can resist an auction sale, but those who attend them are actuated by many diverse motives. Some go because they hope to be able to discuss the latest bit of scandal with an acquaintance; some because they want to see what other people buy; some go to see what clothes the rest are wearing, and some so that they may be able to talk about the bargains they nearly got; some even go so that they may obtain some topic of conversation which they can later spring on unsuspecting victims; very, very few of them go for the purpose of making purchases. Now when I make this last statement I do not want to be misunderstood, because although many women may attend the sale with the intention of acting merely as spectators, a bargain is absolutely irresistible to their sex and poor hubby realizes it when he has to write a large cheque in payment for rubbish which is relegated to the attic, there to remain forever in obscurity. Auction sales have been the cause of more family quarrels than perhaps many realize. I have seen two women bidding unheard of prices for utter rubbish, just because one wants to outdo the other. This is as true, as it may sound ridiculous. But, if I even begin to tell you about all the funny things that happen at auction sales I would use up an entire issue of the Telegram. Later, I may have more to say on the subject. (I wish all ladies to distinctly understand that I accept no responsibility for the above article.—Editor, Telegram.)

THE PLAN THAT FAILED

Bagley: "Well, Bilks, did you carry out your plan of eloping with your best girl last night?"

Bilks (evasively): "Oh, yes, I tried it."

Bagley (persistently): "Well, how did you come out?"

Bilks (desperately): "I came out, sir, escorted by a policeman, who, it seems, had been instructed to wait for me by the girl's pa."

DIPLOMACY

Father: "Now, listen to me, children; I want you to be as bad as you can be."

Jimmy: "Won't you whip us, dad?"

Father: "Not if you are very bad; but I'll whip you if you behave yourself. Grandma is coming to visit us, and I don't want her to stay long."

STUNNING RETORT

When the woman motorist was called upon to stop, she asked, indignantly, "What do you want with me?"

"You were traveling at forty miles an hour," answered the police officer.

"Forty miles an hour? Why, I haven't been out an hour," said the woman.

"Go ahead," said the officer. "That's a new one to me."—Exchange.

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You—"Excel"!

"EXCEL" Made 'All in One Piece'

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

The road is dark with reckless drivers whose cheap cars swiftly pass, and they have less than fifty cents when they have paid for gas. They got their cars where junk is sold by some unscrupulous man; they got their cars, to have and hold on the installment plan. And if they smashed my automobile, destroyed its priceless hood, they could not raise a silver bean to make the damage good. And if perchance they ran me down, and broke my costly spine, they could not raise a single crown to pay a claim of mine. Along the road their boots are hurled, for wrecks they do not care; they have no assets in the world, the damage to repair. Oh, in the future or beyond, on some bright day after, the man must drive a car. He'll have to show he can advance the roubles from his leg to pay the bill if he should chance to break some fellow's leg. He'll have to show he has the cash, the kopecks in a can, to pay the bill. It with maudlin rush he spoils my new sedan. The paupers scorch along the hill, and by the virgin wood; and if they wreck or maim or kill they can make nothing good.

HOW TO CATCH UP ON ONE'S CORRESPONDENCE.

A letter came to me the other day on which was a yellow stamp. Maybe you have had one like it. It was called a China Life Saving Stamp because it cost the writer three cents and that three cents will go to save a life for a day in the famine of China. Within the letter the writer tells me that that stamp represents a plan which she has made. She Thinks of Caring for One Person. "This is my idea. I shall make myself responsible for one person over there and see that he is fed every day. By that I mean that I shall use at least one stamp a day and thus make sure that my protégé shall not die. Now this in itself may seem like a very small thing to be doing for the starving people of China (and let me say in self-defence that it is not still I am doing) but it is systematic, and the idea of being personally responperhaps influence someone else to do likewise."

What do you think of that plan, reader friend?

We All Are, But—

Oh, I know how you feel. You are tired of wars and rumors of war, and famine and pestilence, and this appeal and that.

So am I. I feel just the way you do about it and then I hate myself for feeling that way, just the way you do.

There is No Grass Left to Eat.

But when I go on and read in my friend's letter: "In a magazine article by a writer who was in Armenia in 1919 and is in the famine district now, the writer says that conditions in Armenia were happiness and prosperity compared with China to-day. She says the Armenians ate grass, it is true, but at least they had the grass to eat. In China the grass is gone." When I read that, I say, I make up my mind that I should hate myself too much to live if I didn't do something about it.

So my letters are to carry the yellow stamp. Maybe you will get one of them. Who knows? If you do you will understand.

Terrible Accident at Reserve.

BOY OF THIRTEEN YEARS CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A horrible accident occurred at Reserve on Thursday evening, Oct. 27 according to the Sydney Record of Friday, Oct. 28th, when a young boy, Michael Finnell, 13 years old, met a frightful death by being caught in one of the large haulage rope wheels near the endless haulage engine house and being pulled down between the wheel and the inner side of the concrete guard. The boy sustained a broken neck, terrible internal injuries, besides other injuries, the whole body being almost entirely marked. Dr. J. W. Gannon and Rev. Joseph McDonald, P.P., were summoned but the little fellow was dead before he was removed from where he was caught.

The accident occurred about 6.30 p.m., as the boy and four companions named Smith, McDonald, Finlayson and Routledge were playing near the wheels. None of the boys were employees, all being quite young and were merely playing in the colliery yard. The scene of the accident was at the borehole by which the endless haulage rope used in a part of No. 10 enters the mine. Although the coal of No. 10 is hoisted to the bandhead through a shaft by cages, yet the endless haulage system is used in bringing the coal to the shaft bottom. Those ropes enter the engine house on the surface through a small borehole extending from the surface down to the mine. The wheels, by one of which the boy was killed, are for the purpose of guiding the rope as it runs from the top of the borehole to the engine house. It is said the boys were endeavoring to grasp the overhead rope for the purpose of obtaining a ride as the rope ran towards the engine house. It is believed that Finnell stood on the concrete guard at the wheel in order to grasp the rope, and in some manner slipped, his foot becoming caught by the wheel and he was dragged down into the narrow aperture. The space between the concrete side and the wheel is extremely narrow and into this the little fellow was wedged. The wheel revolves slowly but relentlessly. The engine pulling the rope which runs on this wheel is of 500 horsepower. The steam pressure available is 125 lbs., but all this was not being employed at the time, yet, the terrible, if slow, force with which this wheel was turning can be imagined.

The first known of the boy's terrible fate was when two of his companions ran into the engine house and told Engineer Alex. McLeod to stop the rope as a boy was caught in the wheel. Mr. McLeod and others were quick on the scene. With some difficulty the boy's body was removed. The accident is one of the most horrible in the history of this town.

Two Hundred Mile Dog Derby.

The Pas, Man. (Canadian Press).—Cold weather, once again revivifies The Pas 200-mile Dog Derby as a topic of conversation in this northern country, and prospects look for a record list of entries. While still many months away, February 28, 1922, being the date on which it will be run, enquiries have been received from many would-be entrants, and the line-up of eleven crack teams is practically assured, but many more contestants may yet be heard from. Many of this year's drivers, including Goyne, Dupas, Billy Winsterton, Morgan, Brancroft, Larry McKay, Sam Vranseau and Jack Hayes, have again entered. A new entrant will be Billy Rusick, of Lake Athapappuskow, but very little is known of his ability or of his team. Stuv. Bjorkman, of Vladstone, who enters annually but never shows up, is another likely entrant. An invitation has been sent to the Nome Kennel Club by the Derby committee to send teams and the Fairbanks racing drivers have also announced their intention of sending a representative.

Banner Month.

October was a banner month in the export of dry codfish, no less than 307,883 quintals having been sent out to foreign markets from St. John's, Gt. Falls and Labrador. Of this, 248,298 quintals were sent to Europe. Last October the export record was only 149,772 quintals owing to the Regulations. By the end of the year it is estimated that 900,000 quintals will have gone out, counting from August 1st, which will leave only about 400,000 out of the estimated catch of 1,300,000 quintals. Every other year the record will show that only about half the catch was sent out by New Year. This extraordinary development must have its effect on the price of fish in the coming spring, assuming the consumption will keep pace with the shipments up to the end of the year. Trade Review.

Safety First.

CARS AND PEDESTRIANS WILL BE PROTECTED.

Vancouver, B.C. (Canadian Press Mail)—Change in the rule of the road from left to right on the Lower Mainland and on Vancouver Island will come into effect at 6 a.m. on January 1, 1922. It is officially announced. The government, looking to the prevention of accidents, will provide automobile wind shield stickers in the form of an arrow, with the words "Keep to the Right." Signs with the same legend for the back of motors will also be provided. New road signs with "Keep to the Right" on them will be put up and large banners bearing the same caution will be strung across the principal streets of the cities and towns in the area affected. Pedestrians will also be looked after. All street cars will carry signs both front and rear for two weeks instructing everyone to keep to the right and permanent white lines will be painted on the downtown streets showing pedestrians the proper crossing places.

New Duties for Boards of Health.

WINNIPEG, Man. (Canadian Press).—Under the act which went into force October 1, supervision and inspection of maternity homes, boarding houses, and day nurseries in Manitoba, will be part of the duties of the provincial Board of Health. Such institutions must have permits, issued annually by the Board, and must keep a record of all particulars concerning children received. A superintendent of these homes, Miss E. Wilson, has been appointed and she will have the cooperation of the public health nurses.

Killed Monster Cougar With Rocks.

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (Canadian Press).—Armed only with rocks, Dave Vanstone, well known Vancouver lumberman, recently killed a large cougar, infuriated as a result of a rifle wound, at Valdez Island. Mr. Vanstone was in his rowboat, skirting a timber claim, when he heard calls from a hunter in the woods. Landing, he found that a settler had fired his last cartridge, and that the cougar, wounded, was showing fight and scaling in a most ferocious manner. Mr. Vanstone armed himself with two rocks and was fortunate enough to land hard with one of these on the animal's nose. The cougar was momentarily stunned and Vanstone quickly crushed its skull with a larger rock. The hunter who fired the shot, however, will collect the bounty. The cougar was eight feet six inches long, and easily the largest ever killed in the district.

Indians Strong on Soft Drinks.

(Canadian Press Mail.)
EDMONTON, ALTA.—Young Canadians have nothing on the Indians of the north country when it comes to getting away red, green, pink and yellow soda water, declares J. A. Morie, a local confectioner, who established the "further north" soda fountain at Fort Smith during the past summer. Mr. Morie took in a complete plant for the manufacture of various soft drinks and the production of these was an unending source of wonder to the aborigines. The cylinder in which the drinks were made was buried under the ground, the various liquids being piped to the store, and this enthralling process resulted in the entire Indian population being on hand just so long as the performance lasted. Hour after hour, the squaws, children and men would sit in the store and gaze steadily at the new fangled apparatus, and every few minutes a round of drinks would be in order according to color. In addition to soft drinks, the Indians are "strong" on candies and for the nonce the natives diet of straight fish and meat was tempered with confections of civilization and they are just as good at eating candies as at drinking "pop".

states Mr. Morie. Like the camel of other cities, the Indians of the north appear to have eight sets of stomachs specially constructed for the containing of liquids and when Mr. Morie left the north they were still "going strong", with apparently no idea of going out on their trap lines until such times as the total supply of lemonade, ginger pop, and candies had disappeared.

Wouldn't Go Back on a Subscriber.
Don C. Seltz, who publishes the New York World, in his "Training for the Newspaper Trade" tells this story:
When Robert H. Davis, the editor and playwright, was a boy he served as printer's devil in the office of the arson, Nevada, Appeal, of which his brother Sam was editor. Late one night a steyer were rattling the modest edition off on the Washington hand-press, a shabby little man crept in and asked if there were any old clothes about that "a feller" might have. The books in the rear office were full of garments discarded by tramp printers after picking up a couple of weeks' pay. He was told to help himself. Shortly he came back to the press side comparatively transformed and watched the operations of the clumsy machine curiously.
"What does the paper cost?" he asked.
"Eight dollars a year."
He dug $8 out of his pants pocket and started to leave.
"Hold on," said the foreman, "where do you want it sent?"
"I'll let you know," he replied, "when I get settled, I'm travelling."
He stepped out into the moonlight. In half an hour there was a clatter of hoofs and a rattling of arms outside. In came the Sheriff of Carson and a brace of deputies. Had the printers seen anything of a little man half dressed and unshaven?
Little Bob was prompt to make reply.
"Yes. He was here half an hour ago."
"Which way did he go?"
"Bob started to give the correct information."
"Shut up," said the foreman in his ear. "I'll attend to this."
He went on glibly to lay out a route for the stranger, just opposite to the one he had taken—down the main road to the Canyon.
The sheriff made it known that the Emperor in Exile.

THE KAISER WONDERS WHY WE HATE HIM!

The ex-Kaiser cannot understand the reason for the English persistence in demanding his punishment—the English whose friendship he has so much enjoyed.

Why do they hate me so? What have I done? he asks. When reminded of the sinking of the Lusitania, the shooting of Nurse Cavell, and the terrible conditions in which the British prisoners of war suffered in Germany, the exile looks horrified.

How can people's minds invent such horrors, or think I would instigate or survive at them? he asks.

This lurid light on the ex-Kaiser's life is thrown by Lady North's book, "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile," which is now on the dinner-table, the story of the "Angels of Mons" cropped up.

Lady North was asked by Captain von Iseemann, the Kaiser's aide-camp, whether she believed it. She told him that she had never met anyone who had seen the vision with her own eyes, but that, on the other hand, she did not find it at all difficult to believe.

Mysteries of the War.

It was the somewhat startling revelation that I must tell you that although there is nothing similar to the "Angels of Mons" story in the German papers, it is a fact that we often thought we saw masses of men behind your lines, and were surprised that you did not allow us to see them on these occasions, feeling so sure that you had plenty of reserves.

It was taken all round, a mystery of war, full of strange happenings of which no one can account for or explain.

Another time the conversation turned upon the air raids, and their effect upon the people of London. Lady North said that from what she had seen, she didn't really seem to mind them, and became quite accustomed to the raids; and that she and her friends had once stood at the door of the Hotel to watch the shrapnel falling down the street as though it were a wind.

Everybody seemed tremendously impressed and surprised at this. "But how could you?" she was asked. "How could you?" It must have been terrible, she said.

His Troops Deserted Him.

The imputation that his flight had been due solely to concern for his own bodily safety rankled personally in the Kaiser's mind.

"What else was their for me to do?" he would ask pathetically; and then would go over again the story of the five days of the revolution.

He proposed to go to Berlin. "Give me troops," he said to Hindenburg.

There are no troops that will follow Your Majesty there," replied the Kaiser.

"What! None?"

"None, Your Majesty!"

Then thought he would reach his entourage urged him not to go as that would only add to the Kaiser's flight without any advantage to him. Then Prince Max of Baden's announcement of an armistice proved decisive.

That made you send Bismarck away?" Count Bentinck once asked the Kaiser, when the Iron Chancellor's name cropped up in conversation during one of their long evening talks at Amerongen. "Let nobody think I did not admire Bismarck," he replied. "I think he was one of the most remarkable men of the age. But I was very young and I saw that Bismarck would be the uncrowned Emperor. I could not tolerate that. He or I had to go."

Rat Shelters Under Officer's Coat.

While Scotia police officer J. T. Dunphy, liquor inspector Lovell and police officer Maddocks were standing near the Scotia pier about midnight last night says the North Sydney Herald of Tuesday Nov. 1, the former was seen to suddenly press his hands to his heart and double up as if in great pain. His two amazed companions quickly hastened to his assistance only to learn Mr. Dunphy held vice-like a huge rodent, which after a couple of desperate squeezes he hurled with great force to the ground. The rat, however, refused to stay out, and it took several cloths from the billies of the excited officers to put it out of business. The rodent, while the trio were conversing, suddenly sought uninvited shelter from the cold north wind under the heavy storm coat of officer Dunphy. Mr. Lovell, however, lays claim to victory by using his famous black thorn which he always carries. It was a fatal move for the rat.

Mother! Clean Child's Bowels With California Fig Syrup

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation, poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

The Long Skirt.

Some of the American financial newspapers are discussing the promised appearance of longer skirts for women's wear; not from the standpoint of beauty of elegance or of fashion, but chiefly from that of its probable influence on trade. The New York Herald would hesitate to believe that American women could be forced back to long skirts merely by the decree of the Parisian modistes; but when it reads that Mary Pickford has bought skirts in the gay French capital that are long and wide, it is sure that the change is coming, for the younger set follows Mary like a lamb. And the Herald continues: "Just as an economic sharp once estimated that if every Chinaman could be induced to have his shirt made one inch longer it would help the cotton industry to millions of dollars, so the lightning calculators in Washington are figuring on what long skirts will do toward reviving business. Twenty-five million yards of cloth for the mills to turn out, a million gowns to be replaced by women who hasten to keep step with new fashions, more sales of low shoes and braids and trimmings--an enthusiast can picture the immediate return of prosperity. But what is going to happen to the large stocks of heavy woolen stockings of the kind that women began wearing last year? What will be the loss to the bloomer business? What is to become of the stout, high shoes now ready on the shelves for women's winter wear? And about the price: Did any woman find, when skirts were shortened, that they were cheaper? Was she not told that the very labor of making them so short made them more costly? Will the very labor of making 'em long again boost

A Destroyer's Gold Cargo.

Recently H.M.S. Wrestler (destroyer D35) discharged twelve boxes of bar gold which has been salvaged from H.M.S. Laurentic, the armed liner mined at the entrance to Lough Swilly in January, 1917, whilst on the way to America with between £2,000,000 and £3,000,000 worth of bullion. The gold had been transhipped to the Wrestler from a salvage boat which had been working at the Laurentic. Upon being brought ashore the precious metal was removed to the vaults of a local bank.

Fashions and Fads.

A dress of black silk velvet has a skirt of silk crepe petals edged with dull black beads. To wear with plain broadcloth skirts are very short, jackets in mole or Persian lamb. A little girls dress of crepe de chine is trimmed with brown braid and Belgian lace. A cloth coat of emerald green is trimmed with tassel, making a most effective combination. One smart winter dress of henna duvetyn shows painted leather trimmings on belt and cuffs. If the winter coat does not have a collar of fur, it features a throw collar with tasseled ends. Cloth dresses are trimmed with motifs of Oriental embroideries, which appear on panel or sleeve. Long graceful robes for evening wear are many times ornamented by an elaborate jeweled girdle.
