CHAPTER XVII.

"Heaven give me strength!" prayed Enid, as she felt herself growing faint. "But this one thing, this marriage over, and I shall die content."

Margery went to her room, and listlessly allowed the maid to wave her hair and adjust the simple white cambric dress; but her hands were trembling and her senses numb. A wedding! It seemed like a dream. The prayer book the maid handed her recalled her to the reality; and with faltering steps she went back to the dining woman.

Three men were in the room as she entered, but she was scarcely conscious of their presence. She went straight to Lady Enid, and sat down beside her, her hand clasped in hers, her head bowed.

Then she felt herself raised to her feet, she saw Dr. Fothergill bend and put a vial to Enid's right lips and the next minute a solemn voice sounded through the room, and the marriage service began. Margery felt her hand clasped in a firm hold; she uttered her responses in a voice that sounded far away; but her eyes never left the pale face lying back on the pillows, with a gleam of joy in the sweet eyes.

The ceremony was over, the blessings were spoken, and together Lord Court and his wife knelt beside Enid's bed to catch the faint whisper that fell from her pallid lips; they saw her eyes gaze into theirs, with a glow of heavenly radiance, they saw her hand move feebly toward them, they seemed to hear the prayer uttered for their happiness; and then the dying girl's eyelids drooped, a fluttering sigh escaped her lips, her head fell forward and—Margery knew no more.

Nugent, Earl of Court, saw the servants bear his wife from the room; but he remained kneeling by his sister's body, gazing on the calm, marble-like face, the still form of her he had loved so well.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Vane Charteris was astonished beyond words when she found that the assertion she had made regarding Margery's voyage to Australia in company with Robert Bright and her so-called father was absolutely confirmed by fact. Nothing could have been more opportune, no more satisfactory denouncement to the whole affair could have taken place had she arranged it herself. It had needed only jealousy to finish what she had begun; and its poison now rankled in Stuart Crosbie's heart. He was stunned, almost overwhelmed by Margery's apparent treachery and heartlessness. He did not know, he had never fathomed till now, how greatly he had loved, what a flood of passion had overtaken him. Margery had been the sun of his existence and she was gone—worse than gone—she was faithless!

Vaguely he repeated the words over and over again, as he sat listlessly in a chair looking out over the fair landscape, but seeing it not. Faithless! The girl who had kindled the glow of all earthly bliss, the girl who had seemed a very angel of purity and beauty, was false! While he held her clasped in his arms and breathed his earnest, sacred vows of love, she was false! As she smiled in radiant tenderness and whispered back her own, she was false! Through it all she had been false! It was inconceivable; it was maddening!

A fortnight wore away, but Stuart's mood did not alter; he sat silent and morbid, trying to understand it all, to get at the truth. Vane grew a little troubled at his manner—she had not imagined the wound would have been so deep. Her own shallow nature could not comprehend the depths, the intensity, the passion of love. To her it had appeared that Stuart would of course be angry. As a proud man, that was but natural, and she had expected to see him defiant, hard, reckless. This strange silence this quiet misery amazed and annoyed her. But she was outwardly at her best all this time. She never spoke to her cousin respecting their former confidences. She made him feel rather than reach the depths of her womanly sympathy thus making her worldly tact appear as innate refinement and tender delicacy. She moved about as in harmony with his gloomy thoughts; her laughter never jarred; her voice often soothed him; and last, but not least she warded off any attacks from Mrs. Crosbie, whose brow contracted in many an ominous frown because of what she termed her son's folly and want of dignity.

It was tedious work sometimes, and Vane often grew vexed and weary; but this gloom could not last, she told herself; there would come a day when Stuart would rouse himself and cast aside all thought of his dead love, trampling on the memories of it as on a vile and worthless thing. She must not fall now, seeing that she had succeeded so well hitherto. But a little patience, and she would win—she must win, not only for her love's sake, but for her ambition. News had reached her of the marriage of one of her most detested rivals a girl younger than herself. She could not face the world again without some weapon in her hand to crush the woman she hated and bring back her lost power. It was as Stuart Crosbie's wife that she determined her triumph should come. He bore no title; but his name was as prominent as any in the land, his wealth would be untold, and, as chateaine of Crosbie Castle and Beecham Park, her social position would be undeniable. Even Mrs. Crosbie did not guess the fire that burned beneath Vane's calm exterior; but her desire for the marriage was certainly as great in one way as her niece's. Lady Charteris, who had by this time recovered from her surprise at her daughter's strange freak in staying so long at the castle, saw nothing, but chattered and slumbered away her days, placidly enough, content to know that Vane was happy.

as strangely and as suddenly as he had arrived. Two days after the eventful drive to Chesterham he took his departure, greatly to Miss Charteris' and Mrs. Crosbie's satisfaction. There was something in his dry, cynical manner which made them singularly uncomfortable, and their strict ideas of etiquette were greatly disturbed by his many unorthodox acts. Stuart, at any other time, would have regretted his cousin's departure; but now it made but little impression on him, and while he exerted himself to bid him farewell, his mind was with his trouble, and as Sir Douglas walked away, he gave himself up again to his unhappy thoughts.

A fortnight passed uneventfully, and then Sir Douglas reappeared as suddenly as he had left. Mrs. Crosbie met him with profuse but insincere words of welcome. She was just enough to recognize how much he had done for Stuart. Sir Douglas put aside all her gracious speeches.

"It is only a flying visit," he said, tersely. "I want to have a few words with Stuart."

"Oh, I am so sorry you will not stay," Mrs. Crosbie responded. "I had hoped you had come for the shooting; should expect a few guns down. We should have had a party for the twelfth of August but for Stuart's accident. Can I not persuade you?"

"I should yield to your persuasion, cousin," answered Sir Douglas, in an old-fashioned bow and a gleam of merriment in his keen gray eyes—he knew right well he was no favorite with madam—"but that unfortunately time and tide wait for no man, and I sail for the antipodes at the end of the week."

"The antipodes!" cried Mrs. Crosbie; and she would have questioned him further but that he ended the interview by walking away in search of Stuart.

He found the young man strolling listlessly about the grounds, attended by all his canine pets. There was no doubt as to the sincerity of the pleasure on Stuart's face when he saw his cousin; but Sir Douglas was quick to notice the worn look and the gloom that almost immediately settled again on his features.

"How is the arm?" he asked, quietly.

Mending rapidly," Stuart answered. "I shall have it out of the splints in another fortnight."

"Don't hurry it," said Sir Douglas, as he turned and strolled beside the young man; "it was a nasty fracture, you know."

They walked on in silence until they reached a quiet spot, and then Sir Douglas halted.

"Stuart," he said, "I have come down here on purpose to see you. I want you to give me a promise."

"It is already given," Stuart answered, roused from himself for a while, and stretching out his hand.

"You know that I have made you my heir, and I have willed all I possess to you with certain conditions."

"Yes, I know," Stuart answered, his face flushing a little. "Do you think me ungrateful if I say I wish it were not so. I do not want your property."

"I am aware of that," interrupted Sir Douglas, dryly. "If you had wanted it, you would not have had it. But it is not of that I want to speak; it is of the conditions. They are more to me than any fortune, you could name."

"Whatever they are, I accept them willingly, with all my heart, and, if it be in my power they shall be fulfilled."

Stuart spoke firmly, his eyes as steadfast as his words.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF THE FUTURE.
There's many a little woman will be famous by and by. Though now her tasks are heavy and she often stops to sigh; She may be dusting, sweeping and she may be making bread, And toiling with her needle when her babes are put to bed. Her life seems bare and ugly, but behind it there's a plan, And the world will some day hail her as the mother of a man. There's little joy in slaving day by day on weary feet, In the constant scrubbing needful just to keep a cottage neat.

There's little fame in sewing and the countless daily cares Or in teaching little pupils to repeat their evening prayers. But there's many a little woman smiling bravely as she can For the little boy beside her who will some day be a man.

Pass her by, you childless women, in your jewels and your furs; Now you revel in life's glory, and a dismal lot is hers, There are few who seem to know her for her hands with care are red, And beneath her weight of burdens all her loveliness lies dead; But her name the world will honor, though she live or though she die, As a great man's noble mother she'll be famous by and by.

"Most Stupendous"

IS PHRASE DESCRIBING MAETER-LINCK'S WORK.
The latest William Fox feature production to be shown at the Majestic Theatre will be "Monna Vanna," adapted from Maurice Maeterlinck's drama which started an engagement to-day at the Majestic Theatre. According to previous reports this picture justifies its title of the most stupendous production in the history of motion pictures.

The screen version of the immortal love story of the Belgian poet-playwright has won enthusiastic press comments wherever it has been shown. Maeterlinck's story comes to the screen with the reputation of being a popular success both as a dramatic production and as an opera. The screen version will win far greater fame than either of the stage presentations because it contains all of the beautiful pathos of the play together with the spectacular action which can be shown only on the screen.

This is the story that was banned in England for ten years because of the much discussed tent scene and the interview between Monna Vanna and the Florentine general. It was first produced in Paris with the author's wife in the leading role. The play had a successful run in this country in 1905 and again in 1914 when it was presented as an opera by the Chicago Opera Association.

The story as presented on the screen is an epoch in artistic production. The settings and photography worthy of special notice. If you find joy in photoplays you will be immensely entertained by "Monna Vanna."

To accommodate many who will not be able to attend any of the performances on Wednesday, special matinees will be held this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon.

In order to give full expression to this celebrated drama, the Orchestra including drums, effects and violin-gram of music. Don't have it said you missed the greatest picture to date—"Monna Vanna."

UNDERPAID.

I hear our village pastor preach an hour on Sunday morning; it's uplifting things he tries to teach, all bootless topics scorning; He has no artistry in words, his style is dull and dreary, and I with other sinful birds, I sometimes wish I had his place; then I would charm the people, and flatter language through my face until I jarred the steeple. I think of lessons I could teach if I were but anointed; no boring sermons would I preach, chaotic and disjointed. I'd hand out sermons full of fire, I'd be no peepless lipser; the truth I'd thunder till the choir would sweat and cease to whisper. And then a streak of sunshine slants athwart the pulpit crazy, and I behold the pastor's pants—they're old and patched and baggy. The pastor's shoes are also patched, his home-washed shirt is flabby, his time worn gloves are badly matched, his whole get-up is shabby. And I recall the paltry wage for which he does his preaching; he's shabby in this gilded age, with motors round us screeching! His Sunday hat is streaked with mold, and moth have chewed his trousers; while all the world is full of gold and opulent carousers. Ah, no I would not take his place! Want's wolves around me roaring, I could not stir the human race with language fine and soaring.

Some of the new coats have very quaintly-puffed sleeves or tucked trimmings.

Ding, dong, ding! Hear the school bell ring; Wish I were a boy again Just to hear its glad refrain.

"Please don't stop," cried the little rabbit, half aloud. "I'm hurrying just as fast as I can go on my hopped-up feet," and the next minute into the school he hopped, his little knapsack bouncing up and down on his back and his red striped candy cane swinging from his left paw.

Professor Crow was already seated at his desk on the platform, but the bunny boy managed to slip into his seat before that wise old blackbird called the roll.

"Where is Squirrel Nutkins?" asked Professor Crow as no answer came to the mention of his name.

Just then the door opened and in jumped that little fellow, followed by a big snowball that sped clear across the schoolroom, knocking over a pitcher of water on a shelf.

"What's the meaning of this?" shouted Professor Crow, jumping up from his chair, his eyes blazing with anger. And hopping to the door he looked out across the yard. Fast disappearing down the woodland road was Mr. Buck, the old deer who lived in the Whispering Glen far from the dwelling place of men.

"He threw the snowball," cried the frightened little squirrel. "That is, it shot out of his hoof just as he ran by."

"Oh, now I understand," answered the old professor bird, "the snow had become caked inside his hoof and was thrown out as he lifted his foot. But what makes you late?"

"The alarm clock overslept this morning," explained the little squirrel. "It always rings at seven."

"Ha, ha! Caw, caw!" answered Professor Crow. "I think it was you who overslept. You shall stay in at recess." Then, picking up the broken pitcher he went on; "I shall send a bill to Mr. Buck. He should not have gone by so fast. Next time maybe he'll read the sign.

"Slow Down, School House Ahead!" and hopping back to his desk, the old blackbird wrote out the bill with his fountain pen.

"Who's going by Mr. Buck's house after school?" asked Professor Crow.

"I am," answered Little Jack Rabbit. "Going to have my picture taken by Photographer Crane. I'll go right past Mr. Buck's house."

"Well, you take it," said Professor Crow. "But don't forget and carry it around with you for a month of Sundays."

And in the next story you shall hear if the little rabbit saw the old deer.

"He threw the snowball," cried the frightened little squirrel. "That is, it shot out of his hoof just as he ran by."

"Oh, now I understand," answered the old professor bird, "the snow had become caked inside his hoof and was thrown out as he lifted his foot. But what makes you late?"

"The alarm clock overslept this morning," explained the little squirrel. "It always rings at seven."

"Ha, ha! Caw, caw!" answered Professor Crow. "I think it was you who overslept. You shall stay in at recess." Then, picking up the broken pitcher he went on; "I shall send a bill to Mr. Buck. He should not have gone by so fast. Next time maybe he'll read the sign.

"Slow Down, School House Ahead!" and hopping back to his desk, the old blackbird wrote out the bill with his fountain pen.

"Who's going by Mr. Buck's house after school?" asked Professor Crow.

"I am," answered Little Jack Rabbit. "Going to have my picture taken by Photographer Crane. I'll go right past Mr. Buck's house."

"Well, you take it," said Professor Crow. "But don't forget and carry it around with you for a month of Sundays."

And in the next story you shall hear if the little rabbit saw the old deer.

The Paralyzing Effect of Industrial Disturbances

Twelve months ago the outlook in the British shipbuilding industry was brighter than it had been for some years, but the output fell considerably short of expectations. At the end of 1924 the amount of tonnage under construction was 1,296,971, or about 98,000 tons less than it was at the close of 1923.

The contract for building a ship to replace the Kyle on the Cabot Strait was placed with a Dutch firm instead of with one of the British concerns whose names are famous the world over, and the chief reasons given for this remarkable departure from the usual custom were the excessive cost and uncertainty of delivery.

It seems almost incredible that vessels can be built cheaper and with greater despatch on the continent than in Great Britain, the home of the industry, but such is actually the case, and the reasons are not far to seek. They may be summed up in a sentence: The depressing attitude of many of the workmen—less work and less pay, and hang the consequences!

The Glasgow Herald in referring to the causes of the decline, seemed to their regret the time when labour casts its eyes forward, the industry, although handicapped, was struggling with a fair measure of success, and was regaining some of the ground which it had lost, and was venting forward to being in the near future in a condition of economic equilibrium and strength. But it had no like face, a profits out of which the loved no wages could be paid, and build therefore no alternative but of increasing their prices to fit, which owners would not accept. result is strikingly obvious to all in less work and poorer provisions, and no one who studies the figures without prejudice can avoid coming to the conclusion that it would have been much better not only for the industry as a whole, but for the individual men concerned, if the Industrial Court had decided that no advance should be granted."

At present there are more than 100,000 miners in Great Britain out of employment. Their demands for shorter hours and higher pay have been so excessive, that the cost of the output has been made prohibitive. From a seven hour day they insist that the hours of work should be reduced to six. Since 1913 the cost of raising coal has more than doubled, while the output has fallen by about 14 per cent. The price of coal has increased nearly 80 per cent., and in consequence local consumption has dropped by 11,000,000 tons and foreign customers are looking elsewhere for supplies.

Were the demands based entirely on legitimate grounds, there might be some sympathy felt for the workmen, but unfortunately the increased cost of living is not the only factor which counts with them. Charles Cramp, the Secretary of the British Railwaymen's Union, puts the matter clearly before those members who even now are threatening to further paralyze the industrial life of the Old Country by precipitating a railway strike. He says:

"I am firmly convinced that a small section of the men of this country own their livelihood purely to promoting dissatisfaction. These men have agreed that work is the most satisfactory method of obtaining one's living. Their efforts have been largely successful and trades unionism has been correspondingly weakened. They seldom vent their spleen upon employers, but sow suspicion and distrust among the workers concerning other union workers. I hope that it will be generally recognized that it is far more important to do the right thing than merely a popular thing."

The workmen have been deluded by these paid agitators, many of whom have never done an honest day's work in their lives, and whose single talent, such as it is, lies in the possession of a glib tongue, by which they distort facts and appeal to the passions. They have sown the seed of discontent throughout the land, and until the workmen themselves awaken to the fact that these spurious leaders are the cause of all their misery, the same unsatisfactory condition of affairs must continue to exist. That awakening, however, must come from within.

No one has much sympathy for the individual who claims that the workman should be content with his lot, and that it is absurd for him to expect to improve his position or that of his family. All over the world the movement to place educational facilities within the reach of all and to raise the standard of living is general. Instances of the latter are seen in the housing scheme, the efforts made by the various bodies of social workers to improve living conditions, and the attempts that are being made to reduce the cost of living. The solution of the present disturbed condition of labour rests to a great extent with the labourer himself, and as soon as he realizes his responsibilities in the general order of things, the conditions which will work to his advantage will be brought about.

Missionary Notes

At Cochrane St. Methodist Ch. last evening, instead of the regular sermon, a practical and forceful address on Missions was delivered by Mr. A. Mews, C.M.G. The address was particularly appropriate in view of approaching celebration of a cent of missionary endeavour. Recently a very interesting document has come to light—the list of subscriptions from overseas to the British Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society. It was sent from Newfoundland in 1818 and the amount subscribed was $20.18. The names of the subscribers were as follows: James Cawley 25.10, L. Chancey 2.00, James Cowan 1.10, Mrs. Cowan 1.10, J. Gosse 5.50, J. Henderson 1.10, B. Henderson 1.10, Mr. Johnston 1.10, W. Lilly 1.50, Mr. McCartney 1.00, Mr. St. John 1.10, Mr. Thistle 1.50, Small Sums 7.18.

Monthly Meeting STAR OF THE SEA ASSOCIATION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Newfoundland Fishermen's Star of the Sea Association took place yesterday in the Star rooms. Major P. J. Caslin, M.H.A., presided. Over three hundred members were present and thirty-three new members were enrolled in the ranks. It is evident that both officers and members have been imbued with a very keen interest in the affairs of the Association, as since the election of the new officers at the October meeting, over one hundred members have been admitted. The Ladies Auxiliary are holding a card party and dance in the club rooms to-night, and, as these affairs have been growing more popular, there is no doubt but a large attendance will present itself at to-night's event.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Feb. 21st.—This morning did somewhat overleap, to my great discontent, having an infinity of business to attend to. But Lord, in my haste to finish my breakfast did badly scald my tongue with hot tea, and caused me the most acute discomfort, so much so that I might not even enjoy my after breakfast cigarette. Anon to my shoemaker's, there to buy me a pair of shoes, since my old ones are worn through almost, yet to give me to spend so much as 15 dollars for them, being too great a price albeit methinks the costliest are cheapest in the end. This afternoon, my barber sends me his man to trim me which doing hastily, he cuts me about the face, which makes me so mad that I did curse the clown heartily, and did send him about his business.

We shall miss you by the fireside, We shall see your empty chair; But we know you are safe with Jesus In our loving Father's care. Maud, whose soul was pure and spotless. As the lilies of the field; Was taken where the trees of life are blooming, And the flowers are ever green. When my darling breathed her last farewell. And said good-bye to me; Home is quite another place. When her I cannot see. —Inserted by her mother and father.

Bold Robber Quickly Captured

A bold and daring robbery was committed by a young man named Hurley during the early hours of Sunday morning when he smashed a glass in the door of W. H. Jackman's store on Water Street West, and upon entering fitted himself out with the best goods wearing apparel obtainable in the shop. The first intimation of the robbery was when Mr. Jackman took occasion to visit the store at 5 p.m. yesterday. Among the articles found missing was a suit of clothes, cap, shirt and tie, while other goods were disturbed and left strewn about the shop. The police were immediately notified of the matter, and in a few hours two detectives located their man attending service in the S. A. Barracks on New George Street. The prisoner was arraigned before the Magistrate this morning and confessed his guilt. The party who bought the clothes stolen will get into trouble if they are not returned to the police station at once.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Will you please allow me space in your esteemed journal to make a few remarks concerning the Mental Hospital and its efficient staff of attendants. Suffering from a nervous breakdown some short time ago I was a patient at that institution for six weeks, four of which I was treated in the infirmary. I consider it my duty to give public expression of my appreciation for the treatment I received while at the institution. From time to time one notices a note of thanks in the public press from some grateful patient who has received treatment at the General, Grace Maternity or some other Hospital in St. John's, but never an expression of gratitude to Dr. Parsons, Matron Field and the nursing staff appears in our local journals.

Is it because they are less worthy of appreciation? I say a thousand times no! There is no Supt., Matron and staff in any public institution so self-sacrificing and deserving of public recognition as those at the Mental Hospital, who discharge their duties faithfully and willingly under the most trying circumstances. From the Supt. and Matron down to the ordinary Nurse I saw nothing but kindness and attention to each and every patient.

The nature of my illness obliged me to receive treatment on different wards, consequently I was brought in contact with the majority of the Nurses. On each and every ward I noticed the untiring efforts of the Nurses to do all possible night and day for the comfort and welfare of the patients under their charge. I may say here for the benefit of any person who has friends at the Mental Hospital there is no occasion to worry regarding the treatment accorded them. In conclusion I wish to express my sincere thanks to Dr. Parsons, Matron Field, Asst. Matron LeMessurier, Head Nurse Dyke and O'Keefe, Nurses Murphy, Gunther, Williams, Gregory, Aylward, Taylor, Davis, Greely, Nolan, Crowe and Ellworthy for their kindness and attention to me while at the institution.

Thanking you for space in your valuable paper, I am,
Yours truly,
ANNIE M. AYLWARD,

Obituary

JAMES BLUNDEN.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Kindly allow me space in your much esteemed paper to record the death of a dear brother in the person of James Blunden, who passed peacefully away on Friday night, February 13th, at Bloomfield, N.B. He has been an invalid for three or four years, during which time he suffered greatly; but he bore his sufferings patiently till God released him of his pain. He was only confined to his bed for a few days before his death. He was a loving and kind husband, father and brother. He leaves to mourn a widow and three children, two brothers (now residing at Sydney, N.S.), one sister and a large number of relatives and friends. Mrs. Blunden and I wish to thank all kind friends who visited Mr. Blunden during his illness and attended to many of their needs; also those who sent words of sympathy, brought wreaths to adorn the casket and assisted in many ways.

Mr. Blunden was 51 years of age. His body was laid to rest on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 15th, in the Methodist Cemetery at Musgrave Town. The funeral was conducted by Rev. T. J. Pitt, who took for his text Rev. 21:4. The largest number that ever attended the Methodist Church at Musgrave Town was there to pay their last respects.

Thanking you for space, I remain,
Yours truly,
MRS. V. PYE.

MONNA VANNA is without exception the greatest and most powerful feature ever shown in this city.

It was first produced in Paris with Madame Maeterlinck in the title role.

England banned the play for ten years because of the tent scene.

It has been presented on the stage of nearly every European country.

Mary Garden won fame in the title role of the play when presented as an opera during 1913-1914.

The immortal story has been recreated for the screen and is now winning further success in Europe.

St. John's Ambulance Association

SUCCESSFUL EXAMINATION FOR FIRST AID CERTIFICATES.

During the past six weeks a complete course of lectures in First Aid, with practical demonstrations, has been given at Queen's College, the lectures being attended by the students of the college and the apprentices of the S.S. Sachem. The lectures and demonstrations were most kindly given, and the studies supervised by Doctor D. McCarthy, surgeon of S.S. Sachem, who graduated in medicine from University College, Cork. The examination was conducted by Dr. Gaynor, who is a graduate in arts and medicine of Trinity College, Dublin, and House Surgeon at the General Hospital. Through the kindness and courtesy of Mr. Reeves, who is well known for his active interest in the work of the St. John's Ambulance Association, the facilities were granted which made it possible for all the work to be completed at Queen's College.

The following students have satisfied the examiner for the First Aid Certificate, the names being placed according to the order of marking:—W. A. Anderson, E. D. Willis, N. T. Noel, A. E. Bennis, R. H. Ross, J. A. Rees, W. G. Meadus, A. F. C. Rowe, E. Powlow.

The four apprentices of S.S. Sachem have all passed the examination, attaining a very high average of marks; they have thus fulfilled one of the conditions laid down by the Board of Trade. The College is under a debt of gratitude to Doctor McCarthy for the active and unfailing interest which he has taken in its work as Hon. Lecturer in medical and first aid subjects, while contributing greatly to its fellowship in the common room.

A Strong Plea for Transportation Facilities

Dear Sir—The late Aaron Tilley of Shoal Harbor used to tell the story of the servant of one of the pioneer Land Surveyors in the early days who one day confided to him that he was the possessor of a wonderful secret in the art of making good roads. "It's this," said the Irishman in a stage whisper, "I've always wanted to keep as high as you can in the valley and as low as you can on the hills." Well, said Mr. Tilley, "if I had a horse that didn't have sense enough for that I would shoot him." It is quite evident who ever surveyed the new road to replace the one cut up by the railway between Clarenville and Shoal Harbor when years ago did not possess or anyhow did not use as much wisdom as the sage Irishman. He certainly got as high as he could on a steep hill and then plunged almost perpendicularly down in a valley so near the railway that if one went down one would bring up on the track. For 33 years there has been no road between Clarenville and Shoal Harbor during that period. These two places have grown from small villages to towns of considerable importance, as the whole distance from lower Clarenville to George's Brook, a distance of over 8 miles, is dotted with homesteads in some places quite thickly, and a fairly good road runs the whole distance except a few hundred yards. West of Centre Hotel during the winter the only indication of a road is a huge glacier extending down over a steep hill to the railway track, and the only purpose this road has served during the many years of its existence is to keep the ice from the railway, and during the dry summer it takes a strong horse well shod to get an empty wagon over this hill, and it is absolutely out of the question to attempt to pull the smallest kind of a load. One can hardly imagine that long suffering people could stand the inconvenience for such a long period of time. Last spring on the return of the new Government a petition was circulated asking for $500,000 to make a new road at Clarenville, being under the impression that a long road was contemplated. I did not sign this petition, being so fed up by the extravagance of the late Administration, and did not think the time was opportune to spend large sums of money on a road which I have found out since that such was not the intention of the petitioners, but that two notoriously intransigent sections of road, one at East Clarenville and the other between Clarenville and Shoal Harbor, were to be replaced by a new road, and I hasten to assure our Government that no more just claim can be made for the expenditure of public funds in the whole Dominion than this. There is no need of employing a big gang of men; a small gang of men who understand blasting and cribbing can do the work economically and very quickly this spring. There are plenty of men in Shoal Harbor and Clarenville with brains and interest enough to get a new road, or rather a "low way" a million times better than the existing road that is here now. Before the Public Works Department could send down an Engineer to confer with a representative local committee on this end. It is not $5000 or $5000 but enough to do the job and do it once and for all.

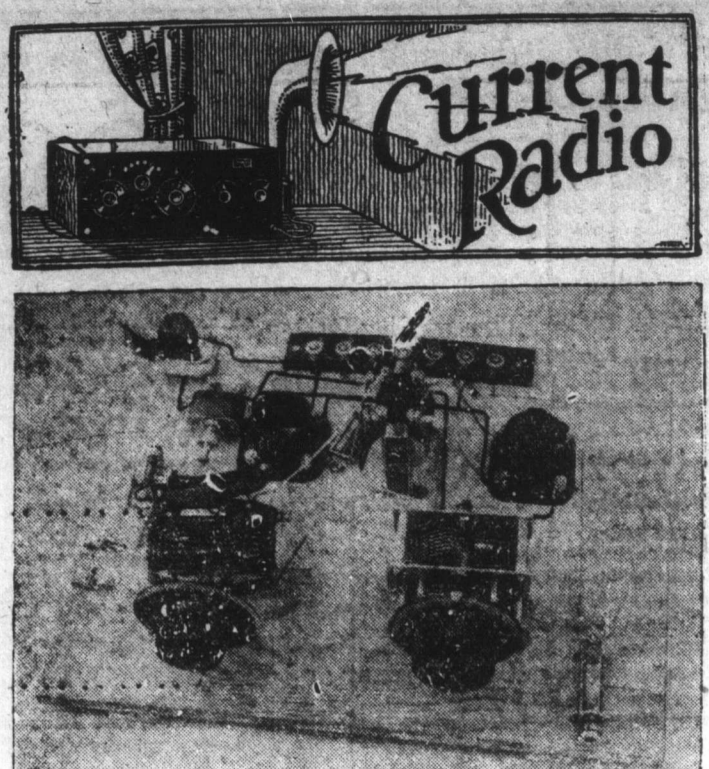

Henry George was being introduced at Cooper Institute, New York, by a chairman who wished to carry favour with the crowd, who called out in a loud voice, "Henry George, the Friend of the Workingman." Henry George stood up and sternly began, "I am not the Friend of the Workingman." There was a strained silence in the audience. "I am not the Friend of the Capitalist." Then after another long silence George went on, "I am for men, men simply as men, regardless of any superficial distinctions of race, creed, colour or class or yet function or employment, and that is what we voted in the Monroe Administration to be, and that is what they promised to be. Until we can get loyalty to the public interest into the hearts of representatives and constituents alike no real good can be accomplished. There is nothing to hinder this work being done very early this spring.

Yours faithfully,
MALCOLM PELLEY,
George's Brook, Feb. 17, 1925.

Imperial Tobacco Dividend

History repeats itself once more in the fulfilment of market expectations by the final dividend announcement of the Imperial Tobacco Company. The final dividend of 7 1/2 per cent. and bonus of 7 1/2 per cent., both tax free, make 22 1/2 per cent. tax free, which compares with 20 per cent. tax free a year ago. The quotation was then 71 1/2; it is now 90 1/2, which is not a bad instance of capital appreciation. The yield is almost exactly 5 per cent. net.

Profit allocations imply an increase of nearly a million in profits. Reserve gets $500,000 against $479,039 and pensions fund $250,000 against $200,000, while $549,000 against $221,544 is carried forward.—Truth, January 28th.

A Simple Three Circuit Receiver PART ONE

EDITED BY JOHN M. CLAYTON.

The following is a description of a very efficient three circuit receiver which is easily constructed and which will bring in good DX. One stage of audio frequency amplification is included. For headphone reception one stage is ALL that will ever be needed, and for powerful stations one stage of audio will give good loudspeaker volume.

The whole set is mounted on a "breadboard" 12 inches by 15 inches. In addition to being simple to construct in this manner it adds to the efficiency of the set to have it out of a cabinet. In this particular set a Bremer Tully Low Loss coil was used, although coils of other manufacture will be perfectly satisfactory. The tuning unit has three coils—primary mounted on a hinged support which has a lock nut to fix the position of the primary when once the best location has been found; a secondary which is wound in sections on a skeleton bakelite form, and a tickler which is wound on a small coil mounted on a bakelite shaft extending through the secondary. The coupling between the tickler and the secondary is the only variable control of the tuner.

The tuning Condenser should be a good low-loss affair having 17 plates (capacity of .00025 Mfd.) It should be equipped with a Vernier dial as the tuning with this set is very sharp. The grid condenser should have a capacity of .00025 Mfd and the grid leak should have a resistance of from 2 to 5 megohms. In this set shown above a Dubilier Micadon Type 601 was used. This condenser has the grid leak clips attached to the condenser itself, and is a very handy unit. The bypass condenser has a capacity of .001 mfd. Note that this condenser is connected so that it is around the positive of the A battery and the plate end of the audio frequency amplifier.

The audio frequency transformer has a turns ratio of 3 to 1, although this does not matter so much. Any ratio from 2 to 1 to 10 to 1 will be satisfactory in a one-stage amplifier. The terminals of the audio frequency amplifier are labeled in all cases. A six-ohm rheostat should be used. When using 201-A tubes (which we strongly recommend) the adjustment of the filament rheostat is not at all critical and after the correct setting has been once found, it can be left there and need only occasionally be adjusted. The terminal strip on which the binding posts are brought out is a piece of hard rubber an inch wide, six inches long and a quarter of an inch thick. The telephone jack is an open circuit one.

The constructional details together with a picture diagram of the complete set will be given in to-morrow's issue.

Elder Manuel's Lecture on the Millennium
DELIVERED TO FULL CHURCH.
He Will Speak Next Sunday Night on "Heaven: Will We Be Real Believers and Shall We Know Each Other There?"
In his opening remarks last evening Mr. Manuel declared that "while some are expecting the world to be converted during the Millennium, the Bible holds out no such hope. It teaches not world conversion but world destruction. The Gospel is to be preached to all the world for a witness, but all will not accept it in heathen lands any more than all have accepted it in so-called 'Christian lands." "Now is the day of salvation. Those who are waiting for the 'second chance' during the Millennium are doomed to bitter disappointment."

Mr. Manuel based his lecture on Rev. 20: 1-7. "The thousand year period mentioned here," he said, "is thought of as the millennium, but others, the religious are raised to live and reign with Christ, while the rest of the dead (the wicked) remain in their graves until the thousand years are finished. The righteous dead are raised when Jesus comes. I Thes. 4: 15-17, and together with those who were living are caught up to meet the Lord in the air. They are taken to Heaven to the place where Jesus went to prepare a place for His people. John 14: 1-3. "They live and reign with Christ a thousand years" not on the earth but in Heaven. The wicked are not raised until the close of the thousand years. Rev. 20: 5. This earth during the Millennium will not be a fit place for any to live in. Satan and his angels alone will be here. Because there is no one to tempt.
Now is the accepted time, behold now is the day of salvation.
Please don't forget the date—Shrove Tuesday night, at Synod Hall, at 8 p.m.—Feb 16, 31, m, th, m

IF—
If things had never happened, as they have, you will agree, This world might be a better place, for worse it couldn't be. I mean such things that matter to rich, and to the poor To the white man and the Negro, the Chinese and the Moor.
Supposing now, for instance that the Ark had merely sunk. What an awful thing for Noah, the Hippo and the skunk. The world without a monkey, it really wouldn't do. And what about the bed-bug, and eke the caribou.
If Darwin hadn't proved that we are cousin to the ape I wonder if we'd know it now? Oh what a neat escape. How nice to know that Earle and Dukes and pretty Chimpanzees And Kings and Monks, and all of us, have had our family trees.

When the apple hit Ike—Newton a whack upon the head. Suppose it hadn't stunned him, but finished him instead. Just fancy the position when you find you cannot tell That gravitation pulled you from the height, wherefrom you fell.
Imagine Jolly Caesar in his "Veni Vici" way. Say "Romans, this rugged country's no place for us to stay. Let's colonize old Ireland before it gets too late. We'll move our goods and chattels there in B.C. 58."
And what if Johnny Cabot had sailed and sailed and sailed To find a New Found Island, but miserably failed Then tired, went away to live in Chile or Peru This thought gives me the shivers; so I'll leave it all to you. NEMO DIXIT.

Children's Carnival at Prince of Wales's Rink

The annual Ice Carnival for children, was held on Saturday afternoon at the Prince's Rink, and proved successful from every point of view. The attendance was very large, and the costumes were varied and looked most attractive. The judges, Mrs. Herbert Orterbridge and Mrs. Gordon Winter found it quite difficult to select the prize winners, and as a result a few extra awards had to be made. The prizewinners were announced as follows: GIRLS—"Cross Word Puzzle," Miss Isabelle Lamb; "The Duckling," Miss Doris Norman; "Xmas Tree," Miss Joyce Furlong; "Mits Industry," Miss Loretta Flynn; "Spinning Top," Miss Mary White; "Work Box," Miss Margaret Murphy, whilst a special prize was given to Miss Elizabeth Morrissey.

Capt. Gosse Writes From Vancouver

A VERITABLE GLOBE TROTTER.
We have just received a communication from Capt. R. E. Gosse, the Salmon King, of Vancouver, who since his return from Newfoundland has just completed another long journey, to Japan and back. Enclosed in his letter was a snapshot of Capt. Gosse, seated in a rickshaw, being conveyed along one of the streets in Yokohama. In spite of his age, Capt. Gosse possesses an inexhaustible supply of energy, and it is in particular to that irresistible driving force that he owes his great success. He states that the B.C. salmon pack of 1924 is the largest on record, and amounts to 1,750,000 cases. The nearest approach to that quantity was in 1918, when 1,515,000 were put up. The company, which Capt. Gosse operates, has as this year's output 800,000 cases in addition to 2,000 tons of salt pack, which is equivalent to 66,000 cases. The herring fishery, which ends about Feb. 21st on the B.C. coast, has been below expectations, and against 7,000 tons secured last year, the company, at the time of writing, had not more than 4,000.

Capt. Gosse recalls with pleasure the time spent in Newfoundland last summer, and wishes to be remembered to his many friends. From his appearance as he is being trailed along by his Japanese coolie, one must conclude that he is in the very best of health. In referring to the effects of the earthquake in Tokio and surroundings, Capt. Gosse says that the places are still in a state of wreckage, and that little less than shacks have been erected since the earthquake, partly because he believes the people are afraid to build. He speaks most highly of the people and the natural beauty of the country, but says "British Columbia is good enough for me."

This is the first appearance of this orchestra at a dance in St. John's, and music will be a special feature of the night. They will be assisted by a picked orchestra from the Cashel Band, who will play with numbers for which suitable prizes will be given.

Sun Life Establishes Great Record

The fifty-fourth annual report of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, now being published, once again shows inspiring gains both in resources and in the spread of the Company's operations. Never in Canadian life assurance history has there been anything approaching the magnitude of the figures presented. All previous records of the Company, outstanding as they have been, have been greatly overreached. The Sun Life has been, for years, the leader among life insurance companies in the British Empire doing an ordinary life business; with business in force nearing the billion mark, the Company has gained a place high up among the giant companies of the world.

43,671 new policies were issued and paid for during 1924, representing a total of $137,466,384 out of the $165,593,097 actually applied for. This is by far the greatest amount of new business written in one year by a Canadian life assurance company.

In addition, a large block of profitable British and foreign business has been acquired from a big American company by reinsurance, as well as business of a Colonial Company operating in the East. The world-wide organization of the Sun Life easily admits of the absorption of this business to advantage. The policies of a small Canadian company were also assumed.

Assurances in force (after deducting reinsurance) have reached the tremendous total of $871,636,457, showing an increase for the year of $167,871,214. Ordinary policies in force number 384,113 while the families of 30,169 employees of industrial and other businesses enjoy the protection of Sun Life Group policies.

The resources of the Company also show commensurate gains. Assets of $74,139,497 show an increase for the year of $64,873,094. When it is realized that this gain alone equals the total assets held by the Sun Life eleven years ago, some idea of the rapid appreciation of its funds may be formed. The income for 1924 advanced by the sum of $15,280,042 to the substantial figure of $62,245,381, this sum not including considerations received in respect of reinsurance.

In earnings from investments the Company's experience has been particularly gratifying. Both in the increase in market value of securities held, amounting to $6,331,377, and the profit on sales wherein the increased value of securities has been capitalized, is reflected the wisdom of the Company's early policy of investment in long-term bonds and similar securities. While it is expected that this increased value will be permanent, possible fluctuation has been amply provided for in the contingency account.

The rate of interest earned on the mean invested assets advanced to 6.38 per cent. This is exclusive of profits from sales and represents a substantial gain over the previous year's very satisfactory earnings.

$21,881,639 was paid to policyholders and to beneficiaries in respect of death claims, maturing policies, profits, etc. This brings the sum so paid out by the Company since organization of $183,798,128, an amount impressive enough as a figure but requiring to be read in terms of distress relieved and thrift, rewarded in order to be appreciated in its true worth.

Policyholders received or had allotted to them profits of $6,881,652 during 1924.

That the future position of the Company shall be even more solid and secure, the reserves of its entire life assurance contracts have been valued at three per cent, while a special annuity reserve of $750,000 has been set up beyond the amount required by the Government standard.

The surplus increased by $4,324,490 and amounted to $2,107,337 after strengthening Contingency Reserves to the extent of $4,000,000 following the Company's policy of building for the future. This brings the contingency fund held for possible fluctuation of investment market values to $5,000,000 and the general contingencies account to $2,500,000.

Steady expansion of the field of operation has continued during the past year and several additional division offices have been opened in Canada and abroad. The great scope of its activities and its recognition as the great international life assurance company enables the Sun Life to afford its policyholders superior service. The Company is steadily building up in other lands a respect for Canada based on appreciation of one of her greatest institutions.

Sun Life policyholders will read the report presented with satisfaction, particularly in view of the announced increase in the scale of profits on participating policies. The prosperity of the country is bound up with that of its institutions, and the significance of the amazing progress recorded by the Sun Life of Canada will be reflected in the firmer confidence of Canadians from coast to coast in the destiny of our country.

S. U. F. Entertainment

The members of the Orphanaid Club are holding a card party at the S.U.F. Rooms, just west of the Post Office, this evening at 8.30, for men only, and all who attend are assured an enjoyable time. Valuable prizes have been donated by two gentlemen, and the lady friends of the members will serve supper. Tickets may be had from members of the Club and at the door.

A highly esteemed lady passed to her eternal reward, at 1.30 a.m. yesterday, Sunday, in the person of Marcella McGrath, relict of Silas G. Knight fortified by all the rites of Holy Church, in the 77th year of her age. Deceased was the youngest daughter of the late John and Mary McGrath, and niece of the architect McGrath, who came to St. John's about 32 years ago, in connection with the work of the Cathedral, but returned to Ireland after a short time in the city.

Her maternal ancestors came to St. John's in the latter part of the 18th century, and Mrs. Knight, up to the time of her death, was the second surviving member of the third generation in this country. H. F. Shortis being now the last. Her mother and grandmother came from Tramore, County Waterford, and her father also came from Ireland. Mrs. Knight was a type of the good old families, and a model as a devoted wife and mother, whose chief thought, outside her religion, was her husband, her children, and her home. Deceased had been in ill-health for the past six months, her condition becoming gradually more and more serious, she passed peacefully away. She was a woman of splendid personality, and exemplified in her daily life all the beauties of the Catholic wife and mother.

She maintained almost to the last her brightness, courage and cheer, characteristics which were typical of her throughout her whole life.

The deceased leaves to mourn three sons, Fred W. and Arthur, in St. John's; George, in Montreal; two daughters, Mrs. Frank Snow and Mrs. Thos. O'Mara, of this city; also 28 grandchildren, 6 great-grandchildren, many relations and hosts of friends to mourn their sad loss.—Regulate in pace.

CAPT. GEORGE SPRACKLIN.
There passed away yesterday forenoon, at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. George Hampton, Muncy Pond Road, a well known mariner in the person of Capt. George Spracklin. Death was due to heart failure. Born at Briggs, C.B., in 1853, the late Capt. Spracklin, at an early age, followed the sea, engaging for a time in the whale and seal fisheries, under the late Capt. Arthur Jackson. In 1909 he entered the employ of the Rejal

MRS. J. S. TAIT.

At 7.30 o'clock on Saturday night Mrs. J. S. Tait passed peacefully away, at the General Hospital, where she had been under treatment for some days. A few weeks ago her health began to fail, and the very serious character of her illness soon became evident. An operation appeared to offer hope of restoration; but the hope proved elusive. All that skill and devoted service could do was done, but without avail. Mrs. Tait was spared pain, and awaited the call with serenity and courage; on Wednesday she became unconscious, and three days later fell asleep.

In Briggs during the earlier years of her long residence in Newfoundland Mrs. Tait was held in affection, and gave liberally of her time and helpfulness to the church and community life of the town. About 35 years ago she came to St. John's, where her willing and faithful service in the various philanthropies and in connection with Gower Street Church, especially in missionary effort, will long be remembered. Her passing leaves a very real vacancy in the hearts of her many friends and co-workers.

Mrs. Tait, formerly Miss Calkin, was a native of Albert County, New Brunswick, the daughter of the late James Calkin, Esq., who died when she was quite young. Of her immediate family there are left to mourn their deep and irreparable loss, her husband, Dr. J. Sinclair Tait; one daughter, Miss Elsie Tait, and three sons, Dr. Arch Tait, of this city; Dr. Harold Tait, of Dighton, Mass., U.S.A.; and Mr. H. H. Tait, Barrister and joint-editor of the Newfoundland Weekly, at Boston; also six grandchildren. In Sackville are two sisters, Mrs. Amelia Cahoun and Mrs. Alice Cole, to whom the tidings of her departure will bring profound grief.

The funeral took place this afternoon from her late residence, 4 Patrick Street, at 3 o'clock.

Salesman Leaps to Death

FROM THE 19th STOREY OF THE McALPIN HOTEL, NEW YORK.

Crowds of Shoppers Were Passing at the Time.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Joseph Kirkway Ransbottom, of Richmond, Surrey, England, is dead here after a 19th floor leap to death at the McAlpin Hotel. His body struck the sidewalk on the 34th St. side, in front of Lippett's drug store. It landed near the curb, just missing a woman carrying a child and several men standing conversing. Death was instantaneous. The start and finish of the leap was seen by Harry Goldberg, who was walking along the north side of 34th street.

Goldberg looked up to see a figure climb over the small balcony that fronted a window on the nineteenth floor. The man gazed down and Goldberg followed his glances. Crowds of shoppers, mostly women, were passing along 34th street, beneath the window. Goldberg ran toward the spot where the body would fall. He looked up and saw the man perched on the edge of the balcony. As the man dropped Goldberg looked away and stuck his fingers in his ears.

Hotel attaches were unable to account for the man's action. He is known to them as a salesman for McGregor-Monroe, Limited of London, one of the biggest seed houses in the world.

In his room was a whiskey glass into which poison had been poured. Obviously Ransbottom selected his form of death after weighing two methods.

How Old is Stonehenge?

Excavations at Stonehenge have not revealed anything which could fix the age of the popular structure beyond the supposition, held by many archaeologists, that it dates from about 2,700 years before Christ.

Stonehenge is so large that the complete excavation of the area would be very costly, but ditches are being run in several directions with the hope of finding any lost and buried articles which would indicate the purpose for which it was first built.

The outer circle of great stones set on end in the earth has a diameter of about 100 feet. Inside are semicircles of stones, 21 feet high, in groups of three, and other stones which are said to have pointed to the rising sun at the summer solstice at the time Stonehenge was constructed. If this belief is true, the date when Stonehenge was constructed would be about 2640 B.C. as calculated by astronomy.

Cured by Nutmegs

A nutmeg tree will yield from 1,000 to 10,000 nuts a year. All parts of the fruit are in demand for culinary purposes. In Singapore the natives salt the husks, and in drinking saloons they are supplied for the purpose of creating thirst. A delicious preserve is also prepared from the husks.

The nutmeg is employed in medicine as a carminative and stimulant, and fat from the nut—the so-called nutmeg butter—is used as an application for rheumatism.

It contains from 3 to 8 per cent. of a volatile oil, and the substance myristicin, which possesses narcotic properties. Cases of poisoning as a result of chewing nutmegs have been recorded—a single nutmeg seriously affecting the cerebral functions of man.

The Potato on Trial

It took people a hundred years to discover that potatoes were good to eat.

In 1728 an attempt was made to introduce potatoes into Scotland, but they were denounced from the pulpit on two contradictory counts—that they were not mentioned in the Bible, and, therefore, were not fit food for Christians. And that they were the forbidden fruit, the cause of Adam's fall. They were accused of causing leprosy and fever.

Why Britain

Falters in the Air

Chicago Tribune: Great Britain has begun a huge programme of aircraft building. She will treble her forces. Before the end of 1925 she will have fifty-two squadrons. That will make Britain a great air power. She will be almost half as strong as France in the air. We congratulate Britain on her energy and sacrifice for the good of her air fleet. We wish our Congress could see the value of air power too. But air power costs money. Congress thinks we can't afford it. Britain, too, is much restricted in her air development. Britain is paying her debt to the U.S.A. That takes money that might go into airplanes. Only France can afford an air fleet two or three times the size of anything on earth. France is not paying her war debt to America. She has put it into air power while Britain struggles to pay her honest debts and build what air fleet she can. It is only fair to debt paying nations that America insist on the French payment of debts. It is not right that the price of paying honest debts be military insecurity.

A Great Dream Coming True

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine as it is to-day is only the beginning of the fulfillment of a great dream that had its birth nearly one hundred years ago. The dream held on through the years until Oct. 31, 1881, when the present site was purchased for $850,000. In 1891 actual construction began and on St. John's Day, Dec. 27, 1892, the cornerstone of the cathedral was laid.

The construction of St. John's so far has cost about $4,000,000. The building of the nave will cost $5,500,000, and the total cost will be about $15,000,000.

Last Sunday 15,000 persons packed Madison Square Garden, with 5,000 more turned away, for a meeting at which the drive for $15,000,000 needed to complete the cathedral was launched. Bishop Manning announced that $4,100,000 of that amount already had been raised and that $10,900,000 remained to be raised in the campaign which will continue until February 1.

Practically every person who contributes to-day to the fund to complete this great cathedral can do so with a fair assurance that he will see the completed edifice. The construction will not be swift, but it will be rapid compared to the building of the other great cathedrals of the world, which were not completed in the lifetimes of those who began the work. The purpose is to begin the work on St. John's this spring and complete it in from eight to ten years.

Contributions for this monumental work are coming from men and women of every race, creed and color. Jews, Roman Catholics, twenty denominations of Protestants and persons who have no church at all have brought their gifts to put forward the work. For men tell us that this is to be Everyman's Cathedral—a cathedral, as Bishop Henry C. Potter said, where "there will be no pews, no locked doors, no prepayment for sittings, no reserved rights of caste or rank, but one and the same welcome for all."

We of America have been proud of our gigantic achievements in industrial building. We boast of great manufacturing plants, of great tunnels and monster bridges; we are proud of the skyscraper office buildings in New York City and those of lesser magnitude in other American cities, and even the lowliest of us feel a certain complacency when we are told that the United States is the richest and most prosperous country in the world.

When the magnificent cathedral of St. John the Divine rears its spires on Morningside heights a few short years hence we shall have greater cause to be proud than we have had heretofore. And this will be a building in which all may have a part, a building in which the widow's mite will hold as large a place as the rich man's gold. Though reared by the hand of man, it will be a temple built of God, before whom all men are equal.

No matter how he lives, what he believes or disbelieves, the soul of man is ever groping upward, and if not toward God—toward what? His soul will be less trammelled and will soar higher when he stands within the shadowed interior of this great cathedral than it could elsewhere.

Can there be any doubt that the pennies, dimes and dollars needed to make this century-old dream come true will be forthcoming?—Sunday Times.

U.S. Naval Strength

The Treaty Powers Exchange Notes.

It is reported from Washington that Notes have passed between Great Britain, America and Japan on the question of gun elevation in so far as it affects the 5-5.3 ratio fixed by the Treaty of Washington. An agitation, as our readers are aware, is in progress in America, designed to bring about the elevation of the guns on a large number of ships. Such a transformation, by enlarging the range of action of the Fleet, would materially affect the present balance of naval power. It is understood that Great Britain has protested against such an operation. Meanwhile the Big Navy Party are pressing their claims. The expenditure of $20,000,000 on additional naval construction was proposed in a Bill introduced by Mr. Britten, of the House of Representatives' Committee on Naval Affairs. The measure would authorize the building of four scout cruisers and one floating dry dock, and would increase the limit of cost of the aeroplane-carriers Lexington and Saratoga, which are now under construction, from $4,000,000 to $8,000,000. Authority would also be given to the Navy to elevate the turret guns of the battleships Florida, Utah, Arkansas, Wyoming, Pennsylvania, Arizona, Oklahoma, Nevada, New York, Texas, Mississippi, Idaho, and New Mexico. Contending that the improvements were necessary if the American Navy was to equal Great Britain's in strength, Mr. Britten said that the Bill would necessarily be debated, when the exact conditions of the U.S. navy would be revealed.

"I Hear it Said"

(By BARBARA YOUNG)

Last night my friend—he says he is my friend—Came in and questioned me. "I hear it said. You have done this and that. I come to ask. Are these things true?" A glint was in his eye Of small distrust. His words were crisp and hot. He measured me with anger, and flung down. A little heap of facts had come to him. "I hear it said you have done this and that."

Suppose I have? And are you not my friend? And are you not my friend enough to say, "If it were true, there would be reason in it. And if I cannot know the how and why, Still I can trust you, waiting for a word. Or for no word, if no word ever come!"

Is friendship just a thing of after-noon? Of pleasing one's friend and one's dear self—Greed for sedate approval of his pace, Suspicion if he take one little turn. Unto the road, one flight into the air, And has not sought you for your Year or Nay?

No, Friendship is not so. I am my own. And howsoever near my friend may draw. Unto my soul, there is a legend hung Above a certain strait and narrow way. Says, "Dear my friend, ye may not enter here!"

I would the time had come—as it has not. When men shall rise and say, "He is my friend. He has done this? And what is that to me? Think you I have a check upon his head, Or cast a guiding rein across his neck? I am his friend. And for that cause I walk Not overclose beside him, leaving still Space for his silences, and space for mine."

Gloves

By FORTNILL BECKFORD.

Gloves trace their origin back for centuries. The first mention of them in literature is to be found in the Bible, but scientists believe we should go back still further, for among prehistoric relics an unmistakable drawing of a glove, rudely etched upon a stone, was discovered.

It is said that the first skilled glove-makers were the monks of the early Middle Ages. In 790 Charlemagne granted to the abbots and monks of Sithin, in ancient France, unlimited right of hunting the deer for skins of which to make gloves. Glove-making was established in France as an industry in the twelfth century.

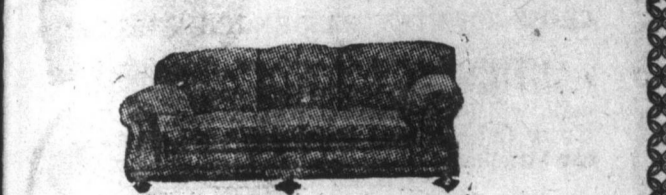

To-day English gloves stand out with a world-wide reputation and their manufacture forms an industry of considerable size centred in Yeovil, the oldest place directly concerned, records showing that gloves have been made there for at least 400 years. Worcester, Woodstock, Walsall, and London are also interested in the manufacture of gloves.

REPORTS TO HAVE MADE $10,000,000 ON ORE STOCK.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Back from a winter vacation in California, and in which he was at all times in touch with the stock market, and described by his friends as "more bullish than ever," William C. Durant, motor manufacturer and large scale stock operator, is credited by Wall Street with having added approximately $2,500,000 to his already plethoric bank roll in the first two days of this week. Mr. Durant's "paper profits" are now supposed by Wall Street to be more than ten million dollars in a single stock—United States East Iron Pipe.

There's little satisfaction in coaxing customers in one day with the bait of some "scheme" or deal, only to lose them to-morrow, when someone else does the same thing. That's not the kind of customers that make for permanent success of the grocer.

If we have Babbitt's Borax right one day and "almost as good" the next—sold it on a "drive" one day and at the "regular price" the next—there wouldn't be any "regular price"—or quality either.
