MR. BLAIR AND THE NEW BRUNSWICK LIBERALS.

Members of the liberal party in this constituency must have been rather surprised last evening when they found themselves required by the Globe to sign a test as a guarantee of their party allegiance.

There must be some extraordinary reason for yesterday's notice to the liberal party from the Globe. The occasion is not far to seek. During the last few days Mr. Blair has been in this province, visiting several constituents, and engaging in close consultations with the leaders of the party in St. John and Fredericton.

Mr. Blair, whose appearance here at the same time as Mr. Fielding, is not supposed to be a mere coincidence, is meeting his old friends and discussing the situation with them.

party, Senator Ellis does not relish the idea of Mr. Blair's return to a dominant political position.

Now read what the Globe says: "The liberal party in New Brunswick will have at the next general election one clear duty before it, a duty which arises out of the policy of the party throughout Canada."

"The Globe goes on to say that this is the most important act of last session, indeed of any session since the present government came into power."

This is a direct and unqualified demand upon the New Brunswick liberals to repudiate Mr. Blair.

Mr. Blair is more strongly committed against the contract than any other member on either side of the house.

Saint John's Greatest Clothing Business.

An Interesting History of the Growth of Oak Hall, From a Small Beginning Fourteen Years Ago to Its Present Proportions—the Largest Business of Its Kind in Eastern Canada—and the Men Who Have Made It.

Fourteen years ago a store was born into the commercial world of the city. The first day's cash sales amounted to $500. At the present time the sales average over $500 per day. Here's a notable example of mercantile growth.

Why? Because the proprietors attribute their prosperity to the quality of goods they handle, good treatment of customers, and judicious advertising. Nothing succeeds like success. People welcome development, advancement, and take pleasure in giving credit where credit is due; and in this connection there is no city business more deserving of commendation than the firm of Messrs. Scovill Bros. & Co. Oak Hall—the brick four story home of the firm's business on the corner of King and Germain streets—obtained a grip on the purchasing public that is becoming stronger as the years go on.

It is acknowledged to be Saint John's greatest clothing house. It has outstripped its competitors, and the ease with which the lead is maintained is a sound guarantee for the future. Fourteen years is not a long time in the life of an establishment, but it has been long enough to place Oak Hall in advance of concerns that were grown to maturity when their juvenile rival appeared, and to show that a multitude of years is not wholly essential to business success. And what of the men who have plotted the flourishing younger of a little more than a decade ago to the position now occupied. In the minds of not a few, there is the belief—perhaps it is not worn upon the sleeve—but it is born in the mind, nevertheless, that Kings County, N. B., is the birthplace and nursery of men who come out on top in whatever enterprise they happen to engage in. Accepting this for what it may be worth, it is not out of place, however, to acquaint the public with the fact that Oak Hall's proprietors—Messrs. W. G. and J. M. Scovill, and James J. Scovill, of Springfield, were born and reared at Springfield, Kings Co. As young men they formed a partnership, and conducted at Colliha a general store for a few years, but finally J. M. Scovill left to accept the position of traveller for E. A. Small & Co., Montreal, Canada's largest manufac-place as a representative Canadian clothing house. There are 16,000 feet of floor space in Oak Hall, and every inch is utilized to the best advantage. There's the men's furnishings department, the boys' and men's clothing department, the cutter's headquarters, and custom tailoring section, the manufacturing plant, the packing and advertising departments, and space for reserve stock, and last though by no means least, a special department where a wisely chosen assortment of wares particularly calculated to arouse a feeling of admiration in the souls of sailors, is displayed. When Scovill Bros. started one clerk was regarded as sufficient, now the firm employ twenty salesmen and twenty-five expert workers are engaged in the custom tailoring department. This spells a story quite as convincing in its way as the contrast between the early and present day cash receipts. With the few exceptions, Messrs. Scovill's staff has been in the same employ, and the heads of the departments have practically grown up with the business, and their loyalty to customers, and unflinching courtesy to the house they were identified with has gained appreciative recognition on the part of the heads of the firm.

A. D. MURRAY, Manager

MEN'S FURNISHING DEPARTMENT. As you enter Oak Hall by the main entrance from King street, the interior of the first floor gives you a particularly pleasing impression. There is order, system, neatness, light and brightness. The polychrome of stock frequently observed in other establishments, is here happily missing. There is a place for everything, and everything is in its place. From lofty ceiling to the clean-swept 40x50 floor, every object, whether garment or ornament is at all times in the position to be made inspection. To the right of the entrance is the men's furnishings department, presided over by A. D. Murray, who save for a short engagement with Messrs. E. Small & Co. of Montreal, has been continuously with Messrs. Scovill since 1884. Men's furnishings comprise a variety of articles, but the department supplies them all. Hosiery, shirts, underwear, neck wear, gloves lined and unlined, cut links, studs, handkerchiefs, dress suit cases, grip bags and fitted bags are here displayed in such variety that to make a selection is as pleasing, but tantalizing process. Running partly the length of the department are a couple of "silent salesman," which serve admirably the double purpose of show case and counter. They are ten feet in length—have bevelled glass sides, solid polished oak bases, "Tennessee" marble tops, and are covered with plate glass panels. Each unit of the wardrobe is fitted with recessed rods, to which are attached the suit hangers. Each wardrobe contains 20 suits of different sizes, which is left in the odd trousers of designs different from the full suits, thus enabling a customer to be supplied with extra trousers of pair patterns. Each truck holds 50 pair of trousers. These wardrobes will permit patrons to readily inspect the high grade of clothing protected by the semi ready trade mark—a mark that stands for all that is superior in men's clothing.

F. C. SMITH, Accountant and Advertising Manager

SEMI-READY CLOTHING. The left half of the floor is given over to semi ready clothing, under charge of Wm. Murray, who has served continuously with the business since 1883. Semi ready clothing forms one of the most important branches of Messrs. Scovill's business. This brand of clothing is the highest grade of ready made clothing to be found anywhere in Canada, and the brand is competing sharply with tailor made goods. This semi ready stock is kept in sturdy wood cabinets, which virtually occupy King and Germain streets is a busy place—throngs are passing at all hours, and it is safe to affirm that 75 per cent of the passers by give more than a passing look in Oak Hall's windows.

J. M. SCOVILL, JR., Manager

BOY'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT. As you ascend the stairs from the first floor to the second, the first department entered, on gaining the top is that devoted to clothing and furnishings for juveniles. Every garment a lad requires is here, and no better value can be obtained anywhere. The suits at every age, from the time the boy steps out of skirts until he begins to feel down thickening on his chin, and he presumes to think the time has arrived when it is proper to wear long trousers, and essay the peculiarities of manhood. The windows of this department front on King and Germain streets, nine in all, and are amply sufficient to make the floor one of the lightest in the establishment. The department is under the efficient management of S. C. Young, who has been with the firm longer than any of his fellow associates. He became identified with the business in 1892, and his connection with the house has ever since been unbroken, and what he does not know about a junior's wants in the matter of dress, he is scarcely worth knowing. The amount of boys' wash goods, racing suits, caps, mufflers, dachery, under Mr. Young's care is one of the largest individual departments. The thousands of suits are bewildering in quality, style, and pattern. Over will be possibly undergarments of the department is also distinguished by the line of novelties carried—novelties that cannot be procured elsewhere outside of the large American cities. At present a special line is being shown in boys' dressing gowns and jackets. The ideal and Sampson suspenders are also being especially shown. Then there is a seemingly endless supply of wash goods, racing suits, caps, mufflers—all in the prevailing New York styles. The department, like all the others is carefully furnished, painted and tinted—the work of expert decorators; and the walls and floors are graced with mirrors, pictures and artificial palms.

W. G. SCOVILL

MEN'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT. Passing under the arch and ascending the stairs, the bondland between the boys' and men's clothing, you enter the domain of the latter. J. M. Scovill, Jr. is in charge here. He has been with the firm since 1887, previous to that date he was connected with the Halifax branch. Down one side of this department are eighteen solid oak dust-proof wardrobes, the hangers in each supporting a special line. Like the cabinets down stairs, these in the men's clothing department have ornamental glass fronts, and the wood takes the same high degree of polish. Every kind of outward garment a man is supposed to wear can be secured here. Suits, rain coats, refters, ulsters, sheep-skin lined refters, overcoats, trousers—the variety is if anything greater than in the department on the other side of the arch. The overcoats—and there are one thousand of them hanging on specially designed racks, thus enabling easy and has full charge of this most important work. The continual increase in the firm's business reflects with credit on Mr. Smith's work in this department. The window in this section of the establishment shows clothes for custom tailoring, and inside there is a large stock constantly on hand. The cloth is all of a high grade, the pick of the English and European markets. Every season the various patterns are submitted to the firm, and the choice is the decision of men who know about all there is to know about clothing. The cutter, J. J. MacDonald is an unusually well qualified workman. He is a contributor to Mitchell's Fashion Magazine.

WM. MURRAY, Manager

CUSTOM TAILORING. Of the separate parts of Scovill Bros' business, the custom tailoring has not lagged in general development. First class work has commanded and obtained first class patronage. Many large contracts have been handled, including the uniforms for the C. P. R. and I. C. R. conductors and brakemen, city police, and Union Club staff heavy. One of the firm's specialties is the making of liveries. To show that the name and the fame of Oak Hall has gone beyond Canadian boundaries, it may be pointed out that the houses for the past few seasons has been making the uniforms for the crew of a wealthy Americans yacht, which frequent these waters in the summer season. On the second floor there are two departments—each 60x40 feet—divided by an arch and low steps. The stock of clothing gives you some conception of the extent to which Messrs. Scovill have entered into business. From end to end and side to side of the light, clean, airy floor, are huge tables laden with suits, overcoats and trousers—ready-made suits to fit from the smallest child to the largest man. But these garments only form a part of what the store readily holds.

THE FIRM'S BUSINESS QUARTERS ON KING STREET.

The entire left wall space of the first floor proper. These wardrobes are twenty-four in number, and are finished in golden oak, highly polished, the doors being ornamented with plate glass panels. Each unit of the wardrobe is fitted with recessed rods, to which are attached the suit hangers. Each wardrobe contains 20 suits of different sizes, which is left in the odd trousers of designs different from the full suits, thus enabling a customer to be supplied with extra trousers of pair patterns. Each truck holds 50 pair of trousers. These wardrobes will permit patrons to readily inspect the high grade of clothing protected by the semi ready trade mark—a mark that stands for all that is superior in men's clothing.

The large plate glass fronts hold the very latest in men's clothes and furnishings, and what makes this corner one of the most attractive throughout and has full charge of this most important work. The continual increase in the firm's business reflects with credit on Mr. Smith's work in this department. The window in this section of the establishment shows clothes for custom tailoring, and inside there is a large stock constantly on hand. They are ten feet in length—have bevelled glass sides, solid polished oak bases, "Tennessee" marble tops, and are covered with plate glass panels. Each unit of the wardrobe is fitted with recessed rods, to which are attached the suit hangers. Each wardrobe contains 20 suits of different sizes, which is left in the odd trousers of designs different from the full suits, thus enabling a customer to be supplied with extra trousers of pair patterns. Each truck holds 50 pair of trousers. These wardrobes will permit patrons to readily inspect the high grade of clothing protected by the semi ready trade mark—a mark that stands for all that is superior in men's clothing.

SEMI-READY CLOTHING. The left half of the floor is given over to semi ready clothing, under charge of Wm. Murray, who has served continuously with the business since 1883. Semi ready clothing forms one of the most important branches of Messrs. Scovill's business. This brand of clothing is the highest grade of ready made clothing to be found anywhere in Canada, and the brand is competing sharply with tailor made goods. This semi ready stock is kept in sturdy wood cabinets, which virtually occupy King and Germain streets is a busy place—throngs are passing at all hours, and it is safe to affirm that 75 per cent of the passers by give more than a passing look in Oak Hall's windows.

BOY'S CLOTHING DEPARTMENT. As you ascend the stairs from the first floor to the second, the first department entered, on gaining the top is that devoted to clothing and furnishings for juveniles. Every garment a lad requires is here, and no better value can be obtained anywhere. The suits at every age, from the time the boy steps out of skirts until he begins to feel down thickening on his chin, and he presumes to think the time has arrived when it is proper to wear long trousers, and essay the peculiarities of manhood. The windows of this department front on King and Germain streets, nine in all, and are amply sufficient to make the floor one of the lightest in the establishment. The department is under the efficient management of S. C. Young, who has been with the firm longer than any of his fellow associates. He became identified with the business in 1892, and his connection with the house has ever since been unbroken, and what he does not know about a junior's wants in the matter of dress, he is scarcely worth knowing. The amount of boys' wash goods, racing suits, caps, mufflers, dachery, under Mr. Young's care is one of the largest individual departments. The thousands of suits are bewildering in quality, style, and pattern. Over will be possibly undergarments of the department is also distinguished by the line of novelties carried—novelties that cannot be procured elsewhere outside of the large American cities. At present a special line is being shown in boys' dressing gowns and jackets. The ideal and Sampson suspenders are also being especially shown. Then there is a seemingly endless supply of wash goods, racing suits, caps, mufflers—all in the prevailing New York styles. The department, like all the others is carefully furnished, painted and tinted—the work of expert decorators; and the walls and floors are graced with mirrors, pictures and artificial palms.

SEAMEN'S OUTFITTINGS. A sailor is not afraid to part with money, so long as his expenditure brings to him the satisfaction of knowing that he has obtained what he wanted. But there are a good many stores stocked with articles for which the man "before the mast" have no earthly use, except, perhaps, to laugh at. The incomplete clothing house tries to supply them, and if a transaction takes place, the sailor is left with the part of the purchaser, and after spending his cash, he is yet without what he actually desired. Sailors never leave Oak Hall in this spirit, because their little peculiarities are understood in the establishment, as in no other house in the city. The result is that Oak Hall has a large and constantly increasing marine trade. Fitted up in the basement are commodious quarters supplied with all necessities, much of which is a mystery to the average clothing man. It so happens that the person who has personal charge of this department is in possession of knowledge which particularly qualifies him for the position. He is Charles Magnusson, a Swede, an ex-sailor. He understands what it means to outfit a seaman. The department has an extensive stock of underwear, oil skins, rubber and leather boots, sheath knives, soap, matches, rufflers, silk, handkerchiefs, belts, pipes, musical instruments, clocks—these are but a few. Then a stock of Florida water is kept. You may question what sailors want with that delicate toilet requisite, but they want it nevertheless.

Ten years ago Oak Hall's branches in Halifax, New Glasgow and St. Stephen were sold to their respective resident managers; the volume of trade became so great at the home establishment that the proprietors found it necessary to devote their sole attention to it. Oak Hall stands today and has always stood for all that is progressive in men's and youths' clothing and furnishings. It is doubtful if there is another business house in the Maritime Provinces showing such swift and sure growth in so few years. Once a customer and your subsequent patronage is assured, Oak Hall satisfies. You do not buy and go away feeling that you might have received better value elsewhere. You know that your money has been expended to the best possible advantage, and the longer you remain an Oak Hall patron the stronger and more lasting this conviction becomes. Every year sees Oak Hall's volume of trade increasing. The firm's history is a striking illustration of this. Where a decade ago the business was marching, it is today advancing at the double. In view of the record of fourteen years, what may not be accomplished by 1912?

WEEKLY SERMON.

The Rev. Dr. Poindexter S. Henson on Life and Love.

The Rev. Dr. Poindexter S. Henson, until recently pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, began his pastorate in the Tremont Temple, Boston, and preached to a large audience on "Life and Love." His text was from II Corinthians v: 14 and 15: "The love of Christ constraineth us," etc. Dr. Henson said:

I profoundly approach the gravity of my responsibility as the minister of Tremont Temple. I am not unmindful of the magnificent manhood of those who have been my predecessors in the occupancy of this altar, and especially of my beloved and honored brother and my lifelong friend, Dr. George C. Lorimer, who for so many years, from the Temple pulpit, as from a throne of power, swayed an imperial scepter over the eager thousands who thronged the Temple courts to listen to his words of burning eloquence.

Called, as I was, to succeed him in Chicago, I seem singular indeed that I should be summoned to be his successor in Boston, a city so great as the inland sea, I felt as if my voice could scarcely be heard beyond the walls of the old church building, and like an embarrassed attendant here, but the unanimity of your call and the kindness of your welcome and the conscious encouragement of your sympathy, and above all, the assurance that in the extraordinary circumstances that have led to the consummation of this most sacred relationship which today is publicly solemnized, the good hand of our God has been making these things, taken altogether, give me hope and courage. And yet I would devoutly wish that this most trying initial sermon of my pastorate were safely and happily over for I and you are human—very human, and you cannot but be questioning even while I am preaching to whether I am what you thought me, and I cannot but be hearing that I will sadly disappoint your generous expectations of me. And I shall never be happy among you unless I do my best for you until we have mutually gotten beyond all that and have come to feel that we know each other well, that I can be wholly and graciously fail, as doubtless I often shall.

And yet though the Tremont Temple pulpit, to which you have done me the honor to call me, is a most exalted and high place, I do not shrink from it as I would from many another, because so frequently I have occupied it heretofore, and whereas I have never felt the uplift of a thousand prayers and fervent and effective preaching is the outcome of fervent and effective praying, I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer.

BEG THAT YOU WILL STRIVE together with me in prayers of faith and fervor, and in the power of the word of the living Christ as He goes forth to seek sinners. I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer.

GET UP OFF YOUR KNEES get on your feet, and follow in the footsteps of the living Christ as He goes forth to seek sinners. I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer, and I do not shrink from it, because I am not a man of prayer.
