"Imitation is the Sincerest Form of Flattery."

The best proof that

MINARD'S LINIMENT

has extraordinary merits, and is in good repute with the public, is that IT IS EXTENSIVELY IMITATED. The imitations resemble the genuine article in appearance only. They lack the general excellence of the Genuine.

This notice is necessary, as injurious and dangerous imitations liable to produce chronic inflammation of the skin, are often substituted for MINARD'S LINIMENT by Dealers, because they pay a larger profit.

They all Sell on the Merits and Advertising of MINARD'S.

One in particular claiming to be made by a former proprietor of MINARD'S LINIMENT, which simply is a lie.

A Faithful Priest.

The Very Rev. Walter Elliott, C. S. P., has given us, in the pages of the June Catholic World, a graphic sketch of his friend, the Rev. Clarence Walworth, late pastor of St. Mary's Church, Albany, N. Y., of whom he says: "As a man, citizen, priest, missionary, he was faithful and true to God and Church and fellow citizens." After Father Walworth's death, a public meeting took place in Albany to commemorate his virtues and public services, and there Father Elliott made an address, of which the article in which we are about to comment is an extract. The details of Father Walworth's life may be briefly stated so far as mere biographical data go. He was born in Plattsburg, N. Y., May 30, 1820; he died Sept. 19, 1900, at the ripe age of eighty years. As a young man, following the wishes of his father, who was the last chancellor of New York state, he studied law and was admitted to the bar, but soon gave up his practice and entered the Protestant Episcopal seminary in New York City, studying there for three years. At the age of twenty-five he became a Catholic; and, soon after, with the yet more recent convert, Isaac T. Hoeker, he joined the Redemptorist Order, going to the novitiate in Holland, where he was ordained in 1848. Returning to America, the two Redemptorist converts were joined by another, the Rev. Augustine Hewitt, and then by the Rev. George Deehan and the Rev. Francis Baker. In 1858 these five devoted missionaries became the foundation-stones of a new community, the missionary society of St. Paul the Apostle, or, as they are more popularly known, the Paulist Fathers. "The excessive fatigues of the fifteen years of continuous Catholic missions were, Father Walworth believed, the means of breaking down his originally robust constitution. His continued ill-health, with occasional attacks of very serious illness, finally led to his leaving the Paulists. Returning to his native diocese, he was for a time placed in charge of St. Peter's Church, Troy, and in 1866 was made rector of St. Mary's Church, Albany. After a career in that parish of remarkable usefulness both to his parishioners and to his fellow citizens generally, Father Walworth departed to his eternal reward Sept. 19, 1900." Thus ends Father Elliott's brief summary of the principal events in the career of a man whom he claims to have been of "distinguished natural ability, priestly piety of the most edifying kind, and zeal for the virtue and good order of the civil community, the like of which is seldom witnessed."

Father Walworth's Personal Character.

Let us now study the general character of this man. The first trait dwelt upon is his friendliness. "Father Walworth, though he spent his best energies in fighting vice—and he always fought with the onset of a born soldier—was yet naturally of a gentle disposition. His manners were kindly, his conversation was toned with deference for others. He was a positive man, but not self-opinionated, and no one could be a more pleasant companion among priests or laymen. His love of kindred was deep. . . . His early friendships were very tender. They endured to the end." Added, however, to this tenderness of heart were the characteristics of courage, openness, sincerity. Noble is the testimony rendered to him by his old comrade in arms. "God gave him a fearless heart which served a clear, calm mind. He valued peace indeed, but justice and right above all. God loves a man who, appointed to a public trust like that of the Catholic priesthood, never blanches in face of evil and never quite a good cause. Such a one was Father Walworth all his days. . . . Conscience in a man like Walworth makes heroes. . . . With right mind and man, such Catholics as Father Walworth and Bishop Wadhams stand for all that is best in our American character allied to the truest Catholic tradition. Courage to dare any foe for God and for the people, and yet with a conservative temper consulting the due forms of law and wary of the methods of fanaticism; and so down right truthfulness so candid as to shame timid associates in public life; these are traits that give public men peace of soul and win them the applause of honest citizens of all religions." Father Walworth's fine nature endowments were dedicated without reserve to religious and moral use. Remarkable was his spiritual character for what his eloquent calls a strong phylaxis of "downright personal loyalty to Jesus Christ revealed in His Church." Wholly submissive to lawful superiors, he was nevertheless full of initiative, and as a Catholic he lost nothing of his native independence of character.

Father Walworth's Priestly Career.

After his conversion, the joyous young Catholic wrote: "My inward joy and satisfaction at being in the very Church of God and communion of the saints, I can not express. . . . I am out of all conceits with Posseym, whether ornamental, sentimental, or antiquarian. Christ is one and undivided, and must be sought for in His undivided Church, which He inhabits and inspires. . . . How miserable do all the specialities of Posseym's speculation appear to one who is a Catholic in fact and not in dreams!" As a novice, his life was a time of "unmixed joy," and of loyal obedience to rule. And when, after his ordination to the priesthood, he went forth on his career as a missionary, he displayed a wonderful power, "everywhere reaping a great harvest of penitent souls." Father Elliott says of him: "His voice was marvelous. His sermons out to the division of the soul and the spirit. . . . He could drive the fear of God into sinners' souls with more restless force than, perhaps, any missionary we have ever had in America. His sermons broke the adamant crust of self-assurance which vice had formed over the sinners' hearts, like an egg shell. . . . The most abandoned wretches were melted into tears of penance under Father Walworth's preaching. He had a heart of grace to inspire his tones with priestly tenderness. . . . It should be known that if he vanquished the sinner, he did not fail to win him. In later life he was for thirty-four years a devoted parish priest, but his missionary tendencies still found scope. "He made it his duty to know all the hard sinners in the parish; he loved them better than any other class; he sought every means to save them." As pastor in Albany he worked valiantly against public vice, waging incessant war against the liquor-dealers' lobby in the Legislature. That we must follow God's enemies up and resist them everywhere, was so laborious and so persevering which you have extended in seeking out and spreading ancient monuments of this nature. The divers fruits of these labors we see continued in the sufficiently numerous volumes which you have sent us from time to time, and which we have received as most acceptable presents. These works, we have learned, are now largely brought to the light of day, strike the public eye, and are in many ways in daily use. All the zeal expended in the illustration and propagation of the sacred rites deserve praise, not only because of the talent and ingenuity therein employed, but also—because it imports very much more—because of the development which may be hoped therefrom for the Divine cultus.

Indeed, the Gregorian chants have been composed with the utmost skill and discernment to illuminate the meaning of the words. There is in these chants, provided they be skillfully executed, great power, marvellous suavely mingled with gravity, which, easily penetrating to the soul of the auditor, can excite therein pious movements and nourish salutary thoughts. It is befitting, then, that all those, whoever they be, especially of belonging to either branch of the clergy, who feel themselves capable of attaining some result in this science or this art, work therein zealously and freely, each according to his power. Provided that mutual charity, and the submission and respect due to the Church are safeguarded, the labors of so many men engaged in the same steady may produce abundant fruit as up to the present your own studies have brought forth.

As pledge of Divine grace, and also of Our paternal benevolence, we accord most affectionately in the Lord to you, beloved son, and to your brothers the Apostolic Benediction. Given at Rome, near St. Peter's, 17th May, 1901, in the twenty-fourth year of Our pontificate.

LEO XIII.

A Great Country.

Australia, looking about her as she enters upon her career as a united Commonwealth has no reason to be ashamed of her standing before a world which bends the knee more and more to the almighty dollar. In Ainslie's Magazine appears an enthusiastic word as to her natural and industrial wealth: "Two-thirds of the Australian continent is a desert, and yet her productivity is enormous. This land contains over one hundred million sheep, between thirty and thirty-five million head of cattle and horses. It has given to the commerce of the world over $2,000,000,000 in gold, copper, coal and tin. The two provinces of Ballarat and Bendigo alone have produced $500,000,000 in gold, and as much more has come from the great Lumbercoors and Lambing Flat, in New South Wales. It sends to England annually over $200,000,000 worth of metals, grains, wool, beef, tallow, hides and mutton. Consider the sheep alone. Forty years ago the output of wool amounted to 3,000,000 pounds. Now, with a record of 7,000,000,000 pounds, Australia furnishes one-fourth of the world's wool, and of such a quality as to make it one-third of the total value. It is recorded that the early colonists used to kill their sheep simply for the sheep and tallow, leaving the meat for the dogs. Later they began to export canned mutton to the home country; but when cold storage was introduced Australia began her shipments of frozen mutton, which have grown amazingly, until 1900 these exports amounted to 225,000,000 pounds. Meanwhile her shipments of tinned meats steadily advanced, reaching last year 45,000,000 lbs. Look for a moment over her mineral wealth for a year! Because of the war in the Transvaal and an immense mining development in West Australia, the new federation in 1899, with $60,000,000 output, led the world in product of gold. By constant gains her silver product has come to equal one ninth of the world's supply. For the past year her total mineral output amounted to nearly $100,000,000, or $25 to every inhabitant. Her mineral possibilities in copper, tin, lead, platinum, iron, quicksilver and coal can hardly be overestimated. As a result of her astonishing fertility, Australian shipping has reached the total of 20,000,000 tons. Her first railway—that from Sydney to Parramatta—was opened in 1855. It was only fourteen miles in length. Today she owns 15,000 miles of railway. A curious light on her prosperity is the fact that she has a million items in her daily mail, in proportion to her population, the highest average in the world.

What is more remarkable is that this colossal national wealth has been built up by only four million people. As a consequence average individual wealth in Australia is the highest in the world. For instance, let us compare the child with the parent—Australia with England. Australia's revenue for this year will probably exceed $150,000,000 which sum is nearly one third that of England's. But with only one-tenth of England's population, Australia is, therefore, individually three and a third times richer than the mother country. Then there are the saving banks with $700,000,000 in deposit. This gives $150 per head to the people of Australia, again the highest average in the world.

Interesting Happenings The World Over.

Prince Maximilian of Saxony, who acted for some time as an assistant priest among the Catholic poor in the East End of London and who is now one of the professors in the Catholic University of Fribourg has undertaken a preaching tour among the churches of Switzerland. Everywhere he is preaching to crowded congregations.

Bishop Bagnshaw, of the Diocese of Nottingham, England, has resigned that see, after having occupied it for twenty-seven years, and will be elevated to a titular archbishopric.

There has been just published a detailed statement of the receipts of the great bazaar held in July of last year to supply funds for the completion and decoration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh. The figures are startling. The total receipts were £33,380 16s. 10d., the expenses only £3,355 19s. 11d., leaving a net gain of £30,035 15s. 11d. Cardinal Logue, to whose influence and energy the success of the bazaar is mainly due, is to be congratulated on having achieved a record even for Ireland.

Very Rev. J. MacDevitt, D. D., who died recently, was buried in St. Connel's graveyard, Glenties, County Donegal. Deceased, who for a long time past had been in delicate health, was brother to the late Most Rev. Dr. MacDevitt, Bishop of Raphoe. He was educated in the Irish College, Rome, and on his ordination was appointed chaplain to the Irish Brigade, then defending the Holy See against Victor Emmanuel's army. The war being ended, he returned home and was appointed dean of the Catholic University. Subsequently he filled with great credit to himself the chair of Sacred Scripture at All Hallows College. It was while there he wrote his well-known work, "The Life of Father Hand." The Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, who attended the Solemn Requiem Mass, paid a graceful tribute to the deceased priest's worth.

Dublin is in mourning over the death of one of its most zealous local missionary clergy, Father Thomas Hunt, of the pro-Cathedral. He died from pleuro-pneumonia, the result of a cold. He had served about eleven years in the pro-Cathedral. Previously he had labored in Kingstown, City Quay and elsewhere, and everywhere with conspicuous success. The Archbishop presided.

The suspension of the Weekly Boquet, on account of lack of support, has been the occasion of a good deal of comment on the poor support too often given to Catholic papers. The people of nearly every district expect to have a paper at hand to stand up for Catholic interests, to give calmness, and do its best to provide good Catholic reading for the Catholic home, but all the same, the fate of the Weekly Boquet has been the fate of many which deserved to live, as the Boquet did. Why is it? The denominational organs of our separated brethren are seldom neglected in this way; yet, with some few exceptions, all the Catholic weeklies find it hard enough to get along. It is not a very large order, a Catholic paper, by the year for a dollar. We wonder that the Catholic press is not better encouraged. We fear that some people are too exacting as to papers or their contents. If they subscribe for a Catholic weekly, they sometimes expect much more than what is due to the spirit which would prompt a man to subscribe for the Catholic paper of his district because it is the Catholic paper of his district, and reserve large demands upon it until he and his neighbors had given it the means of meeting these demands. It is a spirit which keeps Protestant papers financially independent, and if our Catholic friends had more of it, papers like the Boquet would live and flourish.

West Queen's and its Candidate.

In our last issue we referred briefly to the candidature of Premier Farquharson for the representation of West Queen's in the House of Commons in view of the probable early retirement from politics of Sir Louis Davies. The Opposition are losing no sleep over the question of who shall or shall not be the Grit candidate in the riding in the event of a vacancy, but as our Liberal friends have, though their recognized organ, intimated that Mr. Farquharson is quite prepared to enter the lists in this connection we must assume that the matter is now open for public discussion. As already intimated, the names of several stalwart Grits were mentioned in connection with the candidature for this riding immediately after the announcement of Sir Louis' retirement was made. Mr. John F. Whear, it was said, would be quite willing to give the constituency the benefit of his talents and experience, and Mr. Horace Haszard was said to have been specially designated by the great Sir Louis himself as the man to don his political shoes. Mr. Haszard has in more ways than one, posed before the public as a Grit champion. A great many of our readers will remember when, in the eighties and early nineties, he was wont to appear at public political meetings and display a short piece of manilla rope and refer to the price of this material, almost with tears in his eyes, as an illustration of the robbery inflicted upon the people by the "Tory National Policy." Only let his Grit friends get into power and see how quickly the price of manilla rope would come down. In the autumn of 1900 he appeared on the public platform again during the Dominion election campaign; but curiously enough he did not carry that little piece of manilla rope with him; nor could he be induced under any consideration to refer to the price of this material, although his Grit friends had been in power for over four years. Manilla rope, binder twine and Rockfall...

Who could resist such arguments as these? It is not to be wondered at that after giving the matter considerable thought, he had decided to offer for nomination in the riding of West Queen's, in view of the probable retirement of Sir L. H. Davies. He said "he was now in the hands of the people and would accept the nomination if the people so honored him." While acknowledging that very heavy pressure was brought to bear on Mr. Farquharson to induce him to become a candidate for the Commons, there are those who think it would look a little like cowardice or insincerity for him to abandon certain projects in local politics with which he most emphatically identified himself. There is for instance the prohibition act. One would think he should be willing to sacrifice the most flattering offers of political promotion and suppress all promptings of ambition, in order to stand by and enforce this favorite creation of himself and his Government. Just here another question arises. The last issue of the Auditor General's report shows that, for the year ending June 30, 1900, Mr. Farquharson's tug "T. A. Stewart," brought him the sum of $4,495 from the Dominion Government. This amount is made up of so many days work at $25 a day. If he should happen to be elected to the House of Commons, will he still continue to receive the $25 a day for the tug? In the face of all the arguments set forth by the requisitionists, as to the pre-eminent qualifications of Premier Farquharson, and his doubtless reluctant consent to meet their views, we find this statement in the Guardian of yesterday: "The Guardian learns that Mr. Horace Haszard is meeting with general and hearty assurance of support in the candidature for West Queen's." What does this mean? Surely Mr. Haszard or any other Grit will not presume to be a candidate after the send off the requisitionists gave Premier Farquharson the "financier and statesman." There are some people no man can satisfy. The Opposition will observe with pleasure how our Grit friends will dispose of this political kettle of fish.

Wilkes 3rd—Time 2.38. Fifth heat, Prince Regent 1st, Bronze C. 2nd, Parker Wilkes 3rd—Time 2.32. There were only two starters in the Gentlemen's Driving Class, Parkland, owned by James Smith, Kirkora, and Miss Parklight, owned by Levi Stillman, Summerside. The winner was Parkland, who went the half mile in 1.26. An interesting regatta took place on Summerside harbor on Dominion Day. The boats were divided into three classes—A, B and C. The boats of class A were as follows and left the starting line in the order named: "Eagle," owned by J. E. Lefforge, captained by T. B. Grady; "Ladys," owned and captained by Lucas Allan; "Leafield," owned and captained by T. Holman. They finished this way: "Leafield" 1st; "Eagle" 2nd; "Ladys" 3rd. The course was about 15 miles in a triangular shape. There were six starters in Class B and they finished as follows: 1st "Abbie," Capt. J. Pineau, Charlottetown; 2nd "Peppercorn," Capt. H. Coomes, 3rd "C. Locke," Capt. P. C. Gallant; 4th "Wanda," Capt. B. Kelly; 5th "Carrie," Capt. J. Read. Owing to difference of start and time allowance the "Wanda" had to give place to the "Carrie." The class C had three starters but the "Shamrock" was unable to finish. The other two finished, 1st, "Independence" owned and sailed by Capt. J. E. Allen; 2nd, "Constellation," owned and sailed by Philip Gallant. Tale of a Thimble. (Ottawa Citizen.) The Hull, England, Daily News of a recent day has been forwarded by the publishers with the request to reproduce the following, in the hope of discovering the dairymaid: "Mr. A. Darley, provision dealer, of Waterloo Street, Hull, was cutting into an 80 lb. Canadian cheese yesterday (May 30) when he discovered a fairly large thimble which had evidently been dropped by some Canadian dairymaid. The thimble is in his possession, having been brought to us by Mr. Darley, and with the object of finding an owner, Canadian papers might copy. The adventures of a Thimble might form a pretty story." Should this item be read by anyone employed in a cheese factory and who has lost a thimble, the Citizen will be pleased to hear from her and help to recover the lost treasure, if indeed it do not secure a husband for the dairymaid. But what business has a thimble, any way, in a cheese factory? The Prices. There was a very good attendance at the market yesterday. Strawberries were very plentiful and brought from 16 to 18 cents a quart (wild). Garden strawberries sold from 10 to 12c per box. Mackerel brought from 8 to 10c each and lobsters from 10c to 25c each. Other prices were as follows: Butter, (fresh)..... 0.16 to 0.18 Butter (salt)..... 0.18 to 0.17 Beef (small) per lb..... 0.08 to 0.12 Beef (quarter) per lb..... 0.08 to 0.07 Calf skins..... 0.08 to 0.08 Ducks, per doz..... 0.50 to 0.70 Eggs, per doz..... 0.10 to 0.11 Poultry..... 0.40 to 0.80 Hides..... 0.50 to 0.80 Hay, per 100 lbs..... 0.40 to 0.45 Lamb..... 0.07 to 0.07 Lamb (gr.)..... 0.05 to 0.07 Mutton, per lb..... 0.05 to 0.07 Oats..... 0.35 to 0.35 Oatmeal (per cwt)..... 2.00 to 2.25 Potatoes (buyers) per ton..... 0.10 to 0.18 Pork (small)..... 0.08 to 0.12 Sheep pelts..... 0.80 to 0.65 Turkeys..... 0.15 to 0.20

DOMINION DAY IN LONDON. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal presided at the Dominion Day Dinner, given at the Hotel Cecil, London, and was attended by 300 gentlemen, the company including Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Aberdeen and other former Governors General, Sir Louis Davies, Hon. David Mills and Hon. Sydney Fisher, the Canadian Ministers now in London, Ian Hamilton and others. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking of London's material progress, said: "Thirty years ago, your thoughts might have turned to the question of absorption with your powerful but friendly neighbor to the south." This was received with cries of "no," "no" from Mr. Deane and other Canadian ministers. Mr. Chamberlain, "yes, you may say no, but you would not have said it thirty years ago. Of one thing I am convinced, if our colonies desire closer connections and will assist us with their counsel and advice, in addition to their arms there is nothing this country will more readily welcome. Referring to Great Britain's isolation the Colonial Secretary said: "I do not think the opinion of civilized Europe to-day is likely to be the verdict of posterity. Of much more value is the opinion of our colonies than the uninstructed opinion of Europe, which is based upon lies foisted upon Europe by our enemies abroad and traders among us at home. We may be isolated among the nations of the world, but so long as our children rally around us we are not alone." Sir Louis Davies spoke of the work the Dominion Government had done in maintaining order in the Klondike. AMERICANS INSULT BRITISH FLAG. Vancouver, June 28.—The steamer Islander, which arrived from the north to-day brings word that the Canadian customs flag ordered by the government to be raised over the Canadian custom office at Skagway, had been pulled down by an American named Miller, brother of Joaquin Miller, the poet, who is United States custom inspector there, as soon as the engine was put up, asked Canadian Customs Inspector Bushy what right he had to raise a British flag in Skagway. Mr. Bushy said it was simply a customs flag. After it was hauled down by Miller, Bushy ran it up again. The United States Commissioner, and Capt. Jenks, of the United States infantry corps went to Mr. Bushy and stated that the masses were incensed and if the flag was not taken down they would not answer for the mob. They said that if the flag had to be raised the Stars and Stripes would go above it. To this, of course, the customs inspector could not agree, and so the flag was again hauled down by Bushy. Wires were rushed through to Ottawa and Washington to-day for instructions, and pending receipt of these the flag would not be displayed. Excitement runs high and nearly every citizen in Skagway expresses sympathy with Miller, the man who committed the outrage on the customs flag of a friendly nation. The outrage and the concurrence in it of American officers are all the less justifiable from the fact that the maintenance of a Dominion customs house at Skagway was part of the later-in arrangement entered into between the Canadian and United States governments pending settlement of the Alaska boundary dispute. oil were subjects which he did not care to discuss. Between times he figured in another role. He had posed as the apostle of a new political school, wherein there was to be no party. His failure in this departure seems to have been most ignominious. From this it may be guessed that Mr. Haszard's political creed is sufficiently accommodating to suit almost any circumstance of time or place. Notwithstanding all these claims, "a number of prominent Liberals" have presented Mr. Farquharson with a requisition asking him "to allow himself to be placed in nomination," and Mr. Farquharson has signified his willingness. The uninitiated may be disposed to wonder why Mr. Farquharson should be asked by the requisitionists to "allow" himself to become a candidate for the House of Commons at this particular time when so many important matters would appear to be engrossing his attention as the Leader of the Provincial Government. The requisition sets forth some of the reasons why an attempt is made to drag him from his place at the head of the Government. The requisitionists state among other things that they are anxious that Sir Louis shall be succeeded by "our most competent public man." There is something in that. The requisitionists doubtless feel that there would be reasonable ground to hope that Mr. Farquharson's advent to the Commons would result in having new and rare expressions embodied in the pages of Hansard. Then again the requisition refers to the "precedent established some time ago, of replacing retired cabinet ministers by Provincial Premiers" and they further point out that "Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have been honored in this way," and why should not Prince Edward Island? Such arguments as these must carry great weight and it would be very difficult indeed for Mr. Farquharson to resist them. The requisitionists further pressed their case by pointing out that they desired not only to elect him to the House of Commons but to see him in the Federal Cabinet with a portfolio. They looked upon him, they said, as a "financier and statesman" of the first water, and "regarded him in every way qualified as a successor to Sir L.

There was a large attendance at the horse races at Summerside on Dominion Day. The first race was the free-for-all. Three horses lined out as follows: Sir Richard, owned by D. McKinnon, Charlottetown; Parlo, Owen Trainor, Charlottetown; and Park Campbell, Thos. Reid, Hope River. Park Campbell took the lead from the start and held it to the finish, with Sir Richard second and Parlo third—Time 2.32. In the second heat Park Campbell was again first with Parlo second—Time 2.32. In the last heat they finished with Park Campbell first, Sir Richard second and Parlo third—Time 2.29. The next race was the 2.40 class, with the following starters: Parker Wilkes, owned by D. McKinnon, Charlottetown; Prince B. Kent, B. C. Prowse, Charlottown; Miss Parkitis, Jas. E. Birch, Alberton, and Bro. S. C., owned by T. C. Crabbe. There were five heats to this race. In the first Prince Regent won, with Bronze second, Miss Parkitis third, Parker Wilkes fourth. Second heat, Bronze C. 1st, Miss Parkitis third—Time 2.35. Third heat, Prince Regent 1st, Bronze C. 2nd, Parker Wilkes 3rd—Time 2.34. In this heat Miss Parkitis showed and fell near the back stretch, and had to be withdrawn. Fourth heat, Bronze C. 1st, Prince Regent 2nd, Parker

BOERS AT BERMUDA. A Hamilton, Bermuda, despatch of June 28th says: The British transport Armenian, having on board the first shipment of Boer prisoners to be quartered on Darrell's and Tucker's islands here arrived in these waters to-day. The health officers only are allowed to visit the ship at present. The Armenian had a good passage of eleven days from the Island of St. Vincent. The prisoners seemed to be in good spirits though ragged in appearance. There was no case of infectious disease on board and the ship was allowed pratique. The prisoners are a mixed lot of native Dutch and Europeans. The water supply for the party arrives in very scarce, as the weather has been exceedingly dry, and the cooking apparatus has not yet been erected. It was only received this week from London. The prisoners will, therefore, not be landed to-day. BATTLE WITH FIRE AT SEA. The British mule transport Monterey, from Capetown, arrived in port at New Orleans a few days ago, after a terrible pepper-pot with fire at sea. Twelve days out from St. Vincent flames were discovered in the after hold, and gained such headway that the heat prevented the usual means of extinguishing fire on a ship-board. Fire was seen and smoke poured out from the after hold, and the officers and crew were about to abandon the ship, when First Officer Reid and Fourth Officer Harrison volunteered a daring plan. They proposed to tie a cable around the hold and have their companions lower down the side of the ship until they were abreast the port opening into the burning section. It was a desperate expedition, but after a short consultation was adopted. As the fire was near the waterline, Reid and Harrison were lowered down until they were submerged in the sea nearly up to their waists. Hanging thus half buried in the waves with the ship under way, the men hauled to them, and for several hours they hung swinging outward and inward, pouring a stream into the hold. In this way they finally succeeded in checking the flames. The vessel was badly damaged. DOMINION DAY IN LONDON. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal presided at the Dominion Day Dinner, given at the Hotel Cecil, London, and was attended by 300 gentlemen, the company including Mr. Chamberlain, Lord Aberdeen and other former Governors General, Sir Louis Davies, Hon. David Mills and Hon. Sydney Fisher, the Canadian Ministers now in London, Ian Hamilton and others. Mr. Chamberlain, speaking of London's material progress, said: "Thirty years ago, your thoughts might have turned to the question of absorption with your powerful but friendly neighbor to the south." This was received with cries of "no," "no" from Mr. Deane and other Canadian ministers. Mr. Chamberlain, "yes, you may say no, but you would not have said it thirty years ago. Of one thing I am convinced, if our colonies desire closer connections and will assist us with their counsel and advice, in addition to their arms there is nothing this country will more readily welcome. Referring to Great Britain's isolation the Colonial Secretary said: "I do not think the opinion of civilized Europe to-day is likely to be the verdict of posterity. Of much more value is the opinion of our colonies than the uninstructed opinion of Europe, which is based upon lies foisted upon Europe by our enemies abroad and traders among us at home. We may be isolated among the nations of the world, but so long as our children rally around us we are not alone." Sir Louis Davies spoke of the work the Dominion Government had done in maintaining order in the Klondike. AMERICANS INSULT BRITISH FLAG. Vancouver, June 28.—The steamer Islander, which arrived from the north to-day brings word that the Canadian customs flag ordered by the government to be raised over the Canadian custom office at Skagway, had been pulled down by an American named Miller, brother of Joaquin Miller, the poet, who is United States custom inspector there, as soon as the engine was put up, asked Canadian Customs Inspector Bushy what right he had to raise a British flag in Skagway. Mr. Bushy said it was simply a customs flag. After it was hauled down by Miller, Bushy ran it up again. The United States Commissioner, and Capt. Jenks, of the United States infantry corps went to Mr. Bushy and stated that the masses were incensed and if the flag was not taken down they would not answer for the mob. They said that if the flag had to be raised the Stars and Stripes would go above it. To this, of course, the customs inspector could not agree, and so the flag was again hauled down by Bushy. Wires were rushed through to Ottawa and Washington to-day for instructions, and pending receipt of these the flag would not be displayed. Excitement runs high and nearly every citizen in Skagway expresses sympathy with Miller, the man who committed the outrage on the customs flag of a friendly nation. The outrage and the concurrence in it of American officers are all the less justifiable from the fact that the maintenance of a Dominion customs house at Skagway was part of the later-in arrangement entered into between the Canadian and United States governments pending settlement of the Alaska boundary dispute. ### LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

The City Schools closed on Thursday last for the summer holidays.

GREAT heat is prevailing in New York. In that city on Monday seven deaths were reported, caused by heat.

A RIFLE club has been organized at Georgetown consisting of forty members. A match will be fired in October of each year.

WORK on the new fortifications at Herby Cove, Halifax is to be commenced soon. The new fort will be the largest and finest in America and will be defended by sixteen most modern disappearing guns. The Fort will command the harbour's entrance.

THE lumbering hamlet of Glenwood, in Newfoundland, was swept away last week by a disastrous fire. Twenty-five dwellings about twenty thousand feet of lumber and as many logs were reduced to ashes. Twenty families were left homeless very little being saved.

A SHIPMENT of Canadian tobacco is being made to Belgium with a view to open up a market there for this product of the Dominion. Professor Robertson, now in England, will proceed to Antwerp for the purpose of finding a competent agent to handle the shipment.

THE residence of Newton Macdonald, at Margate, was completely destroyed by fire on Friday morning last. The fire occurred very early in the morning before the inmates were out of bed and they had only time to escape with their clothing. The adjoining buildings were saved with difficulty.

A RECENT additional order from the Imperial authorities for hay for South Africa means that, including regular shipments, 56,000 tons will have been sent from the Dominion. Up to the present, since the outbreak of the war, the home government has expended over $2,000,000 for hay, jams, meats, preserved vegetables, etc., in Canada.

A THOUSAND Canadian militiamen, including the 89th Highlanders with their band and pipers arrived at Buffalo, N. Y., on Monday to take part in the Exposition being held there. Dr. Borden, the Canadian Minister of Militia, was met by a detachment of United States marines and escorted to the Canadian building, where a reception was held and speeches made.

DOMINION Day was observed in this city by the usual salute of 21 guns from Fort Edward. The review by the sailors of H. M. S. Crescent in the morning, and the Firemen's Sports in the afternoon were the leading features of the day. A great many people spent the day at the races at the city, and a large number went to Summerside to witness the horse races and the regatta.

A MAN named Peter D. McDonald was drowned on Wednesday last at High Bank, near Murray Harbour. He had been out setting net moorings, and it is thought that his boat must have capsized in some way, as she was found close in shore full of water. His boots and stockings were found on the shore where he had evidently left them before going out in the boat. The deceased was a strong young man twenty years of age. His body was recovered on Thursday afternoon.

H. M. S. CRESCENT arrived in port here early Saturday evening. On Monday morning a detachment of the sailors and marines landed, and headed by the ship's band, marched to Victoria Park, where an excellent review was given, which was witnessed by hundreds of citizens. The physical exercises were splendidly executed and the other manoeuvres were performed with a precision that would almost take away a landsman's breath, and give him some faint idea of how King Edward's seamen are trained and the reason why the British Jackie is the best all-round man afloat or ashore in peace or war.

At the Supreme Court last Wednesday, true bills were found against John McIntyre charged with house-breaking and larceny, and Alfred Gallant and John Gallant charged with assault occasioning bodily harm. McIntyre was sentenced to five years in Dorchester Penitentiary. The grand jury visited the hospital for insane, the county jail and the poor house. They reported the hospital for the insane to be in a greatly improved condition. They advocated the removal of the jail to some less public square. The poor house was found as clean and attractive as the crowded state of the building will permit.

THE Cheese Board met on Friday afternoon last. The price paid was 9 cents, except Gowan Bree which sold at 8 1/2. Stanley Bridge 383, Hazelbrook 100, Windrose 190, Lakeville 128, St. George 100, Gowan Bree 175, New Dominion 100, Dunstaffnage 100, Souris 85, Orwell 265, Belle River 200 to Dillon & Spilliet; St. Peter's 182, East River 110, New Perth 275, Dundas 170, Cardigan 80, to A. J. Biffin. The following cheese were boarded in addition to those sold.—Abram's Village, 150; Kensington, 400; Hillsboro, 200; Mt. Stewart, 120; Wilshire, 220; Red House, 150; Red Point, 83; Morell, 100; New Glasgow, 250; Cornwall, 205; Union, 415. Making a total boarded of 843 white and 4106 colored. The Secretary was empowered to secure a set of scales to weigh the cheese in case of dispute, and also to secure the appointment of an official weigher to look after the interests of the factories. Messrs. Biffin and Spilliet offered $5 each towards the payment of the scales. Next meeting of cheese board will be held in two weeks' time. On motion, was decided unanimously that suitable rooms be secured for next board meeting. After the Cheese Board meeting of the Dairy Association was held there were present; President Arthur Simpson, Vice de Lauchlin McDonald, Directors James E. McDonald, John Anderson, W. Jenkins and Secretary Treasurer Robert Jenkins. The assessment for 1900 was handed to the Secretary for collection. This is a levy of 14 cents on every 1000 lb. milk, and is the same as last year. Correspondence from Inspector Morrow was read, showing that with a very few exceptions, matters are proceeding satisfactorily. It was moved by John Anderson, seconded by D. Marshall, that an allowance of one half-pound be made on all cheese sold. Carried. Hon. B. Rogers announced that the Government will offer prizes of $40, $20 and $10 for the best cheese made during the season. One cheese of each month's make, either white or colored, to be judged. The Government guarantees to take charge of the exhibits when sufficiently cared for, delivered in Charlottetown, and will hold it cold storage, free of charge, until the close of the competition.

The Parishioners of St. Bonaventure's Church, Tracadie, are making a united effort, and will leave nothing undone to make their Tea Party of Monday, July 8th, a great success.

The proceeds of this great demonstration will go towards the completion of their beautiful new church. A beautiful location for holding the tea has been selected, only a few minutes walk from Tracadie Station.

Tracadie, about ten (10) miles from Charlottetown, has many attractions for all who wish to spend a pleasant day and help a good cause. Driving from the city you pass through one of the finest farming sections of the Province. A beautiful level country, comfortable farm houses, large rich and well cultivated fields, and innumerable other features, while ever and anon the waters of the Hillsborough river, appearing at little intervals, add much to the view, and the placid waters of Tracadie Bay are within easy reach. This is truly an ideal spot for holding a pleasant day.

Dinner and Tea Tables supplied with everything of the best, and presided over by the ladies of the parish, will be spread in the old church (St. Bonaventure's Hall). Well supplied Refreshment Saloons, Ice Cream Saloons, Dancing Booths, Swings, Bowling Alleys and many novel amusements will be provided. In a word, everything will be done to make Monday, July 8th, a day of pleasure and amusement.

A special train will leave Charlottetown for Tracadie at 9:30 local time, stopping at all intermediate stations, will arrive at Tracadie at 10:30. A special train will also leave Mount Stewart for Tracadie at 10:45 local time, arriving at Tracadie at 11:15.

These special trains will return same evening, leaving Tracadie for Mount Stewart at 6:30 p. m., and for Charlottetown at 6:30 p. m. local time.

THE PRECURSOR'S WARNING.

BY THE REV. A. B. O'NEILL, C. S. C. Came John the Baptist preaching in those days; None greater 'mid the sons of men that he,— A voice insistent, pitched in strident key. Do penance, was his cry: prepare His ways Whom I unworthy here proclaim and praise; Make straight His Paths, and know that every tree That yieldeth not good fruit cut down shall be: None save repentant hearts will Christ upraise. As timely is the pregnant lesson now As when the great Precursor spake at first; Still 'neath the yoke of penance must we bow, Still pay in pain our countless sins accurst: Hearts penance-bruised for mercy will may hope, All others 'e'en in darkest blindness grope. —Ave Maria.

Blantine of Betharram.

BY J. M. CAVE. (American Messenger of the Sacred Heart.) (Continued.)

"As you will, dear friend, but remember, I only wish to hear what you wish to tell me." "I will be brief," said Margaret. "I know your time is very precious. From the age of five my childhood was passed in the safe shelter of a convent. My mother, whom I never saw afterwards, and whom I only remember for the sternness of the name, left me there and followed my father to a distant colony, Australia or New Zealand. The nuns gave me the best education they could impart. My mother, I was told, left sufficient for my board and tuition till I should reach the age of eighteen. She hoped I would have a vocation and never leave the convent. The Superior was given full power over my future. She was a relation or connection of my mother's I believe. I would have learned the whole history of my family on reaching the age of eighteen. Something happened to prevent it, as you will see. One thing only, I was told from the beginning. I had no fortune to expect and must learn all I could, for learning would be all my wealth. I did my best. I loved the convent, the sisters, the pupils, and my work. Above all I loved the one who stood to me in the character of a mother, as well I might: I loved all these more as the years rolled on. I was a child of the house, a real nun in everything but the garb, and almost in that. As I grew older it seemed as if nothing was wanting to my happiness, but the light to wear the habit of a daughter of St. Francis. To renounce the world I had never seen cost me not a thought. To vow myself to the service of God forever, was my only ambition. "The Mother Superior was about to yield to my desire, the decision lay wholly with her, even a whole year before the time stipulated. There was no one to dispute my choice, and I was eager to make my profession. In an hour all was changed. Suddenly with hardly a minute for escape, the whole place was enveloped in flames, a night of storm and terror, the wind sweeping through the burning buildings as if at mad play with the roaring fire. What a scene of ruin and desolation was made in a few short hours. It was sad to see the beautiful grounds strewn with the wreck of furniture, a useless mass of fragments charred and water-soaked. Though no lives were lost that night, much suffering was caused, as you can readily imagine. "Well, the religious were sheltered by the clergy, and nearest Catholic families, the pupils taken to different hospitable houses. I and a few others were removed to the home of a noble family, some distance from the town. I did what was permitted me to help in saving the little children, and some of our sick—and sustained some slight burns and a sprained foot. "The mistress of that house, a very stately lady indeed, was kind to us all, but especially to me it seemed. No doubt because I was the only injured one of the party confided to her care. "The house and grounds seemed to me marvellously beautiful. I was only seventeen, and had never seen anything fairer than our beautiful convent lawns and gardens. Here were statues, and fountains, and flowers. Such flowers, and vines, towering palms, curious shrubs—ferns of immense size. It was like an earthly paradise. I soon learned that Deane Hall and Park was one of the show places of that part of the country. After some days they carried me into the great drawing-room among the other guests. My foot was still lame, I could not stand or walk. The brilliant throng blinded and dazzled me. I wanted to fly from it. It had no attraction for me. It filled me with fear. Some dreadful presentiment made me wish to fly from it, to resist its attractions—its beauty. For all was beauty there. I did my best to shut out the sound of music, and song, and pleasant talk. It was so new and strange to me, all the wonders of such a house, such a way of life. "But I was forced to take part in the conversation, to answer questions, and there were plenty of questions, ladies and gentlemen, all so kind and affable, yet far too fine for my ideas. One only in all the company attracted me by quiet and unobtrusive attentions. He spoke seldom directly to me, but often replied for me, or turned away a question that puzzled me. I felt that he was helping me, though I hardly ever looked at him. This gentleman was the owner, the heir of the great estate. I hardly knew how it came about that he began to take notice of me, to speak to me kindly, gently, to insist upon helping me when I began to walk. Others were kind, he was more; he protected me at every step. Among the guests were several young gentlemen who liked to tease and amuse themselves by joking and merriment, but it was so new and strange to me to be in society at all that they disconcerted me, and this only increased the general merriment. But it was all full of good humor and kindness, I will remember; I only was ignorant and dull. O, the past was worse than the present for its blindness! The heir of that great house declared he loved me. He asked me to become his wife. He said he had never before spoken of love to any woman, had never thought of marriage, but since he had seen me he knew he could never be happy unless I consented to become his wife. He seemed to me so noble and so honest, so simple and straightforward, above all so true, that I believed every word he spoke. Still I did not consent; how could I! He was a noble gentleman, owner of a lordly estate, I only a poor convent-bred girl, ignorant of the world and its ways. He urged his independence, his right to choose for himself. He would not accept any plan I could offer. At length I pleaded that I could not take a step in life without consulting our Mother Superior. I could not say I did not love him, and he took advantage of this to swear that I should be his wife in spite of all the world. He spoke of his sister, who was expected to arrive from her convent, said how she would appreciate me. He longed for her presence, that he might say before her what he could not say before his stepmother, who was, he said, only a guest by courtesy at the Hall, her dower house being in the great city. But she had made it her home, appeared to love him and his sister as she loved her own son. This son, her only child, I did not see. He was away at college. Sister, I weary you?" "O no, not go on, go on!" "Well, the day was fixed for our departure from the convent, which had been partially restored. I had the utmost difficulty to resist binding myself by a promise to become his wife, but I did. I could not forget our Mother Superior's goodness to me. The respect I owed her, as well as my love for her, would not allow me to take my fate into my own hands. My lonely condition, lack of fortune and friends, he only made light of. They made me only the dearer, he declared, but he was too noble not to respect my wish to do nothing without the knowledge and consent of my good Mother Superior. But he asked me if before parting I would authorize him to come and ask for my hand, if his stepmother would herself ask for my consent. At thought the very thought of such a thing was terrible to my imagination, I yielded to his prayers. Oh, my God! can I ever forget how he looked as he left me, to seek an interview with her? He seemed so confident, so radiant, so certain that all was happily ended. His joy frightened me. He was to go that day to meet his sister at a railroad station ten miles off. He would be absent till evening. His look, as he left me, is still engraven on my heart. This was my last happy day on earth, Sister Noella, though I was far from thinking it at the hour. Had you known him you would not wonder that he made me love him in spite of myself, he was so good, so manly, so honorable in word and deed. His deference for women was the first thing that struck me and commanded my respect. No one could help admiring his personal beauty, for he was remarkably fine-looking, yet utterly unconscious of it. Well, the day passed; all its hours were filled with pleasant talk or music, of which there were many amateur performers among the guests. I had to take my part in all this, for I was almost as well as ever. The day ended. I had retired. I was dreaming a happy dream, perhaps of him, when I was aroused by the touch of a hand and a light shining full on me. His stepmother stood over me. I sat up quickly, no thought of fear in my heart. She had been very kind to me, but she looked stern now, and presently she spoke, abruptly, bluntly, mercilessly. "I have to ask you a question, M. is Dunroby, only one, and let your answer be, 'yes' or 'no.'" "Her tone shocked me into wakefulness, while almost petrifying me with fear. "Would you marry Mr. Dacre, if you knew that you were not his first love?" "Not his first love," I repeated mechanically. "Do you not repeat my words, but answer, 'yes' or 'no.'" "She waited for an answer, while though my brain rushed the words he had so solemnly spoken: 'That never had been thought of love or marriage, or spoken a word of love to any woman before he met me. That I was his first, and would be his last, his only love.'" "I would have pleaded this, but her gaze froze the words on my lips. "I am waiting, and in haste," said the stern lady. She who had been all kindness till then, now stood looking haughtily down upon me, as if I were some abject creature. "No, I would not." She seemed to force these words from me, though she did not speak again, till I had pronounced them. Then she held a paper toward me, saying, 'Sign this!—no rafter write it yourself!'" "What is it," I asked. "Just what you have answered to. I suppose you can be as good as your word, if you did almost succeed in entrapping the heir of Dacre." "I made no reply, but traced the words she held before me—go back to your first love." "She went away then." "There was a long pause. The nun's face was hidden in her hands, but Margaret heard the sobs she could not restrain and forgot her own sorrow to try to calm her. "I forgot that you cannot see," said Sister Noella. "I am glad you cannot see at this moment." Margaret did not understand her words, but conjoined after a little while. "Before the house was set next morning I was outside the park gates. I was ashamed to return to the convent, and would not risk any one seeing me there. I felt myself disgraced forever. The words I entraped the heir of Dacre, were like a brand, burning my flesh. "What was I to do? There seemed no way but this; to hide myself from the dreadful world that had laid its clutches upon me, even in that proud house. I must fly, lose myself, work for my bread, since no one would doubt the words of that great lady, and take my part. And yet it was not that, so much as the pain at being deceived, in the one I had thought so true, so true! "But to fly! How was I to accomplish that, alone and unaided? All I knew of life outside the convent walls, apart from that house, was that governesses found work readily in London. I knew the address of the Home to which some of our pupils had gone to live, while waiting for employment. More than once I had aided the Sister bookkeeper as amanuensis in forwarding letters and parcels, and writing to them words of advice at her dictation. "I had barely enough money for my fare and lodging, for a few days, and this by chance, a little sum was given me by Mother Superior each month and hoarded for convent adornment, happened to be in my pocket, when I left my room the night of the conflagration. "But I set forth, thus ill-equipped, and took the first train that left the nearest station. At the first way station, I descended and entered another. This changing trains two or three times, I felt sure would be my safeguard in my flight. The next morning, exhausted indeed, I found myself in London. "A little food, a cup of coffee at the station, braced me for the work of finding the 'Governesses' Home.' I had to ask more than one polite man, and walk many miles before I reached it, it seemed to me. "But not to weary you, I will pass over that day. I reached the house, and had not yet given any explanation of my coming, nor had been asked for credentials, when a very elegant lady entered the room, where I had been waiting for the return of the Directress, who had been called out unexpectedly on urgent business, they told me. The delay was all in my favor. The elegant lady was Mrs. Moore. She looked sharply at me several times, as she walked up and down the room. I deemed her proud and cold, but something in her attracted me. She caught me look at her, and smiled, and spoke to me. She was courteous, full of tact, and savoir faire. She knew what I wanted without giving me the pain of explanation. "I want a companion," she said. "I've just run over from France to find one. A good reader—your voice is good; a musician—you know music. Some one without encumbrances—you are alone, you say, and free. Shall we start with us today. Does that suit you?" "Perfectly, Madame!" "And the conditions?" "Your own terms, Madame. A thing, nothing." She smiled, and said something very pleasing. In a few hours we were ready to leave London. And no name had been registered at the Home. My prayers had indeed speedily mounted to heaven, it seemed to me then. Without recommendation, without credentials, without wardrobe, save what was contained in a hand satchel, Madame Moore accepted me as a companion. And without question, which was more precious than all else at that hour. My heart would have broken, had I been forced to speak of myself then. Perhaps she divined it. But she was thoughtful from first to last in that respect. (To be continued.)

Life. The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abundant. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns. "And she is reckoned one of the aristocracy in Kentucky?" "Oh, decidedly! Her family feud with the very best people there!"

WE KICK THE CHAP THAT'S DOWN.

This is a queer old world of ours; just as it's always been; It is made up of bills and dales, of women and of men, And while a host is ever near the one that wins the crown, A goodly number are about to kick the chap that's down. Whoever strives in any line and meets with great success The world will sit up half the night to flatter to excess, But woe to him who tries and fails; he gets a chilling frown. Because so many still delight to kick the chap that's down. And so I fancy 'twill remain down to the end of time, Since human nature's 'bout the same in every age and clime; A man has always been a man, a clown has been a clown; So there will always be a crowd to kick the chap that's down.
