Revelations of the Last German Ambassador in England:

My Mission to London, 1912-1914,
By PRINCE LICHNOWSKY.
(With a preface by Professor Gilbert Murray.)

The war has produced few human documents of the importance of Prince Lichnowsky's "Memorandum." It throws a flood of light upon the diplomatic correspondence published by the belligerent chancelleries in the opening months of the war, particularly upon the German White Paper, whose reservations it exposes, whose enigmas it untangles, whose lies it lays bare.

It is the diplomatic story of the Prince's Ambassadorship at London, from 1912 until the war drove him home to Berlin in August, 1914, when he was deprived of rank and distinctions.

Should be read by every man and woman in the Empire; 60 pages, stiff covers.

Prices 25c.; by mail, 27c.

Published by Authority

Under the provisions of the War Measures Act, 1914, His Excellency the Governor in Council has been pleased to order that the following Regulations respecting Lights shall come into effect as and from this date.

W. W. HALFYARD,
Colonial Secretary,
Dept. of Colonial Secretary,
July 16th, 1918.

1. Measures shall be taken so that the glare or upward reflection from street or other outdoor lights in the City of St. John's or in any place in the Districts of St. John's East or West shall be reduced to fifty per cent. of the normal. This Regulation will also apply to Bell Island, Conception Bay.

2. No light shall be lit in any public building, shop or private residence in the City of St. John's, except the windows in such public building, shop or residence are covered by suitable blinds or shades, so that the glare or reflection upon the heavens is reduced to fifty per cent. of the normal.

3. Head lights used on any motor cars or motor cycles in or near the City of St. John's, or in or near any settlement in the Districts of St. John's East or West, or on any road approaching St. John's or any of the said settlements, upon which lights may be visible at sea, shall be so obscured that the glare or upward reflection upon the heavens shall be reduced to fifty per cent. of the normal. Side lights on motor cars, motor cycles, or vehicles of any description must be obscured, and shall not be of greater strength than ten candle power.

4. It shall be the duty of the members of the Constabulary to see that these Regulations are strictly enforced, and all orders issued by them for their better observance shall be forthwith carried out.

5. Every person convicted of a violation of these Rules and Regulations before a Stipendiary Magistrate or Justice of the Peace, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding $100, or in default of payment, to imprisonment not exceeding Three Months.

Remington UMC
.22 Shooting

Plenty of healthy sport either at the targets or for small game. Remington UMC .22 Rifles are made with the same fine, unhurried care as our big game rifles—they are beautiful, hard-hitting, accurate little weapons, durable enough for the boys—fine shooting enough for the expert.

Three Remington UMC .22's—all are beauties

The Remington .22's are distinguished for clean, graceful lines, safety features, facility of take-down and accuracy of fire. Here they are:

Remington UMC Antelope
The king of all .22's. Gives you 10 fast, accurate shots as quick as you want to press the trigger. Not the slightest disturbance of the aim. Simple, simple and very accurate. Nothing to touch this shooting.

Remington UMC Repeater
A beautiful weapon—operates by a smooth-working slide action; with practice you can empty the 10 shots with lightning speed. Remington's side action. Highest grade steel—accurate, rugged, perfectly finished.

Remington UMC Single Shot
An inexpensive but strongly built weapon that will give you years of good service. Made as carefully as our high price weapons.

Remington UMC means the best in Arms and Ammunition.

Ruled BY Destiny!

CHAPTER XXIX.
THE SPORT OF THE GODS.

"She loved Bertie all the time, poor girl," he thought bitterly, as he stopped and looked at the river, leaning on the bridge, all unconsciously, where Floris so often stood. "Poor girl, why did she deceive me? Why did she not come to me and say, 'Bruce, I do not love you; I find that my heart is not given to you; I love Bertie?' Heaven knows I would have let go without a single hard thought. He lit another cigar and turned from the bridge.

Presently he heard the sound of a piano. It would not have attracted his attention—for it was not the first piano he had heard that night—but there was something in the air that seemed familiar.

What was it? A voice now rose, a very soft, pretty voice, and accompanied the piano. He could not catch the words, and yet, almost unconsciously, he found himself supplying them! What were they? Surely he had heard them sung to this tune!

"My sweet girl—love, with frank gray eyes. Though years have passed, I see you still. There where you stood beside the mill, Beneath the bright autumnal skies, Low o'er the marsh the curlew flew, The mavis sang upon the bough, Oh, love, dear love, my heart was true, It beats as truly, fondly, now, Though years have passed, I love you yet; Do you still remember, or do you forget?"

Where had he heard them? They were the verses Floris had sung to Bertie one morning—the morning of the fancy fair! A pang shot through

HER DAUGHTER WAS SAVED FROM OPERATION

Mrs. Wells of Petersburg Tells How.

Petersburg, Va.—"For two years my daughter suffered from a weakness and pain in her right side; at times she was so bad she could not do any work. For two years she was attended by the best physicians here, and both agreed that she would have to be operated on. I suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at first she refused to take it, but finally consented. From the very beginning it helped her, and now she is entirely well, and telling everybody how much good it has done her."—Mrs. W. D. WELLS, 226 North Adams Street, Petersburg, Va.

If every girl who suffers as Miss Wells did, or from irregularities, painful periods, headache, dizziness, dragging down pains, inflammation or soreness would only give this famous root and herb remedy a trial they would soon find relief from such suffering.

For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years' experience is at your service.

not summon strength enough to leave him. His eyes—so wistful, so sad, so reproachful—held her as by a charm. "Have you been ill?" he asked, suddenly, almost gently. She shook her head. "Why do you wear that black dress?" he asked. "My mother—" she faltered. He hung his head. "I did not know. Why did you not tell—but why should you? And you are not ill?" "No." "And—and you are happy?" he continued, hoarsely. The look of reproach, of angelic sadness that shone from her dark eyes went to his soul. He sighed—it was almost a groan. "Has he tired of you already?" he said, hoarsely. "Great Heaven! Is it possible? Floris, I could almost wish that I had not seen you—and yet—" Two tears gathered in her eyes and fell slowly on her cheek. The sight of them tortured him. "For Heaven's sake, don't cry!" he said, hastily; "the past is over and done with. I—I am sorry you are not happy. Oh, Heaven! to see you standing there and to know the gulf that divides us. Floris—Floris, why did you do it?" She looked at him with troubled, wondering questioning. "Why did you, Floris? Heaven—why did you not tell me—why did you not come to me—and—but to go like that, without a word! Did you want to break my heart—were you quite heartless, Floris?" She looked at him as if she could not believe her senses, and one white hand went to her forehead tremblingly. "I do not understand! Why do you speak to me like this?—why do you ask me these questions? Oh, it is cruel, cruel, knowing how wicked you have been—knowing how heartless yourself!" "If" he said, in amazement; and in his eagerness and excitement he pushed the gate open; but, as she shrank back, he too stepped back and closed it again. CHAPTER XXX.
THE CURTAIN UPLIFTED.

HER hands dropped from her face, and she shook her head, her great eyes fixed on him with a wistful yearning. "Will you not speak to me?" he said, holding the gate with his hot hands, his heart beating fast. "You are not afraid of me! You have no need to be! Speak to me, Floris!" She opened her lips—the lips he had kissed. "No; I am not afraid," she murmured, and her voice sounded to him like a ghost's. "How—why did you come here?" and she looked around. "I am staying here, in Florence," he said, with a voice that shook from agitation. "I did not know—" "You did not know that I was here," she finished for him, "or you would not have come." "No; I should not have come! No! And yet I am not sorry that I have seen you!" A pause for a moment. She could not summon strength enough to leave him. His eyes—so wistful, so sad, so reproachful—held her as by a charm. "Have you been ill?" he asked, suddenly, almost gently. She shook her head. "Why do you wear that black dress?" he asked. "My mother—" she faltered. He hung his head. "I did not know. Why did you not tell—but why should you? And you are not ill?" cence beamed from her dark eyes. "I deny! No! It is true, I came with Lord Clifford from Ballydoe—" He made a despairing gesture. "Why should we bandy words? Good-by, Floris, good-by! Tell him he is safe from me, tell him that—" he turned as her voice rang out, clear and commanding: "Stop!" He stood stock-still and waited. "Lord Norman, you have cruelly slandered me—say, more, an absent man! One so honorable and good that his name should not pass your stained and dishonored lips! You accuse me of flying—flying—with Lord Clifford!" She laughed—a terrible, piteous laugh. "What mad story you have heard I know not. The truth is all I know or care of. Lord Clifford met me by accident at Ballydoe station, he accompanied me to London, and then, having done all that a brother could do to comfort and console me under my heavy trouble, he left me. Since that hour I have neither seen nor heard from him! There is my answer to the foul lie you heard and believed!" He glared at her—white, breathless. "You—you received a telegram from him!" "A telegram?" she repeated. "Ah! From him? No, from home. It was to say that my mother was dying—" "Great and merciful Heaven! Floris—Floris!" he cried in a voice of despair, "is this true? Oh, how blind, blind I have been; how mad! Floris, forgive me! Forgive—oh, my poor darling! Why are you here? Why did you not write to me? Why—my brain is reeling. Have pity on me, Floris, and tell me all, this hideous mystery holds me in a net!" She saw the sweat standing in great drops upon his brow, and his hands clinched on the gate until they were white as his face. "I am here—earning my living," she said, simply. "I came here to be away from England, to learn to forget, to—to—I must go now—Lord Norman. Good-by."

"No! No!" she wailed. "You forget—you have forgotten Lady Blanche!" He started and a cold chill fell upon his passion. "Blanche!" he echoed, huskily. Great Heaven! He was to be married to her in a few days, married to her; and Floris— She put out her hand to him. "Oh, Bruce, Bruce, how could you have been so wicked?" He hung his head. "Be just! He murmured. "You left me. I was alone in the world! I had lost you—what did it matter whom I married—" She moaned and hid her face, then she looked up suddenly. "I left you!" she said, in a low, intense tone. "You had lost me! Oh, Bruce, Bruce, you were false to me before I left Ballydoe. You think I do not know—" He started. "I false to you before—I false to you! Floris, what is this? For Heaven's sake, speak plainly! Speak out at once! I am almost frenzied with this torture! I false to you! Am I dreaming?" She looked at him, her eyes full of a sad reproach and despair. "Why do you force me to speak?" she said, in a low voice. "What can it matter now? All is past between us. You are married—" "No!" he thundered. She panted, then her quick eyes read the truth. "Ah, not yet, but going to be. Is it not so, Bruce?" He hung his head, then he looked up. "Never mind Blanche," he said, hoarsely, "tell me what you meant by being false to you. What lies have they told you? Great Heaven, what is this mystery which has wrecked and ruined both our lives? What have they told you?" (To be Continued.)

To remove the stain of iron mould, first drop a little powdered salt on to the mark and then squeeze on a little lemon juice; hold the stained part of the article against the steam of a boiling kettle and the stain will disappear.

Floris came nearer. Truth alone in her face the dignity of injured innocence beamed from her dark eyes. "I deny! No! It is true, I came with Lord Clifford from Ballydoe—" He made a despairing gesture. "Why should we bandy words? Good-by, Floris, good-by! Tell him he is safe from me, tell him that—" he turned as her voice rang out, clear and commanding: "Stop!" He stood stock-still and waited. Oh, how blind, blind I have been; how mad! Floris, forgive me! Forgive—oh, my poor darling! Why are you here? Why did you not write to me? Why—my brain is reeling. Have pity on me, Floris, and tell me all, this hideous mystery holds me in a net!" She saw the sweat standing in great drops upon his brow, and his hands clinched on the gate until they were white as his face. "I am here—earning my living," she said, simply. "I came here to be away from England, to learn to forget, to—to—I must go now—Lord Norman. Good-by."

"Royalo" Port Wine. Creme De Menthe.
Black Cherry Brandy. London Dock Sherry.
Sloe Gin. Ginger Wine Cordial.

266 Water Street,
St. John's, July, 1918.

Dear Sir, or Madam:

I beg to approach you as one whom I am of the opinion appreciates the good things of life with regard to some new drinks I am about to place on the market.

The wines in question, a list of which you will find at the head of this letter, are manufactured by a Toronto concern who, since that Province went "dry," have made a special study of wines that were popular in the "good old days" and have endeavored to imitate these wines as closely as it is possible to do when same have to be made according to the Prohibition law.

The Wines which I am now offering are the result. Nothing like them has ever been on the market since Prohibition days, and they should in no way be confounded with brands of non-alcoholic wines which have previously been on the market and which in the main are syrupy and nauseating.

Special care has been taken to imitate the original flavors as far as it is possible, in fact it is practically impossible to distinguish the two Liqueurs mentioned above from the real thing, while the other wines are very similar in flavor to their namesakes. A not unattractive feature is that the drinks are bottled in quart bottles, absolute counterparts of their real namesakes.

It is my desire to get a sample bottle of each of these wines into your home, for I am of the opinion that once you try them you will become a steady user of one or other of the kinds offered. I am therefore going to ask you to give me an order for One sample bottle each of "Royalo" Port Wine, London Dock Sherry, Creme de Menthe, Sloe Gin, Black Cherry Brandy and Ginger Wine Cordial at One dollar per quart bottle delivered (the same price as in Canada), that is Six Dollars in all.

(These sample orders will be filled through one of the St. John's dealers handling these goods, and delivery will be made as soon as the first shipment is received, probably some time in September.) Orders may be phoned to my office—telephone number 60.

Special prices to the trade upon application.

I am sure you will be pleased with this sample order and I hope to hear from you at your convenience.

With best wishes,
Yours very truly,
P. E. OUTERBRIDGE,

Never has the sign of the cross been more worthily carried than by that army of ministers to suffering who constitute the Red Cross Society. If they would not be insulted by the term, it might be said that they are the ideal pacifists—the bringers of peace. They do everything but fight. That badge of red is supposed to protect them from enemy fire, and it likewise binds them to non-combatant duty. Yet they are everywhere at the point of danger. The sublimest courage thrives in him who goes into the trenches, and over the top, and through No Man's Land, willing to die, if need be, to save others.

Yet perhaps even greater fortitude is demanded at the stations and hospitals where the sight and sound of pain is ever present to the nurse, without the thrill of the battlefield. And yet the battle—that unjustifiable, one-sided battle—is brought even to the hospital by the enemy airman. But while the bombers are doing their ghastly work, those girl nurses—still their work goes on, the calm, sure, self-sacrificing work of saving life where the lives of bombers and the saviour are the prey.

The Red Cross was born in the time of war, and war has called for its greatest exertions in relief work. The infinite demands of this unprecedented struggle call upon the Red Cross for greater expenditure of money and life than could have been conceived before. Yet, as in times of peace the Red Cross devoted itself to the relief of suffering wherever needed, so even in the midst of the war it continues to do the same.

Besides its care of the wounded, its auxiliary service includes correspondence with relatives, search for missing soldiers, feeding and clothing of prisoners in enemy hands, providing comfort equipment for every soldier in the army, re-educating and training in trades crippled soldiers, the care of refugees—thousands and ten thousands—the feeding, clothing, and care of mothers and children unable to completely care for themselves, the re-establishment of destroyed industries, both manufacturing and agricultural, and so on through an endless list of beneficent work.

In the saving and care of little orphaned children, in the bringing of comfort and help to the sick and wounded, in the restoration of life and joy to the despoiled, is not the Red Cross indeed "the greatest mother in the world?"—The Watchman.

A German Inconsistency.

Will the peoples of the Allied countries ever succeed in understanding the attitude of Germans towards what are usually regarded as obligations of morality and honor?

Take, for instance, the discussion in the Reichstag with regard to the exchange of prisoners. There the minister of war explains that, as to exchanged prisoners from France and England, conditions have been accepted which render impossible the employing again of such persons in the war.

That sounds all right and proper, doesn't it? But what, then, is the meaning of the despatch from The Hague which says that Germany, in arranging for these exchanges, is demanding the release of three of her ablest submarine commanders?

The inference seems inevitable and glaring. Apparently she reconciles such little inconsistencies by applying the motto that nothing can be allowed to stand in the way of the necessities of the Fatherland.

And the most curious part of it is that in face of this sort of thing her feelings are hurt when other nations decline to take her word. She talks about honesty and chivalry, and she expects to be believed! It is a state of mind which is simply beyond comprehension.—Vancouver Daily Sun.

Trap Fraternalizing German Aviator.

How a German aviator, who got possession of a British airplane, camouflaged it to look like a French plane, dressed himself in the uniform of a United States soldier, then sailed across the lines of the Allies to fraternize with our aces, is told in a letter just received from Violet McAllister, a Salvation Army war work woman, who for nearly a year has been working with hundreds of her organization members along the front that faces the Germans in France.

The letter, which was given out yesterday, asserts the American troops among whom the writer is working, have yet to give up a single inch of the ground they have taken holding all of their objectives, even against the German tanks, ten of which tried in vain to break through.

The letter reads in part: "Our men put over a terrific barrage last night. All around us are long-range guns, and at 3 o'clock this morning they started in shelling the German lines. With daylight came cessation of our part, and no response from the enemy. Later in the day a most startling thing happened, and we all witnessed it with awe and admiration for our fellows. It seems a German got possession of a British airplane that had landed behind his lines in a fight, and painted it to look like a French machine. Then he got into a uniform of a United States soldier and boldly sailed over into our lines. His idea, of course, was to stick around among our men for a few hours and get an idea of their future plans, whereupon he would dash back to the Germans with that information and qualify for a few tons of Iron Crosses. But he overlooked one little detail.

"This enterprising German overlooked the fact that a countersign is required in the air as one passes, even as upon the ground. The supposedly French machine was seen coming, and a signal was set. The boche, of course did not even notice it. Again and again he was signalled to give the countersign, but he simply sailed ahead. Then the squadron stationed there took to the air quickly, and we all rushed out, because the whole thing happened right above our hut, with the boche hanging pretty low at that. The Allies boxed him in and flew along, giving him one more chance to give the countersign. It was all Greek to the boche, so they tumbled him down to earth, French soldiers, American uniform and all. He was not killed, but he was a very sore and disappointed youth when they hustled him in with the prisoners, and put the machine into the French service against the Germans."—N.Y. Times.

Feed Your Nerves

What tired nerves need is nourishment. Your blood has failed to supply this. To get the system right again, you must supply nutrition in condensed and easily assimilated form, as it is found in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

The blood is quickly enriched, the vigor of the nerves is restored, digestion is improved, and soon you feel through the whole body the energy and vigor of health.

"Don't Come to Germany."

London, July 14. (British Wireless Service).—Germans who have been interned in England and German prisoners of war who have recently been sent back to Germany from England are not happy when they reach the Fatherland. Letters they write prove their surprise and dismay when they discover the true state of things in Germany. One letter from a prisoner sent back to Germany reads: "About 10 o'clock in the morning we left for the good old Fatherland. The first stop we made was at Goch, in Germany, where we were kept six days for examination. From there I was sent to Dortmund, where I was forced by military authority to work in a munitions factory. I stuck at it for three days. I tried my best, but I was not strong enough. The third day I told them I was too weak to do such hard work and left the place.

"In the Bezirks command I got the order to do only Government work, otherwise I should be taken for the army—and I thought to get my liberty in the Fatherland. It was really worse off than at the English camp. On the night of the 11th I deserted into Holland and was a foggy night and a long and dangerous march. Well, dear friend, I think you would have done the same. So much for them. If they had caught me I should have had a bad time, I believe. But now I am out of it, and I give you one word of advice. Whatever you do, don't apply for repatriation."

Another prisoner who was sent to Germany writes: "I have been here about ten days. But what a disillusion! It is no more as it used to be. All is strange, and one rushes about like a lost sheep. Our business here is absolutely dead."

The following is a message sent to a prisoner in England from Germany: "You are in heaven as compared with us. Don't come to the Fatherland, if you can help. We are all finished."

Night Service Before Attack.

"In the blackness of the night one tiny flame quivered at the doorway of what had been a Flanders home, but was now just three walls and a bit. The tiny flame was that of a burning candle. It jumped nervously and flickered in the throbbing darkness under the concussion of the artillery which was thundering its message at the German trenches," writes S. M. in the Daily Mail.

"From various points of the night came men in twos and threes, and now and then a small squad would march towards the tiny light, entering at the 'door' and disappearing into the interior of the place that had once been a home. A man clad in a long cassock and white sleeves came towards the little flame.

"There are no lamps and no oil, boys," he said. "All we have is this candle. What shall we do?"

"Carry on," replied the boys.

"But someone discovered a handful of candles, and these were served out, the boys sticking them on the top of their helmets, where they burned fitfully. At the end of the poor, almost roofless building, amid the pile of rubble and dust, was a pile of ammunition boxes, over which a Union Jack had been draped. On the top lay an open book. . . .

"The man with the cassock began to read, droning his words as he bent over the book, beside which a candle had been placed. He read for about five minutes. The only background of sound to his droning voice was the rumble of exploding shells and the wall of the missiles as they hurtled through the air. The candles gave a ghostly radiance to the scene.

"The man with the cassock ceased to drone and knelt beside his altar of ammunition boxes.

"A few minutes later he rose. This time he spoke loudly.

"Boys," he said in his Scottish burring tone, "there's nothing like the 'Old Hundred.' 'Let us sing.'"

"So they sang the 'Old Hundred,' then another hymn. A crash not far off shook the building and made the earth heave. Some of the boys stopped singing.

"Boys," came the voice from the ammunition boxes, 'Brother Boche is getting the range. Let us disperse. And let each do his damndest in the next five hours. God bless us all.'"

"The candles were extinguished and the boys came out of the wretched building. In twos and threes they disappeared in the blackness. The man with the cassock was last to leave. As he came through the 'doorway' he bent and blew out the candle. Then he, too, went into the night.

"What was it? you may ask. . . .

"It was a night service before the attack at daybreak."

A Royal Silver Wedding

(From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

Great Britain celebrated recently the silver wedding of the King and Queen by a sincere demonstration of respect and affection which was only the more remarkable because of restraint imposed by the war. The King had asked for a simple commemoration and had declared that any gifts would go to charity. A service at St. Paul's and a visit to the Guildhall constituted the sole public ceremonies. But the desire of the whole Empire to honor George V. and his consort could not have been more emphatically expressed. Both deserve well of their subjects. They have devoted themselves with untiring zeal and energy to the heavy tasks which the time has forced upon them. They have been the first to set an example of economy, of self-denial, of single-minded endeavor to do more than their mere duty. In ordinary times they could never have been, perhaps, as popular as Edward and Alexandra were. For a while, indeed, they suffered somewhat by the comparison. Yet in their own way they have won a secure place in the esteem of their own people and of the people of the Allied nations. George has not a few peculiar qualifications for his high position. Widely travelled, intelligent, sensible, friendly, a man of good judgment and a valued counsellor to his constitutional advisers, his great office is more than "broad-based upon the people's will." The King is a power in England, despite the limitations that guard his sovereignty; and a different king than George might have changed considerably the history of the past quarter of a century. America may well join with England in wishing him and his queen long life and happiness.

Harbour Regulations

It is becoming more clear as the days pass by that the Harbour Regulations for the port of St. John's are more honored in the breach than in the observance. This cannot be through ignorance, because if there is one advertisement more than another that finds place in all the Christmas Numbers, and other journals published from time to time in this city, it is that having respect to the throwing of rubbish into the harbour waters. All these ads are of course paid for. In the present case the regulations covering offences against the Act, Chap. 39, Consolidated Statutes, are presented to our readers:-

No ball, stone, gravel, earth or rubbish of any kind, shall be thrown overboard from any vessel in the harbour of St. John's, or at the entrance thereof (except in places, if any, set apart for that purpose by the Harbour Master) under a penalty of twenty dollars for every offence to be paid by the owner, master or other person having charge of the said vessel. No person shall throw any ball, stone, gravel, earth, or rubbish of any kind, into the waters of the said harbour, (St. John's) nor at the entrance thereof, nor deposit the same on the beach thereof below high water mark, under a penalty of twenty dollars for every offence.

These regulations are perfectly clear, yet notwithstanding, violations of them occur daily. In the Telegram on Monday attention was directed to an interview with the Harbour Master, in which the latter admitted knowledge of these continued contraventions and confessed that he was powerless to prevent them. A more serious offence than that of dumping stone or gravel in the waters of the harbour, is committed by fishermen who after splitting their heads, sound bones and entrails of the fish overboard. This practice is not merely confined to boat fishermen, but the shoremen as well are guilty of it. Nothing but pollution of the harbour waters can be the result of a continuance of this state of affairs and measures should be immediately taken to put a stop to it. There should be some means whereby the filling up of the harbor with all manner of refuse could be prevented. It is obvious that it is difficult to break the habit of forty years, but modern progressiveness should surely be able to cope with an evil, even of that age. The law prohibits and penalises such acts. Why not carry it out? If the Harbour Master is powerless, the Fisheries department should take it up. The Board of Health must condemn strongly the throwing of fish entrails over stage heads and from fishing boats. It is a striking commentary on our hygienic and sanitary reforms of late years that a reprehensible practice, is winked at because it has been the custom of the city.

The suggestion that a harbor police be appointed to enforce the regulations is a sound one, but before organizing such a body, a few prosecutions against offenders as the first step, would have a beneficial effect. The law as it stands is being deliberately broken. If it is of no use why go to the expense of having it promulgated in the various journals? Either wipe it off the Statutes altogether or carry it out.

Camouflaging.

The Herald displays an unusual ability to camouflage that Customs Secondary. It answers no questions whatever, but trots forward a precedent. It does not matter what the press had or had not to say about the Board of Works shortage, and the Herald was equally silent on that matter at the time of its occurrence. That is not being dealt with at present. A full report of all the circumstances surrounding the I. O. U. business and other irregularities in the Customs Department would be more acceptable to the public than the thrashing out of extraneous issues. Was it the custom of all the officials to borrow money on I. O. U's, or was the habit formed by only a limited number. If the latter, then the men who were not implicated in these transactions, should be raised above the suspicion which attaches itself to the circumstances. And this one way to carry out that is to have a full and exhaustive investigation. The people have strong reasons for believing that such enquiry does not suit the book of the Administration, and verily it is beginning to present that appearance.

Our Baseball Column.
PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

September is usually a fine warm month.
AN AMAZING EXPERIENCE.
We learn that the Editor of this column, who is at present trout fishing at Come-by-Chance, had a remarkable experience on Saturday. While trouting from a boat near the mouth of the river, he got a bite and knew he had hooked a large fish. He was pretty sure it was no consumptive when it started towing him and the boat up stream, but alas, just as he thought he had the monster played out, and was on the point of reeling in, the trout took to the woods and he hasn't seen it since.

OLD BRITT.
For baseball brains, spirit and grit commend us to old grandpa Britt; He's as cute as a fox, and when he's in the box
You've some eye if you get a safe hit.
A GOOD SCHEME.
Tim and Ernie are of the opinion that if the Government were to send out a steamer to turn off the east day for their game. All in favor of this please say!
NO MORE LINEUPS.
We absolutely refuse to publish the lineups of the Cubs-Wanderers Mount Cashel game any more. There must be a jinker somewhere on one of the nines. We don't think it's Demon Duggan!

Ovation to Royal Couple

London, July 11.—The visit of the King and Queen of the Belgians to England has been purely a private affair, with no public functions, although the British people would have been delighted to accord them any public honors. Yesterday's concert at Albert Hall, which was mostly a Belgian function, had not been advertised, but the ovation the Belgian monarchs received from several thousand of their own people was a scene of delirious enthusiasm.

The royal couple, King Albert in khaki and Queen Elizabeth, a stately figure, in white, stood in the front of the royal box, with the King and Queen of England in the background, while the Belgians sang their national hymn repeatedly, shouted and wept. The formal conferring of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, awarded to King Albert recently by Oxford University, was observed to-day under circumstances which never before attended the bestowal of an Oxford degree. The simple ceremony took place at the residence of Earl Curzon, Government leader in the House of Lords and Chancellor of Oxford University. A deputation from Oxford handed the diploma to King Albert, who responded with a few words of thanks.

No Ball Game This Afternoon.

We wish to correct the announcement in this morning's News regarding the baseball game for Mount Cashel, which is advertised for this afternoon at 3 o'clock. This game will take place at St. George's Field on Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, as officially arranged.

Here and There.

ARRIVED SAFELY.—Schr. Eva C. has arrived at her destination safely.

FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO.—On this date, 1860, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, later King Edward, landed in St. John's.

LEAGUE FOOTBALL.—This evening, St. George's Field, at 7.15. C. E. I. vs. Star, Admission 10c. Grand Stand 10c. extra.—July 24, 11

VESSLS NEARLY FINISHED.—Three fine vessels, measuring from 250 to 300 tons, that are on the stocks at Hr. Grace, are nearly finished, and will soon come off.

BANKER HERE.—The banker Alliance arrived yesterday from the Southern Shore to get medical aid for one of her crew, who is suffering from heart trouble. The vessel is on her second trip to the banks, and hauls for 1,100 qts. for about three weeks' fishing. All the Lunenburg fleet are reported doing well.

Concrete Freight Cars.

In a few weeks' time experiments will have determined the practicability of constructing railway freight cars of reinforced concrete, says Searle Hendee in the August Popular Mechanics Magazine. Stimulated by war conditions, which make the immediate provision of more carriers and the conservation of steel imperative, a prominent Chicago engineer, in association with some of the largest car-building companies, has turned his attention to the fabrication of concrete gondolas. A car is to be built at once in accordance with plans and specifications now in the final stage of completion. Contingent upon the showing made by this car, which is patented, is the immediate production of others on a wholesale scale.

It remains to be seen what the new gondola will do. But it has been designed to accomplish the same work and withstand the same severe usage as modern steel cars. In addition to costing probably not more than half as much as one of steel, the concrete car is capable of being more quickly built. Furthermore its adoption would release many skilled workers for ship-building.

The question of practicability seems to be dependent on weight. Standard steel gondolas weigh from 38,000 to 52,000 lb. If it is found possible to construct a concrete car of 50 tons capacity and consistently keep the weight at about 50,000 lb., engineers feel that success will be assured. In this connection it is interesting to know that for two years or more certain companies have been employing concrete in repairing freight cars, and have found it satisfactory. For this purpose a fine cement mortar, sprayed by a cement gun, is used.

Milk Trees.

Now that milk is so scarce and dear some enterprising person ought to transplant from other countries certain trees which yield this precious fluid.

In British Guiana and the West Indies, particularly on the bank of the river Demerara, there grows a tree known to the natives as the "Hyahya," which yields a juice slightly richer and thicker than cow's milk from its bark and pith. The tree is about forty feet high and eighteen inches in circumference when full grown, and the natives use its juice as we use milk, it being perfectly harmless, and mixing well with water.

The Cingalese have a tree—they call it "Kiriyahuma"—which yields a fluid in all respects like milk; while in the forests of Para grows a tree called the "Massendendron," which gives a milk-like juice which can be kept for an indefinite time, and shows no tendency to become sour. On the other hand, certain trees in the valleys of Aragua and in Cauagua yield a similar fluid which, when exposed to the air, begins to form into a kind of cheese, which very soon becomes sour. In the Canary Islands there is a tree called "Tabaya Dolea," of which the milk, thickened into a jelly, is considered a delicacy.

Address and Presentation

Address to Rev. J. Dwyer Savin, From the Women of St. Joseph's Parish. Dear Father Savin:—With feelings of joy and gladness we, the women of St. Joseph's Parish, respectfully tender our heartfelt congratulations on your ordination.
Oh Priest of God, how magnificent your prerogatives; how marvelous your possibilities; how grand, sublime and glorious your mission! We salute you to-day with hearts overflowing with pride and gratitude. We rejoice with you on the fulfillment of your most cherished aspiration, and we earnestly pray that "The Great High Priest" may grant you many years of fruitful labour in your sacred calling.

Oh God, let years stretch out before him. While Thy reward is hanging o'er Then Thou shalt say: O faithful, one— Come here and rest; thy work is done!
We ask your acceptance of the accompanying gift as a slight testimonial of our affectionate regard; and as a member of the happy years which as an Altar boy in our Parish Church, you endeared yourself to us by your lovely disposition, and won our respect by your lofty and virtuous life.

Your boyhood's faith, by grace Shines out its knowledge in this hour. Christ's manhood now you have assumed. And use unto the full His power.
Assuring you of our continual interest in your welfare, we have the honour to be, dear Father Savin, your sincere friends.
Signed on behalf of the subscribers, ANNIE BROPHY, ANNE CLOONEY.

St. John's, Nfld., July 22nd, 1918.
The above address was read by Miss Rose Brophy and a suitable reply was made by Rev. Father Savin.
Father Savin was educated in Holy Heart Seminary, Halifax, N.S., and was ordained in St. John's, on June 29th, of this year.

House Destroyed.

The House and barn owned by Mr. Walter Crobie, at Bay Roberts, were totally destroyed by fire, said a message received in town yesterday. Mrs. Crobie and children barely escaped in their night clothes, but no personal or other effects were saved. Mr. Crobie is at present on Labrador. No information as to the origin of the fire has yet been learned.

Nurse McGrath Home.

Nursing Sister McGrath, sister of the late Pte. White McGrath, M.M. and Rev. Dr. McGrath, is at present in the city on a brief furlough. Miss McGrath came home to see her father, Mr. Thomas McGrath, who died recently. At the close of her furlough she returns to duty.

Not Responsible.

The brand of "Port Wine" which has made its appearance on the market during the past week is not our manufacture and we know nothing of it.

It is impossible to imitate or copy our brands. In regard to our competitors, in the words of Kipling, "We have left them aweating and toiling a year and a half behind!"
When we charge you a dollar a bottle for our wine, which is the retail price throughout Canada, we are not going to sell you a syrup. Ours has the "warm feeling" and just as much "kick" as the prohibition law will allow.

The carload comprising the under-mentioned brands has left Toronto and should be due here about the middle of next month.

Is Infanticide.

On Monday evening, in the river near King's Bridge, the decomposed body of a female child was found, and the finder rang up Supt. Grimes, who dispatched two policemen to the scene. Yesterday a post mortem was held, proving that the infant was healthy and alive when born, and has been dead a week or longer. It was buried yesterday afternoon in the General Protestant Cemetery.

To-Night's Game.

The football match between the C. E. I. and Stars this evening promises to be the best game for the season. Both teams are the longest of any in the League and have played many a hard fought game. In the older days when the pink and green and the red and white clashed standing near the rail surrounding the field was often at a premium. A win for either team to-night will give them a lead in the first round. The league has decided to charge ten cents admission fee instead of five cents. The proceeds are for patriotic purposes and we feel sure every enthusiast will pay up with a smile.

TOWNS CAPTURED.

LONDON, July 23.—The town of Jaulgonne on the Marne has been captured by the Americans who are continuing their advance. Three hundred prisoners were taken. The Americans on the front south of Soissons captured the town of Bazancy. The French captured Oulchy-le-Chateau on a front between the Marne and Rheims. The British captured Pote Champ Wood taking 200 prisoners and 14 machine guns. According to advices received in London the French this morning began a new attack in the region northwest of Mont Didier. The Germans are attempting their resistance between the Ourcq and the Aisne and bringing up their heavy guns.

FRENCH ATTACK PROGRESSES.

LONDON, July 23.—The French attack near Mont Didier has progressed to the west edge of the wood north of Sauvillers-Mongivry, which means a total advance of two miles. This point is about 2,000 yards east of Mally-Raineval and gives the French control of the heights dominating the Valley of the Aisne. Twelve hundred Germans were made prisoners.

AVIATORS' WORK.

PARIS, July 23.—One hundred and thirty-seven German airplanes were brought down or put out of action by French and British airmen yesterday. Four captive balloons were burned and many tons of bombs were dropped on German concentration points. This announcement is made in the official statement issued by the war office to-night.

STILL RETREATING.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE FRONT. (By the Associated Press.)—Information reaching the Intelligence Department of the American Army to-night indicates that the Germans were still continuing their retreat. Far behind their lines they are subject to a heavy fire by both French and American guns, which doubtless is hampering the movement of their enormous supplies.

HEAVY FIGHTING.

LONDON, July 23.—South of the River Ourcq on the Aisne-Marne front the advancing French forces are reported to have had very heavy fighting to-day. Nevertheless they have succeeded in reaching many places on the railway between Arrmenteres and Coucy.

RAIN HINDERS OPERATIONS.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 23.—A drizzling down-pour of rain over the greater part of the southern battlefield hindered the operations of both Allies and Germans last night and to-day. Further north French troops executed a remarkably brilliant minor operation between Moreuil and Mont Didier, attacking and capturing three villages around which some heavy fighting took place in March and April. They are Mally, Raineval, Sauvillers and Ambillies, all situated on the heights overlooking the Aisne River. Their possession is of great importance.

FISHING SCHOONER TORPEDOED.

PORTLAND, Me., July 23.—A telephone message from Cape Porpoise just outside this harbor, said that a dory containing three men from the Gloucester fishing schooner "Robert and Richard" had landed here, bringing word that their ship had been torpedoed by a German submarine. The PARIS, July 23.—L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper in a review of the military situation, says that the German losses since March 21st are approximately 1,000,000 men.

ARTILLERY ACTIVITY.
PARIS, July 23.—Artillery activity along the battle-front during the course of the night is all that is reported officially today from the French War Office. A brilliant French operation north of Mont Didier, the statement says, resulted in the occupation of the villages of Sully, Raineval, Souvillers and Ambillies and the capture of 350 German prisoners.

TOO MUCH HAPPINESS.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How much happiness we crowd out of our lives by trying to crowd too much in!

A club of young women came down to a cottage near ours which is owned by one of their number one day last week. Their program was to open it up for the day and have an all day picnic. They had planned half a dozen things to do—bathing, lunch, a walk, short motor trip, etc. Had they had the full day at their disposal that would not have been so bad, but they did not arrive until ten o'clock, after a two hour motor "trip" down, and they had to start back in the middle of the afternoon as several of the girls had dinner engagements. The result was that they rushed stealthily all day. I wasn't with them so I don't know how much they enjoyed it but I am sure I should not have. And then think of going home and dressing for a dinner engagement! Al! in the name of pleasure! Surely if they had planned half as much they would all have had a better time.

Both Work and Pleasure Spoiled.

When you are hurrying you are always thinking of the thing you are going to do next instead of the thing you are doing. The result, if it is a question of pleasure, is that you never savor the present and really enjoy yourself. When it is a question of work, you never concentrate wholly on the work of the moment and hence never put your full efficiency to use.

A Poorly Phrased Letter.

I was writing a letter in a great hurry the other day. My impatient mind pushed ahead of what I was writing to what I was going to write next. I could feel myself thinking of the next sentence to the detriment of the present one. The result was a very poorly phrased letter.

Every time you try to crowd too much into your life either of work or play you crowd peace and prize out of it.

Does It Pay to Break the Box?

Of course there never was a time the temptation was so great to crowd oneself. One wants to do so many new important things and one does not want to give up ones pleasures altogether. Which is sane and normal.

But suppose you wanted to get a larger number of important things into a box or basket or suitcase than would go in, which would be better—to compromise and give up the least important or to break the container so that it would hold nothing at all?

This is to certify that fourteen years ago I got the cords of my left wrist nearly severed, and was for about nine months that I had no use of my hand, and tried other Liniments, also doctors, and was receiving no benefit. By a persuasion from a friend I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and used one bottle which completely cured me, and have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family ever since and find it the same as when I first used it, and would never be without it.

Household Notes.

Shepherd's pie can be made of cooked flaked fish and top of mashed potato. The fish is seasoned with soup broth, pepper, fat and salt, with a little flour for thickening.

The book shelves will present a more pleasing appearance if the books are arranged according to colors, making a good composition by putting harmonizing colors together.

Young onions and beets, which would naturally be discarded in thinning onion and beet rows, can be planted carefully instead of being thrown away as usual in thinning.

If you are living in a country community, there is nothing more hospitable to the afternoon caller than a cup of tea served with bread and jam or butter, or with crackers.

An attractive way to serve leftover mashed potatoes is to add to them an egg, make into balls, dip into egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat. They should be flavored with parsley.

A vacuum cleaner is a good investment for any housekeeper. They save work and make housecleaning no longer a necessity, because the dirt is sucked up instead of flying over the house and settling on woodwork and walls.

LETTERS.

If you were three thousand miles from home, you'd look for a letter, too.

You'd like ten miles when the mail came in to see what had come for you.

Through the lonely days and the lonely nights you'd wait for the moment when they'd call your name in a cheery way and you'd hear from the folks again.

You'd think queer thoughts if they failed to write, you'd fancy they'd ceased to care.

And your mind would conjure up evil dreams to worry and torment you there.

There'd be no joy in the morning sun, no rest on your lonely cot.

If once you felt that you were one of the home folks had forgot.

Vain will be bullets and guns we make, and vain will be all we do, if ever that line in France shall lose its faith in the ones it knew.

For cannon and shells are but tools to use whenever our soldiers roam, and their cause is lost if they are not backed by the love of the folks at home.

Letters from home are their hope by day, their dream through the hours of night.

And the blame is ours if they fail to write, if we shall have failed to write.

So guard their courage and guard their faith and keep up their spirits there.

By letting them know when the mail comes in that you haven't ceased to care.

It does not seem fair, if there is one maid in the family, to keep her in the kitchen all day on Sunday, cooking. Plan to have one previously prepared cold meat either at noon or in the evening.

Take a square of any pretty lawn; cut a slit about four inches long in the centre, and bind this and the edge of the square with tape. The result is a very attractive and handy affair to cover a blouse on a hanger.

Milady's Boudoir.

BEAUTY OF THE FEET.

Beauty of the feet can never be attained if Milady has corns or bunions. There are two varieties of corns—hard and soft. The soft corns come between the toes. If you have a soft corn you may protect it by placing a bit of cotton, sprinkled with alum, between the toes. Unless you insert the absorbent cotton to prevent the toes from rubbing together a second corn will appear on the opposite surface of the adjoining toe. Sulphate of copper applied to a soft corn is an effective remedy. The corn should be relieved from all pressure. For this purpose the perforated corn plaster may be used, or a disk of white kid or chamois with a hole in the center.

Ingrowing toe nails cause an immense amount of foot misery. Improper footwear and improper methods of cutting the nails are the reasons for this ailment. If you cut your nails too short or wear a shoe that is too short or too narrow, you will force the skin of the toe over the nail, the flesh of the toe is pushed still further over, until a point is reached where inflammation is set up. Cut the nails squarely across. Do not trim them so close as to destroy the spongy substance beneath the nail. This substance is a special guard to prevent them from growing into the quick. If there is a tendency for the flesh to grow over the nail, push the flesh back from the nail and fasten zinc plaster with a strip of oxide of zinc plaster. Under the nail edge insert a gauze packing.

Bunions are the result of great pressure and friction of the joint. If not attended to, this inflammation may even lead to destruction of the joint. First the joint must be relieved of all pressure. A shoe large enough for comfort must replace the tight one that started the trouble. Shoes large enough and stockings long enough will help.

"1—No torpedo was seen.
"2—No convincing evidence that a periscope was seen.
"3—No submarine appeared, in spite of the fact that three unarmed rescue ships were in the vicinity for about two hours.

"Ship was struck on the port side abaft the beam which discourages the mine theory.
"The weather was fine; the sea smooth."

RESTRICTED.
I do not like the sawdust bread I eat three times a day; I'd like a nice white loaf instead—but nothing do I say. I summon up a cheerful grin, a beaming smile, I wot, and push the coarse brown slice in, as though they hit the spot. Our fighting soldiers need the wheat, to keep their strength and heat, and I am thankful I may eat whatever stuff is left. So bring along your wooden loaf and slice it with a saw; I am no cheap, disloyal loaf, the line at that to draw. I do not like to eat a hen, when I prefer a steak; but, lining up with loyal men, no protest do I make. If beef is needed over there, to help suppress the Hun, I'll feed myself on grizzly bear, if I can find my gun. The soldiers need the beef and wheat, that Germany may fail; it does not matter what I eat, or if I eat at all. I like some sugar in my tea, I like it on my rice, but Hoover lately said to me, "Make one more sacrifice! If sugar from your board you shoo, you may some Teuton halt." And so I make the fragrant brew, and sweeten it with salt. I'm eating things that I detest, I'm drinking things I hate, and all the time I do my best to keep my smile on straight. With cheerful brow, with queenly grace, obey all rules in sight, the patriot with grumpy face is only half-way right.

Mystery Surrounds Loss of U.S. Cruiser.

Washington, July 20.—Belief that the cruiser San Diego, sunk off the New York coast on Friday, was sunk by a torpedo is expressed in a despatch to-day from the chief of staff of cruiser forces to the Navy Department.

The despatch follows: "The captain of the San Diego reports that he is inclined to the belief that the ship was sunk by torpedo. There is no conclusive factor, however, on which to base a definite opinion at present in view of the following circumstances:

Five persons were killed on the Carpathia and all hit the vessel. Splendid discipline was maintained. The survivors were in the water two hours the Exchange Telegraph Company says, when picked up by the steamer which brought them into port. The Carpathia disappeared very quickly. Fire torpedoes were fired at the liner through a torpedo entering the engine room. The remainder of those on board took to the lifeboats. All the passengers on board the Carpathia were saved. They included 36 saloon passengers and 21 from the steerage.

It was the Carpathia which answered the wireless S.O.S. call of the White Star liner Titanic in April, 1912, when that vessel hit a submerged iceberg on her maiden voyage to New York and was sunk with heavy loss of life. The Carpathia picked up and landed at New York 866 survivors of the Titanic. The Carpathia was also one of the first merchant steamers to appear in American waters armed against submarines.

"Old Glory."

During the past 25 years Old Glory, changeless though it is as the emblem of liberty, has added four new stars to its splendid constellation. They represent Utah, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona. With this growth has come (may it not well be said) a corresponding growth in staunch, united Americanism; so that to-day, even amid the perils of war, the humblest sailor or fisherman treads his deck in confident assurance of national power and justice.

The American flag, it is interesting and appropriate to recall, has a history and a course of evolution from the Cross of St. George. It was in 1285 that England adopted as her banner a white ground with a red cross, and this was the first flag to come upon our shores, being brought here in 1497 by John Cabot. The Scandinavians, who are said to have landed on the shores of what is now called America in the year 1000, brought no flag with them, and the flag borne by Columbus never did really reach the American continent.

The St. George flag is the flag under which the colonies were formed in 1643; in 1651 it was formally adopted by the Massachusetts colony and ordered placed on the public library as an "appropriate" occasion. The St. George flag was the flag of this country for 180 years. In 1686 Sir Edmund Andros arrived in Boston to become the governor of the colony and brought from the king a flag for New England. This was similar to the St. George flag, the red cross, however, being wider and in the upper part of the cross was a crown, signifying the king's authority, and in the lower part the letters "J.R." standing for "Jacobus Rex," meaning James, the King. It was known as the "Andros" flag and was our official flag for 21 years.

England and Scotland having united in 1707, England changed her flag, and our flag was changed with it. This one was a red body ground, with a canton containing the St. George cross of red on white, crossed by a St. Andrew's cross of white on blue, the latter from the Cross of Scotland. This flag was known as the "King's Union." When the king signed official documents he wrote "Jacobus Rex," and after a while the flag known as "King's Union" was frequently called "Jacobus Rex" and from this fact originated the term "Union Jack."

At the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775, the minute-men from the town of Bedford, under Captain Nathan Page, brought a flag which was known as the Bedford flag. This flag is still preserved in the public library at Bedford, Mass. It is a maroon ground, upon which is an extended arm grasping a sword, from which is suspended a band containing the words, "Aut Vince Mori," meaning "conquer or die." In October, 1775, the Continental congress adopted a flag, white ground with a pine tree, and over it the words "An Appeal to Heaven." This was the first flag officially adopted by Congress, and was specially designed for the navy.

When the declaration of Independence was read, the Cambridge flag with the king's coat of arms was destroyed, and later a movement was set on foot to secure a national emblem. Many designs were offered to the committee, but the members could not agree, and finally left it to General Washington. He suggested that as the red and white stripes had been continued in use on many private flags, they be adopted as a body and a blue canton be added, with some different figure

The Scandinavians, who are said to have landed on the shores of what is now called America in the year 1000, brought no flag with them, and the flag borne by Columbus never did really reach the American continent.

The St. George flag is the flag under which the colonies were formed in 1643; in 1651 it was formally adopted by the Massachusetts colony and ordered placed on the "hastie," on all proper occasions. The St. George Cross was the flag of this country for 130 years. In 1538 Sir Edmund Andros arrived in Boston to become the governor of the colony and brought from the king a flag for New England. This was similar to the St. George flag, the red cross, however, being wider and in the upper part of the cross was a crown, signifying the king's authority, and in the lower part the letters "J.R." standing for "Jacobus Rex," meaning James, the King, was known as the "Andros" flag and was our official flag for 21 years.

England and Scotland having united in 1707, England changed her flag, and our flag was changed with it. This one was a red body ground, with a canton containing the St. George cross of red on white, crossed by a St. Andrew's cross of white on blue, the latter from the Cross of Scotland. This flag was known as the "King's Union." When the king signed official documents he wrote "Jacobus Rex," and after a while the flag known as "King's Union" was frequently called "Jacques Union," and from this fact originated the term "Union Jack."

At the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775, the minute-men from the town of Bedford, under Captain Nathan Page, brought a flag which was known as the Bedford flag. This flag is still preserved in the public library at Bedford, Mass. It is a maroon ground, upon which is an extended arm grasping a sword, from which is suspending a hand containing the words, "Aut Vinco Mori," meaning "conquer or die." In October, 1775, the Continental congress adopted a flag, white ground with a pine tree, and over it the words "An Appeal to Heaven." This was the first flag officially adopted by Congress, and was specially designed for the navy.

When the declaration of independence was read, the Cambridge flag with the king's coat of arms was destroyed, and later a movement was set on foot to secure a national emblem. Many designs were offered to the committee, but the members could not agree, and finally left it to General Washington. He suggested that as the red and white stripes had been continued in use on many private flags, they be adopted as a body and a blue canton be added, with some different figure than that of the English Union Jack. Stars were finally adopted.

Mrs. Betsey Ross, a young widow, who was skilled in needlework and had done considerable fancy work for General Washington, had promised him to make the model flag. When Washington, with Robert Morris, the great financier, and John Ross, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and Betsey's uncle called upon her in Philadelphia, and Washington drew out the design, she refused to make it, as the pattern had upon it a six-pointed star. "That star is a sign of heraldry," said she. "As they are to be placed in a circle, they will have to be put on always with much care, as they must be perfectly straight to look well, while a five-pointed star looks well any way it is placed. If you look at a star in the sky it always looks as if it had five points." Taking a piece of paper she folded it, and making one cut of the scissors, handed it to General Washington, who, opening it, said: "Gentlemen, it is perfect, let us have them five-pointed." This is the flag that was adopted June 14th, 1777.

Paul Jones, as commander of the Ranger, to which he was appointed on June 14, 1777, claimed he was the first to display the Stars and Stripes on a naval vessel. It is probable that the flag was first unfurled in battle on the banks of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777. The first battle after its adoption. It first appeared over a foreign stronghold June 23, 1778, when Captain Rathbone of the American cloop of war Providence captured Fort Nassau, New Providence, Bahama Islands. John Singleton Copley, the American painter, claimed to be the first to display the flag in Great Britain. On the day when George III. acknowledged the independence of the United States, December 5, 1782, he painted the flag in the background of a portrait of Elkannah Watson.

To Captain Moore, of the Whaling ship Bedford, of Nantucket, Mass., is doubtless due the honor of first displaying the Stars and Stripes in a port of Great Britain. He arrived in the Downs with it flying at the peak, February 3, 1783.

This was the American flag for 18 years, but in 1794, Kentucky and Vermont having been added to the union, Senator Bradley of the latter State introduced a bill in Congress to change the flag to 15 stripes and the same number of stars, claiming that these two States should be recognized in the flag. The law was passed to take effect May 1, 1795. This was our flag during the war of 1812, and this was the flag that Francis Scott Key saw floating over Fort Mifflin when he was inspired to write "The Star-Spangled Banner."

On April 4, 1818, Congress enacted the following bill, which is the law to-day:

"Section 1. Be it enacted, that, from and after the fourth day of July next, the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union have 33 stars, white in a blue field.

"Section 2. And, be it further enacted, that, on the admission of every new State into the union, one star be added to the union of the flag; and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth of July next succeeding such admission."

It has often been said in orations that the red meant valor, the white purity and the blue loyalty, but Washington gave us a sentiment that is even grander. Gazing upon it, he said: "We take the stars from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity, representing liberty."—Fishing Gazette.

Wood Getting Scarce.

WHY NEW FORESTS ARE TO BE PLANTED.

So much wood has been used in the present war that soon the supply will not be able to meet the demand. Within recent years an increasing quantity of wood has come from Russia, but now most of her ports are closed.

Forests in the United States, Canada, and Scandinavia have yielded the heavy toll, and as so much land in the two former has been cleared for settlement no new supply is being grown. In England and Wales the total area of woodland is less than two million acres and very little of it gives its maximum yield. Canada possesses a forest larger in area than the whole of England, Wales, and Scotland put together. This forest is in the Hudson Bay and Labrador region and is a thousand by seventeen hundred miles in extent.

Another big forest stretches from Alaska to Washington State; the Amazon Basin, South America, comprises about two thousand one hundred miles by thirteen hundred miles of forest; while Central Africa has a forest region three thousand miles from north to south, and of unknown width from east to west, and the pine, larch, and cedar forests of Siberia are three thousand by one thousand miles in extent.

But in spite of these huge tracts things are so serious that the governments of the world are preparing vast schemes of re-forestation when the war is over. Even now they have stopped the indiscriminate chopping down of trees, and in the United States and Canada it is a penal offence to damage growing trees or cut them down in certain districts.

Our own government has a scheme in hand to create a wind screen of trees along the top of the cliffs of the exposed western coast, at a cost of twenty millions. This screen will not only supply much wanted wood, but will prevent the salt Atlantic gales sweeping over and scouring the land behind it, so freeing millions of acres of land for wheat and other cereal cultivation.—Ex.

An Unsinkable Ship.

A valuable contribution to the problem of constructing a so-called unsinkable ship is the French design. That the design has been subjected to expert naval discussion, and has been approved, is shown by the fact that The Foundation Company of New York has received from the French Government a contract for the construction and equipment of five steel cargo steamers of this type, and that work on this craft has actually begun.

The vessels will be built from designs of the French Naval Engineer, Le Parmentier, which are the result of practical experiments, as well as of the theoretical study of the stability of floating bodies. The French Government did not decide to have ships of this type built until it had completed tests upon a large-scale model, which demonstrated that it would probably be necessary to explode at least three torpedoes against the side of a full-sized hull before it could be sunk. Therefore, the term unsinkable can be applied to the Le Parmentier design in more than a figurative sense; for under normal conditions a submarine would be forced to submerge by gun-fire from the ship attacked before it could launch more than two torpedoes.

In undertaking the development of an unsinkable ship design M. Le Parmentier adopted the following fundamental principles:

1. That the vessel must be divided into a number of watertight compartments.

2. That the details of the framing should not involve impractical and costly construction. Both of these principles will be fulfilled by the ships now under construction at one of The Foundation Company's Southern yards.

The vessel consists of two parallel cylindrical hulls joined by transverse bulkheads. The cylindrical shape gives the maximum of hull strength and provides inner walls to withstand the tremendous force of a torpedo explosion.

Furthermore, these walls form two longitudinal watertight bulkheads strengthened by watertight transverse members, which join the two cylinders and form six centrally-located reserve buoyancy compartments. Each cylinder is itself sub-divided by watertight bulkheads, so that the vessel has a total of 13 watertight compartments.

The experiments made by the French government indicate that not more than two compartments in one cylindrical hull and possibly two in the adjoining reserve buoyancy space would be penetrated by the explosion of a torpedo at the side of the vessel. Assuming that only two compartments in the outside cylindrical portion of the hull were flooded the ship would list about four degrees and the effects upon the trim of the vessel of flooding first four and then six compartments of one hull are no more serious.

Calculations show that even though one hull were completely flooded, the buoyancy of the opposite hull and the adjoining reserve space would keep the vessel afloat. Even in this condition the ship could be brought into port by the propelling machinery in the undamaged hull, this unit being entirely independent of the engines and boilers installed in the submerged hull.

The present designs call for a ship 320 feet long, with cylinders 20 feet in diameter which will have a dead-weight capacity of 4,250 tons on 16 feet draft. Twin-screw steam engines of 700 horse-power each will be installed and they are expected to give a speed of eight knots, when the ship is loaded. Steam will be furnished by two sets of independent watertube boilers stowed with oil fuel. Three cargo masts with six cargo booms will be provided, the masts being stepped between the two cylinders, with winches in the fore-and-aft passage-way below deck.

A valuable feature of the double-cylinder construction of these ships is, that, to a certain extent, which will vary with the character of the cargo, they are self-righting. For it is evident that if it is carrying for instance, a full load of coal, the opening to the sea of two or three compartments on one side of the ship, with the consequent heeling, would cause the greater part of the cargo in these particular compartments to be spilled out of the hull, with a resultant lightening of the ship upon that side, a reduction of the angle of heel, and a return, more or less, to the condition of normal trim. These results, with variations according to the particular case in hand, would hold with any cargo that was heavier than sea water and which was of such a character that it could spill out through the breach in the ship's side as the angle of heel increased.—Scientific American.
