British Losses in Ships Torpedoed Much Larger Than Usual

London, June 20.—The weekly list of British losses in torpedoed ships which will be issued today, will show the highest total of many weeks. The number of ships sunk being comparable to the worst week since the ruthless U-boat campaign began. The returns week by week for the last three months show that the U-boat activities run in waves and it is assumed that this week is the crest of a period of superactivity.

Six Months of Careful Preparations Now Find British Prepared For Victory Drive

Despatch From Haig to War Office Covers Operations in France From December Last to Prevent Offensive

London, June 20. (via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, has forwarded to the war office, a despatch covering operations from the 18th December to the present offensive. It affords a connected story and a valuable historical record elucidating much that has hitherto been obscure and revealing the strategic plans behind the apparently isolated attacks and raids, which continued throughout the winter and showing all as fitting into a comprehensive and systematic scheme in order to prepare a favorable situation for the spring advance.

London, June 19.—British forces have made some gains on the Arras front, according to the official statement issued tonight. Four German field guns were taken east of Messines in the advance last Thursday.

Bulletin, Paris, June 20.—Heavy artillery fighting is in progress on the Aisne and Champagne fronts, says today's official statement. Early this morning the Germans carried on a severe bombardment of French positions near Laffaux Mill and in the region of Mont Carnillet.

London, June 20.—The building of the newspaper Russkia Volia, Petrograd's richest and most largely circulated newspaper, was seized this morning by a corps of armed anarchists which ejected the staff, destroyed all the copies of the paper and the books, and declared that they would stand siege.

London, June 20.—The capture of 2,000 yards of trenches lying south of the southern foot of Sere Hill, made the village of Sere a prominent enemy salient, and further progress in the Ancre Valley would make it untenable. Therefore a larger operation was begun with the view of acquiring the northern extremity of the Morvale-Thieval Ridge, which commanded the southern approaches to Pys and Miramont, and the observation of the upper Ancre Valley. Simultaneously a smaller force was designed to capture Marston.

Carefully Planned Campaign of British is Outlined by the Commander—Chief in Document of Historic Value

London, June 20.—The despatch proceeds to describe how the enemy's resistance increased as we neared Hindenburg's line, emphasizing the great costliness of his many counter-attacks particularly in attempts to recover Beaumont-le-Cambrai. Speaking of the outstanding features of the five months fighting from the 18th of November, Field Marshal Haig says despite the unusual severity of the weather, the winter campaign was conducted to a successful issue under the most trying and arduous conditions. The activity of our battle-front was maintained without a break from the conclusion of last year's offensive to the commencement of the present operations. The successful accomplishment of this part of our general plan had already enabled us to realize no inconsiderable instalment of the fruits of the Somme battle, and has gone far to open the road to their full achievement. The courage and endurance of our troops have carried them triumphantly through periods of particularly trying fighting in which they were subjected to the maximum of personal strokes, while the conditions of the country across which we were moving made the progress of our artillery slow. But the enemy's forces were known to be holding a formidable defensive system, upon which he could fall back, should his counter-stroke miss its aim. On the other hand, as our troops moved forward they left all prepared defences farther behind. In such circumstances the necessity for caution was obvious. Meanwhile, despite the enormous difficulties which the condition of the ground and the ingenuity of the enemy placed in our way, the work of repairing and constructing bridges, roads and railways was carried on with the most commendable rapidity.

Building of Petrograd's Foremost Journal Seized This Morning OFFICE SURROUNDED Rebels, Censured by Paper, Will Stand Siege in Building

Petrograd, via London June 20.—The building of the newspaper Russkia Volia, Petrograd's richest and most largely circulated newspaper, was seized this morning by a corps of armed anarchists which ejected the staff, destroyed all the copies of the paper and the books, and declared that they would stand siege.

When the government learned of this action, by the anarchists it ordered strong measures. General Polovtsov, commander of the Petrograd troops sent a large force of Cossacks, infantry and machine guns and surrounded the building. In the meantime the congress of the council passed a resolution condemning the anarchists. The commander of the troops sent a message demanding their surrender. The anarchists entered into negotiations with the commander, and later, under threat of military action, the anarchists, realizing that their position was hopeless, surrendered. Seventy of them were marched to jail.

Population of Fifty Million For Canada

Advantages Greater for Growth Now Than They Were in U. S. in Last Century—Canada Should go Ahead in Industries Also

It is true also of wealth. Capital has begun to flow to Canada from the United States because this country presents a more attractive and congenial field for the investment of surplus American wealth than any other country in the world.

At the present time the vast area contained within the boundaries of the Dominion of Canada is occupied by a population of less than 8,000,000 people. Nature however, has been very bountiful in her gifts of nature to this country.

Up to the beginning of the present century, development on this continent was largely monopolized by the United States. The exploitation of the natural resources of the United States and the settlement of American lands put the development of Canada into the background for the time being.

When we remember all this, and remember how vast are our undeveloped resources in timber, iron, minerals and water-powers, we can hardly help agreeing with Mr. Dennis that a population of 50,000,000 people for Canada, within a reasonable time is well within the bounds of possibility.

THE SITUATION.

Judging from appearances Haig is preparing for a new thrust on a big scale in both France and Belgium.

In the Champagne region the enemy made a strong counter attack in an effort to regain lost ground, but the French successfully repulsed the assault.

The overthrow of the Austrian Government by Polish representatives who refused to support the budget has opened up a grave position of affairs for the Kaiser's main ally. The disruption thus started may have wide reaching effects.

Lord Rhonda, the new British Food Controller, in an interview, made the statement, "In this war and especially at this stage, food power is co-equal with man power." He added that the solution of the necessary supplies mainly rested with the United States and that he felt sure they would rise to the emergency in this latter regard it is worthy of note that President Wilson, tired of legislative inactivity, proposes to take matters in his own hands.

A Russian diplomatic mission received a warm welcome at Washington.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX

It is generally understood that the Dominion Government has in view the necessary steps for what has been called "the conscription of wealth." The phrase will do as well as any other, although in its literal sense conscription applies to all men and the majority of us are certainly not in the wealthy class.

War obligations in Canada are causing the national debt to grow at a tremendous rate each day, and money has to be found to take care of this burden within the Dominion, for our borrowing powers are not what they were.

Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, a short while ago put a tax on business profits exceeding seven per cent. During the last fiscal year $15,000,000 came from this source, and for the current year the total is likely to reach $20,000,000 or $25,000,000.

Hitherto a Federal income tax has not been invoked, but there cannot be much doubt that such a step will be taken.

In Great Britain all earned and inherited incomes are taxed above $50 per annum, and the levy ranges from 4 1/2 to 42 per cent. In the United States incomes below $3,000 per annum are exempt and over that sum taxation runs from 1 to 45 per cent.

In Ontario incomes below $1,500 do not now bear any municipal levy, and the same figure will quite probably hold good if the Ottawa authorities decide to tap this new source of supply. Such a minimum would exempt the large class of workers who already have enough to do to make both ends meet in these days of high prices.

It is the man with the big annual income, either because he holds a highly remunerative position or by reason of accumulated wealth, upon whom it is generally recognized that any additional call should fall, and moreover, such individuals have usually reached years which render their personal services unavailable. A graded tax on such from $1,500 a year upwards, would be eminently fair and without doubt be met in the proper spirit.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.

The country is to be heartily congratulated upon the fact that Hon. W. J. Hanna has been appointed Food Controller by the Dominion Government. In his acceptance of the position he stipulated that there should be no salary and he evidently regards the herculean task as his "bit" on behalf of war help.

Mr. Hanna for many years occupied the post of Ontario Provincial Secretary and he was very properly regarded as the right hand man of Sir James Whitney in the cabinet of the latter. A short while ago he voluntarily relinquished the office named. He brought to the duties of the post great administrative ability and personal force, introducing many reforms and placing the department on a thorough business basis. His powerful aid did much to help in the successful framing of progressive legislation and the prison reform scheme was only one of his many activities.

It will be generally agreed that no more fitting selection could have been made by Sir Robert Borden and that in Mr. Hanna a director has been obtained of outstanding capacity and fearless purpose.

The powers conferred upon him are of a very wide and far reaching nature and will without any question be exercised with exceptional intelligence and effectiveness.

LAURIER'S BAD BREAK

Laurier drove a number of his supporters away from him in his effort to rush through the Reciprocity pact. He has done a similar thing now in connection with his mistaken, and mischievous attitude with regard to the necessary conscription measure. His speech in support of his alternative plan of a referendum, was a begging of the question from first to last, and he carefully avoided any statement as to where he stood himself on the main issue. The only thing he was positive about was that if the people answered in the affirmative he would guarantee that the residents of "my own Province" would fall in line. Having such admitted power over his compatriots the question naturally arises as to why he has not hitherto exercised it on behalf of voluntary service and the prevention of the disloyal French Canadian attitude. The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Star (Liberal) says of the speech of Sir George Foster, who followed the Liberal leader:

"He was quick to strip the cloak of eloquence from the naked form of delay. He was merciless when he showed to the world the shallow pretence involved in a referendum."

Anyone who read the two deliveries will recognize this as an adequate description of what took place.

As the outcome, it has been demonstrated, as in the matter of Reciprocity, that Laurier is a leader, who does not lead. In the Dominion House yesterday the first of his followers to openly break away from him on the present issue, was Mr. Hugh Guthrie, member for South Wellington. He did so on the ground that the proposed referendum was an evasion of responsibility. Ten or twelve other Liberals, it is stated, will take a similar stand. The Nationalist members will vote for the delay, but the Government seems likely to get through on a small margin. Then it is said that those who have been sticking to Laurier against their better judgment, will walk into the lobby on behalf of the main measure, which is sure of adoption by big plurality.

In addition to losing members in the House, Sir Wilfrid has practically lost the support of all the Liberal papers outside of Quebec, whose opinions are in any sense worth while.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Laurier in his 76th year and Sir George Foster in his 70th, clashed over the conscription debate with honors, as so often before, with the latter.

The Poles have upset the Austrian Hun cabinet. They have also upset the appearance of many Brantford streets.

The women in the Old Land are to get the vote on the same basis as the men. Pretty soon the civilized world over, the marriage ceremony will have to be altered to read, "Do you take this voter to be your wedded wife?"

Sir Donald Currie has been chosen to command the Canadians at the front. A good name that for a warm buck.

Brantford ministers desire to be included in the various conscription classes according to age. Good for them.

ITALIANS' GAIN.

Rome, June 20—Via London.—The Italians resumed the offensive to-day. The war office announces the capture of Austrian positions on Monte Ortigara, and took 936 prisoners. The Italian attack of yesterday is a resumption of the fighting begun on June 11 on the Trentino front south-east of the city of Trent, the capture of which is one of the chief Italian objectives. In the first attack the Italians took positions on Monte Ortigara and Cardee Agnello Pass.

OTHER NEWS OF PARIS

Pretty Wedding Takes Place This Afternoon, Dawson-Postill

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Paris, June 20—Following the announcements made in the downtown churches on Sunday, inviting the teachers and Sunday School workers to meet in the "Y" last evening to complete arrangements for "Association Sunday," which is being held this Sunday June 24th, a large representative gathering was there in response to the appeal. Mr. Sparks, represented the Salvation Army, and said they were willing to give every assistance. A big mass meeting will be held at King's Ward Park at 4 o'clock, when all the Senior Sunday School scholars will march with their teachers to attend same. The special speaker will be Mr. Taylor Stratton, National Boys' Work Secretary, also Captain Best. The male quartette from the Presbyterian church will also sing and the band will be in attendance. It is to be hoped that all the citizens in town will be present, especially those who have soldiers overseas, so they may hear what the Y. M. C. A. is doing for the boys on the battle field in France, as also in the Military Training camps in England and Canada. The splendid work of the "Y" among the soldiers is one that is greatly appreciated by the men, and all Christian workers should rally to the support of the local institution where many pleasant hours were spent by our Paris soldiers while in course of training here. A house to house canvass will be made on the 26th and 27th of this month for funds to keep up the local departments, the following committee being charged:

- No. 1 (North)—C. M. Wells, chairman, Messrs J. W. Hilborn, John Harold, E. Taylor, A. Sayles.
- No. 2 (North)—H. A. Crooks, chairman, Messrs I. Stewart, M. Deans, Lloyd Thompson.
- No. 3 (King)—J. R. Inkster, chairman, Messrs T. S. Davidson, W. T. Thompson, Drs. Legie and Dunton.
- No. 4 (Flats)—R. E. Cale, chairman, Messrs G. W. Featherstone, Chas. McCausland and W. Young.
- No. 5 (Queen's)—T. C. Munn, chairman, Messrs John M. Patterson and Carroll.
- No. 6 (South)—H. Rehder, chairman, Messrs E. Pitts, John Garson and M. Martin.
- No. 7 (Millionaires on the Flats)—C. H. Heddie, chairman, Messrs C. E. Winders, H. Long, W. Daniel, E. Haire, C. Wheeler, R. E. Paine.

FERDY IS FEARFUL

By Courier Leased Wire. Geneva, via Paris, June 20.—The semi-official Balkan News Agency says that King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has been impressed deeply by the abdication of King Constantine, and considers it certain former Premier Venizelos will take office at the head of the government, and that Greece will enter the war against Bulgaria. King Ferdinand intends to go shortly to German great headquarters to demand assistance. Consternation has been caused in Sofia by Constantine's abdication.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this afternoon at 2 o'clock, when Margaret Pearl, eldest daughter of Mrs. Louise Postill, was united in marriage to Alfred Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Dawson, of Brantford. The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore a dainty dress of white silk and carried white roses. The young couple were unattended. Rev. Mr. Wells officiated. After the ceremony, the guests adjourned to the dining room where a sumptuous supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson left on the 5:25 train for Toronto, where their honeymoon will be spent, the bride wearing a navy blue serge suit with chic hat to match. Upon their return they will reside in Brantford. A host of Paris friends extend best wishes and hearty congratulations.

There passed away at 917 Lansdowne Ave., Toronto, yesterday, Violet, beloved wife of Pte. Norde, man G. Tease, in her 24th year. Besides her husband, who is over in France, she leaves a little babe two weeks old. Much sympathy will be extended to the bereaved ones in this their sad and sudden loss. The remains will be brought here for burial. Service will be held at the residence of her brother-in-law, Reginald Tease, Walnut St., to-morrow afternoon, at 4 p.m., and thence to the Paris cemetery for interment.

BUILDING PERMITS

FOR CONSCRIPTION
In connection with the Mass Meeting held in the Armories on Thursday of last week on the subject of Conscription, the following letter has been sent by His Worship Mayor Bowlby to Premier Borden:

Brantford, June 18, 1917.
The Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden, P.O.G.C.M.G., K.C., L.L.D., Ottawa, Ont.
Dear Sir:
I have the honor to enclose you a resolution passed unanimously by a representative meeting called by me for the purpose of expressing the views of the City of Brantford upon Conscription in this Dominion, you having a measure in some sense, formulated to carry in this Country. The resolution as enclosed speaks for itself. It deals with not only the conscription of men, but all political parties of all shades of thought are behind this resolution as far as Brantford is concerned. There was one thing that was significant when the mention of conscription of resources was mentioned, it literally brought the house down in support of that principle.
I have the honor to be Sir, your humble and obedient servant,
J. W. BOWLBY,
Mayor, City of Brantford.

Conscription for Ministers

At the meeting of the local Ministerial Alliance this week, a resolution, urging that ministers be equally liable to conscription with other classes, was passed. The resolution, moved by the Rev. D. T. McClinton, seconded by Capt. the Rev. C. E. Jenkins, and carried unanimously, reads as follows:
"While recognizing the very creditable showing under the voluntary system made by ministers of military age, and their sons, in connection with the war, it is the opinion of this Ministerial Association
(1) That ministers should not be exempted from conscription.
(2) That the Government should amend the Bill now before the House so as to include ministers.
(3) If the Government refuse this amendment, every minister should voluntarily offer his services when the class to which he belongs is called."

After discussing the estimates for the county for the year 1917 during all the afternoon session yesterday, and continuing over until this morning, the report given below was finally decided upon. It was also thought wisest to raise the necessary money by direct taxation, as the county is now in a fairly prosperous condition which might not be the case later on. No debentures will, therefore, be issued.

To the Warden and Councillors of the County of Brant:

SEMI CENTENNIAL

Another meeting of the executive of the Semi-Centennial Association, was held in the Public Library last night when reports of the different committees were received, showing that arrangements are now in a satisfactory condition for the celebration that is to be held here on July 1st and 2nd. A part of the costumes that are to be used have already arrived and the remainder are expected soon. It was decided to have a parade and elaborate preparations for this feature of the celebration were discussed in the parade, drawn in carriages representing the Royal coaches. The local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, has been invited to assist in the parade, but no definite answer has been received from that organization. The committees have not neglected the negotiations for securing aeroplanes, and Messrs. W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., and J. H. Fisher, M.P., are taking up the matter with the proper authorities at Ottawa. The Klitte band of Galt, have been secured and will furnish the music for the drills. Commencing to-day the finance committee are circulating guarantee lists and securing signatures of those who will be willing to share the deficiency should such occur through inclement weather or from some other unavoidable cause. The event is being well advertised in the city and throughout the surrounding district, and everything now points to the most successful and entertaining celebration ever witnessed in Brantford.

Says there is no excuse for cutting corns and inviting lockjaw.

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quartet of an-ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This simple drug, while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

PROBABLE LIBERAL REVERSED FEARS WITH PARTY OF CONSCRIPTION ISSUE

Hugh Guthrie of South Wellington, Supporting Selective Draft Bill, Favors Coalition and Extension of Parliament—Sir Sam Hughes Speaks

Ottawa, June 19.—The second day of the debate on the Compulsory Service Bill brought the first open break in the Liberal ranks. "I am in favor of coalition, the extension of the term of parliament and the selective conscription bill," declared Hugh Guthrie, of South Wellington, to-night toward the close of one of the ablest addresses they had to date delivered in the present Parliament. This declaration came after a frank statement on the question of conscription, in which Mr. Guthrie gave the reasons for his breach with his leader. His emphatic declaration in support of the selective conscription bill and the equally emphatic rejection of the referendum compromise left no doubt of his complete dissociation from the anti-conscriptionists in the Liberal party.

The member for South Wellington expressed the opinion that the selective conscription bill was a superior measure for present purposes to the Militia Act, being less drastic and affording greater scope to meet the emergency in both military and civil affairs. As to the referendum, he rejected it as an evasion of Parliamentary responsibility, and not in accordance with British Parliamentary practice. He quoted as a precedent the rejection of the referendum Sir Wilfrid Laurier's refusal on a number of occasions to adopt this method of consulting the people.

Appeal for Coalition.—In closing his address Mr. Guthrie made an eloquent appeal for a coalition to give effect to the conscription measure. He admitted that a single party responsible for its enforcement was faced with dangers and almost insurmountable difficulties. Giving credit to both leaders for sincerity, he declared that if they failed to bring about unity in the rank and file in Parliament should accomplish that object. If compromise was necessary to obtain a coalition with the Conservative Canadian Militia Act and the present Military Service Bill?

The speech of the member from South Wellington made a marked impression on the House. It was loudly applauded throughout and at the close by Government and Liberal conscriptionists. When he resumed his seat the Opposition party was plainly marked. Some of his colleagues applauded the sentiments he had expressed, while others maintained a solemn silence which changed into eager applause as Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux rose to combat the arguments of his fellow Liberal.

Hugh Guthrie has been a member of the Federal Parliament for seventeen years and has always been regarded as one of the ablest supporters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. During the past year his party's policies on many issues have been opposed to the Lapointe bi-lingual resolution, but did not carry that opposition to the point of speaking or voting on the question. During the present session Hon. Frank Oliver's free trade resolution was equally repugnant, and although he expressed his views in the House he did not register a vote against the resolution. In the present instance his declaration has been so emphatic that he will vote against the referendum and in favor of the selective conscription measure.

Letters from Sir Robert.—Sir Sam stated that he would read letters from the Prime Minister, in support of his statement. One was marked "confidential," however, and he wanted permission to use it. He started over to show it to Sir Robert who waved him away, remarking that he did not wish to read letters in the House, and that Sir Sam would have to use his own judgment. The latter did not read the letter.

Continuing, Sir Sam stated that before sailing to England in 1916 he yielded to the request of the Prime Minister and partially let up on recruiting. The only excuse he had been able to give was that it was a period between winter billings and spring meetings of the time. The men were drawn out and none given to munition work, but the officers were simply instructed not to exert themselves as vigorously as formerly.

In commenting upon the influences brought to bear to restrain recruiting, Sir Sam pointed out that "organization and gentlemen with affiliated interests, while prominent in patriotic and philanthropic professions, had not been unmindful of the pressing aspect of the war. A contributory cause to the failure of the voluntary system had been the growth of the mercenary idea of "high pay at home with easy work and no danger."

Sir Sam also devoted some time to describing the manner in which he was hampered in forming new battalions, and read to the House a long letter to the Prime Minister reviewing his plans for raising men for the war. The letter was also given to the House a dissertation upon "the bases of popular Government," in which he voiced a complaint about "meddling, hindrance, and interference" from all other Ministers besides the Prime Minister.

The failure of recruiting in Quebec, Sir Sam asserted, was due to the indifference of the leader of the Opposition. Sir Wilfrid had made two recruiting speeches, one in Nanapan, "which nearly killed him," and one in Montreal, "where he had spoken of recruiting only twice of the billing issue."

Sir Sam said he preferred the Militia Act to the adoption of the selective principle as adopted in this bill. He did not favor the selection by tribunals under the Justice Department, but preferred the ballot under the Militia Department. Under the Militia Act men could be allotted to any national service, such as farming, mechanics, mining, etc., all receiving regular military uniform and rates of pay, but under this bill the man, comfortable at home, might earn $7 to $10 a day as a mechanic while his brother, "died on the trenches" received only $1.10.

Sir Sam concluded that he passed by every objection, refused to heed any criticisms against the principles of the bill. "I stand for the bill," he declared, amidst Government applause, "and will help in every way to make it a success, if such is possible. I wish to give it every chance; I improve it with mechanics, miners, etc., all cooperation forthwith, so that our boys at the front may be properly supported."

"Let me appeal to the veteran leader of the Opposition to join, after pointing out his objections to the bill, in having it become effective, grant a year's extension of Parliament and have action such as our lads under this Act may be in the firing line by the end of September. I would have preferred the Militia Act, but when this bill is passed, as I trust it will be, I am certain our boys will do their duty, and I can assure you I shall do nothing to disturb the passing of this bill." (Government applause.)

FAVORS MOHAWK CHURCH. To the Editor of The Courier: Dear Sir,—In your paper of last evening I notice a letter re placing of the Memorial Tablet, commemorative of the poetic genius of Pauline Johnson. If I may be permitted a line supplementary to the forcible argument therein in favor of the Mohawk Church as being the most suitable and appropriate place for such a tablet, I would say that the reason of reason is the atmosphere of the place. Here gather the traditions of Indian lore and the memories of a hundred years; here many have made pilgrimage to Thayendanegea's shrine, and famous personages have inscribed their names upon the rolls here, hand by hand. The river murmurs its "ave atque vale" to the cadences of the beautiful "Song my Paddle Sings." Here, surely, "far from the madding throng" far from the commercialism of the Monumentum Exegi!—we may render homage to the memory of the sweet Indian singer. The very genius of the place suggests the repose, nobility and pathos of Indian character and legend. Let us place this tribute here. Yours sincerely, DR. KEANE. Brantford, June 20, 1917.

Help Canada Maintain Her Financial Freedom!

Do Your Share towards Financing the War with Canadian Savings Rather than with Outside Capital. THE problem of meeting the enormous cost of this war is twofold. Not only must Canada get the money—most of it, of course, as loans—but she must get as much of it as possible here in Canada.

We can carry the war-debt if the bulk of the interest goes to Canadians, and so is used again in the country's development. But it will be a serious matter for us if a large proportion of the interest has to be sent outside the Dominion. For the sake of our own and our children's future this drain on our resources must be avoided! Canada's financial freedom can and must be maintained! An average saving of 15 cents a day, invested by each man, woman and child in Canada in War Savings Certificates, would enable us to carry the whole cost of the war. To approach this average, hard work, thrift, self-denial and sacrifice are required of every citizen.

Cleveland Pilot Has Plenty of Pitching Material to Choose From, But Must Not Fail to Keep His Twirlers in Training

If ever the Indians can settle down and cease to shine as the erratic marvels, they will make things interesting for the teams that now precede them in the American league race. The next time out the same pitcher is likely to last more than three innings. So it has gone all season, but it now begins to look as if a winning streak might be registered.

When Morton pitched a one-hit game in Boston Bagby came back the following day with a three-hit shut-out. Then Covaleskie lost a 2 to 1 game that really was not his fault, and it really looked like the pitching staff had arrived, but the next game played was worse than a nightmare, as the Red Sox, not a wonderful scoring machine, registered nine runs in a single inning, the Indian pitchers pitching as though they never saw a big league team before, while the fielding was on a par with the throwing. And the nine runs were scored after Cleveland had four runs off Mays and apparently a commanding lead.

Another instance: Bagby held Boston to three hits and no runs, as stated. But Friday he availed in the first inning at New York and passed the bat to Cleveland. Cleveland was taken out, New York scoring seven times before the side was retired. During the stern chase that followed, Cleveland scored four runs, indicating that the pitching staff had not New York been handed so many at the outset, as after the first round the Yankees failed to score.

Bagby's ascent due to anger. Bagby's ascent Friday was largely due to the fact that he became peeved at the umpire and allowed his temper to run away with his control. He can be relied on generally to pitch winning ball, while it is certain that Covaleskie can. Cov's game Saturday was a neat affair and it was his second shutout against the Yankees this season.

Baseball is a Public Necessity, Says Sunday

Great American Game Needed Now More Than at Any Other Time, Says Noted Evangelist; "Let's Have More of It"

"Base ball is the grandest sport that was ever invented. You can't say anything good about the old game that it won't stand up under. "I was a ball player myself once, and I have never ceased to be a ball player at heart. Baseball takes two (2) ch oftener than I do if I could find the time. "There is nothing in this world so restful, so healthful—so beneficial to the man with tired nerves as to go to a red hot ball game. "The idea that base ball is a luxury that ought to be postponed until after the war is over is ridiculous. "The American people need it as a mental and physical tonic. "The game has done a great deal for the American people. "Base ball is a war game. We need it now more than ever. Play ball!"

(By William A. Sunday)
Baseball is the grandest sport that was ever invented. It is the squarest, the cleanest, the best. You can't say anything good about the old game that it won't stand up under. And it grows better all the time. I won't admit that the players are greater than they were in my day. There were as good individual players then as there are now. But the game has grown great in team play. And it has grown great in the effect it has had on those who play it. Now, perhaps, there may be one or two men on a club who are of the drinking type. In my day there might have been one or two who were not. Why? I remember the old Pittsburgh club when they called it the brewery nine, good fellows at heart but heavy drinkers. There was a time when a young fellow who was religious was looked upon as a mollycoddle. That time has largely passed. And base ball has played a big part in killing such a false idea. Base ball has demanded of its champion athletes that they live clean lives and leave the booze alone. It has brought an increasing appeal to college men, to men who had an ambition to succeed in life. It has shown the greatest athletes the value of clean living. And the influence of great athletes on the young men of the nation can't be exaggerated.

THEY LOVE THE GAME
For every normal young man wants to be good at athletics. He wants to shine at the broad jump or the hurdles or on the cinder track. He wants to be a good baseball player. His ideal are men who are champions along these lines. And if his heroes have a high moral character the things for which they stand in their daily lives exert a strong influence upon his own conduct. I was a ball player myself once and I have never ceased to be a ball player at heart. I would go to the that ought to be postponed until the war is over is ridiculous. It is just as useful to the average spectator as to the player. The clerk who is working long hours for small pay needs something like baseball to put a little red blood in his veins once in a while. The American people need it as a mental and physical tonic. The soldiers need just such a healthy influence to guard them against the evils which always lurk about big concentration camps. Let's have baseball, plenty of it, all the more because we are at war.

Can't Kill It Out
And if the great industry of baseball which is one of the worst industries that I know anything about, should suffer on account of the war, you can be sure that the injury, if any, will be temporary. Nothing can really hurt baseball. The game is too deeply bedded in the love of the people for that. It is too big a game. I have seen baseball come from nothing and grow to its present size. But I haven't seen it reach its prime. Its growth isn't always steady, but the progress of the game is onward and upwards all the time. The game has done a great deal for the American people and it will do a great deal more for them, and other nations who love it too before it gets its full growth. I am with the government heart and soul in all it may do toward bringing this country victorious through this terrible war. It is a serious business, a mighty serious business. But because I realize that it is a serious business I can root all the harder for the best sport in the world. Old Clark Griffith was right. Baseball is a war game. We need it now more than ever. ## McGraw's Bout With Byron Recalls Old Diamond Battles

History of the Big Leagues Teems With Famous Scraps Between Players— "Jocko" Halligan, Former Umpire in Canadian League, Was a Scrapper

Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants was awakened from a sleep to be advised of his suspension by President John K. Tener of the National league for his attack on Umpire Byron in Cincinnati. John B. Foster, secretary of the New York club, forwarded to President Tener of the National league an affidavit stating that McGraw was justified in knocking Byron down. The affidavit was signed by McGraw, four members of the club and some citizens of Cincinnati. In the affidavit McGraw said he was sorry for the occurrence, but that it was the fourth time Byron had assailed him. He declared he was not the aggressor.

McGraw Had Many a Fight
McGraw's long career on the diamond as a player and manager has been marked by similar scraps to that one with Byron, in all of which the fiery little leader did not come off first best. Years ago, when he was playing third base for the Orioles, he got into a mix-up with Jack Doyle, who later played first base for the Brooklyn. McGraw was out stealing third, by a city block. On his return to the bench McGraw remarked: "I thought that was a good play, just then." "I thought it was a rotten play," said Doyle. They went to the mat right there and then, and the battle lasted for 10 minutes by the town clock. It was a draw.

On another occasion Dick Harley spiked McGraw so badly that Mac had to quit third basing for all time. Forgetting his injury, McGraw jumped up, and was handing Brother Harley a fine lacing, when the umpire interfered. McGraw beat up Bugs Raymond some years ago, but tacked the wrong customer when he mixed up with Paul Stentelle, who put the bean on the pugacious leader in short order.

How Jack Doyle Was Cured.
The big leagues team with famous scraps between players of the same and opposing clubs. Jack Doyle was always ready for a shindig. Prior to his battle with McGraw, he hooked up with Eddie Burke of the Giants. Burke was laid up for a week, but Jack showed the marks left by the sturdy little New York player's knuckles. Doyle was cured of his scrapping propensities by Virgil Garvin, when the two were with Brooklyn. They had an argument in a game in Chicago, but the fighting was postponed until later. That night the talk drifted to Texas. Garvin's native state, and Virgil, after a long discourse on the shooting propensities of the Texans, invited Doyle to spend the winter with him and go on a hunting trip. Jack looked at the state, and Virgil, scratched his head thoughtfully and declined. Doyle was a mild-mannered customer thereafter.

Cy Seymour liked to fight and had many a battle, the last of note being with Arlie Latham. Arlie was too old for Cy and was easily stopped. Big Bill Lange was the best-natured man on earth, but when Jack O'Brien, the second baseman, cussed him one afternoon, a great battle began, and lasted till players and umpires interfered. McAleer Whipped Tebeson. Joe Tinker is a neat boxer, and dead game. Two of his best bouts were with Dick Egan and John Evers, both being equal in style and speed, to most ring encounters. Davy Jones, a quiet man with a soprano voice, is brave and one afternoon tackled Jim McAleer. McAleer, who is a mighty fighter, upset Davy and then spanked him. Twenty years back, McAleer and his boss, Pat Tebeson, went to war and McAleer trimmed Pat most merrily. A fight of undying fame was waged between Fred Clarke and Frank Bowserman and took place in a ball club box office, Bowserman, much the taller, winning out. One of the best fighters of the past was Tony Mullane, who had numerous mills, his most noted, perhaps, being a defeat of Bob Gilks. Chamberlin's Defence. Another fighter of cold and icy ways was Elton Chamberlin. Jocko Halligan, the former Canadian league umpire, who liked a mill, thrashed Cub Stricker one night, and then went after Chamberlin, whom he found in a saloon. Halligan crept cautiously up behind Chamberlin, wholly innocent of the fact that Elton was watching his approach in the big mirror back of the bar. Just as Halligan made ready for a spring, Chamberlin wheeled and flattened him with a bar mallet. Bill Burns, the left-handed pitcher, leaped for Bob Ganley one afternoon and Ganley caught him on the ribs with a bat, putting Bill out of commission for many days. Hobe Ferris, the famous Boston second baseman, lost his temper at Jack Hayden one day, and kicked him in the face with his spiked shoes, ruining Hayden's dentistry completely. Roger Connor and Jim O'Rourke contracted enmity when both were with the Giants, but never got a chance to settle it till more than fifteen years later. Then, when both were leaders of little minor teams, they met at a railroad station one night and fought with much spirit, but great feebleness till the laughing players separated them. Tyrus Cobb fought half the Tiger team, his battles with Schmidt and Crawford being most notable. Bob Beecher and Roger Bresnahan had a royal fight in 1911 and while they mixed it two small men, Johnny Bates and Arnold Hauser, fought a much prettier, more scientific mill alongside, with nobody even looking at them.

The present Brooklyn team is not given to scrapping, but two years ago Ed Appleton and Casey Stengel had a battle royal off the field, in which Stengel handed the big Texan quite a beating, although Casey did not escape unscathed.

SPORTOGRAPHY

WAGNER'S COME-BACK

A sudden revival of baseball interest is noticeable in Pittsburgh. No, it isn't the result of a winning streak, because there hasn't been any Pirate winning streak. The lowly Buccos have been fortunate to stage an occasional winning streak of one game, so that the playing of the team has had little to do with the revival of interest. The reason for it is the return to baseball and to the Pittsburgh lineup of the veteran Hans Wagner, who failed to report when the team started south this spring, and who had not donned a uniform until he appeared at Forbes Field for practice. Wagner signed a contract last Wednesday evening, and on Thursday played his first game of the season, appearing at first base against the Brooklyn Superbas. It is true that his presence did not give the Pirates a victory, but it added to the interest of the occasion immeasurably. The attendance that day was the largest of the season for a mid-week game and there is no doubt whatever that the fact that it had been advertised that Wagner would play was responsible for the increase. It was estimated that fully 2,000 fans went to the park purely for the purpose of getting another glimpse at the famous old star. Wagner was stationed at first, and he put up an article of ball that set his admirers wild with delight. He did not appear to be a pound overweight. In spite of stories that had been circulated to the effect that he had grown as heavy as a house. As a matter of fact, Honus has been working out with the team every morning for a week before he finally agreed to sign his contract. He wanted to test his powers before he agreed to return to the game. And the result of these practice sessions was a demonstration of the fact that, although 33 years old, Honus still is able to cavort about the diamond much better and more speedily than many a younger player. He had not had much batting practice before his initial appearance, and the Pirates gave up almost some classy hitting that day. Ed Pfeffer, one of Ed Wilbert Robinson's most dependable pitchers, was on the slab. Wagner went to bat four times, cracked out a hit and drove in a run. Pfeffer did not really fool him once. He connected each time he went to the plate, being thrown out thrice by Second Baseman Cuthshaw. Honus received numerous messages of congratulation upon his return to the game. One of them from John K. Tener, president of the National League, who expressed the hope that the old boy might be spared to the game for many more seasons. Managers of other teams, recognizing his worth, sent in congratulatory messages, and the demonstration given by the fans on the veteran's first appearance at bat left no doubt as to the sincerity of their joy at seeing him in uniform once more. On just what terms Wagner signed there is no information forthcoming. Barney Dreyfuss claims that he attached his signature to a document containing the same salary that was offered him last winter, which was a decided reduction over his former stipend. Some of Wagner's friends deny this and claim that Honus would have been with the Pirates from the outset of the season had he been offered his old salary. Be that as it may, the fact remains that he is back in the fold, and Pittsburghers are likely to take more interest in the team for the remainder of the season than they did previously.

(From Tuesday's Daily.)

A descent of a couple of steps led into a back sitting room. Ling pointed with his pistol—he was carrying it openly in his hand now—"There's a chair. Sit down. No, never mind your court manners. I want you with your back to me. That's right. Now put your arms behind your back and keep still.

Cincinnati Red felt something enfold his wrists and a lashing was dexterously drawn tight. An involuntary cry escaped him. Ling finished the knot and, stepping in from behind, swung a smashing blow at the bound man's face.

"That's on account," he said fiercely. "If you don't keep still you'll get what's coming to you." He thrust his face, contorted with passion, close to that of the "con" man, and Cincinnati shivered. "I can't do all I'd like to," Ling went on, "but I'll pay the bill in full some other time—you bet I will."

He stooped and tied Cincinnati's ankles to the chair-legs as effectively as he had bound his wrists. Then he lifted chair and all and staggered with it into the front room. He placed it by the curtained window and stood for a moment breathless. Cincinnati was no light weight.

"Now listen to me," he said incisively. "I'm going to turn up the lights and draw the curtains back so that your head and shoulders can be seen from the street. Your detective pals will be in sight somewhere and they'll be pleased to see you. I shall be behind the door, and don't forget I'll plug you good if you play foxy. You've got to shake your head to everything I say. Convey to them that everything isn't quite ready. You know how to do it. Lean a bit forward, as though you were talking to somebody they can't see. It's up to you to keep 'em stalled off for a quarter of an hour."

He slipped the curtains back and retreated to the doorway, out of the direct line of sight of any one in the street. Cincinnati cast a casual glance out on the pavement, and made a motion with his head as Ling had directed.

He had a vision of Weir Menzies posed precariously on the iron railings four feet away. There was a smashing of glass as the detective leaped, and the "con" man heard a vehement oath from Ling, followed by two sharp reports in quick succession.

Menzies tore furiously through one of the broken panes at the window fastenings. Presently he flung up the sash and half leaped, half tumbled within. Congreve whistled without long enough to put a whistle to his lips in swift summons and appeal and then followed his chief.

Cincinnati Red had fainted with a bullet wound in his shoulder.

CHAPTER XVII

The Fugitive Hallett had not stopped to consider any complications that might arise when he had rushed Peggy Greystroton from the restaurant. Even had he done so, he knew that his action would have been the same. In a flash he had realized how a black cloud of suspicion already formed against her by Menzies would be increased should she be found in amicable association with Ling. Even himself had doubts—doubts which no reasoning could have suppressed, but which he stifled until there should be more time to resolve them.

She obeyed him without questioning. He hustled her into a taxicab and gave an order to the driver. He sat down by her side, his heart pumping hard. Outwardly, though, he showed little indication of emotion. "A close thing, that," he commented coolly.

She was trembling violently. Her face was half turned towards him. "You said the police—the detectives—were there. Why? What are they going to do? How did they know?"

"A soft gloved hand lay on his knee, where she had placed it unconsciously in her eagerness. He noticed that she was trembling. "I am quite calm," she insisted, although her bearing gave the lie to her words. "You must tell me."

"I am afraid"—he spoke gently, though his heart was aflame—"that your friend will be arrested."

"Oh!" She dropped back against the soft cushions, her fists clenched, her face as hard as stone. Then suddenly she awoke to fierce life. "They mustn't. I must go back, Mr. Hallett. Stop the cab. Why didn't I think at first. I must warn him. Let me alone. If you can't, a gentleman will do as I say."

She was striving to open the door, and he had to use force to pull her back to her seat.

"Sit still," he said. "You can do no good now. It is too late. You have got to think of yourself. If you go back you will be arrested. Will that improve matters?"

A fit of shivering shook her and she covered her face with her hands. Jimmie watched her soberly. To him there was only one explanation of her agitation—fear for the man who was her husband. In a little the fit passed.

"I suppose you are right," she said colorlessly. "But"—her voice grew tense again—"you don't know what it means to me. You can't know."

"That's all right," he said soothingly. "I can guess. We will talk over all that later. Nothing can be done until you are more yourself. If—if money can do anything to save him, you must call on me. A loan, you know," he ended tamely.

He saw the blue eyes fixed keenly on him with a curious expression that was hard of analysis. "You think that that man—Ling—is a murderer? That I want to save him?" she said breathlessly. And then, without warning, she broke into laughter that was akin to hysterics.

It was then that Jimmie Hallett did a thing which in the ordinary way he would have deemed impossible. He stood up, took her by the shoulders and shook her roughly.

"Stop that! Stop it at once!" he commanded harshly.

He had never had occasion to deal with a woman in hysterics before, and the treatment was ineffective. He was relieved to find it effective. The girl quivered after one or two convulsive sobs.

"I'm sorry," she gasped. "I am better now. Where are we going?"

"I told the man to drive to the Monument. I didn't know where you might like to go, and the important thing was to get away. One moment. He pushed his head out of the window. "Which is the nearest main line depot to the Monument?" he asked.

WHY WAIT FOR A FUNERAL?

An energetic young woman who is one of a large clan of cousins and aunts and uncles who live within a radius of fifty miles, was seized with a brain storm recently.

She had chanced to meet one of the cousins and they had both enjoyed the encounter immensely, had compared notes about the rest of the clan and wished regretfully that they saw each other oftener.

And then came Mrs. G's brain storm. "I'm just going to get our clan together," she said. "It's perfectly absurd for us to go on living so near year after year and never see each other."

Why Not Make the Same Effort to Enjoy Each Other? "I'm going to have a family party and I want every one of our family and Aunt Ruth's and Uncle Henry's and Cousin Amy's to come. I'll let you know a good while ahead and you must just make a big effort. You know perfectly well that if one of us should die every other one would come to the funeral no matter how busy we were. Now why can't we make some effort to see each other once in a while when we're alive? I think it would be a lot more fun."

The argument was so forcible that her cousin couldn't have answered it connection, Jimmie took two first-class singles.

His suggestion of a train journey was not entirely prompted by the wish to blind the trail. That would have been a satisfactorily achieved merely by entering the train station that an empty compartment would afford for a confidential interview.

The girl had rapidly regained her self-possession, and her abstraction vanished as the train started. She flashed an uncertain smile on him as the train started.

"You will think me very foolish to have given you like this, Mr. Hallett," she said. "It's been good to see you, but I have such trouble to serve a comparative stranger. I can't thank you properly."

"There's nothing to thank me for. I acted from purely selfish motives. I remember I have only half your story."

She met his eyes steadily. There was still only the faintest touch of color in her cheeks. She had taken off her gloves and was mechanically twisting them in her lap. He leaned forward and possessed himself of one of her hands. She tore it sharply away and a gust of crimson swept over her face.

"You mustn't do that," she said hastily. "I beg your pardon," he muttered. "You are married, aren't you?"

"The man in her cheeks deepened, and she took a long breath. Her blue eyes took on a new alertness. He had half expected, half hoped that she would deny it. Even the marriage certificate had not convinced him entirely, and her being with Ling that night had scarcely affected his ordinary acuteness and common sense. He could not believe that she had been so incredible a mistake.

"I am married," she repeated. "And you know. How did you learn?"

He could hear her breath catch as she waited for his reply. "I have seen the marriage certificate," he answered simply. "And the police"—her words came incisively—"they know?"

He nodded. "It was through them I learned."

A revulsion of feeling was coming to him. Somehow her fresh manner had broken the spell which had been some time of calculation about it; of the fence standing with weapon poised for offense or defense.

PLAIN SPICE CAKE

One egg, 2-3 cup butter, 2-3 cup sugar, 2-3 cup molasses, 1 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 level teaspoon cream tartar, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 tablespoon mixed spices.

BOYS' ROMPERS.

By Anabel Worthington. A new style of rompers that suggests the Oliver Twist suits is given in No. 8315. The waist is made with a yoke which is only in front, the back having two tucks to hold the interest. The rest of the waist in front is smoothed to match the color of the trousers. The suit buttons down the center, front, and has a little round collar to finish the neck. The sleeves come to the wrist and have turn-back cuffs. The straight trousers are the kind which are most popular this season and they are cut in an uneven shape at the top. Materials such as gingham, chambray, percale, linen, Inca and poplin are good for rompers.

The boys' rompers pattern, No. 8315, is cut in three sizes, 2, 4 and 6 years. As on the figure, the 4 year size requires 1 1/4 yards 27 inch, or 1 1/2 yards 30 inch, with 1/4 yards 36 inch contrasting goods for the waist. It makes all of one piece. The 2 year size requires 2 1/2 yards 27 inch, 2 1/2 yards 30 inch, or 2 1/2 yards of 36 inch material.

APPRECIATION OF A GREAT VIOLIN MAKER

Joseph Arden, Who Died Five Years Ago, Was a Master Craftsmen

A violin maker whose name has recently won a place among the world's great craftsmen, his Job Arden, who died in a Cheshire village, England, in 1912 at the age of 86, many samples of this artist's work are already scattered throughout Canada, and owners are just beginning to realize that they have an instrument of wonderful merit.

Job Arden was no ordinary man. One might go beyond that and say that he was not an ordinary looking man, for like Tenyson, he had the kind of well-cut, intellectual features that attract the attention of the casual passer-by. He was born in the latter part of the reign of George IV., in 1826, to be particular—and spent the whole of the 56 years of his life in his native village. He was by trade a carpenter, and used tools with great precision and facility, so we find that about 1855 he commenced to make violins.

Where, and with whom he received his introduction to the art of violin-making is unknown, but undoubtedly he has found his true métier, and soon produced violins of quite exceptional merit. Being in comfortable circumstances, and by no means of a pushing disposition, he made little or no effort to dispose of them. His method of working was quite original, many of his violins having been partly made many years before their completion, thus allowing ample time for perfect seasoning.

In the History of Cheshire, published in 1869, he is mentioned in connection with musical instrument work. In a book published some years ago—the author says, speaking of many years ago, "We had an amateur string band, which used to meet weekly. Some of the violins used by the members are made by Job Arden of Winslow, who has made over 500 instruments. The quality of which will entitle him to rank among the noted violin makers of the nineteenth century."

This opinion is a perfectly just one, as the maker's finish and style were exceptionally good. He had a dainty Italian style, such as is rare indeed amongst British makers, and anyone looking at one of his violins will be immediately struck by the marked air of grace and elegance which they possess. This, however, does not in any way detract from the solidity of build which is so necessary for fine tone production.

So Job Arden worked on, year after year, in the shade of the giant holly tree which stood, and which still stands, before his workroom window. He was an admirable example of the craftsman of the past, deeply in love with his art, and by no means anxious to part from a single specimen of his work; indeed he took pleasure in seeing his violins accumulate around him.

Upon the shelves of the workroom, around the walls of the parlor, hanging from the rafters of the attic, placed away carefully in boxes, violins were everywhere to be found, and in this congenial atmosphere the productive years sped on, old age bringing no apparent diminution of his powers of industry and high finish. In the city of Bristol there is a steep, precipitous street called "Christmas Steps," and an ancient stone tablet records the fact that in the given years the work was "finished and done," work which, as he had said himself, would be highly appreciated when he died.

Yes; Job Arden was right, and the future will give him an honored place amongst British makers of violins.—H., in Canadian Bandsman and Musician.

Good Night N' Stories

THE MAGIC KEY. The King and Queen were very unhappy because their only son was dumb. They called him Rayo because his hair was like the rays of the sun.

One evening when Rayo was 6 years old he trotted by his mother's side into the garden. They heard a great buzzing among the flowers, and the Queen pulled the petals apart and a bee with a beautiful fairy on his back flew out.

"You have saved my life," said the fairy. "You may have one wish. Think well, for one's wishes are many." The Queen immediately wished that Rayo might be given the power of speech.

The witch who cast this spell over your son. You must seek her alone," said the fairy, and the bee flew away. That night the Queen slept in the castle. She traveled a long time before she reached the 50th hill. Suddenly a door in the rock swung open and the Queen entered. A beautiful girl was hidden in the corner. The Queen heard a snarling laugh and the door slammed behind her. From the other side of the door came the witch's voice.

"Fatten her well, Mayo, for she can help you with your work." "Poor Queen, why did you come here?" cried the beautiful girl. "She will not you a prisoner here as I have been since I was three."

But the Queen smiled and told Mayo her mission, and Mayo agreed to help her all she could. They cooked a great, big dinner and went to the office of this publication.

When Money is Tight

Practically all classes of investments—bonds, stocks, debentures, real estate—depreciate in value to a ruinous extent. Investors are often forced into bankruptcy at such times through conditions over which they have no control.

But an Imperial Life policy never depreciates. On the contrary, it continues to increase in value from the day it is issued until its maturity, no matter what financial conditions may be.

who guarded the door all he could, and soon he fell asleep.

They did the same thing until they had safely passed, all the dragons. Beyond the last a small dog opened into smaller room. Mayo told the Queen that a terrible green fly kept watch over the magic key that lay on the rock in that room, and Mayo fearing the Queen would never come out alive, begged to enter. But the Queen pushed her aside and taking the piece of sticky paper Mayo had prepared she opened the door.

A great green fly sprang up from the corner, but the Queen threw the paper at his feet, telling him the witch had sent a present of a magic rug on which to sit. The unsuspecting fly jumped on the paper and stuck fast. Then the Queen seized the magic key, and leaving the fly buzzing in anger, she and Mayo ran softly down the halls not to awaken the sleeping dragons.

The key unlocked the door, and they jumped on a horse that waited outside and rode in all haste to the castle.

Now the Queen had been away so long—each adventure had taken a long year, and she'd had fourteen of them—that she found the place greatly changed. The King had died, and Mayo, now a handsome youth of 20, reigned in his place. They found Rayo sleeping in the garden, and the Queen touched the magic key to his lips and he sprang up crying "Mother," and the Queen folded him to her heart.

Shortly afterward Rayo and Mayo were married, and all was happiness in the castle. Rayo hung the magic key near the throne, and it you ever wish that kingdom be sure to go and see it.

Pippling Rhymes

Since war against our name is written, I'm mighty glad we have the chance to aid and comfort brave old Britain, and lend a hand to dauntless France. For long I thanked the gods above us that we had peace—strife I abhor, and railed at men who tried to shove us into the noisome reek of war. But sometimes, in silly gloaming, when I sat by my fire's trunk, all pensively my handgowns combing, I thought our peace was rather punk. For principles we all should cherish the allied nations gave their best, and while they saw their children perish, we gloated o'er our treasure chest. Our starry banner flies for freedom—that's always been our pride and boast; when tyrants came along we led 'em and soaked them where it hurt the most. Yet tyranny was rank and raging, these later years, and still we dreamed; the worst of tyrants war was waging, our eagle rather stood than screamed. And then we started from our slumbers, we saw the proper course at last, and patriots in joyous numbers, have nailed our colors to the mast. And I, who hate all strife and quarrel, now swing the sword and make it hiss; for peace is vicious and immoral in such a crucial time as this.
