Annual Meeting of The Maritime Board of Trade

At Summerside—Newcastle Board Introduces Resolution to Ask Dominion Government to Subsidize Line of Steamships Between Miramichi and P. E. I.

Summerside, P. E. I., Aug. 18—About thirty delegates were in attendance at the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade this morning. Amongst delegates were present from attending delegates the death of Mayor Douglas, the Sackville delegates, coming over in a motor boat, were detained by storm. Among the present are: E. A. Kelly, W. H. Price, T. Williams, A. C. Chapman, Moncton; W. W. Gould, Kentville; R. C. Hood, Quarrville, N. B.; G. B. Cross, Truro; Rev. E. S. Murdoch, Regent, N. B.; E. A. McCurdy, Rev. S. J. McArthur, Newcastle.

Mayor Saunders, of Summerside, in welcoming the delegates, referred first to the war. He stated that the Maritime Provinces were less affected by the war than other parts of Canada, especially in the west, where the conditions there should be a lesson to our men contemplating leaving these provinces. Young men stay east, was his advice. Mayor Saunders advocated placing the new ferry steamer on the Summerside-Cape Tormentine route until the terminals at Charlottetown were completed. This would take a year or two.

The address by the President, E. T. Higgs, of Charlottetown, was an optimistic review of the business conditions and prospects of the Maritime Provinces. He urged more union among business men, the giving of preference to local products and the inauguration of a publicity campaign through the local boards of trade with the valuable assistance of the press.

The secretary, T. Williams, of Moncton, in his report, stated that the single tax resolution passed at last year's board was sent to the provincial premiers. The reply was that there was no general dissatisfaction with the present system and no change would be made until properly asked for. Reference was also made to disposition of other questions taken up at that board, including increase in freight rates, etc. The secretary also reported no delegates from St. John or Halifax this year. The former gave as a reason business conditions; Halifax pleaded lack of interest and threatened withdrawal if there was not more energy shown and more real work done between board meetings.

Summerside, P. E. I., Aug. 18—The Maritime Board of Trade discussed the bulk of their business this afternoon and will close tomorrow morning. There was a long and interesting discussion on a resolution upon the Provincial Boards of Education, the advisability of introducing more agricultural and technical education into our common schools to the exclusion if necessary of classical and higher mathematical subjects. It was moved by E. A. McCurdy and seconded by Rev. Father Murdoch, of the Newcastle Board and discussed by T. Williams, E. A. Kelly, Moncton; R. C. Hood, Quarrville; Judge Stewart, ex-Governor MacKinnon, Prof. Theodore Ross, W. F. Timmarsh, N. Rattenbury, Charlottetown; R. R. Macdonald, Neil McLeod, Summerside; James Birch, Alberton; A. A. McNeill, O'Leary. An amendment was moved by ex-Governor MacKinnon that the reference to the exclusion of classics

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women.—Mrs. OZELLA BRADLEY, 254 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE DAY

BY HENRY CHAPPELL

[The author of this magnificent poem is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath. Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Poet." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet.]

You boasted the Day, and you boasted the Day, and you boasted the Day, and now the Day has come. The phlegm, brag and coward all little you seek of the numbing ball. The blasting shell, or the "white arm's" fall.

As they speed poor humans time you spied for the Day, you lied for the Day, and woke the Day's red spleen. Menster, who asked God's aid Divine then strewed His seas with the ghastly mine.

Not all the waters of all the Rines Can wash thy foul hands clean. You dreamed for the Day, you schemed for the Day; Watch how the Day will go. Slayer of age and youth and prime! Defenseless slain for never a crime! Thou art steeped in blood as a hog in slime.

False friend and cowardly foe, You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day. Yours is the Harvest red. Can you hear the groans and the awful cries? Can you see the heap of slain that lies, And sightless turned to the flame-split skies? The glassy eyes of the dead?

You have wronged for the Day, you have longed for the Day. That lit the awful flame, 'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain Yield sheaves of dead men amid the grain; That widows mourn for their loved ones slain, And mothers curse thy name.

But after the Day there's a prize to pay For the sleepers under the sod, And He who has mocked for many a day— Listen, and hear what He has to say: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." What can you say to God?

THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF Girls! Try It! Hair gets soft, fluffy and beautiful—Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine.

If you care for heavy hair that glitters with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine. Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff. You can not have nice heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots fall out, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast. Surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store and just try it.

Seventeen Inch Guns; New Type of Shell

New British Gun That Will Create Havoc at Twenty Five Miles

New York, Aug. 19—Today's New York Tribune prints the following: Recent arrivals from England are able to afford some explanation of the delayed British advance, which, as much in England as throughout the rest of the world, has caused considerable bewilderment.

Their explanation is that Lord Kitchener has been waiting to launch his "great surprise." And this surprise lies in the completion of new guns and a new type of shell, which, it is believed, will revolutionize artillery operations and make the path of the Allies to Berlin more possible than hitherto.

Soon after the beginning of the war when it became patent that high explosives were to be the dominating factor in the struggle for victory, the combined efforts of British chemists and ordnance experts invented a shell unquestionably more powerful than any previously used, in destructive power, it is without doubt superior to any previously known.

The Government ordered experiments to be made with big guns then being manufactured at Woodwich Arsenal.

As far back as last November, Government experts were at work on this problem. They experimented with various alloys of steel trying to find out what would stand the strain of such a shell. Finally they succeeded. They produced a 17-inch gun that would suit this purpose. Various experiments have been made, and are believed to have been entirely successful. It is stated that the shell will be carried 25 miles, and will work havoc on a scale entirely unprecedented.

This is answered the question why no advance was made when Warsaw was about to fall and the main bulk of the German troops were concentrated in that front. It also explains why, after the great movement of Kitchener's army to France early in July, the troops were not used. Nothing was to be done until these guns, which the great armament factories of Britain have been working on for six months, had been delivered in sufficient quantities at the front.

Last Wednesday the Second Canadian Contingent, numbering 45,000 picked troops, an overwhelming majority of whom had seen previous service, sailed for France. With their despatch, Kitchener's movement was ready to begin. The result may soon be apparent.

Local and Provincial

Mrs. John Brophy, of Bathurst, is visiting at her home in Douglastown.

Woodstock, N. B., had a slight flurry of snow on Wednesday morning last.

Miss Beatrice Black has returned from a trip to Newcastle, where she was visiting friends—Moncton Times.

The case of criminal assault which came up last week before the Supreme Court, was laid over until next sitting.

The Newcastle band had to postpone their concert in Elm Park, Chatham, on Wednesday night, on account of wet weather.

There are now about two hundred and fifty more men wanted to complete the 55th Battalion, after deducting the draft for overseas.

Leslie Miller, one of Newcastle's first to enlist who was wounded some time ago, is rapidly recovering, and expects soon to be on the firing line.

The display of prizes to be given away to successful contestants in the Advocate's big voting contest, which closes tomorrow, are attracting great attention on display in the window of the old Commercial Hotel.

At Thursday night's council meeting, the question of the best ways and means of assisting the band was taken over by the Aldermen. Whatever action they may take will no doubt be heartily endorsed by the citizens of Newcastle, as the band has given freely of its services in the park, and on other occasions, which warrants good support from the town.

Among the recruits leaving Winnipeg for Camp Sewell last week was Andrew Bonar Law, a nephew of the English statesman. Mr. Law is a grandson of the Rev. James Law, who for 49 years was minister of the Presbyterian Church at Rexton, N. B., and is the oldest living son of James Law, late of Rexton N. B. The Hon. Andrew Bonar Law was a younger son of Rev. James Law.

A very successful garden party was held by the ladies of the Millbank Presbyterian church, on the church grounds, on Thursday evening. Well set supper tables were patronized by the large number who attended, and the ice cream and refreshment booths also did a good business. The feature of the evening was the splendid program of music played by the Douglastown band, which is fast gaining popularity in the social and musical circles of the Miramichi.

A Not-Too-Well-Known Goat

"Most parts of Canada where live stock production prevails are suitable to the raising of Angoras, especially if the land is high and dry the greater part of the year. They will withstand the rigor of even the coldest winter and do not require any greater shelter than a shed to protect them from wind and storm, providing a sufficient quantity of nutritious food and pure water are supplied. The Angora goat performs a two-fold service in the Canadian scheme of farming. It produces a high grade of mohair and at the same time may be used for the destruction of underbrush on lands to be broken for subsequent cultivation. Such is one of the opening paragraphs of Pamphlet No. 12 of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch devoted to the Angora Goat and a general discussion of methods of management, feeding and breeding, and of mohair production, by T. Reg. Arkell, B. S.

Mr. J. D. Volkman, of Millerton, was in town on Saturday.

This afternoon will be the merchants last Wednesday half holiday for this year.

The farmers are enjoying splendid haying weather. The recent rains have not put work back any, as the hay is yet rather green.

Messrs. Clinton Rae, Clarence Miller and Michael O'Brien, left last week for Regina, where they have accepted positions.

Thomas R. Hilliard, one of St. John's best known citizens, passed away on Thursday, in his seventy-fourth year, after a brief illness.

Recruiting for the 64th Battalion, which started only a couple of weeks ago, is being successfully carried on, nearly 500 men having enlisted to date. They are being mobilized at Sussex.

Dr. Justin Gallagher, son of Patrick Gallagher, formerly proprietor of Miramichi, Moncton, has received an appointment as Lieut. Supplementary of Canadian Army Dental Corps, and left Wednesday night for Valcartier.

A dependent woman who belongs to Albert county, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by drowning near Moncton on Thursday morning. A policeman who was following her, prevented her from carrying out her rash act.

The Metagama and the Missinabik which sailed from Halifax on Sunday, Aug. 8th, carrying the 28th Field Battery, commanded by Major Randolph Crocker, and various other units from all over Canada, arrived safely in England.

Major Jack Mersereau, who was seriously wounded at the battle of Ypres, and whose life was for some time despaired of, was expected to sail for Canada from England Friday on the Missinabik, and would be accompanied by his wife.

Moncton Times—"Mr. Harold Coles has secured a job as brakeman with the Roger Miller Co. shunting crew at Point du Chene, and left a few days ago for the Point to assume his new duties. Until recently Mr. Coles was employed in the freight office here. Mr. Coles is one of the city's best ball players, being a fast and tricky base runner, a sure hitter and a good infielder." Mr. Coles will be remembered as being a valued member of our hockey team a couple of seasons ago, and his Newcastle friends will be pleased to hear of his success.

But the point is I have been very glad to put it to the test often since I have put on the khaki. It would be useless for me to undertake to tell you how much I appreciate that message. I mean to carry it and look it over often. It keeps my mind where I want it to dwell on the struggling few, who for the very work's sake are trying to make noble men and women of the young folk there. ## 48th Highlanders Are Taking Rest

Lance-Corp. Hiram A. Copp Among Wounded in This Regiment

The 48th Highlanders, the regiment that Hiram Copp, of Newcastle, was in when he was wounded, are now taking a rest after sixteen days in the trenches at Plug street, where they underwent some particularly heavy shelling.

The shell which wounded Lance-Corp. Copp, No. 23,506, and several others in this regiment, burst over the parapet. The wounded men are suffering from wounds of a more or less serious nature, but in no case is the injury considered a dangerous one. Corp. Copp's many friends will be pleased to learn this.

When the regiment went into these trenches the officers proceeded at once to strengthen the position much beyond what it had previously been strengthened. They put in permanent parapets and dug a series of fire trenches at the rear to hold supports and reserves. The enemy became alarmed at these activities and guns were brought up, and an attack was planned on the position, an attempt being made at first to shell the Highlanders out of their trenches.

The Germans were unable to budge the 48th, who have acquired the commendable habit of all highly trained troops of lying low when the enemy is trying to draw their fire with shell and rifle fire, but lining the parapets the moment the enemy starts an infantry advance and pouring in a heavy fire. These tactics are laid down by the best authorities and are adopted by the seasoned soldiers. It was the manœuvred soldiers. It was the cool manner in which the Canadians adopted them which puzzled the Germans so much at St. Julien.

When Lieut. Wilson and his men were hurt the Germans were systematically shelling the parapets as is their custom, with High explosive shell bursting on impact with the parapet itself, in an effort to blow it up. They followed this up by firing the high explosive shell to explode 20 feet high over the parapet to catch men working behind, and then sent along the sheet flame for reserves and supports. It was a time shell which exploded over Lieut. Wilson and a number of his men in a shelter trench.

This was the outstanding incident of the stay in the trenches. The weather was good throughout. With the exception of Lieut. Wilson the officers are all well. The regiment was recently considerably strengthened by reinforcements, who are proving to be a lot of fine men.

YOUNG PRISONER SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

Thirteen Year Old Lad Tried to Wreck the Chatham Branch at Nelson
Leo Masterson, a lad about 13 years of age, and a son of Joseph Masterson of Nelson, was brought before Stipendiary Magistrate Lawlor on Saturday afternoon, charged by I. R. C. Detective Harry Culligan with attempting to wreck the Chatham Branch at Nelson on the 11th and 13th instances.
When the driver of the Branch sent in his report, Detective Culligan was at once put on the case, it being at first suspected that this was the work of German spies. With the able assistance of Deputy Sheriff Irving, Detective Culligan was not long in running against sufficient clues to warrant the arrest of this young offender, and he was forthwith taken in charge and brought to Newcastle Saturday morning. Upon being questioned by Detective Culligan he admitted having placed a big stone on the rail on the 11th inst., which the train knocked off, and then again on the 13th he placed what is called a snatch block on the rail. When the engine struck this the force broke the guard rod on the driving wheels, putting on the brakes and bringing the train to a standstill. Had it not done this, there is every reason to believe that young Masterson's curiosity, as he explained to the officers, would have been satisfied, namely, to see the engine tumble over.
When brought before the court on Saturday afternoon Magistrate Lawlor decided to postpone his trial until Monday, owing to the young prisoner's parents not knowing if his arrest. When the case came up on Monday he was given one year in the Reform School.

Miss Mae Tozer spent the weekend in North Esk Boom and Strathadam.

TOWN COUNCIL

The same assessors, he had likewise failed to have his assessment corrected. The value of a property was its earning capacity. Mr. Woodworth's property back of the track was bushes, stones, etc. of very little earning capacity. Down town he had about two good sized lots. A man should not be taxed so as to dispossess him. We did not want to tax a property holder out of town unless he was holding merely for higher price.
The Mayor said that the Council should remember that Mr. Woodworth had made a sworn statement to the Council that he was overtaxed.
Ald. Hayward—Did he make this before assessment?
Town Clerk—No.
It was moved in amendment by Ald. Ritchie and McGrath and carried. That the matter be referred back to Petition Committee with request that they ask the assessors to meet the council at its next regular meeting.
Ald. Stuart, pursuant to notice given last month, moved the following:
Amendment to By-Law No. 16, For the Preservation of Order; section 22:
No person under the age of 15 years shall be found on any street, sidewalk, lane or thoroughfare within the town, after the hour of nine o'clock, p. m., unless in the ordinary course of his or her lawful employment or duty or in the care of his or her parent or guardian.
Ald. McGrath wanted the age limit reduced to 14, at which most boys leave school, and many (although they shouldn't) go to work in the mill.
Ald. Ritchie asked what about conflict with the Provincial regulation about age of those attending moving picture shows.
Ald. Doyle said the Provincial law related to who should not attend the dime. It would not conflict with a Town by-law.
The Mayor thought 15 years not too high.
Ald. Ritchie favored reduction to 14 years.
Ald. Doyle thought 14 high enough. He often saw youngsters of 8 to 12 on streets at 2 a.m. The night policeman could and should stop this.
Ald. McGrath said the policeman's duty was plain. He had heard a woman trying to drive her boy home lately after 11 o'clock at night.
No one seconded the by-law as read, but when Ald. Stuart consented to insert 14 instead of 15, it was seconded by Ald. Doyle and carried unanimously.
The Petitions Committee asked extension of time on the request of Chas. Goodwin, of the Wireless staff, for exemption from taxation because of belonging to the Naval Reserve.
Ald. McGrath doubted if even soldiers and officers were exempt from taxation. Of course it was difficult to collect from them. They could not be arrested in uniform. But he thought they were liable and pay arrears of taxes the moment the uniforms were off. If soldiers were not liable to taxation, who'd support the revenue if all men should have to be soldiers? Objection to taxes did not show a patriotic spirit.
Ald. Hayward thought it a mere matter of law and easily determined.
Ald. Mackay, seconded by Ald. Ritchie, moved, That the matter be referred back to Petitions Committee to get all available information and bring in a recommendation at next regular meeting.
Ald. McGrath wanted to have either the Town Clerk or some member of the Petitions Committee seek legal advice and find out if Mr. Goodwin were liable to taxes or not. He did not think Mr. Goodwin any more exempt than a railway conductor or hauling troops.

D. W. STOTHART

On motion of Ald. Doyle and Hayward, it was resolved, That the Chairman of the Finance Committee be instructed to get legal advice on the matter and act upon it.
The returns of convictions under the Canadian Temperance Act, from Jan. 1—May 10, the closing part of the late Lt. Col. Maltby's magistracy, were submitted. During that time there were 23 cases brought. One conviction for third offence and 16 for first resulted. 14 fines collected totalled $828.25. Constable and witness fees were $96.25 and magistrates' fees $84.00. Balance paid Town Clerk $658.00.
Returns were accepted and ordered filed.
Ald. Ritchie enquired what the Finance Committee were doing re collecting taxes, both current and default.
Ald. McGrath replied that they were collecting all they could. It was as hard as ever. The results were about the same as last year—no better. The police had been very busy with Scott Act and other troubles and hard to get hold of. The collectors had not advertised any property for sale yet—presumably because it was not necessary.
Ald. Ritchie said he had understood from one Alderman that money was scarce. The income from Scott Act was not as large as it had been last year—not as many fines—possibly not as much liquor sold this year.
Ald. Doyle said he had no special report on the Highway between Mill Cove and Northwest Bridge. The auto owners had not done as much work as he had intended to do. They have improved the road a great deal, however, and intended to do more.
His Worship said he had received a complaint about this road, and had told the complainant that it was in the hands of the two committees.
Ald. Ritchie thought there was a large amount of liquor sold in town. It allowed to be sold, why not have some revenue? Things didn't appear much better than last year. Complaints had been made to him that something was wrong. He did not say that the Police Committee were allowing it to be sold, but it evidently was being sold.
Ald. Hayward replied that the committee were trying to the best of their ability to stop the sale of liquor. It was entirely in the hands of the policemen. If not satisfactory it was up to the Council to get new men.
Ald. McGrath said that the C. T. A. was not intended to be a revenue producer. It was only incidentally or accidentally that it ever became so.
Ald. Ritchie said it was rather embarrassing to one who supported

A New Questions and Answers Department of Interest to Shooters

Readers are reminded that this column is open to questions which should be sent to me in care of the Sporting Editor, and to discussions by the readers on anything connected with hunting or target shooting.—A. P. L.

C. M., Rapid City, S. D.

1. How would you interpret the "Migratory Bird Law?"
Ans. As near as I can figure it out, the Federal Migratory Bird Law permits the shooting of ducks in South Dakota from September 7th to December 1st, that is, shooting on September 7th and thereafter up until December 1st, but not on December 1st. According to the law of South Dakota, the season is from September 10th to December 1st. This includes September 10th and does not include December 1st.

2. Will it be lawful to shoot ducks in the Fall? If so, at what time?
Ans. I can see no reason why you should not begin planning a duck hunt sometime during the above mentioned season.

A. E. W., Temple, Texas.
I have just purchased a 20 gauge repeater, 28 inch full choke. Will thank you to advise me by return mail if shells loaded with 22 grains of Ballistite and 1/4 chilled shot will be too stiff a load for this little gun. Also, advise me as to 20 grains same powder and 1/4 ounces same shot. These to be loaded in 3-inch shells. I have just been out and tried the gun for shooting, but did not have the ammunition I wanted. The shells I had were loaded with 18 grains Infalible and 1/4 oz. No. 6 shot, 170 pellets to the load. Shooting at 15 yards at an o'd catalog (about 20 pound paper) 11x17 1/2. 127 of the 170 pellets struck the back, eight of them penetrating 200 pages (100 sheets) and the balance lodging within ten pages of back. Shooting at 25 yds. 110 pellets struck within the 30 inch circle, but seemed to be a little low. Upon cleaning the gun, I noticed the sight protruded about 1-32 or 1-16 inch inside the barrel. Would this tend to affect the accuracy or pattern of the gun, the wad catching on the end of sight and causing the load to go a little low, or make an uneven pattern? I have removed the sight and filed same down so the end comes flush with inside of barrel, but have not shot any more since I did this.

Ans. The heaviest load supplied in 20 gauge shell is 20 grains of dense smokeless powder such as Ballistite or Infalible and 1/4 oz. of shot. This load costs extra from the different manufacturers. It would seem to me it would be a wiser thing to secure a gun of larger gauge such as 16 or 12 gauge if you wish to do heavier work. You cannot expect a 20 gauge gun to do the work of 12 as it is mechanically impossible for it to do so. A gun made with a sight protruding into the barrel is an evidence of very sloppy workmanship and would be likely to have an effect on the pattern. If you have filed this projection down level with the inside of the bore on the barrel, there should be no further trouble.

L. N. E., Youngstown, O.

I am writing you to ask a few questions regarding a recently purchased 22 S. & W. Bekart Model Target Revolver purchased several weeks ago, and I am having the following trouble with it: Holding the gun the way it naturally fits into my hand, when I lower it onto the target, I find the sights always out of line, with the front sight always away off to the left. Then to get the sights lined up, I have to twist the gun around so that the muzzle is twisted to the right and then the sights are in line. I have to hold them there by keeping my mind on it, as if I forget it, they slip back—that is the front sight slips over to the left. Have tried many different ways of holding the gun, but always have this trouble. Holding the gun strained away, it naturally does not make good shooting. Sights are set correctly for twenty yards. Can you advise me if you have ever heard of any such trouble with this gun? I have a rather large hand with long heavy fingers. Am inclined to think it is the grip, but would like to have the benefit of your experience. I would certainly be very much obliged for any information or advice you may be able to give me.
Ans. I have never had the trouble you experience, although I hold a revolver in such a way that my wrist is naturally twisted around somewhat in the way you say. I would suggest that you try building up the back of the grip and then use the second instead of the first joint to pull the trigger. It is of course very difficult to tell you just what to do without actually seeing you hold the gun. Try this any way, and if it does not produce results, write again.
A. C. M., Boston, Mass.
I have a Hopkins & Allen revolver, Safety Police 5 inch barrel, .38 S. & W. calibre.
1. What makes it break open when it is fired?
Ans. I would take this up with the manufacturers. Probably the spring which holds the locks is weak, or the locks do not sit properly.

Lachute, Que., 25th Sept., 1908
Minard's Limited Co., Limited,
Gentlemen,—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and ointments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief, till last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

RUSSIA IN THE PRESENT WAR

Since the beginning of this greatest of all wars, it is doubtful, if there has ever been, apparently, a more critical and anxious period than the present. From the very start, the enormous resources of Russia in men and material were considered a favorable point. As the German forces drove through Belgium and rushed for Paris and Calais, the Russian hordes poured through Poland and Galicia with strong evidence of reaching Berlin at an early date. The Allies on the western front were filled with admiration and elation at the apparently irresistible steam-roller of Russia. The Allies in the west held, in time to save Paris. Then came winter and the steam roller in the East was stopped. In the spring the Allies in the west still held, but the Germans were able to turn a great enough force against Russia to force her back. So, step by step, bitterly contesting every step of the retreat and keeping all forces in tact, the Russians gave up all ground they had taken and have been retreated into their own Empire yielding Warsaw to the enemy, as the latest loss. Like the rest of the Allies, Russia was unprepared for this great war when the blow fell and had only a fraction of the supplies she required. Her enormous numbers, great area, and comparative inadequacy of transportation equipment have made her task of supply much more difficult than that of her Allies. It is this lack of supply that has so tragically handicapped Russia in her defence against Germany and Australia. The great outstanding feature of this long Russian retreat is the wonderful strategy of the Grand Duke in saving his entire army in the face of great odds, and at the same time, inflicting enormous losses on the enemy. Her army is still ready and in splendid shape to take the offensive, as soon as they can get supplies and they are much nearer their base than are the Germans. The capture of Warsaw is beginning to look very much like the end of a wild goose chase for Germany. They can't keep the Russian army back, except by using so large a force as to dangerously weaken their western front. That gives France and England the very opportunity to force the western front. Meantime, the Dardanelles is fast approaching its fall, with direct aid to Russia from that quarter.

For one thing why should there not be a concerted effort by the Dominion and Provincial Governments to abolish the speculative holding of Government lands on nominal payments. What we mean can be illustrated by the case of British Columbia. The Minister of Lands of that province has admitted that the arrears of payments for land sold to speculators, that is, to non-settlers, are over $9,000,000. The first payments, the only ones made are from 50 cents to $1.25 per acre. Now while it happens that in the case of British Columbia much of this speculatively held wild land is not located so as to be fit for immediate settlement, and the province has plenty of well located land suitable for pre-emption a clean out of that great mass of pure speculation would be of vast economic benefit to the province. Why should not the Dominion and each of the provinces require full payment for Government land sold to non-settlers, and stop the interference with legitimate settlement?
No doubt powerful financial and political influences would be arrayed against any such effort to dislodge the land parasites. But the war is ending a lot of our toleration of obstructive exploitation of the country's resources, and creating a public sentiment strongly supporting measures to foster production. If Canada is to pass successfully through the critical period induced by excessive railway building it must go to the root of the chief obstacle that lies in the way—speculative and unproductive holding of farming land. The after-the-war immigration should give us the new settlers we need.—Mail and Empire.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

32 Americans Lost With Arabic

391 Survivors Landed Safely at Queenstown

London, Aug. 20—Two Americans of the thirty-two known to have been aboard the White Star Liner Arabic when she was torpedoed and sunk off Fastnet yesterday morning, were today unaccounted for in any of the lists of survivors, and are believed to have been lost. They are: Mrs. Josephine Brugliere, New York.
Edmund Woods, Buffalo.

Thirty persons of other nationalities are reported missing, and are believed to have been drowned, making a total death list of 32. Queenstown advices early today said a revised count had shown 391 survivors landed there by salvage steamers last night.

London, Aug. 20—The White Star Line at noon today gave out an official denial of the report that four Americans are missing. Only two Americans are still unaccounted for, the official statement said.

Queenstown, Aug. 20.—No survivor of the Arabic disaster who was interviewed today saw the German submarine that sent the big liner to the bottom, though several said they saw the U boat that a few minutes before torpedoed the British steamer Dunsley, and believed it was the same submarine. They agreed that the Arabic was sent to the bottom without warning.

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.
1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.
2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.
3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

What had become of Grafton and the sailor? Had they been drowned? The boat had capsized, turning nearly bottom upward, her mast, no doubt, sticking into the ground, a part of the broken plating being crushed upward against the side of the little vessel, thus affording the stay to which Nina had clung. How was it possible that the two strong men and good swimmers had perished and she had escaped? But if they were not drowned, what had become of them? Surely, Grafton would not have swum to shore and left Nina to her fate?

While these conjectures passed through Harry's mind, his arms and hands were at work, straining every sinew to send the boat through the tossing waves and driving rain to the shore.

The storm had spent its fury, but the rain, driven by the wind, still came in slant, sharp gusts that stung and blinded him. He could have shouted with joy when he saw by a flash of lightning a rough log dock only a few feet before him.

In half a minute his boat was alongside it. He jumped out, threw the boat chain over a post and secured it, then stepped back and lifted the unconscious form that lay so still in the bottom of the boat.

Dimly he could see her white face between the masses of dark, drenched hair, for the clouds had thinned, and some light from the full moon behind them filtered through.

She was colorless as marble, and as cold. Her slender hands seemed to him to be almost stiff. Could she be dead? The fear came to him with a sharp pang.

"I must find a shelter. I must take her out of this chilling rain," he muttered.

He raised her from the wet dock and bore her to the land. There he saw a path running up through the mangroves. He walked rapidly up the path, soon seeing a dark mass among the orange trees which he knew was a house.

There was no light in it, and no response came when he stammered loudly upon the floor of the little porch as he stood upon it.

The doors and windows were shut, he did not take time to see if they were fastened. He sat down upon a long wooden bench on the porch, purposeful now that there was shelter from that blood chilling rain, to try to revive Nina.

He took out his handkerchief and dried her dripping face and hands; then he rubbed her hands briskly with his own, on which he had poured a little brandy from a flask he had in his pocket. He poured a little of the stimulant between her lips, when, to his joy, he felt a shudder run through her, then a short, gasping sigh struggled up from her breast; another fluttering breath and consciousness came back.

She half raised herself as she lay in his arms, and turned her face to his, which she could not distinguish in the dim light. She clung to him, sobbing out:

"Oh, Floyd! Is it you? You did come back! I thought you had left me to die. I might have known you wouldn't. But, oh, it was so dreadful there, alone with that awful water washing over me! And my hands were so cold and stiff, I thought I could never hold on till you came back. I thought you were cruel not to take me with you; but you knew best, only—Oh, I am so cold."

She fell to shivering, her teeth chattering convulsively. Lee put the flask to her lips.

"Drink some of this," he said in a whisper; he dared not trust himself to speak aloud.

He shrank from letting her know, while she was so weak and hysterical, that it was not Floyd who held her; that it was not her lover who had come back and rescued her just as the last remnant of strength was going away.

A hot current of indignation had rushed through Lee as he heard her broken utterances. So Grafton had left her and saved himself by swimming ashore. He had told her he would come back with a boat to rescue her. He must have expected her to perish, but he would not risk being burdened with her in swimming to the shore.

"Cowardly puppy!" Harry muttered to himself through his clenched teeth, as he bent over Nina, rubbing her hands and trying to bring warmth to her body. The stimulant had helped her, but he knew the terrible chill would be fatal unless she could be gotten to a fire and the wet clothing removed.

He laid her down on the seat, and taking off his coat, which the waterproof cloak had kept dry, he wrapped it about her. Whispering some reassuring words, he left her, and knocked upon the door. There was no answer; another louder knock brought no response. He felt sure at last that there was no one inside. There was a window near by opening upon the porch. The blinds were closed, but one of them was broken, and both were easily unfastened.

"It is necessary to be guilty of house-breaking in this case," Harry said to himself as he lifted the sash of the window and stepped inside.

He took a match from his pocket, lighted it, and looked around. He found himself in a neat, plainly furnished apartment, sitting room and bedroom in one. It seemed, as there was a bed in one corner behind a home made screen. There was a fireplace, but no fire in it, and no wood. Harry went on through a covered way into a small back room which proved to be a kitchen. Here he found a pile of dry stove wood, half of it resinous pine. He gathered up an armful, and hurrying back into the front room, soon had a fire ruddy blaze on the hearth. He pulled a large, cushioned chair to the fire, and then went out on the porch, lifted the shivering, half-dense girl, and bore her into the room.

He placed her in the big easy chair, where she sat with closed eyes and drooping head, while he knelt down and unbuttoned her little boots and took them off. Then, without an instant's hesitation he pulled off the drenched silk stockings and laid bare the small, daintily shaped feet. He took them in his broad palms; they were white and cold as stone. He held them to the fire, rubbed them briskly, and wrapped them in a woolen table-cover he had previously warmed.

As the delicious sense of warmth thrilled through her, Nina roused herself from the stupor produced by cold and the shock she had received. She languidly stretched out her hand and touched the shirt-sleeved arm of the man who was kneeling by her.

"Dear Floyd," she murmured, "you've taken off your coat to cover me. Put it on. You will freeze. Oh, the fire feels so nice! How good you are!"

rather coarse, but clean and white. Keeping possession of these, he next opened a closet and looked carefully at the garments that hung on the walls. He fixed upon one which he took down and held out before him, examining it critically as he had done the others. It was a rather gaudy looking blue and red flannel wrapper. He decided that this would do, and carefully replacing the other garments, he took this one, with the white things, into the room where Nina sat.

"You are still cold," he said, touching one of her hands. "It is those dripping clothes you have on. Are you strong enough to change them for these dry ones?"

"Where did you get them, and how did you know?" she exclaimed, opening her big eyes in amazement.

"This is one of the things I will tell you when you are as comfortable as I can make you," he answered.

"I am sorry I have not a maid for you. You will have to perform your unique toilet by yourself. Let me know when it is finished. I am going on another exploring trip."

He went out the back way, shutting the door behind him. She examined the little pile of clothes, and found everything she needed, even to towels and a pair of stockings.

"What a man he is!" she said to herself, "Oh, he—"

She broke off with a sigh. She sat in silence, gazing into the glowing fire, the tears gathering in her eyes. She roused herself and began to dress with surprising energy. In a short time she had divested herself of her drenched garments and put on the clean, dry ones, whose coarseness fretted her soft skin a little; but the sense of warmth and dryness compensated for this. She picked up and wrung out her own garments and hung them on a towel rack behind the screen. Then she sat down once more in the big armchair, but not before she had, womanlike, looked at herself in the old-fashioned, gilt framed mirror that hung over the mantel-piece. She sat gazing into the fire, thinking, regretting, dreading to face the future.

The little clock above her head struck eight. She started up, remembering that she was to let Harry know when she had finished dressing. She knocked on the door he had passed through, and he answered from some region beyond, "Coming!" in his clear, strong voice. She liked the ring of that voice. It sent her miserable thoughts to flight.

A moment after we came in, laughing and rosy. He had a pot of hot coffee in one hand, and a tray with a plate of biscuits and sliced him on it in the other.

"I have been making useful discoveries," he said. "I have found the pantry and a little gasoline stove. Here is the result. The hot coffee will do you good. Why, the old blue and red wrapper has made you look like a queen of gypsies, with all that long, black hair on your shoulders! But do you know your hair is still dripping? Let me wring it for you while you sit down and drink your coffee."

But she would not touch the little repast he set before her until he, too, had taken his seat at the small table and let her pour out a cup of coffee for him.

As they ate, the fire burned briskly, the wind moaned fitfully without, but within all was warmth and comfort and seclusion, the sweet sense of which came over them as they sat opposite each other at the tiny table.

Afterward she let him wring out her hair. As he gathered up the rich, wet mass, his hand touched her lovely neck, and a thrill went through him. His fingers trembled. He bit his lip and frowned, then hurried through his task.

"Come and sit down," she said in a low, strangely muffled voice.

When he had seated himself near her, and looked into her face, he saw, to his surprise that it was wet with tears. Large drops hung on her lashes, as she lifted them and looked at him with wistful earnestness.

"You are too good to me!" she said. "I do not deserve it; I do not deserve anything you have done for me. How can I ever thank you?"

"You need not thank me for what has made me happy to do," he said, laying his hand gently on hers, that were held out, clasped together, on her knees. "It has made me very happy to have been made the instrument of rescuing you," he went on, speaking low. "I shall always remember this night with thankfulness."

"I, too, shall always remember this night," she said. Then a look of pain came into her eyes. She drew her hands away and wrung them. "Oh!" she cried, "we sit here so quietly and talk about this night when it may have been a terrible thing. Are you sure he was not drowned?"

"Floyd Grafton was not drowned. I feel sure of it."

"Then, where is he?"

"He found no boat at this landing and he went on to the next house. There he doubtless got a boat and hastened back to get you."

"When he found I was not there, he must have believed I was drowned," she said.

"Then a joyful surprise awaits him tomorrow," he added, cheerily.

"A happy meeting it will be," he went on, smiling, though his heart was far from light.

She looked at him in a strange way, a kind of wild wistfulness in her eyes.

"You forget that he believed it was the only way to save you."

"Would you have left me?"

He felt that she put the question as a test. She was looking straight at him with suppressed eagerness in her dark eyes; her hands, which lay folded on her knees, clasped themselves tightly together.

"No," he answered. "I would have swum with you to the shore."

"But if you believed you could not do that?"

"I would have tried; if I failed I would have perished with you."

She had drawn the words from him with those compelling eyes, but they came with a warmth that seemed to call her to herself. Her look relaxed. Her hands dropped apart; a sigh fluttered from her lips, and her lids fell, hiding the pain he knew was in her eyes. He felt as if he had given her a blow. He experienced a fierce longing to take her in his arms and comfort her.

He rose to his feet; the warm air of the room seemed suddenly to stiffen him; he walked to the window, and stepped out on the porch.

"What a change!" he cried. "Not a sign of the storm. The night is supremely beautiful."

She came to the window, stood inside a moment, then stepped softly out and stood beside him. He turned and saw her.

"Oh, you should not be out here, in this damp air," he said, quickly.

"You should not have tempted me," she answered, smiling archly up to his face. "I came out to see the beauty you praised. It is surely magic; the change in the sky and the river. Oh, the river!"

She shuddered as her look went over the now moonlit, foam-flecked waters that had no nearly been her grave.

The only souvenirs of the storm were the torn and flying clouds, now turned to silver by the moon, and the glistening raindrops that lay thickly on the dark green leaves of the orange trees. The rich scent of the orange blossoms filled the damp cool air. The voices of the storm all her wealth of heart and mind, was soon to be given to the arms of one who was not worthy? Yes, he knew that she would marry Floyd Grafton even if a revelation of his littleness had dawned upon her to-night through the glamour her love had thrown around him. She would marry him to make amends for the wrong she believed she had done him.

Harry turned from the window and threw himself upon the bed, hoping to sleep. But sleep came only in brief, fleeting visits throughout the night. At early dawn he rose and went down to the riverside. The grand expanse of water was almost calm—only streaked here and there with foam in token of last night's storm. At a distance of hardly seventy yards from the shore he could see a portion of the keel of "The Crow" with the water rippling about over it and the piece of rigging to which Nina had clung when she was left to her fate by Grafton.

"The coward!" Lee once more uttered between his clenched teeth. A glance upon the river showed him a man coming along the path that ran along between the mangrove-bordered bank and the field of pineapples. He came on down to the dock where Lee was standing. He was a wiry, unburned young fellow, a farmer—as was plain to be seen by his sturdy look and independent carriage. He glanced at Harry, then at the boat which was fastened to the dock.

"'Good-mornin'," he said. "You've been looking for the body, I s'pose? Have you found it?"

"What body?"

daring to lift his eyes to her face. At length he looked up and saw that the sweet face between the dark, loose hair was pale as ivory, and the drooped lids looked as if they hid tears.

"You are worn out," he said. "You must have sleep. There is a bed behind the screen there; or will you have me draw that lounge to the fire and lie here, with a blanket over you?"

"I will sleep here in the big chair," she said.

"No, you must lie down. How will this do?"

He drew the wide, calico-covered couch before the fire, and brought a pillow and a bright patchwork quilt from the bed.

"Rest these yourself," she said, smiling. "I will keep watch."

"Indeed you shall not. There is no need for any one to keep watch. I will make myself comfortable in the other room. If you should feel ill, call to me; I am a light sleeper. But I hope you will not feel ill; I trust you will rest as peacefully as if you were in your own house."

He was turning to go into the next room, when she asked:

"When are you going to start back to New York?"

"Tomorrow—as early as possible, as soon as I see you safe with your friend."

"And you will let me hear from you? You will let me know when you are—married?"

"Yes, I will let you know."

"It will be soon, I suppose—as soon—"

"As soon after the divorce as possible," he answered, quickly, with a forced hardness in his tone.

She flushed a little.

"I will hasten it as much as I can, for your sake," she said. "You will forgive me for delaying your happiness?"

"Last night I told you that there was no ground for forgiveness, only for kind and grateful remembrance," he answered, feelingly. "And now you must rest. Good night."

He bent his head over the hand she held out to him; then he raised it quickly to his lips, and letting it fall, he passed out of sight through the door.

She did not dream then how long a time would elapse before she saw him again, and under what changed circumstances that meeting would take place.

CHAPTER XVI

Lee could not sleep. The recollection of what had happened on the porch filled him with self-reproach. A feeling that he had been disloyal to Lucille burned within him. Oh, why had he yielded to that mad impulse? What must Nina think of him?

But why had she not resented that impetuous career? Was it possible that she—Oh, no, no! Her whole heart was given to Floyd Grafton. It was only that she was so generous, as well as so pure and broad in her nature, that she had forgiven his offense. She had pardoned it on the score that it was unpremeditated. It was the outcome of a sudden emotional impulse.

"I know you were thinking of another," she had said, excusingly.

But he knew he had not been thinking of another. He remembered guiltily that he had not thought of Lucille today.

He took her picture from his bosom and looked at it by the moonlight that streamed in at his window. Such a little rosebud face! He kissed the smiling mouth, murmuring, "My sweet, my own Lucille!"

He strove to let her image efface the one that kept rising before his eyes—the proud, sweet face, the rich dark eyes luminous with soul-like legal wife—soon to be his no longer, even in law. Did he regret it? Was it only that it troubled him to think that this sweet woman, with all her wealth of heart and mind, was soon to be given to the arms of one who was not worthy? Yes, he knew that she would marry Floyd Grafton even if a revelation of his littleness had dawned upon her to-night through the glamour her love had thrown around him. She would marry him to make amends for the wrong she believed she had done him.

last night out there where you see the water riffin' on her keel. He had two Northern folks in it—swells from New York—a man and a woman. What must he and t'other fellow do but swim to shore and leave the woman holdin' on to some of the riggin'. They swam to my landin'—right here. They said they thought to find a boat here, but I had taken my wife in the boat to her father's, about a mile further up. They came on there, burst in on us whilst we were at supper, wet as drowned rats, and the Yankee just ashakin' with the cold. He asked for a dram and wife's father gave him a stiff one. Then he told us about the lady, and I and Tom—wife's brother—jumped into the boat and went to get her. If she was still there, Kent went with us to show us the place where the boat had capsized, but the other fellow tumbled in the bed, and we left the women a-coddlin' him. Well, when we got to the boat the woman wasn't to be seen. She was drowned, of course, with the rain and the waves a-dashin' in her face. It was a mighty pity, too. She was Pedro de Vazco's daughter, so the young fellow told us. De Vazco was as good a man as I ever knew. He died at his home near to Rockledge. Grafton said the girl was engaged to be married to him, and she had no end of money. His harped on the money a good deal. He took on mighty when we told him she was drowned, but he was sleeping like a top when I left the house awhile ago. I came on here to look for the girl's dead body. So, you haven't seen it?"

"No, I have not seen her dead body; I have seen her living self. She is safe. She is up there at your house, asleep."

"What! You don't tell me so! How did it come? Who rescued her?"

"I was fortunate enough to be near in a boat when the capsiz' took place. I picked her up just in time to save her, and brought her here. I took the liberty of getting into your house through the window. I took some other privileges with your belongings to make her comfortable with food and clothes that I—"

"That's all right. She is welcome to everything. Her father was the squarest man we've had to come amongst us. It was lucky you happened along with your boat. Were you acquainted with her?"

"Yes. She is a lovely woman."

"That's just the way. It's the lovely women that fall to the share of the no-account men. It's none of my business, but I'll bet that Grafton's a selfish fellow—a sort of fortune hunter. There!—there's my long tongue again, just as my wife says. And he may be your cousin or your brother, for what I know, though you don't favor him."

"He is no relation of mine," Harry said; and he mentally added: "Thank Heaven."

"Well, yander he comes now. I see his light clothes through the trees. He had 'em dried and ironed last night. And there's my wife and her brother with him. They are going up to the house. Is the lady asleep? No; there she is at the window. What a surprise it'll be for him to see her alive. There'll be a scene, as they say in the story books. I'll give my wife a sign to keep back. Ah! you going up to the house with him?"

"Not I won't intrude upon them," said Harry, hastily. "I must get back to Rockledge at once. I wish to leave on the first boat going up."

"The first boat? Why, that's the old 'St. Augustine,' and she'll stop at my father-in-law's to take on some crates of cukes."

"Cukes?"

"Well, that's our Florida name for cucumbers. Life's too short to worry over such long names. But as I was going to say, you can get on the steamer up here—needn't go back to Rockledge. I'll pull Sam Thompson's boat up to Rockledge, and turn it over to him for you. I'm goin' up today, anyway."

"Thank you; then I will take the steambot at your father's landing," Harry said, drawing quickly back, till he was screened by the mangrove bushes as Grafton came nearer. The farmer went to meet him.

"What news?" cried Grafton, anxiously, as the other came up to him.

"Good news," answered the farmer, smiling encouragingly—the white unhappy face of the young man excited his pity. "Good news. She is saved—she is there—in my house. Don't waste time staring at me, man. Go on to the cottage and see for yourself."

With a cry of joy Grafton ran up to the house.

Nina was standing in the window that opened to the floor. She drew back as she saw him. A feeling of repulsion rose strong within her. The indignation she felt at something else, it seemed to her, had died out with it.

She shrank from meeting him. She wished it might be so that he would not hear of her rescue—that he would think she had perished where he left her.

She was bound to him; she would keep her pledge, she would become his wife. But, alas, her idol had fallen from its throne.

She stood cold and impassive as a statue when he rushed to her side, crying, "Nina! My darling Nina! Is it you? Is it you, alive?"

10 CENT "CASCARETS"

IF BILIOUS OR COSTIVE

For Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Sluggish Liver and Bowels—They work while you sleep.

Furred Tongue, Bad Taste, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels, which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months.

Young Girl's Death

The death of Miss Willa Rae, youngest daughter of Mrs. Margaret Rae, Strathadam, occurred at the home of her mother, early Monday morning, after a few weeks illness from muscular rheumatism. Deceased was in her fifteenth year, and is survived by her mother, one sister, Miss Mary Rae, at home, and three brothers, George, of Ontario; Garvie, with the Canadian Expeditionary forces in France and Neil at home.

Methodist Church Services

Rev. Dr. Morton, of Sackville, preached most acceptably in the Methodist Church last Sabbath. Dr. Morton was stationed in Newcastle some forty-six years ago, and he retains most vivid recollections of many Methodist families residing here at that time. He notices many changes which have taken place during those years, and is impressed with the improved conditions which now prevail. For his years Dr. Morton is a forceful and effective preacher, and a most entertaining conversationalist.

Recovered From Operation

Andrew Butler, son of Mr. David Butler, of Nordin, who was operated on about seven weeks ago for appendicitis by Dr. McGrath, has sufficiently recovered to be removed home, where he was taken on Friday. When first taken to the hospital there were small hopes for his recovery, owing to the nature of his ailment, but his many boy friends are pleased to see him on the road to recovery.

Ice Cream and Cake

A very successful ice cream and cake sale was held on Monday evening by the Millerton Branch of the Women's Institute on the grounds of Mr. W. G. Thurber. The grounds were beautifully decorated, with large and small flags, Chinese lanterns and electric lights. The sale lasted from 6 to 9 o'clock, during which time Mr. Vivian Burrill gave some good selections from his Victoria. The proceeds, which will be devoted to Red Cross work, amount to about $30.00. The Institute wish to thank all who so generously helped to make the social a success.

Bitten by Vicious Dog

Little Grace Johnson, the seven year old daughter of Mr. George Johnson, was badly bitten by a vicious dog Saturday night about half past nine o'clock. The dog was standing on the veranda of his owner's house, Thomas Doucet, when the little girl came up to some other children who were also on the veranda. On her approach, the dog without warning, jumped at the child's throat, tearing the flesh in a painful manner. When Mr. Johnson learned of the fact he immediately notified Policeman Gallah, who drowned the dog about half an hour later.

Curfew Law Working

The curfew law, recently put into force by the Council, is working splendidly, in consequence of the stern hand and watchful eye of Officer Gallah. On Friday night after the band concert had finished, there was a quick scattering for home of all who came under the law, and Officer Gallah intends to enforce it to the letter, making examples where cases arise demanding it. This new law will prove a blessing, not only to the town, but to the young boys and girls who have been in the habit of remaining out on the streets until late at night. It is now up to parents to take a hand in this matter by seeing that those under the age limit under their care are in by nine o'clock.

EXCURSION, BAND CONCERT AND SUPPER.

On Thursday of next week, 2nd of September, the Presbyterians are to have another supper, sale and band concert to be held in the Orange Hall, Redbank. We want it to be better than ever, better band, better supper, better ice cream, better fancy things, better fun. The steamer Dorothy N. is chartered to bring the band and all others who care to come on her. She will return the same evening. It will be a fine chance for a good trip up and return in the moonlight. The boat will leave Newcastle at 4.30 and will call at the different points at an hour and a half later than usual. Supper will be served from 7 o'clock and after. Pie sale at 9 o'clock. Tickets for band concert 15 cents, supper 30 cents. Plan to come and bring someone with you. After supper buy her some ice cream, fruit and candy and for a lasting remembrance some fancy article or other. Do not forget the date. The band has promised to be on hand at 7 o'clock when supper begins. 35-1

Badly Injured In Lynch's Mill

Frank Russell, of Nelson, Caught in Belt and May Lose Leg

About 9.30 o'clock on Friday morning, Frank Russell, son of Frank Russell, of Nelson, and about twenty-five years of age, while working in Lynch's mill, met with an accident that may cause the loss of a leg. He was working about the saw-dust scraper in the lower part of the mill, having been sent there to remove some sawdust. At the time of his going down, the belt was off, but while he was clearing away the sawdust, the belt was put on and the machinery started, unawares of his presence below. He was caught in the belt and thrown in the machinery, receiving a fracture of the shank of the right leg and extensive laceration of the leg, exposing the bone. Dr. McGrath was immediately sent for, who had the unfortunate young man removed to the Hotel Dieu hospital, Chatham, where he attended to his injuries. Although the leg is badly injured, it may be possible to save it. This is the second accident this young man has had at this mill, and nearly killed in both instances. His first accident left him crippled in the right leg, and his accident on Friday to the same leg will probably necessitate amputation. He was the only support of a crippled father, who has the sympathy of a large community of friends.

The Charles Frohman Estate Presents William H. Crane IN HIS GREAT CHARACTERIZATION

"David Harum" IN FIVE PARTS

By Edward Noyes Wescott

MR. WILLIAM CRANE makes his first motion picture appearance in his famous characterization of David Harum. It is doubtful if any American work of drama or fiction has ever achieved such a widespread and instantaneous success as did this book and play. Mr. Crane's wonderful portrayal of the genial and quaint old hero of this masterpiece is one of the best examples of character work ever given on the stage, so that the unusual combination of star and play insure a photo drama of unusual merit.

Development of The Stone Quarrying Industry

Paper Read by R. George Hood at The Maritime Board of Trade Meeting at Summerside

An industry that is receiving much notice throughout the Maritime Provinces is that of the Miramichi Quarry Co., situated at Quarryville, Northumberland County, N. B., and which is being operated under the management of Mr. R. George Hood, a man thoroughly conversant with every branch of this fast becoming important industry, an industry of natural resource and yet in its infancy.

The sandstone and freestone deposits of the Miramichi quarry are most valuable for a great variety of architectural and engineering purposes, and not only for these, but also as pulp grinding stones and grindstones for metal grinding. The value of these stones is evidenced by the fact that shipments have been made as far as Toronto.

The following paper, read by Mr. Hood before the Maritime Board of Trade meeting held last week in Summerside, P. E. I., an account of which will be found on page two of this issue, will give an exact idea of the value this industry is proving to the Maritime Provinces, and particularly the value of the Miramichi quarry to the County of Northumberland.

"I wish to draw your attention to one of the natural resources of the Maritime Provinces, the value and importance of which does not appear to me to be appreciated.

I refer to stone, particularly our sandstone or freestone deposits. In these we have a most valuable stone for a great variety of architectural and engineering purposes. Not only is it valuable for these purposes, but also as pulp grinding stones and grindstones for metal grinding and all purposes requiring a good abrasive.

Regarding stone for buildings and other structural works, the other provinces of Canada can supply their requirements in all kinds except sandstone when their quarries are developed. For this reason we cannot expect our granite, marble and limestone to supply the other provinces to a very great extent. We should, of course, supply the Maritime Provinces because we have good deposits of these kinds. We are in a very different position as regards our sandstone. The provinces of Ontario and Quebec are, practically speaking, without sandstone suitable for building purposes, and when I tell you that sandstone and Indiana limestone were brought all the way from Ohio and Indiana to Regina and Edmonton for the Parliament Buildings of the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta and many other buildings in these cities, you will see the possibilities ahead for supplying the other Provinces of our Dominion with their requirements of fine building stone.

A Toronto man, who was at Quarryville last year buying stone from us for Toronto, was asked why he came so far for stone. He replied that a good light-colored Canadian sandstone was required and that our quarry was the nearest to Toronto. The distance is about a thousand miles. Now, gentlemen, I am not trying to advertise the Miramichi Quarry Co.'s stone, or make it out better than any other in the Maritime Provinces, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia can supply the other provinces for hundreds of years to come. I want you to realize that when Canadian sandstone is specified for a building in Ontario, it means business for the Maritime Provinces.

For a good many years past our Dominion Government has encouraged the development of our stone resources by specifying Canadian stone for Government Buildings. This was done under the Liberal administration as well as by our present Conservative Government. The Dominion Government Buildings take only a small portion of the stone used in our Canadian cities however, and the great question to solve is—how to secure the business that now goes to the United States.

Canadian quarries are handicapped to a greater extent than most people are aware. The demand for stone arose in the United States earlier than in Canada, and brought about great development of their quarries. Now, Canada has reached the stage where stone buildings are required, and the United States quarries being developed and in a position to supply us both quarried

KEEN STRUGGLE FOR PREMIER HONORS WILL MARK CLOSE OF ADVOCATE CONTEST

Race Will End Tomorrow (Thursday) Night at 12 O'clock—Miss Parker Still Leads, but Other Earnest Workers Come Threateningly Close—Every Hour, Every Minute, Every Dollar and Every Subscription Will Count Until Tomorrow Midnight.

Another day's effort on the part of contestants, with another twenty-four hours of excitement and anxiety on the part of their supporters, and the Advocate voting contest will be a matter of local history. Today's figures representing the standing of the various contestants leave no doubt that the close of the contest will be an intensely exciting event. No apparent advantage, of importance, lies with any particular contestant among the first four, and the problem of picking the first prize winner remains as difficult today as it has been at any time during the campaign. "The one who has the most votes" is as definite an answer to the oft-repeated query of "Who will win first prize?" as it is possible for anyone to give.

While at least all of the contestants do not profess to be confident of winning first prize, it can be said that each of them wants to do so, and the respective friends of each are highly optimistic in their views of the chances of their respective favorites. Miss Parker's friends and supporters, or rather many of them, regard her success tomorrow as a foregone conclusion; Miss Appleby's well-wishers do not admit her chance of failure to carry off premier honors; the people of Doaktown and vicinity are more than sanguine over the prospects of their representative in the contest, Miss Hinton; and many people in various parts of the country feel very sure that Miss Nan Benn, of Nordie, will repeat her father's achievement in the St. John "Standard" contest, and capture the big prize. And, in street parlance, there you are. As the contestants enter the stretch, as it were, it appears to be anybody's race, with a close, thrilling finish as the only certainty in view.

It would seem that every contestant will need to put forth every possible effort in the remaining few hours of the contest in order to beat her competitors and win the coveted honor and reward which the leader at the finish will reap. Every dollar and every subscription will count. For all anyone can tell, just one little dollar may mean the difference to some contestant between first place, and one lower down the list. It is, therefore, apparent to anyone that it is essential to the certain success of any worker that she collect every dollar, and secure every subscription that she can possibly get. It is true, of course, that the winning contestant may have thousands of votes to spare. She may—but the way things look just now, it hardly seems likely that such a happy circumstance will exist in the case of any contestant. In any event it is better to be safe than sorry. It is better to have a million votes that are not needed than to have two hundred votes less than enough to make one the winner of first prize. And, whatever one may think of the chances of such a circumstance arising, it is possible for any contestant to lack just two hundred votes of having enough to place her at the top when the votes are counted, and the judges render their decision. Should such a condition arise, some contestant will be saying to herself for a long time: "Oh, why didn't I get that subscription from Mr. .... Oh, if I had only known!" Or, some friend of a contestant, perhaps, will be reproaching himself, or herself, with words somewhat like these: "Now, isn't that too bad. Just to think that Mr. .... would have won that piano if I had given her my subscription. I wish I had done it." Vain regrets will these be. The sensible thing for each and every contestant to do every hour of today and tomorrow, is to overlook no possible subscriber, to withhold no effort that may result in adding more votes to her total. The reasonable thing for each and every friend of any particular contestant to do before tomorrow night is to make it a point to fulfil their favorites their subscriptions, without fail.

The Close

The Advocate contest will close at 12 o'clock, midnight, Thursday, August 26, 1915. All business to be counted in the contest must be in the Advocate office at that hour. Payments for subscriptions must be made in cash. Subscribers should, therefore, be careful not to give cheques to their respective favorites, as it might be impossible to get them cashed, thus causing serious disappointment and perhaps loss to those whom they want to help.

All business turned into the contest office tomorrow will be deposited in a receptacle sealed by the judges, and no one can, by any possible means, know how much money or how many subscriptions are contained in the box until it is opened by the judges at the close of the contest. The judges' decision will be made as early on Friday as it is possible for them to do so, and will be announced immediately thereafter. A full account of the close of the contest will be published in the Advocate next week.

Prizes are Greatly Admired

All of the prizes which will be awarded in the contest were placed on exhibition in the old Commercial hotel last Friday, and immediately became the objects of many favorable comments by passers-by. On Friday evening while the band concert was in progress in the public square, the sidewalk in front of the window where the prizes are displayed, was thronged almost continuously by interested people, among whom the consensus of opinion was that all of the prizes were exceptionally fine. The style and beautiful case of the Lonsdale piano which will be awarded to the lady winning first prize, attracted much favorable attention, and all the other prizes came in for their due share as well. Many critics expressed high praise for the $150 cabinet of Canadian Wm. A. Rogers Limited silverware, which constitutes the second prize, others admired the $100 silver tea service manufactured by the same company, and constituting the third prize, and by no means the least admired are the prizes worth the $50 set of genuine cut glass manufactured by the Wallaceburg Cut Glass Works, of Wallaceburg, Ont. The prizes will remain on exhibition until the close of the contest. The $400 Lonsdale piano has been tried by several competent critics, by all of whom it has been pronounced a very fine instrument.

A Long-felt Want at Last Brought to Attention of The Town Council

Town Council met on the 19th instant, Mayor Stothart in the chair, Aldermen present: Doyle, Hayward, Mackay, McGrath, Ritchie and Stuart.

Communications were read from Geo. McDade, sec. Union of N. B. Municipalities, announcing that the annual convention would be held in Fredericton August 25th and 26th inst., and inviting the payment of dues ($10 a year) and sending of as large a delegation as possible.

Ald. Ritchie asked what benefit it would be to send delegates.

The Mayor said the Union was of great importance. He had attended last year and found it very helpful. It was well that the representatives of the different municipalities should meet and exchange views. A leading question this year would be that of Patriotic work by the Municipalities. He would like to see as many delegates attend as possible. Patriotic work was pressing. He had had a telegram that morning from Lieut. Gov. Wood, urging the Patriotic Society to send representatives to attend Sir H. B. Amos's speech on the Patriotic fund in St. John the next (Friday) night. He had handed over the message to Pres. C. J. Morrissy, Delegate to the Union would pay their own expenses.

On motion Ald. Doyle and Mackay the annual membership fee to the Union was ordered paid.

Ald. Stuart said he could not attend the convention this year. He could therefore, without being misunderstood, speak on a principle involved. Delegates from this council should have, and usually did have, their expenses paid. The service of those who could afford to give both time and money free was not always the best. Non-payment might deter some good men from offering for, or accepting, a place on a delegation. A large number need not be sent. One or two good men would be enough to represent the town. The Union was most beneficial, and he would move, That delegates be appointed.

Ald. Ritchie was opposed to sending any delegates if expenses were to be paid.

Ald. Stuart—Why not appoint only one?

Ald. McGrath wanted to have the Town represented. As no one was anxious to go, one delegate would do.

Ald. MacKay thought that if we had no subject for discussion, it was a useless expense to send delegates.

Ald. Doyle said that not sending delegates would look bad. It would show indifference.

Motion to send delegates was carried.

The following were chosen. Town Clerk, Mayor, and Ald. Doyle, Creighton, MacKay and McGrath.

Following communication was read:

Newcastle N. B., Aug. 19, 1915
Mr. James Stables,
Chairman Park & Fire Com.

Dear Sir, I beg to inform you that contract of Chas. Sargeant's with the town for conveyance of fire apparatus has expired. This system has proven very satisfactory and I would ask you to endeavor to have a renewal of it.

At a meeting of the Department, a motion was passed in reference to the steam fire engine.

The company would ask you to relieve them of all the responsibility of the engine.

The Department is in need of the following appliances. I would ask you for the following:

- 3 pairs rubber boots,
- 1 rubber coat,
- 2 Stimpase,
- 2 shut-off nozzles,
- 2 shut-off gates.

There is a very important matter which has been under discussion by the Department and the town officials for some time past, and that is, the installation of a regular fire alarm system. As you are well aware, the present system is of practically little use in giving us the location of any fire.

I would ask you to kindly treat

this matter with due consideration, your obedient servants,
C. M. DICKISON,
Chief N. F. D.
WM. STABLES, Secy.

To Ald. Hayward's question, the Town Clerk said that Mr. Sargeant's contract for hauling apparatus to all fires in the Fire District was $75 a year.

On motion matter was referred to Park and Fire Committee.

Following bills were passed:

Finance
Miramichi Pub. Co.	$3.25
Police
A. A. Davidson, Counsel fees	...
C. T. A. Jan. 1 to June 30	$171.00
B. F. Malby	$3.43
Park & Fire
Newcastle Planning Mill	$3.00
Light & Water
L. C. Coal Mining Co.	$308.33
Crandall Harrison & Co.	18.00
Maritime Foundry	5.81
Cen. Gen. Elec. Co.	146.44
T. McAvity & Sons	62.80
	$721.75

Ald. Stuart reported that the Petition Committee had failed to get a meeting with the majority of the assessors re R. E. Woodworth's application for reduction of taxes equal to a reduction of assessment from $1350 to $850, which had been referred back to them at last meeting. Only one assessor had been able to come to the meeting called for previous night. He had seen a second assessor a few hours ago, and he had not seemed favorable to a reopening of the question.

Ald. Stuart moved, That the matter of Mr. Woodworth's assessment be left as it was.

This was seconded by Ald. Doyle.

Ald. Stuart said that Mr. Woodworth was evidently, like many others, overtaxed, but in his opinion, he was not over-assessed. The assessors had evidently valued Mr. Woodworth at about par as the law says they should value all real and personal property and income, after allowing for certain statutory exemptions. Mr. Woodworth was most probably overtaxed in comparison with some because of his rate being higher than it would be if all were assessed at par value. Mr. Woodworth, who need not fear being punished by any higher assessment, should bring the whole assessment before the Council, the court, the Legislature and public opinion and endeavor to compel the assessment of all property and income at its exact value. Reducing Mr. Woodworth's taxes because his assessment was merely nearer par than others was not the true remedy but rather the raising of all assessments to exact value. The law should be fully carried out. That this was not done in every case was clearly shown by the Wireless Station with its immense plant and 54 acres of land in the heart of the town being valued at only $15,000 for school taxes, when it was worth at least $115,000, and the town thus losing school taxes on a valuation of at least $100,000 a year.

Ald. McGrath said it appeared that Mr. Woodworth was assessed to the limit, while some others were not. Ald. Stuart thought that he was overtaxed in comparison with his neighbors. Therefore some relief should be given. He did not want him to be overtaxed. He moved, That the assessment be reduced from $1350 to $850.

Ald. MacKay said he knew nothing about the property, but thought Council should be guided by the assessors.

Ald. McGrath maintained that Mr. Woodworth being admittedly overtaxed in comparison with others, it was every alderman's duty to know something about the case. It had been up for discussion over a month. The property was passed by every day. Council should not neglect their neighborly duties.

Ald. Hayward sympathized with Mr. Woodworth, but the assessors ought to know.

Ald. Ritchie did not see why the assessors should be interfered with. If the assessment were changed this year, the assessors might refuse to act again.

Ald. McGrath said that Mr. Woodworth had asked relief from the assessors last year and they had ignored him. This year, with practically

Grand Public Social To be Held in Square

Patriotic Fund Committee Will Hold Social to Raise Needed Money

Some night next week the citizens of Newcastle will be treated to a social in the square, at which the hand will be in attendance and a general good time will be enjoyed by it, it is hoped, a very large gathering.

The object of the social is to raise funds for the Patriotic Fund, of which Chas. J. Morrissy is Chairman of the Committee. A large number of Patriotic Dolls will be procured which will be sold by the aid of wheels of fortune, in a similar way as teddy bears are disposed of at exhibitions.

The committee realizes the necessity of their having to raise more money, as their fund on hand is just about all drawn on. It is therefore the duty of our citizens to assist in whatever way they can in making this social not only a social one, but also a successful one. Ice cream and soft drinks will also be on sale in booths, and the ladies of the town will be called upon by the committee to furnish the ice cream.

This will be something new in the way of amusement, which no doubt will be enjoyed not only by our own town's people, but by visitors from outlying points who will come

Native of Blackville Dies in the States

The death occurred at Hoboken, N. J., on Friday morning, August 6th, of Walter Frederick James, aged 20 years, son of Frederick and Victoria James, after a brief illness of only a day and a half, of acute indigestion, at the home of his uncle, Lewis P. James.

The body was taken to Portland, Me., accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis James, and the funeral was held on Sunday, August 8th, from his home at 407 Cumberland Ave. Besides his sorrowing parents, he is survived by three sisters—Willie, Jennie, (Mrs. A. Phillips Seavey), both of Presque Isle, Me., and Stella at home.

The deceased was born August 27th, 1895, at Blackville, N. B., and was a promising young man of sterling qualities, and beloved by all who knew him. Mr. and Mrs. James have the sympathy of their Blackville friends in their sad loss.

our architecture natural characteristics." Following was the resolution. RESOLVED, that it is in the interests of the Maritime Provinces that the Dominion Government should take such steps as will adequately encourage the development of the stone quarrying industry of said Provinces.

This resolution was seconded by Mr. E. A. McCurdy and carried unanimously.

Will that paltry $5000.00 compensate it? Would $100,000.00 (the price of the whole building) compensate it? Most emphatically, gentlemen, I say no.

I am addressing business men, men who, I am sure, appreciate the advantages of keeping Canadian money in Canada and of having it circulated as near them as possible, men whose slogan is "Use made in Canada goods," men who should and are putting their capital into the development of the natural resources of the Maritime Provinces and home industries.

Here, gentlemen, is a resource that can be made of great value to these provinces by your co-operation and influence.

I, therefore, ask you to support the resolution before us and, in so doing, bring about the spreading all over the Dominion of a resource of the Maritime Provinces that will improve our buildings and tend to give opportunity for those in charge of education to educate boys and girls in the beauty of one of our resources, but before them a permanent object lesson, cultivating a patriotic spirit and the "Made in Canada" idea; but this educational body threw away this opportunity.

Embued with such teaching, thousands of boys and girls will grow up having a disregard for what Canadian business men are endeavoring to promote. Who can calculate the loss to Canada that such teaching may mean? Think of all the contracts that the countless pupils of Aberdeen school will let in the years that are to come.

Annual Meeting of The Maritime Board of Trade

At Summerside—Newcastle Board Introduces Resolution to Ask Dominion Government to Subsidize Line of Steamships Between Miramichi and P. E. I.

Summerside, P. E. I., Aug. 18—About thirty delegates were in attendance at the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade this morning. Amherst delegates were prevented from attending owing to the death of Mayor Bourgeois. The Sackville delegates, coming over in a motor boat, were detained by storm. Among those present are: E. A. Reilly, W. H. Price, T. Williams, A. C. Chapman, Moncton; W. Quilty, Kentville; B. C. Hood, Quarryville; N. B. G. Crook, Truro; Rev. E. S. Murdoch, Renouf; N. B. E. A. McMurphy, Rev. S. J. MacArthur, Newcastle.

Mayor Saunders, of Summerside, in welcoming the delegates, referred first to the war. He stated that the Maritime Provinces were less affected by the war than other parts of Canada, especially in the west, where the conditions there should be a lesson to our men contemplating leaving these provinces. Young men stay east, was his advice. Mayor Saunders advocated placing the new car ferry steamer on the Summerside Cape Tormentine route until the terminals at Carleton Head were completed. This would take a year or two.

The address by the President, E. T. Higgs, of Charlottetown, was an optimistic review of the business conditions and prospects of the Maritime Provinces. He urged more union among business men, the giving of preference to local products and the inauguration of a public campaign through the local boards of trade with the valuable assistance of the press.

The secretary, T. Williams, of Moncton, in his report, stated that the single tax resolution passed at last year's board was sent to the provincial premier. The reply was that there was no general dissatisfaction with the present system and no change would be made until people asked for it. Reference was also made to disposition of other questions taken up at that board, including increase in freight rates, etc. The secretary also reported no delegates from St. John or Halifax this year. The former gave as a reason business conditions; Halifax pleaded lack of interest and threatened to withdraw if there was not more energy shown and more real work done between board meetings.

Summerside, P. E. I., Aug. 18—The Maritime Board of Trade disposed of the bulk of their business this afternoon and will close tomorrow morning. There was a long and interesting discussion on a resolution upon the Provincial Boards of Education, the advisability of introducing more agricultural and technical education into our common schools to the exclusion if necessary of classical and higher mathematical subjects.

It was moved by E. A. McMurphy and seconded by Rev. Father Murdoch, of the Newcastle Board and discussed by T. Williams, E. A. Reilly, Moncton; R. G. Hood, Quarryville; Judge Stewart, ex-Governor MacKinnon; Prof. Theodore Ross, W. F. Tidmarsh, N. Rattenbury, Charlottetown; R. R. MacDonald, New McLeod, Summerside; James Birch, Alberton; A. A. McNeill, O'Leary.

An amendment was moved by ex-Governor MacKinnon that the reference to the exclusion of classes

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in."

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out sickly half-hearted existences, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

THE DAY

BY HENRY CHAPPELL

(The author of this magnificent poem is Mr. Henry Chappell, a railway porter at Bath. Mr. Chappell is known to his comrades as the "Bath Railway Poet." A poem such as this lifts him to the rank of a national poet.)

You heaved the Day, and you toasted the Day.

And now the Day has come. Bashful, blaggard and coward all Little you reek of the umbling ball. The blasting shell, or the "white man's" tail.

As they speed poor humans home You splod for the Day, you Red for the Day.

And woke the Day's red spleen. Monster, who asked God's aid Divine Then stroved His seas with the ghostly mine; Not all the waters of all the Rhine Can wash thy foul hands clean.

You dreamed for the Day, you rehemed for the Day; Watch how the Day will go. Slayer of age and youth and prime (Defenceless slain for never a crime) Thou art steeped in blood as a hog in slime.

False friend and cowardly foe. You have sown for the Day, you have grown for the Day. Yours is the Harpest red. Can you hear the groans and the awful cries? Can you see the heap of slain that lies, And sightless turned to the flame-split skies The glassy eyes of the dead?

You have wronged for the Day, you have longed for the Day. That lit the awful flame. 'Tis nothing to you that hill and plain Yield sheaves of dead men amid the grain; That widows mourn for their loved ones slain, And mothers curse thy name.

But after the Day there's a price to pay For the sleepers under the sod. And he you have mocked for many a day— Listen, and hear what He has to say: "Vengeance is mine, I will repay." What can you say to God?

Seventeen Inch Guns; New Type of Shell

New British Gun That Will Create Havoc at Twenty Five Miles

New York, Aug. 19—Today's New York Tribune prints the following: "Recent arrivals from England are able to afford some explanation of the delayed British advance, which, a month in England as throughout the rest of the world, has caused considerable bewilderment."

Their explanation is that Lord Kitchener has been waiting to launch his "great surprise." And this surprise lies in the completion of new guns and a new type of shell, which, it is believed, will revolutionize artillery operations and make the path of the Allies to Berlin more possible than hitherto.

Soon after the beginning of the war it became patent that high explosives were to be the dominating factor in the struggle for victory. The combined efforts of British chemists and ordinance experts invented a shell unquestionably more powerful than any previously known. In destructive power, it is without doubt superior to any previously known.

The Government ordered experiments to be made with big guns then being manufactured at Woolwich Arsenal. As far back as last November, Government experts were at work on this problem. They experimented with various alloys of steel trying to find out what would stand the strain of such a shell. Finally they succeeded. They produced a 17-inch gun that would suit this purpose. Various experiments have been made, and are believed to have been entirely successful. It is stated that the shell will be carried 25 miles, and will work havoc on a scale entirely unprecedented.

This is answered the question why no advance was made when Warsaw was about to fall and the main bulk of the German troops were concentrated on that front. It also explains why, after the great movement of Kitchener's army to France early in July, the troops were not used. Nothing was to be done until these guns, which the great armament factories of Britain have been working on for six months, had been delivered in sufficient quantities at the front.

Last Wednesday the Second Canadian Contingent, numbering 45,000 picked troops, an overwhelming majority of whom had seen previous service, sailed for France. With their despatch, Kitchener's movement was ready to begin. The result may soon be apparent.

The Only Cure For A Weak Stomach

Indigestion and Similar Troubles Must be Treated Through The Blood

Indigestion can be treated in many ways, but it can only be cured in one way—through the blood. Purgatives cannot cure indigestion. By their force they move on the food still indigested. That weakens the whole system, uses up the natural juices and leaves the stomach and bowels parched and sore. It is actually a cause of indigestion—not a cure. Others try pre-digested foods and potentized drugs. But drugs which digest the food the the stomach really weaken its power and makes the trouble chronic. The digestive organs can never do the work properly until they are strong enough to do it themselves. Nothing can give the stomach that power but the new, rich, red blood so abundantly supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

So the reason for the success of this medicine is plain. Nothing can stimulate the glands and nothing can absorb the nourishment from the food but pure red blood. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills surpass all other medicines in giving that new, rich blood. Miss B. M. Johnson, Hemford, N. S., says: "For months I was a great sufferer from indigestion; food of any kind was distasteful to me, and after eating I would suffer much. Naturally I grew weak and was but a shadow of my former self. I was taking a doctor's prescription, but it did not help me in the least. Then I read of a case similar to my own cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try this medicine. By the time I had taken six boxes the trouble had entirely disappeared, and I could eat heartily of all kinds of food. More than this I found my general health greatly improved through the use of the Pills. I can therefore strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a cure for indigestion."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, most paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Andrew Bonar Law was a younger son of Rev. James Law.

A very successful garden party was held by the ladies of the Millbank Presbyterian church, on the church grounds, on Thursday evening. Well set supper tables were patronized by the large number who attended, and the ice cream and refreshment booths also did a good business. The feature of the evening was the splendid program of music played by the Douglstown band, which is fast gaining popularity in the social and musical circles of the Miramichi.

A. B. Se., and Horace V. Bent, B. S., that can be had at no cost whatever by application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The Pamphlet gives a brief sketch of the origin and history of the Angora, which from being a native of Turkey in Asia has travelled extensively to South Africa, in the United States and not as well known in Canada as desirable. Mohair, of which Turkey, in times of peace, supplies 100,000,000 lbs. annually, South Africa 15,000,000 lbs. and the rest of the world 6,000,000 lbs. is the technical name given the hair of the Angora goat. The word is derived from the French "moher" and primarily from the Arabic "mukhayyar," meaning mohair cloth. This, with a vast deal more information about a particularly useful goat, is furnished in the pamphlet under notice. Nature and the necessary treatment for breeding and raising are set forth with details of market possibilities, of shearing, of grading, and of preparation for shipment. Extracts from letters written by successful breeders in Canada and the United States, telling of their experience are printed as well as some account of the complaints to which the animals are occasionally subject, with advice as to preventives and remedies. Illustrations of types and the fleeces carried at various ages lend impression, expression and interest to the pamphlet.

48th Highlanders

Are Taking Rest

Lance-Corp. Hiram A. Copp Among Wounded in This Regiment

The 48th Highlanders, the regiment that Hiram Copp, of Newcastle, was in when he was wounded, are now taking a rest after sixteen days in the trenches at Plug street, where they underwent some particularly heavy shelling.

The shell which wounded Lance-Corp. Copp, No. 23,506, and several others in this regiment, burst over the parapet. The wounded men are suffering from wounds of a more or less serious nature, but in no case is the injury considered a dangerous one. Corp. Copp's many friends will be pleased to learn this.

When the regiment went into these trenches the officers proceeded at once to strengthen the position much beyond what it had previously been strengthened. They put in permanent parapets and dug a series of fire trenches at the rear to hold supports and reserves. The enemy became alarmed at these activities and guns were brought up, and an attack was planned on the position, an attempt being made at first to shell the Highlanders out of their trenches.

The Germans were unable to budge the 48th, who have acquired the commendable habit of all highly trained troops of lying low when the enemy is trying to draw their fire with shell and rifle fire, but lining the parapets the moment the enemy starts an infantry advance and pouring in a heavy fire. These tactics are laid down by the best authorities and are adopted by the seasoned soldiers. It was the cool manner in which the Canadians adopted them which puzzled the Germans so much at St. Julien.

When Lieut. Wilson and his men were hurt the Germans were systematically shelling the parapets as is their custom, with high explosive shell bursting on impact with the parapet itself, in an effort to blow it up. They followed this up by throwing the big explosive shell to explode 20 feet high over the parapet to catch men working behind, and then sent along the sheet flame for reserves and supports. It was a time shell which exploded over Lieut. Wilson and a number of his men in a shelter trench.

This was the outstanding incident of the stay in the trenches. The weather was good throughout. With the exception of Lieut. Wilson the officers are all well. The regiment was recently considerably strengthened by reinforcements, who are proving to be a lot of fine men.

Letter Received From M. E. Betts

Replies Feelying to Letter From S. S. Convention Committee

The following letter has been received from Magnus Betts, who is now stretcher bearer in France, in reply to a letter he received from a committee—Mrs. H. Swim, Miss Zaida Hinton and Rev. C. Y. Lewis, appointed by the Parish S. S. Convention.

He was formerly one of the Executive. France, July 24, 1915

To the Committee.
Dear Friends—I received with joy your letter of love, which took me back to bygone days. I wish to thank the convention through you for their loving interest.

I must right here confess that I have not been the boy I should have been. But with great joy can say, that more and that alone has kept me still on praying terms and pleading paths with our dear Saviour, who is the friend of children, whom we all feel we owe our most sincere service.

That still small voice can quiet every nerve no matter how great the danger. And can make one feel quite contented under all kinds of circumstances. I know it is needless to tell you all this. But the point is I have been very glad to put it to the test often since I have put on the khaki. It would be useless for me to undertake to tell you how much I appreciate that message. I mean to carry it and look it over often.

It keeps my mind where I want it to dwell on the struggling few, who for the very work's sake are trying to make noble men and women of the young folk there.

May God be pleased to bless every effort of the sessions and may He cheer and strengthen you all.

Yours very sincerely,
M. E. BETTS, No. 23495.

P. S.—I wish to resign my position as Superintendent of the I. B. R. A., which I feel I have very poorly filled, and make way for another. It is a bit difficult now to carry on that work, I let the chances slip.

YOUR favorite recipes for Layer Cake and Mince Pies and Doughnuts and Bread, will always turn out right if you and the oven do your parts as well as "Beaver" Flour will do its part.

You can depend on "Beaver" Flour because it is always the same in strength, quality and flavor. Just try "Beaver" Flour for a month and see what an improvement it is over western wheat flour.

This "Made in Canada" movement can be brought a little nearer home to each individual by emphasizing this suggestion: "Patronize the stores of your home town." Each man is entitled to spend his own money where it will buy the most—whether it be in Rome or Awa.

But in fairness—is it not wisdom before purchasing elsewhere to see what the stores of our own town have to offer? The prosperity of each of us is tied up with the prosperity of his neighbor.

Acquaint yourself with what the stores of your own town are offering by reading the advertisements in The Union Advocate.

A Not-Too-Well-Known Goat

"Most parts of Canada where live stock production prevails are suitable to the raising of Angoras, especially if the land is high and dry the greater part of the year. They will withstand the rigor of even the coldest winter and do not require any greater shelter than a shed to protect them from wind and storm, providing a sufficient quantity of nutritious food and pure water are supplied. The Angora goat performs a two-fold service in the Canadian scheme of farming. It produces a high grade of mohair and at the same time may be used for the destruction of undesirable plants on lands to be broken for subsequent cultivation. Such is one of the opening paragraphs of Pamphlet No. 12 of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch devoted to the Angora Goat and a general discussion of methods of management, feeding and breeding, and of mohair production, by T. THE HOUSING SITUATION

In connection with the amendment which is now going on in Newcastle for the creation of additional housing accommodation, our attention has been called to an Act passed by the Legislature last year to deal with such a situation as now exists here. It is to be regretted that when any really beneficial legislation is placed upon the statute books of this province, some more adequate steps are not taken to make its provisions more widely known than is generally the case. The Act referred to, Chap. 23 of the session of 1914, provides that any municipality, which includes any city or incorporated town may, with the consent of a majority of the ratepayers, guarantee the bonds to the extent of eighty five per cent. of the value of any company formed for the purpose of acquiring land and erecting thereon dwelling houses of moderate size to be rented at moderate rates, provided that the Council is satisfied that such additional housing accommodation is needed, and that the purpose of the company is to help bona fide in supplying that need, and not merely to make profits.

Too Fast Driving
Over Morrissy Bridge

Of late numerous complaints have been made to High Commissioner John Morrissy, about the recklessness of auto and other drivers while crossing the Morrissy bridge, both during the day, and particularly at night. When this bridge was formally opened it was announced by Hon. Mr. Morrissy that it was sufficiently strong enough to bear up under the strain of fast driving, and consequently the statement has been taken at its face value, and drivers have not only been crossing at a good clip, but in some cases have been using the bridge as a race track. It is not because it is felt that the bridge is weakening that these complaints are being made, but because of the danger pedestrians are subjected to in consequence of the extremely high rate of speed autos particularly are driven across. While the bridge is being occupied by a thirty-five mile an hour clip may be a racing auto, but it is not a safe one, and a little common sense of the safety first movement with their incident, and come down to a six mile an hour clip, which is deemed plenty fast enough for horse or auto crossing the bridge. It is a fact that all sorts of vehicles from the light driving carriage to the heavily laden delivery and other wagons, are trotted over this bridge regardless of speed or the danger of sooner or later weakening it, which will only be a natural consequence, unless a stop is put to it at once.

THE ARABIC

"What will America do?" is a question that has been asked in many quarters since the world was startled on Thursday last by the news that the White Star liner Arabic had been destroyed by a German submarine. What America would do in fact what she would have done long ago—if Ex-President Roosevelt had still been the occupant of White House is made very clear by some recent remarks of that gentleman himself; but what President Wilson will do is quite another matter. It is clearly the President's duty to keep his country clear of war if he can consistently with honor, and he is also called upon to keep his party in power if possible. The United States may be kept at peace with the world as the result of Woodrow Wilson's leadership; but neither that leadership nor any other unless aided by a miracle, can keep the American people from voting the Democratic party out of power as soon as the polls open at the next presidential election. The vacillating peace-at-any-price policy of the present administration has alienated the sympathy of the better class throughout the American Republic. Despatches from Washington indicate that the President and his cabinet will wait to see what the German Government has to say regarding the sinking of the Arabic, before deciding upon their course of action. In other words, if Germany can manage to put up any plausible excuse, the Wilson cabinet will accept it. Already two accounts have come from Berlin, one that the submarine commander believed the Arabic intended to "ram" him; another is that the vessel was sunk by a mine and was not torpedoed at all. Both these excuses are without the slightest foundation, but that is a detail that will not weigh with the President if he is anxious to find a way out for his German friends. For the sake of American honor, it is to be regretted that Col. Roosevelt is not now head of the country's Executive.

GERMAN ACTIVITY IN THE UNITED STATES

The revelations recently made by the New York World of the tremendous campaign waged by German agents in the United States, to set public opinion against Great Britain and her Allies, and if possible to cause governmental action unfavorable to them, will render the cause of freedom a service that nothing else could do so well. The mere fact that Germany has been spending an enormous sum—too million dollars a week it is alleged—in an effort to turn American sentiment against Britain must cause amazement that it has been so little successful, that at least three fourths and probably more of the people of the Republic are devoted to the Allied cause.

There is a point where efficiency falls down, and that point was reached by the Germans in the United States. Doubtless the campaign was thoroughly planned and nicely arranged; and doubtless the great mass of the American people had the strong points of the German cause drilled into their ears every day of the war, with noise enough to give the appearance of success in the campaign. Now that all these efforts have been exposed, the reaction will be great.

There is one feature however in the campaign which stands out well. Despite all the great efforts of the German agents, despite all the millions of money poured out in the hope of influencing the daily press, despite all the coercion German advertisers could bring to bear, the press of the United States generally has maintained its highest traditions. Some fell of course; but those papers which stand for anything, the papers of the select first class had no break in their ranks. They have espoused the cause of the Allies in their fight for freedom from first to last, and all the outpouring of German money has not been able to sway them one way or the other.

Complaints Made to High Chief
Commissioner—More Care
Must be Taken

Of late numerous complaints have been made to High Commissioner John Morrissy, about the recklessness of auto and other drivers while crossing the Morrissy bridge, both during the day, and particularly at night. When this bridge was formally opened it was announced by Hon. Mr. Morrissy that it was sufficiently strong enough to bear up under the strain of fast driving, and consequently the statement has been taken at its face value, and drivers have not only been crossing at a good clip, but in some cases have been using the bridge as a race track. Young Boy Working
At Mill Disappears

Thirteen Year Old George Handley Burned to Crisp in Furnace. (Chatham World). George Handley, 13 years old, the eldest son of Mrs. James Handley, went to the Lyman mill Wednesday morning, where he was employed, carrying his dinner with him. He did not return for supper, and his parents learned on inquiry that day, the mill had not been running that day. Nobody had seen George since the morning. Some boys said he had told them he was going down to the boom. His dinner was found in the mill, untouched. Grappling irons were procured, and Mr. Handley and others dragged the millpond all day Thursday without finding anything. A diligent search was made of the river bank, on the supposition that his cap would have been blown ashore if he had been drowned, but nothing was found. His parents have given him up for drowned. It was thought that the boy might have fallen through a man hole on the top of the refuse burner and when the cinders had cooled sufficiently on Sunday to allow them to be overhauled, a search was made with the result that several buttons, teeth and bones were found, and the mysterious disappearance of the poor boy was cleared up. He is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters for whom much sympathy is expressed.

Newcastle Loses Two Highly Respected Citizens

William Lawlor, Aged 60 Years, and Charles Call, Aged 71 Years, Visited by Death's Grim Reaper

WILLIAM LAWLOR CHARLES CALL
After an illness lasting for about a year, death came as a relief to William Lawlor at his home, Water street, shortly after noon on Friday. In the death of Mr. Lawlor, the town of Newcastle loses a respected and well known citizen. For many years he was a faithful employee of the L. C. K. shops here, and after having served his time, he was given a pension by this railway, and had just begun to enjoy the remaining part of his life when ill-health overtook him. During his long illness he bore with patience the suffering from the ailment which he knew would some day terminate in death. The last three months, particularly, were most trying, but through it all he lived unwaveringly, until the Angel of Death came as a last sad relief. The late Mr. Lawlor was sixty years of age, and is survived by a widow, two sons and three daughters. The sons are Frank, late of the Hudson Bay, but now at home, Joseph, with the Great Northwest Telegraph Co. at Montreal. The daughters are Misses Anna, with the J. D. Creighton Co., Chara, teacher in the Hawkins Academy, and Nellie, with Miller Bros. The funeral was held at 2:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, to St. Michael's cemetery, and the remains were followed to the church and grave by a large concourse of citizens who wished to pay their last respects to one they had always looked upon as a most worthy citizen. Service was held in the church, Rev. Father Dixon officiating, after which the remains were laid in their last resting place. The pallbearers were P. J. McEvoy, Andrew McNeil, Hugh Morris, William Keenan, David Dixon and Keltie Anderson. Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which the late Mr. Lawlor was held.

Kirkpatrick--Holland

The marriage of Kathleen May Holland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Holland, of Redbank, to Mr. William T. Kirkpatrick, of Douglas town, was solemnized at St. Thomas Catholic church, Redbank, on Wednesday morning last, with nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. P. V. Duffy. The wedding march was played by Mrs. John Brophy, sister of the groom, and the church was beautifully decorated by friends of the bride, with cut flowers and ferns. The bride was dressed in white, with a veil, and was escorted by her sister Gertrude, who was dressed in blue silk crepe de chene, and wore a large white tulle hat. Mr. Harry Spencer of Douglastown, supported the groom. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents at six o'clock on Wednesday evening. The happy couple were the recipients of many valuable and costly gifts including gold, silver, cut glass, linen and furniture. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue ladies' cloth with hat to match.

YOUNG PRISONER SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

Thirteen Year Old Lad Tried to Wreck the Chatham Branch At Nelson
Leo Masterson, a lad about 13 years of age, and a son of Joseph Masterson of Nelson, was brought before Stipendiary Magistrate Lawlor on Saturday afternoon, charged by I. R. C. Detective Harry Culligan with attempting to wreck the Chatham Branch at Nelson on the 11th and 12th instances.
When the driver of the Branch sent in his report, Detective Culligan was at once put on the case, it being at first suspected that this was the work of German spies. With the able assistance of Deputy Sheriff Irving, Detective Culligan was long in running against sufficient clues to warrant the arrest of this young offender, and he was forthwith taken in charge and brought to Newcastle Saturday morning. Upon being questioned by Detective Culligan he admitted having placed a big stone on the rail on the 11th inst., which the train knocked off, and then again on the 12th he placed what is called a snatch block on the rail. When the engine struck this the force broke the guard rod on the driving wheels, putting on the brakes and bringing the train to a standstill. Had it not done this, there is every reason to believe that young Masterson's curiosity, as he explained to the officers, would have been satisfied, namely, to see the engine tumble over.
When brought before the court on Saturday afternoon Magistrate Lawlor decided to postpone his trial until Monday, owing to the young prisoner's parents not knowing his arrest. When the case came up on Monday he was given one year in the Reform School.

TOWN COUNCIL

the same assessors, he had likewise failed to have his assessment corrected. The value of a property was its earning capacity. Mr. Woodworth's property back of the track was bushes, stones, etc., of very little earning capacity. Down town he had about two good-sized lots. A man should not be taxed so as to dispossess him. We did not want to tax a property holder out of town unless he was holding merely for higher price.
The Mayor said that the Council should remember that Mr. Woodworth had made a sworn statement to the Council that he was overtaxed.
Ald. Hayward—Did he make this before assessment?
Town Clerk—No.
It was moved in amendment by Ald. Ritchie and McGrath and carried. That the matter be referred back to Petition Committee with request that they ask the assessors to meet the council at its next regular meeting.
Ald. Stuart, pursuant to notice given last month, moved the following:
Amendment to By-Law No. 16, For the Preservation of Order; section 22:
No person under the age of 15 years shall be found on any street, sidewalk, lane or thoroughfare within the town, after the hour of nine o'clock p. m., unless in the ordinary course of his or her lawful employment or duty or in the care of his or her parent or guardian.
Ald. McGrath wanted the age limit reduced to 14, at which most boys leave school, and many (although they shouldn't) go to work in the mill.
Ald. Ritchie asked what about conflict with the Provincial regulation about age of those attending moving picture shows.
Ald. Doyle said the Provincial law related to who should not attend the films. It would not conflict with a Town by-law.
The Mayor thought 15 years not too high.
Ald. Ritchie favored reduction to 14 years.
Ald. Doyle thought 14 high enough. He often saw youngsters of 8 to 12 on streets at 2 a.m. The night policeman could and should stop this.
Ald. McGrath said the policeman's duty was plain. He had heard a woman trying to drive her boy home lately after 11 o'clock at night.
No one seconded the by-law as read, but when Ald. Stuart consented to insert 14 instead of 15, it was seconded by Ald. Doyle and carried unanimously.
The Petitions Committee asked extension of time on the request of Chas. Goodwin, of the Wireless staff, for exemption from taxation because of belonging to the Naval Reserve.
Ald. McGrath doubted if even soldiers and officers were exempt from taxation. Of course it was difficult to collect from them. They could not be arrested in uniform. But he thought they were liable and could be arrested and made to pay arrears of taxes the moment the uniforms were off. If soldiers were not liable to taxation, who'd support the revenue if all men should have to be soldiers? Objection to taxes did not show a patriotic spirit.
Ald. Hayward thought it a mere matter of law and easily determined.
Ald. Mackay, seconded by Ald. Ritchie, moved, that the matter be referred back to Petitions Committee to get all available information and bring in a recommendation at next regular meeting.
Ald. McGrath wanted to have either the Town Clerk or some member of the Petitions Committee

C. M., Rapid City, S. D.
1. How would you interpret the "Migratory Bird Law?"
Ans. As near as I can figure it out, the Federal Migratory Bird Law permits the shooting of ducks in South Dakota from September 7th to December 1st, that is, shooting on September 7th and thereafter until December 1st, but not on December 1st. According to the law of South Dakota, the season is from September 10th to December 1st. This includes September 10th and does not include December 1st.

2. Will it be lawful to shoot ducks in the Fall? If so, at what time?
Ans. I can see no reason why you should not begin planning a duck hunt sometime during the above mentioned season.

A. E. W., Temple, Texas.
I have just purchased a 20 gauge repeater, 28 inch full choke. Will thank you to advise me by return mail if shells loaded with 22 grains of Ballistite and 1/4 chilled shot will be too stiff a load for this little gun. Also, advise me as to 20 grains same powder and 1/4 ounces same shot. These to be loaded in 3-inch shells. I have just been out and tried the gun for shooting, but did not have the ammunition I wanted. The shells I had were loaded with 18 grains Infalible and 1/4 oz. No. 6 shot, 170 pellets to the load. Shooting at 15 yards at an old catalog (about 20 pound paper) 11x17 in. 127 of the 170 pellets struck the book, eight of them penetrating 200 pages (100 sheets) and the balance lodging within ten pages of back. Shooting at 35 yds. 110 pellets struck within the 30 inch circle, but seemed to be a little low. Upon cleaning the gun, I noticed the sight protruded about 1-32 or 1-16 inch inside the barrel. Would this tend to affect the accuracy or pattern of the gun, the wad catching on the end of sight and causing the load to go a little low, or make an uneven pattern? I have removed the sight and filed same down so the end comes flush with inside of barrel, but have not shot any more since I did this.

Ans. The heaviest load supplied in 20 gauge shell is 20 grains of dense smokeless powder such as Ballistite or Infalible and 1/4 oz. of shot. This load costs extra from the different manufacturers. It would seem to me it would be a wiser thing to secure a gun of larger gauge such as 16 or 12 gauge if you wish to do heavier work. You cannot expect a 20 gauge gun to do the work of 12 as it is mechanically impossible for it to do so. A gun made with a sight protruding into the barrel is an evidence of very sloppy workmanship and would be likely to have an effect on the pattern. If you have filed this projection down level with the inside of the bore on the barrel, there should be no further trouble.

Gentlemen—Ever since coming home from the Boer war I have been bothered with running fever sores on my legs. I tried many salves and ointments; also doctored continuously for the blood, but got no permanent relief. Last winter when my mother got me to try MINARD'S LINIMENT. The effect of which was almost magical. Two bottles completely cured me and I have worked every working day since.

Editorial Comment

RUSSIA IN THE PRESENT WAR

Since the beginning of this great war, it is doubtful if there has ever been, apparently, a more critical and anxious period than the present. From the very start, the enormous resources of Russia in men and material were considered a favorable point. As the German forces drove through Belgium and rushed for Paris and Calais, the Russian hordes poured through Poland and Galicia with strong evidence of reaching Berlin at an early date. The Allies on the western front were filled with admiration and elation at the apparently irresistible steam-roller of Russia. The Allies in the west held, in time to save Paris. Then came winter and the steam roller in the East was stopped. In the spring the Allies in the west still held, but the Germans were able to turn a great enough force against Russia to force her back. So, step by step, bitterly contesting every step of the retreat and keeping all forces in tact, the Russians gave up all ground they had taken and have been retreated into their own Empire yielding Warsaw to the enemy, as the latest loss. Like the rest of the Allies, Russia was unprepared for this great war when the blow fell and had only a fraction of the supplies she required. Her enormous numbers, great area, and comparative inadequacy of transportation equipment have made her task of supply much more difficult than that of her Allies. It is this lack of supply that has so tragically handicapped Russia in her defence against Germany and Australia. The great outstanding feature of this long Russian retreat is the wonderful strategy of the Grand Duke in saving his entire army in the face of great odds, and at the same time, inflicting enormous losses on the enemy. Her army is still ready and in splendid shape to take the offensive, as soon as they can get supplies and they are much nearer their base than are the Germans. The capture of Warsaw is beginning to look very much like the end of a wild goose chase for Germany. They can't keep the Russian army back, except by using so large a force as to dangerously weaken their western front. That gives France and England the very opportunity to force the western front. Meantime, the Dardanelles is fast approaching its fall, with direct aid to Russia from that quarter.

Furthermore, it seems highly probable that Bulgaria will soon join the other Balkan states, in a new league, and Holland. In fact, Germany has been and is much in the position of a caged wild beast charging first at one side and then at the other of its cage loosening or bending a bar here or there but always thrown back more and more exhausted. So, in this rush to the East, the capture of Warsaw means no substantial or permanent gain, and it is probable that Russia will soon be on her heels again and taking sweet revenge.

One great fact should always be borne in mind: The Allies are acting on concert and it is a foregone conclusion that they are not going to permit the destruction or serious crippling of the armies of any one of them, by the common enemy. That, of course, is just what Germany has striven for from the beginning—to destroy the Allies, one at a time.

So, in the present crisis, if such it be, we may soon expect to see Russia reversing the tables, with double measure, on her old enemy.

SETTLEMENT AFTER THE WAR

Canada must prepare to receive scores and perhaps hundreds of thousands of new settlers after the war. The blood drenching Europe is suffering will send forth to the peaceful new world masses of ex-soldiers and civilians. The eyes of Britain turn to Canada. Already British organizations studying the probable aftermath of the war are forecasting and urging large settlements of ex-army men on the land in Canada. It will not do for us to pay too heed to such prospective movements. There is plenty of warning. It is a large problem, and the interval before the war ends should be used to work out some practical scheme of placing and financing the new settlers.
Among the matters to be entrusted to the new Commission on Agricultural Economy is that of post-bellum immigration. For one thing why should there not be a concerted effort by the Dominion and Provincial Governments to abolish the speculative holding of Government lands on nominal payments. What we mean can be illustrated by the case of British Columbia. The Minister of Lands of that province has admitted that the arrears of payments for land sold to speculators, that is, to non-settlers, are over $9,000,000. The first payments, the only ones made are from 50 cents to $1.25 per acre. Now while it happens that in the case of British Columbia much of this speculatively held wild land is not located so as to be fit for immediate settlement, and the province has plenty of well located land suitable for pre-emption a clean out of that great mass of pure speculation would be of vast economic benefit to the province. Why should not the Dominion and each of the provinces require full payment for Government land sold to non-settlers, and stop the interference with legitimate settlement?
No doubt powerful financial and political influences would be arrayed against any such effort to dislodge the land parasites. But the war is ending a lot of our toleration of obstructive exploitation of the country's resources, and creating a public sentiment strongly supporting measures to foster production. If Canada is to pass successfully through the critical period induced by excessive railway building it must go to the root of the chief obstacle that lies in the way—speculative and unproductive holding of farming land. The after-the-war immigration should give us the new settlers we need.—Mail and Empire.

Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.
Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.
1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.
2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.
3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.
4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fangled notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong pull for increased business—more business than usual.

HIS LEGAL WIFE

BY MARY E. BRYAN

What had become of Grafton and the sailor? Had they been drowned? The boat had capsized, turning nearly bottom upward, her mast, no doubt, sticking into the stroud, a part of the broken rigging being crushed upward against the side of the little vessel, thus affording the stay to which Nina had clung. How was it possible that the two strong men and good swimmers had perished and she had escaped? But if they were not drowned, what had become of them? Surely, Grafton would not have swum to shore and left Nina to her fate?

While these conjectures passed through Harry's mind, his arms and hands were at work, straining every sinew to send the boat through the tossing waves and driving rain to the shore.

The storm had spent its fury, but the rain, driven by the wind, still came in slant, sharp gusts that stung and blinded him. He could have shouted with joy when he saw by a flash of lightning a rough log dock only a few feet before him.

In half a minute his boat was alongside it. He jumped out, threw the boat chain over a post and secured it, then stepped back and lifted the unconscious form that lay so still in the bottom of the boat.

Dimly he could see her white face between the masses of dark, drenched hair, for the clouds had thinned, and some light from the full moon behind them filtered through.

She was colorless as marble, and as cold. Her slender hands seemed to him to be almost stiff. Could she be dead? The fear came to him with a sharp pang.

"I must find a shelter. I must take her out of this chilling rain," he muttered.

He raised her from the wet dock and bore her to the land. There he saw a path running up through the mangroves. He walked rapidly up the path, soon seeing a dark mass among the orange trees which he knew was a house.

There was no light in it, and no response came when he stamped loudly upon the floor of the little porch as he stood upon it.

The doors and windows were shut; he did not take time to see if they were fastened. He sat down upon a long wooden bench on the porch, purposing now that there was shelter from that blood chilling rain, to try to revive Nina.

He took out his handkerchief and dried her dripping face and hands; then he rubbed her hands briskly with his own, on which he had poured a little brandy from a flask he had in his pocket. He poured a little of the stimulant between her lips, when, to his joy, he felt a shudder run through her, then a short, gasping sigh struggled up from her breast; another fluttering breath and consciousness came back.

She half raised herself as he lay in his arms, and turned her face to his, which she could not distinguish in the dim light. She clung to him, sobbing out:

"Oh, Floyd! Is it you? You did come back! I thought you had left me to die. I might have known you wouldn't. But, oh, it was so dreadful, alone with that awful water washing over me! And my hands were so cold and stiff, I thought I could never hold on till you came back. I thought you were cruel not to take me with you; but you knew best, only—Oh, I am so cold."

She fell to shivering, her teeth chattering convulsively. Lee put the flask to her lips.

"Drink some of this," he said in a whisper; he dared not trust himself to speak aloud.

He shrank from letting her know while she was so weak and hysterical, that it was not Floyd who held her; that it was not her lover who had come back and rescued her just as the last remnant of strength was giving way.

A hot current of indignation had rushed through Lee as he heard her broken utterances. So Grafton had left her and saved himself by swimming ashore. He had told her he would come back with a boat to rescue her. He must have expected her to perish, but he would not risk being burdened with her in swimming to the shore.

"Cowardly puppy!" Harry muttered to himself through his clinched teeth, as he bent over Nina, rubbing her hands and trying to bring warmth to her body. The stimulant had helped her, but he knew the terrible chill would be fatal unless she could be gotten to a fire and the wet clothing removed.

He laid her down on the seat, and taking off his coat, which the waterproof cloak had kept dry, he wrapped it about her. Whispering some reassuring words, he left her and knocked upon the door. There was no answer; another louder knock brought no response. He felt sure at last that there was no one inside. There was a window near by opening upon the porch. The blinds were closed, but one of them was broken, and both were easily unfastened.

It is necessary to be guilty of house-breaking in this case," Harry said to himself as he lifted the sash of the window and stepped inside.

He took a match from his pocket, lighted it, and looked around. He found himself in a neat, plainly furnished apartment, sitting room and bedroom in one. It seemed, as there was a bed in one corner behind a home made screen. There was a fire place, but no fire in it, and no wood. Harry went on through a covered way into a small back room which proved to be a kitchen. Here he found a pile of dry stove wood, half of it resinous pine. He gathered up an armful, and hurrying back into the front room, soon had a fire ruddy blaze on the hearth. He pulled a large, cushioned chair to the fire, and then went out on the porch, lifted the shivering, half-insensible girl, and bore her into the room. He placed her in the big easy chair, where she sat with closed eyes and drooping head, while he knelt down and unbuckled her little boots and took them off. Then, without an instant's hesitation, he pulled off the drenched silk stockings and laid bare the small, daintily shaped feet. He took them in his broad palms; they were white and cold as stone. He held them to the fire, rubbed them briskly, and wrapped them in a woolen table-cover he had previously warmed.

As the delicious sense of warmth thrilled through her, Nina roused herself from the stupor produced by cold and the shock she had received. She languidly stretched out her hand and touched the shirt-sleeved arm of the man who was kneeling by her.

"Dear Floyd," she murmured, "you've taken off your coat to cover me. Put it on. You will freeze. Oh, the fire feels so nice! How good you are!"

Her hand went from his arm to his head. As she touched his hair, she started and sat upright.

"Floyd!" she called. "It is not Floyd; it is—"

Lee raised his head and turned his eyes, moist with pity, upon her.

"It is only I," he said.

She gazed at him without speaking. A tumult of emotions swept over her face. Amazement, disappointment, pain, shame, all pictured themselves in the tablet of that expressive face. Her lips quivered, her head dropped upon her hands. She was shaken with violet sobs.

He stood up. Leaning on the rude mantelpiece, he looked down at her with a world of sympathy in his eyes, which he dared not put into words.

Suddenly she raised her head, started, anxious look on her face.

"Where is Floyd? Was he—was he drowned?" she asked, falteringly.

"No, no; he could not drown so near the land; a good swimmer as he is, by his own account. He was not hurt by the capsizing of the boat."

"No."

"He told you he would swim to the shore and bring a boat; did he not?"

"Yes," she said. A faint flush came into her cheek. Lee was sorry he had asked the question, but he wanted to get at the facts. "He said if he tried to swim ashore with me we would both be drowned," she added, exclaimingly. "The sailor left us to our fate. Floyd said he would get a boat and come for me. He thought it better I should keep my hold on the rigging. But, oh, it was awful!"

She shuddered, and her eyes closed, as if to shut out the vision of those moments she had passed alone with the wild, lashing waves, the darkness and the storm.

Once more her eyes opened all at once, and she looked up at him. Her face was brighter; a faint smile hovered about her lips.

"Is this a dream?" she said. "How did you come here? It must be magic. You went away—"

"No; I did not go away. An accident—a providence—prevented. I will tell you about it presently, when I have made you comfortable. I must have you dry and warm before I can go into explanations. Sit here and be quiet, like a good girl. I am going into the next room to explore a little."

He wrapped the coat carefully around her, and folded the woolen covering closely about her feet. Then he lighted a small lamp, which he took from the mantel-piece and went into the next room.

It was the family sleeping room, littered with all the various articles that tell of every day occupation. He glanced first at the drawers of an old-fashioned dressing case, and he had partially opened one of these, when his eyes fell upon a large, round basket, made of the long wire grass of the pine hills. It stood in a corner of the room, and was filled with clean, folded clothes, evidently the batch that had come from the last wash.

Smiling at himself because of his novel purpose, Harry turned the clothes over until he found, as he imagined, the things he was looking for, some women's underclothes, rather coarse, but clean and white. Keeping possession of these, he next opened a closet and looked carefully at the garments that hung on the walls. He fixed upon one which he examined it critically as he had done the others. It was a rather gaudy looking blue and red flannel wrapper. He decided that this would do, and carefully replacing the other garments, he took this one, with the white things, into the room where Nina sat.

"You are still cold," he said, touching one of her hands. "It is those dripping clothes you have on. Are you strong enough to change them for these dry ones?"

"Where did you get them, and how did you know—"

she exclaimed, opening her big eyes in amazement. "This is one of the things I will tell you when you are as comfortable as I can make you," he answered.

"I am sorry I have not a maid for you. You will have to perform your unique toilet by yourself. Let me know when it is finished. I am going on another exploring trip."

He went out the back way, shutting the door behind him.

She examined the little pile of clothes, and found everything she needed, even to towels and a pair of stockings.

"What a man he is!" she said to herself. "Oh, if—"

She broke off with a sigh. She sat in silence, gazing into the glowing fire, the tears gathering in her eyes. She roused herself and began to dress with surprising energy. In a short time she had divested herself of her drenched garments and put on the clean, dry ones, whose coarseness fretted her soft skin a little; but the sense of warmth and dryness compensated for this. She picked up and wrung out her own garments and hung them on a towel rack behind the screen. Then she sat down once more in the big armchair, but not before she had, womanlike, looked at herself in the old-fashioned, gilt framed mirror that hung over the mantel-piece. She sat gazing into the fire, thinking, regretting, dreading to face the future.

The little clock above her head struck eight. She started up, remembering that she was to let Harry know when she had finished dressing.

She knocked on the door he had passed through, and he answered from some region beyond, "Comin'!" in his clear, strong voice. She liked the ring of that voice. It sent her miserable thoughts to flight.

A moment after she came in, laughing and rosy. He had a pot of hot coffee in one hand, and a tray with a plate of biscuits and sliced ham on it in the other.

"I have been making useful discoveries," he said. "I have found the pantry and a little gasoline stove. Here is the result. The hot coffee will do you good. Why, the old blue and red wrapper has made you look like a queen of gypsies, with all that long, black hair on your shoulders! But do you know your hair is still dripping? Let me wring it for you while you sit down and drink your coffee."

But she would not touch the little repast he set before her until he had taken his seat at the small table and let her pour out a cup of coffee for him.

As they ate, the fire burned briskly, the wind moaned fitfully without, but within all was warmth and comfort and seclusion, the sweet sense of which came over them as they sat opposite each other at the tiny table.

Afterward she let him wring out her hair. As he gathered up the rich, wet mass, his hand touched her lovely neck, and a thrill went through him. His fingers trembled. He bit his lip and frowned, then hurried through his task.

"Come and sit down," she said in a low, strangely muffled voice.

When he had seated himself near her, and looked into her face, he saw, to his surprise that it was wet with tears. Large drops hung on her lashes, as she lifted them and looked at him with wistful earnestness.

"You are too good to me!" she said. "I do not deserve it; I do not deserve anything you have done for me. How can I ever thank you?"

"You need not thank me for what Las made me happy to do," he said, laying his hand gently on hers, that he held out, clasped together, on her knees. "It has made me very happy to have been made the instrument of rescuing you," he went on, speaking low. "I shall always remember this night with thankfulness."

"I, too, shall always remember this night," she said. Then a look of pain came into her eyes. She drew her hands away and wrung them. "Oh!" she cried, "we sit here so quietly and talk about this night when it may have been a terrible thing. Are you sure he was not drowned?"

"Floyd Grafton was not drowned. I feel sure of it."

"Then, where is he?"

"He found no boat at this landing and he went on to the next house. There he doubtless got a boat and hastened back to get you."

"When he found I was not there, he must have believed I was drowned," she said.

"Then a joyful surprise awaits him tomorrow," he added, cheerfully. "A happy meeting it will be," he went on, smiling, though his heart was far from light.

She looked at him in a strange way, a kind of wild wistfulness in her eyes.

"You forget that he believed it was the only way to save you."

"Would you have left me?"

He felt that she put the question as a test. She was looking straight at him with suppressed eagerness in her dark eyes; her hands, which lay folded on her knees, clasped themselves tightly together.

"No," he answered, "I would have swum with you to the shore."

"But if you believed you could not do that?"

"I would have tried; if I failed I would have perished with you."

She had drawn the words from him with those compelling eyes, but they came with a warmth that seemed to call her to herself. Her look relaxed. Her hands dropped apart; a sigh fluttered from her lips, and her lids fell, hiding the pain he knew was in her eyes. He felt as if he had given her a blow. He experienced a fierce longing to take her in his arms and comfort her.

He rose to his feet; the warm air of the room seemed suddenly to stiffen him; he walked to the window, and stepped out on the porch.

"What a change!" he cried. "Not a sign of the storm. The night is supremely beautiful."

She came to the window, stood inside a moment, then stepped softly out and stood beside him. He turned and saw her.

"Oh, you should not be out here, in this damp air," he said, quickly.

"You should not have tempted me," she answered, smiling archly up to his face. "I came out to see the beauty you praised. It is surely magic; the change in the sky and the river. Oh, the river!"

She shuddered as her look went over the now moonlit, foam-flecked waters that had no nearly been her grave.

The only souvenirs of the storm were the torn and flying clouds, now turned to silver by the moon, and the glistening raindrops that lay thickly on the dark green leaves of the orange trees. The rich scent of the orange blossoms filled the damp cool air. The voices of the storm were hushed; the only sounds were the far-off roar of the ocean, the low lapping of the water near them, and the rustle of the dying wind in the tall palm trees that fringed the river.

They stood on the little porch, looking in silence at the scene. All at once a strange, walling note broke from the orange tree close to them.

It was the cry of the screech owl, its tenderness and its near proximity frightened Nina. Her nerves still quivering from her recent shock, she gave a start, nearly lost her balance and tottering on the edge of the porch, she caught hold of Lee and clung to him. He put his arm around her; then, as he felt her heart beating and her yielding young waist palpating under his arms through the folds of the loose gown, he lost control of himself. Thrilled with a tender, exquisite passion, he clasped her to his breast. He held her there for an instant in an almost fierce embrace, then as suddenly released her and staggered back against a post.

"Forgive me," he uttered, faintly. She did not speak. Her face in the moonlight was quite pale, but she did not look angry, only startled, stunned.

"Forgive me," he repeated; "I did not mean to. It shall never happen again."

A faint smile went over her face. "I know you did not mean it," she said. "You were thinking of some one else. Let us go in; it is too damp out here."

daring to lift his eyes to her face. At length he looked up and saw that the sweet face between the dark, loose hair was pale as ivory, and the drooped lids looked as if they hid tears.

"You are worn out," he said. "You must have sleep. There is a bed behind the screen there; or will you have me draw that lounge to the fire and lie here, with a blanket over you?"

"I will sleep here in the big chair," she said.

"No, you must lie down. How will this do?"

He drew the wide, calico-covered couch before the fire, and brought a pillow and a bright patchwork quilt from the bed.

"Rest there yourself," she said, smiling. "I will keep watch."

"Indeed you shall not. There is no need for any one to keep watch. I will make myself comfortable in the other room. If you should feel ill, call to me; I am a light sleeper. But I hope you will not feel ill; I trust you will rest as peacefully as if you were in your own house."

He was turning to go into the next room, when she asked:

"When are you going to start back to New York?"

"Tomorrow—as early as possible, as soon as I see you safe with your friend—"

"And you will let me hear from you? You will let me know when you are—"

"Yes, I will let you know."

"It will be soon, I suppose—as soon—"

"As soon after the divorce as possible," he answered, quickly, with a forced hardness in his tone.

She flushed a little.

"I will hasten it as much as I can, for your sake," she said. "You will forgive me for delaying your happiness?"

"Last night I told you that there was no ground for forgiveness, only for kind and grateful remembrance," he answered, feelingly. "And now you must rest. Good night."

He bent his head over the hand she held out to him; then he raised it quickly to his lips, and letting it fall, he passed out of sight through the door.

She did not dream then how long a time would elapse before she saw him again, and under what changed circumstances that meeting would take place.

CHAPTER XVI

Lee could not sleep. The recollection of what had happened on the porch filled him with self-reproach. A feeling that he had been disloyal to Lucille burned within him. Oh, why had he yielded to that mad impulse? What must Nina think of him?

But why had she not resented that impetuous career? Was it possible that she—Oh, no, no! Her whole heart was given to Floyd Grafton. It was only that she was so generous, as well as so pure and broad in her nature, that she had forgiven his offense. She had pardoned it on the score that it was an unmediated, emotional impulse.

"I know you were thinking of another," she had said, exclaimingly.

But he knew he had not been thinking of another. He remembered guiltily that he had not thought of Lucille today.

He took her picture from his bosom and looked at it by the moonlight that streamed in at his window. Such a little rosebud face! He kissed the smiling mouth, murmuring, "My sweet, my own Lucille!"

He strove to let his image efface the one that kept rising before his eyes—the proud, sweet face, the rich dark eyes luminous with soul—his legal wife—soon to be his no longer, even in law. Did he regret it? Was it only that it troubled him to think that this sweet woman, with all her wealth of heart and mind, was soon to be given to the arms of one who was not worthy? Yes, he knew that she would marry Floyd Grafton even if a revelation of his littleness had dawned upon her tonight through the glamour her love had thrown around him. She would marry him to make amends for the wrong she believed she had done him.

Harry turned from the window and threw himself upon the bed, hoping to sleep. But sleep came only in brief, fleeting visits throughout the night. At early dawn he rose and went down to the riverside. The grand expanse of water was almost calm—only streaked here and there with foam in token of last night's storm. At a distance of hardly seventy yards from the shore he could see a portion of the keel of "The Crow," with the water rippling about over it and the piece of rigging to which Nina had clung when she was left to her fate by Grafton.

"The coward!" Lee once more uttered between his clinched teeth. A glance up the river showed him a man coming along the path that ran along between the mangrove bordered bank and the field of pineapples. He came on down to the dock where Lee was standing. He was a wiry, unburned young fellow, a farmer—as was plain to be seen by his sturdy look and independent carriage. He glanced at Harry, then at the boat which was fastened to the dock.

"Good-mornin'," he said. "You've been looking for the body, I s'pose? Have you found it?"

"What body?"

"Why haven't you heard? Joe Kent's boat capsized in the squall last night out there where you see the water riffin' over her keel. He had two Northern folks in it—swells from New York—a man and a woman. What must he and other fellow do but swim to shore and leave the woman holdin' on to some of the riggin'. They swam to my landin'—right here. They said they thought to find a boat here, but I had taken my wife in the boat to her father's, about a mile further up. They came on there, burst in on us whilst we were at supper, wet as drowned rats, and the Yankee just a-shakin' with the cold. He asked for a dram and wife's father gave him a stiff one. Then he told us about the lady, and I and Tom—wife's brother—jumped into the boat and went to get her, if she was still there. Kent went with us to show us the place where the boat had capsized, but the other fellow tumbled in the bed, and we left the women a-coddlin' him. Well, when we got to the boat the woman wasn't to be seen. She was drowned, of course, with the rain and the waves a-dashin' in her face. It was a mighty pity, too. She was Pedro de Vasco's daughter, so the young fellow told us. De Vasco was as good a man as I ever knew. He died at his home near to Rockledge. Grafton said the girl was engaged to be married to him, and she had no end of money. He harped on the money a good deal. He took on mighty when we told him she was drowned, but he was sleeping like a top when I left the house awhile ago. I came on here to look for the girl's dead body. So you haven't seen it?"

"No, I have not seen her dead body; I have seen her living self. She is safe. She is up there at your house, asleep."

"What! You don't tell me so! How did it come? Who rescued her?"

"I was fortunate enough to be near in a boat when the capsiz took place. I picked her up just in time to save her, and brought her here. I took the liberty of getting into your house through the window. I took some other privileges with your belongings to make her comfortable with food and clothes that I—"

"That's all right. She is welcome to everything. Her father was the squarest man we've had to come amongst us. It was lucky you happened along with your boat. Were you acquainted with her?"

"Yes. She is a lovely woman."

"That's just the way. It's the lovely women that fall to the share of the no-account men. It's none of my business, but I'll bet that Grafton's a selfish fellow—a sort of fortune hunter. There!—there's my long tongue again, just as my wife says. And he may be your cousin or your brother, for what I know, though you don't favor him."

"He is no relation of mine," Harry said; and he mentally added: "Thank Heaven."

"Well, yunder he comes now. I see his light clothes through the trees. He had 'em dried and ironed last night. And there's my wife and her brother with him. They are going up to the house. Is the lady asleep? No; there she is at the window. What a surprise it'll be for him to see her alive. There'll be a scene, as they say in the story books. I'll give my wife a sign to keep back. Ain't you going up to the house with him?"

"No! I won't intrude upon them," said Harry, hastily. "I must get back to Rockledge at once. I wish to leave on the first boat going up."

"The first boat? Why, that's the old 'St. Augustine,' and she'll stop at my father-in-law's to take on some crates of cukes."

"Cukes?"

"Well, that's our Florida name for cucumbers. Life's too short to worry over such long names. But as I was going to say, you can get on the steamer up here—needn't go back to Rockledge. I'll pull Sam Thompson's boat up to Rockledge, and turn it over to him for you. I'm goin' up today, anyway."

"Thank you; then I will take the steamboat at your father's landing," Harry said, drawing quickly back, till he was screened by the mangrove bushes as Grafton came nearer. The farmer went to meet him.

"What news?" cried Grafton, anxiously, as the other came up to him.

"Good news," answered the farmer, smiling encouragingly—the white-unhappy face of the young man excelled his pity. "Good news. She is saved—she is there—in my house. Don't waste time staring at me, man. Go on to the cottage and see for yourself."

With a cry of joy Grafton ran up to the house.

Nina was standing in the doorway that opened to the floor. She drew back as she saw him. A feeling of repulsion rose strong within her. The indignation she felt at his leaving her had died out; but something else, it seemed to her, had died out with it.

She shrank from meeting him. She wished it might be so that he would not hear of her rescue—that he would think she

Recovered From Operation
Andrew Butler, son of Mr. David Butler, of Nordin, who was operated on about seven weeks ago for appendicitis by Dr. McGrath, has sufficiently recovered to be removed home, where he was taken on Friday. When first taken to the hospital there were small hopes for his recovery, owing to the nature of his ailment, but his many boy friends are pleased to see him on the road to recovery.

Ice Cream and Cake Sale at Millerton
A very successful ice cream and cake sale was held on Monday evening by the Millerton Branch of the Women's Institute on the grounds of Mr. W. G. Thurber. The grounds were beautifully decorated, with large and small flags, Chinese lanterns and electric lights. The sale lasted from 6 to 9 o'clock, during which time Mr. Vivian Burrill gave some good selections from his Victoria. The proceeds which will be devoted to Red Cross work, amounted to about $30.00. The Institute wish to thank all who so generously helped to make the social a success.

Bitten by Vicious Dog
Little Gracie Johnson, the seven year old daughter of Mr. George Johnson, was badly bitten by a vicious dog Saturday night about half past nine o'clock. The dog was standing on the veranda of his owner's house, Thomas Doucett, when the little girl came up to some other children who were also on the veranda. On her approach, the dog without warning, jumped at the child's throat, tearing the flesh in a painful manner. When Mr. Johnson learned of the fact he immediately notified Policeman Gallah, who downed the dog about half an hour later.

Curfew Law Working
The curfew law, recently put into force by the Council, is working splendidly, in consequence of the stern hand and watchful eye of Officer Gallah. On Friday night after the band concert had finished, there was a quick scattering for home of all who came under the law, and Officer Gallah intends to enforce it to the letter, making examples where cases arise demanding it. This new law will prove a blessing, not only to the town, but to the young boys and girls who have been in the habit of remaining out on the streets until late at night. It is now up to parents to take a hand in this matter by seeing that their under the age limit under their care are in by nine o'clock.

Taken to Hospital
Mrs. James McTavish, wife of James McTavish, of Cassilis, was taken to the Hotel Dieu Hospital on Friday, suffering from a run-down system. She is under the care of Dr. McGrath.

Will Deliver Address
Rev. Mr. Porter, from Nova Scotia, will deliver an address in the school room of the Methodist church, on Thursday evening, 26th inst., in the interests of the colleges at Mount Allison. Mr. Porter would like to get in touch with any who are contemplating going to Sackville during the coming year. All are invited to the public meeting.

Fell From Staging
Edward Murray sustained slight injuries by a fall from a staging at the new hospital on Saturday morning. He fell from a distance of about forty feet, and in catching a staging below, gave his back a wrench. He was not seriously injured and went to work again this morning. Bryan Dunn was on the staging with him at the time, but was uninjured.

House Burned to Ground
A house belonging to Mrs. Benj. Stewart, up above the railroad track, opposite the King's Highway, was burned to the ground Monday afternoon. The house was unoccupied, but Mrs. Stewart's household effects were in the house at the time. Most of the furniture was saved. The fire caught in the shed attached to the house, probably from a passing train.

On Business Trip
Mr. Wm. Richards, of the Happy Hour movie house, was in St. John Friday and Saturday on a business trip, and while there he saw the famous picture "David Harum" shown in the Imperial theatre and which will be shown here tomorrow night. Mr. Richards personally recommends this picture as the best that has ever yet been shown here. While there he also booked several numbers of other feature pictures which will be shown here at an early date. See the "David Harum" ad. on page 8.

EXCURSION, BAND CONCERT AND SUPPER.

On Thursday of next week, 2nd of September, the Presbyterians are to have another supper, sale and band concert to be held in the Orange Hall, Redbank. We want it to be better than ever, better band, better supper, better ice cream, better fancy things, better fun. The steamer Dorothy N. is chartered to bring the band and all others who care to come on her. She will return the same evening. It will be a fine chance for a good trip up and return in the moonlight. The boat will leave Newcastle at 4.30 and will call at the different points at an hour and a half later than usual. Supper will be served from 7 o'clock and after. Pie sale at 9 o'clock. Tickets for band concert 15 cents, supper 20 cents. Plan to come and bring someone with you. After supper buy her some ice cream, fruit and candy and for a lasting remembrance some fancy article or other. Do not forget the date. The band has promised to be on hand at 7 o'clock when supper begins. 35-1

Badly Injured In Lynch's Mill
Frank Russell, of Nelson, Caught in Belt and May Lose Leg

About 9.30 o'clock on Friday morning, Frank Russell, son of Frank Russell, of Nelson, and about twenty-five years of age, while working in Lynch's mill, met with an accident that may cause the loss of a leg. He was working about the sawdust scraper in the lower part of the mill, having been sent there to remove some sawdust. At the time of his going down, the belt was off, but while he was clearing away the sawdust, the belt was put on and the machinery started, unawares of his presence below. He was caught in the belt and thrown in the machinery, receiving a fracture of the thigh of the right leg and extensive laceration of the leg, exposing the bone. Dr. McGrath was immediately sent for, who had the unfortunate young man removed to the Hotel Dieu hospital, Chatham, where he attended to his injuries. Although the leg is badly injured, it may be possible to save it. This is the second accident this young man has had at this mill, and nearly killed in both instances. His first accident left him crippled in the right leg, and his accident on Friday to the same leg will probably necessitate amputation. He was the only support of a crippled father, who has the sympathy of a large community of friends.

The Charles Frohman Estate Presents
William H. Crane
IN HIS GREAT CHARACTERIZATION
"David Harum"
IN FIVE PARTS
By Edward Noyes Westcott
MR. WILLIAM CRANE makes his first motion picture appearance in his famous characterization of David Harum. It is doubtful if any American work of drama or fiction has ever achieved such a widespread and instantaneous success as did this book and play. Mr. Crane's wonderful portrayal of the genial and quaint old hero of this masterpiece is one of the best examples of character work ever given on the stage, so that the unusual combination of star and play insure a photo drama of unusual merit.
