War Correspondents.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS.
Men Who Have Made Their Mark in Their Line of Work.

THE TRIUMPHS AND TRIUMPHS OF NOTES WRITTEN BY A FEW GRAPHIC ACCOUNTS OF WARLIKE EXPLOITS.

The line of work that I may be permitted to call military writing is older than the Ark. The war records in the Old Testament were described in glowing colors by inspired authors. The first of these were at school as a time when the classics were still the fashion, and the stately eloquence of Homer in his lines on the martial exploits of Achilles was the model of the hand-to-hand fights in chariots between the opposing hosts of Troy and Greece. Xenophon's "Anabasis" written many centuries ago, might make a commendable study for the student of the "Campania on the Oxus" published by Harper's of New York in 1873. Julius Caesar, during his march on the head of the legions of Rome through the forest and marshes of Helvetia and the vineyards of Gaul, was his own war correspondent, as every one who has read his "Commentaries" is aware. Furtively through the thickets of the forest, long before the advent of the steam engine, they occupied the position of war correspondents. They sat at the festive board; they accompanied them on their various fights and forays, taking part often in the melees themselves, and chronicled the triumphs and defeats of their respective camps. These reports that came, so to speak, piping hot from the blood-stained battlefields of Italy, France, Prussia, and Germany, and were transmitted orally from generation to generation. The "Annals of the Four Masters," were a good example of this kind of thing. Though they did not accompany the warring Irish battalions to the field, they recorded, nevertheless, the impressions and experiences of the soldiers who participated in these campaigns.

HOWARD REESBELL AND M'GARRETT.
To an Irishman is due the honor of being the first war correspondent in the modern application of the term. William Reesbell, who lives in New York, has just published his book, "The Soldier's Story," which is a true and interesting account of the life of a soldier during the American Civil War. Reesbell's book is a true and interesting account of the life of a soldier during the American Civil War. Reesbell's book is a true and interesting account of the life of a soldier during the American Civil War.

The count of the Fall of Khyra is one of the most graphic pages of modern history.

REESBELL, O'DONOVAN AND M'GARRETT.
John Frederick Flintry, whose exploits as a war correspondent have been mentioned in this column, was born in Galway in September, 1811, received his education at the hands of the Rev. Fr. O'Donovan, who had access to the well-stocked and patriotic library of his friend, Father Kenyon, of '48 fame, and P. P. of the Old Land, who arrived in this country in the eighteenth year of his age. On landing he became a member of the Ninety-Ninth New York Militia, in which regiment he served during the closing period of the Civil War. He subsequently proceeded to Chicago, where an editorial instinct—his father had been editor of the Galway "Vindicator" in the Old Land—induced him to engage in the literary profession. He was soon proved himself a successful journalist. He rose to various positions of police reporter to that of special correspondent for the "Chicago Times," the able proprietor of the "Chicago Times," to join the Cook expedition which had been then dispatched by the Washington authorities to Dakota, North Wyoming and other adjacent territories where the Sioux tribes were fostering disturbances. The Sioux war was reported by Flintry, under the pseudonym of Dakota, North Wyoming and other adjacent territories where the Sioux tribes were fostering disturbances. and their outbuildings, owned by Capt. James Burke; Thomas McEvoy's dwelling house; Alex Walker's harness shop and barn; and the Salvation Army's quarters. McEvoy's barn and one owned by Mr. Arch. J. Macdonald were badly scorched.

Monsignor Biss, who has returned to France after twenty-eight years of mission work in Tibet, is one of a family of nine—six boys and three girls—all of whom become missionaries except one girl, now Madame Biss at the mission at Hongkong. She is the only survivor of the family. Of the others, two suffered martyrdom and five succumbed at different periods in harness.

The Pops, it seems, has had time, amid all the multitudinous events that have been, to wood the masses again, and a Latin poem from his pen recently made its appearance in a paper of Perugia, his old town. Leo XIII has versified, more or less intertemporally, his studies in the business of Latin poetry under the auspices of the Institute of the classical days, and his Latin lines possess a charming grace and pillage, and have been highly praised by many eminent writers.

The late M'augor Peter, whose death was recently announced, was the first Catholic priest to sit in the British House of Lords since the days of the misallied reformation. The deceased was a barrister, as well as a priest, and sat in the House of Commons in 1845, on the occasion of the discussion of the proposed extension of the right of suffrage to the poor. He was succeeded by his family title, though he had been a barrister for many years. He was a member of the House of Commons, and sat in the House of Commons, and sat in the House of Commons.

THE CITY GUY

On the street her very walk, a something between a pitching gate and a mincing strut, marks her as deficient in sense; in the cars she is the observed of all observers, particularly if she be obliged to stand. There seems to be no centre of gravity in her make-up, so she sways with every motion of the car, doubtless setting out a conception of a lily nodding on its fragile stem. Her mood before the public is generally of the voluble, sunny order, but she has a reserve force for sentimental moments, and is equally aggravating and discreditable in either role. Her giggles, her glances, her loud-voiced remarks replete with emptiness of intellect, are simply maddening; she revels in driving rational women to the verge of frenzy, and she attributes their condition to jealousy of the superior charms.

No reproach can quiet her, no insult penetrate the shield armor of her vanity.

In a ten minutes' ride you get acquainted with all her accomplishments; the Christian names of her numerous admirers, the many compliments paid her, the short-comings of her female friends, and their petulant efforts to supplant her in Frank's growing affection for Charles's passionate love. Every ring and she generally wears a lot of them) represents a conquest, a trophy proudly kept after the hero has been discarded—heartbroken, of course.

There is only one more objectionable feature on the face of the earth, and that is the Jack of hearts who reads admiration of himself in every woman's face.—Donohoe's Magazine for June.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS

Prince of Wales College closed Friday.

The Worcester arrived from Boston this morning with general cargo and the following passengers: Mr. J. A. Drown, Miss Kemp and friend, Miss Hall, Mrs. Frame, Laura Myers, Miss Frame, George McNeill, Helen Finn, Harry Jennings, A. D. McDonald, Ashley, Miss Thomas, Miss McDonald, Miss McCaskey, R. D. Stewart, J. Mulvaney, Austin Metcalf, Mr. Ding well—20.

The Northumberland laid up Monday, and the St. Lawrence the following day, so as to receive their annual inspection.

The old steamer Northern Light has been burned at Carleton place, St. John, by her present owners, Messrs. E. Lantlam & Co., so as to get all the iron out of her hull.

Next Friday being the Feast of the Sacred Heart, the usual services will be held in St. Dunstan's Cathedral at seven o'clock in the evening, when an appropriate sermon will be preached by Rev. R. M. McDonald, of Bonaventure.

The steamer Polina, of the DeLisle Line, arrived here from Montreal Monday morning. Monday called for St. John's Nfld., with a cargo valued at about $800. Her agents, Messrs. N. B. & M. Rantavour, were the principal shippers.

Blake Bros purchased Monday from Mr. R. E. Bagnall, of New Glasgow, 12 head of cattle, of which 9 had been raised by the seller. The average weight was about 1,100 lbs. They realized $264.52.

PRINCE OF WALES COLLEGE COMMERCE—The closing exercises of the academic year will be held in the Philharmonic Hall on Friday evening next at 8 o'clock. All friends of the institution are cordially invited to be present.

The funeral of Charles C. Hogan, son of Councilor Hogan, took place Monday morning and was very largely attended. The pallbearers were Simon Grant, John Trainor, Jos. McCarey, Arthur Reddin, Ed. B. McLeod and Frank Trainor.

We notice by the daily papers that during the month of May the sales in the Bear Bros' popular store were the largest in their 15 years of experience. Selling goods at low prices has made their store extremely popular, and headquarters for all kinds of dry goods and millinery.

A meeting of the City School Board was held Monday evening. It was decided that the closing exercises of the city schools take place on the following dates: Prince St. on Monday 26th inst., Queen Square, Tuesday 27th and West Kent, Wednesday 28th. They will reopen again on August 28th.

Mrs. Stumblers' resignation as teacher in West Kent Street school was accepted and Miss Katie Higgs appointed to the position.

THE NEW GUNNERY TABLE on the P. E. Island Railway is giving the best of satisfaction, and winning plaudits along the line. It is a considerable time since we had a train arrangement that meets with such general approval and so well fills the wants of the people as the present one. Unworn it is to be congratulated on the big improvement, he has made over last summer's table.

LOUIS McLELLAN, a native of Broad Cove, Cape Breton, died at the CharloTTetown hospital, of acute meningitis on Saturday morning. Mr. McLeLLan arrived here some days previous to purchase a cargo of produce. When he left home he was in good health, and on Friday morning was taken suddenly ill at his hotel. He was immediately removed to the hospital where he died the following morning. His body was taken home for interment.

THE dwelling house of Mr. Richard Carson, on the New Glasgow Road, built and destroyed by fire about 2 o'clock Thursday morning. The blaze started on the roof of the building, and had gained such headway before being discovered that the children sleeping in the upper story were rescued with difficulty, and only after some of them had been slightly burned. Were it not that the cries of the children would have been for a sadder to relate. It is supposed the fire originated from a load of lime which had been dumped in the rear of the house the previous day. It was covered with chips, and these lighting on the roof were blown to the roof of the dwelling. No insurance.

As attempt was made the other night to wreck I. C. R. fast express from the north. About a quarter of eight a train from Truro station at a siding where deals are stacked awaiting shipment, a hard wood stick nine feet long and fifteen inches thick was carried some distance and laid directly across the track. The express usually passes the spot at a sharp rate of speed, particularly if behind time. This night, however, the train was running at a moderate speed when the cord struck the obstacle. It was pushed beneath the cowcatcher and jolted along in front of the driving wheels of the engine. Had the stick been softwood the wheels would probably have taken a grip of it and the entire train dished.

SENATOR Polier of Sheldice, accompanied by Dr. DeBertram, of New York, and two Americans were at Charlottetown Saturday, and drove to Bonaventure Cape to inspect the place and get information respecting the condition of the straits at this point during last winter with a view of pushing forward the Richibucto Canal project over the B. & M. Railway route. Dr. DeBertram, it is said, is holding a movement for the purchase of the B. & M. Railway and the extension of the road to the Cape—Richibucto Review.

SALLY CAVANAGH. OR— The Untenanted Graves. A TALE OF TIPPERARY BY CHARLES J. KICKHAM.

CHAPTER XI. (CONTINUED.) 'Oh, but why till I tell you, it all continued Tim. I looked at him, and he looked at me...

CHAPTER XII. Within and without Mooreville House the dearest stillness has reigned since nightfall. Mr. Evans sits for the cat...

CHAPTER XIII. 'What was that?' 'Didn't tell you before?' 'No, says Tim, 'if you did I dismembered.'

'Well, one evening last harvest I was securing a few stalks in the five-acre field, as the wind was rising, and I expected we'd have a storm before morning...

'That was Kerryman as sure as you're born, observed Tim, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe. 'Botton, who had got tired of winking at the fire and eyeing his defunct asseny on the bench...

'But, Matt, I'm the fox again?' cried Mrs. Hazlett from the rustic gate. 'Matt and Tim started to their feet. They glanced at the bench on which Botton made a dash in that direction...

the gander gave him, as he was in the midst of the 'house' to be many for him. I must see up and open the sixth way...

Why THE SCHOOL-MASTER'S HAIR GREW GRAY. 'I was very proud and happy when I got the little school. I thanked God with a full heart that now my widowed mother would have a home...
