the Editor of the Signal. SIR,-I knew John Adams intimately rom the day he came to town until the say that in the election of 1867 he came all the way from Stratford to vote against Cameron and Gibbons. It is all well enough for some individual whose word might not be taken in a commercial transaction to try to gain credence for a statement regarding Adams' politics by signing a bogus name, but if he has faith in his opinion, and believes his townsmen would credit his statement why does he not sign his name like a man, instead of slandering the dead and abusing the living from behind the skulker's hedge. I'll venture the state-ment that if "Verity" undertakes to declare himself over his own signature the people will laugh so loudly at the idea of him coming foward as a public mentor that the little bird will not chirp

There was, unhappily, nothing indicative of a tender friendship between us in the fact of my calling her by her Christian name. She had been just Meg Thredgold to all her acquaintances from her earliest years, and my first attempts to address her more formally had been presumptueus. She had anubbed as presumptuous. She had been washing the family table linen, and was fastening it up with pegs on a clothesline at a little distance from the grimy looking red brick house, which was her ridiculously unsuitable home.

The whole neighborhood was unsuitable for her. I glanced around on the dreary landscape; the barren, black-looking moor with scarcely a tree; with here and there on a spot blacker than the rest, a wheel high above the ground denoting the shaft of a coal pit; the rows and groups of dingy miners' cottages; and at the uncouth-looking creatures who nod-ded to Meg in passing, as if she had been one of themselves. He stood waiting for me, with his hands in his pockets, his feet planted wide apart and a look of stubborn resolution on his face. I would have passed him without a word, but this I saw he was determined not to let me do.

"Hey there, Mr Palette-and-brush, a word wi' ye, if you please !" he cried imperiously on my approach.

I stopped short, and waited for the threatened "word," which came without taller than he, I should have stood a poor chance against his muscular force. But he restrained himself and fixed upon me a look of triumphant malice which made me far more uneasy than a blow would have done. Then with another dry chuckle he walked off, his hands in his pockets, with an air of safe superiority.

My forebodings were realized. That evening when I called at Zech's house—as I generally did—to have a cup of tea with him, the door was opened by Mrs Thredgold, who told me very shortly that her husband was out. I could hear him in the room overhead; but worse than that, Meg,—who was laying the tea table and looking perfectly unconcerned —did not even glance in my direction. I would have lingered, asked some questions; for I was meek-spirited enough when Meg was concerned.

But the door was shut in my face.

I was much more miserable that angry at this snub, for I love Mag so deeply as to be able to grieve more over her scant prospect of happiness as the wife of the rough brute Corringham than over my

the carriage of a queen?

In the meantime she was giving a leisurely answer to my question.

"Do I like Mr Corringham? Why, of course I do. He's very good to father, and thinks a lot of him. Look at the way he'll come in and have supper or a cup of tea with him. That's great condescension in a gentleman of Mr Corringham's position."

"Oondescension! Why that is all on the other side, I think. What pleasure could his society give to any one? You know very well why he comes, Meg?"

I was by this time enveloped in a table aloth which, in a wild endeavor to make myself useful I had been endeavoring to fasten up with a peg on the clothesine.

CHAPTER III.

I made straight for Zech Thredgold's cottage. I had two missions to fulfill; one with Meg, and the other with Sebert Corringham. Not much to my surprise I found that I could make one journey do for both; for when I knocked at the door it was opened by Meg, and I could hear the voice of her elderly admirer, who was sitting at the tea table.

The house was built in such primitive fashion that the front door opened into the family sitting room, but a wooden that I had sustained a compound fracture screen had been built up to keep the of the right ankle, besides breaking my draught out so that no one saw me but Meg when the door was opened. Meg twitched the door handle rather

But I would not give her manners, I was perhaps letting myself time. I could not trust myself not to do to be led away so much by the eyes. And ley. So I rushed on with my speech.
"Your admirer is there—Mr Corringham"—Meg looked unessy and blushed

It was some minutes before he spoke, in a savage dogged tone, which made me wonder whether the poor little son I had discovered for him would not be better even where he was, than in the care of such a father.

"Now then," said he at last, "what do you mean by slinking up here after that lass when you had your orders 'Hands off?"

"I take no orders from you," I said "I take no orders from you," I said very quietly, knowing what a sure position my errand gave me. "But as it happens, the business that brought me here had nothing or next to nothing, to do with Miss Thredgold."

"That's a cursed lie, you——"
I felt myself suddenly seized by both arms, turned, and forced backwards over the rough ground. I shouted "Help!" I struggled, but I had been taken too much by approprise. I could neither free

THE TIME TO BATHE.

Before Noon and Bofore Going to Bed a Best Time for the Bath—Abuse of Sea Bathley—Swimming is Healthful.

In considering the subject of injudi-

In considering the subject of injudicious bathing one of the medical journals reiterates that it is highly dangerous to plunge into the water just after a meal or while fattgued.

An hour before noon and before going to bed are the best times to bathe. The average duration of the bath should be from five to ten minutes for children, fifteen minutes for women and but bitle from five to ten minutes for children, fif-teen minutes for women and but little longer for men. To delay much beyond these periods is a pernicious practice in-viting debility and injury. How often one sees in a stroll along a popular sea-beach, groups of drenched, miserable ob-jects with blue lips, chattering teeth and wrinkled, clammy skin, who have been spending half a morning alternately plunging into the waves and walking about, dripping, in the cool air. From about, dripping, in the cool air. From what should have been an invigorating dip, they return in a condition approaching collapse.

Such abuse of sea bathing is unfor-

Such abuse of sea bathing is unfortunately too common, even among those who have sought the seaside for the improvement of impaired health.

The immediate effect of a cold bath is to chill the surface of the body, the temperature of which, as tested by a thermometer, may fall several degrees—as much even as three or four. The skin becomes pale, the lips blue, there is chilliness, shivering, goose skin, and the breath has a spasmodic and catching character.

Cold bathing is salutary under certain conditions of the system, while in others it is capable of great harm. It benefits the strong and robust and it can be made a festorative tonic, a revitalizer, to the "run down" when wisely and judiciously

Aged people should use it with much care and not oftener than every other day; and should not remain in the water day; and should not remain in the water longer than ten minutes at the most. Persons who have heart or kidney disease and those in a feeble state of health should not indulge. If the bather does not remain in too long, "reaction" sets in, the chilliness, gives place to a pleasant glow and a feeling of comfort and agreeable exhilaration. This reaction follows most quickly when the bath is of short duration. The shorter the bath the less is the ultimate depression of the temperature of the blood. The shorter the bath the greater is its power of stimulating ature of the blood. The shorter the bath the greater is its power of stimulating the functions; the longer it is continued the greater is the cooling effect and the consequent lowering of vitality.

The best of all baths is the swimming that, for in it the bather can indulge in a free exercise of his limbs, such as is hardly attainable under any other circumstances. Swimming is a very valuable exercise, as it brings into action a large number of muscles. It employs the arms equally with the legs and leads to a healthy development of the muscles of the healthy development of the muscles of the chest. A sea bath has also another great advantage over all other forms of b that it is taken in the purest air possible. Reaction more rapidly occurs after a sea bath than after a river bath, and thus the liability to "catch cold" is less, although the popular belief that it is impossible to take cold from a wetting with salt water is far from the truth.

The practice into which the fair sex has fallen, of sitting about for a long time after "coming out" in order to dry their hair, is injurious, and should be avoided. after As soon as the bather leaves the water the oody should be dried thoroughly and the clothing assumed rapidly as possible.

At the Police Court yesterday Thomas Rossiter, aged 57, giving his address as 96 William-street, was charged with indecently assaulting a young girl named Effie Pearl, who resides with her parents in the same house. The offence consisted of defendant putting his arms around the child's neck while meeting her in the passage on Sunday morning and kissing her against her will. Col. Denison told the accused that he must be taught that the law forbids any person, old or young, kissing little girls against their will, and fined him $1 and costs or 30 days. William J. William J. McLeod, laborer, was arrested yesterday afternoon charged with indecent assault. It appears that McLeod took Lilla, the 7-year-old daughter of his landladr, Mrs. Porter, 334 Front-street, to the Island with him, and while there induced the child to accompany him to a secluded spot, where he attempted the outrage. The child's screams attracted the attention of people in the viinity and he was handed over to P. C. Wal-

Conductor Walter Powell, one of the oldest employes on the Grand Trunk, met with an awful death yesterday afternoon at Little York. Mr. Powell was attached to the Kingston mixed which leaves Toronto for the east at 12%. His train reached Little York about 1 o'clock, remaining there five ninutes. Conductor Powell, as the train slowed up, jumped from the rear coach toward the west end of the platform and walked along between the rails to the station for orders. He did not perceive the plot engine, which was passing east at a rapid rate, behind him. Powell took a slanting walk towards the platform, and the moment he placed his foot ross the rail, the engine struck him, cutting Kemmler's Electrocution Probably Fixed for Wednesday Morning. AUBURN, N.Y., Aug. 4 .- This afternoon the Associated Press representative asked Warden Durston if it would be safe for a correspondent to absent himself from the vicinity of the prison two or three hours. Here is the point raised: That the week beginning Aug. 4 ends with Sunday. The warden has arbitrary power to defer the execution until Sunday, Aug. 10. On Sunday it is held that the general law would intervene to prevent the killing on that day upon the ground that any execution of legal processes upon Sunday is not legal.

Directly at this point the case is touched by that general principle of law that, if the sentence under which Kemmler is expected to be killed is void in part, it must be wholly void. Brought to a close application the assumption is that if it is illegal to kill signated, then it would be illegal to kill him on any other day of the week designated. The situation, it is held, would be different if Sunday intervened as part of seven days, because it would then run with seven days, because it would the run with seven days, because it would be a part of the seven days, because it would the run with seven days, because it would the run with seven days, because it would be a part of the seven days, because it would be a part of the seven days, because it would then run with seven days, because it would the run with seven days with sev

TORONTO, Aug. 7.—The Emerald Benencial Association celebrated the birthday of Daniel O'Connell here yesterday. At might a mob of Orange sympathisers paraded the streets, and assembled in front of Moss Park Rink, where a demonstration was being held and stoned the buildings. The police charged the mob, and used their batons vigorously. Rioting subsequently occurred in Shuter and Queen-streets and all the police reserves were called out. A spectator named Thomas Wrigley had his skull split open by a policeman's baton and was taken to the Hospital, where he lies in a critical condition. Deputy Chief Stewart, Inspector Ward and Constables Crowe, Cathers and Camera were struck with stones.

Additional particulars have been received of the death by drowning at Port Carling of Vivian Platt, Robert-street, one of the young lads who accompanied Rev. Mr. Smith to Muskoka on a camping expedition. It appears that on Tuesday morning Platt, with two younger companions, went boating con-trary to the express orders of Mr. Smith. Platt, in a spirit of foolhardiness, seated himself on the gunwals and a sudden jerk of the boat caused him to overbalance himself and fall backward into the stream. His companions threw him both oars and a paddle, but owing to the velocity of the boat and the difficulty in turning it were unable to reach him before he had sunk. The body had not been recovered up to 6 o'clock last evening, although a posse with grappling irons have been searching ever since the accident.

Ross Heard From Boston, Aug. 6.—Duncan Ross, the ath lete, who has been in Australia the past year, writes a friend here rather dolefully concerning that country. He does not think much of the Scotch games there, but says he has done very well owing to the fact that he has competed in many events. He now holds the championship of Australia, which he won in competition with Donald Dinnie and W. Kneebone. The matches were decided by crop in this section will average above 30 bushels to the acre, and some fields are yoints and in the end Ross was declared the winner with the aggregate of 585 points, Knesbone following with 577 and Dinnie with 579½. AUBURN, Aug. 6.—Kemmler went peace fully to sleep last night and slept soundly and was snoring until 5 o'clock this morning, when he was awakened by Guard McNaughton. Pastor Houghton, who has attended Kemmler, as also Prison Chaplain Yates, was with him. They read from the Bible and he prayed with them. He dressed himself without aid in a suit of grey mixed goods. About his neck he buttened a turn-down collar, with a chacked tie of lawn stuff. His hair he neck he buttoned a turn-down collar, with a checked tie of lawn stuff. The current was on. The strange power was coursing the circuit.

"The evidence was there, but how feebly they burned!" Thus exclaimed Dr. Macdon-ald, who was the only one who got into the ald, who was the only one who got into the arden's desire to keep its secrets inviolate.

And in response to Dr. Macdonald's comments, Electrician Davis remarked that there was something wrong about the machinery down there, referring to the dynamo end of

It man was cool, unruffled, almost apacitic. The last named condition, however, the blanched hus of the was discredited by the blanched hue of the an's face.

"Come, Bill!" commanded the warden, when all had been done in the cell, and the little party of four—warden, prisoner, clergysed through the ante-room, past the men—passed through the ante-room, past the electrical appliances, and the warden led the way finally into the death chamber. Close behind him stood the man he would soon will. His hands swung at his side easily, save when as though in some sment he streked his brown full beard and mustache as he con fronted the white, expectant faces of the twenty-five men who, besides the warden, mould see him die.

Mr. Durston placed a plain, wooden-bo tomed chair directly in front of the other and different chair, and bade Kemmler sit upon it. He obeyed readily. There was no ess about his movements. He seated imself leisurely. There was no nervou tension apparent; indeed, not nearly so much as among the men about him. He was apparently the most composed person in the Kemmler, after the latter had become seated the kitchen chair placed for him, resting over the prisoner's shoulder on the chair back.

Holding his hat in his hand and standing there in the silent chamber the state's officer presented the condemned man to those pre-sent, introduced him indeed, and this is what Remmer, however, seemed gratified because he had an opportunity to speak, but as the warden moved back the prisoner glanced about the half circle of curious or pitying faces before him. With his feet wide apart upon the stone floor, with a hand on either knee and elbows akimbo,

The warden stood behind him, drew forth the bottom of his to permit easy adjustment of one of the electrodes. Meanwhile Kemmler readjusted his necktie, which was already neatly fixed

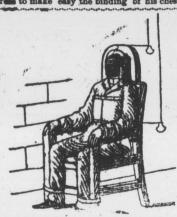

"Yes, all right," was the answer.
"Well then, Bill, you'd better sit down dreaded the end.

"Take it cool, Bill. I'm going to stay closs beside you all the while to the end," said the beside you all the while to the end," said the warden. Then he buckled a strap at one the stroke of lightning upon Keminler there Warden Durston produced his death great arms of the chair, he drew himself firmly back on the seat so that the electrode pressed him hard at the base of the spine. Two assistants were working at the straps, first the arms, then the chest, waist, hips,legs and lastly the leather mask. There was some fumbling in nervous haste and the doomed man observed it and spoke:

"Take your time," he said, "take your time," and while he spoke he held high his areas to make easy the binding of his chest.

THE DEATH CHAIR AND MASK.

And again the witnesses glanced each into his neighbor's face in approval or compassion. Then, as the insulated neck saddle was being placed, he suggested that if pressed forward as it was being adjusted it would be more easy for him.
"All right, Bill, all right," returned the warden, and his voice was a trifle unsteady;

"it won't hurt you, Bill, it won't hurt you at all," he added.

"Take your time," Mr. Durston,
"don't be in a hurry," the prisoner responded, and then he added as the dangling mask was being shaped for adjust-

"Well, I wish everybody good luck." Pastor Houghton's eyes seemed wet, as he glanced up through his glasses as if to see if present did not recognize in this ex-pression of good will some evidence of good results from his ministrations to the pri-

Then the mask was drawn across the man's face. It covered his eyes, grasped his chin and firmly pressed his forehead. It was not Kemmler said so and spoke to direct its proper adjustment. But when the growing sunlight had been shut out of vines and green grass were blinded from his vision, there seemed to come to him a strong realization of the fact that sunlight would never again touch his living eyes and that the bright greenness without the windows. There seemed also to rush over him an overwhelming sense of self-pity, for there was a touching plaint in his tone when he spoke, and the inflections of ox-like submission were intensified as they became focussed upon the end of all. He spoke;

"Do everything right, Mr. Durston, and push down that more on top of my head." He referred to the electrode which was being fitted to the top of his head. It was done, seeming to push his head down between his shoulders, while the mask was buckled back so tightly that the edge was buried in the skin of the nose and forehead. Once more he spoke:

"Well, I want to do the best I can and I can't do better than that." It was the plea of a man in desolation for human sympathy. He had tried to be steady. He had desired to save the warden from a harrowing scene, and his appearance as well as his manner had done that and more; it had disproved all statements that the man was insane or in a flabby state of dejection. Indeed, he did not appear the brute that he has been depicted. "No, I can't do any better than that," he repeated after a moment's pause.

"God bless you, Kemmler, you have done well," spoke Dr. Spitzka in his quick, nervous way, and there were pitying tears in many eyes and husky voices muttered:

Every strap had been tightened, each electrode had been pressed to the seat of life; the warden's deputies stepped back, there was a hush. The warden enquired of Drs. Macdonald and Spitzka howlong the current should be maintained on Kemmler's body. The first response was 20 seconds, which was almost instantly changed to 10 seconds.

"You have, Kemmler, you have."

"Very well, gentlemen," replied the war-den, and he moved towards the door of his secret room, and at the moment Dr. Fell of Buffalo, who designed the death chair, was dropping water from a bulb syringe through a long rubber tube into the electrode sponges.

The hour was 6 o'clock and 42 minutes. The warden reappeared from the ante-room, "Well, everything is ready," he said, while he faced the death chair six feet away. The bound man in the chair had heard every word. He knew he was upon the edge of the eternal world and a lightning flash should show him through. The secret of that minute's agony of suspense has gone out with him. His hands were clinched and rigid. He waited the shock.

It was now 6 o'clock and 431/4 minutes Two and one half minutes had been consumed in securing him with straps after he sat down in the chair, and from that time to passed. Then the warden leaned over and nodded his head to someone who stood in the secret room at the fatal switch. There was a quick convulsive start of the bound in a bow knot.

"Are your suspenders all right?" asked the warden, as he laid down the shears be used.

"But all was still and no man spoke." Every faculty was contributing to that of vision. Such a scene there never was on earth before. No man ever before had here," said the warden, whose heart is kind and whose tone was that of a parent to a child that should be corrected.

The warden was moved with compassion for the being who, obedient to a nod, seated mysterious agent whose results only could be Kemmler, and then with his elbows upon the great arms of the chair, he drew himself of one facing a sleety storm or of one breastof one facing a sleety storm or of one breasting a powerful dust-bearing wind. But all was still. Here was no driving storm, no rushing gale. There was no heave of the breast nor distension of the nostril. There was no twitch nor struggle. A hurrying wave frozen at the instant of its combining could not have been more still nor half so impressive as this silent form within the bonds of death. Who should say? No man of science dared near his ear to the heart within the rigid figure there. The vicious virus from the machine's iron loins was yet flowing through the man so lately speaking, moving, there. The law demanded that the current of electricity should be maintained against

But who should tell when death had come? The men of science believed that then the nerve centres were being beaten as with heavy hammers in different directions at the rate of some 230 times each second. Their books, though they told of no case like this, led the wise men to believe that the silent forces working in this man's body were disthe blood too, by divorce of oxygen from ite corpuscies. They thought the blood was be-coming by mechanical change fluidized and useless to sustain life.

And so they watched and listened in the silent room—5, 10, 15, 17 seconds. The time was very short, but to each one there it seemed like the span of an hour.

'There, that's enough. Take off the current," said the warden's chosen physicians— Macdonald and Spitzka—and the warden passed the word within the adjoining room, where someone had let on the current and where the same one cut it off.

Then Dr. Spitzka said: "Observe the lividity about the base of the nose and the entire nose itself. Note, where the mask rests on the nose, the white appearance there." The other doctors came about and dented the flesh with their fingers and watched the play of white and red upon with-drawal. They saw an abrasion upon the right thumb. from the chair to a knot of witnesses at the other end of the room, "this is the culmination of ten years' work and study. We live in a higher civilization from this day."

But even while he spoke a quick, sharp cry went up from those yet watching closely about the silent figure in the chair. Then came moans of horror from strong nen who looked. There had been, as they closely scanned, a movement in the breast of the man whom all believed had died one minute and 47 seconds before. The doctors and electricians could scarcely at first believe their eyes, but doubt was banished quickly, for there was another movement accompanied by a sudden gasp, and then the breast began to heave with long deep sten-torous respiration. Then went forth the cry of sickening horror at the spectacle of a man half killed under the operation of the law.

"Start the current, start the current again!" shouted Dr. Spitzka. Others cried out likewise to have the scene brought to a close. All crowded about the chair and watched the laboring wretch whose breast, despite the broad, tight bands about him, was rising and falling with strong force. Slightly foamy saliva was exuded from the mouth, the entire body rocked in the efforts of the organs to resume their functions and deep fear fell upon some lest consciousness should return.

The doctors declared, however, that the declared he would stake his name that he with brandy hypodermics. Meantime Mr. G. G. Bain of Washington D.C., had fainted and lay upon a bench where he was being fanned. This spectacle was continued from 6%

Then there came again to the figure within the chair another shock under which the straps were strained again. The lungs, however, filled again and the current was pouring through the unconscious body. The Warden and his helper were anxious beyond measure, and 21/2 minutes after the current had been reapplied the switch was opened and shut rapidly twice. Each time the body in the chair was lifted by the shock. The shoulders lifted to the level of the tops of the ears and the features contracted. The reapplication of the current was antinued from 6.49% to 6.51 o'clock, intermitted twice

At 6.51 another grosp of dismay was heard near the chair and smoke was observed curling up from Kemmler's back. "He is burning!" shouted one.

"Cut off the current!" shouted another. "He is dead. There's no use keeping up the current longer!" said some one else.

Again the warden gave the signal to open the switch and the body in the chair, surcharged with 4 distinct shocks, developed no further movement.

The bar of a heavy shade at one window was lifted by the straying breeze and fell back against the bar. The noise was slight, but to the tense and breathless watchers in the death chamber it seemed equal to the sound of clashing arms.

There was no contraction of the pupils. Where the mask had pressed the forehead there was a livid mark. There is said by all the physicians to be no doubt that consciousness was stricken in-stantly from Kemmler's brain. The fact that he was not instantly killed is the result of improper contact or of insufficient voltage or pressure. The consensus of opinion among the witnesses here to-day is that not the slightest doubt exists but that a human being may be instantaneously killed by 1000 volts applied through perfect contact and continued 20 seconds.

Kemmler's body will doubtless be disposed of to-morrow in the prison burying ground

DEATH WAS INSTANTANEOUS. The Brain Paralyzed-Kemmler's Passing

Before 81/4 most of the doctors had return ed to the prison to prepare for the autopsy. The body of the dead man still sat in the electric chair, the limbs rigid, the expression of the face (but for the discolorations of the skin) unchanged. The rigor of the body was a matter of comment and surprise among the physicians. The jaw had not fallen and the pleasant expression, with which Kemm-ler had greeted the witnesses as he entered the execution room, still lingered about his inches in diameter where the second electrode had pressed against the base of the spine showing that the current had burned through into the fiesh. The body looked healthy and well nourished. Dr. Shrady at this point suggested the necessity of making the examination as formal as though it was to be taken for criminal investigation, and volunteered to act as secretary and take the report in shorthand. This was agreed upon, and the first step taken was to bind a clinical thermometer to the nape of the neck and

The record demonstrated that the man was dead beyond all question. The table, on suggestion, was moved over to the corner of the cell directly under the windows, when a better light could be had. When it was in position a general survey of the body was taken, and its external condition carefully noted. Then Dr. Jenkins took his surgeon's knife and began operations. The body was cut open. The heart, lungs and other organs were taken out and their condition noted fluid for preservation and future examine

This was the most interesting feature of the examination, as the theory on which the claims of greater humanity for this The doctors declared, however, that the man was beyond consciousness and some thought the action which startled all and sent the warden away with white face to order thus destroys all sensation. The physicians the current renewed was only a reflex found evidence of the effect of the current muscular action. Not so one physician, who on the formation of the skull, in the blood and on the brain tissue directly beneath the could bring Kemmler back to conscious life point of contact, which satisfied them that the paralysis of the brain was immediate. HINTS FOR HOT WEATHER.

r. Chancellor Tells How Children Should Be Cared For.

Dr. C. W. Chancellor, secretary of the N. Y. State Board of Health, gives the tollowing precautions for avoiding the complaints incidental to hot weather:—
"Children should be bathed freely, and should be allowed plenty of fresh air and exercise. The sleeping apartments should always be well ventilated. Plenty of good food should be given, and children should not be allowed to eat confactionery, cakes, pies or any similar confectionery, cakes, pies or any similar articles. Unripe food should be for-bidden, Exposure to sudden changes of heat and cold, to wet and dampness, or to the direct rays of the summer's sun, should be avoided as far as possible, "Avoid any crowding of the room occupied by the baby, especially at night. Do not keep a young child in the same room in which cooking or washing is going on. Keep the windows of the room open day and night in hot weather. The clothing of a young child should be loose and light during the summer months. Have the night dress thoroughly aired during the day, and the day clothes aired during the night. Do not keep the child's head heated by any covering except when exposed to the heat of the sun.

"Children suffering from diarrhoea should be taken directly to a competent medical man. Purgative medicines should be avoided. Avoid, also, the socalled soothing syrups, cordials, etc.; they all contain opium in some form, and often children are soothed to death. A with sore throat or diarrhœa is probably wrong in its drainage. In such instances wrong in its drainage. In such instances be sure to ascertain the soundness of the sanitary arrangements. Every person, whether young or old, attacked with looseness of the bowls should at once give proper attention to the trouble and not allow it to run on.

'In very warm weather all persons should live temperately and regularly on those articles of food which they are used to and which agree with them. Fresh fish, fruit and vecetables may be tish, fruit and vegetables may be taken with impunity, provided they are sound and free from taint. All food that is tainted and smells disagreeably should be avoided. Great care should be taken not to give stale, sour or tainted food to children. Sour or tainted milk is one great source of diarrhea in children, and should on no account be given to them. Intemperance and drunkenness invite attacks of cholera morbus, diarrhoes and dysentery. Temperance in eating and drinking is great safeguard against diseases of the owels. It is of the utmost consequence to avoid all foul smells, as of privies, sinks, clos ets, drains, garbage and the like.

"Do not convert the stomach into a refrigerator for the whole system and endeavor to reduce the temperature of the body to a comfortable point by swallowing quantities of ice-water at short intervals. The evil effects of icewater are well known. When taken at meals the sense of taste is impaired. The indigestion, to say nothing of more serious troubles, which arises the from free et aside. Water at 50 degrees is cold enough for drinking purposes. Drinking very cold water, like drinking very not beverages, is a habit to be avoided. The extremes in this matter, as in most cases, are dangerous.

Peculiarities of the Teeth.

A tooth ln its normal condition consists of four parts or substances-enamel, cement, dentine and pulp. Enamel is the outer covering of the crown or exposed portion of the tooth, and by a wise provision of nature it is thickest where most subject to use and wear. It is the hardest tissue of the human system, possessing of itself no sensibility and contains not over 4 per cent. of animal matter. Yet it is an important fact and one that should not be lost sight of in caring for the teeth, that this indispensable coating is almost entirely soluble in acids. about the edge of the gums, for the exposed part. Dentine forms the body of the tooth. It is not so hard as bone, consisting of pararelel tubes about 4,500 to an inch in diameter, and more than a quarter of its composition consists of animal matter. It is somewhat sensative, J., has just been restored to possession but the sensation is probably due to the of his property, valued at $40,000, which nerves of the pulp. The latter, commonly called "the nerve," is a mass of nerves and blood-vessels, almost infinitesimal in delicate tissue. These nerves and bloodvessels connect with the general system through a minute opening at the extremity of the root, with which exception the pulp is entirely surrounded by a wall of dentine. In fact the pulp is the germ of the body of the tooth, the dentine is formed from it and pourished by it; whea the pulp-which is extrem seelynsative, as most readers know-dies, the dentine loses its apparent sensitiveness and gradually changes color—itself becomes dead.—Good Housekeeping.

The Horse's Sense of Smell. Did you ever watch a horse feeding at pasture? How he works his lips, like deft fingers, picking a tuft here and there and leaving others. He does this by scent, which in the horse is most exquisite. My riding horse one day sud-denly shied and jumped to the other side of the road. On looking about I saw a rattlesnake sleeping on the bank fifteen feet away. It was quickly killed, but the horse passed the place with suspicion for weeks afterward. A horse will smell a snake a long distance. acute scent serves him in all his feeding. He picks over his hay and rejects any and with the Marylebone Club and one each with the counties of Yorkshire, Nottingham, rejects water from a bucket in which Surrey, Gloucester, Middlesex, Sussex, Kent, milk has been carried. He finds his Lancashire and the universities of Oxford way in darkness by the same sense, and and Cambridge. Matches will also be played with Lord Sheffield's and Lord Lonsboro's elevens and with the Gentlemen of Ireland along a road or a pasture. For these reasons we should be most careful not to foul hay in the making or gathering, but to keep it as clean as one would keep his NATIONAL-Pittsburg 6. Brooklyn 16: Cincinnati own food. Thus to squirt tobaeco-juice over the hay is an insult to the more civilized animal. - N. Y. Tribune.

Here are some Hints About Taking Care of Loose, comfortable clothing is no longer regarded a disgrace to either man or womau. Time was, te be sure, a good while ago, when men wore complete linen suits is summer, and looked cool in them, and probably were cool. But and trowsers came to be regarded as an eccentricity, and we passed through a period when a man's summer attire was hardly to be distinguished from his win-ter garb; but now the epoch of light flannel serge and chevoit, and of the in-offensive monair and alpaca, has come in. The habit which a good many men are acquiring of wearing at their business a flannel or silk shirt, with a flowing tie and without a waistcoat, is a very sensi-ble as well as sightly one. Young men, in particular, look more attractive in this garb than anything they are likely to wear in town now-a-days.

Devices for mitigating the effects of the hot weather are endless, and most of them useless. The Listener has three tried and trustworthy maxims for hot weather conduct, and outside of them he knows no trick or device by which the dog star can be circumvented. These maxims are:—

1. Wear as light and loose clothing as 2d. Take plenty of exercise, but in beverages.

In exercising, the great point is not to be afraid of the heat; but not, at the same time, to choose violent diversions. The youth or maiden who is in the habi of playing base ball or lawn tennis, and quite accustomed to the exercise, may play it on a hot day as safely as ever, and people who are in the habit of walking a fair amount have nothing to fear, but everything to gain from keeping up their

as at any other time.

As to beverages, of course personal experiences always vary, and one man's refreshment is another's bane; but as a general principle, it is safe to shun about nine-tenths of all the summer drinks. Soda water in any form is a delusion and a snare; it is vexing to the coating of the stomach and useless in the digestive process, even if it happens to do no harm, Most Americans can drink a fair amount of iced water with impunity, though it is not really necessary to one's comfort. People who are afraid to eat in hot weather make a very great mistake.
What benefit to us, in meeting a nervous and physical strain, can it possibly be to rob ourselves of customary nutrition?

Entertainment.

The other night the dramatic man ound himself with a tragedy, an opera, and a benefit concert on his hands. He couldn't attend to them all himself, and he finally concluded to get one of the boys to help him out. It so happened that the horse reporter was the only available man about the office. He wasn't exactly the one that the dramatic editor would choose for the work, but then the entertainment was not worth an elaborate notice, and under the circumstances it was thought he would do. So the city editor was taken into the plot, and when the horse reporter got in from he pool-rooms he was met with the following:

"Got anything in particular to do to."

In about three hours he reappeared with a sort of a doubtful air about him, with a sort of a doubtful air about him, and, with a glance at a lithograph of Parole over his desk by way of refreshment, sharpened his pencil and waded in. When he had finished he handed his copy to the editor, and vanished like smoke. The article wasn't used in the amote. The article wasn't used in the dramatic column next morning; the city editor didn't seem to think it exactly appropriate, but he read it to the boys, and they all thought it was a shame to kill it. It went as follows:

at the concert last night, the grand stand being well filled in every part. An unusual number of the fair sex graced the occasion, and the varied colors of their dresses lent an additional charm to the beauty of the scene. The weath-er was delightful, and the sport good,

The first event on the program was a shorus of all ages, with some twenty entries, all of whom came to the post. They got rather a bad start, Soprano running away with the lead, Contralto second, Tenor third, Basso fourth, and all the others in a close bunch at least twenty lengths behind. At the quarter there was no particular change, but gethere was no particular change, but going down the back stretch all closed up there was a terrific race around the turn and down to the wire, Soprano staying the longest and winning by a neck, amidst uproarious applanse. tion, Olivette and Soprano as entries. It proved, however, a walk over for the latter, as Selection and Olivette failed to show up. Soprano caused a great sensa-tion, however, by an uncalled-for spurt down the home-stretch, and there was great enthusiasm as she dashed under the wire with a terrific shriek.

Next came the great event of the day, a fquartet between Soprano, Contralto, Tener and Basso. At the start prano was in the lead for a few strides, but Contraito passed her, and, taking the track, set the pace at a lively rate, closely followed by Tenor, Basso in the rear. Going down the back-stretch, Soprano was let out, and steadily gained on the leaders. Round the turn all fairly flew, and while at the head of the stretch Tenor showed clear for a mo ment. Soprano passed him as they straightened for home, and though he struggled with desperate energy, she came on, straight and game, and won a capital race at the top of her voice, the other three completely drowned out. The excitement was in tense, and the winner, who is a hand-me bay filly, was recalled again and

NATURAL GAS GUSHERS

THE PROVINCIAL COMPANY'S EX-

The Wells in the Niagara Peninsula—Ime

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 4.—The Provincial Natural Gas, Light and Fuel Company (limited) has exclusive drilling rights over 48,000 acres of 75 square miles of land in the southern and eastern parts of the county of Welland. Although operations were com-menced scarcely more than a year ago there are now 10 wells completed, with a combined capacity of 22,000 feet per day. There are also two wells approaching completion and another about to be commenced.

The company commenced drilling in July, 1889, in the township of Bertie, on the farm of Philip Zavitz. The well was continued to a depth of 846 feet, when a flow equal to 1,700,000 cubic feet per day was obtained, with a rock pressure of 505 pounds. The 1,700,000 cubic feet per day was obtained, with a rock pressure of 525 pounds. The second well, which is about half a mile north on Elmon Zavitz's farm, was not so successful. Drilling was stopped at 831 feet below the surface. This well produces 400,000 feet a day, and has a rock pressure of 540 pounds. About a mile to the west, in the township of Humberstone, the third well was sunk on Jonas Zavitz's farm. The capacity of this well is 700,000 feet per day. It has a rock pressure of 510 pounds, and is 836 feet deep. The farm of J. A. Ramsden was chosen as the site for the fourth well. Better results were obtained here. The capacity of the well is very serious. site for the fourth well. Better results were obtained here. The capacity of the well is 2,000,000 feet. It was continued to a depth of 876 feet and has 550 pounds pressure. The fifth well is a "gusher." It is in the township of Bertie, on the farm of Danie. The fifth well is a "gusher." It is in the township of Bertie, on the farm of Danie. There was a deluge of T. Zavitz. The output of this well reaches the enormous figure of 7,000,000 feet per day more than three times the total daily consumed in Toronto. It is a remarkable fact that the rock pressure of this well is lighter that the rock pressure of this well is lighter than some of the less productive, being 510 pounds to the inch. The depth is 842 feet. pounds to the inch. The depth is 842 feet. To compensate for this success the next well was a total failure, and has been abandoned by the company. The seventh, which is on the farm of Adam Smith, Humberstone, produces 2,600,000 feet, and has a depth of 844 feet. A second failure occurred on the farm of J. A. Barnhardt, Bertie, and the well was abandoned. The ninth well, situated on Daniel Near's farm, Humberstone, yielded 2,400,000 feet at a depth of 851 feet. Well No. 10, the last that has been completed, is

The casing and rubber packing are inserted for the purpose of preventing water in the upper strate from finding its way into the well. There is inside of the casing an iron tube through which the gas is conducted to the surface. This tube varies in size according to the capacity of the well. The whole is anchored down by means of heavy cross beams fitted into the rock near heavy cross beams fitted into the rock near the surface. The time occupied in drilling a well is about a month. The work is done by steam power generated in boilers which use natural gas for fuel. A derrick 75 feet high affords support for an immense walking beam. Attached to this is a rope which passes over a pulley and life the which passes over a pulley and lifts the drill, a bar of steel forty feet in length. The work is carried on night and day. The average progress is 25 to 35 feet per diem, according to the nature of the strata pene-

Not only in Canada, but the world over, may the development of natural gas be said to be in its infancy. In the initial stages of the industry there has been much loss of labor and waste of gas, which experience is for twenty-six years, it must be borne in mind that the flow has decreased very considerably since gas was first tapped. It is believed by scientists that there is an abun-dant supply for many years to come in the gas fields now known, should proper restrictions be adopted.

A FREE FIGHT. Italians at Bound Brook (N.J.) Engage in

BOUND BROOK, N.J., Aug. 4.-A terrific fight occurred in the Italian settlement known as the "gravel pit," in the outskirts of Bound Brook, yesterday. Several years ago an Italian girl came to this country and began to work in the Bound Brook mills. She was engaged to a lover in Italy, but in a short time was married to not the Bound Brook Italians. Yesterday a brother of the jilted lover visited Gravel Pit and met the faithless woman, who carried a child in her arms. He struck her over the head with a bottle. The husband interfered, and in a moment the two men where fighting. A free fight followed. The occupants of the shanties all turned out and fought viciously. All sorts of weapons, including heavy pieces of split railroad ties, spades, shovels, pickaxes and knives, were used. In a few minutes the ground was covered with bleeding and groaning victims. During the night two of the wounded men died in great

Mr and Mrs Peter Klinkhammer and family left Seaforth on Tuesday (29th ult.,) for Winnipeg, Manitobs, where they intend in future to reside, Mr Klinkhammer having secured a good pocition there.

A little daughter of Mr George Dun can, Seaforth, met with a very painful accident on Thursday night of last week. She was placing clothes in a mangel when she got her fingers caught in the rollers smashing one of them very badly. another's finger with a cutlass and captured all but three in the act of landing.

Two Men Drowned.

New York, Aug 4.—It is now stated that four of the crew of the government Dredge Advance, which was sunk in the harbor yesterday by the steamer Norje, are missing two of whom are known to be drowned. The others are supposed to have escaped by disable aboard the steamer.

A union Sunday school excursion will be run to Goderich on Thursday, Augus 5th, starting at Palmerston. A special train will convey the excursionists. It is expected arrangements will be made for a sail on Lake Huron on the steamer "Lora." A base ball tournament will be held in the County town on that day when liberal prizes will be given. See posters for full particulars.

History offits Years. For fifteen years we have used Dr Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry as a family medicine for summer complaints and diarrhoes, and we never had anything to equal it. We highly recommend it.

We are sorry to record this week the death of Mrs Punehard, wife of Mr J H Punehard, of Seaforth, which took place on Sunday morning last after a long illness of consumption. She was a talented and worthy lady, and her death is a severe affliction to her husband and family.
