Heads I Win.
I resolved a hundred times not to call at Merival's to say "good-by," but I went. On the road I decided that on no account would I be left alone with Violet, but I was. The folly of the most foolish man is no match for Providence.
"Why have you not congratulated me upon my legacy, Mr. Durbam?" she asked abruptly when I had finished admiring the improvements in the conservatory. I plucked a couple of withered leaves abstractedly.
"Upon my word, Miss Violet," I confessed, I am afraid that I didn't feel so pleased as I should have done at your good fortune."
She looked swiftly at me, and I tried to look interested in the palms.
"I cannot imagine your being jealous of another's good luck. I—I am sorry," she said sadly.
"I didn't mean that quite, Miss Violet," I explained hastily, "though I expressed myself clumsily as usual."
"Perhaps," she suggested, you might like to say what you did mean?

Come, I will give you a full minute to put it in your best English."
"No reflection is necessary," I answered gravely. "It meant that your wealth had taken you into another sphere, out of that in which we were friendly. I was selfish to be sorry to see you go. I ground my heel on the tiled floor and pulled off a leaf."
"I suppose," she murmured, as if she were speaking to herself, "that it meant for a compliment? It may at so be taken as an insult."
"Insult!"
"If it is not an insult to suppose that because I have become rich I should look down upon—upon my old friends?" Her voice trembled.
"My dear Miss Violet," I cried, "I never supposed such a thing; never dreamed it for one moment. It was only that—that—I stopped abruptly. There was nothing to say, but the one thing not to be said."
"Cannot you say what you do mean?" she demanded, with a flash of her old impetuous manner. I gripped the old flower stand, on which my hand was resting, angrily.
"No," I answered, "I cannot!" I looked hungrily at her as she stood leaning against the rustic work, with a lanky red rose just touching her lips. "I wish to God," I added bitterly, "that I could!" She met my eyes fearlessly, though the pink color flushed over her cheeks.
"So," she said meaningly, "do I!" But I was doggedly silent, and she sighed.
"There are some things," I remarked feebly, after a painful interval, "which are better left unsaid." She shook her head.
"There are some things," she protested, "which demanded an explanation; some acts which seem so unkind—such a breach of friendship." Her voice faltered, and she turned her head away.
"I can only ask your charity," I said hoarsely.
"Such things," she continued, "rankle in one's mind, make one morbid and miserable, if they are not quite explained."
"Such things as my stopping away from here since you came into your unexpected fortune?" She nodded again. "Even when I tell you that explanation is best avoided?"
"Yes," she answered, "I do."
"Then," said I sadly, "I can only say one thing, Violet. It is because I love you." She hung her head, silent and trembling. "I love you," I repeated, "so much that I can only—go away."
She lifted up her face with the tears streaming down her cheeks and held out her hands.
"Oh, Harry!" she cried, "can't you see?"
I groaned. "My poor little girl!" I cried. I was afraid. "It cannot be." She dried her eyes.
"You are talking nonsense," she began brightly. "If you love me—"
"I do."
"Of course you do, you silly fellow. Do you think I could let you go? And if I—if I can put up with you—why, that settles the question."
She laughed uncomfortably, watching me out of the corners of her eyes.
"My dear it doesn't!" She stamped her foot angrily. "Violet, there is only one honorable thing that I can do—only one way in which I can preserve my self respect and act as a man. That way—I spoke firmly—is by going away, as I am going."
"You are not!" She caught hold of my coat, but I gently removed her hands.
"By everything which I hold sacred, Violet, I am. Any man who was worth his salt would do the same." She knew by the sound of my voice that I meant it, and the color left her cheeks.
"Harry," she said pitiously, "did you really mean what you said—about liking me?"
"Every word."
"—I meant it too!" I lifted her hand and kissed it.
"It cannot be, dear." There was a long silence.
"Do you remember a conversation which we had coming home from Eastlake's tennis party?" she asked suddenly, "about modern civility?"
"Yes, but I scarcely see—"
"You said it was giving every one a chance—even your worst and most despicable enemy. Do you remember?"
"I remember," I admitted.
"If such a one were at your mercy, you said, you must not slay him without giving him an opportunity to fight for his life. If fighting were impossible, you must give him a chance in some way; you would let it rest upon the fall of a coin. You remember?"
"Yes," I answered, wondering, "I remember."
"Then," she said, with a keen ring in her voice, "I ask—say, I demand—the same privilege."
"The case is quite different, Violet," I protested. But I could not avoid a fierce desire of one wild hazard for happiness.
"It is in no way different. On one side my happiness; on the other your foolish idea of honor, which you place above my happiness."
"I cannot!" I groaned.
"You must refuse me what you would grant to the meanest of your foes." She produced a penny from her little purse. "You will not be so cruel and unjust as to refuse me this?"
"It is not right."
"I say it is."
"Then we disagree."
"Therefore a judge is needed—the impartial coin!" She laughed feverishly. I could not bear to hear her.
"Very well," I said wildly. "But let me be honest with you, Violet. At the bottom of my heart I despise myself for giving way, and know it is because I want you and not because it is right. You will abide by the result?"
"Yes, yes! And you will? Promise!"
"I promise."
"Freely and unreservedly?"
"Freely and unreservedly."
"You must lose for it," she cried excitedly, putting the coin in my hand.
"Quick, quick!" I spun it up, and she cried swiftly, "Head!" It fell on the floor and rolled over and over until at last it rested just underneath the stands, but still in view—head uppermost. Violet burst into a passion of tears, and I clasped her frantically in my arms and kissed her again and again.
"You will never, never speak of leaving me any more!" she sobbed. And I held her closer and whispered that now I never would, if I could, break my promise.
"I would never have kept mine to let you go," she said defiantly.
"Hullo, you two! Whatever have you been doing all this time?" said her brother, coming in later.
"Oh, playing pitch and toss!" I said lightly.
"Vi is a dangerous person to gamble with, let me warn you," he observed laughingly. "She has a wonderful coin, which I picked up at a bar, with two heads!"
"You're not cross with me?" she pleaded, holding tightly to my arm as we walked in behind him.
Cross with her!—St. Paul's.

True Heroism.
There were doubtless many instances of heroism and self sacrifice in the course of the late war, but none greater or nobler than has been brought to the light of publicity by the death of Reubena Walworth, the first female nurse who entered the devoted detention hospital at Montauk Point. She stated in the hospital until it was a thing of the past, and had then come home to die of a fever contracted in the exercise of her noble and self-imposed task. There is said to be a torrent of letters pouring in to her parents, all with the burden, "She saved my life." In saving the lives of others she has given her own. There is no pomp or splendor about her end, but it is an incident which shows that great deeds can be wrought without either. "The Florence Nightingale of America" is the fitting title conferred on Miss Walworth.—Ottawa Free Press.

Two's Only George.
Sybil—"It's no use denying it, Maud. It was too dark for me to see who it was, but I distinctly saw some young man kiss you in the garden. I'm ashamed of you."
Maud—"I don't see why you should be. I've often seen George kiss you."
Sybil (engaged to George)—"Yes, but I allow nobody but George to kiss me."
Maud—"Well, it was nobody but George who kissed me."
After he had kissed her, and pressed her rosy cheek against his and patted her soft round chin, she drew back and asked:
"George, do you shave yourself?"
"Yes," he replied.
"I thought so," she said. "Your face is the roughest I ever—"
Then she stopped, but it was too late, and he went away with a cold, heavy lump in his breast.

Do We Suffocate.
We make our windows fit, we pad our doors, we shiver at a draft, we surround ourselves with woolen curtains, dusty carpets and fluffy, luxurious upholstery; we breathe the same air over and over again, and then we wonder that we are not strong and vigorous, says London Hospital. The fact is, we are daily using up the exuberant vitality with which nature has provided us in struggling against artificial conditions.
How powerful for evil, how deteriorating these conditions are is shown by the fact that their mere removal gives back to the con-native that vitality which enables him to overcome the seeds of disease within him. Fresh air is not a thing to be taken in little doses once a day, but a thing to live on.

Teach Children Courage.
Children should be taught from infancy to shut their lips together as closely as if they had lockjaw whenever they are tempted to whine and complain of small ailments. Not long ago I visited a lady who had four youngsters, all in a nursery. One of these babies would sometimes start a complaint, when the mother would cunningly turn the child's mind from her fancied trouble, and soon the juvenile would be romping away as gaily as you please. Children are allowed to grow puny, undeveloped, useless, because every little ache or pain is fostered, cherished, looked after. They

An Eloquent Tribute.
The following letter has been handed us for publication and it explains itself: L. E. Baker, Esq., President and Manager of the Y. S. S. Co.
MY DEAR SIR:—As a passenger on the Boston on her last trip from Yarmouth to Boston I feel it my duty to all parties concerned to express my admiration for the way and manner the good steamer was handled during that eventful storm, and to Captain Stanwood and Mr. Rowe and their respective crews too much praise cannot be given.
"Those who know nothing, fear nothing," but after knocking about on salt water more or less for thirty years I claim that I know whereof I speak.
Leaving Yarmouth with everything pointing to a speedy run across, we were overtaken by a N. E. gale and snow storm, which for severity, this generation will never see its equal. After running our time for Thatchers the steamer was headed off shore, and for twenty-four hours she behaved like a thing of life and rode out of the gale in a splendid manner.
No tongue can begin to describe the terrible scene passed through. After the wind hauled around N. W., it began to clear and the captain put her on her beam ends, and after a short run we made Pigeon Hill bearing W. by N., which speaks volumes for the master hand in command.
After this the run was uneventful; but what a sight greeted our eyes when we entered Light House channel—vessels of all description, from the smallest "hooker" to the ocean steamer, were piled up along the shores, and we had good reason for thanking God that we had a good ship and a master hand to guide her through the greatest storm we ever saw.

With great respect, I am,
Yours very truly,
Signed, ROBERT L. REYNOLDS.
Boston, Mass., Nov. 23, 1898.

Facts About Flags.
To "strike the flag," says an authority, is to lower the national colours in token of submission.
Flags are used as the symbol of rank and command, the officers using them being called "flag officers." Such flags are square to distinguish them from other banners.
A "flag of truce" is a white flag displayed to an enemy to indicate a desire for parity.
The white flag is the sign of peace. After a battle parties from both sides often go out to the field to rescue the wounded or bury the dead under the protection of the white flag.
The red flag is a sign of defiance, and is often used by revolutionists. In our service it is a mark of danger and shows a vessel to be receiving or discharging her powder.
The black flag is the sign of piracy.
The yellow flag shows a vessel to be in quarantine or is a sign of a contagious disease.
A flag at half-mast means mourning. Fishing and other vessels return with a flag at half-mast to announce the loss or death of some of the crew.
The Aunt—The way to win a man is to talk about what he is most interested in. The Niece—Oh! About himself.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., DEC. 16, 1898.

Editorial Notes.

A acquisition is being circulated and largely signed this week asking Mayor Thompson to allow himself to be nominated for election for another year.

The remarkably mild weather which we have had this fall has been replaced by decidedly more winter-like. Up to the first of December there was scarcely any frost, and clover was in blossom in the fields and sweet-peas and roses in the gardens.

By announcements in various parts of this issue it will be seen that Wolfville has arranged to have a "Merchants' Day" on Tuesday next, Dec. 20th.

Mothers' Meeting.

The Mothers' Meeting, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., was held on Thursday afternoon of last week at the home of Mrs. C. W. Bussell.

Ladies' fall and winter jackets and Capes. American Tailor made garments—the latest styles in all colors. See us at the GLENN HOUSE.

The superb opera 'Fa Diavola' will be put on by the Robinson Opera Co. in Kentville on Monday night.

Wolfville Art Association.

The Art Association spent a very pleasant and profitable evening Monday, 12th, at the residence of Mrs. Hatch, in studying the Early Italian Artists and their Works.

EARLY ITALIAN PERIOD, 15TH TO 16TH CENTURIES:

Cimabue: Madonna, Virgin Enthroned.

Giotto: Raising of Lazarus, Marriage at Cana, Entry to Jerusalem, Death of St. Francis.

Fra Angelico: Annunciation, Angels, Madonna of Star, Crucifixion.

Duccio di Siena: Three Marys.

Occugus: Paradise, Triumph of Death.

Taddeo Gaddi: Old Bridge in Florence.

EARLY RENAISSANCE PERIOD, 15TH CENTURY:

Massaccio: Tribute Money, Central group from Lame, Peter and Paul restoring a young man to life.

Fra Filippo Lippi: St. Paul visiting Peter in Prison.

Boticelli: Fresco in Sistine, Madonna with Angels and Christ Child.

Verrocchio: Baptism of Christ—details Angels heads.

Chiondale: Scenes from lives of Virgin and John the Baptist.

Perugino: Madonna and Child with Saints, Madonna adoring Christ.

The program for the next meeting, which will be held at the same place second Monday evening in January, will be devoted to some of Raphael's works.

RAFAEL'S PAINTINGS IN OILS:

Madonnas: Del Baldaccio, Of the Oak, Di Foligno, Della Sedia, Di San Sisto.

Holy Family: Under the Oak, The Feast.

Other Subjects: St. Cecilia, Transfiguration.

Portraits: Raphael, Raphael and Perugino, Leo X.

The association decided to hold a ceramic and poster exhibition in connection with the Seminary closing exhibition, Sat. and Mon., 17th and 19th, of which fuller notice will be seen elsewhere.

Letter from Boston.

DEAR ACADIAN,—The world moves, and we move with it. Fifty-one years ago I first came to Boston, and here, for the first time, saw a steam car.

The snow has arrived here, some six inches at least, enough to answer the purpose of stalling wood, as some have found to their satisfaction.

Miss Angie Lee, of Aylesford, our school teacher, was obliged to give up her school and Miss Mabel Caldwell, of Cambridge, is supplying her place.

The Friendly Fireclub of last winter has reorganized, and the evenings are very pleasant as well as profitable.

The R. W. Kinman Co., Ltd., are building a barn 150x60 feet. It is built on an Ontario plan, with an arched roof and no posts above the cellar.

A club, known as the "Minto Club," has been organized in the school and takes up one hour of Friday.

The farmers in the neighborhood who are sending their fruit are realizing good prices, indeed, which is very pleasing to them all.

Do you suffer from headache or nervous troubles? Probably eye strain is the cause of it.

The committee appointed at the quarterly meeting for the purpose of testing fertilizers during the season of 1898 reported as follows:

The fertilizers used were seven in number: Lime, manure, ashes, Thomas' phosphate, U. S. Imperial phosphate, Co.'s, Bowker's ground bone, and Albert Thomas' phosphate.

The fertilizers were used side by side on separate ridges. Oats were sown, 17 lbs to each ridge, on the 24th day of May.

The value of the fertilizer was $3.00 to each ridge, of Wolfville, Oct. 14th, 1897.

THE NEW REMEDY.

Nature is full of hidden forces that are being utilized and yet to be utilized for the benefit and upbuilding of mankind.

One of the most important of these recent discoveries is Prof. Warner's Liquid Ozone. People are talking about it wherever it has been introduced.

Now is a good time of the year to take it, and fortify the system for the winter. Get a circular at the druggist's, which tells all about this wonderful remedy, and try it, and you will see that it is all or more than is claimed for it.

PRICE: 50 cents, and $1.00 per bottle.

each 17 lbs of grain. The ground was also sowed to timothy and clover. The land was new; it had never been cropped or manured and the product was as follows:

The growth of the timothy and clover stands in about the following: Manure, Imperial Phosphate, and Albert Thomas' Phosphate—the difference in these is scarcely perceptible.
