The Earl's Son;

TWO HEARTS UNITED

CHAPTER X.

He was gazing before him as if lost in the effort to word his mental picture, and did not see the color that grew and grew in the "pale face of old ivory"; or the smile that played about the beautiful lips.

"Oh, that's a very common type," she said, contemptuously, but with a subtle sweetness in her voice.

Ralph started from his reverie and got up awkwardly.

"I hear the carriage," he said. "They can't drive up to the door, I'm afraid."

His face went red.

But she shook her head as she raised herself.

"No, no; I can walk or hop; at any rate, if you will give me your arm—" for he was standing still with nervousness and no longer self-possessed, looking at her with a half-fearful embarrassment which, of course, restored her to her usual calm.

He held out his arm, and, putting her hand on it, she hopped to the door, where her maid, Goodwin, met her, exclaiming in agonized accents:

"Oh, Miss Veronica!"

"Oh, it's all right," said Veronica. "Don't make a fuss—"

"Take care! You'll strike your foot—you can't hop into the carriage!" cried Ralph, warningly.

"I can't fly in!" she retorted, pettishly. "Help me, please!"

There was only one way of helping her; and, lifting her in his strong arms once more, he lifted her in. Veronica sank back slowly, looking at him through her long lashes.

"Thank you very much," she said, in a low voice.

Ralph drew back, feeling dazed and bewildered by the novel emotion and sensation which were throbbing within him.

"Drive slowly!" he said, hoarsely, but in a tone of command that would have been suitable to the earl himself.

Instinctively the coachman's hand went up to his hat, and he only checked himself in time.

Ralph gazed after the carriage for a moment or two, then drawing his hand across his brow as if to wipe away the mist that hung about his brain, he went into the hut.

A small, dark object lay on the floor beside the couch. It was Veronica's handkerchief. He picked it up and opened it, gazing at it vacantly, then he raised it to his lips.

The touch of the cold, wet cambic brought him back to his senses.

"Oh, I'm mad!" he exclaimed, with a harsh laugh, and he flung the handkerchief away from him.

But it seemed to reproach him mutely from where it lay, and presently, after he had paced up and down, glancing at it at each turn, he picked it up and thrust it impatiently in his breast pocket.

CHAPTER XI.

With the assistance of Goodwin, who was much more flurried and upset than her mistress, Veronica hobbled to her room. The doctor had already been sent for, and he arrived by the time she had exchanged her habit for one of the loose and costly robes which it pleases ladies to call a dressing-gown.

Lord Lynborough came up with him and, though he attempted to conceal it, exhibited a concern and anxiety which surprised and touched Veronica.

"Why were you without a groom?" he asked, severely. "Are you in much pain? Isn't the foot very much swollen? Are you sure it's only a sprain?"

"I sent Brown back," said Veronica, almost humbly. "There are times when it annoys me to have him pounding after me; I enjoy my ride so much more when I am alone."

"I daresay. We most of us enjoy being alone and unhampered by attendants, but—"

He shrugged his shoulders as he looked down at her with his cynical smile.

"It is only a sprain; there is nothing broken, I am rejoiced to find," said the old-fashioned doctor in his courtly way. "It was very wise of you to have the boot removed."

"It was not I who thought of it, but Ralph Farringdon, the gamekeeper," said Veronica, reluctantly, as if she could not withhold from him his due. "It was he who caught the mare, and car—took me to the hut and sent for the carriage and—"

Lord Lynborough frowned.

"It seems to me that this young man is very much in evidence. But I suppose you rewarded him? If not, I will send for him—"

"Oh, no, no!" sprang from her lips hastily; "please don't do anything of the sort—I mean—the color came to her face—"I mean that he would not like it."

"Ah, yes; I remember he refused the sovereign I offered him the other day," remarked the earl. "A singular young man. Such pride is rather uncommon in men of his class. But I am glad he was so thoughtful, and I will send for him and thank him."

"I don't think you need do so," said Veronica, with a fine attempt at casualness. "I thanked him."

"Ah, well!" assented the earl. "But I trust this will be a lesson to you not to go unattended for the future."

"Oh, yes, the lesson is there all right enough," said Veronica, looking down at her foot on which the doctor was skillfully putting a cold compress. "I hope I sha'n't be lame long, Doctor Thorne!"

"Lame!" He was shocked at so serious a word in connection with the great lady of the Court. "Oh, no, my dear young lady! It depends upon yourself. Rest—rest is the most efficacious cure for a sprain. I will come again this evening, and see how you are getting on. Now, mind, I beg of you: rest—perfect rest!"

"That young fellow has saved Miss Gresham a week in bed at least," he said to the earl, as they went downstairs. "If he had allowed the boot to remain on, or had let her use the foot, the inflammation would have been more serious. Who do you say he is? I don't remember the name."

"Humph!" responded the earl. "A new keeper. A good-looking young fellow, who is a kind of favorite with Miss Gresham. You are sure there is nothing more than a sprain? You will look in this evening without fail?"

Veronica got rid of Goodwin as soon as she could and, closing her eyes, leaned back and recalled the incidents of the morning. It was not only her foot that was burning; she was burning all over with a sensation that was not far removed from shame and self-reproach.

She had permitted Ralph Farringdon to carry her—he had held her in his arms twice that morning!—but, worse, she had—there was no use in endeavoring to stifle or dodge her accusing conscience—hobnobbed with him—there was no other word for it—as if he had been her equal; and, still worse, she had used all her feminine artifices to win his regard, to ensure his admiration!

In the moments of her physical weakness, under the strain of her pain and the influence of her gratitude, the meaning of the course she was pursuing had not been realized by her; but now—now she was away from him, she realized it fully, and it sent hot waves of blood through her veins.

She confessed to herself that she had not felt affronted, indignant when he had put his arms round her; that she had been conscious of a sense of pleasure in his society; that the sound of his voice was like music in her ears, and never more pleasant than when he had faltered under the influence of her eyes, her smile; that she had not been anxious for the carriage to arrive, was, indeed, almost sorry, notwithstanding the pain, when it did come; and that she had tempted, invited, almost forced him to take her in his arms again.

"Oh, I must be lost to all sense of shame and decency! Proud! I can't have more pride than a beggar woman!" she almost moaned. "To condescend to flirt—yes, I did flirt with him—with a—a—gamekeeper! Have I gone mad suddenly, or is it some bad strain of blood in me? How strong he was! And yet how gentle! And how delicately considerate! It was he who was anxious for the carriage to come. No gentleman could have been more considerate, more careful. And I behaved like—a like a Fanny Mason! Yes, that describes my conduct! I took advantage of my position, of his helplessness and chivalry, and made him admire me, and—"

"Oh, I'm not fit to live: here at Lynce Court, at any rate, unless as a housemaid. Yes, that is my proper place, for I behaved just like one! Perhaps if I'd been a housemaid he would have responded; for I invited him, I did, I did, I did! And—should I have been angry if he had presumed—Oh, I am raving mad! I've been thinking of him ever since he crossed my path. I wish the man would go. Yes: I must get Lord Lynborough to send him away!"

Her cheeks were still burning when Goodwin came in on tiptoe.

"For goodness sake don't creep about as if I were dying!" remonstrated Veronica, with novel sharpness.

"I beg your pardon, miss!" said poor Goodwin, still flurried and emotional. "It's Fanny Mason. She came this morning—"

"Oh, let her come in!" said Veronica. The mention, the appearance of Fanny acted like a cold douche, and brought her back to her senses.

Fanny came in, all respectful concern and anxiety.

"Oh, miss, it's so kind of you to see me!" she said hurriedly; "and I do hope it's nothing serious. I met Mr. Ralph just now, and he said it was a bad sprain, he was afraid. How fortunate he should have been on the spot! But there, I told him last night that he was a lucky young man!"

"Last night?" said Veronica, rather coldly.

"Yes, miss; he looked in with the fish you so kindly sent us, and stopped and had a bit of supper. Mother is always so pleased when he drops in, he's so pleasant and friendly and nice; o different t othe other keepers and men on the estate. He seemed quite anxious about you, miss, when I met him just now; and he said as how you were so brave, and made light of the hurt, though he knew it must have pained you terrible—"

Divorced Life

A Man With a Conscience.

The Longacre Building is a hive of theatrical offices. Marian stopped at the door of Luring & Co., the musical comedy producers, entered and asked for the manager.

"What you want to see him about?" demanded a squint-eyed youth at the closed gate.

"About work," answered Marian. "Aw, you want to see the bookin' agent. You'll have to wait your turn. There's half a dozen hams waitin' to see him now."

Marian dropped into a chair, and began studying the waiting men and women. One was a pale, weary, shabby, washed-out shadow of a girl, who had climbed stairs to booking offices until her boots were all but wrecks. Another, a tall blonde, with flaming cheeks and impatient eyes, kept darting glances brimming with impatience at the locked gate. A fat, pensive, slovenly brunette was a third rival for an engagement. The waiting men ranged from flashy, hand-me-down-apparelled youths, to wasted old-young men, whose thespian careers seemed to have yielded them anything but satisfactory returns.

"Well," said the booking agent more than an hour later, when Marian had at last been admitted, "what's your line?"

Marian answered the crisp inquiry with a truthful statement of her experiences. The other regarded her with pleasant, honest, sympathetic eyes. His genuine dignity and quiet manner were utterly unlike the breezy Ratgenhauer.

"My advice to you is to stay out of the fame," he said in reply. "Keep as far from the stage as you can. If you haven't got a home, stick to it. If you look like too fine a girl to go into musical comedy, the chances to make a hit in this game are about one in ten thousand. The chances of a good girl getting spoiled in this life are overwhelming. I'm talking to you in this way because you're different from the usual run of women who come looking for work. It's too late to talk like this to most of them. It wouldn't do any good. My honest advice to you is to get over the notion of going on with theatrical work before it is too late."

"I appreciate your interest in me," said Marian, "but I've made up my mind. I have to do something. Can you put me on?"

"If you could make any sort of a stab at singing," answered the gent, "I think I could use you in the char-

Marian saw that it was hopeless to plead her cause further.

"It's easy enough to get singers, but we've got to have good lookers. As far as looks go, you'd qualify."

"Then you'll take me?" asked Mar-

an eagerly, pleased with the compliment.

The booking agent shook his head deliberately. "No, I wouldn't take you on. It wouldn't be right. Some other agent might. But I won't. Conscience is not a very abundant commodity in this business, but I've got a little of mine left, thank Heaven. Some day you'll remember what I've told you, and you'll feel grateful to me."

Marian saw that it was hopeless to plead her cause further. She thanked the other for the interview and left. It was on the afternoon of her arrival in New York. Disheartened at her first rebuff and mindful of the little money she had left, she hurried back to her hotel. Of one thing she was certain. She would have to give up her two-dollar-a-day room at the hotel and seek cheaper quarters.

She shrank from the thought of going to another boarding house to live. But she had heard of theatrical boarding houses in the big town, where the luckless may live for a few groats a week. The color and atmosphere which she divined these abodes embodied must be attractive and interesting, she concluded, and made up her mind to investigate the rooming houses of the Rialto.

Big Pictures at the Crescent.

Lovers of motion pictures were accorded a treat last night at the Crescent Picture Palace when the two-reel drama "Red Margaret the Moon-shine" was presented. This clever production was a surprisingly good drama and was followed by two good comedies. Miss Arhady is singing an illustrated novelty song, and the orchestra is as big attraction in itself. To-day the same programme is repeated. On Monday the feature is "The Dread Inheritance," a drama in two reels. Coming: "Robinson Crusoe" in three reels. Particulars later.

NEWS BY CABLE.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, June 26.

William O'Brien, in a letter to the Morning Post, addresses an earnest warning to British politicians, Liberals or Unionists, who think they see any compromise under the Amending Bill, or any hope of peace. He says the Amending Bill starts hopelessly on the wrong track, and kills Home Rule under the perfidious pretence of enacting it. Even Pitt's Act of Union left Ireland as a sacred entity, around which centred unconquerable hopes. It remained for a Home Rule Government to rend her by Statute into two separate Irelands. He affirms that any compromise to which the Bill is susceptible will be viewed by the Irish with detestation, no less ineffaceable than that with which France thinks of Alsace, or with which Englishmen would receive a proposal, under German dreadnoughts, to cede Kent and Sussex. He says that a peace conference, though a desperate remedy, is the only escape from a still more desperate calamity. Let the House of Lords instead of consummating the partition of Ireland through the Bill, propose an all-party convention, and four consideration of the Home Rule Bill and repealing Bill for three months, pending report from such conference. Editorially the Post disagrees with the suggestion, declaring that the Unionists cannot consider any compromise with a policy striking both directly and indirectly at the United Kingdom. There would be no settlement until the issues were submitted to the judgment of the people.

MEXICO CITY, June 26.

The Mexican Senate is to meet tomorrow to hear the Executive's report on the outcome of the mediation conferences at Niagara Falls. Optimism prevails generally. The inhabitants of the capital are planning a big demonstration in honor of the South American mediators. Prominent politicians express the belief that peace will be restored in Mexico before long.

KIEL, June 26.

The German Emperor visited the British flagship of the second battle squadron, the King George V, on which his flag as Admiral of the Fleet was hoisted. The Emperor remained an hour aboard the flagship, during which time he was pennally in supreme command of the British fleet. On leaving he was saluted with the Admiral's 21 bells, instead of the Ruler's 23.

Ingratitude.

By RUTH CAMERON.

To exact a full return in praise and thanks for every kind deed one does is to nullify the virtue of the gift. But it is only reasonable for a donor to expect a bare acknowledgement of a gift, a display of common courtesy in the manner of receiving it. And it does not seem as if anyone, however careless and ungrateful, could fail to give this much. And yet you would surely be surprised if you could know how many letters I receive, whose writers complain that even the scantiest courtesy has not been shown by those who have received benefits from them. For instance, one letter friend says, "Personally, we have not much money, but I make it a rule, if I do not wear a dress more than three or four times in a season, to give it to a person who will make use of it before it goes out of style. It means some trouble. If there is a white yoke or anything that can be washed or cleaned at home, I have that put in order. If it is a gingham dress that can go to the tub, and I know the skirt is likely to be too short, I rip out the hem and have the gown washed and ironed before sending it away. (What a contrast to the people who always rip anything of value off a garment before they give it away.) Then I hunt up a suitable box, paper and twine, and either call up the express man or carry the box to the post office. It has irritated me very much to wait indefinitely for some acknowledgement from the person the dress is sent to. It seems to me the least she could do would be to write a postal acknowledging it. As it is, I do not know whether the box has arrived or not. In one case, after sending boxes for several years to a cousin who used the dresses but never acknowledged them in any way, I stopped sending them to her. I suppose that it is mean and petty to feel that you want thanks—but really, all I should ask is common politeness. Another letter friend who has carried many delicacies into a sick neighbor is seriously inconvenienced because the family fail to return any of the fishes. The writer does not complain of this blatant discourtesy, but merely asks if I think it would be proper for her to request the return of the dishes. Of course it would, and yet, what an unpleasant thing to be obliged to do! I know just how uncomfortable she feels about it. What a reward for her kindness! Loans often bring a similar reward. Another letter friend tells me that she loaned her college cap and gown to a girl who could not afford to buy one. Of course she was glad to do it. But it did not seem to her too much to expect that the girl should return it when she no longer had any use for it. Several times since then the owner has wanted it for social functions and had to do without it. "One ungrateful man does an injury to all who are in distress," says an old philosopher. There was never a truer word spoken. There may be a few high souls who can keep on doing good indefinitely in spite of everything, but the majority of us cannot help feeling our ardor chilled by discourtesy and ingratitude.

Household Notes

To clean lacquered brass, clean with hot olive oil. To clean pewter, use silver sand and cloudy ammonia. To clean brass and copper, dip half a lemon in salt. A rag soaked in paraffin makes an excellent stove polisher. If you find any moth holes in your good blankets, darn them with white wool. Panama hats can be cleaned from dust and grime by means of a soft cloth wet in kerosene. Soak mildew stains a few hours in a weak solution of chloride of lime, then rinse in cold water. Turpentine has the same whitening cleansing effect that kerosene has on a boiler of clothes. Every guestroom should have a coper or two to hold stray tumblers and protect polished tables. The best pad for the baby's crib is an old blanket worn thin. The same thing is good for the ironing board. Always air your fireless cooker when it is not in use, and occasionally sun it or wash it out with soapy water. To string beans perfectly, first wash them, then plunge into boiling water for three minutes and drain; then every vestige of string can be removed. Rub a little flour very lightly over the top of a cake before frosting it, and the frosting will be less likely to run off. A cloth dipped in 1 part turpentine to 2 of olive oil can be used with great success to rub the piano which needs brightening. The woman who does her own washing will find it a good idea to wear a pair of rubbers while she stands at the tub. It is much easier to push back the skin of the nails after washing the hands in very hot water. You will find that they will polish much better, too. An electric candle in an old-fashioned candlestick is very convenient and pretty. It is especially handy when exploring the recesses of a dark closet. Always rub a little cold cream well into the skin at the base of the nails at night. This keeps the cuticle soft and helps to prevent the formation of hang-nail. A good soup for invalids is made by adding a half pint of beef tea to a half ounce of tapioca; stir over the fire until it comes to a boil, then simmer until tapioca is thoroughly cooked. Flavor with salt and pepper. When cool, stir in the yolk of an egg well beaten; simmer slowly until the egg is cooked.

Fresh Air.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Fresh air is air which is not contaminated with carbon dioxide, sewer gas, cuss words, gossip or tobacco smoke. It consists of the highest quality of oxygen and nitrogen with a little ozone thrown in to give it tone and is the very finest article used for breathing purposes. Out in the mountains, far from the haunts of man, the air is fresher than country butter. After a man has breathed in a few million cubic feet of it he can eat an ox, hoofs and all, and thinks nothing of taking a small sized bear across his knees and spanking him severely. But the air in a large city is of a much inferior quality. It has been used so much and has been mixed with so many kinds of odors and gases and has had to mingle with so many sex plays in the theatres and so much politics outside that it is no better for breathing purposes than so much tar. After a baby has spent a few months in a one-room tenement breathing the air after six or eight other people have been using it and the sun has been frying it until it has added like an egg, the said baby usually gives up in disgust and goes to a country where harp music is used in place of oxygen to sustain life. By long practice some people can insure themselves to air which has not been changed for weeks. However, the same people can usually find comfort in a shirt which hasn't been changed for a year. Both practices are uncleanly. Americans are very fond of fresh air and consume enormous quantities of it, not only at baseball games and at the seashore, but on golf courses and sleeping porches. A sleeping porch is now used as a specific for a large number of diseases and if its popularity grows, the carpenters will soon be riding on automobiles and the doctors will be working for fifty cents an hour. Fresh air strengthens the lungs, purifies the blood, steadies the temper, untangles the nerves, and braces up the morals. The air in the home should be changed at least once an hour and the air in the theatre should be changed immediately after each doubtful joke and suggestive song. If the audience could be changed too, it would have a great influence in uplifting the stage. Many a dull-hued gown owes its distinction to a vividly colored girdle.

Sherwood Magee.

Red McGhee

Red McGhee says: When home run hits you talk about it's almost sure beyond a doubt, you think o' Baker's drives. But there's another Sleetown gent whose bat has put a husky dent in m' n y pitchers' lives. An' that's Magee of Doolin's clan. Don't over-look him. He's some man! He's led the ol' league twice. When he steps up to crowd the plate a pitcher's like to aviate an' shake his knees like dice. One gyp that Magee can hit at will is Rube Marquard who hurls the pill at Muggsy's Polo grounds. Magee has banged the ol' horsehide so far that he's had time to ride the whole darn way around two times in one game when Marquard was in the box an' workin' hard to earn himself a win. But Marquard ain't the only boob. All pitchers suffer like the duke when Phillies' pride starts in.

In three years, leavin' this one out, Magee has made that four-base clout just 'thirty-two times, bo. I guess that battin's kind o' limp! I guess Magee's a hasbeen simp! I guess he's goin' slow! His first name?—Gee, I better tell you more about this hit-smith swell. It's Sherwood. Ain't that grand? An' when the bludgeon he don't wield he plays around in center field. Oh, yes, he bats right hand.

The Passing of The Sailing Ship.

Lloyd's Decision.

The secretary of Lloyd's announces that in future the special sign (s) to denote steamers will be discontinued in Lloyd's announcements and publications. The names of steamers will be shown without any distinguishing mark following, but the names of sailing vessels will be indicated by the sign (s.v.).

It is estimated, roughly, that steamship movements represent about 75 per cent. of the total movements of vessels, the remaining 25 per cent. being accounted for sailing ships.

Every year the number of large sailing ships decreases, for many are wrecked but few are built. The number of motor ships, which are indicated by the sign (m.s.), do not yet represent a notable proportion of the total movements.

While "s.s." meaning originally "screw steamer," is now out of date, such signs as "tw.-sc." (twin-screw) and "qr.-sc." (quadruple-screw) are very useful guides.

So would be a sign to indicate vessels driven by turbine machinery.

Crushed to Death Beneath Motor.

While attempting to board a motor express near the railway station yesterday afternoon, Patrick Connors, the fifteen year old son of Michael Connors, of Mundy Pond Road, was crushed beneath the wheels of the loaded vehicle and instantly killed. The accident occurred about 4 p.m. The express was in charge of William Sheehan, who had just started from the express office platform, when young Connors ran to the side of the car and attempted to board her. His foot slipped and he fell beneath the wheels, the wheels passing over his head and body crushing him to death instantly. He was tenderly lifted up and brought into the express office with blood gushing from his mouth in streams. Doctors Roberts and Anderson were on the scene shortly after the occurrence and tried to restore respiration but without result, as life had evidently passed out when the heavy wheel passed over the boy's body.

The accident was witnessed by a number of citizens and employees of the Company who were on the platform at the time of the unfortunate occurrence.

Rev. Fr. Sears was summoned from St. Patrick's and administered the rites of the Church. On him also devolved the sad duty of breaking the news of the tragedy to the boy's parents who were frantic with grief when informed of the sad occurrence. The doctors having pronounced death instantaneous the body was taken to Undertaker Martin's mortuary rooms where the remains were refined and conveyed to the home of the deceased's parents on Mundy Pond Road.

Young Connors was a promising lad and was one of the brightest messenger boys employed by the Company. He had been there only a few months, and was particularly noted for his cheerful disposition and willingness to do errands. To the sorrowing relatives and friends of the deceased young lad, the Telegram voices the general sympathy of the community on the untimely closing of such a promising young life.

Echoes of the Martin Fire.

The fire at Martin Hardware Co., last week did not penetrate into the New Martin Building adjoining, but the walls and floors were much discolored with smoke. The sample room of the Cleveland Trading Co., was deluged with water, but little or no damage was done, as the contents consisted principally of a large supply of Bear Brand Rubber Boots and Shoes. The Cleveland Trading Co., will not need to sell a Fire Sate, as water does not damage Bear Brand goods, but rather improves them. Next winter these excellent rubbers will be subjected to even severer tests than Wednesday's, but that they will prove their worth no one who has examined them doubts.

Look for the Bear—'Tis on every pair.

Cable News.

Special to Evening Telegram.
THE HAGUE, To-day.
The international opinion conference, which has been holding sessions for the past ten days, adjourned yesterday. The conference adopted a resolution requesting Dr. J. London, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, to obtain as soon as possible a ratification from adhering powers, necessary to put the convention, looking to the suppression of the opium traffic into force. This convention was drafted by the conference in 1912.

CALGARY, To-day.
The coal mines in Hosmer Fernie district are being permanently closed down. The town is being deserted by population, owing to the fact that coal mines at that point owned and operated by the C.P.R. have shut down for ever. The work of dismantling machinery is under way, merchants and property owners are panic stricken because their property is worthless without the mining industry, which alone supported the town. Unmarried men are already leaving Hosmer, the mines being a big disappointment from the start. Large sums spent in development failed to reveal coal in paying quantities. It was finally decided to close the mines, as operations could only be carried on at a great loss. Hosmer will be the second deserted town in that district. McRissay having been abandoned for similar reasons, after millions had been spent on it.

QUEBEC, To-day.
Because the wheel was put to port then without the authority of the officer in charge put hard aport when she had steering way, Butler Aspinall K.C. in the course of his address to the Empress of Ireland wreck Commission, contended the Stordstad was responsible for the disaster on May 29, in which 1914 people lost their lives. He further argued to find that the Empress starboarded her helm as assumed by the Stordstad. The legal battery would be to charge perjury on Captain Kendall, who had claimed no alteration took place in heading his ship, that she was stopped like a log in the water as indicated by signals heard on collision. Only while scoffing at the idea of Captain Kendall telling deliberate lie when he had recently faced death, did Aspinall become at all dramatic, for the rest was calm, coldly argumentative, relieving the tedium by touches of humor or cutting sarcasm. Why did the Empress founder so quickly after the collision? The evidence of Mr. Hillhouse, who had been called was. The ship had been designed to float with two compartments flooded, her side had been out and torrents of water had rushed in on one side. Had the compartment been filled evenly she would have floated. This gave her great list, and the weight of the Stordstad helped to drag her over. There was also a possibility of one of the boilers having been disturbed.

Cochrane St. Church.

To-morrow the congregation of the above Church which re-assembles in the College Hall, will be brought together under circumstances of great interest. At 9.30 in the Institute Room, the Conference Love Feast will take place, led by the ex-President, At 11 o'clock Rev. W. J. Smith, B.A., of the Dept. of Temperance and Moral Reform, is the preacher. Mr. Smith is an interesting speaker, and a large audience is expected. At night Rev. G. M. Campbell, D.D., Principal of the Mt. Allison Ladies' College, is the preacher. At a banquet held in Halifax some 175 weeks ago, Dr. Campbell was hailed as one of the foremost orators of Canada. To those who attend therefore, a feast of fine things will be given. The congregation is asked to re-assemble in full force for to-morrow's services.—Com.

MASSACRE OF CAWNPORE 1857.
When the Sepoy mutiny broke out in India a small garrison surrendered to Nana Sahib and his Sepoys on condition that they should be allowed to retire safely to Allahabad, but on marching to the river side to embark, the men were slaughtered and the women and children carried back to Cawnpore, and their fate on July 15th is another story of horror.
HARRIET MARTINEAU died 1876, aged 74. A writer of great power and noble purpose. Some of her novels are still read, and her "Tales of the Poor Laws" excited much sympathy at the time of their appearance.

JUNE 28.

Days Past—178 To Come—186.
JOHN WESLEY born 1703. The founder of the great religious movement of the "Pious Methodists," the son of an Anglican clergyman and himself taking orders in 1725. His own open-air preaching was powerful in the extreme, his energy and depth of purpose inspiring, and his organizing ability exceptional.
HENRY VIII born 1491. During the early years of his reign he was popular but afterwards he became exceedingly cruel, and his desire to have a legitimate male heir led him to marry six wives, behead two and divorce two. His reign is marked by the ecclesiastical struggle which led to the separation of the English Church from Rome.
ROUSSEAU born 1712. Though his works contained much that was at variance with convention, he studied social questions with great ardour, giving to France a new field of thought, and laid down principles of government and conduct which bore fruit in the French Revolution.

JOSEPH JOACHIM born 1821. Great German violinist who came to England in 1844, and for many years was the heart and soul of a splendid series of classical quartets and concertos and the greatest violinist of his time.
LORD RAGLAN died 1855, aged 67. A great soldier, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in the Crimea.
I think we cannot too strongly attack superstition, which is the disturber of society; nor too highly respect genuine religion, which is the support of it.

R. C. School Report.

We have before us the School Report of R. C. Schools. Among other comments, Dr. Burke makes some interesting observations on Technical Education, and tells of his visit to schools on the other side of the "Atlantic." He expresses the opinion that if we wish to keep our right place in the world's markets, "we shall have to give special attention to the education of our fishermen and the development of our fisheries." He regrets that he was unable to visit the Fishing High School of Denmark, as it was closed at the time of his visit, and he could not afford to wait for its re-opening.
"These High or Folke Schools of Denmark have made her, and I regret I have not sufficient space at my disposal at present to say more about them. Suffice it to say, that from a professional point of view, I am sorry that circumstances did not permit my remaining a little longer amidst the progressive educational atmosphere of some of these older civilizations, for I venture to say that many points of information, and many hints may be gleaned from these countries, which, if suitably adapted and properly applied in our own country, would be of great and lasting benefit to our people. In fact, judging from what I saw during my short visit, I am convinced that it would be advisable to send some competent person or persons, abroad for, at least, six months or a year, in order to study the educational and other conditions in the world's great fishing centres. It may be added for the sake of clearness that 'competent person' in the preceding paragraph does not of necessity mean either a successful or defeated candidate for the House of Assembly."

Police Court.

A drunk and disorderly was fined $2 or 7 days.
A man summoned by another for assault was fined $5 or 14 days.

The Bay Bulls trap fishery case occupied the attention of the court this forenoon, and judging from the progress being made will not be concluded until the trapping season is well advanced.

Excursion to Caplin Bay

The garden party at Caplin Bay, which will be held on Monday, July 6th, promises to be one of the most enjoyable outings of the season. Preparations are now being made for the event and the Old Favorites' Club will hold an excursion in connection therewith. The proceeds of the garden party will be devoted to the funds for the erection of a new church at Caplin Bay. It is expected that a large number of persons of the city will take in the excursion.

(Under the distinguished patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Lady Davidson.)

Preliminary Notice!

This act of kindness will linger for a long time in the hearts of those whose privilege it was to attend and will be appreciated by the large constituency whom they represent.
EVENING.
At 7 o'clock a Conference Banquet was held in the Sunday School Room of George Street Church. The good ladies certainly did make one feel at home, and I am sure that they merit the thanks of every member present. After the report Rev. J. W. Bartlett took the chair and an exceptionally good programme was carried out; everyone seemed to be at his best.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure.
Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

The House met at 3.30, the Lord Bishop, as President, said the opening office.

There were in attendance 45 clergy and 15 laymen.

The minutes being read and confirmed, the Hon. Robert Watson gave notice that on to-morrow he would move for the appointment of a committee to select names for recommendation to the Synod to serve on Standing Committees for the ensuing biennial period.

Rev. G. Chamberlain's Bill to amend Cap. I, Section 6, was read the first time.

The Rev. G. R. Godden moved the following Resolution: "That this Synod desires to put on record an expression of its profound sympathy with the people of Canada in the loss which they have sustained through the recent disaster to the 'Empress of Ireland'; and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to H.R.H. the Governor-General of Canada.

Mr. Godden said that, when the great Sealing Disaster came upon us last spring, Canada gave us her fullest sympathy and demonstrated it in a most emphatic and practical way by her pecuniary assistance. The people of Newfoundland should never forget the generosity of the Government and people of Canada.

Mr. J. W. Withers, who seconded the resolution, said that "Every trouble or misfortune which befalls humanity had some compensation. Out of this disaster had already come some improvement for the safeguarding of life at sea. This boon has been bought for us at a great cost of life, and our hearts go out to the bereaved ones in deepest sympathy."

The Resolution was passed by acclamation.

Mr. H. W. LeMessurier moved the following Resolution with reference to the Sealing Disaster:

"Resolved—That this Synod offers its deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and friends of those who lost their lives in the late disaster to the sealing steamers 'Newfoundland' and 'Southern Cross'."

This was also passed by acclamation.

Canon White presented the Report of the Synod Committee on Temperance. The Revs. T. E. Loder, J. Prescott, G. S. Chamberlain, A. Clayton, Messrs. LeMessurier and Whately, joined in the discussion.

The Report was adopted. Canon White moved the adoption of the Report of the Standing Committee on Education. As the hour had arrived at which the House adjourns, the debate on the Report was adjourned until the evening session.

The House resumed at 7.30. The Lord Bishop said the opening prayers. On the roll being called, 48 clergy and 36 lay members answered to their names.

The Rev. W. J. R. Higitt gave notice that he will on to-morrow move a resolution of sympathy with the Welsh Church in her distress.

The Rev. T. E. Loder gave notice that he will on to-morrow move a series of resolutions dealing with temperance.

The House went into Committee to consider the adoption of the Report of the Committee on Cap. XVII of the Constitution and Rules.

Canon White, Canon Bolt, Revs. A. G. Bayly, G. H. Feild, A. E. Tuik, A. E. Butler, J. O. Britnell and Sir Jos. Outerbridge took part in the discussion.

Rev. Frank Smart moved that the House rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

The adjourned debate on the Report of the Standing Committee on Education was resumed.

The Revs. Canon White, Bolt, and Noel took part in the discussion. This Committee administers the Building Loans' Fund entrusted to it by the Government in December, 1909. In 1912 the committee sought the co-operation of the other large denominations in approaching the Government with a view of obtaining an increased grant for Education.

On March 15th of that year, the following deputation waited upon the Government, and presented a memorial dealing with educational needs:

(a) Rev. Dr. Kitchin, Rev. Dr. Whelan, Dr. V. P. Burke, T. Hanrahan, Esq., M.A., representing the Roman Catholic body;

(b) Rev. Dr. Curtis, Rev. Dr. Fenwick, C. F. Steer, Esq., John Leamon, Esq., representing the Methodist body;

(c) Rev. Canon Bolt, M.A., Hon. John Harvey, D. M. Browning, Esq., B.A., representing the Church of England.

The increased grant sought for Training of Teachers, General Grant, Technical Education and Smudries was $61,000.

At the next session of the Legislature only $15,000 was added to the Educational Grants. The Committee regrets that the recommendations of the deputation have not, so far as the committee is aware, received the attention to which it considers them entitled.

No Government takes such an interest in Education as the importance of the subject demands. Money can be spent liberally in other directions but cannot be afforded for Education.

The debate adjourned, and the House rose at 10 o'clock, His Lordship the Bishop pronouncing the Benediction.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Mr. Arthur French, formerly of this town, but for several years working with an electrical company at Lynn, arrived here on Monday to spend a few weeks with his mother, Mrs. Wm. Webber, and other friends.

Caplin are now fairly plentiful about here, but codfish is not nearly so plentiful as our fishermen would wish.

Now that we have an up to date post office, we hope that some of our shopkeepers will arrange with the P.M.G. to sell stamps. At present when the office is closed there is no place to purchase a stamp. Even dinner hour, the time when many workmen post their letters a stamp cannot be secured. Of course we are not finding fault, but suggesting a convenience for the public.

The schooners Laddie and Bertha were let off the dock this forenoon and the ketch Pandora taken up, as she was found to be leaking.

The sch. Elizabeth, Capt. John Keefe, which left here on Thursday last, arrived at Conche on Sunday.

Mr. A. J. Goodland, Principal of the C. of E. High School, left for St. John's on Monday, to attend Synod. Wednesday last being our first general holiday, many disciples of Walton went countrywards. No big catches were secured, although one man told us he had quite a number, and many of them would weigh a pound. No doubt, and still many more would weigh two pounds.

Regatta Meeting.

Another enthusiastic meeting of the Regatta Committee was held at Wood's West End Restaurant last night and a considerable amount of business was gone through.

President Hiscock was in the chair and the other gentlemen present were: Vice-Chairman Higgins, Secretary Noonan, Treasurer Ellis, Levi Chafe, C. W. Ryan, N. Andrews, J. P. Crotty, J. Perez, W. J. Martin, J. Day, E. W. Taylor, N. J. Vinnicombe, T. D. Carew, J. Day, P. Hanley, R. Dowden, T. J. Poran, W. J. Crotty.

Secretary Noonan read the minutes of the last meeting and after they were confirmed the President announced that acting upon a motion made at the last meeting, Vice-President Higgins and himself had called on His Excellency Sir Walter E. Davidson and asked his patronage for the day. The delegation was received most cordially by His Excellency, who after gladly consenting to the request, asked as a special favour that his name be added to the Committee as an active member. He intimated that the most enjoyable day he ever spent was at last Regatta. In closing he assured the delegation that he would do all in his power for the success of the forthcoming Regatta. The report from His Excellency was received with much applause.

The Secretary then read letters of thanks from the following honorary members who will act as judges:—

Right Hon. the Premier, Hon. John Harvey, Hon. John Harris, Dr. Rendell, W. D. Reid, H. D. Reid, Hon. J. Anderson, J. H. Monroe, R. C. Smith, J. Jardine, J. Syme.

The President reported that the cups and medals had been ordered, following a meeting of the committee in charge.

The Treasurer then acquainted the meeting that he had a conversation with Capt. March, of the Methodist Guards regarding the race boat "Guard" and was informed by that gentleman that the owners were only too willing to give the use of the boat to responsible parties for Regatta day provided that the boat would be returned in good condition. Thereupon Councillor C. W. Ryan and W. J. Higgins, M. H. A., the former assuming the initiative, as private individuals undertook to make all arrangements and give the necessary guarantee.

Mr. Levi Chafe intimated that he thought similar arrangements could be effected with the G. L. B. Boat Club as to the securing of the race boats Blue Peter and Red Cross with the understanding that proper care and attention be given to the boats, Messrs. Chafe and Taylor were then appointed to consult with Lieut.-Col. Rendell on the matter.

The question of four-oared races was introduced and elicited an animated discussion, but the majority of opinion was that the idea was unwise.

The Brigade Swimming Race was struck off the programme.

The rules governing the Brigade Race were amended and crews outside the city, representing a branch of any city brigade will be allowed to compete.

The Committee for Regatta Day were then appointed as follows:—

Band Stand and Tents—C. W. Ryan and J. W. Morris.

Pond—Capt. English, N. J. Vinnicombe, A. G. Williams, P. J. Hanley.

Programmes and Rosettes—W. J. Higgins, C. J. Ellis, P. J. Hanley.

Saints Draw With C. E. I.

3 GOALS EACH.

One of the fastest and most exciting football matches of the season was witnessed on St. George's Field last evening, from which the Saints and C. E. I. retired with equal honors, each team having scored 3 goals.

The game opened with the Saints defending the western goal, and favored with the wind it seemed as if they had a complete walk over, as the C. E. I. were repeatedly called on to save, while they rarely got beyond centre field. The first goal for the Saints was scored by Dick after about 20 minutes of fast play, and Irvine and Kerr landed two others in quick succession, so that when the whistle sounded for half time the Saints had 3 goals to their credit and the C. E. I. none.

SECOND HALF.

After the usual rest the teams changed ends, and the second half changed the aspect of the game. The C. E. I. from the start put up a splendid game and it was not long before Drover had landed No. 1 for his team.

The fans cheered lustily for the C. E. I. and after a splendid bit of combination the leather was again brought into the danger territory, and through the exertions of Hunt and Hartley, who played a dashing game, No. 2 goal was safely deposited within the twines. At this juncture enthusiasm ran high and the fans leaned forward and watched with eager expectancy for the equalizer, which was sent in by Churchill a few minutes before the final whistle sounded. The last few minutes of play proved very exciting, as the C. E. I. made several attempts to score but without effect. When the final whistle sounded the score stood 3 goals each.

Mr. E. S. Piment refereed the game and the players were:—

Saints—Ross, goal; Dick, A. Barnes, backs; Burns, D. Stevenson, Innis, halves; Robertson, Kerr, Irvine, Ewing, Evans, forwards.

C. E. I.—Marshall, goal; Hussey, L. Stick, backs; Drover, Fox, R. Stick, halves; Churchill, Jupp, Hunt, Hartley, Auckinleck, forwards.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

The Saints played better than in their former games, though some of their forwards should pay more attention to the off-side rule.

The C. E. I. had the field to themselves during the second half.

The attendance was not as great as on other occasions, but the excitement was greater.

C. C. C. Boat Club.

The members of the C.C.C. Boat Club held a meeting last night, at which Chairman P. F. Collins presided. The applications of the L.S.P.U. and B.I.S. for the use of the new race boat in the Laborers' and Football races on Regatta Day were granted. The East End Truckmen and Royal Stores Mercantile crews will also row this boat which is expected to be entered in every race for the day. The wharf at the Lakeside is now completed, and on Monday next the Myrtle and Mary may be had for practice. Improvements on the boat house will be made during next week.

Too Much Talk.

Full many a merchant, in his gloomy store, in sorrow sits, and wonders as he weeps, why people come to buy his goods no more, those goods piled up in dusty, musty heaps. "I wonder how," in agony he moans, "I've got myself, apparently, in Dutch? Few men come here to spend their shining bones—" the answer is, he always talked too much. "I wonder why," a lonely housewife sighs, "my husband stays from home whenever he can? He used to say that I had starry eyes, that I was fashioned on the goddess plan. And now the love that once he did profess seems crumpled, sore, and hobbling on a crutch: what have I done to earn this dire distress?" The answer is, she always talked too much. The care-worn man, who's searching for a job, drags on his feet in weariness and woe: "I wonder why," he murmurs with a sob, "misfortune dogs me everywhere I go? To earn success I've striven and I've strained, and only sorrow do I seem to meet; my joys are lost as soon as they are gained, and on my uppers I must tread the street. Am I a Jonah, or the sport of fate? I hoodoo all, and everything I touch; why must I beg for handouts at the gates—" The answer is, he always talked too much.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office,—its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modernly and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.—ap17,14

Big Cargo of Hard Pine

ARRIVES FOR FURNESS WITHYPIER.

The S. S. Clara Menig, Capt. Witt arrived here from Gull Port, via Louisbourg at 4.30 a.m. to-day, with a cargo of hard pine to be used in the construction of the Furness Withy Pier. The passage from Gullport, occupied 14 days, and the ship experienced fine weather until nearing the Newfoundland coast when a dense fog was met, which retarded the ship considerably during the past 2 days.

The Clara Menig is 1005 tons net, and has on board a cargo of over 600 "Standards," a standard consisting of 1898 superficial feet which makes the cargo approximately a million and a quarter feet.

The ship belongs to Rostock, Germany and is under charter to the Donaldson Steamship Co. of which A. Harvey and Co. are the Agents.

This is the first time the ship has been here and the crew complain of the cold felt when nearing the coast. When the ship sailed from Gull Port the heat was almost unbearable.

The Clara is continually plying in the timber trade being specially laid out for that cargo. After discharging here she will probably sail direct for England.

The Portia left Placentia at 3.30 a.m. to-day, going west.
The Prospero sails for the northward at 10 a.m. Wednesday next.

Cable News.

Special to the Evening Telegram.
MONTREAL, To-day.
It is stated an inquiry into the collision by which the Storstad sank the Empress, will be begun in Montreal to-day by the Norwegian Consul in this city. It is not proposed to place blame, but merely to get information. Only the Storstad's crew will be the witnesses.

LONDON, To-day.
The effect of militancy on public sentiment may be seen by the fact that over 58,000 adherents reported at yesterday's meeting of the National anti-suffrage League. Earl Curzon, who presided, claimed that the anti-suffrage cause stood in a stronger position to-day than it did for the past twenty years. If outrages be continued, he said, he was sure public opinion would demand that the convicted women pay the full penalty for their crimes.

LONDON, To-day.
The Irish Volunteer movement has spread to England, a branch having just been formed here, the majority of recruits being Irish employees in the Civil Service. Drilling practice is being conducted in a German gymnasium which flies the German flag. This fact lends some significance to a story appearing in the Nation, a Radical Weekly, to the effect that a report on the military character and the arrangements of the Ulster volunteers have been prepared for Kaiser by specially qualified officials.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percie Johnson would provide for you this desired security and at small expense. Have you enough insurance?

Here and There.

ALLAN LINE.—The R.M.S. Pomeranian sails from Liverpool for here on July 1st. As the Monaghan and Sardinian are both outward bound, the Pomeranian will now be the first Allan Liner to arrive.

SARDINIAN SAILED.—The R. M. S. Sardinian sailed for Glasgow at 10.30 a.m. to-day, taking one additional passenger in saloon, Mr. T. H. Dean and 3 additional in steerage.

All That's Love-ly.

IS IT ENOUGH?

The world is trying an experiment. It is trying to conduct its daily life abstracted from Love. Love stands aside and watches. Trade has said its first word and its last word. Are you satisfied? Do you feel as if you have your just return? As if all your sacrifice and work and slavery has had its just return? You have the full return of the profit system. Is the return enough? Does the return of the profit system feed your spirit? You have collected all that the world owes you. But have you collected Love?

—Horace Traubel.

THE LANE.

"How far will you go with me, my love? To the stile, or the bridge, or the great oak-tree? The lane is a lonely and fearsome place. And there's no one journeying there but me."

She smiled at the stile with a sweet disdain; She scoffed at the bridge and the great oak-tree; And looked me full in the eyes and said, "I will go to the end of the lane with thee."

Then I loved her anew with a strange fierce love. As high as the stars and as deep as the sea; She would share my heaven and share my hell! She would go to the end of the lane with me.

—Richard Wightman.

I SAW TWO CLOUDS.

I saw two clouds at morning, Tinged by the rising sun. And in the dawn they floated on. And mingled into one; I thought that morning cloud was blessed, It moved so sweetly to the west.

I saw two summer currents Flow smoothly to their meeting. And join in their course, with silent force. In peace each other greeting; Calm was their course through banks of green. While dimpling eddies played between.

Such be your gentle motion, Till life's last pulse shall beat; Like summer's beam and summer's stream. Float on, in joy, to meet A calmer sea, where storms shall cease. A purer sky, where all is peace.

—Brainard.

MUSIC.

Oh Music! Thou (of Beauty born) Art herald of an age to be. When discord shall give place to peace. And harshness unto harmony!

Oh Music! Thou (the voice of Love) Art to all canst sympathy impart. Thou hast a note for every nerve Which centres in the human heart.

How grand the task, oh Music! that To knowledge, Love and truth wert given. To make this sorrow-stricken earth As bright and beautiful as Heaven!

—Fred B. Wood.

SILENT LOVE.

You say I love not, 'cause I do not play Still with your curls, and kiss the time away. You blame me, too, because I can't devise Some sport to please those babies in your eyes.

By Love's Religion, I must here confess it. The most I love when I the least express it. Small griefs find tongues, full casks are ever found. To give (if any, yet) but little sound.

Deep waters noiseless are, and this we know. That chiding streams betray small depth below. So, when love speechless is, she doth express. A depth in love and that depth bottomless. Now, since my love is tongueless, know me such Who speak but little 'cause I love so much.

—Robert Herrick.

SONNET.

Trust me, I have not earned your dear rebuke, I love as you would have me, God the most; Would love not you, but Him, must one be lost. Nor with Lot's wife cast back a faithless look, Unready to forego what I forsook. This say I, having counted up the cost; This, though I be the feeblest of God's host; The sorriest sheep Christ shepherds with His crook. Yet while I love my God the most, I deem That I can never love you overmuch; I love Him more, so let me love you too. Yea, as I apprehend it, love is such I cannot love you if I love not Him. I cannot love Him if I love not you.

—Rosetti.

A MAN—AND A MAID.

A bachelor sat in his chair—and he thought—

And he made up his mind that he wouldn't be caught. And yet he wanted to do what he ought. And he thought, and he thought, and he thought.

A little maid sat in her chair—and she thought— And she made up her mind that she wouldn't be caught; And yet she wanted to do what she ought.

And she thought, and she thought, and she thought.

A bachelor sat in a chair—and he thought— And a little maid sat by him—just as she ought— For, alas! they forgot about not being caught. But they thought— And they thought— And they thought.

SOME OPINIONS.

No man ever lived a right life who had not been chastened by a woman's love, strengthened by her courage, and guided by her discretion.

—Ruskin.

A foolish world is prone to laugh in public at what in private it renders as one of the highest impulses of our nature, namely, Love.

—Longfellow.

If you are not ready to go to a desert island with the man of your choice, then there is something wrong.

—Katherine Burrill.

All the strength, and all the arts of men, are measured by, and founded upon, their reverence for the passion, and their guardianship of the purity, of Love.

—Ruskin.

THE CHANGE.

Have you ever noticed the change it makes In a woman's face And her heart and her life, that were cold and dull And slightly inclined to common-places. When love shines on them? How there breaks Over her nature a wave of gold. Bringing out beauty unknown before. Mellowing, widening more and more. Lifting her up till her eyes behold Ever new blooms for her hands to call. So she and her life grow beautiful! O, there's never a woman, east or west. But must live in Love's sunshine To live her best.

—Clara Bronson.

LOVE.

Love is the love on life's dark cloud. It is the morning and evening star. It shines on the babe and sheds its radiance on the quiet tomb. It is the mother of art; inspirer of poet, patriot and philosopher. It is the air and light of every heart; builder of every home; kinder of every fire on the hearth; it was the first dress of immortality. It fills the world with melody, for music is the voice of love. Love is the magician, the enchanter that charges worthless things to joy and makes right royal queens and kings of common clay. It is the perfume of that wonderful flower, the heart, and without that sacred passion, that divine swoon, we are less than beasts, but with it—earth is Heaven and we are gods.

—Robert G. Ingersoll.

A REVERIE.

It was only a winsome way she had. As there in the twilight gray She smiled on me till my heart was glad.

In the glad, old-fashioned way; And fainter far than echoes are. Was the touch of a tremulous tone. That round me fell with the magic spell. Of a hand that clasped my own.

The rough old river, close to our feet. Ran on with curse and fret. As our love once ran on its way to meet.

And be lost in a vain regret; My darkened room shook out its gloom. Into folds of a fair delight. Till overhead was canopied. By only the stars of night.

She flung me a shred of broken song. She fluttered where faith has suffered wrong. From doubts in the human breast; And here and there and everywhere. The world bent down to wait. With me, the sign of a form divine. And the click of a cottage gate.

Ah! Fate, you cannot hide her face. And fair form from me! For the soul is careless of time and space. And master of things to be; And while you would have my spirit. As I sit in the twilight gray. She smiles on me till my heart is glad. In the glad, old-fashioned way.

BONNIE WEE THING.

Bonnie wee thing! Bonnie wee thing! Lovely wee thing! Wert thou mine. I would wear thee in my bosom. Lest my jewel I should tinge. Wistfully I look, and languish. In that bonnie face o' thine; And my heart it stounds wi' anguish. Lest my wee thing be na mine.

—Rosetti.

To adore thee is my duty. Goddess o' this soul o' mine! Bonnie wee thing, cannie wee thing. Lovely wee thing, wert thou mine. I would wear thee in my bosom. Lest my jewel I should tinge.

—Robert Burns.

MY TRUE-LOVE HATH MY HEART.

My true-love hath my heart, and I have his. By just exchange one to the other given; I hold his dear, and mine he cannot miss. There never was a better bargain driven! My true-love hath my heart, and I have his.

—T. Moore.

Life's gifts. When I grow gray and men shall say to me, "What was the worth of living, truly told? Lo! thou hast lived thy life out; thou art old; Thou hast gathered fruit from many a green-leaved tree. And kissed Love's lips by many a summer sea. And twined soft hands in locks of shining gold. But all thy days are dead days now, behold! Life passes onward,—what is life to thee? Then will I answer,—as thy gracious eyes, Love, gleam upon me from dim far-off skies: "Life had its endless, deathless charm,—and still! That charm weaves rapture round me at my will. Life has its glory,—for I have seen thee; And roses, and June sunsets,—and the sea."

—George Barlow.

BELIEVE ME.

Believe me, if all those endearing young charms Which I gaze on so fondly to-day. Were to change by to-morrow, and fleet in my arms. Like fairy-gifts fading away. Thou wouldst still be adored, as this moment thou art. Let thy loveliness fade as it will; And around the dear ruin each wish of my heart Would entwine itself verdantly still.

—Sir Philip Sidney.

HAPPINESS: Man's View and Woman's.

(Bibby's Annual.)

He: I wonder which of us is right? He: You need not, I am right this time. Life takes much away; but she gives far value in exchange. As to that there can surely be no question among rational folk.

She: Ah, you say that because you are a man. To a woman there can be no compensations for the loss of her youth.

He: There can be, and there are. The art of growing old beautifully is a great and difficult one; but it is not beyond the compass of mortality. And sex does not enter into the problem.

She: How can one grow old beautifully when old age is only another name for the loss of beauty?

He: A common fallacy which every artist worthy of the name would certainly repudiate. We are not discerning prettiness but beauty, and the two qualities are not merely distinct but incompatible.

She: Surely what we call beauty differs only in degree from what we call prettiness?

He: On the contrary, the difference between them is absolute and irremediable. Ugliness itself has more in common with beauty than the smooth insignificance of the pretty. For beauty is the outward show of spiritual nobility; and what we call ugliness often conveys a hint of the heroic. Tell an artist that his picture is "very pretty" and you have made an enemy for life; tell him that you think it ugly and he will forgive your lack of understanding. When a woman renounces emulation of the chocolate-box leer and the patent-medicine simper they will all become beautiful and happy.

She: Happy, too? Surely in regard to happiness we are entirely at the mercy of circumstance. We attain to it or we do not attain to it; that is all there is to said about it.

He: I hold, on the contrary, that it comes to all who know how to command it. That is to say, to all who live, and to none who merely vegetate.

She: Substitute the word suffering for happiness and I should entirely agree with you.

He: I have no objection. For, of course, only those who are willing to suffer deserve or need expect to be happy.

She: One would almost suppose that you considered happiness and suffering identical.

He: I won't go quite so far as that. They often co-exist and blend inseparably, especially where their higher, more spiritual, forms are concerned. On the other hand, there are degrees and forms of suffering which, for the time being, monopolize consciousness. But these are extreme and exceptional cases. Physical suffering, carried beyond a certain point, becomes destructive, and is obviously to be avoided as a wasteful form of experience. But even that has, no doubt, its compensations.

She: Compensations! Compensations! I am tired of the word. Of course I read Emerson's Essay in my girlhood and admired it, as all young people do. But as one gets older one begins to mistrust these apologies for the ugly facts of existence. And then, I am a woman, and all women are realists at heart. To us happiness is happiness, and suffering suffering, and we want the one, and hate the other. He: And yet you have a talent for suffering which far excels ours; and what we have a gift for we can't but enjoy doing.

She: Another paradox! No, I refuse to accept your philosophy. It is a gospel of indifference. Even you have admitted the existence of un-mixed suffering.

He: Did I admit that? I am not sure that I really believe in it; but let that pass.

She: Well, at any rate, you admitted that some suffering excludes the possibility of simultaneous happiness. But I maintain that your whole view is morbid and mischievous. Happiness and misery are not one and the same, but contradictory conditions. If the world is to be in any way improved we must strive after the one and avoid the other.

He: Oh, as to that I agree with you, of course. All depends, though, on the spirit in which we conduct the struggle. We must not be mere pot-hunters, but genuine athletes. We must value the race for its own sake, not for that of the prize.

She: Personally I want the prize very much, and consider it quite worth having.

He: Yes, but all may enjoy the race, though only one may win the prize.

She: Do the losers enjoy a race? I very much doubt it. You forget that the prize of our race was to be happiness. So if there can only be one winner—

He: No, in my race there is a consolation prize for all genuine athletes.

She: Oh, you men! you idealists! Black shall be white, and white shall be black; and nothing really matters! What dreamers you are; and what children!

He: Yes; are we not? But need you mind so much—if it keeps us happy?

She: I do mind, because, by your own showing, it also keeps you (and us, who strongly object) unhappy.

He: Suppose now that we make some attempt to define our terms. What do you understand by the word happiness?

She: What can be easier? I understand having what I want, doing what I like, being with the person I love.

He: And if all these conditions were fulfilled how long do you suppose that they would keep you happy?

She: As long as they continued. How otherwise?

He: Because by security of possession they would inevitably become a mere matter of course. The moment you have what you want you cease to want it. The moment you begin to do what you like you begin to hate doing it. The person you love best today may have to take a back seat in your affections to-morrow. Your definition of happiness is not a wise one. It places it and you entirely at the mercy of circumstance.

She: How then do you propose to amend it? The fault, if any, is not in my definition, but in the nature of the thing defined, and of things in general.

He: Ah, that is precisely where we differ. I should certainly amend your definition. Happiness is an art, not a mere possession. It is the art of valuing what you have, of liking what you must do, of loving those with whom you must live. She: You art of slavery and stagnation! Or, at all events, a narrow and limiting conception of human activity. To value what one has may be right as far as it goes, but it seems to me ignoble to rest content in a state of privation and penury. To make the best of ungenial work is one thing; to decline to keep a sharp look-out for every opportunity of exchanging it for work that one prefers is quite another. As to your last requirement, I refuse to take it seriously. Those with whom one has to live have claims upon one, certainly; but love is not among them. Love never has been and never can be subject to the will. It comes or goes unbidden. I confess that we women are adepts in the art of counterfeiting where love is concerned. We can command the semblance but never the reality. And the same can be said about happiness.

He: You must not interpret it too literally. I cannot go all the way with Epicurus or Marcus Aurelius. I admire and sympathize with their ideal, but I do not fully share it.

She: I may have compassion on your feminine ignorance and tell me what their ideal was.

He: It was much the same as what Nietzsche calls Amor Fati. Epicurus says, for example, "Seek not to have things happen as you choose them but rather choose them to happen as they do." The counsel of the Emperor is almost identical with that of the slave: "But yourself frankly into the hands of Fate," said Aurelius, "and let her spin you out what fortune she pleases." He goes on to say that the moment we refuse to imagine ourselves hurt or aggrieved we become impregnable. Suppose that our flesh be hacked, burnt, putrefied, or mortified, such things may happen to anybody—to the best or the worst of mankind—and cannot, therefore, be god or evil in themselves. The universe as a whole is incapable of injury; and we must make its point of view our own.

She: What sublime folly! And do you agree that, because it may happen to anybody, good or bad, to be tortured or mutilated, such things are neither good nor bad in themselves?

He: No, but I do think that the spirit in which we undergo them can mitigate the worst evils in a marvellous way.

She: That is either a truism or a sophistry. I am not certain which. Probably it is both.

He: I gather that you do not believe that unjust suffering can be good for the soul?

She: As to that I don't know—oh greatly care; but I do know that it would not be good for mine.

He: Surely the consensus of the world's best minds all through the ages is dead against you there. Study the lives of great men and women, and find, if you can, a single one who has escaped martyrdom.

She: That proves the cruelty of the world to its benefactors, but it does not convince me of the utility of martyrdom.

He: How can strength be developed or manifested otherwise than by the strife against obstacles?

She: By their conquest and removal. Your idea of a hero is that of one who is slain while in the act of leading a forlorn hope; mine is that of a conqueror who lives to wear the crown of laurels, and to fight another day.

He: But it has often been said—and is there not only too much truth in the saying?—that failure is the universal destiny of mankind. Consider again what you know of the

He: I did not say sublimated away—merely sublimated. She: I am glad you recognize the distinction. It is vital to my point of view, which is that heaven is to be brought down to earth, not earned by its remuneration. No doubt, you are quite right in anticipating that the growth of human desires will constantly outstrip our power of removing the obstacles to their fulfillment, since it ensures the continuous renewal of that state of emotional tension upon which you make the development of the will depend.

He: Quite so! It seems, then, that we have reached something very like agreement. We are agreed that pain, which is only another name for the emotional tension you speak of, is a necessary condition for the attainment of any happiness worthy of the name. We are agreed that happiness is not something complete and ultimate, but merely a resting place from which to set out in pursuit of some higher and more difficult form of achievement. That being so, I do not see that our points of view are in any way incompatible.

She: But why am I irrational in believing that happiness may just as well come to us easily and spontaneously as by sweat and anguish? As a free gift, not a mere good-conduct prize. All the best things in life appear to me apt to come as free gifts. They are like the sun that shines as well on the just as on the unjust. Or they should be so; and, no doubt, some day will be so.

He: And in the meantime? She: In the mean time we must make the best of life in a world that does not believe in happiness, and consequently makes its attainment by those who do well-nigh impossible.

He: And how are we to do that? She: By resolutely refusing to admit the word impossible to our vocabulary, or to entertain the possibility of defeat or failure. We must will success whole-heartedly and unreservedly. To do less is to court defeat in advance, and so to deserve it.

He: Have it your own way! The last word is your inalienable prerogative. And, besides, I suspect—and also hope—that you are about right in your view of happiness, and that I am quite wrong about it.

But look! the cruiser we saw starting out this morning is on her way back to her moorings; the sun is not far from the horizon; and the breeze up here has a distinct foretaste of night in it. Shall we follow the cruiser's example?

She: Well, . . . if we must, we must. Men are such restless creatures!—Though not devoid of generous impulses. Lend me your hands then. . . . Thanks! I am quite at your service.

Magic "Nerviline Cures." Toothache "Earache."

IT RELIEVES EVERY EXTERNAL PAIN.

Cures Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Tight Chest and Hoarseness.

It's when sickness came at night, when you are far from the druggist or the doctor, that's when you need Nerviline most. Experienced mothers are never without it. One of the children may have toothache. With old-time Nerviline—a sleepless night for the entire household. With Nerviline the pain is relieved quickly. It may be earache, perhaps a stiff neck, or one of the kiddies coughing with a bad chest cold. Nothing can give quicker results than vigorous rubbing with this old-time family remedy.

Nerviline is too useful, too valuable to be without. For lumbago, lame back, sciatica or neuralgia there is no liniment with half of Nerviline's power to penetrate and ease the pain.

As a family safeguard, as something to ward off sickness and to cure the minor ills that will occur in every family, to cure pain anywhere, you can find nothing to compare with old-time Nerviline, which for forty years has been the most widely used family remedy in the Dominion. The most economical size is the large 50c. family size bottle, small trial size 25c. All dealers sell Nerviline.

AN APOLOGY.—I do hereby certify that I wish to make an apology for a false report which I circulated concerning the character of Miss Gertrude Saint, of 68 New Gower Street, St. John's, Nfld. CHARLES ROGERS, 88 George Street.
