CHAPTER VII
AT SEA.

"Oh, deeply beautiful blue, soft as a snake at sleep in summer's sun. How many a man has found in you the end of this world's weary run!

Leaving Grace at Dale, and the captain on his way to it, we must return to our outcast.

For the first few days the novelty of his position drove something of his sad reflections to the wind that filled the vessel's sails.

We have said that Laurence Harman was strong, and it was only this strength that carried him successfully through the duties he had undertaken. He knew nothing of seamanship, and had never seen a vessel before; but he was quick of sight, and could climb the tall masts and hoist the heavy sails as well as the best man on board after a few days' practice.

This strength and tact made him a favorite with the crew, who at first were rather inclined to resent his silence and moodiness. They could not but respect a man who never refused to give them a helping hand or relieve them of a watch, although he never addressed a genial word to them or even smiled.

The captain was a little puzzled to "make him out," as he said, and on the fourth day, meeting him as he was cutting a rope on deck, he stopped and asked him a few questions.

"How are you getting on, my man?"

"Thank you, sir," replied Laurence, as we must now call him, "very well."

"Getting into the way of the rounds, eh?"

Laurence nodded.

"Yes," he said, "as well as I can hope."

"That's right," said the captain, cheerily, striking him on the back. "If there's anything wrong, anything you want, come to me for it, will you?"

Laurence thanked him gratefully, and the captain passed on, wondering who and what the "landman" was.

After eight days' fair sailing the "Mary Ann" met with contrary winds that compelled her to tack. These contrary winds grew into a storm, and in the middle of the night all hands were ordered up to reef and make tight.

It was a perilous task, but the men, used to risking their lives on an average of once a week, flew cheerfully to the masts and climbed aloft.

At their head was Laurence, who was seldom anywhere else.

The captain, catching sight of him, stopped suddenly on his way to the stern and, casting a glance at the heavy clouds that seemed almost touching the tops of the plunging and rocking masts, said:

"Harman, lend a hand here."

Laurence dropped lightly from the part of the rigging he had just reached and came up to him.

"Yes, sir."

"You'd better not go up, man," said the captain, "as you're not used to it."

Laurence threw back his head with a gesture of impatience.

"I am not afraid, sir," he said, looking up at the flapping sails. "I'd rather go up, with your leave."

"Ham! Well, go on," said the captain, gruffly, not liking to be thwarted in his kind intention. "Only have a care!"

"Ay, ay, sir!" replied Laurence, sailor-fashion, as he sprang toward the mast.

"That's a plucky chap," muttered the captain, as he watched Laurence make his way up the mast hand over hand, seemingly undaunted by the howling of the tempest and the sharp, cutting rain that dashed against his bare chest, "wonderfully plucky for a landlubber."

Meanwhile, Laurence had reached the top yards and, with numbed fingers, was reefing the sails.

It was his first storm, and notwithstanding his natural courage and pluck he felt a queer sensation about his heart.

He dared not look down; the deck seemed miles below him, and he felt blinded and senseless with the pitiless blast and the howling of the wind and waves. But the boatswain's call reminded him of his duty and, hastily finishing his task, he prepared to descend.

His cold, senseless fingers could scarcely distinguish the ropes, but he reached the last yard safely, and was grasping the ladder from which to drop to the deck, when a sharp cry rose:

"Man overboard!"

It sent his heart into his mouth, and, springing to the side as quickly as the lurching and plunging of the vessel would let him, he tried to pierce the sullen gloom.

By dint of hard straining he could distinguish a black speck upon the foam of the waves. It was the head of the drowning man.

He looked round for a rope, and, slipping the noose and round his waist, leaped upon the bulwark.

A hand grasped him roughly by the arm and pulled him down.

It was the captain. His voice could scarcely be heard, but Laurence caught the words "No use!" and with a shout of defiance he, forgetful of his position, hurled the captain to the deck and sprang overboard in the direction of the drowning man.

The captain, who could not afford to lose two of his men, with heavy weather looming ahead, and having besides a strong admiration for the bravery of the landman, sprang to the wheel and brought the vessel round a little, while half a dozen sailors, who had witnessed the accident and Laurence's reckless attempt to rescue, hurried to the stern and shouted with all their might and main to Laurence to turn back.

Suddenly one of the men caught sight of the rope and, just in time, seized and fastened it to a bulkhead.

Meanwhile, utterly disregarding the frantic shouts of warning, Laurence fought his way to the black speck.

Fortunately the man was almost as good a swimmer as himself, and the waves that buffeted Laurence back bore him nearer the vessel.

As they approached each other Laurence saw that the poor fellow's face was white, almost blue, and that in another moment he would be beaten. Though nearly exhausted, he nerved himself for one last effort and struck out strongly.

At that moment he felt a sudden strain upon the rope and knew that the men on board were pulling him in.

The poor, dying man, with a look of wild, helpless agony on his face, turned over on his back.

Laurence, maddened by every tug of the rope that drew him away, suddenly lifted it over his head and, thus released, caught the hair of the drowning man.

The sailors on board, feeling the strain on the rope suddenly loosened, looked at each other aghast; but the captain, who dared not leave the wheel, shouted in the ear of one:

"The idiot has let go the rope! He'll be drowned as safe as a gun!"

The man sprang to the boat which was being lowered and told the men who were struggling to get her launched that it was no use risking their lives after "a couple o' dead uns." But with a scornful shout they rushed him aside and, leaping into the cutter, battled hard to reach the spot where the two men were struggling; but before they could do so Laurence, still grasping the man's hair, had regained the rope, and the sailors, with a hearty cheer, pulled them in.

They were carried to their berths more dead than alive, and then the crew were hard at work again, for the storm, which had lulled for a little while, suddenly raged more fiercely than before, and orders were given for clearing the rigging and cutting down the masts. Responding as cheerfully to this ominous command as if they were summoned to receive an extra ration, the sailors swarmed to the task. Then a few had to be told off to clear the deck; for the miserable emigrants, to the number of forty or fifty, were crowding everywhere, shrieking for help, and clinging, when they could, to the captain or the crew.

It was a fearful sight, not to be realized by our poor word painting nor to be imagined by any save those who have stood upon a wrecked ship and watched and waited.

In the middle of the din, as the passengers were being driven like a herd of sheep down the cabin ways, Laurence crawled on deck—the ship lurched too much, and he was too weak for a moment or two to reach it in any other way.

The men were busy cutting away the masts with their axes. He caught up one, but found his arm unable to swing it, and set himself to the task of keeping the deck clear.

After a deal of persuading and threatening the emigrants were got into the hold and below deck, and Laurence stopped for a moment to wipe the perspiration from his brow.

At that moment the captain called to him to come and take the wheel and so liberate him.

As he grasped it the captain looked at him with a curious look.

A Dainty frock for Mother's Girl.

Pattern 3123, cut in 4 sizes: 8 and 10 years, was used for the model here shown. White batiste with lace and insertion, or linen with embroidery would be effective. Silk, crepe, taffeta, satin, voile and poplin are also attractive for this style. It will require 4 yards of 27 inch material for a 10 year size. The sleeve may be finished in wrist or elbow length.

the gale, my man," he said.

Laurence shook his head moodily.

"No," he said; "it is all one to me."

The captain shook his head gravely and made his way forward. Presently he came back.

"They have got the masts clear," he said. "Ten minutes will decide it," and he looked anxiously up at the black sky.

"Where are we?" asked Laurence, carelessly.

"Heaven knows!" replied the captain. "I am keeping due west, but why I could scarcely tell you."

"We have lost our reckoning then?" said Laurence.

"Yes; Heaven help us!" added the captain, gloomily.

"Good-by to the Dale forever then!" muttered the young fellow, and he turned away.

But the storm gave way as suddenly as it had commenced. The heavens lightened, the clouds dispersed as if by magic, and a soft breeze, taking the place of the boisterous gale, fanned them gently into a harbor toward which they had been driving the whole night through.

For the rest of the voyage Laurence Harman was the hero of the "Mary Ann," and when he landed at Cape Town the sailors parted with him amid a hearty round of cheers.

Their simple affection moved the solitary outcast, and he turned from the quay with eyes too blinded by the sudden tears to look about him for a moment or so.

When he did look round he was startled. The scene that met his gaze was so unlike any he had ever witnessed that he could only stand still and gaze in wonderment.

From this attitude he was aroused by a chorus of Hottentots, who thronged round him and offered to carry his baggage. This offer he of course refused, having no luggage of any kind, and walked up to the middle of the town, which seemed to be composed of about twenty regular streets of white houses, with a square place here and there for markets and general business, and one or two large houses round the fort and at the ends of the streets.

At the back of the town rose a range of majestic hills, some of them flat-topped like a table, all well-wooded and beautiful.

Laurence, feeling very lonely and strange, walked through one of the streets, and seeing a man standing by a square place with about a dozen splendid horses round him, asked him if he knew Stewart's Corner.

GIRLS' DRESS WITH OR WITHOUT JUMPER AND WITH SLEEVE IN EITHER OF TWO LENGTHS.

2921—This model will make a very pretty dress for "best" or party wear. One could use batiste, lawn, mull, organdie, cashmere, taffeta, or a combination of silk and velvet. The overblouse or jumper could be of contrasting material.

The Pattern is cut in 5 sizes: 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 10 will require 2 3/4 yards of 44-inch material for the dress and 1 1/2 yard for the jumper.

They were carried to their berths more dead than alive, and then the crew were hard at work again, for the storm, which had lulled for a little while, suddenly raged more fiercely than before, and orders were given for clearing the rigging and cutting down the masts. Responding as cheerfully to this ominous command as if they were summoned to receive an extra ration, the sailors swarmed to the task. Then a few had to be told off to clear the deck; for the miserable emigrants, to the number of forty or fifty, were crowding everywhere, shrieking for help, and clinging, when they could, to the captain or the crew.

It was a fearful sight, not to be realized by our poor word painting nor to be imagined by any save those who have stood upon a wrecked ship and watched and waited.

In the middle of the din, as the passengers were being driven like a herd of sheep down the cabin ways, Laurence crawled on deck—the ship lurched too much, and he was too weak for a moment or two to reach it in any other way.

The men were busy cutting away the masts with their axes. He caught up one, but found his arm unable to swing it, and set himself to the task of keeping the deck clear.

After a deal of persuading and threatening the emigrants were got into the hold and below deck, and Laurence stopped for a moment to wipe the perspiration from his brow.

At that moment the captain called to him to come and take the wheel and so liberate him.

As he grasped it the captain looked at him with a curious look.

NO NEW CARDINALS.
ROME, May 3. Confirmation of reports that no new cardinals will be created at the consistory has been received from sources at the Vatican.

LIVES LOST IN EXPLOSION.
MONTREAL, May 3. Two people were killed in an explosion at the powder mills of the Canadian Explosives Company near this morning.

PROBABLY THAW'S CELL.
NEW YORK, May 3. Thomas W. Simkin, the itinerant actor who shot and killed Dr. James Markoe, one of New York's distinguished surgeons, as he was collecting plates in the stable St. George's Church here last night, was committed to the State Asylum for the criminally insane at Mattewan, N.Y.

DERELICT DESTROYED.
WASHINGTON, May 3. Destruction of the British ship derelict, which was reported as derelict, 300 miles south of the coast, was announced to-day by the Coast Guard.

LLOYD GEORGE ILL.
LONDON, May 3. Premier Lloyd George has been ordered by his physicians to remain in bed for a few days, because of what is declared a mild attack of bronchitis and fatigue from his San Remo activities. The Premier's indisposition first became noticeable at Friday's Irish conference, at the conclusion of which he cancelled his appointment to visit the King on Friday night at Windsor Castle.

DEATH DEALING STORM.
MUSKOGEE, Okla., May 3. Fifty persons are reported killed and more than 150 injured in a storm which is said to have destroyed the little town of Peggs, Oklahoma, last night. A special train carrying doctors, nurses and equipment left Muskogee for Peggs this morning. All the doctors and nurses in Tablequah also have gone and practically every store in Tablequah, which is the county seat of Cherokee County, has closed. Several hundred people have gone to Peggs to do rescue work. Direct communication with the stricken town was impossible this morning as all wires from here to Peggs are down. Reports to the Times Democrat from Locust Grove and Tablequah, where dead and injured from Peggs are being taken, said that not a house was left standing in Peggs.

POLISH FORCES OCCUPY KIEV.
WARSAW, May 3. Polish forces occupied Kiev on Sunday, according to extra editions of newspapers here to-day. General

Pilsudski, president of the Polish State, led the troops into the city, the newspapers say.

HEAVY FIGHTING REPORTED.

LONDON, May 3. Violent fighting in the vicinity of Kiev is reported in an official statement issued by the Soviet Government at Moscow on Sunday, received here to-day. The Bolsheviks claim some successes for their arms in the Black Sea region.

ALBANIAN UPRISING AGAINST GREEKS.

LONDON, May 3. An Albanian uprising against the Greeks has begun at Epirus, according to a wireless message from Moscow, and Albanian bands are massacring the Greeks. Mavro Pasha, former War Minister and leader of the Young Turks, the message says, has placed himself at the head of the Turkish Nationalist movement.

MAY DAY DEMONSTRATIONS.

ROME, May 3. Two alleged anarchists were killed and thirty wounded in a May Day clash yesterday with a detachment of the Royal Guards. A group of men carrying a black flag attacked the guards with rifles and hand grenades, seriously wounding two Guards. The Guards returned fire. One passerby was wounded in San Carlo Square by a bomb thrown by a demonstrator. There were a number of May Day demonstrations at Pola Istra.

PARIS RAILWAY STRIKE.

PARIS, May 3. The strike situation in this city was generally stationary at north and east stations this morning, only about 50 per cent. of the usual number of trains being in operation. At St. Lazare station traffic was affected more seriously. Virtually no freight trains were moving during the forenoon.

TIE-UP IN MARSEILLES.

MARSEILLES, May 3. This harbor is almost completely paralyzed by the strike. No ships have left since the walkout was declared, and the docks are deserted.

CZAR'S MURDERER EXECUTED.

PARIS, May 3. (Mall and Empire Cable.)—The man who confessed to having murdered Czar Nicholas—Borodnitsky, by name—was executed at Varsovie, yesterday. Before being led to the scaffold he begged that his last request in life be granted, that he be allowed to wear the silk shirt which Nicholas wore when he riddled him with bullets. It was granted. Those who have spoken at length with the murderer, believe he slew the Czar mainly because he wanted the shirt.

USING THE BLUDGEON.

LONDON, May 3. Industrial extremists of New South Wales meditate precipitating a general strike during the visit of the Prince of Wales, believing their demands under such circumstances will be irresistible, according to Sydney despatches to the London Times to-day.

NITRO-GLYCERINE EXPLOSION.

MONTREAL, May 3. Two men, James Morine and John Lundrigan, were killed and a Grand train in motion was stopped when five tons of nitro-glycerine exploded at the plant of the Canadian Explosives Co. at Macmesterville, Que., to-day. A portion of the plant containing nitro-glycerine, and in which Morine and Lundrigan were working, was entirely destroyed. The Grand Trunk train was proceeding across a bridge over the Richelieu river nearly a mile away, and was stopped by the force of wind caused by the explosion. All windows in the train were smashed.

READY TO RESUME WORK.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 3. Nineteen thousand railway switchmen, who walked out in sympathy with the strike called here on April 1st by the Chicago Yardmen's Association, are willing to return to work if their seniority rights are restored, John Grunau, President of the Chicago Yardmen's Association, declared in the Federal Court to-day.

MAY DAY IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 3. Plans of Radical Leaders for country-wide May Day demonstrations, involving strikes and destruction of life and property, fell flat, the Department of Justice officials claim, because the authorities were forewarned and issued timely notice to the people. Reports received here show that a number of strikes were instituted over the week end, but, in nearly every case, it is declared, these were local in nature and due to the regular May Day expiration of wage contracts.

Did Her More Good Than Trip to Old Country

Returning Home Sick and Miserable She Found Relief By Taking Tanlac.

"After what Tanlac has done for me, I feel that the very least I can do to show my gratitude, is to allow a statement of my case to be published in the papers, for after being in a weak and run-down condition for two years, Tanlac has completely restored my health," said Mrs. May Dawson, of 1081 Pender St. East, Vancouver, B.C., recently.

"For fully two years I had been unable to eat anything without being troubled with indigestion afterwards. After almost every meal my food would sour and cause such gas that my heart would palpitate so that I became really alarmed. It would also cause me intense pain in the pit of the stomach and affect my breath so that I would almost choke. At times I felt so weak and dizzy that I could not stand without having some support. I also frequently had severe pains across the small of my back that hurt terribly whenever I attempted to stoop over or moved about much at my work. I got so weak that I could scarcely do a thing, and my nerves were in such a state that the children playing around me or any unusual noise would almost make me scream. As none of the treatment or medicines that I tried seemed to do me any good, I made up my mind a little over a year ago, to go home to England, thinking that perhaps the change would do me good. But I failed to find any relief over there either."

"About two months ago I returned to Vancouver, still feeling very sick and miserable, and a friend of mine told me of the great good she had derived from taking Tanlac. That led me to try it too, and I now think it is a wonderful medicine, for after taking three bottles, only those who know how ill I was, can ever tell there was ever anything the matter with me. I now have a splendid appetite and my digestion is so good that I am never troubled with sourness or gas, nor suffer from palpitation or shortness of breath. The pain in my back is gone and in fact I haven't an ache of any kind. My nerves are calm and steady now. I sleep like a child all night, and get up feeling rested and full of life. I have gained nine pounds in weight, and feel as strong and healthy as ever I did in my life. My daughter Gladys also suffered with indigestion, so she took Tanlac and is completely relieved also. We are both loud in our praises of the medicine, and recommend it every chance we get."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale—advt.

Wedding Bells.

NORRIS—RYAN.
In Concord, at 3 o'clock, Wednesday, April 7, Mary J. Norris, daughter of Mrs. Norris of Whitney Bay, Newfoundland, were united in marriage to James F. Ryan, son of Mrs. John Ryan, of South Lincoln. Rev. Father Mahon performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Angeline Norris and the groom by his brother Edward H. Ryan. The bride and bridesmaid were gowned in blue with hat to match. After a short wedding trip to New York, the couple will reside in Lincoln, and will be at home to their many friends and acquaintances. Mr. Ryan has resided practically all his life with his parents. He, with his brother, Edward, saw two years of service in France, where they served with distinction until the war ended, when they returned to their home town and business. The many friends of young Ryan extended their congratulations to him on his choice of such a pleasing and capable helpmate as Miss Norris. She has lived for some time in Lincoln and is well thought of by her associates. The best wishes are for a long and happy life to them both.

TOBIN—LUNDRIGAN.

A very quiet, but pretty wedding, took place at Witless Bay, April 28, when Mr. Matthew Tobin and Miss Clare Lundrigan were united in the Holy bonds of matrimony, by the Rev. Fr. O'Brien, P.P. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss K. Bennett, whilst Mr. M. Yard supported the groom. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to their future home, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of, amidst the good wishes of their many friends.

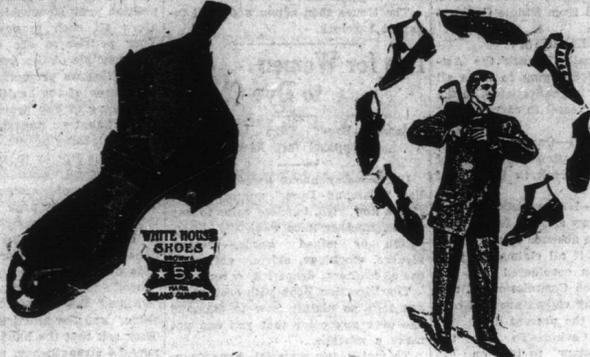

Shower for Bride.

A shower was given Miss May Norris on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. C. Lee Todd, which was attended by about forty young people of the town. The party was arranged by Miss Angela Norris for her sister, who to-day became the bride of James Ryan, the ceremony being performed at the Parish House in Concord. The evening was spent in dancing and games and refreshments were served. Miss Norris was the recipient of gifts of cut glass, embroidered linen, carrying set and many useful and beautiful household articles. Mrs. Chester Peck sent an eighteen pound fruit cake, for which Miss Norris wishes to extend many thanks. She is also very grateful to Mrs. Todd, who so kindly opened her home which she decorated for the occasion. After a short wedding trip, the couple will be at home at the Patrian bungalow, South Lincoln, which they have rented.

House of Assembly.

MONDAY, MAY 3rd.
The House met at 2.15.
A number of Reports and Returns were tabled by the Prime Minister.
Petitions were presented by the following:-
Mr. Warren—Three from Fortune Bay in relation to shortage of timber lands.
Mr. Winsor—For a motor boat to run from Westville to Newtown, B.E.
Mr. Abbott—From Salvage, asking for a fog alarm on Little Denier Island.
Mr. Jennings—From Cotta's Cove for Post Office.
Mr. McDonnell from Codroy for Post Office.
Mr. Hibbs—3 petitions from District of Foggo on various matters.
Mr. Walsh—From Fitz Hr. and Argenti. Repairs to road at Placentia Sound.
Mr. Higgins—From Lance Cove, Bell Island, and from Middle Cove relating to roads.

QUESTIONS.

Mr. MacDonnell—To ask the Acting Minister of Shipping to table all correspondence in connection with the chartering of a vessel to carry freight to Grand Bank.
Mr. MacDonnell—On behalf of Dr. Jones, for information as to cost of the smallpox outbreak in District of Harbor Main.
Mr. Bennett—I give notice that I will on to-morrow ask the Hon. Prime Minister (in the absence of the Minister of Militia), if all claims for pensions have been considered by the Board of Pension Commissioners, and if not, how many claims are still outstanding up to the present date.
Sir Michael Cashin—To ask the Hon. Col. Secretary to lay on the table of this House a statement showing the amount paid to the Reid Nfld. Co. for extending the railroad from Catalina Station to Port Union.
Sir Michael Cashin—To ask the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of this House a statement of the number of persons that sold Government Bonds in 1917 and 1918, and the amount of commission paid each.
Sir Michael Cashin—To ask the Hon. Minister Marine and Fisheries to lay on the table of this House a list giving number of vessels built in Newfoundland since 1918, giving names, tonnage and amount of bounty paid on each, and amount of material passed duty free for the construction of each vessel.
Sir Michael Cashin—To ask the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of this House a list showing the number of officials appointed in his Department, both in St. John's and outposts, giving the names and positions of each, since November 15th, 1919. Also salary of each.
Sir Michael Cashin—To ask the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the table of this House the amount of Flour Entries passed through the Customs for the following years, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919.
Mr. Vinicombe—To ask the Minister of Public Works if Mr. Wm. Churchill, the Superintendent, is still superintending the work now being done at the Sanatorium and Lunatic Asylum. If not, who is doing the work, and when the appointment was made.
Mr. Fox—To ask the Colonial Secretary to table all correspondence in connection with the retirement of Dr. J. A. Robinson from the office of Postmaster General.
Mr. Walsh—To ask the Hon. the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the table of the House a statement showing (A) The location of the Dredge Priestman from the 15th day of November past to date; (B) The number of days employed, and where employed; (C) The number of days not employed and why not employed.
Sir John Crosbie presented a largely signed petition from the residents of Clark's Beach protesting against any modification in the Prohibition Act. Sir John said he reserved the right to speak either for or against the petition when the matter came before the House in another form. In this connection he asked the Prime Minister if it was the intention of the Government to introduce any legislation modifying the present Prohibition Act. The Prime Minister replied that the matter had not yet been considered by the Government.

The following bills were then introduced and read a first time: "An Act to amend the Judicature Act"; "An Act to incorporate the Women's Patriotic Association of Newfoundland"; "An Act to amend Chapter 4 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'of Legislative Disabilities and the vacation of Seats in the House of Assembly.'"

The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the bill respecting the Department of Posts and Telegraphs and passed same with some amendments.

The House then adjourned until to-day at 3 o'clock.

Fun for Women to Dye Clothes

"Diamond Dyes" Turn Faded, Old Apparel Into New.

Don't worry about perfect results. Use "Diamond Dyes," guaranteed to give a new, rich, fadeless color to any fabric, whether it be wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods—dresses, blouses, stockings, skirts, children's coats, fashions, draperies, coverings. The Direction Book with each package tells so plainly how to dye with that dye over any color that you can not make a mistake.

To match any material, have druggist show you "Diamond Dye" Color Card.

Shooting a Smokestack.

During a severe windstorm some time ago the top section, ten feet in length, of an eighty-foot iron smokestack buckled and toppled over at a steel mill near Chicago. Only a small sector of the broken section held it to the stack.

As it was a very busy season, "knocking off" work while a scaffolding was erected to protect the roof, was out of the question. Therefore, the manager, recalling that one of the employes was an expert marksman, decided upon the bold plan of shooting away the troublesome section.

He explained the situation to the man and sent him home in an automobile for his rifle. The marksman returned, in a few minutes and in ten shots from the ground, neatly speared ten holes in the unbroken bit of iron stack. In a few minutes it broke off, fell to the roof and rolled harmlessly to the ground.

Bolshevism in Practice.

The Times of India:—In practice, Bolshevism has come to be the most remorseless tyranny in the history of the world. Freedom of speech has been suppressed; the press is more bound than ever it was in the darkest days of the Czarism; and the citizens hold their lives more insecurely, more at the whim of fanatical doctrinaires than did the free, equal and fraternal citizens during the early days of the French Revolution. Lenin pleads that his reign of terror is only a means to an end, that it is the prelude to a glorious era of tranquility and prosperity. That is delusion of the most dangerous kind. The reign of terror may wane. But it will only wane when the need is gone, and that will only be when the will to free criticism and expression has been killed by it in Russia. Tranquility in these circumstances is not peace but desolation.

Protest Against Modification.

Petition From Port de Grave Strongly in Favor of Prohibition.

Sir John Crosbie in the House yesterday presented the following petition from the people of Port de Grave:—

The petition of the undersigned voters of the District of Port de Grave humbly sheweth, that your petitioners, having learned that efforts are being made and will be made to procure such modifications of the Prohibition Act as will practically destroy its prohibitory character, and simply substitute large facilities for private and household drinking of intoxicants for the open saloon, protest with all their might against any modifications whatever that would have the effect of loosening or lessening the stringent and universal prohibition of intoxicating liquors for use as beverages, and earnestly petition your Honorable House to disallow all such proposed legislation.

Your petitioners are convinced that the principle of the Act is sound, and its application promotive in the highest degree of the health, comfort and well being of our people. Convinced, further, that a howbeit, through universal carrying out of the provisions of the Bill by those charged with that duty and sworn and paid to execute it, is of paramount necessity. Your petitioners urge most strongly that immediate steps should be taken to eliminate the abuses which have done so much to destroy the usefulness of the Bill, such as the sale of "dope," the improper issue of "scripts," the manufacture of "moonshine," and the practice of smuggling. They ask that the hands of the police may be strengthened, and convictions made possible, by placing the burden of proof where it ought to be: on the shoulders of those suspected of violation of the provisions of the bill.

This petition is largely signed, containing names of fishermen, farmers, merchants, a druggist, and a minister of the Gospel.

Early Days of the 'Flu.

Medical historians say that in 412 B.C. there was an epidemic not unlike the modern influenza. It is described by Hippocrates. There is an authentic record of an illness in A. D. 1173 which spread over England, Germany and Italy. For fifty years the disease existed only in sporadic form or in mild epidemics, for it is not until 1399 that another severe epidemic occurred. In the chronicles of 1510 we find the first mention of a pandemic, which spread all over Europe. It took only a mild form. In 1557 there is the first mention of the spread of the disease to America. In 1850 there was another pandemic of especial virulence. There were several epidemics in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. In the seventeenth century the disease acquired the name by which it is best known, "influenza." The designation is of Italian origin and means simply "influence." A curious fact that is recorded in the histories of influenza is its occurrence at sea, on ships and in fleets that have no recent communication with land.

A Premier in Difficulty.

A hard road seems to lie before the Rt. Hon. Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, Premier of the Union of South Africa. His Government has just passed through a general parliamentary election, and although not defeated, it has not won a very decisive victory. Its present position is, therefore, somewhat precarious and its future uncertain. The South African party of which he is leader does not form a majority in the House, in fact, no one party does, and if the Government continues, it will have to receive outside support, that from the Unionists being most likely. In the Premiership Gen. Smuts is the successor of the late Louis Botha. Both were leaders in the Boer war, and in the world war both fought bravely and well for their native land and the Empire. A future for South Africa in the Empire was Botha's guiding policy, which General Smuts is doing his best to continue.

During the war Gen. Smuts went to Europe and served for a time at the front. He was made a member of the Imperial War Cabinet, and the freedom of the City of London was conferred upon him.

Born fifty years ago, Gen. Smuts received excellent education advantages at Victoria College, in South Africa, and at Christ's College, Cambridge University, England, where he won high honors in law. He returned to South Africa and practised as a lawyer first at Cape Town and later at Johannesburg when it was part of the Transvaal Republic. Since the formation of the Union he has been prominent in its public life.

The result of the elections has made his position difficult, but it is expected that he will be able to retain power and continue an administration that has much to recommend it.

A Problem for the League.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

After a Pan-Turanic of the Turks, are we to hear of a Pan-Arabia of the Arabians? The Turks look with longing across the Armenian barrier to the Tatars and Kumuks, the Noghai and Bashkirs of Cis-Caspia, and discover that they are of one and the same family with them. The Arabs of the Hedjaz suddenly realize that they are more or less identical of race with the Syrians, and, presto, Emir Faisal, son of King Hussein, declares himself their lawful monarch, amid impressive ceremonies. The Turks, looking even further afield, develop a cousinly affection for the Kirghises and Turkomans the Uzbeks and the Saris, the Kashgariys and the Tatars, and tell them of that glorious Empire of the Prophet, of which they will form a part, that is to stretch all the way from Adrianople to Central Asia. The Arabs begin their propaganda for the "return" of Palestine and Mesopotamia. Nineteen million Turanians outside of Turkey whom the Sultan would fain take to his political arms! There it is in a nutshell—the Turkish-Muhammadan Empire—not to forget the Bolsheviki to the north working for the reign of the proletariat throughout the East! A pretty little problem surely, that the League of Nations one day may have to solve!

Gork's Afterthought.

New York Evening Sun.—Maxim Gorky, according to a Finnish despatch, has just voiced his disappointment with the Bolsheviki. He is dissatisfied; the revolution had not generated any overabundant spiritual progress; the run of men fell to become a white more honest; and the new leaders equal the old in brutality. He neglected to consider that in revolution as in other self-manifestations a people gives forth according to its nature. Fruit does not grow where thistles have always grown before. The two centuries of European culture in Russia have brought forth a superb Russian music, an elevated and earnest if not productively thoughtful literature. But outside of these two contributions Russia left the intellectual world pretty much as she found it, and has failed herself to catch the principles of that culture she has so assiduously studied.

Three Crooks Beat Lady and Rob Store.

New York.—Mrs. Gertrude Borak was alone in charge of an army and navy store at the southwest corner of 71st Street when two men entered within a few moments of one another. While No. 1, who had asked her if she didn't wish to buy mattresses loitered near, she stood before a mirror showing No. 2 how well a stock raincoat fitted his medium sized but powerful figure. Suddenly No. 2 whirled round, grabbed Mrs. Borak by the throat, and threw her to the floor, instantly beginning to beat her head with his balled fists. No. 1 knelt down and tried to pull from the second finger of her left hand two diamond rings valued at $500, and a wedding ring. The rings fit tightly. No. 1 wet the finger but could not budge them. He put the finger in his mouth then and with a series of savage wrenches that tore flesh and skin from the bone, wrenched off the rings. While No. 2 continued to beat and choke Mrs. Borak, No. 1 went to the cash register, took $90 from it, and stepped out the door. With a final rain of blows on his victim No. 2 started to follow. He had difficulty shaking off Mrs. Borak, however. She had wound her hands in the raincoat, and screaming hung on. When No. 2 finally beat himself free, passerby had stopped, alarmed by the cries inside. When they saw Mrs. Borak, hair dishevelled and face bleeding, appear in the doorway in pursuit of No. 2 they tried to grab him. With the pack continually growing in size and sound No. 2 ran west. Policeman Norcott, off duty joined the man hunt. When No. 2 refused to halt, Norcott fired a shot in the air. Shot Leads to Speedy Arrest. No. 2 kept going. But the revolver shot had alarmed Policemen Thompson and Marion. They arrived just as Norcott caught No. 2 and was fighting him. It didn't take the three big policemen long to subdue their quarry then. They took him back to the store where Mrs. Borak positively identified him as her assailant. Then both were taken to the East 97th Street Police Station, whence Mrs. Borak, whose condition steadily grew worse, was taken first to Flower Hospital, then to Reception Hospital, and finally to the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

AN AWFUL NUISANCE.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of ours who lives out in the country has had a new electric pump installed to pump the water from his well into a tank in his cellar, from which the house is supplied with running water.

This electric pump is a wonderful contrivance. It is automatic—when the water in the tank falls below a certain point the pump starts by itself and begins to pump of its own accord. When it is pumped enough, it also knows at by instinct and at once stops.

It is Uncanny.

It is almost uncanny to hear it suddenly begin pumping. It reminds me somehow of an innovation that used to play chess in the Mechanics' Club to which Grandfather used to take me when I was a youngster.

Doubtless you have met just such a pump, and so the tale of its wonders is not new to you. But here is the nub of my tale:

This pump did not take the place of a hand pump, but of another electric pump. And the trouble with the other electric pump was that it was not automatic.

"You had to push a button," explained our country friend, "and start going when the water ran low and stop it when you had enough. Any danger of its overflowing? No, there was a safety valve that would stop if you forgot, but you always had to start it yourself. An awful nuisance."

Please think of that a minute.

The Price of Running Water.

An awful nuisance to push a button and get running water in your house? I don't bring this up as a criticism of the individual friend. Far from it. Nor as a criticism of anyone, but just to make vivid how quickly we take every kind of a convenience granted and want more.

In our favorite room in the little house where we used to go summers, there was an electric light controlled by a switch at the door. One year we had a different room in which there was no switch. We had to go to the middle of the room before we could light the light. And we said, just as my friend said, "An awful nuisance."

Just think of it! Light to be had for the touch of a finger—brilliant, all illuminating light, without the smell of kerosene, without the inconvenience of flaring in summer draughts; and just because we had to cross the room to get that light, we called it "an awful nuisance."

Truly we are pampered human beings.

We Think We Are Abused.

Give us a few weeks to get used to a labor-saving device and we come to take it as a matter of course and complain bitterly if we are deprived of its use even for a few minutes. Witness the walls of anguish that go up when a storm puts the electric light or the telephone out of commission for a little while.

If my friend with the new pump had lived in the country 50 years ago he would have been pumping his water by hand; 75 years ago he would probably have been lugging it from a well. To-day he finds it "an awful nuisance" to push a button to have it pumped for him.

Jewel Thieves Located.

The latest haul of jewel robbers, whose ransacking of New York hotels, apartment houses and private homes have puzzled the police for several months, became known yesterday. The victims were Mr. and Mrs. John McKay, wealthy Montreal residents, who are stopping at the Hotel Wolcott. While they were dining Monday night, their room was entered and $10,000 in jewels taken, they reported to the police. Tuesday night it became known that robbers had taken $75,000 worth of jewels from the Fifth Avenue residence of Mrs. Hamilton Fish.

Had American Whiskey.

The Chief Constable of Greenock, Great Britain, in his annual report, comments on the ill-effects of some American whiskey now being imported into Great Britain. Whatever its composition, he says, its effects are terrible. It not only poisons, after the intoxicating effects have passed away, nervous and depressed. It is spoken of colloquially as "snake bite."

Not a Bad Idea.

An Ohio county has adopted the policy of putting her convicted bootleggers to work at building county roads. The majority of convicts now committed to the jail in this particular county are offenders against the Prohibition law. Many prisoners are committed to this jail from an adjoining county, which county contains a large city, and this perhaps explains why there is a large number of inmates than found in most jails in these days of Prohibition. It is planned to work the prisoners in squads of from eight to ten in various parts of the county, the government furnishing trucks to convey the prisoners to and from their work.

Here is a splendid tip to other counties. There is a shortage of labor, much work is needed on road improvements. Why not put the convicted bootleggers to work? A few months' toil of this kind will be a more convincing argument to most of them than a mere fine that the Prohibition law is to be respected and obeyed, and at the same time the county will be benefited by their labor. In addition to serving this twofold purpose the taxpayers will not be burdened with the expense of feeding these criminals. They will more than pay their way.—Ex.

Another Prodigy.

A youthful chess prodigy recently made his debut in Berlin. A boy by the name of R. Rzeschewski, eight years of age, dared to play in the Berlin Chess Society 20 or more games simultaneously against more or less classy chess players, winning 18 games, losing one and drawing the rest. Furthermore, the little fellow undertook to play blind-folded against the famous master player, Kurt Von Bardeleben, an expert of over 40 years standing, and many times a prize winner in national and international tournaments. Marvellous to relate, the boy had the satisfaction of drawing this game after 20 moves.

Trumped-Up Evidence.

More than 50 per cent. of the divorces granted in the United States are based on "trumped up charges," resulting from the fascination of the husband or wife for some one else, Francis Moody, of Chicago, executive secretary of the International Committee on Marriage and Divorce, declared before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Appearing in support of a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment providing for uniform Federal marriage and divorce laws, Mr. Moody declared that the divorce evil was a "worse plague than the saloon ever was," and that the remedy was in Federal legislation.

Six Cents Damage.

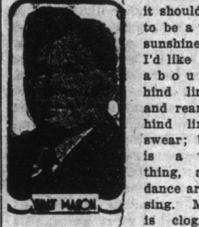

The jury trying the breach of promise suit of Miss Lillian Phipps, of Teaneck, New Jersey, against William Smith, of Tenafly, brought in a verdict of six cents for the plaintiff, at Hackensack, New Jersey, on Friday. She had asked $50,000. In Smith's counter suit of conspiracy against J. H. Van Loan and his wife, uncle and aunt of Miss Phipps, the jury decided there was no cause of action and dismissed the suit.

THE SPRING COLD.

I have a cold; it should be hard to be a cheerful sunshine bard. I'd like to croak a bout despair hind limbs and and rear on my hind limbs and swear; but habit is a wondrous thing, and so I dance around and sing. My head is clogged, my eyes are sore, and every breath sounds like a snore; I'm full of fever, and my brow feels like an old Dutch oven now, and men would say I had excuse, if I should rant and raise the deuce. But habit has me in its grip, and so I sound my cheerful yip. For years I've plied this sunshine stunt, and kept a smiling face in front, and now, when I would make lament, I cannot do it worth a cent. I'm feeling punk and tough as sin, but every groan ends in a grin. And this, my friends, methinks should teach that wholesome habit is a peach. I'm glad I learned when I was young to leave the doleful dirge unsung, and chant glad ditties, span and spick, till some one hit me with a brick, to push gay ballads through my beard, until the peelers interfered.

REWARD.

Let laughter pay me for my toil
And I'll not ask for gold,
I'll gladly till my patch of soil
And rest when I am old.
If they who know me best shall smile
I'll count my drudgery worth while.

I'll hold the plow or breast the gate,
Or humble post I'll keep,
Nor will I say I've lived to fail
Though little I may reap,
If those who love me are content,
I'll count my time and strength well spent.

Let them be glad to kiss my cheek
And proud to walk with me,
I will not greater glory seek
Nor ask a larger fee.

If they rejoice in what I bring,
I shall not envy prince or king.

If I can wrest from stubborn clay
Or dull and tedious task
Their laughter and their love each day,
No greater joy I'll ask,
If I can keep their needs supplied,
With life I shall be satisfied.

I'll not begrudge the dreary hours
Nor mind the summer's heat
If I can strew their path with flowers
And make their journey sweet,
If what they ask my hands can give,
I'll gladly work and gladly live.

No Blood Drawn.

General Sir Robert Baden-Powell assisted an exhibition of swordsmanship at the Command Gymnasium, at Aldershot, by submitting to have an apple cut in halves upon his neck by a blow from a sword. He smiled as the swordmaster raised his weapon. In an instant the blow had fallen, and the severed apple rolled to the floor. As Sir Robert Baden-Powell resumed his seat he cautiously felt his neck and then glanced at his hand, but no blood had been drawn.

Mr. Coaker's Silence

It will be remembered that while Sir Edward Morris came back victorious from the polls in the fall of 1913, two of his principal followers amongst others, went down to defeat before the votes of the electors. These two gentlemen were Messrs. R. A. Squires and S. D. Blandford, unsuccessful in Trinity and Bonavista. In the selection of his cabinet, however, Sir Edward took these defeated candidates into the Executive, and not content with giving them seats within the Government, went still further, presenting Mr. Squires with the portfolio of Justice and Mr. Blandford with that of Agriculture and Mines, thus in a measure, outraging constitutional procedure and leaving two of the principal departments without direct representation in, or responsibility to, the House of Assembly. Sir Edward justified this action on the ground that it was expedient from a political standpoint. Both Mr. Squires and Mr. Blandford held these offices, as non-members of the Lower House, cachet of title having been given them by appointments to seats in the Legislative Council, under protest from the Opposition of the day, Mr. Coaker being most pronounced in his hostility to such a proceeding, until the formation of the Coalition Government in 1918.

On January 20th, 1914, in moving an amendment to the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, Mr. (now Justice) Kent, then Leader of the Opposition, incorporated into the motion the following:

"That measures were not adopted previous to the meeting of the Legislature, so that the Departments of Justice and Agriculture and Mines might be represented in the Legislative Assembly by their proper ministers, responsible for the administration of these departments respectively, and they (the House) trust that the usual constitutional procedure will be adopted at once, whereby they will be so represented during the remainder of the present session of the Legislature."

On January 28th of the same year (1914) before the House, Mr. Coaker, then representing Bonavista District, rose to second this motion, and the report of his remarks on the filling of Departmental offices by men defeated at the polls is taken from the Proceedings of the House of Assembly (Hansard) and therefore cannot be contradicted or challenged, though it is obvious that the honorable gentleman has changed his opinions since that speech was made.

"MR. COAKER.—Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a few remarks regarding the matter before the House. I take much pleasure in seconding the amendment made by Mr. Kent in connection with the vacancies in the Departments of Agriculture and Justice. I agree with him when he states that we believe the Government has done wrong by opening the House without filling these positions. So far as the F.P.U. is concerned, resolutions condemning the conduct of the Government in this respect have been sent to the Government. The F.P.U. don't believe that such important offices as these should be held by men who have been ousted from power by the people. It has been rumored that it is intended to fill these positions by making two appointments to the Legislative Council. If this is done, I feel that it will create an agitation in this Colony that won't soon subside. We, who represent the fishermen of this country believe that the heads of the various Departments should hold seats in the House of Assembly, and if appointments are made to these vacant departments of members of the Legislative Council, the F.P.U. will go one step further and agitate for the abolition of that Chamber. It is not fair to the country. It is certainly not fair to our constituents that these men (Squires and Blandford) who were so badly defeated at the polls, should be placed in the Upper House, and allowed to hold the same position as Heads of Departments."

Thus Mr. Coaker in 1914. The same Mr. Coaker is representing the same district (Bonavista) in the House of Assembly, and is also Minister of Marine and Fisheries, with a seat in the Executive. The same tactics have been adopted by the Prime Minister, as were begun by Sir Edward Morris. Dr. Alexander Campbell, defeated candidate in St. John's West, last fall has been presented with the portfolio of Agriculture and Mines, with a seat in the Upper House. That which Mr. Coaker condemned in Sir Edward Morris, he evidently approves of in Mr. Squires, yet the cases are exactly identical. In 1914 the F.P.U. by petitions protested against the appointment of Messrs. Squires and Blandford, inspired thereto by the President, but in 1920 we do not hear of any protests from Councils over a similar case. Neither do we hear that the F.P.U. intends going a step further and asking for the abolition of the Upper House. All of which goes to show that the senior member for Bonavista is not alone insincere, but is also willing to fall in line where party expediency is involved. That which Councils protested in 1914, upon instructions, they should protest in 1920 upon principle, and prove that they are capable of acting independently and as men of spirit. Let them be consistent and show the dominion that they are not bound to the dictates of their supreme officer, but freemen and true, with the courage of their own convictions, and capable of acting without presidential instruction. In that way only will they demonstrate to the rest of the people that they are not following the path beaten, or the course outlined, for them by one man, who by his silence shows approval in 1920, of that which he so vigorously assailed in 1914.

A Duty We Owe.

To-night's reproduction of the Sacred Concert, given by the United City Choirs, is another illustration of the heights to which our talented vocalists can rise when the call of duty is heard. With that native courtesy so characteristic of them, the members of the city choir did not hesitate one moment when requested to repeat the magnificent performance of Thursday night last in aid of the most worthy Fund ever established in Newfoundland. The Permanent Marine Disasters' Fund is one which is deserving of every effort on the part of every person. Its object is so well set forth in its title, that there need be no further explanation of its purpose. We owe a duty to those who have paid the price of Admiralty, and we owe that duty primarily to those who have been deprived of their chief support and stay. The widows and orphans left almost destitute by the many marine disasters overtaking the ships and men of Newfoundland in recent years, have had their lot in life made brighter by the assistance received from this Fund. We are asked, to-night, to give a little of our substance to help swell the revenues of this Fund, and sure we are that the spirit of aid is not growing weaker, but gathering renewed strength, and therefore the request to attend the Sacred Concert to be held in the Roman Catholic Cathedral, so kindly placed at the disposal of choristers and audience by the courtesy of His Grace Archbishop Roche, will receive such a response that will gladden the hearts of those who have the control of the Fund and show those who are dependent upon its revenues that St. John's appreciates and honors the memories of the men who went down in their ships, while serving Newfoundland.

"Quo Vadis" on Lantern Slides.

Some sixty gorgeous lantern slides depicting scenes from the historic novel, "Quo Vadis," was thrown on the screen last evening at Canon Wood Hall, and Rev. Canon Smart gave a sketch of the book as the views were screened. Rev. Mr. Molton operated the lantern. During the evening Miss E. Jones rendered "The Holy City." The proceeds of the show go toward the purchase of a new machine.

Northern Ice Embargo.

Owing to the ice embargo it is impossible to re-establish the northern coastal service. Because of the early closing of the ports last fall, full supplies of provisions could not be delivered, and it is thought that north of Cape John supplies must be running low. Large quantities of herring and codfish are held up awaiting shipment. A change in weather conditions is badly needed as the present embargo is having a detrimental effect on trade.

Created a Disturbance.

Last night two drunken men created a disturbance at the King George V. Institute, and for some time had matters all their own way. One of the incubators assaulted Manager Jones and also a guest. The police were sent for and the disturbers taken to the lockup.

The Marriage Question.

A GREAT PRESENTATION.

A delighted audience witnessed the final fall of the curtain on the Young-Adams Company's staging of "The Marriage Question" at the Casino Theatre last night. This play developed the talent of the performers to a greater extent than ever, as its varying scenes and climaxes were so complex, but withal interesting, and vividly portrayed. The acting of Miss Marguerite Young as Marjorie Daw and Mr. Donald Mack as Teddy Summers was great and kept the audience in raptures. Mr. George Danton as "Banke" the butler was a scream, his impersonation being life-like. Miss Gladys Butler as Mrs. Daw, received considerable applause, while Mr. Perry Norman (Jay Langdon) added to his laurels as an actor of worth. Miss Marjorie Adams starred as "Billie," being well supported by Mr. H. Wilmot Young in the character of James Cantwell Hudson. The play will be repeated to-night, when another opportunity will be given of seeing the company at their best. Music by the C.C.C. band and several Scotch songs by Mr. James Irvine, helped to pass a delightful evening.

Street Car Derailed.

No. 5 street car, going west on Military Road at five minutes to twelve on its way to the barn, left the rails opposite Bannerman Road and ran some 10 or 12 feet diagonally across the street. The car was nearly full of passengers who were home bound from a surprise party, and a quantity of dishes which they carried were smashed to pieces. The nearest car was summoned, while men from the barn were sent to the scene. It was nearly two o'clock this morning when the car was back on the rails.

McMurdo's Store News.

TUESDAY, May 4.

Pepsodent Tooth Paste begins to show the results of its superiority over all other dentifrices almost immediately. It dissolves that yellow or brown film that collects round the teeth and which is such a harbor and breeding place of the tooth destroying germs, rendering it innocuous. By persevering the teeth too, it helps the general health in more ways than one. People who have sound teeth are of course far less liable to digestive troubles—dyspepsia, constipation, diarrhoea, malnutrition—and far less liable to toxemia and auto-intoxication, with their results in rheumatism and failure of the general health. If you have good teeth take good care of them; and one of the best ways of taking care of the teeth is by the conscientious use of Pepsodent Tooth Paste. Large tubes 60c.

Seen From the Lobby.

—House of Assembly, May 3, 1920.

Yesterday's session was a nightmare of interest. No business was brought up, and beyond the presentation of petitions and the reading of some Bills, there was nothing doing.

Sir John Crosbie presented a petition from the residents of Port de Grave, protesting against any modification of the Prohibition Act and asking that the hands of the public be strengthened.

Sir John took occasion to ask the Prime Minister if a Bill re Prohibition was to be brought forward this season. Mr. Squires replied that the subject of Prohibition had not been discussed by the Government so far.

What a delightfully interesting pastime it is to sit in the Lobby and listen to honorable members present petitions from their districts! Some men can be eloquent on any old subject—as witness the noble and exalted language of one who launched out into an oration on a road, or something, Queer country?—Yes!

—LOBBYIST.

Sports' Committee Meeting.

The C.C.C. General Sports Committee met last night and discussed their plans for the coming season. By permission of the Lieut.-Col. Commanding, a dance will be held during next month to procure funds. The general meeting of the association, which was to be held to-night, has been postponed, owing to the Sacred Concert being on. The meeting will be held on Thursday night at 8 o'clock.

"Quake" in City Last Night.

Many residents of that portion of the city known as "Georgetown" were considerably startled last night, near ten o'clock, by a distinct tremor in the ground. That this was real and not imagined is proven by the fact that dishes and other moveable objects were knocked from shelves. In one house the stove was turned completely over, and boiling water in a kettle spilled over the feet of a man who was sitting beside the stove.

The Latest Method.

OH, TAKE A PILL!
The very latest method of getting drunk is an eloquent testimony to the fact that Prohibition does not prohibit. This new way is—take a pill! Not in the orthodox manner, but dissolve it in water and a "first class" drink results. The "bottle a week" men should now change their slogan to "a pill a day—is the wiser way."

How I Talk With My Dead Child.

(By Mrs. FRED MATURIN.)
(In Pearson's Weekly.)

One of the Most Amazing and Convincing Instances in which a Mother has Conversed Regularly With Her Baby Child, Who Passed Beyond the Veil Many Years Ago.

The burning question of the day is the immense one: Can we communicate with our "Dead"?

My reply "Yes," could have been given to you nineteen years ago.

In the year 1900 I lost my youngest child, Gordon (Sunny). Being one of those people who can believe in nothing that cannot be proved, his banishment almost devastated my life. All that I had ever seen of my darling I beheld shut away from me, as I thought, for ever.

A year of intense agony passed, during which I prayed to God--if a God there was--to give me proof that my child still lived, unless indeed the after-life was a mere fable.

The love between me and my three children was greater than is even usual, I think. Or so people said, I knew if Sunny was anywhere that I should find him again, and I meant to. I knew also he would never be really happy until I did. I knew now that my refusal to "sit down under" this grief and loss, the determination to think for myself and to seek my child--undeterred by all those who abjured me--to be content with the vague assurance of orthodox faiths--led me as surely to the re-finding of my Sunny, as all sustained efforts, determination and devotion does lead to attainment, as a rule.

A year after Sunny's "death" my two other sons, aged fourteen and sixteen, were playing with a planchette that I had given them as a game. I had no notion that it was anything but a sometimes rather systematic game that answered trivial questions. Of spirit-communication I had never heard.

"Tell Mother Don't Worry, No Happy." I sat by the fire thinking of my lost darling, when I suddenly heard my two boys disputing at the table where they were playing with the planchette, asking it absurd questions of no importance.

Eric whispered: "You must have pushed it."

Kay replied indignantly (I have now lost my darling Kay in the war): "I didn't. It was you. It wasn't me."

Then one of them whispered: "Hush. Don't let mother know. It will upset her."

This roused me. I rose, and went to the table, and found scrawled in large letters across a very big sheet of paper that the children had been using, these six words:

"Tell mother don't worry. Me happy."

Now my Sunny had been wont to say to me that he would never grow up. I'll always be your baby, mother, "Me hungry, me sleepy."

This he used to say to please me when I would remark: "Oh, children, you are all getting big, and soon I'll have no baby left!"

And so when, on that winter evening, I and his brothers gazed awestruck at this message, "Tell mother, don't worry. Me happy," the first ray of hope that I had had since his death pierced the darkness of my heart.

But it seemed too good to be true! Tensely, breathlessly, I asked the children "Who wrote this?"

They, as astounded as I was, declared it wrote itself. They had merely rested their finger tips on the little board, and after a time it seemed to become imbued with a kind of life and movement of its own. This message had come while they were playing with it, asking questions like, "What will my profession be?" and so forth.

It had never entered their minds to talk to the little dead brother.

All my children are strictly truthful. Suddenly this message came, in reply to no question at all.

This was the beginning of the most wonderful and lengthened experience of my life.

My children had to return to school, and so I asked my valued maid Nellie to join with me in the quest for my child.

Nellie had a beautiful Christian nature in all ways, and I knew I could trust her. She had, before entering my service, worked in the London slums as a Salvation Army girl in the most devoted manner till her health broke down.

Talks That Are Proof Positive.

She hesitated at first. Were we "allowed" to do this? I told her, "Nellie, I've prayed to God to prove to me that my child lives. Here, I believe, is the answer. I am going on with this. Will you sit with me?"

We sat down.

I asked "Who is here?"

The reply came, "Oh, mother, it's me!"

In a few days he seemed to gather strength to write longer and longer. And from then onwards for four years we talked nearly every day, Sunny filling enormous pages with, as time went on, rapid writing, answering in a joyous child-like way every conceivable question I put to him. That is nineteen years ago. And though after four years our conversations became intermittent, because of a strenuous life in a far country, they have never ceased.

When I hear of other descriptions of the after-life and compare them with my child's homely accounts of his "Happy Land," as he calls it (given to me so long ago that at that time I kept them to myself, sharing my glorious secret with only a very few), I am inclined to think that other writers may be keeping back parts of what they get, fearful of startling their readers by mention of the houses, furniture, churches, schools, games, gardens, books (and the life is very like ours here) that my boy so artlessly describes.

In fact, I know this is so, in some cases, and it is a great pity, I think. For, after all, is not the simple truth the thing we seek?

I know another mother who got from her child the self-same descriptions of the after-life as Sunny gave me, but was afraid to tell anyone (but one) of such parts as the homes, furniture, gardens the children dig in, ponies they ride, donkey-rides at the seaside and so on. All she dared mention were the parts that she thought were more like the orthodox heaven!

But if everyone does this, where shall we be?

Sunny describes a far happier life than this in every way, and when I have asked him, "As it is so like ours, in what way is it happier?" he wrote,

"Here, everything is love, mother. We all love each other."

Apply that difference to our life here, and what is wrong with this beautiful world except selfishness and sin?

Sunny's talks to me already fill eighteen volumes, and, in addition to their enthralling interest and child-like charm, they abound in evidential matter, proving that they have indeed come from one who dwells on the Other Side. He mentions (for only one instance) a friend on his side that we had never heard of, and gave me full names, date of death, town, street, age and profession; and I had to send and have it all verified at the registrar in a distant town. It was all true. Dozens of such tests have been given and proved.

Lives Like Earthly People.

Children have a glorious life over there. Sunny talks often of "my teacher, Love," who lived centuries ago, and who takes care of him and appears to be a highly-educated perfect spirit. He has a pony "Towner," a canary "that sits on my shoulder and sings," he has got back our fox-terrier that died, and two Persian kittens.

Books are written and published over there. He told me one day, "Oh, I've been reading a lovely book written here called 'A Soldier of Christ.'" His descriptions resemble those in "A New Heaven" (recently published by G. Warren Russell, Minister of Internal Affairs, New Zealand).

There, the "morning paper" arrives at breakfast time. They go to theatres. They watch men working in fields and mowing the grain, and returning to lovely cottages in the evening.

But when, nineteen years ago, I told people "Sunny says they live just as we do here," I was gazed at with pity.

"Poor thing! the grief has turned her head," they said--the usual deduction when anyone, in answer to prayer, receives proofs of a future life!

So--I kept it all to myself till now. I often smile at people's idea of the Life Beyond. Picturesque things in it they will allow. A trumpet of gold, a throne of gems, gates of pearl, seas of glass, garments of white, all these (merely symbolical) they don't mind. But if I told them that children have tin trumpets off Christmas trees over there, that people sit on chairs, not thrones, that gates are like our gates, seas contain water, and that clothes are worn much like ours here, they would (some of them) be shocked.

Sunny said once: "Martin and I are lively boys, and though I love my Jesus (he always calls Him that) I would not want me to sing hymns all day, mother."

Not for advertisement, but to help mourners, let me say that my book, "Rachel Comforted," will be out soon now, describing fully all that I have here condensed.

This "Rachel" once mourned her child, and "refused to be comforted." But that anguish is past!

Some Notable Events

In Connection With Icebergs and Icefloes.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)

At daylight on the morning of April 30th, 1873, a steamer named the "Tigress" one of the Newfoundland sealing fleet, was ploughing her way in pursuit of seals, amid the ice-laden sea, forty miles from land, off the Southern coast of Labrador in lat. 53.35 north. The morning was hazy, but about five o'clock the fog-curtain rose, and the sun shone out disclosing the glittering ice-masses far and wide. Presently those on board fancied that they saw a small flag fluttering on the top of a hummock, at the distance of a quarter of a mile. The ship was put about and bore down upon it, under the impression that it might be a piece of floating wreck. As the Tigress neared the object, the Stars and Stripes were made out; then human voices were heard uttering feeble cheers, and guns were fired. On coming close to the floe on which the flag was fluttering, a strange sight was disclosed. On it were seen nineteen human beings, ten of them white men and nine Esquimaux. Of the latter two were men, two were women, one of whom carried a baby eight months old in her arms, and four were children. They had a boat with them on the ice, on the stern of which was painted the name "Polaris." The party presented a most forlorn appearance, and had evidently been long exposed to the weather, though not one of them appeared to be sick or disabled. Before leaving the ice, they gave three hearty cheers, such as men utter who have been delivered from impending death.

A THRILLING TALE.
When taken on board, the tale they told was marvellous beyond anything invented in the wildest romances, illustrating the old saying that "truth is stranger than fiction." The purport of their wonderful story was that they were part of the crew of the s.s. Polaris, of the United States Arctic expedition; that when in lat. 77, 35 north, they were accidentally separated from their ship by the sudden breaking up of an ice-floe to which she was moored, on October 15th, 1872, and that ever since they had been drifting on the ice, till now, rescued by the Tigress off the coast of Labrador, six months and a half afterwards, on April 30th, 1873. Thus they had drifted on the ice for over twenty-four degrees of latitude, or one thousand four hundred and forty miles in a direct line; but allowing for the sinuosities of their course, caused by varying winds, they must have voyaged on their cheerless ice-rat more than two thousand miles. Their supply of food, when they started, was not more than sufficient for one month's consumption, and they had lived chiefly on seals and the flesh of a Polar bear. They had no shelter, but the snow huts which in Esquimaux fashion they built on the ice, and in addition to the clothes they wore, they had only a few skins to protect them from the fierce cold. They had passed the gloomy Arctic night in the snow-huts without seeing the sun for eighty-five days. Again and again the floe on which they drifted was broken up, and they had been compelled to make their way to another floating mass amid fearful perils. More than once they had almost perished with hunger, and experienced wonderful deliverances when at the last extremity. But under the sheltering hand of Providence they had been preserved through perils, hardships, cold and famine, and not one of them had ever sickened. The poor little Esquimaux baby, even though but two months old when their voyage began, sheltered carefully in the loving arms of a mother, took no harm, and seemed as lively as any of the party. Truly, it is a marvellous tale of human endurance and courage—unparalleled even in the records of Arctic adventure.

HANS CHRISTIAN.
It adds not a little to the romance of the story to find that one of the party taken from the ice was the Esquimaux, Hans Christian, who figures so largely in the charming narratives of Dr. Kane and Dr. Hayes. Hans is quite a historical character. He seemed broken down and exhausted, as the narrative states. His narrative powers were of the most limited description, as he spoke only broken English, and found it difficult to understand ordinary speech. Were he the only historian of the ice-voyage, his story would be summed up, in a few sentences. Dr. Kane says, when Hans was a youth of nineteen or twenty, and, smitten by the charms of a plump Esquimaux damsel, he, for a time, deserted his commander, and, with a fair maiden on one side and a handsome supply of walrus and seal flesh on the other, mounted his sledge and set off on his Arctic honeymoon. He was an active hunter—so expert that he could spear a bird on the wing. He gave invaluable services to Dr. Kane and his party; how he catered for their table; how he was the man who discovered in the snow the track of the sledge, thus enabling Kane to save the lives of eight of his men in the last extremity from cold and exhaustion; and how, too, he with Morton, made the celebrated journey by sledge on the ice, when as they thought, they saw the open polar sea; and how, at last, he saved the lives of all by bringing a supply of fresh walrus meat from Etah Bay.

THE "POLARIS" EXPEDITION.
In order to understand the ice-voyage of the rescued party, we must follow the "Polaris" for a little while on her adventurous voyage in search of the North Pole. In 1871 the American Navy Department gave the wooden gunboat Periwinkle, three hundred and eighty-seven tons, which was re-christened the "Polaris," for an Arctic exploring expedition up Smith's Sound, to be commanded by Capt. C. F. Hall. Congress appropriated $50,000 for the expenses, but no naval officer accompanied the expedition. Dr. Bessola, a naturalist and doctor of medicine, who was in the German expedition of 1869, was placed in charge of the scientific department, and Capt. Buddington, a New London whaling captain, was appointed ice-master. Capt. Hall sailed from New York at the end of June, 1871, and touched at St. John's, Newfoundland, where he remained a few days. He sailed again for Greenland on July 24th; reached Disco, where he remained till August 17th; touched at Upernivik, and on August 24th sailed from Tesnasack for Smith's Sound. The most wonderful good fortune attended the outset of his voyage. The season proved to be extremely favorable—the most open known for many years. Capt. Hall had the rare good fortune to cross Melville Bay and reach the North Water with very few impediments from the ice. On entering Smith's Sound he found open water, and met with but few ice-packs, and these of no great extent. The same good fortune attended him, as he steamed rapidly up Kennedy Channel, and passed Cape Constitution, from which Morton and Hans saw what they concluded was an open Polar sea. But instead of finding this open sea, Capt. Hall, after crossing the mouth of the bay which he named afterwards "Polaris Bay," found himself in a narrow channel, about forty-five miles in length; and which he named "Robeson's Channel," after the Secretary of the American Navy. On September 1st he found himself in lat. 80, 16, the highest at that period reached by any expedition or any individual. The land on the Greenland side now trended eastward, and from the appearance of a water-sky in this direction, Hall concluded that another bay or sound opened there. On the American side Grinnel Land, as far as eighty-three degrees, could be plainly distinguished. Unfortunately, instead of pushing on, and daring everything, taking fortune at the bow, Captain Hall paused, perhaps startled by his very success, perhaps dreading to take his ship farther so late in the season, made fast to an ice-floe, began to drift south, and the golden opportunity of reaching the Pole was lost. Ice was met with, but it was far from being an impenetrable pack when Hall stopped. How much farther he might have advanced it is impossible to say.

LOST OPPORTUNITY.
For three days the Polaris drifted south, and Capt. Hall then found himself at the southern point of Robeson's Channel, which he named Cape Lupatin. Here the ice slackened; steam was got up, and steering eastward in Polaris Bay, he reached, at its head, a harbor which he named "Thank-God Harbor," and in which he determined to winter. He cast anchor near a huge iceberg which was aground, and which he called "Providence Iceberg." On Sept. 5th, he landed a portion of his stores and proceeded to erect the wooden observatory he had on board in which the scientific corps were to take observations. On the 12th a musk ox was shot. These animals were found to be quite plentiful in Polaris Bay; and before darkness set in, twenty-five of them were killed. Every preparation having been made for passing the long winter, Capt. Hall decided on a sledging expedition with his dogs, along the great valley, at some distance from the coast, which he observed stretching northward, in order to pioneer the way for Spring operations. Accordingly he started in company with Mr. Chester, chief mate, and two Esquimaux, Hans Christian and Joe. This party only succeeded in penetrating about twenty-five miles north of their winter quarters, where they discovered a small bay, about five miles wide at its mouth, in lat. 82, which Hall named "Newman's Bay," after his friend Rev. Dr. Newman. After an absence of a fortnight, Capt. Hall and his party returned to the ship. He was immediately seized with illness and died, in about ten days, of apoplexy, on November 8th, 1871. He was buried ashore in Polaris Bay. (There were conflicting reports going round at the time the castaways arrived in Newfoundland that Capt. Hall did not die a natural death, but there is no reference to these reports in the narrative.) The winter quarters of the Polaris were in lat. 81, 38 north, much farther north than any white man had ever wintered before; yet the discomforts were not greater than those of Kane's party in Rensselaer Harbor, three degrees farther south.

CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

Why Go Out Into the Rain Expecting Protection From a Sponge?

Rather a foolish supposition, you say; but nevertheless you do when you wear a raincoat in which the rain protection is embodied in the proofing of the outer cloth only, which absorbs the rain much as a sponge does, making a heavy, uncomfortable, dragging load for you to carry round.

These are the disadvantages that come with every coat that has not an oiled silk lining between the outer cloth and the cotton lining; the greatest feature in raincoat making and guaranteed rain protection that the manufacturers of Legislative Council.

May 3.

The House went into Committee on the following Bills entitled:

"An Act respecting the effect and application of certain Acts subsequent to the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series)";

"An Act to amend 'The Industrial Societies Act, 1919'";

"An Act to amend Chapter 41 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Newfoundland Medical Board'"; which were adopted without amendment and will be read a third time to-morrow.

The Committee on a "Bill to amend 'The Food Control Act'" had to await some time, as the Hons. Mr. Mews and Mr. Anderson had something to say on the subject.

The Hon. Mr. Mews stated that he was a member of the Food Control Board, and was aware of the difficulties that body had to contend with. In speaking of the sugar shortage, he said that some 5,000 barrels would come here during the month. Speaking of conditions in general the hon. member said, there is here now an uncertainty and unrest that is alarming to him, and this unrest is principally felt amongst the salaried class. It is mainly this class that is feeling the H.C.L. The Profiteering Act to be introduced by the Government may have some effect, but then it is hard to define what is profiteering. Merchants are making money on one article and losing it on another. He thought that antagonism would do no good and best results would come by all working in harmony.

Hon. Mr. Anderson, in speaking on the bill, said he hoped that the three members added to the F.C.B. will help to arrive at a solution of the H.C.L. At the same time no bill has ever reduced it as much as the Daylight Bill. After a few remarks on the Daily News editorial, re the Daylight Saving Scheme, Hon. Mr. Anderson quoted an array of figures on dry goods, showing the tremendous increases that had taken place in the markets since the war began. He dealt also with local manufactures quoting boots in 1914 at $3 per pair, and $9.50 in 1920. Speaking of the coal situation, Hon. Mr. Anderson said efforts should be made to get the Bell Island ore boats to bring us coal. He hoped the Government would make an earnest effort to get steamers for this trade, and he was sure they would be self-supporting at it.

He failed to see why people are to-day charged $3.00 for a ton of soft coal. Living, said Mr. Anderson, has increased here from 120 to 150 p.c. above pre-war rates, and as we are overtaxed about 30 p.c. he thought the Government should grapple with the H.C.L. by reducing taxation on commodities that pay an ad valorem duty. He gave the bill his heartiest support and it was adopted without amendment to be read a third time to-morrow.

The second reading of a Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Department of Public Works" was deferred.

The Leader of the Government, Hon. G. Shea, asked permission to lay on the table Reports of the Church of England and Methodist Schools, and also various papers connected with the Treaty of Peace.

The House adjourned till Wednesday.

End the cloudy film

Most teeth are dimmed by film. A viscous film clings to them, enters crevices and stays. Most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

It is this film-coat that discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea, and very few people escape it.

The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it, so the tooth brush does not end it. Thus most people suffer from that film.

Now dental science, after years of searching, has found a way to combat it. Able authorities have amply proved its efficiency. Now leading dentists everywhere advise it, and millions of people have come to employ it.

A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent is sent to all who ask. See coupon.

Those Pearly Teeth
Learn how people get them

All statements approved by high dental authorities

Millions of people have adopted a new teeth cleaning method. Wherever you look you see pearly teeth nowadays. Let this ten-day test reveal what this method means to you.

Everyone is welcome

Now this new method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And everyone is welcome to a ten-day test.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digester of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has found a harmless activating method, and pepsin can be every day applied.

Two other new-day requisites are combined in Pepsodent. So this method in three ways brings unique results, and everyone should know them.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears. It will be a revelation.

Do this for your sake and your family's sake. Judge the method by results. Cut out the coupon now, for few things are more important than whiter, safer teeth.

A scientific film combatant which, after 5 years' tests, is now advised by leading dentists everywhere

Drop Freezone on a touchy corn, then lift that corn off with fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little Freezone on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then you lift it right out. Yes, magic! No humbug! A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

Freezone is the sensational discovery of a Cincinnati genius. It is wonderful.

Something New Forever Arises.

"No haircuts and no shaves" is the slogan which has been adopted in a city-wide strike in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., against a proposed increase in prices by the barbers.

An indignant Chinaman complained to the London police recently that a colored man had victimized him by selling him several cans said to contain opium, but which, when opened, were found to contain nothing more harmful than crab apple jelly. The Chinaman paid six hundred dollars for the jelly, and he was hot on the trail of the dusky deceiver.

The time-honored question of the ages at which a man becomes a bachelor, and a woman a spinster, is about to be settled by France. The Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies intends to fix thirty years as the age at which an unmarried man in France becomes liable to the bachelor tax of ten per cent. It is expected that this tax will become effective on June 1st. The impending decision was said to have hastened many marriages during the Easter holidays.

A St. Mary's, Ontario man, who believes in the old saying, "see a pin and pick it up, and that day you'll have good luck," saw a safety-pin on the sidewalk in front of the Windsor Hotel, St. Mary's, the other day. Bending down to get it, his hat tumbled off and fell in the gutter, his eye-glasses fell and broke on the pavement, his suspenders gave way behind, he broke the button-hole on the back of his shirt-collar, and he all but lost his new front teeth. But he got the pin.

The recent brilliant race meet at Autouil, Paris, recently, brought a new sensation. Eighty per cent. of the women wore an eyeglass, jauntily stuck in the right eye; also, walking sticks, thick gloves, tailor-made suits cut in severe masculine lines and low heels. There was one concession to feminine coquetry, however. Skirts were generally a few inches shorter than heretofore, revealing the entire knee faultlessly enclosed in priceless silk stockings, kept in place by garters adorned with flowers and in some cases with jewels. Not a few women carried parrots on their left shoulders, held captive by tiny gold chains, connecting one of the bird's legs to the owner's wrist.

No Hope for Decline.

Sugar at 33 to 35 cents a pound retail by July 1, and increasing high prices for all commodities as long as production and transportation are continually held up by strikes, is the prediction now placed before New Yorkers. E. F. Busnell, secretary of Austin Nichols and Co., speaking at a luncheon of the Manufacturers' Export Association, declared Friday that prices of all foodstuffs would soar beyond present rates. "As long as there are strikes every five minutes," he said, "production must decrease rather than increase. We have got to get labor and capital together, extend farm credits, and improve the entire food production situation if there is to be any relief." The 35c. sugar price was predicted by sugar men. They said decreased production and increased consumption were to blame. Members of the "flying squadron" held, however, that speculation and hoarding by sugar dealers had much to do with the higher prices.

Ratio of Doctors.

In a survey prepared by the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Toronto, in connection with the prospective gift of $5,000,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation for Medical Research in Canada, it is shown that Toronto has one doctor to 567 of population; London, one doctor to 711; Hamilton, one doctor to 790, and Ottawa, one doctor to 340. Guelph comes nearest to Toronto of any of the cities in Ontario with one doctor to 656 of population. In the full call of provinces, Ontario leads with one doctor to 766 of population. British Columbia comes next with one doctor to 963. Nova Scotia is third with one doctor to 1,993, and Manitoba fourth, with one doctor to 1,446.

The Most Beautiful Car in the World

A New Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?
