His Mirror Told Him of Exhausted Condition

Mr. R. Paulin, Toutes Aides, Man., writes: "I became so run down and weak that my heart became affected, and I would sometimes have to remain in bed for several days. Some one advised me to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I did, and soon began to gain in weight and feel better. I have taken a great many boxes of these wonderful pills, and am feeling ten years younger. Dr. Chase's Medicines, as well as his Receipt Book, are a great help to us, for we live 40 miles from doctors and railroads."

The Imprisoned Heiress —OR— The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Oh, I dare say everybody who knows him does love him," replied Toplift, somewhat puzzled by the mood and manner of her young mistress. "He speaks kindly to every one, and he is as rich as any lord has need to be; and he is handsome."

"His eyes were so beautiful!" said the Lady Almee, dreamily. "When he looked at me for that minute it seemed to me that I was looking into the heart of one of those panthers, such as are in the flower-pot yonder. And his hair, Dorcas, was so very fair—yet not too fair. He has a spirited face—"

"But what of it, my pet?" cried the governess, uneasily. "What is it to you or me how Lord Ashcroft looks?"

The maiden started as though she had been rudely aroused from a dream and a soft flush, like the faint pink tinge of a sea-shell, crept into her cheeks, and her dusky eyes drooped with a sweet confusion she had never before experienced.

"I don't know that he is anything to me, Dorcas," she answered, "but he looked so brave and grand—just as if he could have done those noble deeds that Sir Walter Scott's heroes did."

"I presume he might; the Ashcrofts are a brave race. But his looks or his deeds are nothing to you or me. His lordship has come to Egremont to visit the Lady Alexina, to whom he is betrothed."

The pink flush died out of the sweet young face of Almee, and her eyes showed a slightly troubled expression but her serenity was not disturbed. She murmured, softly:

"He is to wed the Lady Alexina! It seems to me she has everything, Dorcas. She is free to do as she likes. You spoke once of her horse. How delightful it must be to ride in the fresh air, through the woods and plantations! And Egremont belongs to her; and now she is going to have Lord Ashcroft for a husband."

Toplift bent over her jewels for some moments in silence, as if planning a reply, and finally she said:

"You are murmuring against Providence, Lady Almee. Some have one lot and some have another. You have been so happy and contented all your life, that it seems strange to hear you complain now. I hope you don't envy the Lady Alexina?"

"No, I think I don't envy her advantages. I never saw her, Dorcas. Is she very beautiful?"

"Very; yet not so beautiful as you, my pet."

"Do you think me beautiful?" asked the young girl, innocently, full of artless pleasure at the compliment.

"Certainly. You have rare beauty and loveliness, Lady Almee. The Lady Alexina cannot compare with you; yet she is very queenly, and will be much admired when she goes to court at Lady Ashcroft. She is darker than you and her hair is black, not bronze like yours, and her cheeks have more color in them."

"I wish I could see her!" murmured the maiden. "Perhaps she would love me, and be my sister."

"You can never see her to speak to her; but if you want to catch a glimpse of her, I dare say you can do so now. She is gone sailing with Lord Ashcroft and Mr. Indor."

Lady Almee sprang up lightly from the Indian couch on which she had been reclining, and her hands fluttered eagerly among the folds of the shutters. By drawing a cord two or three of the folds were drawn together, leaving quite a space free as a loop-hole, through which the maiden might make her observations.

She hastened to avail herself of it, her face and person being fully screened from the scrutiny of any one upon the sea.

"I see the yacht, Dorcas!" she cried joyfully, after a minute's survey of the waters. "There are four, yes, five persons in it; but I cannot see their faces. Please give me the glass."

The governess took up from a bracket an ivory-mounted sea-glass and handed it to the Lady Almee, who adjusted it and then looked long and earnestly through it.

"I can't see them," she said, at last putting down her glass; "the sail interrupts my view. But I saw a fair, handsome lady—"

"The Lady Lorean Ashcroft—Lord Ashcroft's sister. Only she is not handsome."

"She looked good, Dorcas. And I saw the boatman—the same I have seen so often. They are going up the coast now. Perhaps when they return I shall see them better."

She proceeded to pile up the Moorish cushions upon the couch, and when she had formed a throne sufficiently high for her purpose, she mounted it, and resumed her observations with unwearied patience.

"I should like to go with them, Dorcas!" she said, suddenly. "Do you think I shall have to remain shut up here always?"

"I don't know."

"I should like so much to wander in the gardens you have described to me, Dorcas. It must be pleasant to pluck the flowers from their beds in the earth, or see them growing, so full of color and so healthy, as some of those mamma brings me. They fade and die in that dark drawing-room, for they don't like the lamplight. I wonder sometimes in the night, when you are asleep, what I could ever have done to be condemned to such an imprisonment, from the very hour of my birth, too. It would almost seem that I had no right to be born."

Instead of replying, Toplift arose and went into the drawing-room, lighted the chandelier, and seated herself to the perusal of a new novel, which had been already read by the Lady Almee. She was soon so absorbed in its contents as to quite forget her young charge, and the maiden resumed her day-dreaming.

She watched the yacht until it had passed beyond the range of her vision and kept her eyes fixed upon the spot at which it had disappeared until, some time later, it reappeared.

Then she applied herself to studying the faces of the excursionists through her glass.

There was now nothing to obstruct her view, and the features of the Lady Alexina were fully revealed to her. She could even see the haughty character of the heiress' countenance, and she felt chilled by it.

"I don't think I could love her," she murmured; "and I don't think she would love me."

She next regarded Lyle Indor, but his face was too mild and effeminate to look brave and spirited, so she looked at Lord Ashcroft, with a sudden blush, and an involuntary shyness of manner.

She gazed at him long and earnestly, smiling in sympathy when he gesticulated, uttering a cry of fear when he changed his seat, and bestowing upon him continually an admiring glance that would have delighted his lordship could he but have beheld it.

When the yacht had again passed out of sight, the excursionists nearing home, the Lady Almee dropped her glass, sank down upon the couch, and gave herself up to pleasant thoughts.

"Lionel!" she murmured, softly. "I wonder if he has forgotten me. I wonder if he thinks kindly of me. He must know that I am not the ghost of the Lady Alexina. I must tell him I am not, sometime, but I will be very careful not to betray mamma's secret. Lionel! How sweetly it sounds! Dear Lionel!"

As she linked his lordship's name to the endearing epithet, she looked around her, fearing that Toplift had heard her, and then buried her blushing face in the pillow.

CHAPTER XV.

The evening had long since fallen. In the little room of the hidden prisoner, Egremont the fire blazed merrily, lighting up the chamber with a pleasant radiance. The firelight played upon the blue silk hangings on the wall, over the gorgeous carpet, and upon the couch of dusk-gold, which was now unoccupied. It flickered also over the face and form of the Lady Almee, who, seated in her fauteuil, was now and then dreamily touching the strings of her guitar, which lay in her lap.

The lamps were not lighted—they were never brought into the boudoir—for the glow of the fire was far pleasanter.

The door opening into the drawing-room was closed, and in the latter apartment, by the full light of the chandelier, Toplift sat reading.

The Lady Almee had spent the evening in solitude. She preferred her own society to that of her governess, for she had gained new food for reflection.

The last three days seemed to her to have been crowded with events.

Twice she had for a few minutes escaped from the surveillance of her jailer; she had seen a man handsome and nobler than any her imagination had ever pictured; and to-day she had not only beheld him again, but had seen the Lady Alexina, of whom she had heard and thought so much.

"Yule logs" for the Christmas feast are rolls of sponge cake iced with chocolate and dotted with white icing to represent snow.

Delicious canapés are of fresh crab meat mixed with hot cheese sauce flavored with onion, and served on toasted rounds of bread.

The housewife who has time will find opportunities for delightful Xmas gifts in attractively packed boxes of home-made candies.

A pasteboard shield with a slit thru which the handle of the fork is inserted, is a comfort when toasting marshmallows.

By EDGAR GUEST.

HIS DAUGHTER.

He has a daughter young and fair Who runs her fingers through his hair Stroking with a gentle hand his cheek And bends into his ear to speak; Then whispers low—"well, can't you guess? Something about another dress."

Again she lies across his knee, Affectionate as love can be, Hears his great heart beat, soft and low, And whispers: "Dad, I love you so! So good, and brave, and wise you are! I'd really like to own a car."

When he comes weary from the town, Sometimes she brings him his slippers down, Draws up his footstool and his chair, And makes him comfortable there, Then whispers words to him not strange: "Dear dad, I need some extra change."

A daughter's love! Oh, gift divine! Two lovely arms that gently twine About his neck, two hands that play And brush the stains of care away; Brown, innocent and lustrous eyes That flirt with dad, so old and wise.

Artful and cunning! Aye, 'tis true, Decent work for love to do; Yet just as artful is the dad Who spends his years to make her glad. He gratified her slightest whim And lets her think she's fooling him.

Pugilist Johnson Severely Injured

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Jack Johnson, one time heavyweight champion of the world, is in a hospital at Elgin, Ill., suffering from injuries he received Tuesday, when the automobile in which he was riding turned over and knocked him out for the count of ten.

Johnson, with three friends, was driving at a great speed on the highway near Elgin, when the wheels of the car became locked, causing it to roll over into a ditch.

Johnson was cut about the face and suffered other injuries, which will keep him in the hospital for several weeks.

Household Notes.

Onions are good parboiled, stuffed with seasoned, buttered breadcrumbs and baked.

To make creamed chicken patties extraordinary temptings, add diced mushrooms.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever quickly made. Ready about 10 minutes.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or croup in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Four 24 ounces of Pinex in a 16 oz. bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make 18 ounces—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly soothes the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 24 ounces of Pinex with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

London Museum Experts—Authorities Unable to Explain Vision in Specimens from Subterranean Sahara Pools or Presence There.

The American Museum of Natural History has a new mystery to solve. It is in fact, according to announcement yesterday, two mysteries in one. There were received recently at the museum specimens of fish from the Sahara. Fish of the minnow variety are not unusual in the waterholes of the desert. They are carried from one waterhole to another while in their embryonic state, when eggs cling to the feet of birds. But among the latest specimens are tilapia and examples of perch-like fish whose presence in the subterranean waters of the Sahara has not been explained. In the case of these fish the eggs are carefully guarded until the young are hatched and these watched over until able to protect themselves.

The mystery is added to be the fact that these fish can see, proof, naturalists say, that their arrival in the subterranean desert pools was comparatively recent.

In a statement the museum authority say: "While the fish themselves are not unusual in appearance, the fact that they came from subterranean waters in the Sahara is most uncommon, because no satisfactory explanation of their presence there has yet been arrived at."

"Although coming from subterranean waters, these fish are not blind, as is often the case with fish occupying caves for long periods of geologic time, as, for example, the blind fishes of Marmoth Cave, Kentucky. This renders the question of their presence all the more puzzling since their journey must have been made in recent times. Scientists are at a loss to know how they traveled there."

DOING IT EARLY.

I'm starting on my Christmas shopping long weeks before the day arrives; from store to store you see me hopping to purchase dolls and butcher knives; all kinds of do-dads I am coping, to send to people and their wives. Long before the bells are pealing my Christmas tank will all be bought, the holly stuff to deck the ceiling, the dogs for Yuletide willie-waught; contented then I shall be feeling, peace will pervade my dome of thought. And, having done my Christmas labors, I'll sit at ease and smoke cigars, and watch my mad and frantic neighbors go chasing to the toy bazaars, to buy the children wooden sabres and Noah's arks and small tin cars. They'll carry bundles by the dozen, they'll push and shove and groan and sigh, and roundly cuss the aunt or cousin for whom some present they must buy, with weary clerks around them buzzin', and loosed shoppers crowding nigh. It is a thing of stress and trial, this shopping when the rush is on; but Christmas suffers no denial, you must buy stuff for Uncle John, and for his wife a white rose phial, and for the niece a skirt of lawn. And as you blow your hard earned coppers, pushed on and hither by the crowd, exuding curses that are whoppers, your whiskers torn, your spirit bowed, I'll think, while gazing at the hoppers, the sense with which I am endowed.

NAIROBI.—Runners have brought message from the Uganda-Congo border beyond Lake Victoria relating to Mr. P. D. van Watteville, a naturalist, savant, collector and noted hunter, who was gathering specimens on the Berse Museum, accompanied by his daughter. They were seeking a white rhinoceros when they were attacked by a lion, and Mr. van Watteville was fatally maulled. Natives with spears revenged him from being carried off, as he died within thirty hours, tended by his daughter, who was left alone among the natives. Mr. van Watteville and his daughter had been through Kenya and Uganda during the past year hunting and collecting.—Reuter.

Newfoundland's Dependency

With the announcement made yesterday that a delegation will shortly proceed to Quebec to discuss matters bearing upon the Labrador Boundary dispute, public interest is again centred upon our great dependency, and a few facts with regard to the extent of this country, its history, and its potential wealth, although familiar to many, may be of interest to some of our readers and may help to refresh the memories of others.

The Labrador, as the triangular peninsula lying to the eastward of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Hudson Bay is called, is about 420,000 miles in extent. This vast country, of which the greater part belongs to the province of Quebec, has for the most part never been accurately surveyed, and it may truthfully be said, was never considered of any great commercial value until recent years. Fishermen visited the coast from the earliest times to ply their occupation in its teeming waters, and trappers were the only visitors who disturbed the solitude of the interior. For the most part it was regarded as a barren wind-swept plateau, where the intense cold of winter and the swarms of mosquitoes and other discomforts in summer made life unendurable.

When the Treaty of Paris put an end to the power of the French in Canada in 1763, the whole of the coast of Labrador extending from St. John's River to Hudson's Straits was placed under the jurisdiction of the Governor of Newfoundland. Ten years later, however, because of difficulties which arose out of grants formerly made to persons during the rule of the French, it was considered advisable to return the southern and eastern part of the coast to Canada, and our jurisdiction was not restored until 1809. When Sir John Duckworth was appointed Governor of the Island, his commission gave him authority over this coast and also over the Island of Anticosti. In the Appendix to the Journal of the House of Assembly for 1864, the western boundary of Newfoundland and Labrador is defined and, roughly speaking, consists of a line drawn due north from Blanc Sablon to Cape Chudleigh, and corresponding to the watershed. Although our rights to the hinterland have been for years in dispute, we have issued grants, exercised judicial authority and collected duties in this area, which consists of anywhere from 100,000 to 150,000 square miles, and the right to exercise these powers has been generally conceded.

It was not until the wealth of the natural resources of the Labrador became better known that the ownership became a live question, and even after that, until recent years, no real attempt was made to arrive at a settlement of the dispute. So far as we were concerned, Newfoundland did little or nothing to ascertain the value of her dependency or strengthen our title to it, but Canada, which was more alive to its interests, took steps to learn all that was possible of the country and to gather data which might assist in disproving our claims to ownership.

Even in 1915, when Sir Edward Morris introduced into the House Resolutions for the confirmation of a contract with the Nfld. Products Corporation, Ltd., he had to admit that it was necessary to go outside this Colony to obtain exact information bearing upon the natural resources of the territory. Since then, by most commendable perseverance on the part of the Hon. Sir P. T. McGrath, and by the courtesy of the Canadian authorities, we have become better acquainted with this neglected child of ours, and this knowledge has awakened us to the fact that it is far too valuable an asset to alienate from our affections, mercenary though they be, without very serious consideration and an adequate quid pro quo.

The facts given by Sir Edward Morris in the House of Assembly might be considered exaggerated were it not for the fact that they were taken from a report prepared by Dr. A. P. Low, Deputy Minister of Mines at Ottawa, and they are worth quoting in order to emphasize the value placed upon the water power alone.

In speaking of the Hamilton River system, as seen and surveyed by him, Dr. Low says:

"The Northwest River enters on the north side about 80 miles beyond the Narrows. It is only about 100 yards wide at its mouth, but is fifteen feet in depth. Half a mile inland it expands into a lake which contracts further up to form the outlet of Grand Lake, a large body of water extending westward for about forty miles.

"The Hamilton River is the most important stream of the eastern watershed of the Peninsula. It is upward of five hundred miles in length . . . and twenty-seven miles from its mouth is the Muskrat Falls, where the river drops about seventy feet. Forty miles above are the Porcupine Falls; and then come Gull Stream Rapids and the Horseshoe Rapids. . . . Grand Falls (which is further upstream) has a perpendicular drop of 302 feet, and including the series of rapids above and below the total fall is 760 feet."

In the Commission of Conservation of Canada Report for 1911, the Hamilton River was referred to as follows:

"The Muskrat Falls has an approximate head in feet of 70 feet, with an estimated horsepower of 120,000.

"Grand Falls has an approximate head of 302, capable of producing 120,000 horse-power.

"The Grand Falls, including 12 miles of rapids above and below, has a head of 760 feet, capable of producing 300,000 horse-power."

In the above Reports the references are confined to certain rivers in but one section of this country, which contains many mighty waters. Other reports deal with the timber, and others again with the mineral resources. Apart altogether from the fisheries round the coast, there are the extensive timber resources to be taken into account, the inland fisheries, the practically inexhaustible supply of fur, and the attractions which the country offers to tourist traffic. All these assets have to be carefully considered in any attempts to make a bargain with our Canadian friends, and even if our legal title to this property has still to be settled, the fact that we have been in undisputed occupation for generations cannot be overlooked. It may be that other parties than Newfoundland, Canada and Quebec are interested financially in a settlement of this dispute, but with them we are not concerned, nor do we imagine that their individual claims will be allowed to carry any weight with the Governments one way or another.

HEALTHY BABIES.

'An Ounce of Prevention is Worth a Pound of Cure.'

GOOD HABITS.—Habits become second nature especially in children, and therefore try to train your babies right from birth in good habits. Children should be taught to obey at once, and to understand that you will not give them their own way if they cry. Try to correct them lovingly, and they will soon learn right from wrong.

By bringing method into all we do in housekeeping, in dealing with the children, in preparing and clearing away meals, it will be much easier for Mothers, and more time can be given to looking after the habits of the children.

A Tribute to Late Canon Lockyer

Rev. William Lockyer was an honorary Canon of All Saints Cathedral. He had never been stationed in Halifax, but was very well known here. He was for many years rector at Port Morien, Cape Breton, where he was greatly beloved by the parishioners, and where he had been an indefatigable worker in the interests of the people. Mr. Lockyer was born in Newfoundland, but educated at King's College, and in graduation was a contemporary of the late Archdeacon Martell of Nova Scotia. Archdeacon Armitage, of St. Paul's, when informed of Mr. Lockyer's death, said that the news of his demise would be heard with the utmost regret, throughout Cape Breton. He was well-known in the Synod, where his ability as a speaker and a worker had often been called into service. On many occasions when visiting Halifax he was a guest of the Archdeacon.—Morning Chronicle.

BEING INQUIRED INTO.—The Magistrate inquiring into the death by drowning of David King was continued yesterday afternoon, when the evidence of three witnesses was taken.

Supreme Court

(Before all Bench.)

The Minister of Finance and Customs and Sir Edgar Bowring.

This is a claim for income tax. Mr. R. Cramm for the Crown; H. A. Winter for Sir Edgar Bowring. Mr. Cramm, explaining the matter, said a special case had been stated and the facts were agreed upon by both Counsel. The defendant was assessed for taxes amounting to one hundred and twenty-three thousand and odd dollars, based on the returns made by the defendant in 1918. He received part of this income from Nfld. investments, but the greater part came from English and foreign sources. At the beginning of 1918 he was appointed High Commissioner at London and occupied the position until 1923. He received no notice to make returns during the period, but admits his liability to pay an income tax. Investments. The defendant is a member of the Legislature, and since his appointment as High Commissioner, has taken his seat there. He also has a dwelling at Topsail, which was occupied during accountability periods. The Crown Counsel argued that the question resolved itself into the interpretation of the words in the Act "resident or ordinary resident." Mr. Winter pointed out that Sir Edgar paid his taxes in England on his income from investments in that country for the five years which the local assessor was claiming. He argued that Sir Edgar was not an ordinary resident of Newfoundland but he was a resident of England and as such had paid his taxes there. Argument in the matter had not concluded at recess hour, and the case was adjourned until Tuesday next.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Dec. 5th.—The weather still fair but cold and causes me to lay long in bed, being little inclined to rise from a warm bed. At length up and abroad, and the first thing I do is to wet one foot in the slush that covers the ground, to my great discomfort. Walking on Water Street, I met Mr. Ashbourne, who tells me he has been told by many that I did write a pretty piece in my journal of his sealing plant in Twillingate, and compliments me highly on it, which, if I were not becoming accustomed to such praise, would cause me to blush at it. Anon comes my wife, and is in great trouble of her gifts for Christmas being that there are so many things to be had that she knows not what to choose. At this I did tell her that it would please me all the more if she bought none of all, since my accomplice with the banquo would be all the better for it. This make the wretch fly into a rage, and calls me the meanest man she ever met nor would she have married me if she did know before how mean I was. But Lord, what strange creatures are women since they do seem to possess no sense of humor at all, and do appear how Adam's rib was the greatest maker of trouble since the world began.

This night to take out my motor coach being that my wife would have me take her abroad in it, but the thing gets stuck fast in the snow and needs must I have a team of horses to draw it out. This makes me so madd that I do leave my wife to walk home alone and I off to the Club for fear that if I remain with her I might say things I would be sorry for.

FRANCE DEPORTING DISORDERLY COMMUNISTS.

PARIS, Dec. 6. The Herriot Government has decided to suppress the Communist agitation in France which was evidenced strikingly by the demonstration at the Juarez Pantheon ceremony and on the more recent occasion of the Ambassador Krassin's arrival from Moscow. A large number of foreign agitators are to be expelled and the first group of fifty is being started over the frontier to-day. Premier Herriot's decision was made public after his conversation yesterday with the British Foreign Secretary, Austen Chamberlain, who is here on his way to the Rome meeting of the League Nations Council. "Receiving reporters last night, the Premier said, "Mr. Chamberlain and I readily agreed to the necessity of putting down Bolshevik activities. We are obliged to employ in France a large number of foreign workmen and it is precisely among them that elements of disorder are recruited. We need and we will have a proper immigration policy."

INTER CLUB BILLIARDS.

Skinner Defeats Rabbits—Winner Gave Brilliant Performance.
The second round of the Inter Club Billiard Tournament between the B. I.S. and Masonic Clubs, opened in the B.I.S. Rooms last night, before a large attendance of interested spectators. The first game of the second round of the series saw pitted together two of the cities leading players, viz: W. B. Skinner (B.I.S.) and G. Rabbits (Masonic). At the opening of play Rabbits gained a slight lead over his opponent, but the balls soon reversed in favor of Skinner, and from then until the end the latter player had matters all his own way and won out by a large margin. Skinner's performance after the century mark had been reached was nigh perfect. He always managed to nurse the balls in the desired position and ran up break after break. A feature of which was three breaks in succession, 47, 39, 39, which gave him a substantial lead. Rabbits on the other hand was playing too careful at the same to be effective. At times it looked as if he would run up a high score, but the balls would either separate, or miss an easy hazard or cannon shot. The breaks were:—

W. B. Skinner (B.I.S.)—350—19, 21, 32, 17, 47, 39, 39, 24, 20, 28, 25 unfinished—311.
The above breaks in a game of 350 billiards, totalling 311 points, constituted a record in local billiard tournaments. Skinner is deserving of every congratulation for his excellent showing.

G. W. Rabbits (Masonic)—174—21, 20, 20, 14, 20, 36—131.

To-Night's Games.
At the B.I.S. rooms to-night at 7.30 the players will be A. Foster (Masonic) vs. G. Halley (B.I.S.) and at nine o'clock the final game of the first round will be played by E. Fox (Masonic) and D. French (B.I.S.).

The B.I.S. are now leading by 291 points, 115 of this being obtained at the Masonic rooms.

LADIES BECOMING PROFICIENT BOWLERS.

At the Bowling Alley last night, two teams of ladies, employees of the Royal Stores and James Baird, Ltd., played a game which proved very interesting to the contestants and the few privileged spectators. This is the third game that has been played by these teams, and on the two previous occasions, Baird's team was victorious. That the ladies are becoming proficient in the game is apparent from the scores, which should make some of the male players take notice.

HOPPE WINS ONCE MORE.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—Willie Hoppe, 18.2 balk line billiard champion, defeated Jake Schaefer, former title-holder, in the final block of their special 3,200 point match here last night. The score was:—Hoppe, 3,200; Schaefer, 2,898.

$4,000 FOR THE LAY DOWN.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—Fred Fulton, Tommy Fuentis and their managers, will be tried jointly in the Superior Court here on a charge of conspiring to violate the boxing laws. With the exception of Fuentis, who was released on his own recognizance, all were held under $1,000 bail which they placed with the court.

One of the witnesses was Harry M. Lykke, a Culver City newspaperman, who became acquainted with Fulton upon the latter's arrival here from Minneapolis. Lykke declared that the alleged scheme was perfected between the managers and fighters during an automobile ride to the stadium where the encounter was held.

Tommy Ryan, one time champion, created a stir in the packed court room early in the proceedings when he testified that Fulton had told him in the fighter's hotel room at Culver City, that he (Fulton) "was in no condition to do any fighting," and that he was to receive $4,000 for "laying down," while Reddy was to get an additional $2,000 for his share in the deal.

WOMAN WRESTLER LOST HER TEMPER.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—Between a heckling woman wrestling fan and a strange hold, Cora Livingston, Boston woman wrestler lost her temper and the decision in her match with Louise Gardner, of Wakefield, at the Grand Opera House here. Early in the one fall affair Cora slipped away from her opponent, climbed out of the ring and slapped a woman who had been jeering her and rooting for Miss Gardner. The officials tore the two apart and getting back into the ring, Cora vented her rage on Louise, and administered the strange hold. When she refused to relinquish it, the judges disqualified her and gave Louise the match.

THE SCIENTIFIC KING.

Granland Rice, in the New York Herald-Tribune, says—Those who doubt that Tom Gibbons is the best defensive boxer in the world will have an argument on their hands they may not carry through.

There is no one close to the St. Paul veteran in this respect. Through fifteen rounds Dempsey did him little damage and through 10 rounds Carpenter could not hit him with a shotgun. Gibbons can hit when he decides to come out from his defensive barricade and let one fly. He is unquestionably the finest boxer in the game, figured from the scientific angle, with no one even close.

Gibbons has been fighting for eleven or twelve years and has never been knocked off his feet. His one poor showing came against Harry Greb, when an attack of influenza did not add to his ability on that night. He may figure more along defensive lines than aggressive lines at times, but his record shows that he has used his head for more than a punching bag.

MONTGOMERY K.O'D BOSTON FIGHTER.

Football Star, Heavyweight Sensation, Won Bout At Boston On Tuesday.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Sully Montgomery, former Centre College football star, registered a technical knockout over Battling McCreary in the 10th round of their contest for heavyweight honors under the auspices of the Commercial A. C. in Mechanics Hall, on Tuesday night. McCreary was in a distressed condition coming up for the final round, the bell having saved him from being counted out in the round previous. The final chapter, the most distressing for McCreary, lasted about 10 seconds, when Referee Joe O'Connor walked between the men just as Montgomery was about to put over the punch that would have rocked the local man into slumber land.

Montgomery has what fight fans like—the punch. He is quite crude in boxing style but makes up in hitting what he now lacks in finesse. He does his best fighting at long range and packs a tremendous blow. Every time scored on McCreary the local man sagged and almost dropped, but he has a reputation second to none for grit and always managed to recover.

WAS NO MATCH FOR CANADIAN FIGHTER.

The Montreal Herald, speaking of the Mick McAdam-Kid Roy fight, recently, says:—McAdam is a good rugged fighter, tough, game, and a puncher who has done pretty well on this side of the water, being knocked out but once previously, that at the hands of heavy-hitting Joe Lambardo, possible winner in the featherweight elimination tourney. Lambardo popped him in a round, and last night Roy, boxing in masterly form, and fighting like a reincarnation of Terry McGovern, battered the Scot out in little more than three, after cutting him to ribbons.

The Scot was no match for Roy at any stage—and by the same token, it will take a real fighter, just now, to hold his own with the lightning-fast and heavy-socking Habitant. Roy is at top form now, and he fairly gave McAdam a boxing and fighting lesson last night. He made the Scot miss by fractions of an inch, and it was not until well along in the second round that the Britisher landed a clean blow. That was about the only punch he did land; for the rest of the brief route he was too busy trying to save himself from Roy's driving assaults.

S. J. Young of St. Jacques was the lucky winner in Bowling's daily sales—for Thursday.

Nicholas Wall of Holyrood was the lucky one on Friday.

Yours may be to-day.—dec6.11

Washington Letter

(By Our Own Correspondent)

November 27.
The American Capital was given a practical demonstration on Tuesday of what the Germans can do in the way from Lakehurst, N.J., to Bolling-Dirigible ZR-3 circled the city on its way from Lakehurst, N.J., to Bolling Field where it was christened "Los Angeles" by Mrs. Coolidge, wife of the President. The ZR-3 is the largest airship ever built as well as being the most perfectly equipped from every practical viewpoint. Its visit here on Tuesday was regarded as the official ceremony of transfer from German to United States ownership. It was its first test flight in charge of American officers and the first journey it has made using helium instead of hydrogen gas. As soon as the ceremony of renaming the ship was completed, the journey back to New Jersey was begun and again as the immense dirigible moved gracefully over Washington on its way out, flying not more than a thousand feet high, citizens were enabled to obtain a clear view of the Navy's new acquisition to its air fleet.

Here are the specifications of the ZR-3: Length, 658 feet; diameter, 92 feet; height, 100 feet; gas capacity 2,470,000 cubic feet; fourteen gas cells; total weight inflated with helium 148,000 pounds; speed 75 miles an hour; horsepower 2,000—five 400 h.p. Maybach German engines; cruising radius without stopping, 6,000 miles; crew, 35 officers and men. The dirigible was constructed by the Zepplin Airship Company at Friedrichshafen, Germany for the United States Government as a replacement for two airships of smaller size to which this country was entitled at the close of the war.

Now that the United States navy has the ZR-3 or Los Angeles as she will be called henceforth, the question is, "what use will be made of the dirigible?" It is announced that a flight to Panama will likely be amongst the first trips to be made and it is also stated that the ship will visit England at an early date. In a practical sense the only work that seems likely for the Los Angeles to engage in is the trying out of commercial air routes between the States and foreign countries. Strangely enough, regarding the blimp as two or three hundred men make frantic efforts to pull it down to terra firma, the unsophisticated looker-on has visions of white elephants.

The United States has two serious problems on its hands just now—the solving of cross-word puzzles and the sinking of the battleship Washington. It is many years since Uncle Sam's fleet had an opportunity to try their guns on anything more formidable than a rum-runner and they are making the most of it. The Washington has withstood all sorts of broadside gun fire and has defied the underwater missiles aimed at her. The next test will be made on her decks which were also constructed to stand considerable wear and tear in the way of high explosives. Experts are hoping that it may yet be necessary to invent a special kind of destructive agency to sink the Washington.

This week saw the completion of the national budget for the next fiscal year and while Budget Director Lord has withheld publication of the exact figures the public are given the assurance that the $1,800,000,000 margin set by President Coolidge has not been exceeded. In fact it is stated that the lowest possible estimate previously made is in excess of the actual figure.

The St. Lawrence Canal project was one of the things mentioned by Secretary Hoover a day or two ago as likely to receive practical encouragement from the Government within the next year. Conditions in this country have so much improved, Hoover says, that Government officials will be able to concentrate their attention in future on constructive development. That there is an overflow of money in the United States looking for investment is shown by the fact that within forty-five minutes of the opening of the subscription lists in New York on Tuesday the new French Loan of $100,000,000 was over-subscribed. Indeed the amount offered for that investment at 7% was estimated at $500,000,000.

Here is a word of cheer for the "browns." Dr. Alois Hrdlicka, a learned anthropologist, lecturing at the National Museum during the week said that all the old-time talk about high foreheads being indicative of intelligence is moonshine, or words to that effect. A few years ago, the lecturer said, the scientific world believed that long narrow heads with high sloping foreheads denoted a high intelligence while low, broad foreheads with rounded craniums indicated a similarly low degree of mentality. Investigation has proved this to be without foundation. In blasting this fancy Dr. Hrdlicka has blasted many reputations.

It is a wholesome sign to note that not all preachers of the Gospel deem it their bounden duty to be blind adherents of the pacifistic doctrine. Dr. W. G. Wilkinson, dean of theology at Washington Missionary College in an address before a large gathering on Wednesday evening said religious organizations are overlooking the plain teachings of the Bible when they work upon governments in an effort to bring about permanent peace. Like the Communist party, they are calling upon the United States to disarm at a time when radicalism in its worst form is maintaining a tremendously large army. So it is, he said, with pacifists the world over. Fundamental facts are forgotten by them.

Vice-President Charles Dawes does not want to attend cabinet meetings, where he must be merely a looker-

Mayflower Club Girls Gave Excellent Performance

A large number of people were present at the Congregational Lecture Hall last night, and greatly enjoyed the entertainment given by the Mayflower Club. The main attraction was the staging of the three-act comedy drama entitled "Breezy Point," which proved a source of much merriment. The story was an interesting one and was well told by the various actors, who filled the parts in a creditable manner. The roles were played by Misses Barbara Langmead, Isabel Thomas, Janet Ross, Jessie Calver, Eleanor Raynes, Violet Frost, Muriel Cowan, Floris Freeman, Nellie Barnes and Marjorie Frost. The programme opened with a short address by the Chairman, Rev. D. R. Nichol, and between the scenes solos were rendered by Mrs. F. Warren and Miss Ross, whilst Miss Randall gave two pianoforte solos.

The Regular Monthly Meeting of the St. John's Mechanic's Society will be held in their Hall on Monday evening next at 8.30 o'clock. JAMES A. LEAHEY, Secretary.—dec6,11

A Man Who "Paddled His Own Canoe" on the Atlantic

A man in a canoe arrived in New York City the other day from Sydney, Nova Scotia, a distance of 1,300 miles of paddling along the Atlantic coastline. The paddler announced that he was on his way from Nova Scotia to Rome by canoe, and leaving out the passage of the Atlantic between New York and England, which he will make prospectively by ocean steamship, that is the trip he intends to take. He is a British Lieutenant, George H. D. Smyth, and he served with the Royal Naval Air Force during the war. His craft is 15 feet in length, 32 inches in beam, draws 4 inches of water and weighs 55 pounds. Where it will not carry him—that is to say, where he has to make portage from one water-way to another—he carries it, together with all his equipment. For, as he explains, with the exception of the Atlantic passage, he accepts "neither tow nor haulage." To quote from his own story, as related in the New York Herald Tribune:

From London I shall paddle down the Thames and around the coast to Dover, and there wait for a comparatively calm day—and there are such days on the much-dreaded Channel—for the twenty-one mile dash across. This is a feat which has hitherto never been attempted. But after my experience in the Bay of Fundy I feel no tremors with regard to my forthcoming Channel effort. From Calais I shall traverse France via Paris, Dijon, Lyons, Valence and Marseilles to the Mediterranean.

And now about that part of the voyage which I have just done. I set out from Sydney, Nova Scotia, early on the morning of July 23 last, on a bright and snappy sea, with quite a gathering to see me off. Some of the older folk in the crowd stroked their chins and shook their heads with grave disquiet when they saw how far down in the water my heavily laden craft settled with her burden. For, not including myself, I started out with provisions and camping gear, etc., exceeding in weight 300 pounds. And I suppose by the time I and my tiny boat were lost to visibility in the ruffled waters, the most gloomy among the spectators were fully convinced that I had already gone to the bottom.

Toward dusk, when I had made over thirty miles of headway, a rainy mist came on, and with it a sea breeze freshened into a sturdy blow. I had put ashore at midday, cooked a meal and taken a nap, with the ambitious idea of paddling far into the night. The turn for the worse in the weather sent me heading for land, however, around nine o'clock in the evening. The rain was by this time coming down hard, and there I was, cold, wet, tired and hungry, forced to beach my canoe and haul all my gear to the shelter of a farmhouse.

Very different was this experience from one about a week later, when I again set myself the task of paddling throughout the night. About two in the morning rain and wind came on, and the sea rose in its wrath. Again I was the prey of hunger, fatigue and the elements. But this time I was obliged to seek a landing on a rock-bound coast with an angry sea running and the wind and rain making a chorus of it—a lee shore, as the old seafaring term is. In cases of this sort there is always the risk of smashing one's canoe, and so finding one's self marooned in an uninhabited region. As it was, I had to disembark knee-deep in swirling foam and get my stuff ashore as best I could, and at that I considered myself somewhat favored by fortune, for I lost nothing but a bag of potatoes.

In a long coastwise trip of this sort, points out the navigator, in an egg-shell craft such as his, there were time when the state of the sea and the nature of the coast baffled all attempts at landing, and he found himself obliged to keep to the water. He relates: My worst experience of this kind was off the coast of New Brunswick, when I had to remain afloat for fifty-two hours at a stretch. And this period was by no means without its moments of anxiety. There was a dense fog and an uninviting lee shore, as I knew from my charts. I was obliged to trust to my ears most of the time, especially during the hours of darkness, listening for the noise of the breakers on the cliffs, so as not to approach too close in and become involved in the flood tide, nor yet allow myself to be swept too far out to sea and off my course by setting eddies.

I snatched what sleep I could by spreading my sleeping-bag along the bottom of the canoe. The fog signals and lighthouse and bell buoys helped me keep my bearings tolerably well during this spell. And I was much interested to note the odd effects of dense fog on sound waves. The radius of audibility of the fog horns, for example, seemed at times to be sharply defined. I would paddle or drift along in dead, woolly silence and then almost abruptly some within range of the lugubrious notes of the horn. The effect was somewhat similar to that of opening the door of a crowded room and hearing in full volume the voices of the occupants, which before had been a mere murmur.

It was at the termination of this tedious fifty-two hour spell that I guided my canoe—early of a fine morning before dawn—close up to a three-hundred-foot pile of rocks topped by a lighthouse, nearly exhausted, cramped in every limb and craving nothing but sleep, deep sleep, sleep of the southern Atlantic. And this silence I sought and enjoyed in a sandy little cranny. The lighthouse I knew would be there when I awoke. I would not have awakened quite so early were it not for the lighthouse keeper, who, emerging for his morning breathers exercises, espied me far below him and came down to investigate this unwonted matter.

He took me up to his cosy quarters in the lighthouse, fed me right royally and supplied me with dry garments while my own were drying, after having been rinsed out with fresh water. I met many lighthouse keepers and coast guards along the coast of Canada and the United States during my trip, and was most kindly treated by them in every instance.

On two or three other occasions, he writes, he spent the night on the water, alternately sleeping and paddling, and enjoyed the experience. Once or twice, he relates:

As I lay on my back in the bottom of the canoe, it seemed to me that the whole of the starry sky was slowly revolving, but it was only the canoe turning in an eddy—a peculiar sensation, and one to be strongly discouraged; for it is just as well to try to keep one's prow pointed in the general direction of one's destination.

Now, what about the effects of wind and tide? Well, I feel I can talk a little on this subject with authority, for I paddled through the Bay of Fundy for seven days. Here I wrestled sore with the monster tides of those regions, where the rise and fall is the greatest on earth, a maximum of sixty feet and a minimum of twenty-eight. The influence of this gigantic ebb and flow, alternating every six hours, on a little bit of craft such as mine may well be imagined. Setting out on the turn of high tide I found myself drawn powerfully out to sea. It was now up to me to get in as much paddling on my course as I could before the incoming tide could get busy shoving me back.

The combination of wind and tide, especially when acting in opposition, is apt to make the boom of the sea anything but a bed of roses for the venturesome canoeist. On one occasion, which I shall not readily forget, the waves on the bay gradually but almost imperceptibly increased in size until they were fully forty feet in height.

These waves were, of course, of the deep-water variety—great solid upheavals with crests breaking into foam; not the long curving rollers that we see advancing in endless procession on our beaches. When I realized this state of affairs I was seven miles from shore and shipping water. I would have to lighten my craft if I were to avoid being swamped. I quickly saw. I at once proceeded to jettison my cargo. With a wary eye on the still rising sea I threw overboard the bulk of my provisions, in weight altogether about two hundred pounds. I dumped them—ham, bacon, coffee, sugar, flour, rice, oatmeal, salt and a precious pot of marmalade—all had to be sacrificed to the celebrated rule, "Safety first." Now I was able to ride the waves, but at that I had to call upon my best horsemanship.

Off the Canadian coast, he reports, he happened to fall in twice with people living near the sea—"who appeared to lead double and even triple lives." Specifically:

There are fishermen in those parts who are also farmers, and there are farmers who are fishermen and bootleggers all in one. The good old three-mile limit still rules up there, and those who go out to the sea after lobsters often return with other stock in their power-boats besides sea-food, to wit: very high-grade Demarara rum in sixty-gallon casks. The rum-runners assure them that the revenue cutters—slow-footed craft at the best of times and regular in their habits, so it is claimed—are not in evidence. Then the farmer-fishermen-bootlegger folk come out and make a shopping tour of the rum fleet, looking for advantageous rates.

They ship aboard six, eight, ten barrels of rum and make for shore, usually where there is no regular landing-place. They dump the barrels overboard into a flood tide and deal with them as they are washed ashore. They cart their booty inland to their homes in hay carts, where it is sold in the wood or in gallon cans. And delicious rum it is, too—good enough to be drunk in a liqueur glass with the same delicate appreciation an epicure would bestow upon an equal quantity of Louis-Philippe brandy. I have sampled it.

One afternoon as I was paddling peacefully on my lawful occasions and passing a two-masted sailing vessel riding at anchor about four miles off-shore I was greeted with a friendly hail and invited aboard. Being tired and nothing loath, I gave heed. Mine host the skipper was very cordial. He made no bones about his trade and showed me his snug cargo, or what by that time was left of it on his hands, some fifty or sixty cases of rum. He treated me well and often invited me to accept the shelter of his vessel for the night, which I did.

One of the pleasantest episodes of my 1,300 mile water jaunt was my falling in with a party of school teachers—the female of the species—who were summering in the Bras d'Or Lake District. So enjoyable was their society that I spent several days in their company, swimming, canoeing, yarning, and wood-chopping. One afternoon I accompanied one of these young women on a berry-picking excursion. She had come out without a hat and was beginning to feel the effects of the sun, so I made for her a sunbonnet of vine leaves. Her improvised headgear looked for all the world like the bay leaves crowning a Caesar, and when we returned to camp her companions greeted us with the well-known anthem, "See, the Conquering Hero Comes!" I parted from them with regret, and I think trip now lies behind me. I can still see their six forms waving me farewell from the shore as I rounded the point. My last stunt before arriving at the foot of Manhattan Island was shooting the race of Hell Gate, at the upper end of East River. In this narrow waterway the speed and under-low of the currents have long been the terror of small craft, and its negotiation in a small canoe is quite a tricky performance. So ended my 1,300 mile run of forty-three paddling days, which averages more than thirty-two miles a day. This is good for sea work, and I feel that the most arduous portion of my

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

MEN, WOMEN AND GIFTS.

A masculine friend of mine wrote me a letter sometime ago about a birthday experience. I've been saving it up to use at the season of the year when everyone has a birthday together, so to speak.

I thought it might amuse some husbands and perhaps make some wives and mothers think: Here it is:

What They SAID They Thought.

"I was in a group of friends at a friend's house not long since when the subject of giving others good times came up, and the difficulty of doing it successfully. Finally we decided that the best way was to leave the matter wholly in the hands of the entertained. From that, the talk drifted naturally to the choosing of presents. As to that we all agreed as to the desirability of persons stating their choice. Note, if you please, the conclusions arrived at by this group. Now the story will move on a bit and we will see what happened to one of the group.

"It presently developed that the son of one and husband of another of the ladies was about to have a birthday. Acting on the conclusions arrived at above, the kind of celebration was left to the supposedly most interested party, who promptly gave it as his choice that there should be no celebration at all, that the day be passed over in sympathetic silence.

John Yields to Persuasion.

"After considerable discussion it was voted that there must be some kind of marking of the event, but as there was now some slight suspicion John might not really care for it, it was limited to the giving of presents, and John was asked to name his choice. In this, much to the surprise of the ladies, John seemed rather reluctant and protested that if he must have presents he would rather leave it to the others. But finally he said that there was nothing much he really wanted except a pair of walking shoes.

"No sooner had that choice been reluctantly stated, than his mother fixed him with what looked to outsiders like a baleful glare and exclaimed: "Well, I must say there is nothing like asking for what you want."

Not Even One Shoe.

"When John's birthday came, his wife presented him with a handsome sweater, perhaps on the principle that three is a lucky number as he already had two. What the rest gave him I do not know, but I do know that there was not even one walking shoe, let alone the pair John had asked for.

"All of which is respectfully submitted to Ruth Cameron."

And by Ruth Cameron respectfully submitted to the wives, mothers, sisters, daughters and sweethearts among her readers who have men folks to buy presents for.

Tragedy of Effie Bright in "If Winter Comes"

DRAGS SABRE TO DEPTHS.

Thousands who have read A. S. M. Hutchinson's "If Winter Comes" and have heard that William Fox has produced a motion picture version of the great novel have wondered how the dramatic element could be extracted from such a conversational book and presented on the screen. A highly impressive answer is supplied in the photoplay itself which has attained a height of dramatic power rarely achieved on the screen. "If Winter Comes" will be given its first showing at the Majestic Theatre next week.

Throughout the trial, with the presentation twisting facts and distorting innocent situations, poor old Mark is dragged through a hell beyond his imagination. In this difficult, entirely psychological situation, Percy Marmont shows clearly his complete understanding of the mind of Mark. While vicious, poisonous questions are being hurled at him the fitting expressions on the face of Marmont are those of bewilderment, horror—he is unable to realize the situation and the charges against him. To him it does not seem possible that these men can really mean what they charge him with. They couldn't possibly believe that he committed a crime.

Then, armed with the proof that Twynning's son is the father of Effie Bright's child, Mark seeks out the elder Twynning to "bash him." He enters the office with murder in his heart. He learns that Twynning's son gave his life in battle. He softens and, instead of wreaking vengeance, he spares Twynning, his arch enemy, the pain of knowing his son's misdeed.

Probably the best-known gift ever received by us from the Government of another country is the good ship Resolute, of Arctic exploration fame, which the United States, at a cost of $240,000 voted by Congress, restored to us after the vessel had been abandoned in the ice some time previously. Twenty years afterwards Queen Victoria had a table made of the ship's timbers and presented it to the White House, Washington, where it still does duty as the President's writing desk.

World's Biggest Statue.

The Statue of Liberty, which marks the entrance to New York harbour, was a gift to the United States from France. Over two hundred feet in height, it is the world's greatest statue, and cost nearly $2,000,000.

France has also shown her esteem for Britain by giving the British Museum a magnificent specimen of a Seyres vase, while more recently she announced her intention of making us a present of certain parts of the battlefields, as a permanent memorial to our dead soldiers.

Spain has given us a gold model of the ship in which Columbus voyaged to America. Another unusual gift was the ancient canon given to the British people by the Dutch. This brings to mind the two very old pieces of ordnance given by us to the United States as a memento of the fort built by the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth, Mass.

Another relic, an old mortar found in one of the American Army stores, was presented by Congress to this country, it having belonged formerly to the 60th Royal American Corps, which afterwards became the King's Royal Rifles.

Freight Facilities Required

It looks as though there is going to be a congestion of freight for the North-West coast unless additional transportation facilities are provided. We understand the Home this trip will leave about six carloads of freight behind. One shipper alone advises us that he will have at least four carloads to go by the next trip. The season of the year is now well advanced when storms may occur at any time that would cause delays, and there are only three or four weeks more when we may reasonably expect navigation to close along that part of the coast.—Western Star.

Field Hall Social Club

The Field Hall Social Club, under the patronage of the Warden and Colley, opened for its fifth year Oct. 4th, when a meeting was held for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing term. The meeting was held in the following being elected:

- President—W. Fitzgerald (Hall)
- Vice-President—W. French
- Secretary—H. Spurrill
- Treasurer—H. Sheppard
- Organist—F. Galpin
- Committee—W. Thomas, F. Pearce, J. Rowell

During the term very many pleasant meetings have been held, the subjects being, sometimes a debate, illustrated lecture, or a concert; all with a double end in view, pleasure and education.

A very pleasing and interesting illustrated lecture on the City of New York was given by Mr. Colley, and later on the City of Rome by the same speaker. One of the debates held was on the subject—"Resolved, that Newfoundland, winter is better than summer." There were many takers for both sides in this debate, which was, however, decided in favour of the negative.

The Field Hall Social Club was organized in 1920 by the staff of Field Hall. The aim and object of the club is to furnish for the members an opportunity for practice in the art of public speaking, so that when they are called upon to speak, they may be able to do so. The Club gives a time of relaxation to the members from the usual course of their studies, which, without anything of this kind, would be apt to become monotonous.

The fact that the Club is accomplishing its object has been proved by the letters of appreciation which the Warden has received from many of its members.

A number of the members are at present attending the Normal Training School and will shortly be entering the noble profession of teaching. The Warden and Mr. Colley wish with the Club in wishing every success, both in their work at school and in their profession.

China's Mystery Creatures

Men Who Live in Trees. Strange creatures, said to have been found in the south of China, are being a great deal of scientific interest.

The most amazing of these discoveries deals with a race of "dog-faced" people. This tribe is said to live far in the interior. They have thick hair over their bodies, live in trees, are entirely savage.

There have been reports also of a tiger, a creature which is against known laws of zoology. This tiger is not striped like the ordinary tiger, but has a bluish fur resembling the colour of coarse dungaree. During one month, a scientist reported, he killed and ate sixty specimens.

The same explorer, Dr. Caldwell, also discovered a banger as big as a bear and shot a serow, a very animal which is a cross between a goat and an antelope.

Dragons and Flying Serpents. All these reports lend colour to the story held by many scientific men that in southern China there are many strange primitive men and animals to be discovered. Life in this region is supposed to be very like that of prehistoric times, and many "pre-historic" animals may be still existing.

The men, too, have probably remained almost unchanged.

The Chinese themselves believe that dragons and flying serpents exist in their country. They have been scoffed at as having vivid imaginations, but may it not be a fact that these creatures still lurk in the interior where white men have not yet penetrated?

Harbor Grace News

On Tuesday afternoon, shortly after dinner hour, the fire bell rang out which, we are thankful to say, it not very frequently heard in our town. A crowd had gathered in the vicinity of Sergt. Dwyer's residence, where a slight fire was in progress. A quantity of Hay contained in an out house just behind his dwelling had, through some cause or other, caught fire and might have been quite a blaze, had it not been discovered when it was. The firemen with the hose were quickly on the scene, and after working for some time, succeeded in putting out the fire. The only damage done was to the barn and loss of hay, although there were many houses nearby, which would have been in danger if the fire had spread.

The Salvation Army Band from Carbonear, under Adjt. Sainsbury, visited Town on Tuesday last, and on their arrival paraded a short distance through Town, rendering selections, and were favourable commented on. At night a Band Concert was held in the Citadel here, which was well attended. Candy was sold during the evening. An interesting and enjoyable programme was rendered by members of the Band, which was concluded near 10 p.m., and the visitors left for Carbonear again, by train.

Schooner Jean F. McRae has arrived here for her owners, Messrs. McRae & Sons, from Sydney, N.S., with another load of coal, which is being discharged during the last few days.

Mrs. Otto Wells, of St. John's, arrived here recently on a visit to her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Parsons.

Mr. Robinson, of the Govt. Engineer's Department, St. John's, arrived here on Tuesday night on a business visit, and registered at the "Gracian House." Mr. Robinson returned to the city by Wednesday afternoon's train.

Miss Nessie Hinton, daughter of Mr. H. Hinton, Supt. Imperial Cable Office and Mrs. Hinton, who has been undergoing treatment for Infantile Paralysis, at the General Hospital, St. John's, for the last three months, arrived back home this week. She has greatly improved, and is now able to get out of doors, although it will take some little time for a complete recovery.

The Rev. Dr. S. T. Simpson, who had been on a five months' tour of Great Britain, France and Ireland returned by the Sackham recently and came here on a visit to his home town. Dr. Simpson leaves this week on his return to Toronto, where he is doing field work with the Presbyterian Church. His many friends were pleased to see him in the old spot again.

A little chap, Thomey, met with an accident on Tuesday while coasting on Bannerman Street, having collided with a cart, which contained a load of coal. As a result of the accident, the lad's arm was broken. The man who was driving the horse, took the boy into Strapp's Pharmacy, and Dr. Cron was called, and the injured limb attended to.

The writer extends sincere sympathy to the relatives and host of friends of the late Rev. Canon Lockyer, in his passing away from earthly scenes.

Barrimore as Barron in "Eternal City"

Lionel Barrimore, conceded to be one of the finest actors alive to-day, has the greatest role of his career in "The Eternal City," a First National picture produced by George Fitzmaurice, which is coming to the Star Theatre on Monday. It is a picture of the famous story by Sir Hall Caine, and was filmed entirely in Italy.

Barrimore is cast as Baron Bonelli, a titled profligate, who has but two interests in life—money and pretty women. The first he acquires with such ease and readiness that it looses somewhat of its appeal to him. But there was one girl, noted for her beauty, who had repulsed him at every turn. This served merely to spur on his determination to conquer her, and he concocted a plot with the intention of trapping her.

Utilizing her talent as a sculptress as a subterfuge, the baron manipulated her "adoption" by a wealthy countess in Rome. Grief-stricken because she believed her lover fiancé had been killed on the battlefield, the girl accepted the offer, without suspecting that the baron was supplying the money for her support. The baron's plans of conquest were interrupted in a sensationally dramatic manner.

Barbara La Marr appears as the girl, others in the cast being Bert Lytell, Richard Bennett and Montagu Love.

Port au Bras

States Its Claims

Editor Evening Telegram,
St. John's.

Dear Mr. Editor.—It is not very often that anything appears in your columns from Port au Bras, but this time I cannot refrain from writing, not that I want my voice to be heard but that I may try and explain a matter that appeared in one of our local papers and signed by "Interested."

I refer now to the letter that was written from Argonia to the "Daily News" concerning "The Placentia Bay Service."

As this concerns all in the bay I now take it upon me to answer the letter from my own point of view. It must be borne in mind that I am not a resident of Port au Bras but I am interested in this particular place and I like to see equal rights given to all.

I will now take my friend's letter and give my views on the matter as it appears before me and let me remind you Mr. Editor I shall not refer to any particular person or place.

The first I notice is that "Interested" says: a ferry does the Burin work in carrying mails and passengers. True she does, if my friend is as much interested as he appears to be he will find that no ferry calls at Port au Bras, so that the mail must be brought from Burin overland, a distance of about three miles. If I remember rightly the ferry was taken from us in 1921.

Then again he says: "It is found that quite often the Argyle has neither mail, freight nor passengers for such places as Port au Bras." For his information I shall here give a few facts that I have gathered from reliable sources; our Money Order Dept. here has on hand an average of about 350 or 400 dollars per month. Surely this is ample proof that there is always mail or freight for the Argyle to bring.

I have taken an account of the number of people from this one place who have made passage by the steamer since April of this year and I find there has been 70. They all had to go to Burin and wait for the steamer and when she is delayed by unsuitable weather it means waiting around there for perhaps two or three days and paying board. When they should be able to stay at home and wait for the Argyle to come here.

With regard to freight I might say there are at present five business places in Port au Bras and on the two last trips of the Argyle two men waited here for her to call but had to row to Burin for their freight the following day. On Thursday of this week the Argyle called here and on board were over twenty packages of freight for one man but it was mixed with the Burin freight and consequently the man had to let it go to Burin.

The mail-boat came ashore but only brought a couple of letters, the bulk of our mail being put in the bag of Burin North.

I quite agree with my friend who proposes to cut out some of the service. Yes by all means but give us all a square deal.

We are quite satisfied to do without the services of the Argyle if all other places of similar size are treated the same.

I venture to say there are not many places around that have done without the steamer service as long as we have. The steamer should have called here ten years ago, but who is to blame?

There are seventy-five families here altogether and they are mostly independent families. As in every locality in Newfoundland there are a few who are not so fortunate as others. Do you not think we should have a service of some kind?

We were informed by one of our
