Editorial Topics.

VOLUME OF EXAMINATION PAPERS. The other day we saw for the first time the volume of printed examination papers set in the Faculty of Arts last June. It is a neat, though fairly bulky, volume, bound in cream-coloured paper binding. At the beginning stand the papers for the matriculation which Trinity holds in common with the other Universities of the province in July. It was a good thing for Corporation to decide to have the papers printed, for it meant saving of time and worry not only to the undergraduates but to the Registrar and examiners. And having had the papers printed, Corporation is to be congratulated upon having them bound, for they are thus easily accessible to those who wish to refer to them, and they allow of fairer comparisons now being instituted between the work done in Trinity and other institutions than have sometimes been instituted. Those who wish to keep copies by them may, we understand, buy them from the University's printers.

PROFESSIONALISM IN FOOTBALL. Already there are signs that professionalism is growing in football as it has done unfortunately in hockey, baseball, and lacrosse. Every true lover of sport likes to see a game, whatever it may be, played for itself and not merely for the sake of winning. This playing to win at any cost is the very essence of professionalism and ought to be combatted by everyone who has the best interests of sport at heart. Disgusting is the only word that ought to be applied to tactics such as those described by one of the morning dailies recently as being those of a certain team. Knees are to be used for the purpose of winding opponents and, generally speaking, the rule is, leave your man worse than you find him. Offside play has long been winked at if by use of it a man could score for his team. And now the old abuse of playing upon a team men who have no right to play upon it is being revived in an exaggerated form. We are sorry to see that Osgoode is one of the chief offenders, and more so that it has secured, if rumour be correct, a member of this College who was counted upon to make football once more a reality at Trinity. Not entering the Union (which, despite its good features, has after all been the nurse of professionalism) Trinity has a chance of doing a vast deal toward bringing football back to what it ought to be, if the same loyalty is displayed and the same hard work is expended upon it as has always been done in the case of cricket.

LORD LISTER AND FEDERATION. Many of the members of the British Association were naturally struck by the anomaly of a comparatively small city—having two "great" Universities within its bounds (they forgot to count two others) and Lord Lister ventured to tender Trinity advice on the subject of federating with Toronto. His advice being courteously given was courteously listened to, but failed to evoke any response from his audience. As the noble lord admitted that he spoke in ignorance, he cannot be blamed for giving advice. Had he possessed full knowledge of the subject, he would have known that some years ago Trinity stated the conditions upon which she would be willing to federate. Those conditions not having been accepted, it rests with Toronto and the Education Department to make new proposals and not with Trinity to take the initiative. He would have known that there are difficulties in Trinity's way, difficulties of a financial nature, for it is a question whether she could retain her endowments after federating since they were given for the foundation of an independent University of a distinctively Church character. He would have known that Trinity, like the Universities of the Motherland, is not hampered by interference on the part of the state, and that the best men of Toronto think that their University has too much of state control at the present time, for they, in common with Trinity men, know that a University without traditions counts for very little and that traditions cannot be made and unmade every few years by Act of Parliament. He would have known that Trinity, although the smaller body, would naturally hesitate to give up traditions she holds to be better than those of the larger body. He would have known that, whatever be the cause, Trinity adheres more closely to her rules than Toronto does to hers, more particularly in the maintenance of her examination standard, and that training men is more in accordance with her ideals than the narrower view which restricts the scope of a University's aims to the lecture-room and the examination-hall only. Finally, he would have known that, unless something more liberal is devised in connection with the scheme of federation under which Toronto is now working, it is absolutely impossible for Trinity or any other University to hand over its students to professors who are already overworked and have little or no opportunity for knowing even by name the throng of students who crowd their lecture-rooms.

ON COLLEGE MATTERS.

Some years ago Dr. Bourinot of Ottawa, turned a neat compliment upon the conservatism of his Alma Mater. Amongst university men such a tribute is duly appreciated. Its spirit is the very tap root of our British nature and our British nation. To that constant reference to the "good old laws" of King Alfred the Great, and of Edward the Confessor, is due the great glory of England, her common law and her people's respect for the same. That same regard for the past, and the lessons of the past, carried her through the trying days of the Reformation, of the Revolution and the Restoration, and past the contagious dangers of her next neighbor, France. Conservatism was indeed a happy tribute, and it is hoped a well deserved one, of our university.

To retain this mark, the virtue must appear on all sides, in both great and smaller matters, for either are momentous. If there be a tradition and it well founded, much discretion should be exercised and due thought taken before it be dropped, else its very disappearance sever ties, perhaps, almost unknown until their loss is felt.

Men follow men, and new ideas are introduced, and rightly, too, but care should ever be taken to mould them to the fashion of ourselves, to hold fast the traditions.

For long years Trinity men observed a day, as someone once remarked, they shared its glories with the Saints Simon and Jude. That was the day of the steeplechase; that the night of the supper. Soon, unless something be done, both will be forgotten, or so altered as no longer to bind the past and passing with the present. The steeplechase developed into college sports, and yet last year the sports, by that time well established, were given up, postponed at first, it was said, until spring, then dropped for other things that brought us little glory. Something, too, might be said about the gymnasium—about a running track and other projects.

An article has already appeared in the winter past about the loss of June Convocation, and from the many expressions of opinion from our graduates the article met with a very extensive sympathy. A Convocation in June, too, appears a stern necessity to men going up to Osgoode, and so, to meet the case, one such was held whereat degrees, without a shade of disrespect, were said to be ingloriously bestowed. The Tiger, the trappings, the pomp and vanities, not to mention the cream and cakes and ladies, of that glorious afternoon in June are still in lively memory. There may be good reasons for it, indeed, reasons which satisfy the Executive must perforce be good. But all are not on the executive, nor can we be.

In another column may be seen the official announcement of the tenth University dinner which, it will be remembered, is the successor of the S. Simon and S. Jude's supper. It was a good old supper that, exempt from married men and clerics. The dinner is, of course, much more grand, but it is also more expensive, as wine is more than beer, and for that reason it has not the patronage of all, and there are many divisions and searchings of heart about those who go and those who go not, which is a great pity. Each year, just before and just after the event, there is much talk about its utility, and certainly it is quite debatable from the standpoint of the men whether the function is deserving of their support or no. This question is the more momentous from the fact—for such it is almost acknowledged—that the dinner, as at present managed, depends largely for its success upon the attendance of the men. It is certainly a nice affair, the idea of past and present gathering once a year around the board is one which should do much to bind our sons together. But so long as it is not supported by the men as a whole its usefulness is much impaired. Worse might be done than discuss the question in college meeting and there, with due respect to its importance, decide once and for all whether the college take in the dinner or whether the old supper be not revived. One thing, however, is quite certain, the dinner being fixed by now, the men should all come down, and to the honour of this college, bring this event of '97 the success it well deserves.

Much discussion on the part of the men, and that upon many of those subjects, may come up throughout the year, and of them all it were well to have the counsel of the college. Executives, in referring to this, in no way derogate from the honour of their offices. They are, in fact, as in name, executive bodies, upon whom has not been imposed all the weight of consideration and decision regarding projects, and let our Trinity men remember well the precept:—"Hold fast the Traditions."

Somebody once wrote to the late Henri Meilhac to ask his advice as to how to become a dramatic author. "It is a difficult career, and the trade is not easy," wrote back Meilhac; "above all, it needs success. Yes, success is the thing if you want to have talent."

HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR, ETC.

Some years ago when the country was excited over the alleged inefficiency of the French schools in eastern Ontario, one of the Toronto dailies objected to religion and deportment receiving the large share of attention they did receive. One question in particular provoked it to laughter—"What is the proper manner of addressing an Archbishop?" Now, we do not all hobnob with Archbishops every day, but upon occasion we may have to write to them or to lesser dignitaries, and we should all know exactly how we ought to approach them. Though this is a professedly democratic country (whatever that may mean) none of us is so democratic, it is to be hoped, but that he is willing to give honour to whom honour is due, provided that deference be not demanded in arrogant fashion.

Etiquette Books do not help us, Complete Letter Writers are no faithful guides; moreover, we pride ourselves (at least most of us do) upon not reading such books and we leave them to the man of artificial, affected manners which fit him no better than his coat, perhaps not so well as that garment does. As to etiquette books, I was reminded by a clever woman one evening when I was railing at a man whose manners are of the non-fitting-coat kind, that I had been reading etiquette books all my life in the training I had received at home and elsewhere. That being the case, I am going to set down a few things I have learned about addressing letters, things, to be sure, which no University man worthy of the name ought to be ignorant of, but which my observation tells me some men do not know.

To begin with the Archbishops, as they have been already mentioned:—

THE LORD ARCHBISHOP OF ONTARIO

would be the proper way of addressing an envelope to the Metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of Canada. The Roman Catholics, I believe, usually substitute His Grace for The Most Reverend, omit Lord, and give the Archbishop's name, but, in any case, in beginning the letter itself, one would write Your Grace. The Right Reverend, The Lord Bishop of Toronto (written in three lines) will do for an example of the address for a Bishop, though one would not be committing a heinous crime if Lord happened to be left out. My Lord begins the letter itself. In the United States, there being no Lordships, the Bishop's name usually appears, thus—The Right Reverend Dr. Rowe, Bishop of Alaska, or The Right Reverend Bishop Rowe (in three lines). Something similar is done with us if a Bishop has resigned his See, for, as the old Scotch proverb says, "once a baillie always a baillie."

I happened once to see a package addressed to a newly-consecrated Bishop in this fashion:—

RIGHT REVEREND SMITH.

For anything of the kind there is absolutely no excuse any more than there would be for addressing a letter to a barrister as Lawyer Smith. Nor is it allowable to drop an ordinary clergyman's name or initials unless Dr. or Professor crowds them out. The Reverend A. C. Smith, The Reverend Dr. Smith, and The Reverend Professor Smith are all right, but The Reverend Smith is all wrong. I do not dogmatize about writing Reverend in full, as Rev. is so widely used, but against Prof. I protest with all my might. A witty American once said that "pants is correlative to gent, the one wears the other." With pants and gent I class Prof. Professor, by the way, is much misused and should be placed only before the names of those who are entitled to it. To use it before the name of a man not entitled to it lays one open to a charge of being a gross flatterer.

Of Archdeacons and Deans of Cathedrals I have said nothing as yet. Every one knows that The Venerable and The Very Reverend (in two lines in each case) are the proper forms to use; but whether you shall say Dean (or Archdeacon) of Ottawa, or shall substitute the Dean's (or the Archdeacon's) name for the territorial description is a moot point, with the preference in favour of the territorial description. In talking, as in writing, you may say Mr. Archdeacon, if you are not on intimate terms with the gentleman and cannot be satisfied with Sir. In writing to Canons, The Reverend Canon Smith (in two or three lines) will always be right, for here, as with Dr. and Professor, the name drops out after the honorary designation. The Provost of this College is correctly addressed as The Reverend, The Provost, or as The Reverend Dr. Welch. The Dean's address runs on similar lines. He should never be called The Reverend Dean Rigby.

Having mentioned Provosts, Deans, Professors, and Doctors, I may as well go on with other academic distinctions. The only one that ought to be used at all frequently is M.D., although it is on record in an old story that M.D. once stood for Mule Driver. Many people write Dr. Smith but I must say that I much prefer Wm. Smith, Esq., M.D. As to M.A., B.A., B.C.L., and Mus.Bac., not to go into other so called faculties, it is very much better to use them only in official lists or in very official correspondence. Generally speaking, they should be left out, but, if you are wedded to them, it is always to be remembered that it is altogether wrong to write on an envelope A. C. Green, M.A. That is quite proper in an official list — of graduates, or of officers of a society, for example. No matter what degree a man may hold he has a right to the title Esquire, whether the right is born with him or comes to him only by virtue of his degree. Scotchmen and Americans use Mr. much more than we do but, unless you are of the one nationality or the other, use Esq. in addressing a University graduate, a Queen's Counsel, or a member of Parliament and leave out the degree letters, unless the graduate asks you to put them in. Above all things, do make it worth while to know exactly how a man signs his name and address him accordingly. I am free from prejudice as far as most of the points touched upon here are concerned but, if I do feel annoyed at anything of the kind, it is to have an address like A. C. Green, Esq. turned into A. Green Esq. or into — Green, Esq. It is a very poor compliment to a correspondent to show that you do not even know his name when a little trouble will nearly always enable you to find it out. Nor must the initials be omitted if you are going to follow the Scotch fashion of using Mr. and the degree letters. Mr. A. C. Green, M.A. is the proper style then and not Mr. Green, M.A., as some people persist in writing. One other common mistake must be mentioned and I shall have finished. Some men for the avowed purpose of putting their correspondents in a good humour give them a degree which is not theirs, calling a B.A., M.A., etc. It is not honest, nor is it good form.

It is not often that people tell you to your face that you have made a mistake in their address, but they do so sometimes. My own rule, if any one gets my address wrong, is to laugh or to dismiss the subject by saying to myself that the other man is ignorant and, therefore, knows no better: — it is such a comfort to my vanity and makes me out to be a very superior person indeed.

But I have forgotten to say that there are cases in which Esq. (or, as some people write it, Esq're) may not be used with propriety. Honourable and all other such prefixes make it unnecessary to affix it. The Honourable Wm. Smith (in two lines) is all sufficient. We write His Excellency, The Governor-General; His Honour, The Lieutenant-Governor (adding of Ontario, if you like) and His Worship, The Mayor of Toronto, etc., etc. Legal functionaries are often a source of trepidation to the uninitiated lay person, for their addresses vary very much according to their station. An ordinary County Judge has the same style and title as a Lieutenant-Governor and is, therefore, addressed as His Honour Judge Smith (in two lines). A judge of any of the higher courts is addressed as follows:—

MR. JUSTICE SMITH.

The Chief Justice would be addressed either as

THE CHIEF JUSTICE OF ONTARIO,

if he happened to be Chief Justice of Ontario and not Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal.

*THE STORY OF THE UNION JACK.

In this book Trinity has a special interest, as its author is one of her most loyal and devoted sons and as it adds another to the already considerable number of her family who have successfully essayed the dangers of literature.

It is peculiarly fitting that the book should have appeared in this year of jubilation and of imperialistic sentiment, for it takes a truly imperialist view of the relations of the British Empire. Beginning with the Jacks of England, Scotland, and Ireland, the author explains the name itself and the growth of the flag into its present form. He shows how the first Union Jack was made in 1707 when the parliaments of England and Scotland were united and how it became the flag of the present when the parliament of Ireland was merged in that of the sister island in 1801. The proper position and proportions of the various crosses are carefully described and incidentally an admirable summary is given of the glorious deeds done under the Old English Jack, the first Union Jack, and the second, or present, Union Jack.

The appearance of the Union Jack in Washington's first flag, its transference to the northern half of this continent in 1759, and its connection with the Quebec Act, the Constitutional Act, and the British North America Act are dwelt upon at full length, as parliamentary government is the one necessary requisite for a Union Jack. The appropriateness of the first seal of Canada is pointed out, inasmuch as it was English on one side and French on the other, and the loyalty of the French-Canadians in 1775, 1812, 1837, 1869, and 1885 receives the fullest and most generous recognition.

The fact that the Union Jack is the only true flag of freedom on this Continent is insisted upon none too strongly, while an admirable comparison is drawn between the institutions of our own country and those of the republic to the south of it. The loyalty of Canadians to the flag, which sometimes seems extravagant to natives of the Old Land, it is explained, and that rightly, is based upon the fact that we have had to fight for our country under this signal of self-defence. The book is overflowing with patriotism and cannot, therefore, be too highly commended, while its outlook in the direction of a United Canada and a United Empire are simply what we should expect from so good a citizen of both as the author is.

ON THE HEADSHIP OF COLLEGE.

To the Editor of THE TRINITY UNIVERSITY REVIEW.

DEAR SIR,—In a recent number of THE REVIEW I noticed some remarks concerning the Headship of College. Perhaps a note as to the practice prevailing in my time may be of interest. Usually the position fell unquestioned to the senior graduate in residence, but should he not possess the confidence and support of the men they elect a head, who assumed the position. This occurred twice during the six years I was connected with the college. In the one case the next senior graduate was elected, while in the other the head of the third year was appointed to the position over the head of several graduates. I have been told that this practice was the one which had been followed for many years at Trinity. I remain yours, etc.,

TORONTO, 1897.

OLD GRAD.

ON THE YEAR BOOK.

To the Editor of THE TRINITY UNIVERSITY REVIEW.

DEAR SIR,—As October draws on many of us will be awaiting the appearance of Trinity's Second Year Book, with its usual budget of interesting news and most useful information. The first was indeed a great success, to the no small credit of its able editors. But as naught mundane is perfect, will you allow me to call the attention of the editors and all our friends to an unfortunate mistake, whose grossness cannot but have annoyed many whose memories serve them better than does his who purveyed the lie.

On page 99 is found the following:—"Indeed, the Constitution has frequently been the cause of serious deliberation and earnest contention, and on one memorable occasion was the opportune moment chosen for a revolution. The management of the Institute's business had been taken possession of by an oligarchy, three of whom became particularly obnoxious to the vast body of members, and the latter decided to take measures calculated to dampen the ardour of these and similar members who might conspire to curtail the freedom of the electors. Several of the more sturdy were formed into a committee with power to bathe the obnoxious three, and they began to take the necessary steps. But the usurpers were not prepared to do battle and one at once decamped for home in much haste minus coat, waistcoat, and hat; another scaled the door of the room in which he had been imprisoned and had a laborious exit through the narrow transom, rather cut about the hands by the broken glass; the third, less fortunate, fell into the clutches of the committee and was treated to an involuntary bath."

Men in college in '88 will recognize this piece of perversion, which is all the more galling from the fact that there are around the Year Book men who well knew the facts. It was the year when Trinity ceased to be the preserve of a certain nameless institution. The Literary Council, as of yore, had been elected by a part of the seniors in October. These, when the freshmen had been admitted, constituted the "Oligarchy." Their minority was such that the new "Constitution" was carried over their heads with scarce an amendment, and finally, for unparliamentary language, the President was given three days to apologize for certain expressions or have his name erased from the roll of membership. During the heat of the conflict three of the leaders of the majority were treated as the above clipping states, and to their honour be it stated that they were better men than their would be mentors, and since then been more faithful to their Alma Mater, as shown by their sending up men to us, one of whom I notice, Mr. Editor, is a most able member of your present staff.

It is needless to say that care should be taken before the College Year Book is committed to such mistakes, if, indeed, they are not worse—the offspring of ill-feeling and of falsehood—but the matter is the more offensive when in the records of the Literary Institute itself is found the refutation of such worse than folly. Yours, etc.,

A SO-CALLED OLIGARCH.

COLLEGE CUTS.

In July it was very hot, and poor examination candidates did their best to keep cool. The girls came in shirt waists but the men had, for respectability's sake, to wear coats. A visitor remarked to the presiding examiner that he thought that if the girls were allowed to come in their shirt sleeves the men ought also to be allowed to do so.

* * *

Isaac died suddenly during the hot weather, but his master has brought out a successor, His Majesty King Orrey. He is usually tethered by yards and yards of string to the walk in front of the main entrance, where every man as he comes up may make his acquaintance. The gardener has no need now to cut off dead blossoms on the asters and other plants, for Orrey's string makes an excellent mowing machine.

* * *

Of the year of 1900 little is as yet to be said. We hope it will turn up large in numbers, full of work, and rapidly settle down thereto in proper fashion. Advice is always wasted, at least, upon a Freshman. But there are some few points to which they might give due heed in their first few months. 1st, learn the traditions; 2nd, learn "Metagons"; 3rd, learn the traditions better. None of this is acquired intuitively, nor at once. It will take time, but that time may be shortened. So mote it be. A little patience is required, and that, too, of the quiet order, and in due time the finest life in the Western Hemisphere unfolds itself before these tyros, and should they but live in residence they have but to taste and see, and three years hence regret that it is over.

* * *

They, like their seniors, will do well to purchase note books largely. Text books may not always be had (the dealers are prudent, and order only at request) but note-books, blank and large, are almost as good. If the tyro has money to burn let him buy last year's notes, if he likes money to earn let him keep a double set and sell the extra copies. In December and May the prices are always up. If his chirography is bad and slow, let him be thankful if it cannot further deteriorate, and let him mount a pen with ball bearings and pneumatic tire and so increase his speed. But to begin with, let him lay up note books in wholesale quantities.

* * *

As one of the special attractions for the entertainment of the University's guests on the day of the special Convocation, the Chancellor and Mr. Montgomery arranged for the display of collections of minerals and archaeological specimens, belonging to the latter gentleman, in Room No. 1, in which some of his specimens had already found a place. Though the arrangements were but temporary, the collections were viewed by many visitors from England, Canada, and the United States, among whom were Dr. Lloyd Morgan, of the University College, Bristol; the Reverend Dr. Bevan, London; Professor Wright, of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, and Professor Martin, of New York.

* * *

Mr. Montgomery recently spent ten days in examining mines and mineral claims in the Counties of Hastings and Peterborough. He brought back with him seven boxes of specimens.

THE AUGUST CONVOCATION.

"So dignified!" "Such a success!" These were some of the many congratulatory remarks heard on all sides when the Convocation held on Tuesday, August the 24th, was over. Yet the Convocation was in no way different from those that we are all accustomed to at Trinity, except that the gallery held ladies instead of undergraduates, the Queen's Own band played on the terrace, and honorary degrees only were the order of the day.

Months ago when arrangements were making for the reception of the British Association, Trinity offered to give a garden party in its honour and to confer the degree of D.C.L. upon some of its members, those who agreed to accept the degree being Sir John Evans, president of the Association, Lord Kelvin, Lord Lister, the Right Honourable James Bryce, Sir William Turner, and Sir George Robertson (who by a lapsus linguae was made Sir John Ross Robertson!).

The day was bright, the grounds beautiful, and the ladies' gowns like the rainbow for colour. At four o'clock the guests had begun to arrive and were received by the Provost and the Registrar at the head of the stone steps in front of the main entrance, Messrs. Ireland and Marling acting as A.D.C.'s, albeit they had put off their regimentals for the day. Visiting Mr. Montgomery's collection in the west wing, the chapel, and other parts of the building, filled in the time till about five o'clock. Then Convocation Hall was filled to overflowing with city folk and members of the Association, over three hundred having to stay outside and content themselves with music, refreshments, and the grounds.

At last the procession, headed by Mr. Elmes Henderson as esquire bedel, made its way slowly and with difficulty up the narrow lane left by the people who wanted to see but who had not been fortunate enough to get seats. The few Dons who were in town were there and doctors were numerous. They were followed by members of Corporation, the visitors from other Universities at home and abroad, the Provost, the Governor-General, and the Chancellor. Among the visitors were Sir Sandford Fleming, who, by the way, was at the laying of the corner stone forty-five years ago, the Chancellors of McMaster and Victoria Universities, the Reverend Professors Welton and Wallace, Professors Bell and Shutt, Mr. John Martland, and many more graduates and others quite as well known, the enumeration of whom would be a veritable Homeric task.

The Chancellor made a most happy speech by way of opening the proceedings and immediately the Provost presented the candidates for the degree in Latin speeches which, by their composition and delivery, won for him the highest praise from the visitors. Felicitous, even flattering, acknowledgments were made by the recipients of the degree, followed by a few brief and appropriate remarks from the Governor-General and the Minister of Education. The benediction was pronounced by Bishop Sullivan and the crowded assemblage filed out to enjoy tea and the cooler air. Of an event which counts as one of the best functions of a notable week, the only mementoes left, besides the memories, are the names in the Visitors' Book and Sir John Evans' work—"Ancient Stone Implements of Great Britain"—presented to the Library.

The Latin speeches in which some words with a home-like sound, as for instance carbolicum, evoked a smile from the audience, ran as follows:—

Honoratissime Domine, Domine Cancellarie et tota academia, hodie in urbem nostram, quam, ut est apud Martialem "Dominam urbem" vocamus, convenere doctissimi homines flos scientiae undique decerptus. Quibus, quum huic provinciae honorem huc venientes conferant, nos quoque honores quos possumus huc maximos invicem tribuere volumus. Summo enim studio ac diligentia naturam rerum arcanam perscrutati res majoribus nostris plane inauditas

Quid dicam de arte medicinae, qua morbi prius ignoti facillime distinguuntur et levantur? Quid de astronomia? Quid de tam multis mathematicae artis generibus, quibus propter novitatem rerum patrique sermonis egestatem cotidie nova nomina sunt conflanda?

Inter hos viros tam insignes, tam doctos, extat atque eminent is qui praeses omnium omnium suffragiis electus est, qui (ut alia multa omittam) origines generis humani tanto labore investigavit ab ultima illa antiquitate qua, Erant prioribus annis medici haud inferiore arte, et manu et consilio nullo modo nostris cedentes. Sed in vulneribus medendis in membris secaudis amputandisque artificis sollertiam fors caeca quaedam regere videbatur. Alii sanabantur, aliis dira gangraena "certissimus nuntius mortis" incessit. #### TRINITY MEDICAL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

Trinity Medical Alumni Association offer a gold medal to the graduates and members of the graduating class in medicine of the Trinity University, or Trinity Medical College, or fellows of Trinity Medical College, who are members of the Association in good standing, for the best thesis on any subject pertaining to modern medical science. The theses standing first and second respectively in merit are to be read by the writers at the annual general meeting, and the medal to be presented at the annual banquet of the Association.

It is reported that Messrs. J. D. McMurrich, '95, H. C. Osborne, '95, and W. Ridout Wadsworth, '96, are candidates for honours in the elections in connection with the Osgoode Literary and Legal Society. First Vice-President, Secretary, and Committeeman are what they respectively aspire to be.

Missionary and Theological.

THE COMING C.S.M.A. CONVENTION.

We are soon to welcome to the halls of Trinity delegates from different parts of the United States and Canada. They are coming in February to hold the Annual Convention of the Church Students' Missionary Association, a society formed some ten years ago among the students of the various church colleges in the United States and Canada with this threefold object in view:—

1. To gain and disseminate information concerning missions and missionary work.
2. To arouse and stimulate interest in such work.
3. To further this work by intercessory prayer.

There are now twenty-eight colleges represented in this Association, which owes its existence to Mr. Edward Eckel of the General Theological Seminary, New York. This ardent student, keenly feeling the lack of interest manifested among students generally, in the mission work of the church, set himself earnestly to work to find a remedy for this evil. Such a remedy he rightly conjectured could be found in an association among students, with an object as stated above.

His "idea" was taken up by the members of the Missionary Society of his college, and in response to a circular letter of invitation issued by them, forty-five delegates from eighteen institutions of learning, assembled in a preliminary convention in the Church of the Holy Communion, New York City, Friday, January 13, 1888.

The Constitution and By-laws almost as they are at present were then adopted.

Essays and addresses on missionary subjects were delivered by returned missionaries and others, one of those taking part being the Reverend John McKim, now Bishop of the American diocese of North Tokyo, in Japan. Mr. Naroo M. Mesan, who was about to go as a missionary to Syria, also addressed the meeting.

Since then Annual Conventions have been held, when past work was reviewed and new zeal kindled in those taking part in them. The seventh was held in the Diocesan Theological College, Montreal.

Trinity has been connected with the Association since its foundation, having been represented at the preliminary convention held in New York in 1888 and since, at Cambridge, Middletown, Montreal, Geneva, and last February, again at New York.

Though, perhaps, the Association may not have accomplished as much as it should, yet its labour has not, by any means been in vain.

Much work has been done, and that, too, in a practical way, chiefly through its endeavour to spread information regarding the missionary work of the Church, its greatness and its needs. This work has of course, been mainly carried on among students, as it does not profess to do any work outside the student body. In order to interest students in this important part of the church's work, the Association, knowing that "facts are the fuel to feed the fire," endeavours to place before them full information regarding that work. Time alone can tell the full result of such aims.

About two years ago the Association sent out a missionary to China—Reverend D. T. Huntington. Some students have gone to the foreign field partly at least through its influence, as for example:—Reverends Logan H. Roots and G. F. Mosher to China; one or two to Brazil, and Reverend H. A. Naylor, of the Montreal Diocesan College, to the mission fields in the extreme northern part of Canada. Others are at present preparing for Foreign and Domestic Mission Work, whose resolutions have been made through their connections with this Association.

During the past year a travelling Secretary was appointed, whose duty is to visit the colleges represented in the Association, and others, for the purpose of infusing a deeper missionary zeal in the hearts of those entering upon the work of the Church, whether at home or abroad. The man who fills this position is the Reverend Robert L. Paddock, who has just graduated from Berkeley Divinity School, Middletown, Conn., and whom we hope to have with us at our February Convention in Trinity.

This will be the second Convention held on Canadian soil, and we hope it will mark an epoch in the history of the Association. That this end may be accomplished, Trinity men are earnestly asked for their support, As the success of any convention very largely depends upon the members of the home chapter.

We hope to have delegates here from different parts of the United States, and fully trust that every church college in Canada will be represented. It will be the first time for Trinity to be honoured with such a gathering of students—representing, as it will, the United States from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, and Canada, from Winnipeg to Nova Scotia. Let us give them the hearty welcome they deserve, and do our best to make the coming Convention a success in every particular.

JAMES R. H. WARREN,
President.

IN MEMORIAM.

As this number goes to press the order for the mural brass to be erected in the College Chapel to Prof. Boy's memory is being placed with the McCausland Co., of Toronto, for execution, and it is hoped that the memorial will be in place in time for the October Convocation. The Business Manager of THE REVIEW, who has been acting as treasurer of the fund, is very pleased to state that though the requisite sum has not yet been promised that sum has been so nearly reached, and the prospect of success so reassuring, that the order for the work has been given, with every confidence that the lists now circulating will return sufficiently large to meet the cost.

Of the following list some thirty men have already remitted their subscriptions as the remainder will also do, it is hoped, without further delay.

SPORTS.

ALTHOUGH it has been some months since the inter-club championships, they came too late to be written up for the last number of THE REVIEW published in term.

The meet was held under the auspices of the Toronto Lacrosse Club, and much credit is due to them for their encouragement of athletics. Marking was under the three, two and one system, the team scoring the highest number of points to hold a silver challenge shield.

It was a very flukey meet, surprises in every race, the management poor, and the times only fair. Trinity was unfortunate in her loss of Heaven, whose knee kept him out of the half, though Temple more than sustained the honour of the Trinity-mile in his brilliant win at that distance. Then Hubbard, who was looked on as almost sure for the quarter, hurt his ankle two weeks before the race, and was incapacitated for that.

Parmenter, Campbell and Temple did most of our scoring. Campbell won the three hundred very prettily from Morrow in the most keenly run race of the afternoon, and after a hundred, a two-twenty and a three hundred, he got second in the quarter, a yard behind the winner, in 52 secs. Parmenter ran second in the hurdles, vaulted second with nearly ten feet, and got third in the hundred, a performance which stamps him an all-round athlete. Altogether Trinity piled up fifteen points. The Y.M.C.A. have two branches in Toronto, with separate gymnasium instructors and athletic managements, they combined and together, made several points more than Trinity, who came second with a higher score than that of either the Central or Western branches. Our individual scores were:—

Campbell, D. F.	5 points.
Parmenter, R.	5 points.
Temple, R.	3 points.
Hubbard, W. F.	2 points.

IT HAD BEEN intended to enter the track team in the jubilee games held at the Exhibition Grounds on the 22nd of June, but, on account of exams., Hubbard was the only one who was able to enter. He got third a yard behind the winner who was given 10 secs., which is slightly fishy time, although it was undoubtedly a fast heat. In the quarter Hubbard jumped into the lead at a furious pace, and held it until well into the stretch, when Morrow closed in on him, and won by a yard in 51 2-5 seconds. As the last hundred and sixty yards was against a stiff breeze this was a creditable performance.

WE WILL NOW cease digging in the past and look upon the present and upon the future—and it is no pleasant sight that greets us—for foot-ball prospects are undoubtedly bad. The College seems to have fewer men than ever, and the discouragement of recent years has told upon us. It is much more misfortune than ill-management that has left us thus stranded, although there has been a little of the latter in our down fall. It is not a down fall in the literal sense, as the clubs with which we used to play close matches have improved so vastly that we are simply thrown out of their class, and we, like the brook, go on forever playing our old game. But that isn't our fault, we can't draw from eight colleges or so, neither have we the reputation,—nor the funds,—to induce ringers to join our ranks. Our meds. are miles away with conflicting lecture hours, so what can we do? All we can we do is to begin at the bottom, and try and work it up gradually. Our lack of men will make a first-class team an impossibility at any time, but we can have good foot-ball spirit, a clean, snappy team, plenty of sport and healthy exercise.

A schedule should be made out immediately, and strictly adhered to—to play well we must play often against outside teams, and gather from them their points. We should have a practice match a week, at the least. Mr. Jones has been appointed captain, let him put his energy into the cause, but he can do nothing without help, so everybody turn out, everybody do their best, and everybody enter with enthusiasm into the game!

TROUBLE AT HARVARD.

A sensation has been created at Harvard by the sending of a copy of the following notice to every student in the college:

"The Parietal Board expects that when entertaining ladies in your room, except on such days as class-day, you will observe the following regulation:

No. 1—No young lady or ladies, unattended by an older lady as chaperon, should be received in a student's room.

No. 2—During the evening no lady should be received in a student's room unless the student has previously consulted with the proctor, or, in the proctor's absence, with some other officer of instruction or government.

No. 3—It is desirable that ladies should not enter or walk through the halls of the dormitories unattended; and a student, when entertaining ladies, should see that they are escorted to and from his room either by himself or by some other gentleman."

Very truly yours,

GEO. A. BARTLETT,

Chairman of the Parietal Board.

What has prompted Mr. Bartlett or the Parietal Board, to this action is not known. Perhaps it was the harsh statement made by Evangelist Moody in Boston, in February, when he denounced Harvard—more especially the medical school—as a "sink of moral iniquity," and said he had several personal proofs given him of the truth of his statement, one of which had come from the lips of a young girl. Upon being seen later at his hotel by the reporters, Mr. Moody refused to retract his statements, and went even further by saying that the facts in the particular case he had mentioned were known to President Eliot. However that may be, the student-body is justly angry. Their sentiments are fairly represented by one of the editors of the Crimson, who, in discussing the new edict, said: "There is no man in the university but knows its regulations regarding the reception of women in the dormitories. When it has been proved to the satisfaction of the faculty that a man has received a woman of bad character in his room, expulsion has followed in every instance. I remember four such cases during the four years that I have been in college, and the guilty men did not even get a chance to say anything in their own behalf. They all went, though the reasons of their departure were not made public. This circular is simply a new piece of officiousness on Mr. Bartlett's part. Harvard men are no better and no worse than any other young men."—Boston Transcript.

back to wander through our halls and grounds. For some years past he has been in charge of Billings in Montana, and seems to be greatly impressed with the land of the cattle and bunch grass.

Ross, '92, whose long illness has called forth many expressions of sympathy from his contemporaries and friends at College has made such fortunate progress towards recovery that for some two months past he has been able to take some duty in Algoma diocese, where he has been working in the parish of Dunn Church. After a five years rest, involuntary though it was, it is hoped that he will soon take his place again in the forefront of work as in days gone by.

The Brantford Courier, of August 7th contained a notice of Dr. Griffin, who died in that city on August 6th. At the time of his death Dr. Griffin was a member of Corporation (nominated by the Bishop of Huron) and had been showing a warm interest in the University, particularly in the matter of the Sustentation Fund. "The deceased, who was in his sixty-eighth year, was the fourth son of the late E. C. Griffin, of Waterdown, Ont., and grandson of the late Smith Griffin, of Smithville, Ont., who belonged to a U.E. Loyalist family of Welsh origin. Dr. Griffin received his early education at the Hamilton High School and commenced the study of medicine in Trinity College, Toronto, in 1849. He graduated in 1853 and then spent a year in the hospitals of New York and secured a second degree there. In 1854 he came to Brantford and commenced a practice which very soon began to assume large proportions. In that year he was appointed physician to the pupils of the Mohawk Institute and the following year he became gaol surgeon. In 1856 he became medical officer for the Canada Life Insurance Company; in 1858 surgeon to the 2nd battalion of Brant militia and in 1859 a Justice of the Peace. He was also a coroner of the county and served many years on the Brantford Public School Board. It was, though, as Medical Health Officer of the city that his chief work was accomplished." On the Sunday the Rector of Grace church made reference at considerable length to the Doctor's life and labours in a sermon on St. James iv., 14—"What is your life?"
