FLEMMING: ARCH HYPOCRITE.

Some fifteen years or more ago J. K. Flemming, a noble minded youth, addressed a temperance meeting in Burt's hall. He spoke on purity in political life. At that time he had not run for or from anything. He then had a high and lofty vision of public life as well as great aspirations. His voice deep with emotion, he deplored the bartering of votes, the trading of booze for ballots, and such corrupt practices. With his right hand raised to heaven, he pledged, and spoke God's name for a witness, that if ever he entered upon a political career, he would neither use or countenance the use of money, rum, or other corrupt methods to influence voters. He pleaded with the audience to take this pledge with him. Five men, and some of them live in Hartland today, did so. Not unlike the popular evangelists did Mr. Flemming appeal, his voice choking when his hearers sat reluctant and dumb. Before he closed he called on individuals by name. But only himself and five local Conservatives were willing to take upon themselves such an obligation.

Mr. Flemming made a good resolution. But he didn't keep it. A few years later he went to the polling place at Peel to cast a ballot for Fred Hale. He didn't do it. He had spent the day practicing those methods which he had taken his solemn oath not to practice and challenged, he could not vote. Each time Mr. Flemming has been elected much money has been used to purchase votes for him. He has himself given promises of reward. He knows that next week much money will be spent, corruptly, in his behalf. He knows that last September thousands were spent in the attempt to defeat Carvell and, far from trying to stay the iniquity, he aided and abetted it.

Were the foregoing not true in substance the editor of this paper could with a reasonable degree of certainty, look forward to two years in the penitentiary for libel. Being true, he has no such fears. Being true, the public mind should be informed at this highly important time.

The Premier has a way of using a sneer when he fouls the incontrovertible. "With a proud look and a high stomach" he will pass this article by. "Ho, ho, the little Observer!" will be the extent of his remark. But the people of Carleton have not lost faith in the "little Observer", as they have in their premier, who has proven himself very small indeed.

Only a week remains before election. If Mr. Flemming would be re-elected by clean vote he must spend the week in preaching purity. He must again raise his hand to high heaven and make his vow of purity in elections.

Otherwise the candle that lights his political pathway will splutter out, except by the SAVING GRACE OF RUM AND MONEY.

T. B. Thistle is being congratulated on having won the piano in the St. John Standard subscription contest.

An automobile driven by parties unknown to the Observer ran amuck near Cross Creek and settled itself astride a log fence. It required considerable ingenuity to get it righted and going again.

Joe Donovan, leader of the Houlton band, played with the Bridgewater band at Hartland on Tuesday evening.

George McIntosh, formerly of Glassville, died at Littleton on May 29th.

The Observer is got out this week under unusually hard circumstances. Making changes in the office and house cleaning is responsible for the haste made evident by numerous typographic errors.

The Better Farming Special will be in Hartland on Saturday forenoon, not tomorrow as stated on page 4.

S. S. Convention.

The Sunday schools of the parish of Brighton will hold their annual convention at Hartland on Tuesday, June 18, at 2.30 and 7.30 at the Methodist church. A large attendance of those interested in Sunday school work is requested. The pastors of the different churches have consented to be present and give addresses on different lines of Sunday school work. Do not forget the date—June 18.

Life Insurance may be summed up briefly as a matter of DOLLARS and SENSE. It would take a cyclone to raise the house off your property, but a Life Insurance Policy with The MANUFACTURERS' LIFE will raise the Mortgage.

IMPROVING THE HOME

MISS LAIRD IS HEAD OF DOMESTIC SCIENCE COLLEGE.

She Started With a Few Classes in Cooking at the Victor Mission in Toronto and Her Work Has Grown Into the Full-Fledged Lillian Massey School of Domestic Science—Works Long Hours.

"Miss Laird, the head of it, is the only person who knows more about the work being done there than anyone else, and has had most to do with its becoming what it is." The speaker was Mrs. Massey-Treble, the woman to whom the University of Toronto is indebted for its new building for the study of domestic science, and her words were in reply to a question as to the plans for the new college.

Miss Laird has for long been a force in the educational world of Toronto. It is more than ten years ago since she came as assistant teacher to the Lillian Massey School of Household Science. The next year she was principal, and has held the position ever since, although after the school's absorption into the university, the title was changed slightly, so that she is now "associate professor." But "what is in a name?" The lady is a Canadian, but her specialized education was received at the Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, since at that time there were no training schools for domestic science in Canada.

This is not the place to dwell on the phenomenal growth of the school, which started to teach home cooking to a few classes in the Victor Mission, and ended by having on its roll hundreds of students, some going deep into household science as part of a university course, and others taking only short courses.

The advance has been slow, but steady, and in each step of the upward progress, Miss Laird has been chief counsellor to the founder of the school, and has had a part in all the planning for the beautiful building in Queen's Park. Her time, outside her usual duties, has been given to endless conferences as to the detail of furnishings and equipment. The better to know what were the most up-to-date ideas on the subject, Miss Laird has visited within the last year or two many of the leading establishments in colleges in the United States, where domestic science is taught, among them being Simmons College, Boston, and the new Teachers College of Columbia University, New York. No slightest detail escaped her notice that could help to realize the ideal held by the generous founder and the faculty.

Miss Laird's days are full ones, full as few people's are.

What do you think of a person who, between beginning work at the usual time in the morning and ten o'clock at night, has not a moment to spare for any interest outside? And this is what frequently happens.

Such unusual hours are owing to the peculiar fact that the class taught by a student in household science for practice may be one of boys at the Broadview Y.M.C.A., or for girls or married women at a settlement house in The Ward, or of young ladies at the Y.W.C.A.

It is more than likely to meet in the evening, so the teacher of the student-teacher must needs be present to "observe."

It seems a long day, but when some asked Miss Laird if she did not get "sick and tired" of it, there was no acquiescence.

"It is such fascinating work, I never tire of it. It is always so full of interest."

Of course, if that is a worker's attitude to what engrosses all her time and attention, that work is sure to be a success.

No one could be more calm and untroubled than this busy woman, more modest about what she has accomplished or diffident about speaking of her successes.—Mignon in Toronto Star Weekly.

Scottish Copper Discovery.

What is confidently believed to be a payable copper deposit has been discovered at Killin, in Argyllshire, near the shores of Loch Tay. For some weeks past a company has been energetically prosecuting prospecting operations, and as a result a lode at least six feet thick has been proved for a considerable distance north and south of the point at which it was found. The copper is found in the form of carbonate and sulphide in a limestone formation. Mining operations are to be initiated on a considerable scale without delay.

Chance to Get Even.

"Going to Wombat's wedding over on the north side."

"Not I. I was engaged to that girl. Wombat cut the out."

"Well, come to the wedding. You may get a chance to biff him in the jaw with an old shoe."

CURIOSITIES OF BREEDING.

English Biological Expert Makes Important Discoveries.

It is quite a common belief that if the pure bred male with the pure bred the progeny is bound to be pure. Such a result, however, does not naturally follow, and many breeders particularly of fowls, have been puzzled to account for the various species which arise from parents of pure breed. Take, for instance, the case of the blue Andalusian fowl. If two birds of this strain are mated, it will be found that besides the blue birds which hatch out there will be a certain number of blacks and of whites with occasional black points.

Again, if the blues thus produced are mated together, blacks and whites will again appear among their offspring, and no amount of breeding from the blues alone will rid them of the black and white blood, which will crop out at every generation, although blue birds only are mated every time.

As a matter of fact, when blue Andalusians are mated together, according to Mr. A. D. Darbishire, the English expert, in his book, "Breeding and the Mendelian Discovery," birds of three types of color are produced in the three following proportions: one black, two blue Andalusians, and one white in every four birds, on the average. And while the whites are found to breed true, the Andalusians when mated together again, produce these three types in the same proportion.

On the other hand, the result of crossing a black and a white bird is a blue Andalusian, and the blue birds obtained in this way, when mated together, produce a generation of fowls again consisting of about one black, two blues, and one white in four.

This phenomenon of breeding forms one of the most striking illustrations of what is known as the Mendelian theory—i.e., the doctrine that in the second and later generations of a hybrid the combinations of the parent character occur in a definite proportion.

Here is another remarkable instance of recurrence in breeding which Mr. Darbishire cites. As every fowl-keeper knows, one of the characteristics which distinguish the various breeds of poultry is the form of the comb. The commonest type of comb is known as the single comb, with flat sides and the edges marked with deep indentations. Another type, which characterizes the Wyandottes, is known as the "rose" comb; a third type as the "pea" comb; while a fourth is known as the "walnut" comb, which only occurs in the Malay. If a fowl with a "pea" comb is mated with one having a "rose" comb, the resulting hybrids have "walnut" combs, and when these hybrids are mated together the generation produced has the following remarkable composition—nine "walnut" combs, three "rose" combs, three "pea" combs, and one single, although no single was put into the cross.

The Craze For the Antique.

Whether the present craze for antiques represents in reality any artistic progress on the part of people in general would be a nice speculation, says The London Globe. We fear that the majority of cases the acquisition or attempted acquisition of "genuine" old furniture, prints, china and so forth is merely dictated by a desire to be in the fashion. It may be argued that even this is so much to the good, since it is better that persons of small or no taste should live in artistic surroundings, even if they are unable to appreciate them. So much may be admitted, but our concern for the moment is rather with the class of people who have some instinct for art, but who in their pursuit of the beautiful and their dislike of the blatantly ugly have rushed into the extreme of acquiring articles merely because they are "genuine old." Now, age alone does not necessarily imply beauty. An artistic copy of a beautiful object is far more to be desired than an antique, even if genuinely old, original. But, unfortunately, most of us are such impulsive creatures that in our haste to buy the old we are in danger of forgetting to note whether it is really beautiful as well. The result will probably be that in a few years' time the present craze will die out and we shall be filling our rooms with priceless specimens of mid-Victorian art!

Curious Pavement Mark.

In the ancient town of Southampton (Eng.), and situated in the busiest part of the picturesque old High street, stands the Church of Holy Rood. Immediately before this church, and let into the public pavement, is a small brass cross some 6 inches or 8 inches in length and breadth. This cross marks the exact spot where a heavy stone pinnacle fell from the top of the church during the busiest part of the day, and it also commemorates the fact that, though numbers of people were at the time passing and repassing, not a single person sustained the slightest injury.

Why Parliament Gathers Tuesday.

The British Parliament's custom of assembling for a new session on Tuesday instead of on the first working day of the week originated in the religious scruples of legislators of a century ago. In 1809 it was proposed that Monday should be made the day of meeting, but one of the members protested that this would involve Sunday traveling—a thing to be abhorred. A number of other members sustained him in his protest and the day for assembling was made Tuesday.

A Bootless Attempt.

"Ma," said Tommy Twaddles, looking up from his reading of "Terry the Tempest," "what is a bootless attempt?" "It's the sort you make to get in without my hearing him when he comes home late from the club," answered Ma Twaddles incisively. "Pa doesn't stop to remove 'em at the foot of the stairs now. He knows it's no use."

THE OBSERVER

Prof. H. Stevens, Editor and Managing Director.

Advertising Rates made known on application.

Published by The Observer Limited
Hartland, New Brunswick

Terms of Subscription: The OBSERVER is $1.00 per year, payable in advance. The paper will be sent to subscribers until it is ordered stopped, but each subscriber will be notified when the time to which he has paid is ended.

VOL. 3 JUNE 13. No. 52

A Word to Subscribers.

Some months ago the manager of the Observer notified each subscriber who was in arrears that if they remitted within a week from the notice they could pay up and renew at the special rate of 50 cents a year. Many took advantage of the offer, but there were others who did not. We still believe the cheapest way to collect these past due subscriptions is the offer of the special price. Therefore we have again sent out notices to all, giving them an opportunity to renew at 50 cents a year as well as to pay for the time that they owe.

The price of the Observer is $1.00 per year, but when subscribers pay strictly in advance we will accept 50 for a years subscription.

Because of the low price at which it is offered, many people look upon The Observer as a "little" paper. As a matter of fact it prints each week more columns of news and general reading than any paper in the county; and its circulation throughout the county is VASTLY GREATER than that of any other paper published in the county or elsewhere. The cost of producing The Observer is, we believe, greater than that of the production of any of its local contemporaries, and it is very needful, in order that the price may be kept at 50 cents, that each subscriber must pay promptly. So far as the business men of Hartland are concerned the manager wishes to express the opinion that no paper in any town of any size whatever has been more loyally or cheerfully supported. This is a compliment to the paper and a credit to the business men of Hartland, all of whom are purchasers of advertising space in proportion to the business they do. Not alone are Hartland merchants supporters of the paper, for we have among our very best customers business men in the neighbouring villages. It is noticeable that these are the most progressive, and looked upon as the most prosperous.

It is highly amusing to read some of the letters written in response to 350 printed forms sent out last week. These are merely a formal notice offering each subscriber the chance to have 50 cents on his subscription. Yet many consider them as "duns". There are some very hot replies. For instance a man from Wicklow parish claims he got no papers for a long period during which he alleges the "Observer was broken down". He missed many copies and received no notice at the time his subscription expired. Records show that this man had been notified twice previously, and the paper has been mailed to him unfailingly every Thursday. But most amusing of all was his criminal threat that he should see that we would have subscribers at his post office in the future.

Four Years.

The history of the present local government is remarkable because of the speed with which the Hazen-Flemming combination has frittered away the great margin of power and popularity which it had when it took office after its great victory in 1908. Many Liberals voted for the Hazen-Flemming party on that occasion, and the public at large seemed to have been impressed considerably by their fervent promises to give the province good roads and economical government and to deal fairly with the people of both parties.

In seeking for the reasons why the government which was so strong in 1908 is so weak at the end of four years of office holding, it is soon realized that the reckless disregard of the leaders of the administration for all their promises and professions of faith has been the principal cause for the government's decline.

They promised economy, and they have been prodigate. They promised non-partisanship, and they have been continually and meanly partisan. They promised good roads, and they have wasted the road money in political expenditures and left the roads worse than ever. They promised constructive policies, but they have introduced none.

These are some of the reasons why the Liberal opposition when it began to prepare for the present campaign found everywhere ready and hearty support for its principles and its candidates. Many Conservatives had boasted that there would be practically no opposition in this election. Mr. Copp's activities during the last few weeks, and the welcome he has received in every county, have put another face on affairs even in the eyes of Conservatives. Indeed, Conservatives everywhere now realize that the government is fighting for its life, and that the battle has become a losing one. Mr. Flemming hesitated long before fixing the date for the elections. At the banquet in his honor here, and during the next day or two following he and several of his ministers sought to create the impression that there would be no contest in June, but that it would come much later. Mr. Flemming, however, discovered finally what many other observers already knew—that the longer the elections were postponed the worse would his chances become.

There is probably nothing in the political history of Canada to parallel the loss of prestige by the present administration during the last four years. Money will be poured out freely by the corrupt forces of the governments at Ottawa and Fredericton in the hope of stemming the rising tide of popular indignation against the Flemming party, but even the lavish use of a corruption fund will not suffice to save the day.

Political Pointers.

George W. Upham, lumberman, C. L. Smith, farmer, and Frank R. Shaw, farmer, will today be nominated candidates to contest the election against J. K. Flemming, ex-school teacher, ex-teacher, ex-grocer, ex-merchant, ex-millman, ex-pre-mies; Donald Munroe, book keeper, and Leverett White, a storekeeper.

Orators stumping the county for government candidates make no attempt to show that the Government party and the Conservative party are not one and the same. Premier Flemming has made no appeal for Liberal support. He dare not do so more than he dare tell a Hartland audience why the Rigby bill was turned down.

The Conservatives claim for Flemming a majority of 280. Four years ago this man had twice that majority. Why should it be less today? The odds would naturally be in his favor, for it was charged at the last election that Flemming was fighting two governments. He now has both on his side, yet his own supporters say he will do well if he gets half the majority of last election. A rather strong admission of weakness!

The arrogant Mr. Flemming sneers at the "little minds of the opposition." This is language unbecoming to a man in his position. There are at least a few of the stanchest, brainiest men in Carleton county in the Opposition party, which is the Liberal party reinforced, by a host of disgusted Conservatives. The fact that there is an opposition to the Flemming Government is no indication of small mindedness and the Premier's words do not encourage belief in his own mental calibre.

A young Tory enthusiast exclaims with all the unblushingness of a youth who will be old enough to vote four years hence: "We're going to elect Flemming no matter what it costs." It is said the Yankee dollars for this purpose were delivered last Sunday.

It costs more than $1200.00 for a new floor for the Big Presque Isle Bridge. The bridge is 160 feet long. "Various persons" did the work and the Flemming Government handed out the coin.

Would Mr. Flemming agree to a "pure" election today? Ask him, some of you purity leaguers.

Premier Flemming entertained his friend A. R. Gould on the Sabbath lastpast. Of course Gould took a Sunday for it in order to avoid "those annoying politicians." But they, too, were there.

"Any body who favors Frank Carvell in the Dominion election forfeits my personal friendship," said Mr. Flemming last September.

Did you ever hear of road work being done in the winter time? The Flemming government paid out near

FARMING SPECIAL HERE TOMORROW.

Educational Train A Regular Agriculture College on Wheels.

The C.P.P. better farming special consisting of three baggage cars, two passenger coaches for the lecturers and cars for the accommodation of the train crew, will arrive here tomorrow and be open to visitors from 9. to 11.30 a.m. The train is a travelling agricultural college and is being sent over the province by the C.P.R. to give farmers the advantage of scientific knowledge and information. The most up to date implements used in farming are exhibited, the cars are so arranged that visitors can pass from one end to the other. There are interesting exhibits of the best methods in growing all kinds of crop. In the live stock car are a number of fine dairy cows with their respective records in milk and butter on the wall above them. These cows are of an excellent type not only for milk but for producing calves which make fine best carcasses.

In this car also are several types of fowls, broods of chickens and examples of the right kinds of poultry houses to build and other instructive information along practical lines. The other cars contain varieties of seeds, plants, grains, etc., specimens of various insect pests, examples showing the need of precautions in caring for milk, devices for spraying fruit trees, and many other exhibits that will help the farmer to see the advantages to be gained from handling his business on modern and scientific lines. The train is in charge of a staff of competent agricultural experts, who give practical addresses and explain to their visitors the advantages of the plans advocated. Altogether great good must result from the visit of this train to New Brunswick.

Suppressing Rowdism

On Friday Theodore DeMerchant of Bairdsville was arrested by Inspector A. R. Foster for being drunk and disorderly about the C.P.R. station premises at Perth. Taken before Police Magistrate McQuarrie at Andover he was sentenced to two months in jail or $20. fine. It is noticeable that rowdism is being more effectually dealt with about the C.P.R. stations and on the trains than was the case a short time ago, and the public appreciate the company's efforts to suppress the nuisance.

ly a quarter of a million dollars for road work and bridges between November first 1911 and March 6, last. Where do you suppose this road work was done and who got the money?

When Mr. Flemming told you four years ago that the Hazen Government would build better roads did he tell you that the poll tax would be increased from $1.00 to $1.50, and that the property tax would be increased from twelve to twenty cents on the hundred dollars valuation? Are the roads really in better condition?

A. R. Rigby has had some experience with Premier Flemming, and he warns the electors to beware of the subtle Premier, whom he termed a Sam Slick, slimy-smiling, fawning, hug-me-close individual. "He will profess warm regard and friendship, and will knife you if it serves his ends."

Time and again the Conservatives approached the opposition with a proposal to let the Carleton County election go by default, returning the old members. They realize that their case is hopeless.
