There was an uncurrent for Blaine, all through however, although in the ballots cast he only received the vote of California and a few scattering, the total rarely reaching forty. Nobody doubts that Blaine could have had the nomination if he had wanted it, but it was evidently the spirit of the Convention not to go down on its knees to Blaine in the face of his letters from Florence and Paris, declining nomination. These letters, however, did not deter Blaine's friends from placing him in nomination. Their game was to create a deadlock, then push Blaine on the Convention for all he was worth, secure his unanimous nomination, and with this to lay at Blaine's feet, they could feel sure that their man would accept. But the game would not work. and on Monday morning Blaine's name was withdrawn on the positive mit that the other Provinces will have to fight the battle of Liberalism without expecting much aid from this Province. thanks for their great kindness during that week. They gave the services of their splendid band, and sided in every way possible to make the undertaking a success, my heart, that it was "begun, continued, and and on all occasions they have ever been ended in Thee." ready and willing to give their assistance in carrying out any plan for the benefit of the Victoria Hospital. The bazaar was to be epresented by all denominations; two ladies rom each church were asked to meet at government house and consult with me about he tables. It was decided that each church should have six representatives, and furnish their own tables; and the morning the bazaar opened, it was indeed a beautiful sight, and would have done credit to London or New York, for they had all done their best, and had worked with a will, and everything passed off in a pleasant and satisfactory manner; and the sum realized was $2,600, which amply repaid us all for any trouble we had Henry Yerxa's Magnificent Gift. taken, as it meant a good deal towards the building fund. And in the coming years of my life, should I be spared, I will often look back to the pleasant associations of that bazaar week, as it brought me in close rela tionship with so many of the LADIES OF FREDERICTON who have always been ready and willing to assist me in any undertaking, and there are many self-sacrificing women here, who only require the opportunity to develop their talents. As an instance of it, one kindhearted woman came to me, some time ago and offered her services for one year. She was willing to leave her home and go into the hospital and nurse the sick. The offer I have accepted, and she is now one of the staff, ready to be called upon when required When I leave here to make my home is another part of the province, the hospita will, I feel very sure need friends. There were many interesting things connected with the work which tend to show how one event leads to another. While being with one dear to me in a Boston hospital, a touching dear to me in a Boston hospital, a touching tribute was sent to him, consisting of a box of beautiful flowers, from one who desired to express his gratitude for some never-to-be orgotten words of kindness and advice given to him as a young man when leaving his native land to make a home among strangers. On my arrival home home the thought came (or rather was sent) to me one morning that the same kind heart might be ready to do something for the infirmities of others, and give me some help in the work; and, although a stranger to him, I ventured to write and ask. He at once restatistical information thereof, and to secure der the circumstances the arrangement was a proper recognition of our interests in the judicious one. Lady Tilley herself would for $250 towards the fund, and also saying read a paper giving an account of the year's that he hoped to see his way clear to give hospital, and it would not be in good taste which he has since done. It was certainly s that the following favorite quotation,

WILL BE APPLICABLE TO HIM :-

A sick man blessed by thee, shall make thee whole;
A poor man helped by thee, shall make thee rich;
Thou shalt be blessed thyself with every blessing which thou renderest.
Then, soon after, I had a letter from a young girl who had seen in the papers the roposed plan; she had some years since left her home to earn her living in the States, and sent me $15 of her hard-earned wages. The little gift was certainly very gratifying A graceful gift of $10 was sent from the Sunday school children of Knox church, She--something that he had made to be used for fracted limbs, having seen them in a city hospital, and which will be of great us

So many, many thoughtful acts of kindness I have received, and have given such real pleasure to me. The hospital is now built. Just one year ago to-day we were here at the LAYING OF THE CORNER-STONE. For situation, nothing could be more beautiful. Elevated above the water, "the silent river gliding slowly to the sea," and with the meadows beyond, secure it to a free course for the northwest breezes of summer, while the distant hills add a charm to this scene of beauty which would be difficult to surpess. If this is so delightful to those who life, and feeling what an object-lesson it has enjoy the blessings of health, what will it be the professional series and the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the future years to how many it will originate and the second of the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the profession of a New York millionairs, who is the future years to how many it will originate and the second of the profession of a New Yo

At the conclusion of Lady Tilley's remarks this same gentleman, who was recognized as Mr. Asa Dow, of Canterbury, arose and addressing Lady Tilley said: "Lady Tilley, was so much pleased with the noble work in which you are engaged, namely, the erection of an hospital for the sick and those meeting with accidents, that I promised you $1,000 on the opening day. Your ladyship will find a cheque for that amount in this envelope which I have the honor to hand you. Farwell! I fondly lov'd, A dream of bliss. 'Tis o'er, A dream of biss. Its o'er,
Phis heart, that warmly throbb'd, is cold;
I love the now no more
Fou wove the chain—you've broke the spell!
Enslaved and freed—Farewell! Farewell!

I saw thee blush to hear
Thy name with mine allied;
The existent has of burning shame
Thy cheeks and forehead dyed;
Deep as the tint, I then felt mine
But too congenial with thine

You should have blushed to feed That flame you blushed to own, Then thy young heart's falsity Had been to me unknown; And I had deem'd thee still a thing Bright as my first imagining.

Tis not unmoved I part.—
But its for thee I grieve;
To think those eyes with truths own beam
Could smile and yet deceive;
That one so very young could be
An adept in duplicity.

Think not I can forget— Only that I forgive; Think not thy proud false heart again Could in my fond soul live; Not all the tears thou couldst distil,

But fare thee well—no more Thy cheek shall blush for me; Unless it blushes at the thought That I have blushed for thee.

You wove the chain—you've broke the spell!
Enslaved and freed—Farewell! Farewell!

THE WIDOW BARLOW

Beggars reaped no harvest from his purse or kitchen; and match-makers could make no impression on his bachelor heast. Peter van Buskirk saw through the latter as well as the former, and buttoned up his peckets as hastily in the presence of bewitching crincline as in that of a seedy gentleman with a folded document in his breast-pocket. The men wanted to rob him, the women to marry him. The last was the worst. Not that Peter hated women — on the contrary, even at fifty he was yery susceptible; a bright eye put him in a flutter. But the fact was, women, as wives or daughters were expensive. They were proverbially extravagant. Should he marry one, she would spend his money while he lived and squander it after he was dead. And with this swfal terror heafter, him, Pater stagest lates of an article of genuine merit, adapted to the cure of soreness or lameness, hurts of various kirk. before him, Peter steered clear of the shoals of matrimony.

Two or three times indeed he stood upon the verge of a tender passion. But each time some display of extravagance had frightened him back into his shell. Once it was an ostrich feather in a blue bounet. Another time the sight of his fair one devouring ices. The third, the sudden assumption of voluminous crimoline. In fact, since hoops had become the sudden assumption of voluminous crinoline. In fact, since hoops had become the rage, Peter had more utterly adjured in matrimony than ever. What must a woman cost so distended, Peter dared not think. He saw those beflounced robes which so horrified him very frequently; not only in the street, but at sundry tee and evening parties to which he was always invited, and which he always made a point of attending, because they saved him a meal. There they spread before his eyes sometimes, when the table was crowded, quite over his knees, and strengthened his resolution to knees, and strengthened his resolution to live and die a bachelor. bachelorhood, however. That was the housekeeping. Board old Peter would not. Landladies might charge a man of his economical disposition to madness, and keeping house involved a servent some one to make beds, wash dishes, cook and iron.

That servant was always the bane of Peter's life. Eating and drinking in a manner which kept the master of the house in a continual ferment; wasting house in a continual ferment; wasting butter, oil and fuel, and each change in the kitchen's encumbrance followed by the mysterious disappearance of towels and kerchiefs, and such small ware. There was no rest for good Mr. Van Buskirk. He tried Biddy, Gretchen, black Dinah, and Yankee Sally Ann, and then, in despair, flew to a certain Mrs. Brown, the giver of tea parties innumerable, to ask advice.

He told his wees, his terrors and his anxieties; the lady shook her head. "Servants are such plagues," she said.
"Eat you out of house and home," said

"Not to be relied on for honesty," said "Thieves mum, thieves," said Peter.

—"Marrying!"

"Yes, sir — a wife can manage such thing so much better. Besides, if you choose a smart capable woman, you need keep no servant. It would be much more economical to marry."

"Economical! yelled Peter, my good lady. Eco-I—oh, goodness! Feathers and flowers, laces and silks, and rings and —and ice cream and things—economical How many yards do you take for a dress

Well, sir, twelve or fifteen—sometime when it's a silk, you know, eighteen."

"Eighteen yards, at three dollars or so a yard, and not one dress, but twenty. My good lady, it would be enough to uin a man !"

Mrs. Brown reflected. "But if you could find an economical woman, Mr. Van Buskirk." "Ah! if I could find a mermaid.

"One would never waste a cent." "She does not exist, ma-am." "Who lives like a nun—or next to nothing. Who—the fact is, Mr. Van Buskirk, I have such a lady in my eye. She's a widow—quite a young one—Mrs. Betay Barlow, and I'll have her at Peach Hill next reach."

Buskirk, I have such a lady in my eye.
She's a widow—quite a young one—Mrs.

Peter Van Buskirk grinned sarcasticus and the servants, Mr. Van Buskirk, "said the lady;" and cook wants to know whether you like beef rare or well done. In such things you shall have your choice, always. There was no time to make a pudding to day, so we must have fruit, Strawberries are only two shillings a basket."

There was no time to make a pudding to day, so we must have fruit, Strawberries are only two shillings a basket."

"Mrs. Van Buskirk, have you gone crasy? cried Peter; or am I dreaming?"

"I'm wide awake, at all events, cried the lady. I've starved long enough, and went over to the Brown mansion at five precisely. The parlor was full of ladies; ladies m silks and muslins, with crinoline and flounces. Most of them Mr. Van B. knew well, and he looked about in vain for a stranger. Mrs. Brown so the with us." But which was that economical widow? Probably the lady in corpologed silk near the stranger of the lady. Probably the lady in corpologed silk near the structure is ordered, and in the work was take the painters are here, and I have engaged all the servants, Mr. Van Buskirk, "said the lady." A bill now before the United States Congresses makes a proposal which is probably without precedent—to forbid the enlistment of married men in the regular army except with the consent of their wises.

"Mrs. Van Buskirk, have you gone crasy? cried Peter; or am I dreaming?"

"I'm wide awake, at all events, cried the lady. I've starved long enough, and worn that brown merine until I hate it.

"Mrs. Barlow will be with us." But which was that economical widow? Probably the lady in corn-colored silk near the piano. He could not remember her face.

Suddenly Mr. Van Buskirk's doubts were set at rest. Mrs. Brown ejaculated:

"Dear me, where is cousin Betsy? Mr. Van Buskirk you must be introduced to Mrs. Barlow;" and at these words something small and flat emerged from between two portly dames, and stood before him. It was a very short and slender little woman, with a remarkably pretty face. She wore no hoops, and her dress cleared her ankles. The sleeves were close, and the skirt had perhaps three breadths in it. The dress itself was of very plais, brown merino, and she were neither pin nor bow, only a white linen collar. Peter looked approval. Several of the ladies exchanged glances, and a fant giggle was heard; and, though by common consent the two were left tate a tate in a corner.

"Be if—l had — known—I—" began Peter.

"Be if—l had — known—I—" began Peter.

"Wouldn't have married me, I suppose, said the bride. Well, cousin Brown told me that, you know."

Peter looked at her. The truth was plain at last. He tried to speak, but could not. Stared at his lady for five minutes by the clock and then rushed out of the house, muttering—"Sold—sold—sold."

It is said Peter Van Buskirk never recovered the shock. Against his will be fived luxuriously ever after; and his wife atonished the neighborhood by her magnificent attire and dinner parties. But nevertheless Peter himself expired in less than a year, and the last words on his lips were said to be—"Sold, sold, sold!"
