The Conference.

The Daily News (June 10) says that, at the meeting yesterday, the Plenipotentiaries placed themselves completely in accord with the neutral Powers, and have accepted in its integrity the proposal made by the mediating powers on the 27th May. This conciliatory movement on the part of one belligerent has not, however, been met in a similar spirit by the other. The German Powers still insist on their own line, and will not apparently hear of any medification. Powers still insist on their own line, and will not apparently hear of any modification. This line includes a large district where Danish alone is spoken, all the chief towns of Schleswig, in many of which the German element is even less than in our manufacturing towns, and what is, perhaps, more important than all, the only defensible from the rof the peninsula. This is so unjust and extravagant a proposal that even the extravagant a proposal that even the extravagant as proposal that even the even turing towns, and what is, perhaps, more important than all, the only defensible frontier of the peninsula. This is so unjust and extravagant a proposal that even the extremest advocates of peace at any price have not a word to say for it, while it may be quiet true, as they plainly urge, that a few

DenToronto, dated 13th June 1862, a few days mark has strained concession to the utmost in accepting the proposal in its integrity, and would at once commence the war rather than surrender what, in common with neutrals, she regards as essential to her existence as an independent state. On the other hand, the Germans are to be obstinately bent upon rejecting the proposals of the neutral powers. There is little prospect that the additional fortnight of suspended hostilities will be turned to any good account. It is, indeed, not improbable that the Conference may break up before this new lease of directed to inform you in reply that the allow-substitute and the substitute of the allow-substitute and the substitute of the allow-substitute and the substitute and the

All accounts agree in stating that the conduct of the Princess of Wales at Cambridge won the hearts of all who came in contact with her, or even looked upon her, "The true secret," says an observer, "lies in the Princess's simplicity of manner, in the openness and unrestrainedness of her enjoyment, in the freedom with which she shows her delight in the enjoyment and festivity of which she is the centre. It is impossible to imagine a more marked contrast than between the Princess and the great ladies of tween the Princess and the great ladies of her suite. She seems an impersonification of simplicity, freedom, and capacity for enjoyment, beside their more artificial manners and guinde bearing. I suppose she would be even open to censure by admirers of what is called aristocratic breeding, for want of restrainedness and repose, and of the power of concealing her pleasure. But there is some-thing inexpressibly delightful in this sponta-neousness. It seems to tell of her early years, of narrow fortunes, simple habits, small state and scanty pleasures, and one cannot but wish that it may long survive the influence of English Court life." An account is given of an under-graduate who, in imitation of Raleigh's gallantry to Queen Elizabeth, spread his gown on the pathway for the Princess to walk on. The Princess paused for a moment, as if puzzled and startled by the sudden act of superfluous devotion; but when one of the suite had whispered a word of explanation, it was charming to see how sedulously she lifted her dress to show the dazzled and rather abashed proprietor of the purple toga of Trinity that she was actually setting her foot on the gown, bowing her acknowledgements to him at the same time.

needed. The crops in this vicinity are beginning to suffer from the drought though hay and vegetables rarely ever promised bet-ter. Our advices from the West are much more hopeful. For some weeks past the crops in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa have suffered for want of rain but a 22 to 58. telegraphic summary informs us of recent copious showers in those sections, and the condition of the crops is now reported as condition of the crops is now reported as very cheering. A correspondent writing from Central Iowa informes us that heavy showers of rain had fallen on the 17th and 18th, inst, after a drought of seven or eight week's duration. The wheat crop he says promises well; the straw will be short, but if not injured by the fly or the rust, the yield will be a large one. Corn never looked finer, and, indeed, crops promise full average returns, the importance of which can hardly be over estimated at this juncture.

mittee then rose, reported the resolutions and asked leave to sit again, THE GOLD MINING BILL Hon, J. A. McDonald moved that the Speaker do leave the Chair, and the House go into Committee on the Bill entituled "An Act respecting Gold Mines."

Mr. Rankin said that some of the provi-

Mr. Rankin said that some of the provisions of this gold bill were thoroughly objectionable. He would refer particularly to the fourth clause, which provided, in substance, that no Crown lands situated within and gold mining division should be in future disposed of either by dead or lease, unless it should be provided, to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Crown Lands, that such are unfit for gold mining purposes; and if it should be afterwards found that the lands uontained gold, it should be lawful for the Commissioner to resume such lands, whether before or after the price had been paid, or improvements made thereon; nothing had happened, and, further, to enter into negotiations with parties who were responsible neither to Parliament nor to the country. This was assuming a responsibility which, constitutionally, could only develope upon Ministers. For his part he thought that any set of men who undertook to change the constitution of the country were undertaking an extremely critical task, and, under any circumstances, he thought so important a step should not be decided upon without consulting the people. It might be that such a change was proper and necessary, but if so it should be brought about in such a way as to make it certain that the country desired it. And he conceived that the most effectual way of doing this was to appoint delegates, who would meet in conventions throughout the Province, where the sense of its inhabitants on the subject could be taken. Without such a guarantee, the step would be a most dangerous one. Surely it ought not to be considered sufficient for the Government and a person outside of it to meet together and resolve upon the change. Possibly, it might not be intended to proceed the length of carrying out such purpose without the appeal he spoke of, but, certainly, the document submitted to the House did not suggest any such idea; and after all, if it were to be done it would be done through the instrumentality of the Government, a course which did not afford the best guarantee for the result. There was not a word in the explanations about the people, and, in fact, nothing to show that it was intended to act advisedly in this matter. -His (Mr. Moore's) views might be very crude, but he thought that if a federal union was to be brought about, it would be well to consider whether such a union would be consistent with British connection .-Whether we could, in such a political condition continue to be subjects of Great Britain, and if a federation was not, in fact, laying the basis for ultimate reparation?

If we have a federal constitution, it will no into subordinate governments with a gene ral government over them, and another, the Imperial Government over that? He foresaw great difficulties in such an arrangement. Then, again, the multiplication of governments would, unquestionably, increase the expense. Take the United States for an example. There the general government absorbed the whole revenue from the public domain, and the duties on imports and the individual States had to meet their own expenses by direct taxation. Would not similar results follow a federal union in this country. The General Government would consume all the revenue, and the peo-ple would have ts put their hand in their pockets to defray the corts of their local governments. He believed the people would pause before encountering such a condition of things. He certainly thought the people of Lower Canada would not approve of it, and he doubted much whether the Upper Canadians would like it any better. Under our present system of Responsible Government, the subject enjoyed the most perfect security to life and property, and there was no country under the sun where the laws were more efficient, or where they were administered with greater impartiality. In view of those facts, he repeated that no steps ought to be taken to change the Constitution without an appeal first had to the people themselves. He had the greatest respect for the gentlemen ferming the Government, and believed them to de men of prodesired to raise his feeble voice in warning before it was too late, and he verily believed according to population was the only true
