SALUTATORY.

At the solicitation of a large number of our friends, we have consented to commence the publication of a small daily sheet, to be known as the FARMERSVILLE REPORTER. In consenting to do so, we have two objects in view. First, a desire for "filthy lucre," and second, to benefit our patrons. With regard to our aim and purposes, we have but a few words to say. We shall work and write for the advancement of the moral and intellectual welfare of those among whom we are associated, and, while we do not personally claim any very high talents as an educator of public opinion, we are pleased to announce that we have Come now, good wife, and tell me true, secured the assistance of a number of prominent workers, some of whom are for the first time entering the journalistic arena, while others are old and experienced writers. Our principal reasons for starting the paper at this time is to record the sessions of the Bay of Quinte conference of the M. E. Church of Canada. The union so happily brought about has rendered it necessary that I've never heard you scold nor fret, the functions of this conference should cease, and as the first conference of this body was held in this village, just forty years ago, we thought it fitting and appropriate that the closing scenes in this old representative body should be handed down to future generations by the humble organ we propose to issue The first page of at this time. THE REPORTER will be under the editorial management of the Rev. W. Blair, the esteemed secretary of the conference, which is a sufficient guarantee that this department will be ably conducted. A couple of well-known citizens of this place have consented to furnish an original piece of poetry for each issue. The local department will be under the careful supervision of the pullisher, who, with the assistance of an able assistant will cull the latest and most interesting news for the enter sinment of our readers. It is our purpose to issue THE REPORTER as a daily during the sittings of the conference; after which, if the patronage is such as to secure us from loss, we will continue the paper as a weekly. It will therefore rest with the public to say whether they will have the paper continued or not.

The terms will be twenty-five cents for conference week; single copies, five cents each. A liberal reduction made to parties ordering a number of copies. If the paper is continued the price will be seventy-five cents per year, strictly in advance. If the patromage promised warrant us in continuing THE RE-PORTER as a weekly, we will in a future issue state our views and position on the leading questions of the day. Therefore, in making our bow to the public as a journalist, we would respectfully solicit your patronage and support, and promise on our part to do our best to make the paper worthy of your continued patronage and support.

A FARM BALLAD BY EBENEZER CAIN.

DEFICATED TO MY GOOD FILEND CEORGE NASH

What all this fuss can mean ?

The house this year, from tip to toe, Has got an extra clean. Why, things are changed so round about

Methinks perhaps I roam; But when I see your smiling face,

I know it must be home.

For now asweek and o'er You have worked with a desire, And like old Robbin at the plough,

You never seem to tire.

At morning, night or noon; You seem to be so full of joy Humming that good old tune.

Why, Heaven bless you, John, I thought That you would surely know,

The reason I so happy was, And why I labor so.

is to get the house cleaned up, For conference this year

Is held in town, and I expect, Some preachers will be here.

Oh, that's it, is it? ministers are coming, Did you say?

God bless them, they'll be welcome A whole half year to stay. They are God's chosen people,

For to tell his love around: With them I won't be stingy, If it takes my house and ground. The old house doors we'll open wide,

And serve an extra meal. For preachers are a kind of folks That never have a deal.

They roam about from place to place, They're kind of Gospel tramps, And when they are meeting hungry,

They eat like blessed scamps.

So let them come and with them bring God's blessing from above; We'll make them happy in our home 'Twill be a week of love.

They'll have the very best of fare Our humble home affords:

Though some of them look mighty nice Perhaps they are the Lord's.

Of butter, in your good farm buns, Put in a good big cup, And if a lean one comes this way,

Be sure and fill him up. To see how stingy members act

It kindles up my ire,
They think that preachers are a class
That never need their hire.

I hear the Methodist churches Are going to be one;

I hope not, wife; But I'm afraid you'll see a little fun. hope they'll work like my old team, Out yonder on the plough, They'll pull and stand together, And never have a row.

I hope they will be Christians true, With all their heart and soul,

But then they'll have to give and take.

And cannot run the whole.

I heard that some queer people said: It was a horrid thing, To have a patent brazen horn

To help the members sing.

They once were bellowing singers. Of old and ancient rhymes

I've heard them start a hundred tunes, And burst as many times. It makes no difference, wife dear;

What with us takes a part, Whether its horn or organ, If we only sing from heart.

There's Father Jones and Deacon Quibb The richest men in town.

Lord bless you, I remember When they were not worth a pound. They like the music and the church

They did when they were poor; I've seen them begging for it, dear, About from door to door.

To see them in their broadcloth dressed It made me happy feel; I tell you Christianity for people

Does a great deal. So let us all in harmony Together dwell below, And God will take us to his own,

When we are called to go. And let the preachers come and bring God's blessing from above, We'll make them happy while they stay 'Twill be a week of love.

Presentation.

On Tuesday evening last, the members of Rising Sun Lodge, A. F. &. A. M., met at the Armstrong house for the purpose of entertaing Bro. W. Palmer, who was about leaving for Nebraska, to commence business there. An excellent supper was provided for the craft by mine host, Brother Harry, after which a short time was spent in social intercourse. Just before breaking up the tollowing address was presented to the guest of the evening:

ings of mingled pain and pleasure we meet with one who has proved himself to be a good man and true, but sadness fills our hearts when we recollect that the warm intercourse which has so lately sprung up between you and us is about to be served. But although an intercourse of friendly greetings may for a time be denied us, we can assure you that our best wishes and our kindest regards go with you and your esteemed partner, and we sincerely trust that you may be blessed in your basket and in your store, that all the happiness and felicity allotted to mortals may be your portion, and that you may ever recall with pleasure and satisfaction the memory of that part of your bridal holiaday spent among the people of Farmersville.

Again wishing you happiness and prosperity, together with as firm friends in your new home as you leave in the old, we bid you, dear brother, an affectionate good bye, hoping that at no distant day we may again have the pleasure of meeting you around the festive board.

Signed on behalf of the officers and members of Rising Sun Lodge No. 85, A. F, & A. M.

> WM. JOHNSTON, B. A., W. M. ISAAC C. ALGUIRE, Secretary.

Bro. Palmer on rising to reply, was doeply affected, but acquitted him well while delivering the following answer to the address

DEAR BRETHERN:-To say that I am pleased would scarcely express my feelings to-night, meeting so many of my brethren here to pay this respect to me at taking my departure from among you. Although so recently arrived at that point to which all Masons so highly prize, I feel that I owe a debt of gratitude to all my brethren here, who have, at all times, been ready and willing to instruct me in the knowledge so necessary to advancement and so beautifully demonstrated in all the workings of the Order—from the first step until we are taught to deal upon the square with all mankind.

Although I go from among you to a new field of labor I wish to retain they connection with this Lodge, and hope it and all my oregand per in its good work.

As we go to press the conference examina tions are in progress in the M. E. church, Rev. F. Chisolm, of Lyn, chairman, Seven or eight candidates are sweating over their work while seven or eight examiners look serenly on and see that no "plugging" is done.

Last evening quite an interesting episode occurred in the M. E. parsonage, the principal parties to which came all the way from Iroquois to have the knot securely tied. The bride was Miss Charlotte Campbell, and the groom, Mr. James Montgomery, both at present of Iroquois. Our reporter happened in just in time to get a piece of bride's cake and to salute nted to the guest of the evening:

I'm sitting alone in the gloamir
Mine eyes are wet with tears
Of the future vainly thinking,
That awaits me, full of fears.
Againist the window drearily
Patters the falling rain,
My heart is aching wearily
With a dull, foreboding pain.
Keeping time with the sad mos
Of the wind amid the trees.
Oh! would will the trees.
Oh! would add the trees.
Away with their falling leave, and drift them to the river,
Flowing towards the sea,

Tis sinful this sad repining,
For always in our life
The sweet and bitter will mingle,
The peaceful with the strife.
But there's One above will help us,
Who looks with pitying eye,
He notes the toiling burden,
He bears the weary sigh;
To Him then with our sorrows,
And lean upon his breast,
"Weary and heavy laden,"
For He will give us rest.

Sti The Arabs,

The Arabs,

A romantic chivalry towards women makes the Arab prize very highly their approbation of his personal courage, and his poetry incites him to exploits of veritable knight-errantry, while both combine to make a peaceful and innocent life a matter of individual reproach. The name of Harami—brigand—is still honorable among them. Slain in raid or foray, a man is said to die Ghandur, or a brave. He, on the other hand, who is lucky enough, as we would express it, to die in his bed, is called Fatis—carrion; "his weeping mother will exclaim, 'Oh, that my son had perished of a cut throat!' and her attendant cronies will suggest, with deference, that such calamity came of the will of Allah." The Bedouin considers nothing manful but violence, nothing so honorable as war. Until he is on horseback, spur in hand, he hardly considers himself a man. The only occupations of manhood are shooting and riding. As a rule they are wretched shots, but superb horsemen. Their weapons are matchlocks—like the African jizail—with barrels of preposterous length, which they prefer to fire off when lashed down to a rest; flint-lock pistols of blunderbuss bore, javelins, spears and swords, and daggers. Of late the rifle has found its way among them. But the favorite weapon, that with which they are forever playing and practising, is the kanat, a spear twelve feet in length, shod with a finely-tapering head of iron, and ornamented with tufts of ostrichfeathers or horse-hair. A short stabbing javelin with a broad blade is also carried, and it is with this that the unmounted Arab does his best work. The shield is like that of the Beluchis and Afghans, a small round buckler of hide bossed with brass. The sword is long and slightly curved, though both it and the dagger—an invariable feature of the warrior's equipment—vary according to individual taste.

On a recent morning, for the 291st time, the conditions of the will of Peter Symonds were duly carried out. In the year 1586 this good citizen, in his last will and testament, directed that sixty of the youngest boys of Christ's hospital should attend divine service on Good Friday at the church of Allhallows, Lombard street, at the conclusion of which each was to receive a new penny and a bag of raisins. One Petts, in 1692, supplemented the good work of Peter Symonds by ordering that out of his estate there should be taken enough for the minister who preached the sermon to receive twenty shillings, the clerk 4 shillings, and the sexton 3 shillings 6 pence. These sums have been augmented by the church wardens, so that the children of the Sunday and ward schools receive a gift. In cently there was a good congregation to witness the young "blue-coats" receive the Symonds benefaction. The sermon was preached by the rector, the Rev. Prebendary Charles Mackenzie, M. A. Another ancient custom took place in the old churchyard of St. Bartholomew the Great, West Smithfield,—one that has been observed for over four hundred years. Twenty-one new sixpences are laid on a gravestone, which are picked up years. Twenty-one new sixpences are laid on a gravestone, which are picked up by widows of the parish. After a sermon by Rev. W. A lady asked a learned professor if he understood Chinese. He did. "Well, what is 'mouth' in Chinese?" "Mouth is k'eu." A week later the lady suddenly asked the professor: "What is kitchen door in Chinese?" "It is k'eu." "Very remarkable. A week ago you said 'mouth is k'eu." "Quite so answered the professor; "whatever opens and shuts is k'eu in Chinese."

A recent statement in the Archives de Medecine Militaire shows with much force the influence upon small-pox of systematic revaccination. Previous to the year 1834 the deaths from that disease in the Prussian army had been about 100 annually. In 1834 the order for revaccination was made very stringent, and the figures soon fell to 5, 9, and 3. From 1847 the number was between 2 and 3, and since 1874 there has not been a single death from smallpox in the army.

Madrid takes the preeminence among the capitals of western Europe as a centre of expenditure and consumption, possessing practically no producing industries, and consequently labor on a large scale has only one application—namely, in building. During the past three years there has been a manis for building, both in the town proper and in the suburbs. According to the most accurate data, $20,000,000 have been spent upon new houses and new streets during the abovenamed period; and with a population of about 500,000 it is estimated that there is now house room there for from 600,000 to 650,000 people.

The new port which has recently been opened at Trieste has been in course of construction for fifteen years, and has cost altogether $7,300,000. By the building of three jetties, 700 feet long by 300 feet broad, the former norther trinharbor of Trieste has been converte t it to three basins, with nearly two miles of quay. As a protection against the winds from the northeast, the southeast, and the southwest, a jetty nearly three-quarters of a mile in length has been built parallel with the coast. It is about 1,000 feet from the shore, and is 200 feet broad at the base, 60 feet broad at the surface of the water, and 65 feet high. At a distance of 660 feet from the northeastern end a pier 250 feet long has been run out at right angles, thus affording a well-protected entrance more than 300 feet wide. The three new basins inside the jetties have a depth of water varying from 25 to feet.

The Capital of the World.

London has been, since the Conquest, the real centre of Government, of the thought, the growth, the culture, and the life of the nation. No other city in Eurode has kept that prerogative unbroken for eight centuries until our own day. At the very utmost, Paris has possessed it for not more than four centuries, and in an uncomplete manner for at least half of these four. The capitals of Prussia, Austria, Russia, and Spain are merely the artificial work of recent ages, and the capitals of Italy and Greece are mere antiquarian revivals. England was centralized earlier than any other European nation; and thus the congeries of towns that we now call London has formed, from the early days of our monarchy, theessential seat of government, the military headquarters, the permanent home of the law, the connecting link between England and the Continent, and one of the great centres of the Commerce of Europe. Hence it has come about that the life of England has been concentrated on the banks of the Thames more completely and for a longer period than the life of any great nation has been concentrated in any single modern city. When we add to that fact the happy irremustance that at lesst down to the memory of living men London retained a more complete series of public monuments, a more varied set of local associations, more noble buildings bound up with the memory of more great events and more great men than any single city in Runope, (except, perhaps, Rome itself,) we come to the conclusion that London is a city unsurpassed in historic interest.

George Eliot, after meeting Lord, then Sir Garnet, Wolseley, thus describes him in one of her letters as "one of those men who have the power to command by means of gentleness of character, calmness of bearing, and inflexibility of resolution."

The Australasian Medical Gazette says that the natural increase—excess of births over deaths—has been very great in South Australia, the average for five years having been exceeded in the last quarter of 1883 by 274. The death rate has also increased, being 15.80 in 1881, 14.08 in 1882, and 16.02 in 1883.

About one hundred stoats and weasels, which had been caught with considerable difficulty in different parts of Lincolnshire by a vermin catcher, have just been sent to New Zealand. They have been purchased by the Government of that country for the purpose of destroying the rabits which overrun the colony. One thousand five hundred live pigeons have been shipped for the consumption of the animals during the voyage.

A recent statement in the Archives de Medecine Militaire shows with much force the influence upon small-pox of systematic revaccination. Previous to the year 1834 the deaths from that disease in the Prussian army had been about 1100 annually. In 1834 the order for revaccination was made very stringent, and the figures soon fell to 5, 9, and 3. From 1847 the number was between 2 and 3, and since 1874 there has not been a single death from smallpox in the army.

The Syndic of Turin, in consequence of the fears expressed that the hotel keepers may ask exaggerated prices for accommodation in anticipation of the concourse of visitors to the opening of the approaching national exhibition, announces that a list of 2,500 rooms, at charges of from two to six francs each per day, can be seen at the municipality offices, and gives the names of ten hotels, including some of the best, which have undertaken to charge normal prices, approved by the municipal authorities.

Workers in ornamental wood now assert that yellow pine, hard finished in oil, is the rival in beauty of any wood that grows, not excepting the costliest of the hard species, it being susceptible of receiving and maintaining as high a degree of polish as any known wood, while, when impregnated with oil, it is almost indestructible. In such a condition it is impervious to even hot grease and other substances that leave an ineffaceable stain upon white pine, maple, and various other weeds.

Drs. Ungar and Bodlander of Bonn have recently been engaged in examination of meats preserved in tin cans, and report that "a not inconsiderable quantity of tin passes over into the conserve." Experiments on dogs and rabbits showed that the tin was absorbed by the intestinal muscous membrane, and it was detected in the secretions, heart, liver, kidneys, spleen, brain and muscles. They think that the reason so little is yet heard of tin poisoning is because the introduction of the canned foods is comparatively recent, and their prices so high as to make recent, and their prices so high as to make the consumption limited.

foon of Charles V., fought heavely in his master's wars. A might exploit, too, was the duel with pistols in the Jeffrey Hudson, the dwarf of the Tenrietta Maria of England,—Local uniques, as he was called—and the German colossus, Croft. The dwarf billed the giant as was called—and the German colossus, Croft. The dwarf killed the giant, as David of old killed Golish. The last royal dwarf, was the baby of King Stanislaus of Poland, who accompanied the King in his retreat at Nancy. The King wept when his dwarf died. Like Lear, he said: "Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart that's sorry yet for thee."

Madrid takes the preeminence among the capitals of western Europe as a centre of expenditure and consumption, possessing practically no producing industries, and consequently labor on a large scale has only one application—namely, in building. During the past three years there has been a mania for building, both in the town proper and in the suburbs. According to the most accurate data, $20,000,000 have been spent upon new houses and new streets during the abovenamed period; and with a population of about 500,000 it is estimated that there is now house room there for from 600,000 to 650,000 people.

The new port which has recently been opened at Trieste has been in course of construction for fifteen years, and has cost altogether $7,300,000. By the building of three jetties, 700 feet long by 300 feet broad, the former norther at an harbor of Trieste has been converted it into three basins, with nearly two miles of quay. As a protection against the winds from the northeast, the southeast, and the southwest, a jetty nearly three-quarters of a mile in length has been built parallel with the coast. It is about 1,000 feet from the shore, and is 200 feet broad at the base, 60 feet broad at the surface of the water, and 65 feet high. At a distance of 660 feet from the northeastern end a pier 250 feet long has been run out at right angles, thus affording a well-protected entrance more than 300 feet wide. The three new basins inside the jetties have a depth of water varying from 25 to feet.

The Capital of the World.

London has been, since the Conquest, the real centre of Government, of the thought, the growth, the culture, and the life of the nation. No other city in Eurode has kept that prerogative unbroken for eight centuries until our own day. At the very utmost, Paris has possessed it for not more than four centuries, and in an uncomplete manner for at least half of these four. The capitals of Prussia, Austria, Russia, and Spain are merely the artificial work of recent ages, and the capitals of Italy and Greece are mere antiquarian revivals. England was centralized earlier than any other European nation; and thus the congeries of towns that we now call London has formed, from the early days of our monarchy, theessential seat of government, the military headquarters, the permanent home of the law, the connecting link between England and the Continent, and one of the great centres of the Commerce of Europe. Hence it has come about that the life of England has been concentrated on the banks of the Thames more completely and for a longer period than the life of any great nation has been concentrated in any single modern city. When we add to that fact the happy circumstance that at lesst down to the memory of living men London retained a more complete series of public monuments, a more varied set of local associations, more noble buildings bound up with the memory of more great events and more great men than any single city in Europe, (except, perhaps, Rome itself,) we come to the conclusion that London is a city unsurpassed in historic interest.

THE ! FARMERSVILLE REPORTER.

CHINESE CHEAP LABOR.

On leaving London for China, writes a correspondent of the Pall Mal Gazette at Pokin, I was surprised to and that all the firemen on board the ship were Chinese. The vessel was one of a large line of steamers (Glen line) trading to China, and I learned that this particular steamer was one of the last to adopt Chinese firemen, the chief engineer being unwilling to employ Asiatics while there were Englishmen wanting bread. He found, however, that he could not help himself. English firemen—British firemen rathorwere so troublesome and so given to being drunk when they got a chance, that with all his preference for his own countryn en, the "chief" was obliged to give in at last and take Chinamen. Before giving in, I think that on one occasion he had to have all his preference for his own countryn en, the "chief" was obliged to give in at last and take Chinamen. Before giving in, I think that on one occasion he had to have the ship anchored till the firemen got sober, and on another occasion to go down the channel with the engineers acting as stokers. Then, much against his will, he had to take the objectionable Chinamen. On asking how the Chinese did, I was told they did first-class, gave no trouble, were always there when wanted, were steady and sober, and in every way competent. It did not appear that very much was saved in wages by employing Chinamen, but the gain was in the absolute regularity with which they performed their work. It is in this way the Chinese are going to conquer—by sober, plodding industry. There will be no armed parade, no great military movements, no chanting of warriers with garments rolled in blood; but where labor is wanted they will supply it, and be steady at their work. Some time ago there was a talk of a company importing some thousands of Chinese to London. They will come without a company and without ostentation, they will come only where and when they are wanted; but the alarming consideration in the contest of races is that Chinese to London. They will come without a company and without ostentation, they will come only where and when they are wanted; but the alarming consideration in the contest of rices is that they can render themselves profitable, and even necessary, to those who are reluctant to use them. If Britain can be made sober she may held her own, for the Chinaman labors under many disadvantages; but if the steady, quiet, lawabiding Chinaman has as his competitor a man liable at any time to be off work for a day or two through drink it is not dfficult to see who will win. Against industrious perseverance no protective laws can save a country whose working population is given to the interruptions of drinking and "sprees." At present Britain has got the start, and for years, perhaps decades, China may be unable to cope with us in manutactures, but no length of start can keep us permanently ahead of unwearying perseverance. China is learning, slowly, it is true, but still learning western arts, and when once she has learned thoroughly her lesson, her industrious, sober population, if prohibited from working in Britain and the colonies, will produce in her possessions, manufactures which will be lower in price than ours. For some time our name and prestige will save us, but this cannot last for ever, and I am deeply conscious that in the long run no nation which cripples its energies and wastes its income on drink, as Britain now does, will be able to compete successfully with China.

A man in this city claims to have a wife so hot-tempered that when she is angry he can light his cigar from the fire that flashes from her eyes.

Another of the laborers and sufferers for Italian independence and unity, Giovanni Battista Vara, died at Rome the other day at the age of sixty-seven. He once filled the office of Vice-President of a Republican-Assembly, and had to fly from his country. Thirty years later he was a Cabinet Minister of a constitutional monarch, and in him King Humbert laments the loss of a loyal subject and a faithful and trusted servant.

Lightning Rods.

Lightning as seen, is the light produced by the swift passage of electricity through the air from cloud to cloud, or from the clouds to the earth, or the earth to the clouds, or both. Its velocity is almost inconceivable, equal to going seven times around the world between two ticks of a three-foot clock pendulum; or, say about five hundred times faster than a ball flies as it leaves a heavy-loaded rifle.—The air does not conduct electricity through it, but it forces its way along, driving the air particles together, and, so to speak, squeezing the heat out. If we push a tightly-fitting rod down a gun-barrel, crowding the air suddenly into a small space, the air will give out so much heat as to become red hot and set fire to a piece of winder in the bottom. So we may suppose the swift lightning pushes the air together before it until it becomes brilliantly red-hot (lightning,) and when much air is compressed before it, it darts off until more air is compressed in the new line and then it shoots another way, and thus we have its zigzag course. This driving and heating the air produces the sound we call thunder. We get sound by agitating the air when beating a drum head, er vibrating the strings of an instrument, by exploding powder in it, etc. The more violent agitation by the swift lightning produces the loud thunder, though a lightning stream of electricity isse small at any one point that it shakes the air less than a heavy cannon charge of powder. (Thunder is seldom heard ten miles, while a battle has been heard forty miles or more). The rolling of thunder is caused by sounds coming in from different distances one after another, as the electricity darts from cloud to cloud, further or aparer from us, a thunder sound being produced between each pair of clouds, It is as if a score or more of cannon, each a little further off, were all fired at the same moment; we would have by the reports coming on after the other a rolling sound just like thunder.

Light comes almost instantaneously from a di

Light comes almost instantaneously from a distant point, while sound takes nearly five seconds to come a mile through the air. If we see the flash of a cannon nearly five seconds to come a mile through the air. If we see the flash of a cannon and begin counting one, two, three, only as fast as a three-foot pendulum ticks, about the time we count live the sound of the cannon will arrive. After a sharp flash of lightning count as above, and the real lightning cloud is as many fifths of a mile away as you count seconds. If you count four or more, you may know that that lightning cloud is at a safe distance. If coming towards you, the thunthat that lightning cloud is at a said tance. If coming towards you, the thunder will more quickly follow the lightning der will count more of if going from you will count more of each successive flash; if counting about the same number, it is going by. She has passed every standard successfully. is said to have walked 6,000 miles. She has passed every standard successfully, and in the three subjects in first-grade drawing obtained "Excellent" prizes in free-hand and model, as also in the three stages of the specific subjects, literature, domestic eeonomy, and animal physiology, and in one stage in physical geography. She has also obtained twenty-six other prizes for good attendance, sculpture, sewing, knitting, etc.

At a magic-lantern exhibition in a country town the other day, the man who was handling the instrument threw under the title of "Solitude" a picture of an aged female on the screen. Immediately the dozen old maids in the audience took it as a personal insult, and arose and left the hall.

A sanctified soul is offered up to God in the flames of love, upon Christ, the altar. Paul gathered in some by his preaching, not to keep them to himself, but to offer them up to God.

As in the sun's eclipse we can behold the great stars shining in the heavens so, in this life-eclipse have these men beheld the lights of the great eternity, burning solemnly and forever.

I can see nothing, without the Spirit's eyes, but as it were in a mist. I am fully persuaded of the truth of Scripture, and what it tells me of sin, myself, God, Christ and eternity; but with little more effect and true feeling than what I know and believe of some remote country in which I have no manner of concern.

Streaks of Luck.

We have heard of a man who had £2,-000 a year left him because he was civil to an infirm old lady in church, finding the hymns for her, setting her hassock, etc. He did not know her name, but she took care to ascertain his, and when she died he found that she had bequeathed him the bulk of her property "as a reward for his patient kindness." A clergyman of our acquaintance obtained a living of good value from a Baronet in Nerfelk for no other reason than that he was the only curate within ten miles around who had not applied for it when it fell vacant. And another clergyman whom we know only curate within ten miles around who had not applied for it when it fell vacant. And another clergyman whom we know got a still better living for having refused preferment offered to him under circumstances derogatory to his dignity. He was a fair singer; and a vulgar politocrat who had inside him to dinner, promised to give him a living if he would. In a comic song at dessert. The quiet rebuke which the young clergyman administered made the plutocrat ashamed of himself, so that the next day he proffered the living with a letter of apology; but the living was refused, the clergyman stating that it would be impossible for him to forget the circumstances under which it was first tendered. This was themore honorable, as the clergyman was very badly off. Another patron, hearing of what he had done, appointed him to a benefice as a testimony of his admiration. We may conclude with a story of a man who was guddenly made rich because of his great stupidity. He was the only dull man in a bright-witted family, and going to dine with a wealthy relative who had a horror of fools, he made so many silly remarks that the old man cried in exasperation. "I must do something for you, for you'll never do anything for yourself. If I don't make a rich man of you, you'll become a laughing stock to the v-rid and a disgrace to your family."—Chambers' Journal A Sensational Will Case.

There cannot be named a pursuit or enterprise of human beings, in which there is so little possibility of failure, as praying for sanctification.

Earnestness is the path to immortality, thoughtlessness the path to death. Those who are in earnest do not die; those who are thoughtless are as if dead already.

Christianity, which is always true to the heart, knows no abstract virtues, but virtues resulting from our wants, and useful to all.

Man's works, even in the most perfect form, always have more or less of excitement in them. God's works are calm and peaceful, both in nature and in His work.

Too Many Dogs Spoil the Cost.

The instinct of Newfoundland dogs to save a drowning person has been some what painfully tested by an unlucky Frenchman. He was walking in the country with a friend who possessed a magnificent Newfoundland, and incantiously questioned the truth of the animal's sagacity. The dog's master, vexed at the slur cast upon his favorite, gave his friend a push and knocked him into a shallow river. Turk immediately sprang in, and, seizing one of the tails of the immersed man's coat, commenced to swim for land. Unfortunately, another Newfoundland trotting along on the other side of the river saw the affair, and also came to the rescue. Dog number two seized the other tail of the coat and wished to swim back to his master. Turk held fast, and struggled for his side, and the owner of the coat cried in vain for help. At last the coat gave away, an each dog swam proudly home with a piece of cloth, in his mouth, so that Turk's master was obliged to plunge in himself and save his friend. The instinct of Newfoundland dogs

Scott Act in Leeds and Grenville.

the Brockville Times, of recent date.

Dear Sir,—In the issue of the Prescott Messenger of May 9th, there are a few remarks under the heading of The Scott Act in Leeds and Grenville, to which I wish to reply. While I fully recognize the desirability of a local market for farm produce, I am fully of the opinion that the article in question is misleading for the following reasons:

First, All, or nearly all, the articles mentioned are principally marketed abroad. Barley, for instance, is estimated as follows:

consumption for feed and seed. bushels 1,000,000 800,000 9,200,000

Hops and hay are also dependent on foreign markets, and already our steam boats and some of our local manufacturers are beginning to burn coal, as arrangements for the annual exhibition wood is so scarce and high price, and many of our farmers are burning coal stoves. Second, Our local brewers will stoves. Second, Our local brewers will not pay more than the foreign trade compels them to pay tor our produce. For example, I bought good, plump barley here last fall for 50 cents per bushel, when barley was worth 55 to 60 cents per bushel in Belleville, Trenton and Picton, and nearly all the barley in those places is purchased for export. Third, the passing of the act does not necessarily close our distilleries, as the act being in force, liquor is still sold for medicinal and mechanical purposes, and brewers have the is still sold for medicinal and mechan-ical purposes, and brewers have the privilege of selling in counties which have not adopted the Act; and the amount of reduction by this county passing the Act would simply be the quantity used as a beverage by the peo-ple in the county. Fourth, I object to the article on the score of political economy. Now let any person invest say $500,000 in raw material and turn out two or three million dollars worth of farm implements, house furn-iture, or any other manufectured as a iture, or any other manufactured goods although he has taken in more money than he has paid out, I can understand how the country is richer by that man's labor. But let him invest in the liquor traffic and the matter stands something like this: The farmers have received $500,000 for their barley, the county has paid many millions for liquor (and most of this paid directly or indirectly by the farmers of our county), all of which has been squandered, to say the least, upon an unnecessary article, and now let me ask, who is the richer? The dealer in liquor and no one else, as all that is then left to the county of the whole amount spent, will be a long list of criminals and the costs of police courts and the maintenance of large numbers of paupers, etc. Now, Mr. Editor, I object again to the matter being discussed as a mere matter of dollars and cents, as I think that a Christian country should be actuated by a higher motive. Let traffic and the matter stands some be actuated by a higher motive. Let your reader take his bible and turn to Acts the 19th chapter, and read the account of the opposition to the labors of the apostles, and compare with the arguments used in the article in question and especially the following clause:

"Know ye nought by this creft we have "Know ye nought by this craft we have our wealth." In dealing with national sins, money is generally the first objection we have to meet. It was so at sins, money is generally the first objection we have to meet. It was so at Ephesus in regard to the making of images. It was so in the time of the slave trade, and I for one, am not surprised that it is the first raised in defense of the liquor traffic. But I say to the electors of Leeds and Grenville, do your duty as Christians and trust the rest to God ond all will be well.

Yours truly, W. H. Thompson W. H. THOMPSON, Pittston, Ont.

Just as the shades of evening began to fall yesterday quite an exciting scene might have occurred. Two of our sports were out for a spin, when our sports were out for a spin, when unfortunately, some young girls attempted to cross the road in advance of the teams. By great presence of mind on the part of the drivers, the fast nags were held up just in time to prevent a catastrophe. There is no telling what might have happened if "Reed" had been on the road with his nag. his nag.

We are glad to notice that the "powers that be" have at last taken compassion on the pedestrians who traverse Prince street. It would have traverse Prince street. It would have been a great pity if the many visitors who are favoring us with their company just now, should have gone away with the impression and likely concussions the trip on a dark evening through that otherwise pretty street, would have given them a week age. We hope the march of improvement will not stay at this, but that it will go on, and the natural advantages belonging to our village will be used to her adornment. Why can not the residents of the other streets take pattern from those of Reed and part of Church streets, and before the season is over plant out a few trees. is over plant out a few trees.

OUR BARBER'S LAMENT.

Come all you jolly barbers And listen to my song, And I shall tell you truly How I committed wrong.

I courted a fair maiden,
Of loving heart and true,
Expecting she would pad out well
In money matters too.

But oh, my heart is breaking, When I confess to you, How cruelly she's tortured me With pangs I never knew.

My heart she mashed completely
With the witchery of her eyes;
I never dreamed that such fond looks
Could ever tell white lies.

But now I see it plainly,
"Tis all as clear as day,
The little pile I longed so for
Has vanished quite away.
The dear old girl I loved so well,

With the heap of chink in view,
Has put her cash far out of sight
And that's what makes me stew.

And now I ply my scissors
All wretched and forlorn,
And think of her who fooled me so Till I wish I'd ne'er been born.

And as I lay on lather
And smooth the chins of men,
I think of her with peachy cheek,
And all "that might have been."

So dear and trusty barbers— Knights of the sounding shears— Take warning from a brother's fate And I will dry my tears.

Oh, do not court for money,
That was my grievous sin,
And now you see, dear brothers,
How I've been taken in.

But when you go a courting
Keep money out of sight,
And only talk about her charms
Until the knot is tight.

Then, when the day is over,
And she is all your own,
You quietly may rob the nest
From which the bird has flown.

Ah! yes, my jolly fellows,
That's where I blundered so,
I put my hand into the nest
While she was on, you know.

And the old bird pecked so cruelly,
My hands are bound up now,
And I am so very lonely,
I want to have a row.

So, brothers, dear and loving, Take warning from my fate, Should you e'er wish to enter The matrimonial state.

Be honest in your courtship, Leep only love in view, And never think of money Unless your bills are due. 1025 Hargriève Rd., Unit 3, London, Ontario N6E 1P7

THE REPORTER, FARMERSVILLE, FRIDAY, MAY 23.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mr. Z. Derbyshire, the celebrated "Bible agent," with his smiling countenance, called at this office yesterday.

The house cleaning season being about over, we observe that several of our acquaintances have commenced taking there meals at home again.

Spring's work with the farmers is nearly completed. The season has been an exceptionally fine one for farm work, and a large area has been put in.

We understand that the firm of Middleton & Sherman has been dissolved, A. N. Sherman having bought out the senior partner, will run the business as usual.

Before you buy your harness give S. Boddy a call, where you will find a large stock of whips, horse brushes, collars, fly nets, lap dusters and Frank Miller's harness soap.

The road commissioners have made a great improvement in the appearance and safety of the sidewalk on Victoria, street. Travellers need not now be atraid of life and limb on that street.

Eighty-three pupils, representing most of the municipalities of the united counties, have been enrolled on the High School register since January last. The average attendance has been sixty-five.

Church street has become quite a prominent street for evening walks for the young ladies (and older ones, too), since conference began. 'Spose they expect to "catch on" to some of the young ministers.

We regret to amounce that the Rev. S. Oard, of Napanee, lips danger-onsly ill at the residence of the Rev. Mr. Brown. Just as we go to press we learn that the reverend gentleman is slightly better.

Mr. Horace Brown has kindly consented to allow the High School boys to play their match game of base ball with the "Kilkenny Boys," on Saturday, in one of his fields. Mr. Taplin, we understand, refused them that privilege.

One thousand men (preachers included), wanted at Carson's Tonsorial Parlors during conferenc, where they can get their long beards trimmed, hair cut and a good shampoo in quick metre time. Remember the place, No. 44, Main street, corner of Carson avenue.

Judging from the number of good and anxious looking young ladies that are seen on the streets daily, and the fact that this is leap year, we think the ministers will have a good run of "knot-tieing" this year, and come out ready for next year's business with a pocket-full of money.

The secretary of the Scott Act committee has been in correspondence with the Grenville Executive committee, and the 4th of June (at Brockville), selected for the meeting of the joint committees. We are glad to be able to announce that Judge McDonald has consented to act as chairman of the eeds County Executive committee, ich speaks well for the success of movement.

ODE TO THE ST. LAWRENCE.

BY C. G. SLACK.

Flow mighty river mad and free, Through islands down the rapids roar; Flow on to join the wondrous sea;

Flow on! flow on! for evermore. Terrible storms in yonder ocean home, And great commotion in its sway Will lash thy crystal waves to foam, Thy rural beauty tear away.

Far back through ages dark and drear, In beauty thou hast rolled along, Mid screaming wildfowl, bounding deer. Thy music nature's woodland soing. Through water-weeds that sterile grew, Remote from learning's loved devise, Thy red man forced the frail cance, And thought his home a paradise.

The dusky mother soothed her child, The hours swiftwing dunheeded flew, On thy loved shores in nature's wild, A morning dawned with brighter line. Here toiling man comes o'er the main, He to thy banks applies the blade; He bids thee cease thy rustic reign; Now commerce beats the busy trade.

The civil fire is lit and fanned, The dark and dreary hours are o'er, Now cities in their splendor stand, And progress strives on shore and shore, But still thy rocks are worn and old; Tirey stand as monarchs of the stream,

Their ancient story yet untold,

Their secrets little do we dream:

Perchance some old and revr'nt sage, Could be but break the potent seal, Would read thy history from his page, And all the mysteries reveal;

But no, we leave the in thy power, Till earth and sea a voice shall hear; A voice proclaima g Jagment hour, When all shall quit the fetteer'd bier. Farmersville, May 23, 1881.

Ottawa teachers oppose the proposition to subst tute a Chief Superintendent and a Council of Public Instruction for a Minister of Education.

At the London City Council meeting recently, it was announced that Lord Lansdowne would be unable to visit the Western Fair this summer.

The report is that the Ottawa Government have succeeded in arranging satisfactory terms with the Manitoba Better Terms Delegation, and they are now returning satisfied.

The old stone portice or arch forming the entrance to Fort Garry grounds at Winnipeg will probably be removed to the new government buildings and per-served experies served as a relic.

Hon. Oliver Mowat has gone to England, to argue the Boundary Award case before the judicial Committee of the Privy Council. It is expected to come up for hearing in June.

One day last week twenty-four thousand musk rat skins were shipped from Kingston by two dealers. Of these 9,000 were sent to England and the balance to the States.

TEMPERANCE NEWS.

SCOTT ACT NOTES.

LEEDS COUNTY.—The Leeds County Scott Act Association are taking practical steps in regard to the coming campaign. It is proposed to raise a campaign fund of three thousand dollars in Leeds and Grenville, and the sums required of each municipality have been apportioned.

LENNOX COUNTY.—The Napanee Beaver says:—The "Scott Act" agitation is constantly gaining ground. The government has been asked to fix a day for polling in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. The movement will spread gradually westward. The temperance party in Lennox and Addington are industriously working up the petitions asking for the submission of the Act, and polling may be expected some time next fall.

ENCOURAGING SUCCESS.—At the recent Brampton meeting Mr. Spence gave the following significant facts in regard to Scott Act progress:—The Act has been submitted to the electors of forty counties and cities, in thirty-three of which it has been adopted. The total vote in the forty contest gave a majority of 22,159 in favor of the Act. So far it had never been repealed in any city or county where it had gone into force.

WENTWORTH Co.—The temperance men of Wentworth County are at work again. Nearly three years ago a vote was taken in that county for the adoption of the Act, and the temperance men were defeated. Now they are resolving to try it again, being convinced that there has been considerable growth in public opinion since that time. The fact that the Act is in successful operation in the adjoining County of Halton is doing much to help the new movement.

Wellington Co.—At Guelph, on the 17th inst at a meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union the question of submitting the Scott Act this year was taken up and discussed at length, and the feeling expressed by the meeting was that while it might not be advisable to bring matters to an issue so soon, all the energies of the Union should be directed to preparing the way for the Act, by means of lectures, distribution of "War Notes," and other temperance literature.

GLENGARY COUNTY.—The temperance men of Glengarry County have been at work getting ready for the adoption of the Scott Act. Last week the necessary petition signed by over twenty five per cent of the electors, was presented at Ottawa by Rev. Mr. McGillvray of Williamstown and others, and the next step will be to issue the official proclamation, ordering the vote. The counties of Dundas and Starmont are united with Glengary for municipal and judicial purposes and the vote must be taken in all at the one time.

The Anti party are evidently hard at work. The two men, E. King Dodds, of Toronto, and J. T. Bell, of Dundas, employed by the Licensed Victuallers Association, have been at work in the county. They recently addressed large meetings at Cornwall and Morrisburgh in opposition to the Act. There was no opposition at these meetings. The custom of Mr. Dodds is always to insist on the last speech at any such meeting and his opponents complain so much of his unfairness in connection with this cause as to refuse to meet him on such terms.

PORT PERRY.—An influential meeting meeting was held here on Friday afternoon, at which delegates from various parts of the country were present. Rev. Geo. J. Bishop, of Uxbridge, was appointed Chairman, and Mr. N. F. Paterson, Q.C., Secrecary. Several stirring speeches were made, and a Central Committee appointed with headquarters at Port Perry, to continue the campaign throughout the county. Local organizations are being formed through which the Central Committee will act. It is expected that active canvassing and the holding of meetings will begin in about ten days.

The Movement General. — The Presbyterian of last week says:—Active steps are being taken for the early submission of the Scott Act to the electors in various counties. In Northumberland, West Durham, Ontario, York, Brant, Middlesex, Elgin, St. Thomas, Lambton and Kent, the question is being discussed with much keenness. In several of these constituencies, there is no doubt that the Act will be adopted. In others, the contest will be carried on with the utmost determination on both sides. The liquor interest is being thoroughly organized, large sums of money have been subscribed for carrying on the war, and speakers have been engaged to oppose the Act. It is obviously the duty of all in favor of temperance to perfect their organizations in every district to work unitedly and energetically in favour of this prohibitory measure. Steady and persistent effort will secure victory all along the line.

PERTH COUNTY.—A large County Convention of the representative temperance men of Perth took place at Stratford on Wednesday of last week. There were about 160 delegates present representing every municipality in the county. J. H. Flagg Esq., of Mitchell, G. W. C. T. of the Good Templars, presided. After considerable speech making and considering the whole question a resolution was adopted to take steps at once to have the Scott Act submitted for adoption by the electors of the county. It was resolved to raise a fund of $1,655 to carry on the campaign, the required amount to be appropriated among the several municipalities. A County Association was formed for the purpose of carrying on the campaign and the following officers were elected:—President, J. H. Flagg Esq., Mitchell; Secretary, Rev. Mr. Tulley, Mitchell; Treasurer, Walter Thompson, Mitchell. Vice-Presidents were chosen from each municipality. The petitions will be put in circulation at once and another convention will be held about the first of July when the result of the canvass will be made known and future steps will be decided upon.

DRINKS DOINGS.

A Brutal Assault.—On Sunday last a young Toronto man, Thomas Downs, got drunk and while in that state brutally kicked and injured his mother, an old woman, at her own home. He was arrested and imprisoned.

BIGAMY AND DRINK.—A man named Dugald McKenzie pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy at the Police Court on Wednesday last week. It was explained that while intoxicated, and not realizing what he was doing, he became illegally married to a prostitute here. The Magistrate took a lenient view of the case and sentenced him to thirty days imprisonment.

NEARLY A SUICIDE.—William Christie, a middle aged Englishman, residing in Toronto, had been drinking heavily for some days and in consequence was requested to leave his boarding house. He went to his room and was found hanging there a short time after just in time to save his life. He was cut down when black in the face and insensible. He was taken to the hospital and restored with great difficulty.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE.—On Saturday last an old woman, Sarah Sloper, was found lying insensible at the foot of the stairs of a house on Richmond street of this city. Her head was bally cut and there was a pool of blood on the floor beside her. She was taken to the hospital and cared for. Her complaint was that a man named Richard Broderick attempted an outrage and then struck her violently knocking her dewn stairs. The Mail reports: "It is said that all the occupants of the house were under the influence of liquor when the affair occurred," That accounts for it all.

WIT AND WHISKY.—A man named John Maher, described by the Mail as being "always dry himself," was up at the Police Court last week for drunkenness, one day after he had served six months in the Central Prison as a penalty for former drunken acts. The Mail says that "fer many years he has been an inmate of the gaol, with brief intervals for rest and refreshment," all through drink. He begged hard for a few days liberty, any, way, and got it, but it is quite possible he will soon be up again. The old temptations are around him and his powers of resistence appear to have become too feeble, by former habits, to stand.

Burned to Death—One of the most terrible warnings of the dangers of drink to those who do drink, and to others who do not, took place at Sharbot Lake, north of Kingston, on the 19th inst. An old man, George Peters, a resident of that place, got drunk and went home, where, in a quarrel with some members of the family, he threw an oil lamp down stairs, and a blaze took place at once. His son tried to extinguish the fire by throwing on a pail of water, which only made matters worse. In a few minutes the small frame house was all in flames. George Peters, a grown up daughter, and a Miss Brigden, all perished in the flames, only portions of their bodies being afterward found. Another grown up daughter was so badly burned that if she lives she will probably be maimed for life. Other occupants of thehouse made narrow escapes. The son states that through the flames he could hear the drunken old man cursing his luck in his last moments. During the last two or three years there have been a number of drunken men killed or maimed for life in the vicinity of Sharbot Lake, and one murder in which drink had a prominent part. Still the Provincial authorities continue to license the business bringing about so much evil.

NEWS AND NOTES.

THE DIFFERENCE.—There is wisdom in the remark of a contemporary that while all other temperance effort is directed toward stopping the stream, prohibition proposes to dry up the fountain. When this is accomplished, there will be no streams to stop, and until it is, they can be but temporarily checked. Lay the axe to the root of the tree and the branches will die.

What Each Drink—It seems that the average inhabitant of Great Britain spends $17.64 annually upon intoxicating liquor, $1.57 on the education of his chil Iren, and 15 cents on Christian missions. The average Canadian lays out $6.33 on intoxicating drink, $1.77 on education, and 11½ cents upon missions. This comparison may be said to be "odorous," but not to us. It would be interesting to know how much of the $1.77 goes for school readers.

A Serious Question.—The Witness says:—The catalogue of the dead and wounded rioters at Cincinnati shows that a great majority bear German names and most of the minority are Irish. These are the great supporters of the liquor traffic, and it is fair to infer that had the State of Ohio not been hindered by these two elements of the population from passing a prohibitory law there would have been no riot and no loss of life in Cincinnati last Friday and Saturday.

TEMPERANCE IN THE ARMY.—It is not many years since the facts were notorious about the bibulous propensities of the soldiers of the British army. The brave men banded together to defend the country against all enemies themselves fell victims to an uncontrolled appetite. This was especially the case in India. Many more British soldiers have been slain by drink in India than in battle. There are now in India twelve thousand soldiers who are total abstainers, and they are safer from disease and more reliable at all times than any others.

Manitoba Moving.—A few days ago the question of Prohibition came up in upon whiskey.

the Provincial Legislature of Manitoba. Of course it was well enough understood that the Legislature has no right to enact a prohibitory law, that being the sole prerogative of the Dominion Parliament. The following resolution, moved by Mr. Davidson, M.P.P., and there was not a member of the House who cared to record his vote against it:—"That in the opinion of this House it is desirable, and it would be to the best interests of this Province, that an Act should be passed prohibiting the importation, sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors. Verily, the signs of the times are becoming more and more clear every day.

ANOTHER ADVANCE.—The Irish League Journal says:—The United States Senate has done itself honor by passing an order that the sale of intoxicating liquors be strictly prohibited in the restaurants of that house, and the House of Representatives. Such liquors have heretofore been freely served in these establishments to both members and strangers, under the merely nominal disguise of calling for "tea" and drinking from tea-cups, instead of calling, them by their proper names, and drinking from tumblers. The scandal was pressed home upon the attention of the Senate-recently, which body very promptly and properly "sat upon" it. We are pleased that such a course as this has been adopted. The use of intoxicants in any house of legislation is inimicable to the bestinterests of the country. Hon. members who take liquor at dinner and have to make speeches and vote on questions affecting the happiness of millions of people, are not likely to be so careful as if they were perfectly sober.

HIGH LICENSES.—The Canada Presbyterian says:—"There is a raging war just now on the other side of the lines between the advocates of Prohibition and the friends of High License. Quite a number of western cities in which Prohibition is in the meantime an impossibility have fixed saloon licenses at $1,000, and it is claimed that the high tax has materially lessened the number of drinking places. It does seem strange that any man who has the temperance cause at heart should oppose this attempt to curtail a traffic that it is impossible just now to prohibit, but such is the fact. A most furious assault has been made against High License. The most ingenious arguments are used to show that the granting of a license to regulate the traffic endorses the traffic and makes the commonwealth a partner in the business. As prohibition is an utter impossibility in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and other places, the actual alternative is High License or free trade. It does seem as if those who oppose High Licenses are so wedded to their theory that they would say—Free Trade*

Law and Liquor.—Demorest's Monthly a leading New York magazine says:—In New York State it is now proposed to charge a license of $250 a year for every seller of beer, and $500 a year for every seller of beer, and $500 a year for every seller of beer, and $500 a year for the privilege of dispensing spirituous liquors. In this the New York legislators are imitating what has been done in Missouri, Illinois, and Ohio. Public opinion is not yet ripe in all the States for prohibiting the sale of liquor, but there is a determination everywhere to make the liquor-selling interest pay for some of the damage they inflict upon the community. Meanwhile the production and consumption of spirits is enormous. The distilleries turn out 1,500,000 gallons every month, while the consumption is over a million gallons a month. Last October the total amount of distilled spirits in the United States was 115,949,235 gallons; of which the government kept in its own storehouses in bond nearly 75,000,000 gallons, until the owners could find it convenient to pay the taxes upon it. The distillers who have liquor in bond have been trying to bully Congress into extending the time upon which they might take their liquor out of bond, but so far the representatives have been able to resist their blandishments and insist upon the payments of the dues upon whiskey.

AWORD TO OUR READERS.

When we commenced the publication of THE REPORTER as a daily, we signified our intention of continuing it a weekly if the patronage would warrant us in doing so without loss. We have now to say that our little sheet has been before you for a few days and you can judge of its merits. We have always been modest in speaking of ourselves, but we have resolved to cast our natural reserve to one side and talk of our views, purposes and intentions. First, then we would say that while we shall endeavor so to conduct our paper as to give offense to none, we wish it distinctly understood that we come out fair and square as an exponent of Reform principles. We have always detested the man who had no fixed principles as a politician, and firmly believe that the only true and honorable way is for every man to cast his lot with one or the other of the political parties of the day.

Second, we come out squarely as an advocate of the Scott Act movement, believing that the great evil of intemperance is one of the greatest magnitude, requiring not only the mild accents of moral suasion for its defeat, but the terrors and penalty of law. Great evils ever require strong legislation, and no greater curse exists in this Canada of ours than that of the evils caused by this remorseless and unyielding tyrant.

There are other subjects, that we would like to give our, views upon, but for want of space are prevented.

We now desire to talk subscription. If we deserve the encouragement and support which a great many of our friends say we do, then send in your names at once, for if the paper is continued all our friends will have to give us a lift. We have sent a large number of our papers to different parts of the county and we will after this issue do no more dead-heading. All who get papers hereafter will have to forward the "all-powerful" 75 cents. Let all who have hitherto held aloof resolve that their own

We must feel our way. If you come to our aid with a good large sub-cription list we will do our best to make THE REPORTER worthy of your continued support and patronage and one that will not only be a credit and benefit to this section, but one that will pay the publisher something for his time and trouble. This is the first time we have appealed to the pockets of our friends and patrons. How many will respond?

THE FARMERSVILLE REPORTER.

SCOTT ACT NOTES.

LEEDS COUNTY.—The Leeds County Scott Act Association are taking practical steps in regard to the coming campaign. It is proposed to raise a campaign fund of three thousand dollars in Leeds and Grenville, and the sums required of each municipality have been apportioned.

LENNOX COUNTY.—The Napanee Beaver says:—The "Scott Act" agitation is constantly gaining ground. The government has been asked to fix a day for polling in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. The movement will spread gradually westward. The temperance party in Lennox and Addington are industriously working up the petitions asking for the submission of the Act, and polling may be expected some time next fall.

Encouraging Success.—At the recent Brampton meeting Mr. Spence gave the following significant facts in regard to Scott Act progress:—The Act has been submitted to the electors of forty counties and cities, in thirty-three of which it has been adopted. The total vote in the forty contest gave a majority of 22,159 in favor of the Act. So far it had never been repealed in any city or county where it had gone into force.

Wentworth Co.—The temperance men of Wentworth County are at work again. Nearly three years ago a vote was taken in that county for the adoption of the Act, and the temperance men were defeated. Now they are resolving to try it again, being convinced that there has been considerable growth in public opinion since that time. The fact that the Act is in successful operation in the adjoining County of Halton is doing much to help the new movement.

Wellington Co.—At Guelph, on the 17th inst at a meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union the question of submitting the Scott Act this year was taken up and discussed at length, and the feeling expressed by the meeting was that while it might not be advisable to bring malters to an issue so soon, all the energies of the Union should be directed to preparing the way for the Act, by means of lectures, distribution of "War Notes," and other temperance literature.

GLENGARY COUNTY—The temperance men of Glengarry County have been at work getting ready for the adoption of the Scott Act. Last week the necessary petition signed by over twenty five per cent of the electors, was presented at Ottawa by Rev. Mr. McGillvray of Williamstown and others, and the next step will be to issue the official proclamation, ordering the vote. The counties of Dundas and Starmont are united with Glengary for municipal and judicial purposes and the vote must be taken in all at the one time.

The Anti party are evidently hard at work. The two men, E. King Dodds, of Toronto, and J. T. Bell, of Dundas, employed by the Licensed Victuallers Association, have been at work in the county. They recently addressed large meetings at Cornwall and Morrisburgh in opposition to the Act. There was no opposition at these meetings. The custom of Mr. Dodds is always to insist on the last speech at any such meeting and his opponents complain so much of his unfairness in connection with this cause as to refuse to meet him on such terms.

PORT PERRY.—An influential meeting meeting was held here on Friday afternoon, at which delegates from various parts of the country were present. Rev. Geo. J. Bishop, of Uxbridge, was appointed Chairman, and Mr. N. F. Paterson, Q.C., Secretary. Several stirring speeches were made, and a Central Committee appointed with headquarters at Port Perry, to continue the campaign throughout the county. Local organizations are being formed through which the Central Committee will act. It is expected that active canvassing and the holding of meetings will begin in about ten days.

The Movement General. — The Presbyterian of last week says:—Active steps are being taken for the early submission of the Scott Act to the electors in various counties. In Northumberland, West Durham, Ontario, York, Brant, Middlesex, Elgin, St. Thomas, Lambton and Kent, the question is being discussed with much keenness. In several of these constituencies, there is no doubt that the Act will be adopted. In others, the contest will be carried on with the utmost determination on both sides. The liquor interest is being thoroughly organized, large sums of money have been subscribed for carrying on the war, and speakers have been engaged to oppose the Act. It is obviously the duty of all in favor of temperance to perfect their organizations in every district to work unitedly and energetically in favour of this prohibitory measure. Steady and persistent effort will secure victory all along the line.

PERTH COUNTY.—A large County Convention of the representative temperance men of Perth took place at Stratford on Wednesday of last week. There were about 160 delegates present representing every municipality in the county. J. H. Flagg Esq., of Mitchell, G. W. C. T. of the Good Templars, presided. After considerable speech making and considering the whole question a resolution was adopted to take steps at once to have the Scott Act submitted for adoption by the electors of the county. It was resolved to raise a fund of $1,655 to carry on the campaign, the required amount to be appropriated among the several municipalities. A County Association was formed for the purpose of carrying on the campaign and the following officers were elected:—President, J. H. Flagg Esq., Mitchell; Secretary, Rev. Mr. Tulley, Mitchell; Treasurer, Walter Thompson, Mitchell. Vice-Presidents were chosen from each municipality. The petitions will be put in circulation at once and another convention will be held about the first of July when the result of the canvass will be made known and future steps will be decided upon.

DRINKS DOINGS.

A Brutal Assault.—On Sunday last a young Toronto man, Thomas Downs, got drunk and while in that state brutally kicked and injured his mother, an old woman, at her own home. He was arrested and imprisoned.

BIGAMY AND DRINK.—A man named Dugald McKenzie pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy at the Police Court on Wednesday last week. It was explained that while intoxicated, and not realizing what he was doing, he became illegally married to a prostitute here. The Magistrate took a lenient view of the case and sentenced him to thirty days imprisonment.

NEARLY A SUICIDE.—William Christie, a middle aged Englishman, residing in Toronto, had been drinking heavily for some days and in consequence was requested to leave his boarding house. He went to his room and was found hanging there a short time after just in time to save his life. He was cut down when black in the face and insensible. He was taken to the hospital and restored with great difficulty.

ANOTHER OUTRAGE.—On Saturday last an old woman, Sarah Sloper, was found lying insensible at the foot of the stairs of a house on Richmond street of this city. Her head was badly cut and there was a pool of blood on the floor beside her. She was taken to the hospital and cared for. Her complaint was that a man named Richard Broderick attempted an outrage and then strück her violently knocking her Jewn stairs. The Mail reports: "It is said that all the occupants of the house were under the influence of liquor when the affair occurred." That

WIT AND WHISKY.—A man named John Maher, described by the Mail as being "always dry himself," was up at the Police Court last week for drunkenness, one day after he had served six months in the Central Prison as a penalty for former drunken acts. The Mail says that "fer many years he has been an inmate of the gaol, with brief intervals for rest and refreshment," all through drink. He begged hard for a few days liberty, any way, and got it, but it is quite possible he will soon be up again. The old temptations are around him and his powers of resistence appear to have become too feeble, by former habits, to stand.

BURNED TO DEATH—One of the most terrible warnings of the dangers of drink to those who do drink, and to others who do not, took place at Sharbot Lake, north of Kingston, on the 19th inst. An old man, George Peters, a resident of that place, got drunk and went home, where, in a quarrel with some members of the family, he threw an oil lamp down stairs, and a blaze took place at once. His son tried to extinguish the fire by throwing on a pail of water, which only made matters worse. In a few minutes the small frame house was all in flames. George Peters, a grown up daughter, and a Miss Brigden, all perished in the flames, only portions of their bodies being afterward found. Another grown up daughter was so badly burned that if she lives she will probably be maimed for life. Other occupants of the house made narrow escapes. The son states that through the flames he could hear the drunken old man cursing his luck in his last moments. During the last two or three years there have been a number of drunken men killed or maimed for life in the vicinity of Sharbot Lake, and one murder in which drink had a prominent part. Still the Provincial authorities continue to license the business bringing about so much evil.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The DIFFERNCE.—There is wisdom in the remark of a contemporary that while all other temperance effort is directed toward stopping the stream, prohibition proposes to dry up the fountain. When this is accomplished, there will be no streams to stop, and until it is, they can be but temporarily checked. Lay the axe to the root of the tree and the branches will die.

What Each Drink—It seems that the average inhabitant of Great Britain spends $17.64 annually upon intoxicating liquor, $1.57 on the education of his children, and 15 cents on Christian missions. The average Canadian lays out $6.33 on intoxicating drink, $1.77 on education, and 11½ cents upon missions. This comparison may be said to be "odorous," but not to us. It would be interesting to know how much of the $1.77 goes for school readers.

A Serious Question.—The Witness says:—The catalogue of the dead and wounded rioters at Cincinnati shows that a great majority bear German names and most of 'the minority are Irish. These are the great supporters of the liquor traffic, and it is fair to infer that had the State of Ohio not been hindered by these two elements of the population from passing a prohibitory law there would have been no riot and no loss of life in Cincinnati last Friday and Saturday.

TEMPERANCE IN THE ARMY.—It is not many years since the facts were notorious about the bibulous propensities of the soldiers of the British army. The brave men banded together to defend the country against all enemies themselves fell victims to an uncontrolled appetite. This was especially the case in India. Many more British soldiers have been slain by drink in India than in battle. There are now in India twelve thousand soldiers who are total abstainers, and they are safer from disease and more reliable at all times than any others.

Manitoba Moving.—A few days ago the question of Prohibition came up in the Provincial Legislature of Manitoba. Of course it was well enough understood that the Legislature has no right to enact a prohibitory law, that being the sole prerogative of the Dominion Parliament. The following resolution, moved by Mr. Davidson, M.P.P., and there was not a member of the House who cared to record his vote against it:—"That in the opinion of this House it is desirable, and it would be to the best interests of this Province, that an Act should be passed prohibiting the importation, sale or traffic in intoxicating liquors. Verily, the signs of the times are becoming more and more clear every day.

ANOTHER ADVANCE.—The Irish League Journal says:—The United States Senate has done itself honor by passing an orderthat the sale of intoxicating liquors be strictly prohibited in the restaurants of that house, and the House of Representatives. Such liquors have heretofore been freely served in these establishments to both members and strangers, under the merely nominal disguise of calling for 'tea' and drinking from tea-cups, instead of calling them by their proper names, and drinking from tumblers. The scandal was pressed home upon the attention of the Senate recently, which body very promptly and properly 'sat upon' it. We are pleased that such a course as this has been adopted. The use of intoxicants in any house of legislation is inimicable to the bestinterests of the country. Hon. members who take liquor at dinner and have to make speeches and vote on questions affecting the happiness of millions of people, are not likely to be so careful as if they were perfectly sober.

HIGH LICENSES.—The Canada Presbyterian says:—"There is a raging war just now on the other side of the lines between the advocates of Prohibition and the friends of High License. Quite a number of western cities in which Prohibition is in the meantime an impossibility have fixed saloon licenses at $1,000, and it is claimed that the high tax has materially lessened the number of drinking places. It does seem strange that any man who has the temperance cause at heart should oppose this attempt to curtail a traffic that it is impossible just now to prohibit, but such is the fact. A most furious assault has been made against High License. The most ingenious arguments are used to show that the granting of a license to regulate the traffic endorses the traffic and makes the commonwealth a partner in the business. As prohibition is an utter impossibility in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and other places, the actual alternative is High License or free trade. It does seem as if those who oppose High Licenses are so wedded to their theory that they would say—Free Trade.

Law and Liquor.—Demorest's Monthly a leading New York magazine says:—In New York State it is now proposed to charge a license of $250 a year for every seller of beer, and $500 a year for every seller of beer, and $500 a year for the privilege of dispensing spirituous liquors. In this the New York legislators are imitating what has been done in Missouri, Illinois, and Ohio. Public opinion is not yet ripe in allthe States for prohibiting the sale of liquor, but there is a determination everywhere to make the liquor-selling interest pay for some of the damage they inflict upon the community. Meanwhile the production and consumption of spirits is enormous. The distilleries turn out 1,500,000 gallons every month, while the consumption is over a million gallons a month. Last October the total amount of distilled spirits in the United States was 115,949,235 gallons; of which the government kept in its own storehouses in bond nearly 75,000,000 gallons, until the owners could find it convenient to pay the taxes upon it. The distillers who have liquor in bond have been trying to bully Congress into extending the time upon which they might take their liquor out of bond, but so far the representatives have been able to resist their blandishments and insist upon the payments of the dues upon whiskey.

The Teacher's Superannuation

From the tenor of debate on this believe that the government contemplates the abolition of the teacher's superannuate fund. In the interest of the teacher, and of education as well, we feel it our duty to protest against the adoption of such a penny wise and pound-foolish policy. It is believed that this fund has a tendency to make, and is making, teaching a life employment, or in other words, a profession. Hence, its great value to education, for it is an admitted fact that the one great evil of our educational system is merely as a stepping-stone to something better.. So long as this is the case, clearly, the interest taken by the teacher in his work will not be so great as it would be were he to give his undivided attention to the duties pertaining to the school. Anything, therefore, which fosters permanency, in the teaching profession, should receive the support of the public, and for this reason we deem it detrimental to the best interests of the country to abolish the superannuation fund. While ministers of the crown and officers of the civil service receive support, in the form of should be cast upon the cold charity of the world, when he is no longer able to do his work in the school room? If the government may take a broad and ministers of the gospel consider it a liberal view of the whole matter, and sacred duty to provide for the mainten-ance of the aged and infirm in their to continue the grant for some time ranks, how much more should those be -ay twenty years at least—if it can cared for who instruct humanity at a not be made permanent.

Again, the fund, we believe, prevents an increase in the wages of teachers, because many a one will teach for inferior wages, having before him the prospect of assistance in a tew years, who would find employment elsewhere, were no such inducement held forth. Here, then, we have one means of preventing a scarcity of teaching material. From this it appears that the country saves, in decreased wages a part, at least, of the amount paid into the superannuation fund. The conclusion arrived at is this, that the fund gives a better class of teachers, because it induces men to remain in the profession, and also, that it does not cost so much as it appears to do, on account of the decrease of wages produced by it. To illustrate this last statement, suppose that fifty thousand dollars are approated yearly for supeannuation purposes, but that the fund decreases the yearly wages of teachers. on the average, by ten dollars, and that there are five thousand teachers in the province, thus the amount saved by the working of the fund would just equal the sum spent, and in that case it would cost nothing.

From what source, it may be asked, does opposition to the fund come? We question in the provincial parliament answer, principally from the young during the last session, we are led to teachers, those who purpose studying teachers, those who purpose studying law, medicine or divinity, and whose chief object consequently is to earn money enough to enable them to complete their professional training. being the case, can they consider themselves hardly dealt with in being asked to pay four dollars a year for the privilege of being allowed to earn that money as teachers? The lawyer, the doctor and the clergyman all pay a yearly fee to be allowed to practise their profession, and in all fairness, the teacher should do the same. No inthat teaching is looked upon by many justice appears to us to be done in requiring teachers to contribute towards the support of their worn out fellowlaborers, none of the rights of individuals appear to be trampled upon, no principle of civil polity seems to be violated But on the contrary, all natural law, all our conceptions of justice, brotherhood and charity favor the continuence of this fund. There the continuence of this fund. There are many teachers in the province at the present time, who have eagerly fill it whether at home or abroad. Teach it virtue; teach it truth; teach it the completion of their labors and a the completion of their labors, and a period of comparative rest, the prospect of speedy assistance has induced a pension, when age or bodily infirmities has unfitted them for labor, does it inadequate remuneration. Should the inadequate remuneration. Should the smart to work on the farm. Do not labored more faithfully, perhaps, than any other for the good of the state, be that senior members of the prohas fund now be abolished the prevailing

DEAR SIR:—At present the so-called moral citizens of our loved village are all astir to suppress vice, especially the good mothers, who have grave fears for their sons and daughters in the We are much in need of moral culture, but sir, let me ask, how are we to begin? Some one has said "charity begins at home," and the apostle has told us that "charity is greater than all," and if the greatest of all good and if the greatest of all good things begins at home, let us erect our moral temple there. Now let us peep in at the homes and see how the children are educated in the family circle. Does the mother or father take the youthful hope, the son, on their knee and endeavor to impress on the young mind something good and noble, or read a half hour from the pages of our blessed book, the bible, or some other good work, or in kneeling before heaven's eternal king, asking, believing they will receive, for his blessing to rest on them and their little ones. Pass along the streets of our beloved villages, hear the tender youth with the infant's lisp yet in his speech, blaspheming the creator. See the child girl which the mother has dressed with care; notice its attire; hear the slang that comes from its tiny lips, at which the father and mother laughs; it will strut on the street with more pomp and pride than a peacock and perchance it meets one in poorer circumstances than itself, it will turn the little nose up with a sneer and give a look of disdain. Surely those cannot be the children of the just. But I have observed that the majority of them belonged to the first in the ranks of our suppressors, of nice

dear fathers and mothers.
Commence at home, "bring a child up in the way he should go and when he gets old he will not depart from it."
That's the bible; that's the truth. Do not strive to put a child's future on its head; far better put it inside. Teach morality, and, above all things, teach it Christ. Do not tell your girls their spend your time in running about the town with a politician to have some corrupt parliament banish our nation's woes. Put them away by prayer. I would give more for the believing prayer of a mother than all the parliamentary power the earth contains. You must not think by this letter that I am against the act of parliament now before the people; no, not I. If we cannot moralize the heathens with reason we must with the sword chris tianity, and civilization must advance But let us as christian adherents no overcome good with evil, but evil with good. That's God's way. I am,

Yours truly, AN ORSERVER.

SOME INDIAN CUSTOMS.

Infamous Trestment of the Women

A letter from Ponca agency, Indian Territory, says: The Poncas number 580, and there are but six half-breeds in the tribe. They have maintained their purity of blood in a remarkable degree, and are, as a consequence, purer in morals than either the Kaws or the Osages. They at one time had a number of half and quarter bloods in the tribe, but these have nearly all died out, and none have been born to fill their places. The Poncas are gaining numerically year after year since coming to this reservation six years ago. They were moved from Baxter Springs here at that time, but came originally from Dakota. In the matter of civilization they get on slowly. Few of the men and none of the women can speak English. They have a large brick school-house. 2½ stories high, with basement capable of accommodating one hundred scholars, and have an actual enrollment of over seventy. There are no laws compelling school attendance. The children the second of the serventy. of over seventy. There are no laws compelling school attendance. The children are doing fairly, learning to sperk English rapidly, and some of the classes are in the Third reader. Mathematics come easy to them.

Nearly half the men wear civilized clothing, and all Ponca women wear petti-coats in tead of leggings. The blanket is never wholly discarded, however and seems to be nearly indispensible for a wrap and for bedding. Nearly all pre-fer boots and shoes to moccasins in bad weather. In the matter of farming eighty to ninety families will raise considerable corn this season, averaging, perhaps, six to eight acres to each family. Theagent says there may be eight hundred acres of corn raised this year by the Poncas. They raise some wheat and potatoes, but are sadly deficient in stock of all kinds. Many families have none of any kind, and very few have teams for farming. The tribe is without religious instruction except a Sunday school. There is no mission here of any kind The men do what outdoor work is done at all. The government issues about one-third rations to ninety families will raise considerable government issues about one-third rations of salt, augar, beef, sad and flour.

The tribe has 101,894 acres of land and $70,000 trust fund at 5 per cent. They also have a treaty fund of $8,000 per an num for five years yet, for clothing, etc. They have leased seven thousand acres of land to J. H. Sherburn, the licensed trader here, for five years, at $1,700 per annum. He is to fence it all, and is now annum. He is to fence it all, and is now engaged in that work. Mr. Sherburn came he:e five years ago a bankrupt, is now lessee of about two-thirds of the reservation, has a fine stock of goods, and nearly two thousand head of cattle.

In precoding letters mention was made of Kaw and Osage polygamy. But a comparison of these tribes and the Poncas and Otors is greatly to the credit of the former. The Poncas have a number of polygamists—how many could not be definately ascertained, nor are the instances always have a proper or the polygamists. always known. The practice is open and acknowledged, sanctioned by us age and sufferance, and if it has not many open advocates it certainly has few or ho assailants. All acquiesce in it; none attack it. The Otoes are worse. Out of about fifty families ten polygamous ones were named as well known with the advision that as well known, with the admission that there was probably several others. Prob-ably one-third of all the married men in the tribe have more than one wife.

The interpreter, a fat, lazy hulk, sat in the agency store taking his ease while his wives drew several barrels of water from the well to haul home. He then got in the wagon and one of his wives drove the team. Their marriages rest upon agreement, are usually made up by friends, and the young couple have less to say concerning it than any others of the tribe. Friends of the groom propose to the friends of the bride. The question of friends of the bride. The question of price then comes in, Ponies, calico, etc., are given by his friend to hers. If an u licle, cousin, or other near relative op-pose the match it is delayed or broken (ff. go very strong on economy.

Usually a few extra presents softens the objections. A feast follows. Separations have not been common in times past, but two cases have occured in aix weeks in which the husband has abandoned his wife and children and married another woman. Unless the tribal council breaks up these prestices the government, will up these practices the government will then be compelled to take action.

Any stick, says the proverb, will serve to beat a dog; and it appears to be the opinion of some persons that any missle will do to hurl at a judge. None can have forgotten the egg which Vice Chancellor Malins happily avoided, and which he supposed "must have been meant for his brother Bacon;" and now one Mary Cawley (thirty-three times convicted) has been throwing a clog at the Accimpton Cawley (thirty-three times convicted) has been throwing a clog at the Accrington bench of magistrates, whereby the chairman was struck on the breast. The most notable story of the kind in our judical annals' is thus given by L'Estrange:— "Judge Richardson, in going the Western circuit, had a great flint stone-thrown at his head by a malefactor, then condemned (who thought it meritorious, and the way to be a benefactor to the commonwealth, to take away the life of a man so ed (who should be a benefactor to the commonway to be a benefactor to the commonwealth, to take away the life of a man so odious); but leaning low on his elbow, in a lazy, reckless manner, the bullet flew too high and only took off his hat. Soon after some friends congratulating his deliverance, he replied by way of jest:

'You see, now, if I had been the indea' (intimating his reclining

The remaing facts of the case are given in Chief Justice Treby's "Notes to Dyer's Reports," in the remarkable jargon of the law reports of the period:—"Richardson, Ch. Just. de C. Pepys had heard that Richardson really wanted save the prisoner's life, and was consulting as to whether he could not tence him to transportation, when the wretched man thus decided his own fate.

SEAL HUNTING.

Waolesale Slaughter on the Coast of Labracor-A Favorable Season

The sealing season has had a far more favorable opening this year than in many seasons before, writes a correspondent from St. Johns, New Foundland. The sealing season commences about the 1st of March and ends about the last of May, during which time several of the sealers make two voyages, and on rare occasions three. The owners of all sealing vessels three. The owners of all sealing yessels, furnish all the boats, sealing gear, powder, shot, and provisions, in consideration of which they are entitled to one-half the seals, and the crew or hunters are entitled to the other half. The masters of the share as a salary. Four different kinds of seals are caught on the coasts of Labrador and Greenland—the harp, the square flipper, the hood, and the native seal. The square flipper is the largest, and the native is the smallest of the seals caught. But the meat of the young native seal is used as food, and is relished, being as pleasant to the taste as any salt-water bird. Its length is from three salt-water bird. Its length is from three to five feet, and it is more easily domesticated than any other species of the seal. It frequents quiet bays in the coast of Greenland. The hood seal is so named Greenland. The hood seal is so named from a hood covering over the head, capable of being distended and elevated or depressed at pleasure. It is the most difficult to kill, because it inflates the hood, which is so thick that a club or bullet will not penetrate it, but if struck in the throat it invariably, though relievantly submits luctantly, submits.

The hood seal is most eagerly sought The hood seal is most eagerly sought after. They have their young early in March, and whole families are found on the ice and easily killed. The harp seal receives its name from a large black, crescent-shaped mark on each side of the back. It ranges from six to eight, and sometimes nine, feet in length. Seal hunting requires great patience and skill. One seal seems to be always placed on watch where danger is to be apprehended from bears and hunters. They climb up from bears and hunters. They climb up through the holes in the ice, and will re-main for hours, if not disturbed. They main for hours, if not disturbed. They will scent a hunter at a great distance, especially if the hunter is to the windward of them, and no sooner does the scent become perceptible to the feel than he dashes off into the water. The food of the seal is salmon, whitefish, and codish. It is believed that the hunters must keep up a sharp war on the seals in the visibility. up a sharp war on the seals in the vicinity of Newfoundland and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, in order that codfishermen may have larger catches. The hunters believe that the number of seals is increasing in the west of Nawfoundland and the that the number of seals is increasing in the west of Newfoundland, and the seal-fishing has become one of vital importance; but this alone would not support the colony. The seal's search for salmon is so eager that it has been known to hunt the neighborhood of the salmon-nets for a long time, and to take the fish after they had been entrapped.

Contrary to the opinion of many, the fur seal is never found on this coast, but there is considerable difference in the fur seal is never round on the the there is considerable difference in the the common seal. The latter there is considerable difference in the species of the common seal. The latter is generally found in small herds. Its skin and oil are of considerable mercantile importance. The skin is dressed and tanned and used as leather. The oil, if made before decay has begun, is colorless lecay has begun, is colorless and nearly inodorous, and it is much superior to whale oil for many purposes. The flesh is used for food in Greenland and Labrador. By the eagerness of the hunter, he generally loses in the hunt 10 per cent. of those he kills, as he frequently kills and piles on the ice, at a great distance from the vessel, a lot of seals. In such a case, in transporting the skins to the vessel they frequently become frostbitten, which makes them worthless, or they are capsized from the ice in a gale. After the seal is shot, or caught, the skin-ner removes the fat. An expert will re-move the fat from five hundred seals in ten hours, being careful not to injure the skin, as every hole he cuts in it deducts

10 cents from his pay. About 3,000 pounds of seal fat will produce 250 gallons of oil. The herring and codfish fisheries, together with the seal-hunting, if carried on with propose are and treatment, would on with proper care and treatment, would on with proper care and treatment, would be the means of giving lucrative employment to many more of our people, and enable them to provide the necessaries of life, of which many of them are now destitute.

Bitten by a Cobral

Among many instances of snake-bite Among many instances of snake-bite poisoning I have seen was a strong young Brahmin of 20, well-known to me, who had been bitten during the night while watching his maize crop. Ere I knew of it they had brought him into my compound in front of the bungalow. As yet yet he walked quite steadily, only leaning slightly on the arm of another man. There was that peculiar drowsy look in his eyes, however, as from a strong narcotic, which indicated his having been bitten for some time, and left but little cotic, which indicated his having been bitten for some time, and left but little room for hope now. He could still clearly tell me particulars. He had been bitten, he said, on putting his fect to the ground while moving off his charpoy in the dark, but, thinking the bite was that of a non-poiscous sucks, had given no more head. poisonous snake, had given no more heed to the matter, and gone to sleep gain, till he was awoke by his friends coming in search of him. With some difficulty I was able to find the hit to the matter, and gone to sleep t gain, till he was awoke by his friends coming in search of him. With some difficulty I was able to find the bite—very faint, no larger than the prist from a pin, but still the unmistakable double mark of the poison-fangs. He felt the poison, he said, gradually ascending the limb, and pointed to a part just above the knee, where he felt it had already reached, the limb below that being, he said, benumbed, and painless to the touch, like the foot when "asleep." I gave him the usual remedies, and kept him walking to and fro, but gradually his limbs seemed to be losing their power of voluntary motion, and his head was beginning to droop from the overpowering drowsiness that was surely gathering over him. At intervals he pointed out the poison line steadily rising higher, and was still able to answer questions clearly on being roused. At length it seemed to be of no use torturing him further by keeping him moving about, and he was allowed to remain at rest. Shortly after this, while being supported in a sitting posture, all at once, without any premonitory sign, he gave one or two long sighs, and life ceased, about an hour after he had himself walked into the compound. There was something terribly real in this faculty of pointing out each stage of the ascending poison (as the snake-bitten patient alwas something terribly real in this faculty of pointing out each stage of the ascending poison (as the snake-bitten patient always can) that was gradually bringing him nearer and nearer to death, with the prospect of only another hour or half-hour of life remaining to him; and yet the patient does not seem to realize this with the keenness that an on-looked does, probably from the poison benumbing at the same time the powers of the mind as well as of the body. the body.

Japanese Superstitions

Japanese people are very superstitious, and have innumerable signs and tokens by which to regulate their conduct. They never sweep the rooms of a house immediately after one of the inmates has set out upon a journey, as this would sweep out all the luck with him. At a mar-riage ceremony neither bride nor bridegroom wears any clothing of a purple color, lest their marriage tie be soon loosed, as purple is the color most liable to fade. They have some curious ideas in regard to the finger nails, which are cut only at certain times. If a woman cut only at certain times. If a woman steps over an egg shell, she will go mad; if over a razor, it will become du over a whetstone, it will be broken. man should set his hair on fire, he will go mad. The Japanese have numberless mad. The Japanese have numberless other superstitions of a similar character.

The Berkshire papers record the death of Edward Hester, one of the few remaining survivors of the battle of Waterloo, which took place at the workhouse of the Cookham union at the age of 92 years. Doceased had for many years been well known to the inhabitants of Bray and Maidenhead, and had been in the habit of living in the workhouse during the winter months. He often spoke of the stirring scenes in which he took part in his early days his early days.

In Behar the fierce, hot winds are rapidly burning up the indigo crop. A worse district is Chupra, where the indigo will turn out very badly should the present weather continue for a week longer. Things are not quite so bad in the tea and jute districts; but in these too, rain is much wanted. these, too, rain is much wanted. At Simla the water supply has fallen so short that work on the new government offices has been suspended, and five thousand workmen have been sent to their homes. From all parts of the Bengal presidency there is a cry for rain.

A Japanese Barometer Stone.

A curious reminiscence of Japan as it was thirty years ago is incidentally furnished in the story of the Zeniya Gohei, a merchant, who, in the days of the Bukufu government, was guilty of the heinous crime of engaging in unlicensed commerce with foreigners. Zeniya, for this offence, underwent a term of imprisonment, and on his release disposed of any property that remained to him to procure the means of a livelihood. This, however, is not the episode in his career which recently made him a subject of interest to the vernacular press, but the fact that among his belongings was a celebrated A curious reminiscence of Japan as it among his belongings was a celebrated chattel called the 'barometer stone' (See-i-Seki). So far as we are aware, no mineral recorded in Occidental catalogues exhibits this wonderful sensibility to atmospheric influences, and if Mr. Zeniya's stone be a veritable affair, it is indeed a curosity. A CURIOUS STORY.

How Napoleon III. Saved a Murderer From Justice.

Edward King writes from Paris to the Boston Journal: The memoirs and souvenirs of the imperial regime continue to flood the market. The latest of these productions is from the pen of one of the great ladies of the court who was a familiar at Compingue and who gives use as a great ladies of the court who was a familiar at Complegne, and who gives us many piquant sketches of the brilliant life led there by Napeleon III. and his numerous favorites. Among other stories told by this gossiping lady is one which so well illustrates the corruption of the second empire that I will repeat it here.

It appears that at Complegne there was for years a mysterious personage who

It appears that at Compiegne there was for years a mysterious personage who came and went among the guests like one of them, and who seemed to be on a footing of perfect equality with them, yet concerning whom no one knew anything definite. If his name were asked by someone newly introduced at the imperial court, the answer was, "Oh, that is M. Funt;" and that was all. Who was M. definite. If his name were asked by someone newly introduced at the imperial court, the answer was, "Oh, that is M. Funt;" and that was all. Who was M. Funt? No one except the emperor and his private agents appeared to know, and they met all appeals for knowledge on the subject with impenetrable silence. Funt was accounted by many as a police agent who took note of everything that they said, and reported it to the emperor. So visitors at Compiegne and at the Tuileries gradually became afraid of M. Funt, and gave him a wide berth when they could do so without fear of wounding his susceptibilities. After the emperor's death the truth came out, and this lady, authoress of the memoirs, has now published it to the world. It appears that when Napoleon took refuge in Switzerland, in the castle of Arenemberg, in company with his mother, he received many favors at the hands of the president of the confederation. Napoleon, as is well known, never forgot a friend, nor an enemy eithreation. Napoleon, as is well known, never forgot a friend, nor an enemy either, for that matter. And when he ascended the French throne he did everything in his power to further the interests of the Swing provident. of the Swiss-president, who meantime, like all good republicans, had come down to be a simple citizen. In short, Napoleon told his old Friend that he would grant him any favor that he asked.

One day a murder was committed a Boulogne-sur-Mer. A lover shot dead the wife who, after having for a long time been unfaithful to her husband, repented, and announced her intention of severing the unholy liaison, and returning to him. The lover, as soon as he had committed the crime, went into hiding in a miserable fishing village on the coast. The imperial police were put on his track and he was soon found. As they were about to deliver his next. was soon found. As they were about to deliver him up to justice the police were greatly surprised to receive an order, "at the instance of superior authority," to quash all proceedings—not to let the quasir an proceedings—not to let the public know that the criminal had been discovered, and to announce to the murderer that he was free. Much mystified the agents did as they were bid. The wretched lover, who was no other than the Monsieur Funt, who in later years so excited the curiosity of the ladies of the excited the curiosity of the ladies of the court at Compiegne, soon discovered that his head had been spared because he was a near relative of the ex-president of the Swiss confederation, who had befriended Napoleon. It was enough that the exofficial had mildly expressed his horror at the prospect of having a criminal affair even remotaly connected with his facility. even remotely connected with his family record. Napoleon silenced the whole

Funt went to the Tuileries and threw himself at the emperor's feet, asking to be allowed to devote the remainder of his life to the imperial service. request was favorably received, and, as we have seen, Napoleon faithfully kept the wretched man's secret to the last. But how general must have been the corruption of an epoch when a defeat of justice was possible merely that a friend might be obliged.

That is the way the tale is told; I give it for what it is worth.

Modern Algiers

Modern Algiers

A traveler arriving at Algiers by rail naturally feels a sense of disappointment, as if he were come upon a modern French town with its streets, large warehouses, colonnades, and gay shop windows. This is modern Algiers; and it lies along the borders of the sea for a distance of two miles or more, and on the rising hillside, three or four blocks upward. High above the French buildings, and directly back of them, rises what is left of the old Arab city. The houses, white as an advanced knowledge of the art of whitewashing can make them, are irregularly piled together, like a huge mass of rock candy. A flight of five hundred steps leads to the Kasha, or port, that surmounts the height; and of five hundred steps leads to the Masna, or port, that surmounts the height; and many other streets and lanes, dark, narrow and circuitous, lead to the same point, giving the old town a triangular shape. Scattered over the hills on either side of the city one sees a large number of shape. Scattered over the hills on either side of the city one sees a large number of villas, those belonging to the French and the rich Hebrews are more to the left of the town, while to the right live a large number of English, who occupy a tract of land extending three or four miles beyond land extending three or four miles beyond Algiers. The impression of the place is much grander when one approaches it by water; its fine harbor, with the forts, lighthouse, and arsenal, the rising mass of heildling of James in the control of the lighthouse, and arsenal, the rising mass of buildings of dazzling whiteness, terminating in the grand old fort on the summit, and the Moorish das which surround the bay, half concealed by the luxuriance of the foliage, make Algiers one of the most beautiful cities. The climate is absolute perfection. Neither hot nor cold, but allowing one always to sit with open windows. The seasons are not marked by the budding of trees and not nor cold, but allowing one always to sit with open windows. The seasons are not marked by the budding of trees and the putting forth of flowers, for this is go-ing on throughout the year.

Historical Titles to Spare.

The report that Prince Albert Victor of The report that Prince Albert Victor of Wales is to be raised to the peerage as duke of Dublin certainly requires confirmation, his royal highness' father being already earl of Dublin, by creation of her present majesty in 1850. Not, of course, that such effection is an absolute bar to a similar one. Indeed, substantially identical titles have before now been conferred on different persons: the grant of the exon different persons; the grant of the on different persons; the grant of the existing earldom of Leicester in 1837, before that of 1784 had become extinct, being a case in point. As a matter of fact, the number of historical titles at the disposal of the sovereign just now is not excessive; especially if the choice be restricted, as it especially if the choice be restricted, as it has been in later times, to titles which have already been borne by princes of the blood. Still, there are enough and to spare for the sons of the heir-apparent to the throne—the more that any bestowed on Prince Albert Victor must ultimately marge in the crown. At present there is merge in the crown. At present there is no duke of York on Garter's roll; no duke of Gloucester or of Aumerie. A few weeks will detide the question as to whether the dukedom of Albany and the whether the dukedom of Albany and the earldom of Clarence be dormantor extinct. It need hardly be ebserved, by the way, that Prince Leopold was the first who ever bore the title of earl of Clarence. William, duke of Cumberland—the victor of Culledon—was also marquis of Bark. William, duke of Cumberland—the victor of Culloden—was also marquis of Berkhampstead, earl of Kinnington, Viscount Trematon; and baron of Alderney—honors which expired with him. A prince more famous in war (John, duke of Bedford, the brother of Henry V.) was earl of Kendal. Unfortunately, history knows something of a duchess of Kendal, in the something of a duchess of Kendal, in the eriod, who scarcely lent ustre to the title. -St. James's Gazette.

Morning Strolls

Among the Farmersville Industries.

The fresh morning air circulated freely through our lungs as we emerged from our sanctum and wended our way to the seat of some of the more important of the many industries of the village of Farmersville. Proceeding to the flats which lie south-east of the village, we found ourselves, after a few minutes walk, in the brick-yard, the property of Messrs, Ross & Pierce. Finding the men at work, we at once became deeply interested in the brickmaking process: The work is done by Messrs. Nelson Earl, John Livingston and George Earl. They are able to turn out about 3,000 bricks per day. Having some curiosity to know how a brick is made, we watched closely the manipulations of the workmen, and we now give to the public the results of our observations respecting the manufacture of that very important article:

In the vicinity of the yard is a stratum of clay from which the bricks are made. This clay must be free from lime and gravel, otherwise the bricks would burst while being burnt. This material is first ground in the "mill," then mixed with water and reduced to the consistency of mortar, after which it is moulded in a box which is first sprinkled with sand to prevent the adhesion of the clay. The bricks are now placed in long rows to dry, being protected from the rays of the sun and the rain by a roof erected upon upright posts. When thoroughly dried they are burnt in a square pyramidal pile which contains arches for the application of fire, and also openings to allow the flames and heated air currents to eight days, and the number burnt the prospects of work during the present condition. 100,000. The brick made here is red, hard, and of excellent quality. After spending a pleasant and profitable half hour in the brick yard, we proceeded to the turning mill owned by Mr. Middleton and worked by Mr. Arza Sherman. The "boss" and the "hands" being busily at work, we were again afforded an opportunity of learn-ing a little about the workings of machinery. This mill manufactures but-ter-bowls, cabinet ware, whiffle-trees, neck-yokes and cheese-hoops. The machinery is run by a 10-horse power engine. During our visit Mr. Sherman was making butter-bowls. They are made from elm blocks two and onehalf feet long and from eighteen to twenty-four inches in diameter. The block is first sawed through the centre and one part is placed in a lathe. It is now made to revolve with great rapidity and the chissel is deftly ap-plied to it by the workman. In an incredibly short space of time a hemispherical block is cut from it; from this another is taken, and a bowl is produced, one-half of the block thus furnishing three or four bowls of various sizes. They sell at $3, $3.50 and $4 a dozen, according to size. Mr. S. informs us that he is doing a thriving business; that he sells rapidly all the goods he can produce, and that he is able to pay the farmer good prices for his logs—an elm log twelve feet long and twenty-two inches in diameter now bringing $1.25. The greater part of the articles produced here are disposed of in Brockville, Westport and the surrounding districts, but the producer hopes to find a market for his goods in Montreal at no distant day.

Our course was next directed to the carding mill of Messrs. H. O. & J. F. Gordon. Here a great number of sacks of wool was exposed to our view. This mill employs a number of hands, and has the advantage of both steam and water power. Carding and cloth-dress-ing is carried on from spring till the following January. One large carding machine is used, and in addition to this, there is the necessary apparatus for the other departments of work. The present proprietors have owned the mill and done the business for the

during the present season it is expected to produce at least 200,000. In our opinion the proprietors deserve the social and moral well-being great credit for their pluck and energy in originating and building up an inspect of the fuman family; that idleness and degredation; water of the Messina springs, but stronger in its sulphurets.

As far as I know, the water has not been subjected to analysis by any first-class chemist. But its best analysis is look beget poverty and degredation; and, that, by an all-wise dispensation of Providence, not only man's physical nature, but his intellectual as well, requires him to put forward daily exer-tion, whether it be at the anvil, the bench, in the field, or at the desk matters little, except in so far as adaptability is concerned. But one element is essential, and that is, that man shall work. Refuse to be guided by this principle and he must inevitably become a failure. Make it the rule of his life and his efforts must eventually be crowned with success.

Bidding our readers good bye for the present, we hope to be able next week to give them an account of another morning stroll.

DEAR SIR:-In complying with your request to inform you as to what I personally know or have learned of the Farmersville mineral springs, it is with very great pleasure I make the attempt, more especially in a journal recently established here, to which I wish most heartily all manner of success.

The late Wellington Landon, whose opinion on any scientific subject I always considered entitled to the highest respect, often privately discoursed to me of the medicinal properties of these waters from his own experience and that of members of his family, who had used them for years with signal benefit, more especially in diseases of the nervous system. His opinion was that their medicinal propertis were not excelled by those of Messina, in the United States, or those of Chelsea, in England.

I once asked Dr. John G. Giles if it were not possible that the sulphur with which the water is impregnated might not have its source in the bed of marl lying immediately beneath the stratum of loam, and he made the pertinent reply: "The spring in question is surrounded immediately by other springs, the properties of the one differing from those of the other, and why should the pass throughout the whole mass. On the testimony of Mr. Kincaid the water at the fountain head is perfectly clear, though highly impregnated with sulphur, iron, magnesia, soda, phosphorous and lime, in what per cent. remains to be ascertained. But now that we have a newspaper devoted to the interests of Farmersville, so important a mineral spring, the use of whose waters has been ascertained to be so highly beneficial, will not long remain undeveloped and comparatively unknown.

$124,000. A herd of 6,000 head of cattle which had been without water for five days, stampeded at the sight of the Neucos river in Texas, a few days ago. The rush was so great that hundreds were killed and maimed.

Twenty years ago Mrs. N. Crandell, of Cohoes, N. Y., missed a half dozen silver spoons and a knife, and supposed they were stolen. The other day in making repairs to the house, she discovered them uninjured in a rat's nest.

A plant, a native of Africa, is at tracting much attention at the residence of Eben Barton, Lansingburg, N. Y. The bulb was placed in the cellar some time ago, and had been forgotten by the family. A peculiar odor had pervaded the premises for some days, and examination as to the cause revealed the fact that the bulb had produced the beautiful plant, which had grown to the height of four feet, and from which came the perfume.

G. L. Record of Vicksburg has an odd strawberry patch in which the plants are very prolific. He bored holes in rows around a hegshead at regular intervals of six inches, filling Millinery, Feathers, Flowers, & Ribbon, the hogshead with earth and set a strawberry plant in each one of the holes, besides putting a number on top. There are one hundred plants growing from the sides of this novel garden. Some of the berries are ripe and have attained great size, one measuring three inches in circumfer-

A Remarkable Incident.

A remarkable accident happened in New York recently. A safe weighing two tons and a half was being hoisted to the fourth floor of a building on Broadway, and had reached the desired height when a workman at the window through which it was to pass, and the had been suiding the yonder. and who had been guiding the ponderous mass suddenly gave a piercing and agonizing shriek that startled the crowd who were watching the operation. A glance at the writhing form of the workman, who groaned and screamed with pain, showed what had happened. He had taken hold of the pulley to swing the safe, and his fingers had caught in the rope and drawn into the sheaves of the block. His fellow workmen knew that to turn the winch either to hoist or lower the safe mighth result in crushing the poor fellow's hand to a pulp. There was only one to do—the ropes must be cut and the safe allowed to drop to the sidewalk. As quickly as possible the sidewalks and the roadway were cleared of pedestrians and vehicles. Two stout fellows lay out upon the sill and held the body of their suffering comrade so that he would not be car-ried down with the safe. Then the Then the ropes were quickly severed close to the block. The man's hand was released, and he was drawn, half fainting, into big safe crashed through the sidewalk, smashed a heavy flagstone into powder and buried itself in the earthy floor of a vault under the street. The safe was not materially injured and the work-man's wounds are not dangerous.

"GO FEEL AS I HAVE FELT."

Go feel what I have felt! Go bear what I have borne— Sink 'neath the blows a father dealt, And the cold world's scorn; The suffered on from year to year— I've soie renef, the scorching tear.

Go kneel where I have knelt.
Implore, beseech and mray—
Strive the besotted heart to melt.
The downward course to stay;
Be dashed with curse aside.
Your prayers burlesqued, your tears defied.

Go weep as I have wept,
Behold the strong man bow—
With gnashing teeth, lips bathed in blood,
A cold and livid brow,
Go catch his withering glance and see
There mirrored his soul's misery.

Go hear, and feel, and see, and know All that my soul hath felt and known: Then look upon the wine cup? glow, See if its beauty can atone— Think if its flavor you will try When all proclaim, "tis drink and die!"

Tell me I hate the bowl—
Hate is but a feeble word:
Houthe—abhor—my very soul
With strong disgust is stirred, whene'er I hear, or see, or tell
Of that dark beverage of hell.

ON A BRIDAL TRIP.

Some of the Troubles that a Western Pair Encountered.

[From Peck's Sun.]

"Say, what kind of a hotel do you keep" said a green-looking man, as he stepped up to the counter and registered his name, and added "and wife" after it.

"Can a newly married couple settle down here for two or three days and have a quiet visit with each other and not be scared out of their Boots?

The hotel man said they could go right to their rooms and stay three days or three weeks and never come out to their meals if they didn't want anything to eat.

"But what is the matter? Have you been annoyed?" asked the hotel man.
"Annoyed! that dont express it.

We were married day before yesterday at St. Paul, and went to a hotel. live about sixty miles west of St. Paul, and the traveling men put up a job to make me tired. There were about one hundred of them snowed in at St. Paul and I'll be darned if they didn't keep us awake all night. They knew we were a bridal couple, and they bribed the bell boys and porters to let them act for them, and when we rung the bell for the boy a drummer for a Chicago cigar factory came in and wanted to know what was wanted. ordered a pitcher of ice water and a Milwaukee drummer for a grocery house brought it in, and he looked at my wife, who is bashful, and made her feel real bad.

"I didn't know they were drummers until the next day or I should have killed some of them. I rung the bell for coal and a traveling man who posts railroad cards around and then works up excursions came in and fixed the fire and stayed and poked it for nearly half an hour. He asked so many questions about how long we had been married that I wanted to thump him: but my wife said we didn't want to have no row the first day we were married. I rung for a chambermaid to clean up the room and bring some towels, and it was half an hour before she came, and I went to the office to see about my trunk, and the chambermaid stayed about half an hour and was very interesting, and my wife said she was a real pleasant, affectionate sort of a creature, far above her station and I tell you I was mad when I found out that it was a smooth-faced, handsome young Jewish drummer for a Milwaukee clothing house, who was in with the gang, and he gave the chambermaid $3 to loan him an old dress so he could play chambermaid. When my wife told me that the chambermaid patted her on the cheek and said she was the sweetest bride that was ever in the hotel and asked her for a kiss, and my wife said she thought it would be no harm to kiss a poor chamber-maid and encourage her, I wanted to kill him; and I went down to the office the next morning, but the smooth-faced while we were at supper somebody got into the room and put cracker crumbs into our bed, and we found a cold oilcloth floor mat over the top sheet, enough to freeze anybody. But the enough to freeze anybody. But the worst was at night. We had just got comfortably into bed when there was a knock at the door and I got up, and the watchman was there and he he wanted to point out to me the fireescape, so I could get out in case of fire, and I went out in the hall and he took me waysout to the end of the building to show it to me, and while I was looking out of the window my wife came running down the hall and begging me to saveher. I asked her what was the matter, and she said as soon as I went out a man that looked like a porter came into the room and told her to fly and save herself and to follow her husband. She telt awful when she found there was no trouble, and we got back in our room half froze. I have got them tellows down fine. The fellow who called me out to look at the fire escape is a drummer for a Philadelphia millinery house, and the one that scared my wife out of her wits travels for a hearse factory at Rochester, N.Y. My wife says she would know him, because he has a big grey mustache and wears a diamond collar button in his She said she thought he was pretty stylish for a porter at the time. They woke us up several times in the night to tell us what to do in case we were sick, and in the morning before we were up a waiter brought up our breakfast. He said the landlord sont it up, and he just stood around until we had to sit up in bed and eat breakfast. I thought at the time that it was kind in the landlord to send up our breakfast, but wien I found that the waiter who brought it up was a travel ing man for a reaper factory at Rockford; and remembered how darned impudent he looked at my wife, I could have murdered him, but the clerk said he had gone to Winnipeg. It was just about as bad coming down here on the sleeping car, and I think that half the passengers on the car were those same drummers that were shown in. It was colder than Alaska, and I would order extra blank ts and they would steal them. I had about twenty blankets put upon my bed and in the morning there was not ing but a sheet over us us. And every time there was a blanket spread over us there was a lifterent porter put it on, and I think all were trave ing men. Every little while some body would pull open the urtains and sit down on my berth and begin to pull off his boots and I would tell him the berth was occupied and

nocent as could be and ask our pardon and then go out and damn the porter. Once I felt somebody feeling about my berth and I asked what was the matter, and the fellow said he was entitled by law No. 291, to amend a looking for his wife's shoes to black. certain by law of this municipality Then about every fifteen minutes the. conductor would open the curtains and hold a red lantern in and ask for our tickets. I think they punched my ticket sixty-five times. Anyway, it Anyway, it looked like a porous plaster when I got up in the morning. I think it was the traveling men who were playing conductor, but I was sleepy and I cuss had gone to Fargo. It was all the thought the best way was to let them landlord could do to hold me. Well punch it. Well, about three o'clock in the morning somebody punched us and said it was time to get up, as all the passengers were up and we would breakfast in fifteen minutes. And then we hustled around and got dressed the best we could, lying on our backs and kicking our clothes up in the air and catching them on ourselves when they came down. I got my pants on wrong side before and lost everything out of my pockets, and my wife lost her hair and had to tie a handkerchief around her head, and then we had our berths made up rnd sat up till daylight, and the porter found my wife's hair and pinned it to a curtain of a berth occupied by a preacher from Oshkosh, and he kicked and got mad about it and wondered how it got there and swore about it, and I think he travels for an Oshkosh carriage factory. Oh, I never had such a night, or such two nights in all my life, and what I want to know is, if I can be quiet here and get a little sleep and not be annoyed."

The hotel man told him if anybody them clear down stairs and be would be responsible, and the bride groom took his satchel and wife, and the colored man showed them a room and they have not shown up since.

It is confounded mean in traveling men to get snowed in and form a syndicate to have fun. They will cause themselves to be disliked if They will they keep on.

The following paragraph contains very sensible suggestion to youngmen, and at the same time a very sensible plea in the interests of plaimaiden ladies of uncertain age:—A young man was about to marry who his parents reminded him of the fact that the lady of his choice was neither young nor handsome. "That's just the kind I want,' replied the sensible young fellow, "I want 'em old, so they will have some sense and and thing; and I want 'em bomely, so they'll generally stay at home." think of that, young fellow. It ma never have struck you just that way before. The whole subject is one such general interests as to warran. th nough consideration.

Morning Stroll No. 2

Farmersville In Among the dustrics.

The invigorating morning breeze high in the heavens before we were ready for to take our place in the "rig" and accompany our friend and guide to the mills owned and run by guide to the mills owned and run by that prominent member of the Counties' Council Jas. B. Saunders, Esq., Entering the basement of the building we found a large steam engine fitted with all the modern appliances and improvements. In this department is also an immense water-wheel which is capable of driving all the mechanical water was plantful. which is capable of driving all the machinery when water is plentiful. The time during which water power is available, we were informed, is about five mouths in the year. The fuel used is wholly sawdust and the refuse of lumber, so that by this excellent method of disposing of waste material, the current expenses are somewhat lessened, and at the same time the vard is kept comparatively. time the yard is kept comparatively free from encumberances. Proceed-ing to the next flat our attention was directed to a saw mill on one side of the building and a grist mill on the other. The saws used are circulars of various sizes. The logs are oak, clm, seb basswood nine and manle. For ash, basswood, pine and maple. For the last three years large quantities of elm have been sawn to m ke material for cheese boxes. This mill will cut 10,000 feet of lumber a day. As some of our readers may not know exactly how lumber is in de we shall endeavor to explain the process to them. The log is first houled out of the pond, then placed in position on the trucks and brought before the A slab s taken from it, another saw. from the opposite side and so on till it is reduced to a rectangular form. This is then cut into inch boards or planks as may be required. The log is handled by machinery under the skilful management of one of the The log workmen. After spending some time in the sawmill we stepped into the gristing department. Here we found gristing department. Here we found everything in shape, the laborers hard at work grinding wheat and "chop." The miller, who, by the way, is a good natured, genial fellow, informed us that he can grind 100 bushels of wheat and 300 bushels of coarse grain per day. A heavy gristing business is done here, and in addition to this large quantities of flour are manufactured to supply the increasing demands of both local and distant flour and feed stores

We next turned our attention to the upper flat, where we found a planing machine, shingle mill and cheese box factory. Mr. S. told us that he made 27.000 cheese boxes last year, and that he expects to do as well, if not better, this season. We watched closely the workmen engaged in cheese box making and learned several things about it which is now given to things about it which is now given to the public. The material for the sides of the boxes is made of onequarter inch elm lumber. These are passed through the planing mill and thus reduced to proper thickness, being first made of proper length. The ing first made of proper thickness, being first made of proper length. The bands are made of the same stuff cut into narrow strips. The bottoms are sawn from boards of the same thickness, the shape and position of the saw being such that it cuts the pieces exactly the size of the bottom of the box. At last the parts are neatly nailed together and the article is ready for use. The planing mill, we understand, is considered a valuable didition to the establishment as it addition to the establishment, as it saves much hard manual labor and leaves the boards as smooth as they would be had they been planed by hand.

The shingle f ctory makes about 250,000 yearly. The process of manufacture is interesting to the beholder, but not at all pleasant, we should judge, to the one who attends to the saw. Indeed, the pitable condition of the operator's eyes carried our mind back to boyhood's days, and we thought of certain sports which had a very damaging effect upon the visual organs and occasionally produced a series of most brilliant subjective fireworks well fitted to teach the youthful mind that discretion is frequently the batter part of valor.

After spending a pleasant hour amount the hum of machinery, and in the company of the kind-hearted and sociable workmen, we bade our host good bye, thinking that the man who superintends the business of a saw mill, grist mill, shingle factory and planing mill combined, has almost as much brain work to do as an editor.

FARMERSVILLE REPOPTER. THE

THE SCOTT ACT.

We approach this subject with a feeling of diffidence mingled with reluctance. We are painfully sensible of our inability to do justice to a question so important, so all-absorbing and so tre-mendous in its results. We know that the most obstruse problems of political economy and civil jurisprudence are involved in its solution, but yet, impelled by a sense of duty and a love of fair play, we shall attempt to place be-fore our readers a few of the inconsistences embodied in the arguments brought forward by the opponents of the Scott Act, and having done so, to give reasons why that act should receive the unqualified support of the whole community.

In "Reasons Why Farmers Should Vote Against the Act," the public is told that "farmers will suffer great pecuniary loss by the adoption of the act." The publication in question also promises to show that such is the case. We may fairly assume that all the reasons that can be giren are those accompanying the statement quoted.

We have read this extraordinary sheet carefully, and all that is to be found in it in support of the above statement is that farmers will love a trifle on barley and apples by the operation of the act. Was ever such unmitigated nonsense attempted to be pawned off on an intelligent pullic? Taking our opponents figures, about thirteen million bushels of barley are produced in the Province of Ontario, nine millions of which go to the breweries of the United States, thus leaving only four millions to be consumed at home, and of this two and a half millions are used in the manufacture of beer. Now if the American brewers find it profitable to purchase yearly from Ontario nine million bushels of barley, with all the breweries here in full blast, would they not be able to purchase two and a half millions more without reducing the price, if the production of beer in Ontario Certainly they would.

But say our opponents, the Americans are working just a; hard for prohibition as are the people of Ontario.

Joyful intelligence! Heaven help them in the good cause! In the event of such a happy termination of the struggle, which it is earnestly hoped may be in the near future, should the time be near when the vast piles of brick, and stone, the clanking machinery and the sinewy laborer which have all lent their aid in manufacturing that which can only debase and demoralize man, shall be used for other and nobler purposes, there yet remains a means by which the farmer may dispose of his barley without pecuniary loss. He can feed it to his stock.

At once we are confronted by the startling announcement, "bright colored barley is worth ten cents a bushel them. Any hotel keeper will admitmore than dark." intelligent as a Jer sey cow would not know the difference between bright and towns—that were it not for the bar the dark barley. This is amusing, but utterly senseless, If color is the only is due to the liquor trade alone and would cease to exist with the closing up of the breveries. It is evident that up of the breweries. It is evident that a bushel of dark colored barley would sell for just as much as a bushel of bright colored were the cause of differ wheels of the government machine, but for every time he drops a dime into the revenue till, he slips a dollar into his own pocket. This is the nineteenth century of the Christian era, wheels of the government machine, but for every time he drops a dime into the acknowledge to be a real difficulty. The testimony of men of undoubted honor and versal to the control of the

Whether that price would be higher or o ver than the present prices depends entirely upon the ratio between dem rd and supply. If of the world, the same quantity continued to be pro- overcome us duced and the den and as great as formerly, assuming prohibition in force, clearly the average price would be un-changed. It then becomes necessary to seek for a market. The market we propose is, let the farmer give in-creased attention to stock-raising, and in doing so he will dispose of the greater part of his barley on the farm. The advantages derived from this sysem would be that home consumption would tend to keep up prices, while the manure produced would amply repay the farmer for the extra work in-currel in the disposal of his grain. Indee I this last advantage, in our opinon, is of very great importance, for unless stock farming is engaged in more extensively than hitherto, the carming lands must inevitably become imperished. From this it appears that the operation of the Scott Act encouriges to a certain extent, better methods of farming than are practised at the present time. The conclusion at which we have arrived at s that the firmers cannot possibly suffer loss by the adoption of the act, and that the arguments in support of supposed loss to be sustained, are mere ropes of sand that fall to pieces as soon as touched.

The remarks on the "cider question" require to be noticed only that they may be despised. No farmer is likely to find fault with the act because it nay possibly reduce the net receipts of few bushels of unsalable apples by wo or three cents a bushel. We are next told that "prohibition for the Dominion of Canada means a oss of revenue of about six million. of dollars a year." Assuming that his loss was made good by direct taxaion, which need not necessarily be resorted to, the per capita tax would be about $1.50. The levying of such a tax is exclaimed against by the opponents of the act as a great injustice. But where is the family that would ot willingly give $5 or $10 a year if by so doing they could remove from our fair land this terrible scourge? Waiving the sentimental side of this question, however, and appealing only to the pockets of the people, allow us to ask from what source does this six million dollars of revenue come? answer, from the peo le, and we defy successful contradiction. What matters it whether the wholesale liquor merchant, the hotel keeper or the brewer pays the money directly to the government, the money does come and must come from the drinkers, from those who give their bodies to be burned in the flames of alcohol, and at the same time bring degradation and ruin upon those nearest and dearest to Even an animal as excepting perhaps, a few of the firstclass hous and yet we find men advocating such methods of raising the revenue of one of the most intelligent telligent governments Can such things be and overcome us like a summer's cloud without our special wonder?

But there is yet another stand point from which this part of our sub-ject may be viewed. The working But there power of any people measures the wealth of the nation. The power to do work varies directly as the will and the inteligence. The will to do 18 increased by a noble example, an exatted ideal and above all by the spontimeous outgushings of a joyous peo-The sons and daughters of Ontario have both will and inteligence.

They are pre-eminently inteligent and their will power is perhaps second to none. The use of alchoholic bever ages it is well known, impairs both the will and inteligence. In order therefore that the capability to work may be used to the greatest advantage it is necessary that the people be strictly temperate, and the strict observance of the Scott Act would, we believe, assist materially, in banish ing intemperance from our land.

To all this it may be added that intemperance is a fruitful scource of crime. The testimony of judge and jury in all countries supports this statement. The adoption of the Act would therefore lessen crime and conequently decrease the amount of public money spent in administrating the law. Thus we see that the in-creased working power of the people added to the decreased judicial expenditure would far exceed the direct axation levied to meet the deficit in revenue, caused by a prohibitory liquor law.

Again we are told that the Act will not help the cause of temperance. We believe that it will. As far as e can learn it is doing good work in he County of Halton at the present time. The opposition brought to bear against it is no doubt very great; the supporters of the act have many difficulties to contend with that would cease to exist were the Act in force in the surrounding counties.

We hold that it is not fair to estimate the good that can be done by it so long as its jurisdiction is sur-rounded by districts in which the sale of liquor is authorised by law. It is easily understood that under such conditions it is much easier to bring intoxicants into the county than it would be were the territory much larger. But even in this county with all its disadvantages the "groggery does not flourish on every corner, drunkeness is not more prevalent than it was before the adoption of the act, as is claimed by our opponents, but on the contrary, liquor can only be obtained at great trouble and expense, so that it is placed almost beyond the reach of those who would receive the eatest injury from it. is a most gratifying result and should give fresh encouragement and zeal to was that proh bition in that state in reased drun'tenners. On he strength of that testim us the law was repealed by the state legislature and a stringent license law substituted for it. Now we desire to submit the following as an answer to those who argue that because prohibition failed in Massachu-etts it will also fail in Ontario. It is much more difficult to enforce such a law in the former place than in the latter because the one is situated on the sea shore and the other is not. The great city of Boston is infested for at least nine months of the year, by a class of men that are confessedly more addicted to intemperance than any other, and this is not only true of the metropolis of the state, but applies in a greater or less extent to nearly all the other cities, especially those on the coast. From this evil the province of Ontario is in a great part free. In our opinion the superior intelligence of Ontario is also in her favor, and we say so with all due deference to the grand old Puritan state. From such con-iderations as those we would deem it very unfair to infer that the Scott Act must necessarily fail in Ontario because prohibition could not be enforced in Massachusetts. The numbers arrested on charges of being drunk and disorderly during the years in which prohibition was in force, as well as under the license law re very unfairly commented upon The number of arrests under prohibi is indeed somewhat greater han the number under license. But his fact evident's proves nothing, for he attempt to enforce the act would lead to an unusual number of arrests, and in addition to this the years under prohibition followed closely upon the American war, while those under license were farther removed from it. The years immediately after the was were signalized by lawless acts, such as the Fenian raids and many others of less notoriety. Thus vanish into thin air the arguments of the anti-Scott agitators.

But the scene is changed, and now we are told triumphantly, that Boston has increased in population during three years of license rule by 65,000. But have not other great cities in creased just as much? They have, and the writers of anti-Scott articles. should know it.

To sum up the justice and righteousness of our cause, no one for a moment will attempt to deny. The only question is, whether the act will promote temperance or not. We believe it will, but in order to answer the question satisfactorily, the act must have a trial, and we ask the public to give it that trial. And farmers, we solicit your interest and your vote, because, as has been shown, you will suffer no loss by its passage. But above all, because you are the bone and sinew of our This in itself country, and on you, therefore, the country relies for its physical and moral welfare. Help us, will you not? We trust, we feel confident, your answer is yes.

IDLE HOURS.

WRITTEN FOR THE REPORTER BY C. C. SLACK

Ease is the canker of the earth. Yet fair its paths to wend, see seast and present rings with mirth, But bitter is its end.

Behold the east in crimson dressed, Awake it is the dawn; The harvest ripe awaits thy hand, The day will soon be gone.

We must not wait on fortune's hand To pluck for us the rose,
But strive with labor through the day
To earn the night's repose.

We cannot bid the sun await, Nor stay the hours that fly, Yet we may grasp their precious prize As they go dittering by.

'Tis not in shady bowers with ease.

We find the hallowed goal,

And he who thinks to steal his hire
Is robbing from his soul.

Sin stabs the heart in easy paths, And leaves a wretch to weep;
Fair labor gives a sure reward,
And lulls the soul to sleep.

Conscience shou d not let us feast Upon the bread of toil, then we no drop of sweat have spent To pluck it from the soil.

The earth yet needs ten million men To work for honest pay; The lazy shirks need not apply, They will be in the way.

It needs a Wellington and Wolfe, A Lincoln's hate of wrong, A Wilberforce, a Nelson great, A Shakespeare in his song.

It needs a Watts, a Franklin true, A Luther in his grace, A Luther in his grace,
A Claxton, Stephenson and Burke,
To fill the vacant place.

Yes men to work not men to shirk, But men to take their part, Good men to pray, great men to say, True men with soul and heart.

Then let us all with might and right,
Be worthy of our name,
If not a bright and constant light, A fagot to the flame.

And keep impressed within our breast, Through all our walks abroad, When heavy laden and oppressed, We have a helping God. Welcome Cottage, June 30th, 1884.

Morning Stroll No. 3, Among the Farmersville Industries.

The morning is hot and dry, the parched grass still bears traces of the scanty dew which is rapidly disappearing before the brightening beams of ing before the brightening beams of the eye of the day, the milkmaid's song is wafted along on the dusty atmosphere, accompanied by the joyous refrain of the farmer's whistle as weakl leisurely from our office to the cheese factory of Mr. Williams. Stepping inside we at once exchanged a friendly greeting with the manager of the factory, Mr. Charles Wing.

Understanding this factory to be one of the very best in eastern Ontario, we, naturally, had some curiosity to know how the work is done. The desired information was freely given to us by our kind friend, the operator, and what we learned is now placed before the public.

and what we learned is now placed before the public.

Mr. Wing claims that his process of cheese-making is different from that of any other factory known to him; that it is in fact, the "Wing" process, a method entirely new, and one which he is himself the inventor. He informed us that he has discarded the old acid principle and adopted the oreidation method, by which the gases generated in curding are taken out by generated in curding are taken out by early grinding, the whay being drawn off while sweet. By this method the curd is salted at the first grinding. It is then left in the air for three or four hours at the available for the same at the sam hours, at the expiration of which time it is ground again and immediately afterwards put to press. The curd is also handled with a fork, which is certainly an improvement on the old hand method. Mr. Wing claims that his method makes a close, mellow cheese, one that brings the highest price in the market and is at the same time easily and speedily cured. The time taken to cure is about two weeks. time taken to cure is about two weeks and during this time the cheese must be turned every day. This gives some idea of labor entailed upon the maker. Sales are made every week, so that the patrons are in no danger of losing patrons are in no danger of losing through the spoiling of an imperfectly cured cheese. The curing department is a large airy room up stairs. It is kept in excellent condition, as indeed is the entire outfit and building.

This factory is doing a large business this year, the average make being about twenty a day.

The cheese industry of Ontario is now about twenty years of age. The pioneers in the business in this county are Messrs, Strong, Williams and Karley. The first factory was built by Mr. Strong in the neighborhood of Farmersville. Seventeen years ago Mr. Williams began the work, and two or three years afterwards he was followed by Mr. Karley. Both Mr. Williams and Mr. Karley engaged heavily in the heavings. in the business for a number of years. Their plan was to buy up all the factories they could, run them themselves and then sell the cheese in the English market by agents sent there by them. This expensive and complicated method proved disastrous to many a hardworking and honest man, but the final cheese agent with the crash came ten years ago with the great decline in the cheese market, cccasioned by over-production, inferiorccasioned by over-production, inferiority in quality, and above all, by the depressed condition of all other markets. Since that time the business has been slow, but sure; no great fortunes to be made, but none to be lost. During the past two or three years the trade has been exceptionably good, and this season bids fair to be not behind the others. As far as we can learn, the patrons have now the end of the pudding that contains all the raisins. The owner of the factory gets only so much a pound for making the cheese, and this by competition has become so greatly reduced that the acquiring of wealth by him in this business is now practically impossible.

The tendency of this industry is clearly in the right direction, so far as clearly in the right direction, so fi improved farming is concerned. quires much attention to stock raising. The farmer must set apart a large por-The farmer must set apart a large por-tion of his lands for grazing purposes. This increases the fertility of the soil. In fact in this way he manures his land while he is at the same time reaping large profits from it. These are the advantages, but it has also its disadvantages. Doubtless it diminare the advantages, but it has also its disadvantages. Doubtless it diminishes the quantity and deteriorates the quality of his stock. The milk now goes to the factory which formerly went to the rearing of stock. The truth of this statement is evident when we consider the very greatly increased prices of all kinds of meat. Viewing the industry in the light and the statement is evident when the industry in this light, much of the fancied profits connected with it vanishes. One other thought and we are

A system of farming that requires a farmer to do, on the average, half a day's work every Sunday for nearly six months of the year, is wrong physically, intellectually, morally and religiously. Our heart has frequently been pained to see the long line of from twenty to thirty cows drawn up on Sunday morning and evening with the milkers busily at work on the day that reason busily at work on the day that reason and scripture demand to be set apart for rest and thoughtful meditation.

Our morning strolls have become so pleasant and profitable to ourselves that they will be continued for some weeks at least. weeks at least.

The University Question.

COBOURG, June 28.—The question of the removal of Victoria university of the removal of Victoria university to Toronto is claiming a good deal of attention here at present, and the citizens to a man are opposed to the change. Nor is such a state of affairs to be wondered at. The people of Cobourg have always pointed with pride to their university, and the town takes a high stand by virtue of this institution. It is estimated by those interested that in case the university per box.

is taken to Toronto the town will los an annual revenue of at least $25 000. Among other items this in cludes what the students spend an nually for board, etc.

Said one citizen: "The college commission cannot consent to the

we were given to understand the same thing when we contributed to the building of Farady Hall.

The cost of this institution wa $22,000, of which sum $7,000 was received from the people of Cobour alone.

A member of the faculty was see and said that there is a popular mi-apprehension in Toronto with regarto the whole question. People ther think that in case the university i removed to Toronto it will become a institution for the theological trainin of students. On these conditions the locatian will never be changed. There is no ds position on the part of any of those interested to have the student take all the secular part of the course in the provincial university Such subjects as christian evidence and ethics must be taken in Victoria

"Under those circumstancer wha advantage would there be in remov ing the university to Tolonto?" asked.

"The most expensive part of a uni versity is the options or honor subjects. These our students would bable to take in Toronto university, the same time taking the pass cours in Victoria. The facts as stated may fairly create feeling of alarm with regard to a later crops, though probably the earlier crops are by this time past danger from drought. However, we dare say our weather prophets thin it not at all unlikely that very shortly there may be a movement northway of the rain belt which is now some distance to the south of these last tudes. Much will depend on the next two or three weeks. Indications or rain from the south would be eagerly welcomed now.

IT PAYS.

It pays to make a worthy cause.
By helping it, our own;
To give the current of our lives
A true and noble tone.
It pays to comfort heavy hearts,
Oppressed with dull despair,
And leave in sorrow-darkened lives
One gleam of brightness there.

It pays to give a helping hand
To eager, earnest youth,
To note, with all their waywardner
Their courage and their truth:
To strive with sympathy and love,
Their confidence to win:
It pays to open wide the heart
And "let the sunshine in."

Make Sunshine.

Do what you can to make sunshine in the world. Lift up the curtains. We do not mean the curtains to the room, but the curtains which darken the spirit of your brother, your friend, your neighbor, or even of a stranger, if the curtain strings are within your convenient reach.

Lift up the curtains and let the sunshine in. Light is better than darkness, and how cheap it is! A kind and cheering word to one who is in trouble and is perplexed and almost discouraged, a word of heartfelt sympathy to the afflicted; a word of assurance to the doubting, a "soft word which, though it butters no parsnips, turneth away wrath," to the prejudiced and unreasonably provoked; all such words as these are sunshine to whom they are spoken.

"I have never found anything else so cheap and so useful as politeness, said an old traveler to us once. He then went on to state that early in life, finding how useful it was, quently to strangers, to give them some information of which they were in search and which he possessed, he had adopted the rule always to help everybody he could in such little op portunities as were constantly offered in his travels. The result was, that out of the merest trifles of assistance rendered in this way, had grown some of the pleasantest and most valuable acquaintances that he had ever forme !

How may great men have testified that their whole lives have been influence i by some single remark made to them in their boyhood? And who cannot recall words spoken to himself in his childhood, to which perhaps, the speaker attached no importance, but which sank deep and immovably into his memory, and which have never lost their power over him?

Make sunlight! the world at best is dark enough. Do what you can to make it more cheerful and happier.

It Was Sent to Her House.

A certain pretentious shopper, after teasing the clerks of a dry goods store the forbearance limit, nomn ously ordered a spool of thread to be sent to her house. It was agreed that she should be made an example of, and a warning to her kind, She was surprised and her neighbors intensely interested, shortly after she had arrived at home. After a deal of whip-cracking and other impressive ceremonies, the cart was backed against the curb. There reposing calmly, end up, in the centre of the cart floor, was the identical spool of thread which she had "ordered." seemed to be coming all right. With the aid of a plank, it was finally rolled, barrel fashion, safely to the sidewalk. After a mortal struggle it was "up-ended" on the purchaser's doorstep. The fact that the pur-chaser came out a minute later and kicked her own property into the gutter detracted nothing from it.

Greece, an oriental plane tree whose girth was in 1842, at five feet from the ground, thirty-seven feet. This tree, situated in the middle of the on a raised platform of flat stones, evidently for protection to the roots, is a striking object on entering the village, in I especially noteworthy as existing in the days of Pausanias, the Greek historian, who, living in the second century, makes mention of it in his travels; and the tree must have been of considerable size and age at that time to have made it worthy of remark, its age probably dating con siderably before the Christian era, making it more than two thousand years old. George Slack commenced on Tues day to remove all the fair buildings to the new location decided upon.

The secretary received the unani-mous thanks of the directors for the excellent manner in which his tender for the prize list was done, the presi-dent declaring that the "get up" of the prize list was not excelled by any electoral district society in Ontario.

Mr. Forth, of Unionville, is making paeparations for the erection of extra stalls large enough to accommodate 300 additional horses on fair days, and is also erecting a double verandah and clapboarding his hotel, which, when completed, will make one of the most comfortable hosteleries in the county.

At the close of the directors meeting on Thursday, Mr. Wm. Neilson, president, of the society, tendered an invitation to the officers and directors of the Unionville Fair Association to an excursion on his steam yacht, "Bonnie Belle" from Brockville to Alexandria Bay, Rockport, &c. The invitation was unanimously accepted and Thursday, July 3d, decided upon for the trip.

No paper will be issued from this office next week. We have been so pressed with work since our removal to the village that we have been unable to take a single day for recreation, and as we have several invitations to picnics and excursions for next week, we have concluded to "knock off" for a few days. The paper will be continued regularly after next week.

Several farmers living adjacent to the village have commenced having and report the crop as far below half what it was last year, If the dry weather should continue a few days longer the grain crop will be a failure also. The only thing that seems to thrive this dry weather is the Potato Bug. They are far more plentiful than hens teeth and as friskey as an early spring chicken.

A meeting of the United Methodist congregation of this village was held on Monday evening to decide among other things which church should be used. After a good deal of conversa-tion back and forth, all in good spirit, it was decided for the present, to al-ternate the services and leave the ultimate decision to a disciplinary committee that will meet for that purpose in August or September. For social and public services go to the C. M. church on Thursday, Saturday and Sabbath evenings, also Sunday morninp at 7 o'clock; and to the M. E. church on Wednesday evening and Sabbath morning at 9:30, 10:30 and 12 o'clock.

Our band boys reached home from Lanark village this morning about 7 o'clock, completely "fagged out." They report a splendid time and the best of usage, and in return they did their best to sustain their already high reputation as a first class band and good lot of boys gener lly. Report says that the committee of arangements were so well pleased with the band entertaiment that they paid all their expenses while there and gave them the full amount promised. At the church social last evening the committee cleared $200 at 10 cents admission. Morning Stroll No. 4.

Among the Farmersville Industries.

A few mornings ago we laid aside our pen and stepped out of our "den," fully determined to shake off carking care for a few minutes. Strolling leisurely along we happened to notice a magnificent covered carriage in front of one of our many handsome shops which seemed to say to us: "Please, sir, will you have a ride?" On closer examination, however, we ascertained that this carriage carries people only in one direction, and that no "return tickets" are issued; that its destination is always in front of a narrow and dark house, situated somewhere on "God's acre," where the daisies sleep, when it is evening, on the bosoms of the dead.

Having respectfully declined the kind invitation with thanks, and a promise of compliance at a more convenient season, we entered he slop and at once found ourselves in the presence of T. G. and J. Stevens.

From our friends we learned that their father came to this county from the state of New York about forty-five years ago, and began work in Canada by building what is now known as Mc-Intosh's mills. After this he carried on the joiner business for many years. Thirty-five years since, his eldest son, George, began the joiner and furniture business in Farmersville, it being then the custom to devote half of the year to joiner work and the other half to furniture. After being ten years in the trade, George was succeeded by his brothers, and they have uninterruptedly carried on the business since that time. They have also done undertaking work during the whole of this We were informed that their furniture is bought in Toronto, Woodstock and Napanee, and the coffins in Toronto and Hamilton. The stock carried is valued at about $2,000, and $10,000 a year. the yearly sales amount to nearly $6,000. In addition to goods purmen at work.

uninterrupted, with one exception. atmosphere; each pulsation throbs in the disastrous fire that occurred in our heart and says in language plainer than village one bright Sunday morning two any words ever could, "Work for the years ago last August, which laid the night is coming when man's work is shop and dwelling house of Mr. T. G. done."

Stevens in ashes. The buildings destroyed were at once replaced by new, superior to the old, and fortune now smiles kindly upon our industrious and worthy citizens. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage of the public, and hope that their financial prosperity may be equal to their endeavor to deal honestly with all men.

Having had an enjoyable talk with the Messrs. Stevens, we crossed the street and entered the carriage shop of Mr. D. Fisher. Here a splendid array of carriagas met our view. Our genial friend, the proprietor, kindly allowed us to examine his stock, and, at the same time, in a business-like manner pointed out to us some obvious points of superiority of his buggies over those manufactured elsewhere. Indeed, so lucid were his explanations that we left the shop fully resolved to give Mr. Fisher the job of building our next buggy, provided he would do it as cheaply as anybody else. Mr. Fisher, we are info s worked in Farmersville twenty-three years, beginning as a day-laborer at $8 a month. He now runs a large carriage shop two stories high and 60x30 feet, to which is attached a general blacksmithing shop. His trade is increasing every year; his shops furnish constant employment for ten workmen; he has sold fifty rigs this year and expects to dispose of as many more before the close of the year; he sells about fifty cutters each season, and in addition to all this does a very large amount of custom work in the blacksmith shop. It is his intention, we understand, to build a large two-story brick shop next year.

The greater part of the stuff used in this shop comes from Guelph. A specialty of the buggies made here is the "Champion gear." By means of this method of attachment of the springs to the axles, beauty, durabilty and ease in action are all combined. Mr. Fisher is the only in Ontario who can legally manufacture buggies using this gear. It is at once seen that this gives him a material advantage over other manufacturers of the same article. and it also shows the enterprising spirit of the man who was willing to risk the expense of purchasing a patent right for the purpose of manufacturing a superior article, in order that the work turned out by him might be second to none in the market. All honor to the man who endeavors to make himself king of his profession, be he boot-black

As we leave the premises the sound ringing our ear chased ready to sell, a large quantity The "dinsome clamour" which made is made in the shop, for we found six such music in the ears of the poet Burns, resounds through the building, The success of the firm has been and is carried far away on the shifting Many of our readers will remember unison with the beating of our own

The outlook for holders of wool is decidedly bad. The highest price paid for the best quality is 18 cents, and there is considerable in stock. One firm holds 80,000 pounds. Some firms sold recently at a loss, but feel satisfied had they held it their loss would have been greater.

There are seventeen prisoners in the Kingston jail—nine, men and eight women. Among the men there is one with no feet, one with but one arm, one with only one eye, two luna tics and an old veteran who has only one ear. Such a deformed lot has never been in the jail before. The jailer is proud of them.

S. L. Leighton, of North Passadena, Cal., has killed a lioness which was robbing his corral. An examination of the beast showed her to be a powerful creature six feet three inches long and twenty-eight inches high. She was in fine condition, with claws and teeth in sharp, serviceable order, and weighed about 200 pounds.

A new potato bug has made its appearance in Michigan. It is described as a small, red bug with a black back and small, brown wings. It can fly, although it travels very rapidly on its feet. It does not eat the vines, but has the effect of causing them to wither and die as if bitten by frost or scorched by fire. Paris Green, it is said, does not affect them.

On the evening of the same Richard met Katy Glenn, and noticed with a sudden chilliness about his heart a change in her manner.—She was very dear to him. He had loved her ever since he was a boy—loved her with a steadine s that no coldness on her part, no flirting with other boys. or, as the years went on, other young men, could diminish.—She was pretty, but wayward—the very opposite to Richard Cragan, who was so quiet, re-served and true of purpose. After a long series of tender vicissitudes, of pains and discouragements, of hopeand fears, Richard at last had the in effable happines of giving her the kiss of betrothment. This happened only a short time before his father's death.

A cloud that looked no larger than a man's hand at first now appeared in his sky. But it grew rapidly, and in a little while filled the whole horizon,

"Is this true that I hear?" said Katy.
"What?" asked Richard, his heart falling like lead, for he understood what "It is true," answered Richard.

"What could have possessed you to do this?" said the maiden, all the beauty in her face dying out under the hot flushes of a selfish indignation.

"Because I would rather have the mill and earn my bread by useful work, thon burden my heart and life with evils that are inseparable from tayern

"Pshaw!" ejaculated Katy...in amiable tone. "As good men as you have kept, and still keep tavern. Are you better than your father?"

"I don't set up as being better than any one, Katy," replied the young man, whose face had become very pale; I only determine for myself what I ought or ought not to do. Four of them died years ago—and it is better, that they died. Oh, Katy! try to think and feel as I do. The mill has a good run of custom. I shall improve it in many ways and double its capacity. We shall get along well—trust me for that, and be, oh, so much happier!"—As for me, I should have a restless, miserable, guilty feeling all the time I kept a tavern and sold drink to the young men of our place—hurting all and doing good to none."

"I will have it done up new all over make it the nicest place in the world," said Richard.

"But you'll never put me into it," cried Katy, with a sudden passion in

"You are no.

"I surely am," she replied, tossing her head in a way that hurt and amazed the bewildered young man.

Richard Cragan sat silent and still for a long time. Then, rising slowly, for a long time. Then, rising slowly, and with a quiver of pain running over his pale face, he put out his hand to Katy. She let hers fall into his coldly, not returning by the slightest motion the pressure he gave. "Good night, Katy."

It was all over with Richard and aty. The selfish, fickle and worldly minded girl, whó was incapable of such a love as glowed in the heart of this young man, broke off her engagement and in no less than a year became the wife of his brother Jacob, who installed her as mistress of the "Red Lion," which had been fitted up in the most attractive style, and was known as the best tavern for miles around. Katy had her horse and carriage, her fine clothes, her personal ease and comfort; pride and vanity were gratified in many ways. Yet she was not so happy as she had expected to be. miles above Mallorytown landing-We should judge from the number of persons seen on the grounds and the number of tents pitched on the lawn that Robert has by far the largest share of the crowd that is congregated at the various resorts on the river this season.

The boats prow was soon turned towards the foot of Grenadier island and in a short time we were at the landing opposite the Grenadier Island House, kept by Joe Senecal. Joe and his yacht, the "Catherine" were away up the river, but in answer to our enquires for dinner we were informed tunt in forty minutes our desires in that direction could be gratified. Old foe," as he is familiarly called, has expended a large amount of money in the erection of a large awo-story summer resort, but we found that for some unexplained cause, not a single person outside the family were stop ping at the house. Dinner being an nounced we proceeded to the table where we found the spread a good one and just what a hungry crowd desired to see, plenty-of good, clean, substantial food, served in a plain, old-fashioned manner, and furnished at the very reasonable price of 25 cents.

After spending an hour and thirty minutes for dinner, the we come cry of "all aboard" was again given, and we steamed away among the beautiful islands, dotted here and there with picturesque villas and summer resi-dences. The scene was one of exceeding beauty and would have to be en joyed to be fully a preciated. On landing at the Crossman House dock, Alexander Bay, we were surprised at the small number of persons on the grounds or in and around the village. We have visited this summer resort a dozen or more times and never before was the crowd so small. In fact, there was no crowd, only here and there a stragler.

After a stop of perhaps two hours, we wended our way on board again and the bow of the "Blink Bonnie" turned toward her old moorings. Nothing of particular moment oc-curred until we reached "Coles lighthouse," where we run in and boarded house, where we run in and boarded the wreck of the "Erie Queen" (sighted on our upward trip.) On stepping aboard we found that the cargo, consisting of about 15,000 bushels of wheat, had swollen to such an extent as to lift the entire deck floor from its fastenings, which on examination were found to be entirely rotted away. Our only wonder was-how the old craft held together so long in the gales which it is said she on her down trip. The vessel was deserted, not even a singly watchman being on board. The pr babilities are that the insurance companies will offer the damaged wheat for sale, which will be a good opportunity for our farmer friends to pro-cure a supply for feeding purposes.

After a few moments halt the line was east off and we at once steamed direct for Brockville, at which place we arrived at sundown, every one on REPORTER, warmest thanks to the president for his generosity in placing the "Blink Bonnie" at their disposal for the trip. We do this most cheerfully, as we know that the president spared no trouble or expense to make the trip an enjoyable one. Our only regret was that the trip was not made with a boat sufficiently large to have accommodated a large number of the persons who, no doubt, would have availed them-selves of the opportunity of making a trip up the river under the auspices of the Unionville Fair association.

Among the Farmersville Industries.

A stiff north breeze sent its invigor-A stiff north breeze sent its invigorating influence through our frame as we took the reing in hand and drove over to the post village of Elbe (a small hamlet situated about three miles east of Farmersville). As we passed along our eye caught glimpses of plenty and prosperity. The hay of plenty and prosperity. The hay ment during the past two weeks and now appears to be nearly up to the average. The waving grain presents encouraging prospects and bids fair to produce an abundant harvest. On all sides we beheld sights that gladdened our heart and delighted our eye, for we have lived long enough to know that on the prosperity of the farmers - those lords of creation - depends the commercial well-being of the country.

After a brisk ride of twenty minutes we found ourselves in the cheese flectory of Messrs. Bates & Stowell. The cheese is made by Mr. Charles Wiltse. We learned from him that Wiltse. We learned from him that he gets forty cents a hundred for making, and furnishes all the help required. The factory is fitted up in first class style indeed. As regards appliances, machinery, etc., it is, in our opinion, a little in advance of any factory we have had the please of visiting heartefore. Our attention ure of visiting heretofore. Our attention was called to one or two decided improvements, the chief of which was the stirring of the curd by paddles worked by steam power. This is certainly a considerable saving of labor, for in other factories this work. labor, for in other factories this work is done by hand. We found the buildings all in good condition, every-thing neat and clean and indicative excellent management. Cleanliness in this industry is imperatively necessary, we were informed; inattention to this part of the work would prove most disastrous to the cheesemaker.

wish Mr. Wiltse and the owners of the factory a very large measure of success, and hope that they may long promote the best interest of the farming community and assist in maintaining Ontario's reputation as a cheese-making province.

Crossing over from the factory we stepped into what is known as the Bellamy mills. This mill is now owned by Mr. Harper and is doing a good by mr. The mill is will is mill is mill in the control of the co good business. The mill is run by water power about half the year, and by a 30-horse power engine during the remainder. The mill combines gristing, making flour to sell, saw-mill, shingle-mill and cheese-box facry. The mill books show that the mill has ground 1,106 grists in the last six months, and a trifle over 15,000 bushels of grain from the 14th of January to the 10th of May. They have already sent seven tons of flour to Delta this season, besides sending a large quantity to other places. The proprietors expect to make 11,000 cheese-boxes this year, and are busily at work at present getting out elm logs for lumber. We understand that this mill makes excellent flour, and that it has one of the best run of store to be found anywhere in this part of the country.

The Bellamy referred to in this inscription was the person who built the mills which still bear his name. From other sources we have learned that they were built about the year 1839. After a time part of the family removed to North Augusta, where they built extensive mills. About the year I831 a saw-mill was built near where the grist-mill now stands, and this mill for a number of years did all the sawing that was done in this district, and a year or two later a run of stone for grinding was placed in the basement. The present stone grist-mill was erected about the year

The proprietors finally abandoned this part of their business partly from conscientious scruples and partly because the government license was so high that it was becoming unprofitable. An amusing inci-dent is told by some of the still ex-isting landmarks, of how the thirsty soul sometimes slaked his thirst in those good old days at the fountain head of "barley bree," so dear to the palate of the sons of Scotia. thirsty neighbor dropped into the distillery while the hands were at dinner, and finding neither cup nor dipper at his disposal, was under the dire necessity of lying down on his back and allowing the liquor to pour from the faucet above him into his mouth. As might be supposed, he soon got more than enough, and when the men entered they found our friend still on his back with his hands over his mouth while the whiskey streamed over his face, and he mut tering incoherently, with the politeness peculiar to his country, Not any thank you, if you please (hic!) not any more thank you (hie!)

The temperance meeting in the M. E. church, this place, on Wednesday evening last was not as well attended as it should have been when so able a lecturer as the Rev. D. V. Lucas was to speak. The chair was taken at 8 p. m. by Rev. W. Blair, pastor of the p. m. by Rev. W. Rev. D. V. Lucas then gave a very interesting and instructive lecture, lasting about an hour and a half. Want of space prevents us giving even a short synopsis of the lecture, but if is only necessary to say that the lecture was brimful of facts and arguments in favor of temperance and the Scott Act. Morning Stroll No. 5

Among the Farmersville In dustries.

A stiff north breeze sent its invigor-A stiff north breeze sent its invigorating influence through our frame as we took the reins in hand and drove over to the post village of Elbe (a small hamlet situated about three niles east of Farmersville). As we passed along our eye caught glimpses of plenty and prosperity. The hay of plenty and prosperity. The hay crop has made wonderful improvement during the past two weeks and now appears to be nearly up to the average. The waving grain presents encouraging prospects and bids fair to produce an abundant harvest. On all sides we beheld sights that gladdened our heart and delighted our eye, for we have lived long enough to know that on the prosperity of the farmers - those lords of creation - depends the commercial well-being of the country.

After a brisk ride of twenty minutes we found ourselves in the cheese factory of Messrs. Bates & Stowell. The cheese is made by Mr. Charles Wiltse. We learned from him that Wiltse. the gets forty cents a hundred for making, and furnishes all the help required. The factory is fitted up in first class style indeed. As regards appliances, machinery, etc., it is, in our opinion, a little in advance of any factory we have had the pleasure of visiting heretofore. Our attention was called to one or two decided improvements, the chief of which was the stirring of the curd by paddles worked by steam power. This is certainly a considerable saving of labor, for in other factories this work is done by hand. We found the buildings all in good condition, every-thing neat and clean and indicative excellent management. Cleanliness in this industry is imperatively necessary, we were informed; inattention to this part of the work would prove most disastrous to the cheesemaker.

This factory is making at present an average of twenty cheese a day of sixty pounds each. Prices are not quite so high as they were some time ago, and in consequence of this decline the curing department was all most filled. Mr. Wiltse claims that the cheese on hand are as good as any made, and in support of this he lunched us on cheese and buns. We was an old frame mill on the site of the Scott Act.

stepped into what is known as the Bellamy mills. This mill is now owned by Mr. Harper and is doing a good business. The mill is run by water power about half the year, and by a 30-horse power engine during the remainder. The mill combines gristing, making flour to sell, saw-mill, shingle-mill and cheese-box fac-The mill books show that the mill has ground 1,106 grists in the last six months, and a trifle over 15,000 bushels of grain from the 14th of January to the 10th of May. They have already sent seven tons of flour to Delta this season, besides sending a large quantity to other places. The proprietors expect to make 11,000 heese-boxes this year, and are busily at work at present getting out elm logs for lumber. We understand that his mill makes excellent flour, and that it has one of the best run of store to be found anywhere in this part of the country.

In passing through the Farmersville burial ground we noticed the follow-ing inscription on one of the tomb-stones:—"In memory of Chancy H. Bellamy, born in Cheshire, Connecticut, May 26, 1710; came to Canada in January, 1816. In 1830 he settled in the township of Yonge, and there erected mills and did an extensive business for many years. He died March 1866, in the 76th year of his

The Bellamy referred to in this inscription was the person who built the mills which still bear his name. From other sources we have Tearned that they were built about the year 1839. After a time part of the family re-moved to North Augusta, where they built extensive mills. About the year IS31 a saw-mill was built near where the grist-mill now stands, and this mill for a number of years did all the sawing that was done in this district, and a year or two later a run of stone for grinding was placed in the basement. The present stone grist-mill was erected about the year 1832.

years. The proprietors finally abandoned this part of their business, partly from conscientious scruples and partly because the government license was so high that it was becoming unprofitable. An amusing incident is told by some of the still existing landmarks, of how the thirsty soul sometimes slaked his thirst in those good old days at the fountain head of "barley-bree," so dear to the palate of the sons of Scotia. A thirsty neighbor dropped into the distillery while the hands were at dinner, and finding neither cup nor dipper at his disposal, was under the dire necessity of lying down on his back and allowing the liquor to pour from the faucet above him into his mouth. As might be supposed, he soon got more than enough, when the men entered they found our friend still on his back with his hands over his mouth while the whiskey streamed over his face, and he muttering incoherently, with the politeness peculiar to his country, Not any thank you, if you please (hic!) not any more thank you (hic!)

The general executive committee will meet in Brockville on Thursday, the 24th inst. Vice presidents of the different municipalities are requested to attend if possible, as business of importance is to be brought up for consideration.

The temperance meeting in the M. E. church, this place, on Wednesday evening last was not as well attended as it should have been when so able a lecturer as the Rev. D. V. Lucas was to speak. The chair was taken at 8 p. m. by Rev. W. Blair, pastor of the Methodist church, who in introducing the lecturer of the evening, said that an opportunity would be given any and all persons to speak in opposition to the Scott Act or to ask any questions concerning any of its provisions. Rev. D. V. Lucas then gave a very interesting and instructive lecture, lasting about an hour and a half. Want of space prevents us giving even a short synopsis of the lecture, but it is only space prevents us giving synopsis of the lecture, but if is only necessary to say that the lecture was brimful of facts and arguments in favor of temperance and the Scott Act. THE MILL AND THE TAVERN.

There was no little confidences b tween them-no concessions on his part to her wishes and comforts, but a silent self-assertion that left her wholly out of his business affairs, while in all that concerned her personally he seemed to feel tittle or no interest.

No, Katy was not happy. Far from And as the years went past the esires of her heart were less and desires of he less satisfied.

Richard Cragan took possession of his mill and began refitting, improving and setting things in order. All the light of his life seemed for awhile to have gone out. But his work kept him up. There were not many in the neighborhood who did not call him a foot. But, in his own mind, he never doubted for reported.

doubted or repented.
"Better so," he would often say to himself, "than bear the responsibility himself, "than bear the responsibility of all that"—meaning the tavern. "I take no man's money without giving him what is good in return. My work will not come back to curse me in after years. No father or mother can ever say to me, 'Where is my boy?—ny poor, lost boy, that was led astray in your bar room?' No—no—no! I will give the people bread, and not poison to consume body and soul!"

Richard had no ambition beyond his mill, and the thirty or forty acres of land attached thereto. His first work had been to put it in good order, and year after year he made one improvement after another, until he had the finest mill in all that region, and as much custom as he could possibly attend to.

The miller did not marry. had been his first and only love; his heart never opened to another. Year after year he grew better off; but not with the rapid increase that marked the fortunes of his brother.

But there came a time when things began to change—when the owner of the "Red Lion" grew less attentive to business and more given to sporting and the company of sporting men. A good customer at his own bar, the evil of his work cursed him as well as Poor Katy went home but little comforted, and Richard had a weight of concern laid on his heart that was not to be shaken off.

Later in the day Richard was sur-prised again. This time by a visit from his brother, who had not been at the mill for over two years. Jacob wanted him to go on his note for three hundred dollars.

How a Girl Climbs a Fence. [From Puck.

Did you ever see a girl try to climb fence? It is more of a show than a circus with a whitewashed elephant. This is the way she does it:
First she looks around to find out going to rack and ruin; and if there isn't some change, we'll not have a house over our heads in a year,"

"Which may be the best thing that can happen," replied Richard. A tavern is a curse to all who have an thing to do with it, and the sooner you and your children are out of it, the better."

First she looks around to find out whether anybody is in sight. Then, if the coast is clear, she puts one foot on the second rail of the fence, and looks around again. Then she gives a little hop and gets her other foot up on the second rail. Here she stops to rest and straighten her hat.

The next maneuvre is the critical and straighten her hat.

The next maneuvre is the critical one—to get one foot up over the top rail. She steadies herself for a moment, then gives a quick little upward kick, that does not quite reach the mark, but causes her to jump down on the ground again with a tiny scream and tuck her clothes in all around her. Again she surveys the surrounding country, and agin hops up on the second rail.

This time she is bolder, and throws her foot clear to the top of the fence, where it catches by the heel on the top rail. It is now or never with her then —something must be done instanter.
Grasping the top rail with all her might she pulls herself up until she sits stradle of the fence, with the landscape spread out beneath her like a map. If anybody appear in sight, she just drops off the fence as if she had been shot, and gathers herself up when she gats there. she gets there.

the coast continues clear, she proceeds in a very leisurely manner to get down on the other side of the fence. First she turns around, facing the way she came, and fiels backward with the foot which is already over the fence for a good, reliable rail. Having found such a rail, she plants herself upon it and sets to work to get the other foot over the fence.

This is a very difficult and embarrassing piece of strategy, and a good many girls will sit on top of a fence half a day before they will attempt it. Some even stay there until a horrid man comes along and lifts them off. man comes along and lifts them off. Not so the truly courageous girl—she who is no more afraid to climb a fence than to sit in the same room with a mouse-trap. She will never give up the fort till she gets off that fence in the ancient and honorable manner of her say.

She grasps the top rail and leans as far back as her arms will allow, and then tries to coax the refractory limbs over after her. Alas; it is too long, and so she jumps back a-straddle, with a little laugh and tucks her around her again.

After a brief rest she tries another wrinkle. She lies flat down on her face on the top rail and tries to slide off ideways, as see has often seen her little brother do.

This would all be well enough, and would place her on terra firma again, if she only had the courage to carry out her intention. But just as she is about to slip off pallid fear seizes her. She screams, rights up and straddles the fence once more.

This sort of a thing continue for

This sort of a thing continues for five or ten minutes. Then the fair acrobat begins to get wrathy. She looks at the ground, only three or four looks at the ground, only three or four feet away, and makes up her mind she will reach it some way or die. Die she will have to some time, anyway.

So she settles her hat on her head with a determined look, steps back on the reliable rail, and with a mighty effort draws back ner foot to the very edge of the top rail, like an archedrawing an arrow to the head.

Oh, if it was not for that Frencheel she would be free. But, alas! in holds her with the dull persistency of fate. A look of terror and despaicomes over her countenance; her eyestick out like buttons. She gives a quick, backward leap and lets go.

quick, backward leap and lets go.
What surprise, what delight! She finds herself alighting right side up with care on the soft turf, without so much as a feather jostled in her hat.
She can't imagine how it happened so.
She fully expected to her in her hat. She fully expected to be picked up a complete wreek and carried home to die among her sorrowing friends.

But now that she is really safe and sound upon the dear old earth again, she looks up with upspeakable.

she looks up with unspeakable grati-tude to the clear blue sky; then, brush-ing her skirts and beating them out so that they will hang straight, she vows that should she ever have occasion to cross lots again she will either go in a alloon, or balloon, or else have a young along to pull down the fences.

McLaughlin says he has new goods arriving almost daily, consisting of Men's Woman's and Children's Boots and Shoes in all styles and prices, which he will sell cheap for cash.

A large number of strangers have been in town during the past few days. On enquiry we found that the majority of them were rusticating at Charleston Lake, taking an occasional run up to the village.

Our Band Boys have another call from Brockville, this time to play at the go-as-you-please walking match between McDermot, of Prescott, and Timlec, of Brockville, on Thursday and Friday next.

About seventy-five persons, including visitors from New York, Ogdensburgh and Iroquois, attended a party at "Camp Lookout," the summer residence of R. B. Alguire, Esq., at Charleston Lake, on Monday evening. The grounds were beautifully illuminated with Chinese lanterns, giving the buildings and surroundings a splendid appearance from the water. A qurdrille band was in attendance and dancing was indulged in until the "Wee small hours." A sumptuous repast was served at midnight. Considerable delay ensued at the Duffield. siderable delay ensued at the Duffield house, when the party got ready to leave for home. Horses, Harness and carriages got mixed in an indescribable manner, one horse having the harness changed half a dozen times before the proper rigs were got together.

Dame Rumor says that the morning dew had not left the grass a few days ago when one of the heaviest cit zens of a rural district not a hundred miles from Farmersville, hitched up 'Brown Bessie" to the milk wagon and departed on his daily errand, to his favorite cheese factory. On his arrival there he found several of the neighbors already at the weigh-stand, and hitching his pony to a neighboring fence, he departed to the village postoffice to look after some small matters that needed attention. On returning he drove around to the scales, end on removing the lid of the can found, to his astonishment, that his milk would only require the press hoop to make it into a first-class quality of cheese. The rolite manipulator of the lacteal fluid kindly told our friend that they would prefer to have the milk in a "little thinner" condition, and that it would be necessary for him to return home for a fresh supply. Quickly the horse's passage of the Scott Act."

Rev. Wm. Walton (Methodist), seconded and all haste made towards the onded the motion, which was carried family homestead. On arriving there Lucy was interrogated as to the quantity of soap and elbow grease explanations having been given, our friend finally concluded that some ovil disposed. evil-disposed person had, with mal- tions icious intent, put some ingredient into that can that soured the milk, while some of tne neighbors are unchar-itable enough to surmise that the fault lay solely within that good man's domicile. So firmly was this convictiom impressed upon the minds of some of the neighbor boys that, by way of a polite reminder, a huge board was suspended on an outbuilding on which the following was written: "Clean your can."

SCOTT ACT AHEAD.

[From our own correspondent.]

A grand temperance meeting was held at Merrickville on the 17th inst., at 8 p. m. Some 400 citizens crowded the town Hall. Mr. Benjamin Cooke, ex-reeve of Montague, was on motion elected chairman.

After the meeting had been duly opened with prayer by Rev, F. W. Johnson, his Honor, Judge McDonald, of Brockville, addressed the assemblage. In the course of his remarks the Judge reviewed the Scott Act, its aims and workings, answering all objections to it and proving most conclusively to the vest audience that the clusively to the vast audience that the Scott Act is the best law enacted for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

His able and eloquent address was listened to most attentively, some parts calling forth storms of applause.

Mr. Deacon, police magistrate of Brockville, also addressed the meeting. He has been magistrate of Brock-ville for twelve years, and if the Scott Act is calculated to ruin his business as magistrate, he will vote for it and "go west." He advocated that farmers sell their hops to produce Hop Bitters and not liquors. Hop Bitters is a tonic and would increase the consumption of potatoes, which also would increase the price. During his term as police magistrate of Brockville he had seen that drunkenness produces drunkenness. He strongly and eloquently advocated the Act.

Rev. F. W. Johnson (Presbyterian). who has with all his might entered into the battle field on the side of the Act, declared all must unite as against a common foe. If it is true that the Act is going to make more drunkards and if more whiskey is consumed un-der a prohibitory law, why do tavern keepers raise $36;000 to oppose it?

At this juncture Henry Magee, of Merrickville, well-known to the town and country around as a gentleman ever to the front in every good work, moved a vote of thanks to the Judge and Mr. Deacon, for their most interesting addresses. Stroll No. 6.

Our morning strolls among the in dustries of the village, and surrounding country have become so pleasant and profitable to us that we felt loath to forgo four customary stroll this week to indulge in a more extended trip. But knowing something of the beauties of the resort to which the kind invitation extended us by some of our friends called us, we concluded to deprive ourselves of the pleasure of strolling among Farmersville in dustries and accept the call to visit that now famous picnic ground, Jones' Falls, and while we are supposed to have an eye only to the beautiful in nature, to also keep our to ourselves or readers.

Leaving the village in the early afternoon of Friday last we passed rapidly along the usual route leading to Delta. An examination of the crops on the route convinced us that while the drought of a few weeks ago did immense damage to the crops on light soil, still after the abundant rains of the past fortnight, the crops will be a fair average. On reaching Soperton we found that the postoffice that name had again been opened, we trust this time for all time to come. The need of a postoffice in this section is so great that it seems strange that no permanent place to keep the office can be found. Washburn's cheese factory is located at Soperton four corners, and we should judge from the number of milk wagons that we saw at the factory on our return trip that it is well patronized. Passing on a little farther we came to Sheffield's corners. Here we see that the old blacksmith shop is being utilized as a cooperage. The Methodists have a fine stone church here with ample sheds for horses. Near Sand Hill we come to the new brick residence of N. B. Howard, which is certainly an ornament to that section, and would be to many an older set-tled part of Canada. A new style of wire fencing caught our eye while bridge we were upon one of the finest Rev.'s D. Chown and McDermot, of cality to survey the route for a railpassing, which is a novelty in this section, being composed of galvanized wires woven together so as to form a net work, at once strong and beauti-

Westport railway is built through the village that it will arise from its lethargy and become the head centre of the back country.

A drive of four miles over a hilly, almost mountainous country brought us to the little hamlet of Phillipsville. The same want of enterprise that characterizes its sister village Delta is here. A village the size of either should have good, substantial side-walks, and while Delta may have a tew rods of break-neck deadfalls, her smaller rival, Phillipsville, can not boast of that much enterprise. Pedestrians must hoof it through the centre of the street without even a plank or flagstone.

Sundown found us entering the gate of that snug and tidy farmer Wm. Pennock, Esq., whose residence is situated about two miles northcast from Elgin. William is noted throughout Leeds county as the champion prize winner at the fairs. An inspec-tion of a few of the articles already under way for fair time convinced us that he will again give his opponents a hard pull for the honors this fall.

Early on Saturday morning we were once more in motion and our horses head pointed for the picuic weather eye open to note any points grounds at the falls. On our way of interest that would be of benefit we saw two self-binding respers at work. We are informed that one enterprising agent has sold 22 Brantford self-binders in this section this

Passing through Elgin we had time to notice that the village contained 1 cheese factory, 4 general stores, 1 undertaking and cabinet shop, 1 tin shop, 2 blacksmih shops, 1 tailor shop and several millinery shops, 1 including Zephaniah, the stove man. Our old friend P. Pennock, postmaster, etc., has a very fine little nursery of apple trees. Philemon is a reliable man and any of our readers in want of fruit trees could not do better than give him a call. At 10:30 the Masonic brass band, of Newboro, put in an appearance and played several fine selections while in and passing through the village. The distance from Elgin to Jones' Falls is about four miles. The road is appearance. rough, but there are some excellent farms along the route. Arriving at the Falls, we found that since our last visit a fine bridge about 250 feet long had been built across the river at this point. This with the swing bridge across the canal connects the we find the same old quaint village occasion. Considerable disappoint-that it was 25 or 30 years ago. But ment was felt at the non-appearance we trust that when the Brockville & of the delegation from Gananoque of the delegation from G headed by Geo. Taylor, M. P. How-ever, a strong staff of speakers were present from other places. about one p. m. the public meeting was organized by the appointment of the editor of the REPORTER to the chair, Speeches were delivered by Rev.'s G. A. Bell, J. S. Andrews, N. H. Howard, Dr. Preston, M. P. P., Rev.'s Mr. Dyre and D. Y. Ross. Space will not permit even a synopsis of the speeches, only to say that the speech of Dr. Preston was particularly cherring to us. From him we learned that out over 80 members of the Provincial Legislature not more than twelve or fifteen indulge in intoxicating drinks. The doctor came out strong for the Scott Act and promised to do all in his power to aid in carry ing it to a successful issue.

The band rendered efficient service during the day, and as the shades of evening began to gather around us we wended our way homeward, feeling that another grand impetus had been given to the cause we had so much at heart.

TRIP LIGHTLY.

Trip lightly over trouble, Trip lightly over wrong; We only make grief double By dwelling on it long.
Why clasp woe's hand so tightly? Why sigh o'er blossoms dead? Why cling to forms unsightly? Why not seek joy instead?

Trip lightly over sorrow, Though this day may be dark, The sun may shine to-morrow, And gaily sing the lark; Fair hope has not departed Though roses may have fled; Then never be down-hearted, But look for joy instead.

THE MILL AND THE TAVERN

"I shall be sold out by the sheriff if you don't do it," he said, after a hurried statement of his affairs and the pressing need for money that was upon bim.

Richard was silent for a long time, trying to see what was best for him

"Let the tavern go, Jacob," he said, at length. "It has cursed you from the beginning, and will curse you tenfold in your boys, if you keep it. A sheriff's sale, if it must come to that, will in my opinion, be the most fortunate thing that can happen to you. There are a hundred other ways to make a living. Let the tavern go, and then I will help you in every way that I can. But I should do wrong and hurt you and yours if I should put a single dollar into that wretched, soul-killing concern."

Jacob started up, all on fire with anger. He shook his clenched fist in his brother's face, and cursed him for "a mean, selfish hound."

A sheriff's sale did not take place, but Jacob gave up his inheritance in a compromise with his sporting creditors—gamblers—and went off to a new place, two or three hundred miles distant, and set up parely in the same of the process of the same place. miles distant, and set up another tavern, but in a style far below that in which he kept the "Red Lion."

Years passed and no certain news from his brother and family came to Richard. Once or twice he wrote to him, but got no answer. A lonely man, working on steadily and patiently in his mill, the years crept over him and vied with the dusty atmosphere in which he dwelt in sprinkling his hair with gray. He was spoken of far and near as the kind old man at the mill; and the gossips for once had the truth, when they told the story of his disappointed love, and the mistake of Katy.

Twenty years have gone by since Jacob Cragan sold out the "Red Lion" and moved away. One evening, late in November, Richard sat in his solimore lonely and disquieted than was on which lay dusual with him. stood smiling and hai py before him. He was stirred with feelings that he had believed dead and buried long ago. Then he thought of the tatal eavern which had been given to his brother and how it had blighted all their lives.

"If I had kept it and closed it," he said in a kind of bitter self-accusation, "it might have been so differclosely wrapped up, coming in from the road through his little gate.

"Richard! oh, Richard!" one of them cried faintly, and tried to hurry-farward, but stumbled and fell on the wet ground. In an instant she was lifted in his strong arms and carried into the house.

The voice-how like the old voice that had been for all these years as the sound of music in his soul; but the face, when he looked on it, how changed. Old, shrunken, faded—even haggard! What a wreck! What a transformation!

"I have came here to die, Richard. have no right, but—Jacob?" "Dead."

"Dead?"
"Y's," in a steadier voice.

"How long since?" "Not long; a month. This is Katy, my youngest child. You never saw her before. Richard looked into the girl's face, as the light fell upon it, and trembled. He was back again through thirty years, and Katy, in the sweet Maytime of life, stood before him.

"Dear child," said the old man, as he took her hand and kissed it very

The story that Richard heard that night was sad and sorrowful to the last degree. Both of his brother's sons grew up to be miserable drunkards and died in the prime of manhood. His oldest daughter married their bar-keeper, who broke her heart and then deserted her. She was dead. Three children were left and were now with the husband's parents, who were low people and not fit to have charge of them.

"There is room here for all," said Richard Cragan, when the sad history was told. He asked no particulars about his brother's life and death, and Katy did not intrude them. A week later and the last day of another mortal life was closed. Dark and stormy had been the years that preceded this dying day; but as the sun drew near the western hills the clouds broke suddenly and golden rays came flooding the earth and brightentary home, while the wind and rain sobbed and signed without, feeling Cragan could do to soften the pillow on which lay dying his early and only

Richard Cragan kept his word to the dying one. Katy's daughter and grandchildren were taken to his home. Their presence gave new life to the old mill, and a new grace and charm to his dwelling that filled his soul with a sweetness once dreamed of, but never tasted before.

It was a pleasant sight to see them all together in the waning summer afternoons, gathered about the mill door, after the great wheel was still, and the air no longer jarred by the rumble of machinery. rumble of machinery. There was peace and sweet content; and hope for the young lives over which, when their morning broke, dark clouds hung and threatened.

An Open Letter to Dr. Addison.

My DEAR DOCTOR:-My attention has been directed to your poem entitled "Wine Medically Considered." I have read it with some care, but find it difficult to attach any definite meaning to the disjointed thoughts scattered throughout it. It appears to me a mistake that you should attempt to place before the public your valuable medical knowledge in the form of Didactic poetry has never been in high favor, and it must necessarily become exceedingly insipid when medical instruction is the aim of the poet.

The first line "Bacteria in you treacherous fount," is misleading, for the organisms producing fever are not found in pure water, as fount implies, but in stagnant water impregnated with the products of all kinds of offal. So with "Bacilli" and "micrococci." It is well known that the primary cause of fevers, cholera and other epidemic diseases, is improper sewerage. No "treacherous fount" is bringing death to the citizens of southern France at the present time, but the accumulation of filth and dirt is.

The following verse, in my opinion, is peculiarly meaningless:

"Oh, destiny cruel round our path To call sweet buds of hope to-day, And then create the ankering worm To eat each blossom all away.

Allow me to place opposite this the opinions of two men who endured great troubles with Christian tortitude.

"God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."—[Cowper. 'Trouble springs not from the dust, Nor sorrow from the ground,

But ill on ills by Heaven's decree In man's estate are found."—[Job. Here we have nothing of "cruel destiny," but a loving trust in the absolute justness of the author of all

The love of life is one of nature's laws. By it nature protects herself. It wrings our hearts with indescribable anguish to part with our loved ones, because God has planted such feelings in our breast, but those very feelings prove that separation is only for a short space. In support of this statefreshness and sweetness of girlhood-content, the woman died-died with ment I shall quote the eloquent words

"There are affections, pure and holy springing up on earth, but not allowed to be gratified on earth, but which, we hope to be satisfied to the full in heaven. There are attachments and profitable friendships firmly clenched only to be violently snapped asunder by the stroke of death, but which we expect to have renewed in a place where there are no breaches. Do not these swelling feelings which agitate the bosoms of friends when one of them is summoned away, seem to show that the divided waters are yet to meet? Then we see from time to time intellectual powers cultivated to the utmost, but blasted in the flower when they seemed to promise a large fruit. May we not believe that in a universe in which nothing is made in vain, and nothing of God's workmanship lost, these powers have been nurtured to serve some great and good end in a future state of existence?

Turning from the philosopher to the poet, I find Longfellow (and he parted with his dearest earthly treasure in noon of his life), pouring out his whole soul on this subject, in the following lines:

"The air is full of farewells to the dying, And mournings for the dead; The heart of Rachel for her children crying,

Will not be comforted. Let us be patient! These severe afflictions Not from the ground arise, But oftentimes celestial benedictions Assume this dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors

Amid these earthly damps, What seems to us but sad funereal tapers, Maybe heaven's distant lamps.

There is no death! What seems so is transition; This life of mortal breath

Is but a suburb of the life elysian, Whose portal we call Death." O, doctor; do you not think your lines are cold and comfortless? Longfellow tells us "there is no death," but you talk of "desolation everywhere." Dear doctor, excuse me for speaking so plainly, but I must say that the sentiments of those good Christian men vibrate in unison with my every thought and feeling, while yours pro-duces only discord. I love to think of "transition" from a world of sin and sorrow to a realm of endless felicity, but "desolation" always fills me with gloomy forebodings. Dismissing your pessimism and turning to the wine question, I find you

"If fermentation's in the blood, And heart and health and strength decline, Lo, to such process turn, behold Salvation to the sick in wine!

Here again I place opposite poetry extracts from high authorities.

Prince Henry (after drinking alcohol): Speak! speak! Who says that I am ill?

I am not ill! I am not weak! The trance, the swoon, the dream is o'er!

-Longfellow's Golden Legend.

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is e that is deceived thereby is not wiser-[Bible.

Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath bab-blings? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like an serpent and stingeth like an adder.—[Bible.

True, Paul said: "Take a little wine for thy stomach's sake and thine after infirmities." But he also said: "If meat make my brother to offend I shall eat no meat while the world standeth.'

This last text must either go out of the bible or the wine bottle off the table; the text will not move so the bottle must.

I have placed those passages before you for your candid and impartial consideration, and now, doctor, with all due deference to your superior knowledge, I shall speak plainly to you concerning this very important discussion.

I admit that wine (and other fer-mented liquors) may be useful as a spedicine in many cases, but I am entirely opposed to its indiscriminate use for such purposes (or any other). I fear, indeed, I know, that in numerous instances the patient avoids Scylla by falling into Charybdis. He escapes on trouble only to encounter a greater. The appetite for strong drink is frequently created by an injudicious continuance of the use of liquors for medicinal purposes. This appetite is the most terrible of all diseases; for it ruins body, mind and soul; hence the use of wine, even medicinally, is open to serious objections. I doubt not that of bighways to see that all such pays. to serious objections. I doubt not that of highways to see that all such nox-mankind would be better without it. The growing opinion is that if ever it the growing opinion is that if ever it they too.

will kill the bacteria of typhoid fever. Would you be so kind as to inform the community what are the organisms that produce "wine fever" and delirium tremens, and what will kill them.

How is it that man may slake his thirst at the crystal fount day after day and year after year, for a whole life time and no appetite is formed, but if he uses wine he becomes, eventually, an unwieldy mass of corruption, with all his nerve gone, his mind sla tered his once god-like form transformed almost to the image of a brute. And in the face of all this you call wine a "grateful boon!" And Why? Because it kills all "reptiles," you say. But it kills all "reptiles," you say. But then, my dear sir, it kills man, too. I shall not "grant its use" and then I have no fear of its "abuse."

The last four verses are so illusory that it seems to me you must have written them while making a crusade upon bacteria in your own blood.

You wail out:-

"And worst of all coercive law Enforcing man to live a child, No longer free; a slave, a thing, Forever in rebellion wild.

But the Christian poet exultantly exclaims:

"He is the freeman whom the Truth makes free.'

This is a freedom which the law cannot take from any one. Do you complain because the law compels a man to become a useful, or at least, harmless citizen? In the making of laws society only protects itself. No law so far as I am aware, "enforces man to live a child." How you arrived at such a conclusion I cannot determine.

To conclude, dear doctor, I sincerely trust that when you again feel the spirit of poetry upon you the optimist may prevail over the pessimist, and that as the kaleidoscopic views of human life and passions pass in view before you, this still small voice may ever whisper in your heart the music of that "harp of thousand strings, spirits of just men made perfect.'

I have the honor to be, Your sincere friend,

VERITAS.

Six o'clock has come again. Our days work is finished. We hurriedly brush off the outer man and replenish the inner then out heast before the inner, then put our beast before the wagon and start out for a breath of fresh country air and a hearty shake hands of the many intelligent farmers found in the vicinity of Farmersville. Taking a run across the country in the direction of Addison, we reined up in front of the residence of Mr. C. Stowell. front of the residence of Mr. C. Stowell. Knowing Mr. Stowell to be one of the owners of the Elbe cheese factory, the opportunity seemed to us to be a fitting one to inspect his herd of cows. We were fortunafe in arriving at the farm while the milking was being done. There were drawn up in line twenty very fine animals in the pink of condition. Mr. Stowell evidently has an eye for the beautiful, for we never saw a finer looking lot of cows than he eye for the beautiful, for we never saw a finer looking lot of cows than he possesses. The complete outfit also indicates refined taste and superior in-telligence. The cows are milked in a well-covered open shed having a saw-dust floor, which is kept scrupulously clean. By an ingenious contrivance each animal is secured in the shed so that the milkman does not lose any time chasing the cow while he is milktime chasing the cow while he is milk acres. He grows grass and hay principally. No grain is grown to sell only sufficient to feed the stock. When pasturage becomes scarce the cows are fed bran. Sometimes correctly Mr. Stowell's farm consists of 170 fed bran. Sometimes cornstalks millet are substituted for bran. It not unusual for him to feed from three to four tons of bran during the sum-mer season. In his opinion cheese-making is the most profitable kind of labor the farmer ever engaged in.

Mortgages are yearly becoming scarcer since the advent of the cheese-factory.
Mr. Stowell informed us that his twenty cows would give over $700 worth of milk this season. This is sufficient to show the great profits realized by the farmers. No calves are raised here. It is found more profitable to buy cows than raise stock. This we deem the greatest weakness in this system of farming. We were told that stock had nearly doubled in value question in our mind was how long will it be before Mr. Stowell will find it profitable to raise stock.

On looking over the farm we found the same thrift and neatness carried into every part of it. No noxious weeds were to be found, and this was something truly astonishing. And stranger still every field was devoid of stones. Only those who are, or have stones. Only those who are, or have been, farmers can corectly estimate the amount of labor necessary to put a farm into the excellent condition here described.

The trim rows of trees in front of and around the house, the neat and and around the house, the neat and tidy farm house securely sheltered in their midst, the grass-covered lawns and gravel walks all midicate the esthetic bent of mind of the occupants.

Mr. Stowell, we believe, is tilling the farm on which he was born. His father, when a young man, left his home near Boston, and came to Can-ada. He taught school for a number of years and finally settled on the farm now owned by the subject of our sketch. The shade of "Miles Standish, the captain of Plymouth," rose up before us as we looked into the kind and genial face of our friend, and as we recalled to our mind the well-known lines.

"Short of statue he was, but strongly built and athletic, broad in the shoulders, deep-chested, with muscles and sinews of iron. Brown as a nut was his face, but his russet beard was already flaked with patches of snow, as hedges sometimes in November."

as hedges sometimes in November."
Our fancy wandered far back to "the old colony days," and we saw the gallant Mayflower rocking idly at rest in Boston harbor, and Plymouth Rock crowded with those who left their native country for conscience sake to seek a home in the wilds of New England.

Truly, thought we, as we drove off from the home of our host, times are changed since then, but the face of man remains the same. The same solar look glows on the countenance of the good man and true, as lit up the faces of the Pilgrim Fathers when cast weary and worn on the friendly shores of the New World.

Anti-Scott Acl Meeting. Yesterday evening the opera hou of Brockville was densely packed by respectable and attentive audience respectable and attentive audience to hear a discussion on the merits and defects of the Scott Act. Although the meeting was called by the Anti-Scott Act party, it was evident to the most careless observer that it was reality a Scott Act audience. At 8:17 o'clock Mr. E. King Dodds and his satellites entered the hall. The cheers that greeted them were so faint hearted and fitful that any enthusiasm in favor of the Anti-Scott men at once became of the Anti-Scott men at once became opeless. Mr. John McMullen took the class without any preliminaries, and osten-tatiously announced his intention of giving both sides a hearing; which, justice to the gentleman, we are happy to say, that he did without fear, favor or partiality.

Mr. Bell, of Dundas, then addressed the meeting for half an hour. He attempted to show that the Scott Act does not promote temperance, and claimed that he is, and always was, a temperance man. The Act had proved a failure elsewhere. It had been two years in force in Halton and still liquor was sold in large quantities through the druggists. The Act was all wrong in principle and worse in practice, for the drinking habits of the people were worse under prohibition than under a license law. The failure of prohibi-tion in various parts of the American union proved that it would be a failure in Ontario. The Act would stop the sale of beer to a great extent, but this beverage would be replaced by the more injurious drinking of ardes spirits. More people become drumow in Halton than before the passage of the Act. of the Act. The Act ruins busine, and does not stop drinking. The speaker would do his best to defeat the Act because he believed it injurious the best interests of the country. If opposed the Act conscientiously.

Mr. Bell spoke with apparent earn estness, though we fail to understand how a person as intelligent as he appears to be could mistake his plausible sophistics. sophistries for solid and convinci:

rguments.
The Rev. Mr. Bailey, of Aultsville The Rev. Mr. Bailey, of Aultsville, was next called upor, to speak in favor of the Act. The reverend gentleman began by saying that he was speaking to free men. Mr. Bell he said was the paid agent of brewers. He held the so long as parties had to go out of the county for liquor as much could not possibly be drunk as when they had non hand. In his opinion one saloon in Brockville sells more liquor than all the druggists in Halton. He state. the druggists in Halton. As we stood gazing upon the turbulent crowd, an old man of majestic bearing came to the front. "Upon his brow command sat throned screne," but it was only the ghost of his former self, for intemperance had made deadily ravages upon his once brilliant intellect and now the beams of cultivated telligence struggled fitfully through the mists of dissipation that obscured his mental vision.

This person we learned to be one of the champions of the anti-Scott Act party, and that he was now to deliver the opening ode of the campaign. For want of a better platform a huge whisky barrel was placed in proper position and the "speaker of the evening" mounted this rostrum and delivered himself as follows:—

Anti-Scott Act Meeting.

Yesterday evening the opera house of Brockville was densely packed by a respectable and attentive audience to hear a discussion on the merits and defects of the Scott Act. At 8:15 o'clock Mr. E. King Dodds and his o'clock Mr. E. King Dodds and his satellites entered the hall. MURDER WILL OUT.

Some ten or twelve years ago a ter rible and mysterious murder was committed at a quiet little village in one of the Midland counties. This place it will be convenient to designate as Leland. The local police used their utmost efforts to discover the perpetrator of the crime, but, as their exertions were attended with no result whatever, I was sent down from Scotland Yard to take the matter in hand.

The following is a resume of the main facts in connection with the

On the afternoon of the first of June at about four o'clock, a gentleman walked up to the "Reindeer," the principal inn at Leland, and secured a bed there for the night. He was a tall, handsome-looking man, apparently about five and thirty years of age.

He carried a fishing rod and a small black bag, and from the fact of his making inquiries respecting the rivers of the neighborhood, it was conjectured that he was on a fishing excursion.

He dined at seven, and after leaving instructions with the "boots" to call him at six the following morning, he retired to his room shortly after ten.

The night passed as usual, nothing whatever occurring to alarm the occupants of the inn, and at the appointed hour next day the "boots' proceeded to the visitor's bedroom for the purpose of awaking him as arranged.

He knocked several times and called out the hour, but failing to elicit any reply, he tried the handle with a view to entering the room, but the door was locked. He again knocked violently and shouted loudly through the keyhole, but still to no purpose.

Actuated now by a vague feeling of alarm, he summoned his master, and the latter, finding it utterly impossible to rouse the stranger, burst open the door and entered the room.

Here a terrible sight prese In the bed, the clothes half turned down, was lying the stranger, stark and slain while asleep, and had died with-

His black bag, which he had taken to his room with him, was missing, there was not a single coin in his pockets, and a gold watch and chain and several rings-which a waiter was certain he had noticed the preceeding evening—were also nowhere to be found. Hence it was inferred, and very naturally, that plunder had been the object of the crime.

The window was wide open, and through this, as the door was locked on the inside, the assassin must have entered the room. Repairs were going on in another part of the premises and a ladder which had been left standing against one of the walls by the work-men had been shifted and placed close to the murdered man's window. Here it was found in the morning, and by it the murderer had undoubtedly as-cended and made his escape.

The deceased clothes were carefully searched but nothing calculated to three any light on the crime could be foun It was impossible, too, to ascertain his name or position, for his linen was un marked, and no letter or scrap of paper of any kind was to be discovered.

Pending the coroner's inquest, a large reward was offered for the apprehension of the murdeter, and the police left no stone unturned in their endeavors to unravel the mystery. But, as I have already remarked, failure, absolute failure, attended their exertions

The little they were able to discover amounted to this: A porter at the station identified the stranger as having reached Leland on the 1st of June by the 3:30 train from Byfield (this was a market town eighteen miles distant). He was certain of this fact, and also of the date, for this reason: His wife had come from Byfield on that and by this train; she and the gentleman in question were the only passengers, and when he took the tickets he noticed that the latter's was marked Byfield, and was struck by the slight coincidence of both the solitary arrivals having come from the same

Inquiries were at once instituted at Byfield, and soon the proprietor of a hotel in that town came forward and r cognized the deceased as having stayed three days in his house, from the 30th of May until the 1st of June. He had announced it as his intention of remaining for a much longer period, but after luncheon on the last-mentioned day, he called quite unexpectedly, for his bill, and took his departure shortly after two. But as to who the gentleman was or where he came from, the landlord could not afford the slightest clue.

To those who held that the Act deprived people of their liberty, he would say that all law is against personal liberty. Liberty is the privilege to do what is right. The thief or the murderer is deprived of his liberty, and so the should the manufactures of too, should the manufacturers of liquors.

The Anti-Scott men talk about moral suasion. They say that the true temperance man should persuade the people not to drink, but do they do it? They never do.

He was in possession of reliable information from Halton and was happy to inform the meeting that business had not been injured and if the act were again voted upon in that county he believed it would be sustained. Out of forty one constituences where it had been submitted it had been carried in thirty four. Oxford one of the largest and most intelligent coun-ties in the Province had carried the act by a majority of 750. Arthabasca, a Roman Catholic County, had carried it by 1200. Behold the headwriting a Rollan Catholic County, had carried it by 1200. Behold the handwriting on the wall! Gentlemen of the Anti-Scott Act party your doom is sealed. [Great cheers.] His opponents say the Act grinds the poor. It gives liquor to the rich, but keeps it from the poor. This is well.—No poor man can afford to buy liquor. If he does so he robs his family and wastes his money on that which is worse than worthless to him. (At this stage an old bummer rose excitedly and shouted in hoarse and sepulchral tones: "How do you know?") It is but fair to the party to say that he appeared to be drunker than usual. [Great confusion. Two or three drunk men.gave so much annoyance to the speaker that he suddenly left the platform in disgust. This caused considerable confusion, and upon the chairman rising to pass some remarks, not at all complimentary to the reverend gentleman, he was rigorously hissed by the audience.

The speaker of the evening, Mr. E. King Dodds, now came forward to deliver his oft repeated lecture. Mr. Dodds followed closely upon the tracks of Mr. Bell. The arrests for drunkenness in Halton are more numerous than in Russel. From 52 to 56 quarts of whisky have been sold by one druggist in a single day. Brandy, rum and whisky are sold instead of beer, because the bulky article cannot be concealed so easily as spirits. The arrests for drunkenness in Portland. Maine, are more numerous than in the city of Hamilton. The one has prohibition the other a license law. The inference deduced is that prohibition increases crime. The state of Maine is not progressive. Prohibition is the cause. The arrests for drunkeness are very numerous, all due to pro-

The speaker went on to say that liquor could not be bept out of the North.west Territory, and that breweries must be creeted to supply a tell want. The unpopularity of the law was then dealt with. In the opinion of the speaker no comparison can be instituted between the criminal law and a prohibi-tion law. The one is respected, the other is not. The Scott Act cannot be enforced because it is unpopular.

The hotel keepers, &c., of Brockville pay into the public purse $3,100. The total amount received by Brockville from the liquor trade is $4,300, while the united counties receive $9,000. If the Scott Act passes this money must be raised by direct taxa-

Mr. Dodds next stated that temperance hotels were not patronized by temperance people, because such hooses do not pay, and, therefore, the accommodation is inferior. When temperance men keep hotels they are the people of the state of the second for selling liquor. invariably fined for selling liquor. This proves the hollowness of their pretentions. Since the repeal of the prohibitory liquor law in Massachusetts the sale of strong drink has been reduced, while the license law brings yearly into the treasury $240,000. Prohibition brought liquor into the family. The license law has sent it back to the hotel. Since the repeal of the law the yearly arrests have decreased from 19,800 to 14,263. Murders have also dereased. Prohibition has not decreased crime in Massachusetts. But the increase is in the ratio of 82 to 202. The working man saves more under the license law, and even the schools are twenty five per cent better in Ontario than in Maine. The Dunkin Act proved a failure, and it is hopeless to expect better results from the Scott Act.

Here the speaker appealed to the principle of liberty. Has society degenerated so that a man shall not be allowed to drink what he will? Shall the people of free Ontario imitate the oppresive laws of Queen Elizabeth and the Puritans of New England? Surely the people of Ontario are too intelligent to pass the Act. The liberty of the franchise should be held sacred. People should act for the welfare of the country. The Act is tyrannical. Bury it!

But beneath this exterior of pleading. But beneath this exterior of craft and duplicity the penetrating observer may obtain glimpses of the true inwardness of the man. The cold crafty man of the world is occasionally visible under the polished and superficial friend of the poor, and champion in the cause of freedom. While he is talking most eloquently upon the injustice of depriving the "poor man" of his beer, we cannot keep from our mind the thought that he is the hireling of the men whomake the poor man's beer. The mathematician who would say cannot solve that problem because have failed to do so would never ac-complish much; and if we, in Ontario fold our arms and say it is of no use to work for prohibition because it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting, inMaine, then of what use is our excellent educational sys tem, our schools, and our colleges; where is our boasted intelligence of which we are so justly proud. MURDER WILL OUT.

Such was all the information that the police despite their utmost endeav were able to collect.

The day after my arrival the inquest was held, and a verdict of "wilful murder against some person or persons unreturned; and no one appearing to identify the autortunate victim, he was quietly buried in the parish churchyard. But, previous to this being done, the precaution was taken of having his face photographed.

After having an account of the measures taken by the police, I proceeded to make a minute inspection of the clothes of the deceased.

Coat, waistcoat and underclothes underwent a most searching examination, but to no purpose. I now took up the trousers, and after exploring and turning out the pockets, I pursued the same course with regard to the trousers themselves. As I did so, something white dropped to the floor.

To pick it up and inspect was the work of an instant.

It was a piece of white calico tied round with a string—was, in fact, neither more nor less than a bandage. It was stained with blood, and had unquestionably dropped from a wounded finger. I unfolded it and found that it had originally formed part of a shirt. This fact was patent, for there, in marking ink, was the name of the person to whom it belonged, viz., "X. X. Noll." Now, none of the deceased's fingers were injured in any way, so I lost no time in inquiring who had had lost no time in inquiring who had h it had originally formed part of a s access to the clothes since the tragedy; imparted the following information: and finding that no one had touched "One evening towards the end them but the landlord of the "Rein- May, a merry party of travelers were deer," his waiter and two police, I assembled at the "Wolf." Champagne talked about de support which to the matter. Having been assured to the belonged before twelve Mr. Edward Brandard, in singin 'Nearer, My.God to ' made a most valuable discovery.

But my hopes were soon dashed to the ground.

Notwithstanding that I had prosecuted my search in every possible direction, nowhere could I light upon the mysterious name, "X. X. Noll," nor meet with anyone who had ever heard of a name rejoicing in these strange initials and surname.

Day after day glided by, and finding at last that I was no farther advanced towards unraveling the mystery than at first, I gave up the matter in despair and started back for London.

Now, it was that accident, the merest chance whatever, came in the most signal manner to my rescue.

I had proceeded some forty miles on my return journey, and the train, having stopped some minutes at a large station, was just beginning to move again. I was listlessly gazing out of the carriage window, when my eye was suddenly attracted by something which caused me to hurriedly clutch my carpet-bag and leap like a madman

Thrusting on one side a porter, who began remonstrating with me on the danger I had just incurred, I hastened to examine that which had caused me to act as I had done.

I found I was not mistaken.

There, straight before my delighted eyes was an advertisement board respecting the "Wolf Inn" at Harleyford. This, I read, was replete with every convenience. etc., and the proprietor was X. X. Noll.

I was very active, rest assured, in ascertaining where Harleyford was located, but it was only through perseverance that I got the desired informa-tion. Every person I met was ignorant of its locality, till at last, in despair I studied a railroad map of the United Kingdom, and there, in an obscure corner of an obscure county, the borough of Harleyford was made out.

The train to connect with the road leading thither soon came puffing into a the depot, and eight o'clock that even ing found me in front of the "Wolf

The landlord was standing on the steps when I entered, and one glance as trabblin de swift road to percishum. at his fat, jovial visage was enough to convince me that he was no murderer.

I betock myself to the coffee-room, and, in the course of a short conversa-tion with a waiter, I elicited from him that X. X. Noll, a jolly, thirsty soul, was by no means the commanding officer in the establishment, but that there was a Mrs. X. X. Noll who discharged the duties of the arduous post.

I deemed it advisable, then to ignore X. X., and to send and ask his good lady for a private interview. This was to either of them, I no longer doubted of the great firm of Duffman & Co., that it had fallen from the finger of London, had the misfortune to severely the murderer, and that I had in it cut one of his fingers with a broken glass. He at once made his way to Mrs. Noll and asked her help in the matter. Not being able in the hurry of the moment to find material for a suitable bandage and as the blood was flowing copiously she hurriedly tore a piece from an old worn-out shirt of her husband's, and with this bound up the wound."

Finding that the shirt in question was not yet cut up, I asked to inspect it, and on applying the portion I had brought with me, it was at once seen to be the identical piece that had been Armed with this most vital piece of evidence, I lost as little time as possible in quitting the good town of Harleyford; but previous to doing so I gleaned all the particulars I could respecting Mr. Edward Brandard, and I ascertained that he was a young man of about eight and twenty, and in receipt of a goodly salary from his employers.

This last intelligence materially strengthened a hazy suspicion which had existed in my mind from the outset, viz., that some other motive than mere robbery had actuated the murderer. The evidence of the Byfield waiter had made a great impression on me, and I could but believe that the murdered man's evident fright and sudden departure from the town had been caused by a rencounter with some Stroll No. 8.

The dissolution of the English parliament of 1629 marked the darkest hour of Protestantism whether in Enland or in the world at large. But it was in this hour of despair that the Puritans won their noblest triumph. They turned, to use Canning's words, to the new world to redress the balance of the old. It was during the years of tyranny which followed the close of the third parliament of Charles First that the great Puritan emigration founded the states of New England. A hundred states of New England. A hundred years pass by and the hand of destiny again appears on the page of history. The few straggling settlements along the western shore of the misty Atlantic have increased to nearly three million souls but the grain of liberty. lion souls, but the spirit of liberty burns as brightly in the breast of that three million as it did in the hearts of Britain acted tyran-he colonists. Threetheir forefathers. nically towards the colonists. Three-fourths, at least, favored resistance by force of arms, but a respectable minority opposed such extreme measures bethe opposed such extreme measures be leving that it was no less their sacred duty to "honor the king" than to "fear God." After a protracted struggle England was forced to acknowledge the independence of the American nation, and then followed the needlessly harsh and cruel treatment of those who had remained true to the mother country during the contest. In some states they were deprived of the right of the franchise, in others their property was also confiscated, while in others still they were banished forever from the land of their adoption. Such heartless land of their adoption. Such heartless cruelty droye 25,000 people from the young American republic. About half of them sought a home, in what wasthen in reality, the wilds of Canada, where they were liberally provided for by that government to which they had adhered with such unswerving loyalty. Just one hundred years ago the first hand of weary pilorins crossed the band of weary pilgrims crossed the River St. Lawrence and began to make a home in what is now the county of Leeds.

Leeds.

Such were the thoughts passing through our mind as we talked with our respected friend, Uncle Arza Parish, about the early history of Farmersville and the country around it. From Mr. Parish we gleaned some facts which are now placed before the public. Mr. Pari h's father was a U. E. Loyalist, having emigrated from Massachusetts to Canada in 1791. He was the first person to drive a team from Jesse Lamb's to Wiltsictown where he settled in the same year; thus being the tirst settler in the township of Yonge. Fiftyone years ago last January Mr. Parish moved to our village when he built, as moved to our village when he built, as a residence, the house now known as the Armstrong hotel. He has done business continuously in the village, as a general merchant, since 1846. It may be food for reflection to note that there is not one person in the village now who was here when he came. Mr. Parish has been postmaster in Farmersville for 35 years, thus receiving his appointment from the British govern-He was also a member of the township council before the division of Yonge into front and rear. Our High Yonge into front and rear. Our High School owes a great deal to his untiring energies (united for many years with those of the late Harmonious Alguire), for he has been a member of the Board of Education ever since the establishment of the High School 24 years ago. The Canada Methodist church, of this place, is also largely indebted to him, for he has been one of its most respected and influential officers for 40 years. In business Mr. Parish, has ever displayed the same conscentious honesty and truthfulness as liave characterised his religious and educational actions. Hence, his comeducational actions. Hence, his commercial life has been in the truest sense a success, and when the pen drops for-ever from the hand of the aged sire, his son will take full possession of the business, superior to any other with which we are acquainted. In politics Mr. we are acquainted. In politics Mr. Pasish has always been a true and consistent member of the Reform party.

Leeds was represented by the coarse, noisy Ogle R. Gowan. On one occasion returning from Delta, where the votes were being polled, Mr. P. and a friend were followed by a number of their political opponents armed with stones and other harmless weapons. Believing that discretion is the better part of valor, especially when the enemy outnumbered them by three to one, our friends quickened their pace, but their pursuers walked faster. They then broke into a run and in a few minutes overtook a friend on horse back. Mr. Parish being the lighter of the two was allowed to cling on behind and the horse though thus heavily laden carried them safely beyond the reach of the reach. them safely beyond the reach of the enemy. But, alas, for the pedestrian fugitive, he was overtaken by the Gowan men and beaten almost to death. Many other episodes of a similar nature could be given; but we forbear. It is not well to open old sores. "Let the dead past bury its dead," and let us live in peace and harmony with all men while we "render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

MURDER WILL OUT.

(Concluded from last Issue.)

Now, the evidence of Mrs. Noll would Now, the evidence of Mrs. Non would undoubtedly go far towards bringing the crime home to Brandard, but still my experience had taught me that it would be well to try and secure some further proofs of his guilt before taking him into custody.

I accordingly made my way once more to Byfield, feeling confident that I should hear something of my man in place. My work here was certainly of a satisfactory character. I as-Certained that Byfield was a town in Brandard's round; that he was due, and had arrived there on the 1st June, but that instead of staying the night at the head commercial inn there, as he usually did, he had left there in the usually did, he had seed course of the afternoon.

But here the trail ceased. Despite my utmost efforts, I could not ascertain he had gone. Failing how, or when, he had gone. Failing here, I enquired at the next town on his route; this, I learned, was a place about twenty miles distant and some ten miles to the west of Leland. Arriving here, I soon found that Brandard, due on June 2nd had a some ten miles to the west of Leland. due on June 2nd, had reached there that day, and had transacted business as usual. As I could find no trace of him at the station, I could but infer that after the committal of the murder he had made his way over from Byfield

Here I was told, too, that by this time he would be back again in town; and as I now thought it high time that I had a look at him, I returned to London myself.

I first saw him at a billiard room in I first saw him at a billiard room in Holborn, where he generally passed his evenings when at hom.

He was a powerfully built, determined looking man, but there was nothing unusual in his appearance, nor would any one have had the faintest cause for sus pecting that he had recently committed a terrible crime.

He wore, I observed, a splendid dia mond ring of a somewhat peculiar gentleman was waiting, who in-A gentleman was waiting, who introduced himself as a friend of the stranger recently murdered at Byfield. He had that very day visited that town by the merest-accident, and had put up at the "Reindeer." Here he had been shown the likeness of the victim, and had at once recognized it as that of an intimate friend of his, a Mr. Geo.Vine, of Cheltenham.

He proceeded to state that Mr. Vine was an orphan, and a man of considerable property. He had a house at Cheltenham, but spent a great part of his time in travel. His absence from home being long and frequent, it was not to be wondered at that his servants should have felt no alarm at not having seen him during the past few weeks.

Mr. Rice, my visitor, who was a barrister of the temple, was, I could see, greatly attached to his friend, and was exceedingly anxious that the murderer should be brought to in the should be brought to justice.

Next night I met him by appointment and we proceeded together to the Holoorn billiard rooms. Brandard came in shortly after our arrival, and was soon deep in a game of pool. We stayed about ten minutes, and then Mr. Rice whispered to me to take our leave. The instant we got outside, he clutched

my arm, and said—
"I have not seen this man before in my life; but he has got on poor Vine's hamond ring. This I'll venture my hiamond ring.

Now my course was clear.

Early next morning I presented my self at Brandard's lodgings at St. John's Wood. I was shown to his sitting room, which was on the ground floor. Here which was on the ground floor. Here I found him seated at breakfast. He looked hauntily as I entered—I had walked in unannounced—and peremp torily demanded my business.

"I am come, Mr. Brandard," said I sternly, to arrest you on a charge of wilful murder!"

No sooner had I said these No sooner had I said these words, than he hurled the coffee pot he heldin his hand, at my head. The missile fortunately struck me on the brim of my hat, but still it was thrown with such force that I was felled to the floor.

Ere I could gain my feet Brandard had dashed to the window, thrown it open, and leaped out.

Had he done so in safety he would in all mobability have effected his escape;

Had he done so in safety he would in all probability have effected his escape; but, as it was, his feet caught in the area-railing, and he fell with a sickening thud on the pavement.

Here he lay motionless and helpless.

I hastened to raise him, but found that his skull was fractured, and that he had but a short time to live. He was carried back to his room, where he died in twenty minutes' time.

Previous to his death he confessed his crime aud the reason of its committal.

Some years before the murdered man Some years before the murdered man had dishonored Mr. Brandard's only sister, and persuaded her to accompany him from his home in Suffolk to London. Here he afterwards basely abandoned her, and the poor victim, driven to dispair, sought a watery grave in the Thames. Her brother, learning her the world yearner against her devowed vengance against her destroyer, but, despite his efforts to meet stroyer, but, despite his efforts to meet him, he never once crossed his path till he accidentally saw him at Byfield. He dogged his steps, entered the same train unobserved, and when Vain got out at Leland, he did the same, taking care again to do so unseen by him. The better to observe the direction in which his enemy went, he entered the waiting room and from there watched him walk towards the village. When he had gone sufficient far to enable Brandard to follow him unnoticed, he left the station on his track.

By this time the porter who had taken had left his post; hence, Brandard's arrival was never known to him. He dogged Mr. Vine s footsteps to the "Reindeer," and when the deed was done plundered his victim's clothes, in order that it be supposed he had been slain by an ordinary robber. He also took his bag and all his papers, so that the murdered man's identify might never be ascertained.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Farmers' Strawberry Beds.-Every farmer should have a good supply of strawberries. Now is the time to set the plants, the earlier the better, and the plants, the earner the better, and if well cultivated a good crop may be expected next season. If the work is delayed until September, as it often is, it might about as well be left until the following spring. A year's time will be lost either way.

Growing Onion Sets .- If onion seed is sown very thickly in August on rather poor soil free from weeds it will make a multitude of sets that will be very valuable for growing early onions next spring. The object is to make the onions as small as possible, since the smaller they grow the more sets there will be in a bushel.

Cleanness in Milk Cellars.—One cause of muchof the bad butter in market is the unclean condition of many farmers' cellars. Decaying vegetables taint the air, and their odors are absorbed by the milk, to reappear in whatever is made from it. If the meat barrel becomes at all tainted, it should be at once removed. In fact, wherever milk and cream are kept in cellars they should be in different rooms from the Drawing Damp Grain to Barns.is better to wait until grain has thoroughly dried out before drawing to stacks or barns. A little dampness will often spoil it before threshing, or be still worse if the crop is threshed immediately and then put in bins. Last year the season at harvest was so dame. year the season at harvest was so damp that millers would not take new whear in large quantities unless they had old wheat to mix with it. In the farmers granaries there is little chance that such precautions will be taken. Hence wheat should be left in the field until dry enough so that it can be taken to barn without danger of injury Exchange.

OUR MORNING STROLL.

No. 9 What Things, of Interest We Saw This Week.

A stranger who visits Farmersville for the first time would naturally turn his gaze upon the finest and most imposing structures to be seen, and we instinctively, as it were, (while wandering up Main street yesterday morning with note book in hand looking for notes for our usual morning stroll) cast our eyes upon that massive and imposing brick structure familiarly known as the Wiltsie block. Our inspection revealed the fact that this building, erected about three years ago by the present proprietors, is 77x24 feet, has tin roof and fire-proof shutters. It stands isolated from other buildings, the nearest building being the frame dwelling house owned and occupied by Henry Rowsome, Esq., distant about 12 or 16 feet.

On entering the building we found the genial junior partner and four assistants busily engaged in attending to the wants of their customers. found on inspection that the stock comprises an endless variety of goods usually found in a first class general store. On one side is arranged the large piles of dress and fancy goods, while on the opposite side, near the entrance, we observed a beautiful show case, inside of which is displayed a splendid collection of silver plated ware. Further on down this side is the usual variety of goods in the grocery Near the centre of this flat is situated the general cash desk, while at the rear is located the book-keepers office, presided over by Miss A. Soper. Ascending a short flight- of steps we found ourselves in one of the coziest millinery show rooms to be found in the village, or perhaps in the county. A large mirror stands opposite the entrance while the light is admitted through stained glass windows. This through stained glass windows. Soft Gingerbread-Two cups molasses; sift in one heaping teaspoon soda; one teaspoon ginger; one tea-spoon cinnamon; one teaspoon essence of lemon and a little nutmeg grated; one cup boiling water; lastly three and one-half cups sifted flour. Bake in flat tins or in patties.

Baked Salmon Trout-Have your trout nicely cleaned, but it must be handled very gently, and lay in a drip-ping-pan with water and butter just sufficient to keep it from scorching. Bake slowly, basting frequently. When nearly done prepare a sauce in the following manner: Have ready a halfpint of cream, a gill of milk, two tablespoons of melted butter, the beaten white of an egg and some chopped parsput these ingredients into a farina kettle and let it get boiling hot. Serve the fish in a hot dish with a tew spoonfuls of this sauce over it.

Salmon Croquettes—One can preserved salmon; two raw eggs; one tablespoonful of butter; yolks of two flour. Fry quickly in sweet lard. Roll The each, when done, for one instant, upon

THE SCOTT ACT.

Notes of Progress from the United Counties.

Posters were issued from this office on Tuesday announcing that a grand Scott act basket pienic would be held in S. A. Taplin's grove, in the village of Farmersville. Revs. S. D. Chown, been invited and replies have been received from the majority of them stating their willingness to be present and deliver addresses. The following arrangements will be carried out: The village band have kindly offered to furnish the music. An admission fee of 10 cents for adults and 5 cents for children will be taken at the gate. Hot water will be furnished free to all wanting it. Hay and grain will be provided at reasonable rates. A grocery will be on the grounds to furnish refreshments to those who wish them. The grounds will be open to the public at 11 a.m. Chair taken at 1.30 by W. A. Webster, reeve of Lansdowne Front. We hope that all friends of the movement will give the matter all the publicity possible that there may be a good turn out.

Petitions have been received by the general secretary from Kemptville, Oxford, South Grower, Merrickville, Rear Yonge, Edwardsburgh, Kitley, Elmsley, Gananoque, and Bastard and Burgess. We hope the vice-presidents time to examine them all closely and compare them with the voter's list but as far as we can learn nearly every place heard from have sent in a large number more than the required number of signatures.

W.A. Webster, Esq., reeve of Lansdowne Front, Rev.W. Barne, of Delta, and others have been holding meetings in the township of Bastard and Burgess during the past week. At the time of going to press we have no re-port of the meetings.

Judge McDonald holds meetings in favor of the Scott act in Green's school house, Lansdowne and Howard's school house Young this week. While at the camp ground on Sat teaspoonful urday we had a conversation with the reeve and clerk of the township of Yonge Front. They informed us that the petitions had been almost universally signed in that township, and gave several instances. In one school the seasoning, raw eggs—finally the section there were 45 voters on the crumbs. Make into rolls; shape well list. Of these 44 signed the petition. by rolling in a dish covered thickly with In another 36, and all signed. In the village of Mallorytown all but five or six have signed. This don't look as if Brockville and Elizabethtown—the Dunkin bill, which had been in Unionville, September 17th, 18th and force in the township for a good many 19th. years) was a failure, or that prohibition does not prohibit.

RISH MATCH-MAKING.

In the west of Ireland, the feelings the young woman are seldom con-ted in matters matrimonial. Her ther being the best judge of what is his daughter's advantage, opposition her part is of very rare occurrence, cept where she has taken the preution of providing herself with a usband beforenand. When a match made and the bargain concluded, if e girl declines to accept the husband lected, she quickly loses caste, the ung man considering that a disobediit daughter must of necessity make an ncomfortable wife. Still more exceptional is any objecon on the part of the young man to be wife selected for him by his father, s he feels quite satisfied that experince enables his parent to judge of the emper and qualifications of a woman nuch better than he possibly could. Toreover, the father has the advanage of being able to examine her nerits with a perfect impartial, and at he same time fairly critical eye. erest and inclination alike lead him to take the best selection; he does it only ter an infinite amount of cogitation; ut when his choice is made, it is uniterable; and he will obstinately con-end for his son's interest, without a ingle thought of the young woman's nclinations, taking it for granted that hey will be in accordance with her nother's wishes.

The mother has little to say in the natter on either side. She never goes natch-making, and is not in any way consulted, being only acquainted with he intentions of her husband for their on, when he has made up his mind.

Marriage is a matter of business, and tis like any other bargain, made with he shrewd humorous calculating cauion which characterises the Connaught nan. Marriage gifts, such as pigs, Jultry, a cow, etc., play an important t in the arrangements; and the girl's ther has been known to refuse to give ner a single penny of fortune until the

"Get out my Sunday clothes, Judy," said old Corny O'Byrne, one evening when he returned from his work. "I'm goin' over to Peter Linskey's to-night."

lah, constituted Corny's Sunday suit.

"Sure, I'm goin' to make a match between our Derinott and Katie Linskey," he said at last in reply to his wife's question. "She's a purty colleen, an' the boy is mighty plased with her, entirely.

"So she is, Corny, a laukie little girl, an' she'll have a snug fortune, maybe. Pether is a dacent, honest man!'

"Faith, Judy, an' he is the same, or it isn't Corny O'Byrne that would 'cut, shuffle or dale' with him or his; an' Dermott tells me that Katie likes him. "An' why wouldn't she, Corny

There's not as purty a boy in the parish, nor a betther," Judy said proudly. "Thru for ye, asthore; give us out the ould stockin', an' we'll make a match of it this Shrovetide, with the blessin' o' St. Patrick!" Corny replied.

From the farthest corner of the chest, Judy drew out carefully an old worsted stocking, and handed it to her husband, who weighed it in his hand, and then, with a sly wink, buttoned it into one of his pockets.

"This'll do the business, Judy," he said, as he left the house, with many Banaughth-Laths—Heaven prosper, or be with you—from his wife.

Her eldest brother was about to be married, and bring his wife home; and her father considered it would be very advisable to get Katie married and settled down before the arrival of her sister-in-law, and Dermott O'Bryne,a fine, strapping, young fellow, very "steady" and good natured. Old Peter thought he would make a very good husband for his girl (especially as he was an only child), if no better suiter offered.

When Corny O Bryne reached Peter Linskey's cabin, he put in his head over the half door, and said in Irish:

"God save all here!" the customery form of greeting in that and many other parts of Ireland.

"God save ye kindly, Corny," Peter replied from the chimney-corner; "come in an' take a sate. Corny entered with both hands be-Pether!" Corny said after a long sil-

"Thru tor ye; an' a good, sensible little girl into the bargain; it's happy the man that'll get her,"Peter replied, after due consideration.

"That's what I said myself; an' I come over to see if we can't make a match between my Dermott an' her-self!" O'Bryne said after another interval.

"He's a likely boy," pursued Peter reflectively. "Ye may well say that Pether; an' he'll make a good husband, no doubt, for he's a good son. What do ye say to it?" Corny asked leaning forward on his stool.

He was a comfortable farmer, and one of his sons had been "making"up to Katie Linskey some time before.

After a silence, during which the three old men smoked energetically, Dillon cleared his throat two or three times, and then said abruptly:

"Pether, I want to make a match between your little girl and my Mar-

"Sorry one word, Tom, only me neighbor Corny O'Bryne an' myself were speaking o' the same thing when ye come in!" Peter replied, with a shrewd glance at them both.

A few days ago we were shown a new and useful invention, consisting of a glass lamp wick. The wick, which is put up in lengths of about six inches, is claimed by the manufacturers to be non-combustable, that they will last for years, and that there is no fear of explosion of coal oil lamps that use them. We have had one in use for several days and find that they give a clear brilliant light when used on a common lamp, equalling in all respects a large size student's lamp. The wick is composed of fine glass threads held The in place by a covering of cloth. threads of glass being hollow the oil passes up the wick by capilleary attraction, always furnishing an abundant supply of oil as long as any remain. in the lamp. UNIONVILLEFAIR

AS IT WILL BE SEEN THIS YEAR.

Description of the New Buildings and Grounds-Names of the Judges-Full

The directors of this popular agricultural society met on Saturday last to make the final arrangements for the fair which is to take place on the 17th, 18th and 19th September. As there was a large amount of business to do in connection with fitting up the grounds and buildings the majority of the directors met at 9 a.m., it having been decided to make a bee to put the grounds in proper condition. On our arrival on the grounds we found that while a large amount of work had been done. a still larger amount was required to be done to put the finishing touches to the buildings and grounds. We first entered the Large Hall, a building built in the form of a Roman cross. The first wing 28x40 will be used for ladies' work, having a large table ex-tending down the whole length with some half dozen wires on each side, on which to hang the larger articles embraced in this department. Directly in the centre of the whole building and surrounding a massive flag pole 64 reet in height, is built the stand on which the display of house plants and flowers are to be made. This stand is built in the form of an octogan, the bottom rows of shelving being 64 feet in length, the rows of shelves extending up the pole 12 feet. This department was placed under the charge of R.H.Heath, florist of Brockville. Owing to unforseen circumstances Mr. Heath has been obliged to cancel his engagement and the directors have decided to divide the amount offered, $25, among the lady members of the fair, who will be paid for their display in proportion to the number and quality of the flowers they The east wing has been fitted up for the reception of domestic manu-

The north wing has been fitted with a raised platform extending down each side 40 feet long and 6 feet wide. These platforms will be used for the display of organs, sewing machines on one side and furniture, harness, etc., on the other, while the best wing will be used for butter and cheese on one side and vegetables, etc., on the other. The build- Purvi .

ing formerly used as a floral hall will be taken for the grain and seed department. Down in the north corner of the grounds will be found the poultry building. This, too, has undergone a thorough renovating and will be provided with coops suitable for all classes and kinds of fowl. Along the fence at the rear of the grounds is situated the pens for swine. Owing to the enlargement of the grounds it was necessary to remove all these pens, which are now being put up in a strong and substantial manner. The ground about the well is being levelled, all stones removed and the uneven surface being moved and the uneven surface being smoothed down. A little further down and we find the sheep pens. These are under a building 100x16, nicely partitioned into stalls capable of holding a large number of animals. Along the northwest side of the grounds is situated the extensive rows of cattle stalls. We think we are perfectly safe in say ing that this association can boast of having the most, and the best lot of cattle stalls in Central Canada. The whole western end of the grounds, comprising some 8 acres of ground, is now devoted to the horse ring and judges stand. The ring is a trifle over onethird of a mile in length, while the judges' stand is placed in the centre of about 1 acre of ground, nicely leveled, surrounded by a substantial picket

The Rustic Floral Hall has been removed outside the horse ring and filled with seats for the convenience of the ladies. Taking the grounds and buildings as now arranged this association can proudly boast of one of the most complete and convenient show grounds in Ontario. The following is a list of the judges appointed for the fall fair:

LADIES DEPARTMENT.

Notes that are Worth Reading and Remembering.

Minute Pudding-Put half a gallon of milk over the fire; when at a boiling point stir in wheat flour until thick. Eat with cream and sugar.

Dried Fruit Roll—Take a small loaf of light bread dough, when ready for baking; roll to about half an inch in thickness, spread with dried apple sauce, make smooth and seasoned. Commence at one side and roll up, and steam an hour. Eat with butter sauce.

Cornstarch Pudding-One quart of milk, four tablespoonsful of sugar; boil the milk, dissolve the starch in a little cold milk, add sugar and starch, boil, stirring constantly until thick; add any kind of flavoring to suit the taste; a teaspoouful of vanilla is good. Put in cup,let cool,and eat with jelly or cream and sugar.

Brown Bread—Two pints of sifted rye meal, one pint of sifted corn meal two-thirds of a cup of molasses, one cup of good yeast, one teaspoonful salt (if yeast is not salted), mix quite soft with warm—not hot—water. Stir in half a teaspoonful of soda when light, and bake in covered tins two or three This makes one large loaf or two small ones.

To can Corn, Peas or Succotash—Corn should be first cut from the cob. Use none but perfect cans. Pack in whatever you wish to preserve solid—with the small end of a potatoe masher. When the jar is brimful, put on the rubbers, and screw on covers as tightly as you can with your hands. Put hay or cloth in the bottom of a washboiler, and lav in the cans any way you please, putting cloth between them. Cover with cold water and let boil constantly three hours; take out and tighten as much as possible. When cooling and cold, tighten again. Keep in the dark. It's a good plan to wrap paper around cans.

THE SCOTT ACT WINS IN HALTON COUNTY.

Majority for the Act 124.

The Farmersville Picnic.

The grand Scott act picnic announced in last week's paper came off on Tuesday and was a grand success. At about 11 a.m. the people began to gather and there must have been fully 300 people who prepared dinner on the grounds. The committee worked energeticly and those who availed themselves of the opportunity have no reason to find fault with the arrangem Hot and cold water was furnished to all in abundance, while the committee were not unmindful of the comfert of the teams, as hay was on the grounds ready to be served out to all who applied. In fact we do not remember having attended a pionic where every-thing passed off without a hitch as it did at the Scott act pionic on Tuesday last. At a few minutes before 2 p. m. Mr. W.A. Webster, reeve of Lansdowne Front (who had came out on the special invitation of the committee to preside), took the chair, and after calling on the village band to open the meeting by playing a selection, requested the Rev. Mr.Blair to lead the meeting in prayer. The chairman's speech came next the program and was short, pithy and to the point. Mr. George R. Webster was the next speaker, and in a 30 min-ute speech explained the difference between the old Dunkin act and the Scott act, completely refuting the arguments of King Dodds and other anti-Scott ora-tors that the difference was very little if any between the two. After another piece by the band the Rev. S.D.Chown, of Kemptville, took the platform and for an hour and a half held the rapt attention of the audience. The limited space at our disposal will not permit even a synopsis of the arguments a duced, only to say that any who d not hear the rev. gentleman's discour-missed a treat that was well wort.

Rev. T G. Williams, of Brockville was the next speaker. He dwelt prin cipally with the Brockville speech of King Dodds and the Farmersville speech of I. C. Lee, and from the Blue Books of the Dominion (so often quoted by the anti-Scott orators) fully proved to every hearer present that the whiskey champions would stoop to any kind of prevarication and untruth to make out their side of the case.

Of Items of Interest from Everywhere for Everybody.

Jay-Eye-See failed to beat the record on Thursday.

The blackbirds are very plentiful in Manitoba this year, and are doing great damage to the crops.

Mr. Arthur Johnston, Greenwood, Ont., has just imported the 2-year-old roan short-horn bull Eclipse, which stood second at the recent show of the Royal Northern society at Aberdeen. The price paid for the bull was $400.

Mr. Hartman Happle, of Zurich, sowed a bushel of fall wheat, which he paid $5 a bushel for. The same yielded him thirty-six bushels. A bushel measure was filled from the same wheat turned the scales at seventy-five pounds.

Mr. John Hartley, or Stratford, has gathered from 50 colonies of bees as much as 500 lbs. a week of extracted honey, besides having from 1,200 to 1,500 lbs. of comb honey during the season. He has taken upwards of 200 lbs.of honey a week from eight colonies of Holy Land bees.

On Saturday, August 9th, Mr. James awrie cut on his farm, lot 21, con.10, Markham, 10 acres of spring wheat, an excellent crop, with a Toronto reaper in six hours; and three brothers, Abraham Chester and John Miller, bound it in the same time-equal to the selfbinder or the trotting of Maud S.

The Acton Free Press says: Mr. R. Kannawin, of Beaver Dale farm, a couple of miles east of Acton, reports a remarkable yield of peas. Mr. R. Watson, sr., the owner on the place, while walking through the field pulled a stalk on which he counted 106 pods, averaging five or six peas to each pod. would make a yield of five or six hundred fold. Can any other farmer in the section show as good a crop?

The oldest clergyman in the Church of England is believed to be the Rev. Richard Moore, vicar of Lund-in-the Fylde, Lancashire. On a recent Sunday he completed his ninety-fourth year. He was ordained in 1815, and his health is still good. He is also the senior justice in Lancashire, having been appointed by the crown in 1820.

In Swansea, Wales, during a recent bank scare, an old women drew $450 from a savings bank and hid it in a Not long after the sack became filled with wheat and was taken to the Then she remembered that the gold was in the bottom of it, and rushed frantically after it, reaching the mill only in time to hear the miller profane wondering aloud what ailed the wheat that it clogged the stones so. "First come, first served, Pether," Corny said, shaking the ashes from his pipe, by knocking the bowl against his thumb nail; "mind that!"

"To be sure, to be sure," Peter replid; and there was another long pause.

"An' we may as well clinch the bargain at wunst," Corny continued.
"To be sure," Peter again assented,

"Turf an' tundther! Tom Dillon, didn't Peter Linskey tell you I came match-making for my Dermott?"

"Thundtheran' turf! Corny O Byrne, don't I tell you that I come to do the same thing for my Martin; an' I sup-pose a Dillon may ask a Linskey in marriage any day, an' he can afford it Tom added, slapping his poc-

"An' let me tell ye, an O'Bryne can put down pound for pound with a Linskey any day; or, for that matter, with a Dillon, Corny said, with a Boronful glance at Tom, who was in his working clothes. "Pether," he continued, "ye know what I came for; what fortune are ye goin to give Ka

Peter took out his pipe, emptied it, proceeded to refil it leisurely, poked the fire, relit the pipe, settled himself back in his corner, and said slowly:
"Fortune, Corny! Katie is a fortune herseif. I m a poor man, an the times is bad; an' beyont a new gown, a couple of fleeces of wool, an a hank or so of yarn, I cant's give her any fortune!'

Corny looked astonished, and pushed back his stool, as much as to say that all further negotiations were useless; when Tom Dillon said: "Never mund, Pether, there's them as 'll be willin' to take her without any fortune, and can afford it, too!"
"Thrue for ye, Tom Dillon, an' one o' them is Dermott O'Bryne. We're not dependin' on a few bare pounds, not but what it's well to have something to put by for the childer," he added cautiously.

'To be sure, Corny, to be sure," Peter

"Well, Pether, is it to be me or Is a Dillon to be put behind the door for an O'Bryne? Isn't my Martin as likely a boy as there's in the barony? He'll take your colleen without a brass penny, an' do well for her. What do you say to that?" Tom asked, slapping the table.

"Bedad, then, Tom, I'm in a fix intirely. Here's Corny, a dacent old man, with a foine steady gossoon of a son—he's first; an here's yourself, an honest man and a good neighbor— sorra better—an' sure Martin is the bothe ed in ir ly, an what can I say, but settle it betune ye! Whichever of ye can do the best for her, take her, in the name of St. Patrick!" and Peter resumed his pipe, and sunk back into his corner.

The two men eyed one another silently for a few moments, then Dillon pulled a little bag from his pocket, opened it deliberately, and took out another, from which he drew a third, made of red braid. Very slowly, his eye still fixed on Corny, he pulled out a sovereign, and laid it on the table. "Show Peter Linskey what ye mane to do, Corny O'Bryne," he said.

Corny smiled scornfully, producing his old stocking, and taking from thence a five pound note, put it beside him, and nodded his head. Old Peter smoked away in his corner without uttering a word.

Corny waited for a moment, and then "Is that all you're goin' to do, Misther Dillon?

"In ready money, Misther O'Bryne." "Then, I bate ye at that !" Corny cried, throwing down another pound. "I bate him in cash, Pether, do ye mind that."

Peter nodded, and smoked away. "I'll take the girl in, and share the best we have with her, an' give Martin two acres of land, an' a couple of bonives (little pigs)," announced Tom

"I'll give a heifer in! Twenty pounds, share of a house, two acres of land and a heifer. What do ye say, Pether?" Tom cried. "Not bad for a colleen without a penny!"

"Thrue for you," Tom," assented.

"I think ye spoke of two bonives, Tom?" Peter said quietly.

"Nos no; only one. It's all I can spare; an' I think it anot bad, Pether!"

She was a Lady.

A newly married couple came into Chicago one evening this week and put up at the best hotel in the city. Instead of going in at the ladies' entrance the man escorted her through the rotunda and stumbled upstairs where he found a parlor, and leaving her there came down to the office to register, upon which he wrote in a tangleleg sort of scrawl:

"You bet she's my wife," replied the man, with an aromatic odor of anger in

"Oh, no; but you must make it 'and wife' and that will be all right," said the clerk, pacifically.

The man slowly erased the word "lady" and wrote "wife" just above it.
"I hate to do that," he murmured,
"I haven't been married but two days and it looks as though I was going plum back on Eliza. I want you to understand that Eliza's dad is worth over $20,000, and she ain't a lady you haven't got any ladies in Chicago."

Chicago Cheek.

They say that the politician who isn't enthusiastic in the cause of his party is no politician at all, and this may be the motive mental power which forces some politicians to extremes.

In a charter election held in a western town the other day enthusiasm ran high, and both parties made a lively effort to get out the full party vote. About an hour before the pole closed, it was discovered that the leading candidate on the ticket was one vote ahead, with no prospect that he could secure another vote.

The opposition polled its full strength but suddenly remembered that a faithful member was on a bed of sickness. A carriage was driven to his house, and the sick man's wife met the committee

Accordingly the ancient hair trunk was packed, and Sister Grimes set ou. The first few miles were uneventful, and were passed in counting the telegraph poles, and muising upon the infinite. Suddenly a change came over the spirit of her dreams. She sat upright, with a startled expression which soon changed to one of indignation. Suddenly she taced about, and addressing a mila-looking man, with a white neck cloth, who sat behind her, inquired in a voice of terror.

"What do you mean by insulting me in this manner?

"Indeed, madame-

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

That Occur in Various Ways During the Week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Arnold have the sincere sympathy of the community in the loss of an interesting little boy of 15 months.

Vacation over, Mrs. Rev. W. Blair is prepared to resume her classes in all branches of painting and drawing. For further information apply at the parsonage.

For some time past the friends and acquaintances of a hard working and inoffensive resident of the village named Isreal Krapp, have noticed his strange actions and sayings and feared that his mental capabilities were becoming impared. On Monday evening as Mr. Jos. Thompson, grocer, who lives in the vicinity, was returning home from his shop he observed Knapp at an upper window of his house, engaged in destroying the furniture and furnishings of the room. Procuring the assistance of some of Procuring the assistance of some of the neighbors and Constable Berney, Knapp was induced to take a walk which brought up at the village lock-up where he was finally secured. This morning he was taken to Brockville by Constable Berny and lodged in the country iail. county jail.

Farmersville is getting to be a noted place and last week was a black letter day in its history. We question if ever there was a more drunken lot of men seen in the village within the same length of time for many years. On Friday Constable Berney was under the necessity of taking a Plum Hollow chap to the "cooler," and on Saturday afternoon and evening a lot of residents and non-residents imbided too freely and made things lively around town for a short time. One individual with a black moustache kicked up quite a row in the 7 cent store, smashing show cases, etc. After a lot of tusseling and cathauling he was finally run in, only to be liberated in a short time and allowed to again appear on Main street and abuse several parties who assisted to place him in the lock-Scarcely had this scene been inacted when another row occurred on Perth street, an old woman (we can not say lady) made such a disturbance by loud cursing and swearing that the services of the constable had again to be calted into requisition and once more the cells were occupied. In all the above cases the parties were liberated after a short incarceration without even the formality of a trial, which leads us to express the onviction that there is something rotten in the administration of justice in this village. If this system is continued we shall refer to the matter in a far different manner than at present. As a climax to the week's doings, our chief, who had a warrant placed in his hands some time ago for the arrest of a party for wife tenting and desertion, started for the country to make the arrest or try and effect an amicable settlement of the dufficulty. He was accompanied by the brother and wife of the accused. who seemed anxious to have the matter quietly arranged without recourse to the law. to the law. On arriving at the place of meeting the chief, who being somewhat terrorous had brought along a large sized, alf-cocking Cal's .c.cl-ver, in getting out of the buggy the weapon unfortunately struck against the wheel causing it to explode and the contents struck the woman passing through one leg and lodging in the other. All was confusion, and dire dismay reigned supreme for a few mo-ments. The woman was quickly placed in the buggy and removed to her home, while the warrant was forgotton and the accused still roams at large, and the chief is terribly worried over the affair, which has assumed a very serious aspect. The doctors report the woman as likely to recover.

BETHUEL LOVERIN,

Publisher and Proprietor.

OUR MORNING STROLL. No. 10—What Things of Interest We Saw This Week.

Some 20 years ago Dr.Giles, of Gananoque, formerly our esteemed townsman, opened a drug store in Farmers-After conducting the business for a short time he sold out to Mr. Plumbsteed, who in turn disposed of his stock to the present proprietor, Mr. J. P. Lamb. It is 16 years since Mr. Lamb learned the drug business, during which time he has, by strict attention to business and thoroughness of work, yearly increased his trade so that a stock which was worth little more than $200 when he took possession of it has under his able management grown to be worth over $2,500. In strolling through the numerous departments of his well-furnished establishment we noticed in one department several ominous looking barrels of huge dimensions which may poss bly become better known to the public after the passage of the Scott act in this county. However that my be, we venture to assert—making the barrels aforesaid the basis of our statement—that something stronger than water is a drug that is not seldom called for in the shop of our esteemed friend. When prohibition rules, as it certainly will, what mementoes of the past will remain in the dilapidated puncheons which at the present time form an integral part of filly drug shops, as well as of the hotel cellar ed $ or the liquor store. Such were our thoughts as we glanced around this part of the building. May the day speedily come when strong drink will be the exception and not the rule as an article of medicine, when the practice of prescribing liquor as medicine will be more honored in the breach than in the observance and when men shall know that weakness, be it mental or physical, can only be strengthened by nourishment and that alcohol, in whatever ment and that alcohol, in whatever be made on the road which connects form it may be taken, contains no Farmersville and Brockville. We have nourishment.

Mr. Lamb has made many improvements on his shop during the past years and it is now a model of taste and neat quaintance with it. We heard nothing, ness. He prepares a number of valuable medicines of which he is the sole proprietor. Noticeably among those may be mentioned his Lubricating Liniment, Eclectic Relief, Horse Pow-Having spent a pleasant half hour der, Compound Mandrake Pills, Diar-sole right to manufacture Hunt's Cough | vital breath," and the equally numerous Syrup Wild Cherry and Tar, Miller's Condition Powder and many other popular and valable medicines for man and beast. Mr. Lamb fully appreciates the advantages of extensive advertising for it is not unusual for him to have 20,-600 circulars printed in one job. We can vouch for the truth of this statement for the work has been done by ourselves, and in addition to this we may say that we are at present printing for him 10,000 copies of a 30-page pamphlet, a copy of which will be sent to every postoffice in this and the sur-rounding counties. The wholseale trade done by Mr. Lamb is quite extensive, his patent medicines going to nearly every village in Eastern On-

Mr. Lamb combines the drug business with dentistry, and, judging from the number of instruments of torture displayed to our view in the dentist's parlor, we should judge him to be a proficient in tooth-lore. Indeed, we have frequently heard that so great is his skill in putting in teeth that the new set frequently look better and more natural than the old. We hope the day is fir distant when he will have the pleasure of proving the truth of those reports upon ourselves. In consequence of this duality of work Mr. Lamb finds it necessary to employ two clerks, the senior one, Mr. G. A. Mc-Clary having been with him nine years. In Mr. McClary he has an able and painstaking assistant, one who knows his work well and does the very best he can, so that should Mr.Lamb be absent for a few days the public does not suffer on account of it.

Mr. Lamb is not only a compounder of drugs and an extracter of teeth, but. he is also a well known horse breeder. His stables contain a number of theroughbred trotters which on several occasions have given evidence of superior speed. One of his mares had a filly last spring for which he was offered $125 when ten days old. The sire the celebrated Hamiltonian owned by Mr. A. Stevens, of our village. He has also a fine colt sired by Phil Sheridan, which has already been proved to possess more than average speed. We wish Mr. Lamb a great measure of success in his stables, but while doing so we hope that the race course may come no nearer us than it is at present, and that trials of speed may continue, in the future as they have in the past, to seen the horse-racing fraternity once or twice in this village and we have no we saw nothing, which could in any devices made use of by man to cheat the fell destroyer out of his lawful plunder.

"Leaves have their time to fall And flowers to wither at the north winds breath, But those hast all season for thine own, O Death," So must it be.

Interesting Items of the Prohibition

Latest advices place the majority in favor of the Scott act in Halton at 188.

Polling on the Scott act takes place in Starstead county, Que., on October 9th; in Simcoe county, Ont., on the same day and on the repeal petition in Charlottown, P.E.I., on October 16.

To our friends in the counties of Leeds and Grenville who have not yet completed the canvass for signatures to the Scott act petitions we would say press the work to a completion and send them in to the general secretary at once. The petitions must all be in on or before October 1st, as they will be deposited in the sheriff's office as soon after that date as they can be gone over and verified by the voters' list. Don't delay.

Maine voted on Monday, September

9th, on an amendment to the constitution forever prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages in that state. The latest telegrams place the majority throughout the state at something over 60,000. The vote converts statutory into constitu-tional law, (which no adverse vote in the legislature can ever repeal) and proclaims to the world in words not to be mistaken, that so far from having grown weary of prohibition the people of Maine are more than ever in favor of it; and it is the most effectual answer that could be given to the declaration of the anti-Scott act orators, that prohibition is a failure in Maine. The result in Maine and our own glorious victory in Halton, coming at this particular time, will be of much service to Canadian prohibitionists. The result in those places will do much to encourage the weak and wavering and strengthen the strong in other places to press forward towards the adoption of the act, as well as have great influence in determining the way voters will mark their ballots. All honor to the noble workers who so nobly stood up for right and justice.

IRISH MATCH-MAKING.

five pounds down the day they're married, a house an' home, a feather bed, a fine mule, a heifer, and a clutch o ducks!" said Corny putting his money back into his stocking.

"Faix, an' a clutch o' ducks isn't bad," observed Peter. "They're better than a calf to them that hasn't a cow to feed it; an' Corny's is the best house an' Katie 'll have it all to herself. When your Matt an' James marry, it 'll be mighty narrow for ye all !" "James is going to America, Pether," said Tom. 'Well, that makes a differ.' But isn't there anything else yer inclined to offer? Dermott is the best match at offer? Dermott is the best match at this minute!" observed Peter.

"I'm done!" said Tom. Then sud-denly starting up, he cried: "Wait a minute;" and ran out of the house, returning in a quarter of an hour, staggering under a great sack of seed-pota-toes. "There! Corny Q Byrne; put that in yer pipe an' smoke it!" he cried exultingly.

"Wait a minute, Pether,' Corny cried; I'll not be long;" and running all the way home, he was soon there.

"Get me a sack, Judy—the meal sack—an' be quick, asthore!" he cried excitedly.

"Arra be easy, Corny, shure an' the meal is in it.'

"Betther an' betther," cried Corny, going into the room which served as dairy; and without vouchsafing another word to the astonished Judy, he shouldered the sack, and trotted off with it as fast as he could.

Completely out or breath, he reached Peter's, bathed in presperation; but on entering, he unluckily tripped over the doorstep, and fell with the sack full length into the kitchen. The string round the neck of the bag gave way. and covered with meal, he grouned and stammered breathlessly:

"Th-there, Pe-pe-ther Lins-k-ey! Wh while the praties was gr-growing, the meal would keep them alive! Wwhat d'ye say, Pe-pether?

"Begorra, Corny, I say what I often said before, that yer a dacent man; an' yer boy is welcome to Katie Linskey!"
"What do ye mean, Pether?" cried Tom Dillon.

At this moment a merry laughter caused the three old men to look round, In the doorway stood Katie Linskey, her hands pressed to her sides, and tears of mirth coursing down her pretty face

"I'm sorry for your trouble, Corny," she said, advancing; "but I could not help laughing, you looked so quare;" and she burst into a fresh peal.

"Be quiet, Katie, an' come here," said Peter, beckoning his daughter to his side. "I was match-making tor ye; an' the bargain is closed betune me an' Corny for you and Dermott O'Byrne!"

Katie, with a comical look at Corny and Tom Dillon.

have ye anything to say agin' it?" re plied Peter, knocking the ashes from his pipe.

"Musha, not a word at all, father

dear; only—only—''
"Only what, Katie?"
"Only I was married last Tuesday to Jack Managan, the painter!" she re-plied, with a loud musical laugh, which brought her husband to the door.

"What!" shrieked Tom Dillon.
"What!" echoed Corny.
"Oh, Pether Linskey! Peter Linskey! er afther humbugging us!" cried Tom, reproachfully.

"Ay, humbugging us!" replied Corny, mournfully; and Pether, who was a sly old humorist, put his head against the wall, and laughed heartily at their astonishment.

The two ambassadors silently took up their respective sacks, and slowly departed, each thinking himself much injured, and in their mutual discomfiture forgetting their animosity. As for old Peter he was only too well pleased to have his daughter well married and off his hands without even the "new gown" or the clergyman's dues—though he could afford to give her a good fortune—as good fortunes go in that part of the country.

When next Corny went match-mak-ing he took care to find out beforehand if the young woman was "willing;" and as for Tom Dillon, he vowed it served him right to be "humbugged," as he only wahted to bother his neighbor, Corny O Byrne (with whom he was ever after good friends).

A THIEF IN A COFFIN.

Novel Plot of a Band of Mexicans to a Cathedral.

Mexico Despatch.

The City of Mexico, the scene of many peculiar crimes, is just now agog over the performance of a thief, which are generally admitted to pass anything on record. A few days ago several men went to the priest in charge of the Santa Cruz church in this city and asked permission to hold funeral services over the remains of a deceased friend at 4 o'clock next morning. The priest gave his permission, agreeing to be present. The men then said they would like to leave the corpse in the church over night, and to this the clergyman also assented. Some time after dark the men appeared at the church bearing a coffin, which they carried up the main line and deposited in front of the alter.

About midnight the sacristan was awakened by the barking of his dogs, and feeling that something must be wrong he dressed hastily and stepped from his room into the channel. A dim light was burning near the altar, by means of which he could see a figure moving slowly on the other side of the channel. Making up his mind that robbers were in the church he ran quickly to his room for a pistol, and then made a search of the church. No one was to be seen. On the alter he found everything safe, but when he come to examine the images of the saints he soon saw that the costly jewels with which they had been ornamented were He then redoubled his efforts gone. to find the thief, but after half an hour passed in searching every nook of the great edifice he was more mystified than ever. Just before he determined to give the alarm he thought of the corpselying down below the channel rail in the shadow, and the idea came to him that perhaps there might be something wrong about it. Lighting a candle he stepped softly to the bier and peered into the face of the supposed dead man. As he looked he noticed that the eyelids of the "corpse" twitched nervously under the light, and at the same instant his own eyes fell on some of the glitter-ing jewels which lay beside the man in the coffin. Overjoyed at finding the thief, the sacristan thrust his revolver into the face of the "corpse" and ordered him to get out. The cold steal on the man's forehead convinced him that the order must be obeyed, and a most extraordin-ary resurrection took place then and there. When the man had gained his feet the sacristan, still covering him with his pistol, gathered up the jewels and then marched the culprit to the priest's house, where he was turned "Oh, I understand. You mean you over to the police.

The Revenge of a Rejected Woman

A certain French marquis, prominent in affairs of state, had paid his addresses to a handsome lady under promise of marriage; and the day for the happy union had been fixed, when from some cause which he did not choose to give, he declared the match to be broken off. He would not be married.

"Well let us part friends, at all events," the fair one said. "Give m one more happy evening, and I will console myself as best I can."

To this the recreant lover assented, and, in company with a few other friends, he sat down to a sumptuous feast in her salon, and wit and jollity ruled the hour; and more than once during the progress of the feast the marquis almost repented him of his recantation.

"Here is happiness to both of us for all time to come!" the beautiful host ess exclaimed, at the same time lifting two brimming goblets, one of which she gave to the marquis, keeping the other and raising it to her lips. He followed her lead without any hesitation, and the two goblets were drained. Within half an hour from that time the marquis felt a sensation of nausea, and his lips grew pale.

Thereupon the lady sank back upon her chair with a groan, and clasped her hands over her heart.

"Dear love," she said to the marquis. we drank a pledge of happiness for all time to come; but not for this life, Oh, no! False man, the story of your life is told! We will die together! You pledged me in a cup of mortal -Oh, oh! oh!"

You may imagine the consternation. The marquis was taken to one sofa, and the frantic hostess to another; then two celebrated physicians were sent for, as quickly as possible the work of saving was in oporation; stomachpumps and antidotes were restored to and, ere long, the lady appeared to revive; and she put up her hand, at d begged them to desist; she thought she should do well enough.

Meantime the marquis was in agony willing to submit to anything the might save his life, They pumped a his stomach until they had almos pumped away his life, and were debat ing what next to do, when the lad burst into an uproarious, fit of laugh ter. She laughed until the tears roll ed down her pretty cheeks; and finally when the physicians were about to treat her as a lunatic, she cried out "Oh it is too good! It is charming! Did you think I would be such a foot as to kill myself because he would no marry me? Oh, no! But I owed him a little-just a little revenge for his inconstancy; and thus I paid him. There was no poison in our cups.

And so the marquis did not die, but it took him several days to recove om the effects of the st and emetics; and it is doubtful if i ever quite recovered from the stigme of that evening's entertainment

Among the many novelties to be shown at the Unionville Fair will be a trial of self-binding harvesters, (the machines are now on the ground) in a field of oats convenient to the fair grounds. T. G. Stevens & Bro. will make the best disylay of furniture ever shown at a fair in this section, I. J. Mansell & Co., Brockville, have asked for room for a full display of organs from their now celebrated factory, while the display of oil paintings will probably be the largest ever made outside the Provincial Exhibitions.

A few days ago while out searching for notes we were informed that we could see quite a curiosity by calling on Mrs. Moore, who lives next door to the Town hall. In answer to our enquiries we were shown a heirloom in the Moore family consisting of a patch work quilt which Mrs. Moore assured us must be considerable over 125 years While we were examining the article we gleamed the following par-ticulars: The quilt was pieced by a Miss Frances Proctor, (atterwards Mrs. Walshingham Moore) in the city of Dublin, Ireland, about 125 years ago. Each piece is about the size of an English soverign and are all cut heptagon. The centre piece is of colored material and the whole article is put together with great skill, being composed entirely of home made Irish linea. The thread used was spun by hand, and certainly shows the high state of the art of spinning flax by hand practiced at that time by the woman of Ireland. The quilt is highly prized by its present possessor and will no doubt be handed down to future generations as a memento of "ye olden time." This relic of a bygone age is considerably worn, but will be long treasured as a family keepsake.

A New Medical work of 1100 pages, well illustrated. Written by four of the prominent physicians of the United States.

I have carefully examined the work entitled The Practical Home Physician and am so well pleased with its truly scientific character that I do not hesito recommend it as eminently fitted to serve the purpose for which it is written, surpassing any effort of the kind I have ever seen. The introductory plate of itself, conveying so faithful an idea of the inner structure of the human body, is by no means the least unworthy feature of the work. C. B. CORNELL, M D.

The object of the Practical Home Physician is to convey to the general public an exact or general knowledge of the diseases incidental to the human body and the most approved methods of their treatment from the highest medical sources. Composed not for any special class but for the dire t use of the public at large, got up with vast labor and care on the most important subject connected with the human life, the knowledge of disease and the Hats & Caps. Boots & Shoes, Rubbers, most approved methods, and medicines to restore the sick to health, in language so plain that "he who runs may read." THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE Interesting Items of the Prohibition Movement.

At the recent session of the fall assizes held in Brockville the grand jury, with Samuel Simpson, foreman, in the chair, the following resolution was moved by R. R. Phillips, Esq., seconded by Rainy Loucks, Esq. That in the opinion of the gentlemen composing the grand jury, the liquor traffic s a great evil and that in order to repress such evil we trust that the Temperance act of 1878 may be adopted in these united counties of Leeds and Grenville. Carried unanimously.

We see by our American exchanges that the Brewers' association of the United States have resolved to vote solidly against any party that will not protect the interest of the brewers and other manufacturers of drink. These opponents of prohibition can be counted upon to act as a unit. The worded upon to act as a unit. The wording of their resolution (passed a short time ago at a brewers' convention), is that, "In this matter we will act together as a unit no matter how strong our individual party affiliations may be." Party leaders have been notified that they must heed these men or feel the weight of their votes in opposition. We think that the time has fully come for the advocates of temperance to make politicians of both parties distinctly understand that they too are a numerous body of men who have also the courage of their convictions, a class of voters politicians dare not any longer ignore when framing platforms and nominating candidates. The rumbling of the coming storm is heard in the distant and already the temperance people are awaking to the necessity of protecting their interests by soliciting sober and reliable men to represent them at the Dominion and Provincial capitals, as well as at the council boards.

The young man entered, and after bowing coldly to the ladies said—

'I am Tom Latimer, Bertha Graylum's cousin."

Ah, I wish she had never come here exclaimed Mrs. Westerly.

"So, most devoutly, do I! If the man that was to marry her comes to the rescue, as he will, he'll leave no stone unturned, I warrant you."

Bella started as if stung when he said this, and her face grew yet more ashy. Mrs. Westerly raised her head, and asked-

"What do you mean ?"

"I mean that my sister Linda has been the confident of Beriha; that Bertha told her that she was to be married to Gilbert Grev.

They proceeded to the young commander's room. He opened a drawer, and took from it a miniature of Bertha and handed it to the captain.

"Is this my Bertha," said Captain Graylum, putting the face to his lips. The ship was neither detained by contrary winds nor deferred by calms. The next morning, as it touched the dock, a young man jumped on board and pressed quickly forward to Gray. "Why, Tom, how are you?" grasp-ing him warmly by the hand. "I have brought home your uncle, the father of Bertha. Capt. Graylum, Mr. Tom Latimer."

"Tom, Tom!" cried the old gentle-man, holding him at arm's length. "Well, this beats all! A great man with a beard! But Bertha—have you heard from her lately.
Why do you turn away. Is she well? Is she —"

"She has been cruelly used; but all will come right."

And then he told the whole story. "This is terrible!" said Gray. "Oh, my poor Bertha. Is she utterly stricken down. Captain Graylum, compose yourself. Tom, take care of him—I am going to the Westerlys."

God looked among his cherub band.
And one was wanting there,
To swell along the holy band.
The hymns of praise and prayer.
One little soul which short had been Half way 'tween earth and sky,
Untempted in a world of sin,
He watched with loving eye.

It was too promising a flower To bloom upon this earth,
And God did give it angel power
And bright celestial birth.

The world was all too black and cold, To yield it quiet ress; God brought it to a Shepherd's fold ' And laid it on His breast,

There, mother, in thy Saviour's arms; Forever undefied, Amid the little cherub band, Is thy beloved child.

TO OUR READERS.

A few months ago, when we commenced the publication of the Report TER, we announced that we would continue the paper as a weakly if the patronage extended was such as to save us from loss. We have now been before the public for about four months and we think that we have become sufficiently well known to our readers to speak plainly. While we have no cause to find fault with the patronage extended thus for we feel that it is not what it should be or what it will have to be to save us from loss. We, therefore, appeal to all our friends to come to our assistance and increase our subscription list by sending us in at least one new subscriber each We are contemplat-We are contemplatsubscriber each We are contemplat-ing important improvements in our paper and can only do so by having our subscription list brought up to a paying basis. It is absolutely necessary that all who have not paid the subscription have not paid the subscripti tion should do so at once. Quite a number have received the REPORTER since it was first issued and to such we would say, pay up friends, for although the amount from each is small the aggregate is quite large.

We have endeavored in every possible way to make the paper worthy of your continued support, and so valuable to our readers that every one will feel that he cannot possably do without it, and no doubt every reader will find something in at least one or more single copies during the year worth many times the subscription price. We, therefore, urge upon all who want the paper continued to send in their own subscription and procure at least one ented by him, and he is now at work new subscriber for us within the next two weeks, for upon the result of this appeal will depend whether the paper will be continued or not.

OUR MORNING STROLL.

No. 11—What Things of Interest We Saw This Week. "Young man go west," was Horace Greeley's invariable advice to the youth in quest of fame and fortune. So we went in that direction this week for the purpose of gaining a little more information regarding the workshops of our Casually entering the shop owned by Mr. W. Layng we found ourselves in the presence of that kindhearted and jovial disciple of Vulcan. Mr. Layng, we were informed, carries on a general blacksmithing and carriage business. He came to the village about eleven years ago, and worked for Mr. D. Fisher as a carriage ironer for five years, at the end of which time he began business on his own account. At first his trade was somewhat limited, but it has steadily increased from the first and Mr. Layng now takes rank among the presperous business men of the place. Mr. Layng finds work for two expert workmen in addition to the labor done by himself and his opinion at present is, that the services of a third will in a short time be required. Until about a month ago he managed a paint shop in connection with his carriage works, but at that time he sold out to Messrs. Hutchins & Vandressen, two young men from the state of New York. We believe the gentlemen in question to be well skilled in the use of the paint brush and bespeak for them a fair share of patronage from a kind and liberal public. Mr. Layng excels in sharpening mill picks. He informed us that more than a dozen grist mills get their picks sharpened by him. Mr. Layng has made and sold fifteen carriages during this season. In addition to this work he has done a large repairing business. His prospects for winter work are good as he has in already eight orders for cut-ters and sleighs. The yearly business foots up to about $3000.

As a mechanist we understand Mr. Layng has no superiors and few equals in this district. Indeed, several of his upon a curious and complicated piece of mechanism which he designes to be used in beer barrels, etc. After the passage of the Scott act he purposes to call it the "Frothing Fawcet," the principle of its action being that the liquor is driven with such force through it that it is entirely converted into froth, Now that the fairs in this county so that a little liquor goes a long way and the thirsty tippler is sent away

A Shocking Affair. We regret to learn that Mr. C Richards, a well known merchant of Irish Creek, and formerly of Frankville, was dangerously shot on Sunday evening last. It appears that an at tempt had been made to burglarize several places in Irish Creek and vicinity, and a party, was organized to hunt up the desperadoes. A band of eight boarded a hand car and started towards Brockville, where the gang was supposed to be heading for. When near Jelly's Crossing they come up to three men and on interrogating them as to their destination they replied, "To town, look out!" At the same moment one of the party drew a re-volver and fired at Mr. Richards, the ball striking him in the cheek. passing ball striking him in the chees, through his mouth, carrying away several of his teeth and cutting his two-thirds off. The other members of the gang also presented pistols at the party (who were without weapons of any kind), and slowly backed in the bushes and escaped. The hand car with Mr. Richards on board was run down the track as far as a Mr. Pritchard's, who hitched up and drove out to the macadamized road, where the services of Mr. F. H. McCrea were called into requisition, who at once drove Mr. Richards into Brockville where his wounds were attended to. The doctors report the wound an ugly one-but not dangerous. his reply to the address presented him by the Provincial Fair association at Ottawa on Tuesday said:

Ottawa on Tuesday said:

"To my mind not the least remarkable point of what I saw at Montreal and Toronto was the gathering of the people of the surrounding country at these great shows. I must own that my impression in this respect was a most favorable one. Let me give you an illustration. One day at Toronto I was told there were 50,000 people on the grounds. I did not see a single person whose appearance was otherwise than creditable and respectable."

Very many of these people whom

Lord Lansdowne deservedly compliments were farmers, yet a similar great gathering of the farmers of this province was treated to sneers and invery persons were denounced as unwashed Grits, as a mob of semi-civilized partisans, etc. Lord Lansdowne gary, the fear and the fact of violence, is correct in his estimate of the farm- the lingering lifelong struggles and des-The Practical Home Physician is meeting with a great success, a large any section of them, be they Conservatives or Reformers, that they are unwashed, uncombed, or in any respect unworthy the esteem and confidence and some choice territory still open for of their fellows. Interesting Items of the Prohibition

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Scott act association will be held in French's hall, Brockville, on Friday, October 3rd, at 1 p.m. A full attendance is requested as business of importance is to be brought up for consideration. A cordial invitation is extended to the vice-presidents of the different municipalities in the counties as well as any others interested in the movement.

The petitions for the submission of the Scott act in these united counties will be deposited in the sheriff's office on Saturday, October 4th. The generalsecretary is now engaged checking them over before depositing, and while we have not the exact figures to hand as we go to press, still we find that enough signatures have been received from a little more than half the municipalities to foot up the required number. There will probably be nearly 5,000 signatures appended to the petitions.

The appetite for strong drink in man has spoiled the life of more women, ruined more homes for them, brought to them more sorrow, scattered more fortunes for them, cursed them with more brutality, shame and hardship than any other evil that lives. The country numbers tens nay hundreds of thousands of women who are widows to day, who sit in hopeless weeds, because their husbands have been slain by strong drink. They are thousands of homes scattered over the land in which wives tive lives of torture, going through all the changes of suffering that lie between the extremes of fear and despair, because those whom they love love the intoxicating bowl better than the woman they have sworn to love. There are women by thousands who dread to hear at the door the step that once thrilled them with pleasure, because that step has learned to reel under the influence of the seductive poison. There are women groaning with pain, while we write these words, caused by bruises and brutalities inflicted by husbands made mad by drink. There can be no exaggeration in the statement in regard to this matter, because no human imagination can create anything worse than the truth and no pen is capable of portraying the truth— the sorrows and horrors of a wife with a drunken husband, or a mother with a drunken son, are as near the realization of hell as can be reached in the world. It cannot be said of pair of countless women with drunken hem, be they Conser-husbands are enough to make all women curse the traffic and the trafficer and engage unitedly to support the Scott act and endeavor to exterminate

FALSELY ACCUSED.

"I wonder how Captain Gray will take the tidings of Bertha? Bella, do you believe there was an engagement?'

"I never thought so," replied Bella, after a moment. "Others, though, may have been more observing."

"I am sorry the thing was ever done," said Mrs. Westerly, thoughtfully. "Still, I did it, as I thought, for the best.

Then she relapsed into silence, and soon after quitted the room.

Bella left her seat, turned toward the window, and anxiously looked forth.

"There he is!"
The blood rushed to her cheeks and receded again, and she became faint; but before her vis tor was announced she had glided back again with a sweet. smile, holding out both hands as she exclaimed -

"Captam Gray, I am happy to meet you; when did you arrive?"

He took only one Find, courteously almost coldiy, for its touch felt like that of a snake to him. He seated himself at her request; but there was in his manner that frozen calm telling of a strong will mastering strong emotion.

"How are your mother and-cousin? at last he asked, in a strange voice.
"Mother is well. Bertha—is—well

-I hope.

Her voice faltered in spite of her efforts to speak cannly.

"Bertha is not at home, perhaps you would say?'

"No; I am s r y to say," she commenced, and tears stood in her eyes, tears of agitation, vexation, of fear, not "Bertha mas been unfortunate, and mother is so inflexible that she-"Sent her to god, perhaps?" exclaimed Gray:

"Yes; but it was seah an outrageous I never would have believed it if I had not seen-

She hesitated

"Seen what?' asked Gray, his eyes fastened on her face.

"Why, seen her with some of the articles in her possession. Believe me, I would have done anything to save "And you did all you could? You said, 'She did not do this thing—she has been misrepresented. And you fell on your knees, begging your mother to have mercy? Speak, Miss Bella! Did you plead thus for your cousin?"

"She is not my cousin save by marriage," replied Bella, who had grown white and frightened.

Oh, not your cousin, save by marrage. Then it did not matter to you. Not a connection of the fashionable Westerlys-only a young, fair, friendless girl-too fair, perhaps! I wonder not, Miss Beila, that you had no heart to plead for her!" And he made her a And he made her a chilling bow. "But you say you are certain Miss Graylum committed the theft?"

"I have said it, sir!" replied Bella. "When is the trial to take place," he asked. "There will be no trial! I shall not appear against her!"

"There is to be a trial, and soon, too. Some way the truth must come out; time.

some way she must be vindicated. My wife must have no staln upon her reputation Taking up his hat, he left her, almost speechless, for the words, "my wife," fell like cold iron on her heart. Then she gave way, and flighing herself on the chair, cried, "I have lost my soul for nothing! For nothing-for nothing!

"Bertha!" "Gilbert!"

"In those two words all was expressed. Oh, the tears of joy that Bertha wept in his arms! At last through her tears, she asked, "And you do not think

"Guilty!-my love, my Bertha!" "Then I am happy, whatever comes."

"Not so happy as you will be soon. Bertha, can you bear a great blessing?' "What can you mean!"

"How long has your father been dead," he asked, his arm still round her waist.

"My father!" was all she could gasp. "Has it never occurred to you, darling, that you might possibly see him

But he had no need to say more, for she glided from his arms and fled into those of the man who now entered, saying, "Father, father! is it really you. Oh, indeed, I am happy!'

A crowded court witnessed the 'trial of the prisoner charged with theft.

Bella was soon in the witness box, and her story told, when, almost fainting, she left the court for a few min-

When she returned, her strength deserted her again, for her eyes saw in the place she had just left, Louise, her dressing maid. She entered as the counsel was saying, "Well, you can go on now and state your evidence.'

"I came home that night about a quarter to twelve, and we—Mary and I—went into Miss Bertha's room to light lamp, when we heard a footstep and I was frightened, so I sprang for the closet; and I saw Miss Bella enter the room. She found the key of the trunk, then she opened it, and took something in her hand. I then saw her put the chain in, and then something else; and then she-

"My lad, you are an honest boy. "Yes, sir.

"And you look like a good boy." "Yes, sir. "And good boys should alwaysbe encouraged. In a box in the back room there are some eight dozen eggs. You may take them home to your mother and keep the basket."

The grocer had been saving these eggs for days and weeks to reward some one. In rewarding a good boy he also got eight dozen ried out of the neighborhood free of cost, and he chuckled a chuck as he walked homewards.

The atternoon wahed, night came and went, and one more the grocer went to his dinuer. When he returned he was picking his teeth and wearing a complacent with His eye caught a basket of eight dozon eggs as he entered the store, and he quired:

A Davidson county farmer planted four acres in watermelons. By the time his melons were ripe the market had droppe to ruinous figures. Adjoining his melon patch is a beautiful grove. He gave a picnic and allowed no water to be brought on the premises. A large crowd gathered under the friendly shade of the trees. The day was hot, and the people thirsted, but no water was in sight. In the midst of this agonizing state of affairs the farmer rushed his melons in on the grounds, and they went off like hot cakes at high prices.

OUR MORNING STROLL.

No. 12 What Things of Interest We Note this Week.

Last week we took our trip out west in person. This morning we propose taking a trip of the imagination rather than in person. Last week's trip described the manufactory and business facilities of one of the well known residents of this town. This week we purpose giving our readers a short account of how things are done in that far-famed Eldorado of the west, Nebraska. During the past few days we have had the pleasure of the company of a former resident of this county, Mr. James A. Blanchard (second son of Daniel Blanchard of Greenbush, a person well known to the most of our readers). The subject of our sketch left the parental homestead near Greenbush about seven years are and started out with a few Lomestead near Greenbush about seven years ago, and started out with a few dollars in his pocket, a strong constitution, and a fair share of energy and pluck to seek his fortune in the then almost unknown state of Nebraska. The first place that he stopped at was the then little hamlet of Friend, Cass county, in that state, where he worked for a short time for our old friend and former townsman, Joshua Warren. for a short time for our old friend and former townsman, Joshua Warren. Having had some experience in cheese making he next engaged to a Dutch farmer, living about 40 miles from Friend, to run a small cheese factory at which occupation he continued for two seasons, when he returned to the vicinity of Friend and purchased a small farm. When he went into that section first nearly the whole county was an first nearly the whole county was an unbroken prairie. Now all is changed. When he went to work on his farm his nearest neighbor was two miles away. and with the exception of now and then a canvas hut or a board shanty, the settlers lived in "sod dugouts." These a canvas nut or a board stantly, the settlers lived in "sod dugouts." These primative dwellings were made by digging away the earth from a side hill or "coolie bank," and then building a covering over the spot with sods.

At that time the now town of Friend was composed of half a dozen shanties and a few frame houses. To-day it boasts several very fine churches, as fine high school buildings as those of Farmersville, a branch of the National bank, an opera house cabable of seating 800 to 1,000 persons, a large number of stores and business places of ali kinds, and is a lively little town at all times of the year. The county round has been rapidly settled up and to-day there is not an acre of land in the county that is not pre-empted. Two years ago, principally through the persuasion of the hero of our sketch, his father, mother and two brothers were induced to remove to that country, where they purchased 640 acres of land in one block. To give our readers some idea of the manner in which farming is done there we may state that this year the Blanchard farm has produced over 10,000 bushels of corn, 2,500 bushels of oats, besides large quantities of wheat and other grains. They generally keep other grains. They generally keep from 75 to 100 hogs, commonly known in that country as "Morning Bugles," in that country as "Morning Bugles," from the fact that when they all commence calling for breakfastit is a sound long to be remembered and never for gotton. Nearly all the work in this county is done by horse power. The sulkey plow comes first, then the sulkey harrow, next the corn planter worked by horse, then "de hoeing ob de corn" is done by horses and cultivators. When the corn is ripe the wagons are driven into the field and the ears broken off without husking, these are drawn to the crib to be husked during the fall and winter; the cattle are then turned in to eat up the leaves and small stalks, and just before fall seeding time the stalk just before fall seeding time the stalk cutter is called into requisition and the stalks cut into lengths of six or eight inches which are then readily plowed under. One peculiar feature that must be novel to strangers traveling through that country, is that the corn fields come up to within reach of the carriage on each side of the track. On the Blanchard tarm is a beautiful grove of six or eight acres of walnut and other trees. These were set ont by the former proprietor of the farm, and as all kinds of woods grows far more rapidly kinds of woods grows far more rapidly there than in Canada, only a few years must elapse before this timber will be very valuable. The farm, crops, stock and machinery belonging to the Blan-chards is valued at $15,000.

"Not a Drop More."

A penniless rum-drinker was plead-ing for brandy on trust. The angry reply of the rum-seller, "Not a drop more!" was the means of his signing the pledge and becoming a temperate wealthy man.

"Not a drop more!"
Did he say so to me?
When money is gone
There's no trusting, I see?
"Not a drop more!"
When I paid him in gold
For the richest of wines,
How my hands he would he

"Not a drop more!"
That was never the word
While the clink of my silve
For brandy was heard;
And even while copper
I brought to his door,
He never once thundered,
"Not a drop more!"

"Not a drop more!"
Then, so let it be!
Gold, silver and copper
May yet be for me.
Then, when he shall watch
For a pit of my pelf—
Thank you, "Not a drop more!
I prefer it myself.

What a blessing it would be to many in our land, aye, even in this village, did they have the moral courage to make the above resolve.

> Prohibition in England.

A good many do not know how far the principle and practice of prohibition has proceeded in Britain. For instance, the Rock informs its readers that in upwards of a thousand parishes in the province of Canterbury, England, there province of Canterbury, England, there is neither a beer shop nor a public house. The effect of the absence of temptation is declared by those best fitted to judge to be exceedingly satisfactory. In 243 cases the clergymen of the parishes concerned testify that drunkenness and consequently poverty and crime are all unknown.

One says:

One says:
"I am happy to say that there is no habitual drunkard. The absence of the temptation of a beer shop must largely contribute to this happy state of things."

Another testifies:

"There being no public house, or beer shop in this parish, is a-cause of unmitigated good, in so far as it removes temptation to some distance."

A third cays:

temptation to some distance."
A third says:
"There is no public house, or beer shop I am glad to be able to say, in this parish. Of this the good is great; the inconvenience, if any, in comparison, exceedingly small. It promotes, almost ensures, sobriety and temperance. The constable's office is a sinecure, and a drunken man a very rare sight."

While a fourth adds:

"The public house was done awa with about eleven years ago, shortly before I became incumbent. I feel assurred that when there was a public house it was the occasion of much intemperanse, of much riot and disorder, and of poverty and distress."

And so on with the rest. If the friends of prohibition in Canada could secure, as they may, the abolition of all whisky selling places say in a hundred town-ships, or in a block of a dozen of coun-ties, the result would be similar to what the Rock mentions, for the same result has uniformly followed wherever the plan been tried whether in England, Scotland or America. Shut out the whisky shop and you shut up to a great extend poverty and crime.

A well-dressed woman called at the telegraph station in the Saratoga railstation and enquired for a blank envelope, pen and ink. The operator civilly responded and placed them at her command. She busied herself for several minutes inditing a message and then placed it in the envelope, and sealing it handed it to the operator. He told her that if it was to be sent in the envelope it would require a stamp and she responded it was to go by telegraph. The operator then told her that would be necessary for the envelope to be opened. "No, you won't read my message," she replied, as she seized the missive and departed.

ELSIE.

NATHANIEL HOLT'S IDOL.

"I am so tired!"

The flute-like voice that uttered this pettish exclamation broke through the fragrant stillness of the autumnal exquisite melody, and Nathaniel Holt looked up from his paper with a frown on his bronzed, handsome face.

He was tired, very tired, after a day of hard labor on his mountain lands and had thrown himself into a great easy chair of his mother's, on the south porch for a moment's rest; and he could not understand how the speaker, a tall, supple girl, with hands as white as milk, who passed her time in comparative idleness, could be

For Elsie Marian was not one given to unusual exertion, and generally managed to secure the good things of this world with as much ease as was possible or consistant with her position as dependent neice in the home of her mother's sister, Nathaniel Holt's aged mother, who simply adored the bright young girl who had brought sunshine into her old house, and whose helpless orphanage covered many serious faults.

At this moment Elsie was sented on garden stool, half hidden by the drooping boughs of a willow, laboriou ly attempting to twist tiny bunches of dogwood berries and autumn leaves into a wreath, her dead gold hair fallabout a face as fair as any lily that lifted its spotless brow to the opair sky, and no violet that ever blossomed in the cool tufts of meadow grass be youd the will w copse was as blue as the modest eyes she lifted to Nathaniel Holt's troubled face.

He stood over her, his hands folded on his back, and his broad bronzed brow flushed a little with some sudden inward emotion.

"Elsie," he began, the brown eyes that she dared not meet searching the face that dropped beneath his gaze, "what has tired you?"
"Nothing."

girl, Elsie, what has changed you?
"Nothing." She spoke listles "Nothing." She spoke listlessly, yet a faint, sea-shell pink crept into the round soft checks and up to the roots of her golden hair.

"Yes, Elsie, something has changed you; you are the same, and yet not the Yov have lost your blitheness; you do not come to me with kind words, as you once did, Elsie, and charm all my cares away. Tell me why," Nathaniel Holt sat down on the grass at his cousin's feet, and watched the color come and go in the face above him. He was terribly in ear-try and be womanly."

"Has Louis Walton anything to do with the change, Elsie?"
Elsie's face blushed crimson, yet she laughed merrily.

You surely are not jealous. Nathaniel?

It was Nathaniel's turn to blush now, which he did to perfection. For answer he drew the dogwood berries out of her little hands, and held the slender little fingers in his own.

"I am not jealous, Elsie. You do not seem contented of late; you are always tired; you never run up the mountain path to meet me, or take long rambles in the woodland, so as to be near me, as you did. You see, I have grown so used to your tender, have grown so used to your tender, watchful love, Elsie, it would be hard to give it up. And I have thought you had grown tired of me, and had given your love to Lewis Walton, who seems a more fitting mate-

"A divorced man, Nathaniel!" Elsie cried, lifting her eyes slightly, although her cheeks were dved with burning blushes and her lips frembled nervously

'A divorced man,' repeated Nathaniel, looking her full in the face. "Yes, Elsie, there is danger of you forgetting me through him, for he is a more polished, more fascinating ma; yet, Elsie, dear, he is as unstable as the wind, and not caluculated to make any woman happy."
"You must think me very impres-sible," broke out Elsie, whose conscience was not as easy as it might have been. "When I gave my promise to be your wife, I meant to keep it.'

Nathaniel Holt drew the golden head down to his breast and breathed a silent prayer over it; for Elsie was a wo man, with a beautiful womer's love of the world's fol'ies and adulation and he knew enough of Lewis Walton's character to know the arguments he would use, and that he would not be sparing of flattering speeches.
"Remember this, Elsic," he said solmenly; "what God has joined to gether, let no man put asunder, and, although the law has separated Lewis Walton and his wife, in the sight of God she is his wife still."

"There!" Elsie lifted her face sud-

"There!" Elsie lifted her face suddenly, and held up her lips for a kiss; "that will do. I must go in to Aunt Ennice."

Nathaniel Holt kissed the lovely face, not once but many times, and and years after those passionate kisses were remembered with keenest pain. Elsie slipped away from him and ran into the house, and Nathaniel, silenced but not convinced, sat perfectly still, and tried to reason away his fears with

After that life went on much as usual at the Holt farm. Elsie was to become its mistress at Christmas, and her Aunt Eunice was very busy over the expected wedding. She loved the expected wedding. Elsie with a mother's love already, and Nathaniel, as the autumnal months drifted by, grew a trifle thoughtful: for Lewis Walton, who had been a summer guest in the neighborhood, nest, this sober, self-contained man of still lingered, and still called on Elsie, 30, for this young girl had been his who tried to hide her growing fondnes nis compan "I am not changed." Elsie tried to steady her voice. "I am the same to-day that I have been every day for ness of principle and will, and, alyears. You know I am 20, and I must though she imagined herself faithful to Nathaniel, her heart was slowly and surely being beguiled away from the true and steadfast love of an upright man.

Is pleasantly situated in the midst of a rich agricultural district, at a distance of about fifteen miles from Brockville and twelve from the River St. Lawrence. Being on the stone road which connects Brockville with Westport, it possesses unusually good morcantile advantages, as the extensive express business abundantly testifies. The village is pre-eminently healthful, this being due, in great part, to its excellent water privileges, added to the tasteful and cleanly habits of the inhabitants. So much is this a characteristic of the place, that fever rarely finds a lodgement within its precincts, and that fell scourge diphtheria, has only once brought mourning to the home of one of its residents. Its proximity to

THE SCOTT ACT.

Before another issue of the REPOR ER reaches our readers, voting on the Scott Act will have taken place in the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville. It is an event pregnant with momentous interest to every one liv-ing within the bounds of the counties named, and one in which every elector must individually bear a certain amount of responsibility for the success or defeat of the Act.

From our standpoint, we believe at the Scott Act is designed and promoted for the especial purpose of benefitting the county, and is calcula-ted to bring about good results to all living under its provisions, and that it will not work injury to any one.

will not work injury to any one.

A large amount of discussion has taken place, yet, so far as we can learn, no one has yet been found so blind to the public interest as to, for one moment, argue that the sale of intoxicating liquors is a desirable business to be continued. Opponents of the Act have studiously avoided the direct point as to whether the business is a curse and a crime, and have is a curse and a crime, and have sought to divert attention from the is a real issue by vague allusions to the barley and hop questions, vested rights, compensation, personal rights, loss of revenue, and other fallacious issues. These are cries raised to confuse the electors, and are prompted by the selfish desires of a few to make money and an easy living, regardless of the misery and extension of crime which their triumph on the 18th would involve.

But even on these side issues the But even on these side issues the opponents have been mercilessly routed, and their figures and assertions completely refued and disproved. So completely, that since the memorable rout of their chief champion at a little hamlet a few miles from Brockville, they have abandoned their appeals from the platform, and now step quietly around under cover of the shades of night, dealing out tracts and documents which they dare not submit to noon-day scrutiny.

We believe that every social, moral, and monetary consideration of the community is directly opposed to the continuation of the liquor traffic.

We believe that this is admitted by all, excepting those few who wish to make money out of the business, and are, therefore, anxious to have the drinking usages continued.

We believe that the Scott Act is the best available means to shut up those fountains of crime and iniquity scattered all over the country, and if carried and enforced, that it will prove effectual in hastening a total prohibitory law for the whole Dominion. In the meantime it will greatly reduce the quantity of liquor sold, and put an end to the treating system and open bars now existing at every crossroad and four corners.

We believe that every person, whether elector or not, who opposes the Act, or refuses or neglects to cast his ballot in its favor, will be held responsible, in event of its defeat, for the dire effects produced by a continuance of the evil.

We believe that these who yets for

We believe that those who vote for, or assist in any way the passage of the Act, will have nothing to reproach themselves with, and can rest assured that, let the ultimate result be what it may, they have done all in their power to discountenance and discredit this pernicious business. Should this pernicious business. Should the Act be adopted, they can have the proud satisfaction of knowing and feeling that they have been instrumental in saving some friend or relative from want and suffering.

We believe, aye, and know, that to many this will be their last opportunity of casting a ballot on this or any other question, and we ask them to calmly consider their duty to those who succeed them, and the privilege calmly consider their duty to those who succeed them, and the privilege they will enjoy on the 18th of so marking their ballots that they may be ranged on the side of humanity, right, and moral progress. and moral progress.

Finally, we ask every elector to carefully and calmly weigh this matter, divesting himself of every false and mercenary consideration—to look at this question fairly and honestly—and then ask himself the question, "Shall I by my vote perpetuate and continue this evil, which has ruined more homes made more families more homes, made more families wretched, and brought more degradation and misery upon more people than all other evils combined?" We hope and trust that the answer will be an emphatic No! and that on the morning of the 18th, you will hasten to the polling place and record your

Prof. L. B. Arnold says a dairy farm costs ten per cent. less to operate than grain-growing or mixed agriculture; second, the mean returns average a little more than other branches; third, prices are more uniform and more reliable; fourth, dairying exhausts the soil less; fifth, it is more secure against changes in the season, since the dairyman does not suffer so much from the wet and frost and varying seasons, and he can, if prudent, provide against drought.

Farmers who are in the habit of feeding scanty rations to their stock, will have observed that they usually lose more flesh before New Year than during all the rest of the winter months. A Dangerous Client.

"It was the tightest place I was ever in," said Nathan Twyll, Old Nat, as we called him, had a way of jumping into the middle of a story without a word of warning.

And even the judge, whose look of superior wisdom used to make the jurors tremble, would visibly weaken when Mr. Twyll rose to take an exception. But of an evening, on the circuit, old Nat was another man. Then with a gang of "the boys" about him eagerly devouring some stirring reminiscence of his earlier days, one could hardly imagine that the clear gray eyes beaming so genially on the listeners were the same that had looked an equivocating witness through and through in the

She and I became acquainted, course, and equally of course, I fell desperately in love; for I soon found that Miss Mordaunt's charms of person were fully equalled, if not excelled, by her mind and disposition.

Among our clients was one whose business Mr. Mordaunt had long transacted. He was a money lender of the most merciless and exacting t peone who heeded not the widow's prayer nor the orphan's cry—who to the question, "What do the Scrip-tures principally teac'?" would have answered, "Pay me what thou owest.

to carry at once to our client.

Mr. Gaff was a bachelor, living the life almost of a recluse, in an oldfashioned, somber looking Spanish house, as uninviting as its master,

"there is a matter I wish to consult you about, but first please excuse me for a minute."

He left the room but returned shortly

"Be kind enough to step this way," he said, "I desire our consultation to be strictly private."

As there was no one to hear us where we were, I was at a loss to comprehend this unnecessary caution; but as it is the nature of some men to be over prudent, I followed Mr. Gaff without question to a small room in the rear, to which he lead the way.

As I advanced to take the chair to which he motioned me, suddenly as the trap gives way beneath the feet of the scaffold's victim, the part of the floor on which I stood sank beneath A fall of at least twenty-five feet landed me on some straw, and the glance I cast upwards was barely in time to see the aperture close through which I had just descended, after which the darkness was complete.

For an instant astonishment took the place of every other feeling. Then the full horror of my situation burst upon me. I was in the power of an unscrupulous, cruel man, moved by jealous hatred; for, doubtless, he suspected my attachment to Zillah, and and looked upon me as a rival. Was and looked upon me as a rival. Was it his intention to take my life by torture of starvation? I believed him quite capable of it. The thought was maddening. The season is now about over and the dairymen have every reason to feel satisfied with the returns from cheese, which is now justly regarded as a very important branch of Canadian industries. When it is remembered that over 1,000,000 boxes of cheese have been shipped via Montreal this season, we think our readers will agree with us in saying that cheese making is assuming a very important factor of our productions. A few figures will show anyone the money this amount of cheese brings into the country. We also know that the great evil of drunkenness is the prolific source of vagrancy, and demand for support of this class is becoming a large tax on this thrifty portion of the community, we desire to express the hope and belief that the effort to suppress the sale of intoxicating liquor by the adoption of the Scott Act may be the source of much good and the prevention of much crime in our country."
In reply the judge said:—"As to

Entrance Exam

The High School entrance examinations will be held in the High School on the 23rd and 24th inst. A large number of candidates have made ap-plication. Candidates must provide plication. Candidates a their own paper and ink.

High School.

The December monthly examinations at the High School are being held this week. The students have been attentive and industrious, and will undoubtedly pass creditable exam inations.

During this week, three members of the Saved Army from Brockville, have been assisting at special services being held in the Methodist Church. The attendance each night is large, many attending who do not often see the inside of a church. It is to be hoped that the sweet singing and touching earnestness of the appeals made by these faithful workers will lead many to choose the better part.

Valuable Discovery.

A very valuable deposit of mica has A very valuable deposit of mica has been found on the farm of Mr. Chas. Willis, about half way between Oliver's Ferry and the village of Portland. The mica is very white in color and of excellent quality. Already some twelve or fifteen openings have been made, all showing mica large enough to cut, the usual sizes; and it shows to the surface in many other places as well. The prospect is good for a very large quantity, and there should be plenty of money in it for the fortunate owners, who are Mr. Wm. Davis and some other gentlemen of Perth. of Perth.

Annual Dinner.

For a number of years it has been the custom of Mr. Jas. H. Blackburn, the popular Clerk of this municipality, the popular Clerk of this municipality, at the last session of the council for the year, to invite the members to dine with him. On Monday last, Messrs. J. B. Saunders, Reeve, and R. B. Alguire, Dep. Reeve, L. N. Phelps, Geo. P. Wight, and Thomas Berney, Councillors, W. G. Parish, Treasurer, and the editor of the REPORTER, received invitations to once more carry out the time-honored cus-PORTER, received invitations to once more carry out the time honored custom. Owing to serious indisposition, Mr. Alguire was unable to be present. With respect to the dinner, it is only necessary to say that the Clerk is of English descent, and that Mrs. Blackburn is a most excellent cook. Pressing business engagements prevented us from remaining to hear the after-dinner speeches, but from our acquaintance with the participants in both the dinner and the speeches, we are satisfied a jolly good time was indulged in.

A Market.

Just why Farmersville has not a market is not apparent to a stranger. It is the centre of a rich agricultural district with good roads leading to it. It can offer excellent accommodation It can offer excellent accommodation to traders, and has stores at which can be obtained, at reasonable prices, all articles of clothing or for consumption that farmers may require. It manufactures and repairs what the farmer buys and breaks, and has agencies through which the farmer can obtain his implements. And yet it has no market for the nurchase of it has no market for the purchase his products. This condition his products. This condition of affairs retards the growth of the village, but happily it is not irremediable. There is a good market at Brockville and when a farmer has a load of produce to sell he takes it there. But it costs him considerable to take it there and he would not do so, if a market could be found nearer home. Where he sells there he huys so, if a market could be found nearer home. Where he sells there he buys. Then, we say, let our business men combiner, fix market days; agree to pay cash; invite outside buyers; and in a short time, Farmersville would possess a market that would effect a very beneficial change in our commercial relation to the farmer. Then, very beneficial change in our commercial relation to the farmer. Then, instead of sending our sellers to Brockville, we would attract buyers here. While we must await the ad here. While we must await the advent of a railway before aspiring to offer a market for grain, there is nothing now to prevent the establishment of a good market for garden produce, butter, eggs, poultry, etc. Few farmers raise or manufacture any of these articles in subject quantity to pay him to take a special trip to Brockville, and if he could effect a cash sale here it would pay him, and greatly advance the interests of the town.

BETHUEL LOVERIN, Publisher and Proprietor

VICTORY!

Once more victory has perched upon the prohibition banner, this time our united counties of Leeds and Grenville. For some time before the vote, even the Antis had acknowledged that the carrying of the Act was a foregone conclusion. This somewhat detracted from the exultation over the result; still, we felt a certain amount of pride in knowing for certain that the Act had been carried, and by a very handsome majority. The evening of the election, the Executive Committee secured the office of D. B. Jones (Division Court Clerk), and at a few mintes after 5 p. m., there were assembled around the tables the following members of the Executive:—Judge McDonald—(Ch irman), B. Loverin (Secretary), W. G. Fee and T. Steward (Exec. officers), Rev. T. C. Williams, John McGill, Geo. R. Webster, and a number of others. Brockville and a number of others. Brockville returns began to come in first, and as ward after ward was heard from, the most intense excitement prevailed. However, all feeling was suppressed and but few words were spoken, except when some unexpected result was announced, but when the final result was declared, and a clear mojority of 21 for the Act was recorded, the pent up feeling of satisfaction found vent in vigorous clapping of hands. Returns now began to come in rapidly, some creating surprise by the large whole they tallied pretty closely with the estimates made by the promoters of the Act. The result in the Lansdownes was a surprise to all. The front township was expected to give a majority of at least 150 for the Act, whereas it only footed up 38. The near was expected to go Anti by at least 175 or 200, and when the remajority of 73 for the Act was recorded, we felt that nothing was impossible under the sun. Prescott remained true to its distillery and brewing in-terests, and gave a majority of 253 against the Act. Edwardsburg, Augusta, and North Crosby gave large majorities against the Act. Our old native township of Elizabethtown headed the list of majorities in the rmal districts by giving a majority of 203. Gananoque, Oxford, and front of Yonge gave large majorities in favor, while the little township of Estator, c. it front, which last year repealed the Dunkin Bill by a small majority after less than a year of license, rolled up the magnificent majority of 50 for the Act. While the returns were being received at the telegraph office, a mass meeting was being held in Victoria Hall. Volunteer speeches Victoria Hall. Volunteer speeches were made by Joseph Deacon, Chas. H. French, V. R. Marshall, and others. At a quarter to nine, all the townships had been heard from excepting part of Augusta and Edwards-burg, when it was decided to repair to burg, when it was decided to the result the Hall and announce the result. Judge McDonald took the chair and after a thanks-giving prayer had been offered by Rev. Mr. Williams, the chairman announced the result, and expressed the pleasure it afforded him to be able to announce such a glorious victory for right and temperance. Short, congratulatory speeches were also made by Mrs. Yeomans, Rev. T.

G. Williams, — Simpson, B. Loverin and others. Below we give the figures as received at the close of the polling from the different municipal-When the full returns are all in, these figures may vary slightly, but the grand result cannot be changed. We would, had we space at our disposal, bear testimony to the zeal and energy displayed by the workers who accomplished so much for right and temperance. But to particularize any be unjust, as all of the nearly sixty lay and clerical workers did all in their power to gain the victory won.

And now in closing this article, we desire to impress upon all, that, though the Scott Act is carried in these united counties, the battle is only half won. From our knowledge of our opponents we feel safe in predicting that they will leave nothing undone to prevent the smooth working of the Act, to render it unpopular, and to defeat its object generally. The Act, as testified by the vote, has an overwhelming preponderance of public sentiment in its favor, and its strict enforcement should not be a difficult matter. But timely preparation should be made so as to be in a position to successfully cope with every tactic resorted to by opponents of the Act.

great odds, and undergo considerable hardships, but overcoming and endur-ing all these, our county has gained a foremost place among the counties of the Province. But the zenith of our prosperity or the extent of our re-sources has not yet been reached. As yet, the energies of our farmers have been confined and directed to the growth and production only of that which its peculiar situation rendered possible. But now, with the probability of early and generally accessible railway communication with the markets of the world, a new and promising era of prosperity seems about to begin. The question of the voting of the bonus to secure the construction of the line ought to be decided in the interest of the whole district, and personal indifference as to the result of the vote ought not to excuse any voter from polling his vote. Of course, the granting of this bonus will necessitate a direct tax upon the ratepayers, but with debentures extending over so many years, the annual amount paid individually will be small indeed compared with the advantages to be derived from the enterprise. The increase in the value of real estate, which the construction of the road would surely cause, would alone more than compensate for the small annual outlay. There are always some narrow minded people to be found who will oppose any scheme, however certain may be the profit and ultimate good to be derived therefrom, but in this matter, we hope they are few in this matter, we hope they are few in number.

The prospects of the railway company for doing a good business are excellent. Apart from the through traffic which the line will command, as being the shortest and most direct route to the sea-board, it will receive a local trade the magnitude of which will increase yearly. The greater portion of the line will be built through a section of the country now but sparsely settled, but with lumbering, mining and manufacturing resources that only await the construction of the railway to develop into busy centres of commercial importance. We believe the railway will develop a profitable carrying trade in commodities, the low price of which is now and will continue to be of vital importance to us.

I sank at last from sheer exhaustion, on the pile of straw which dead-ened my fall. What, I reflected, would Mr. Mordandt—what would Would they believe I had absconded with the money? Jubal Gaff, I was certain, would never disclose having received it, and my friends would doomed therefore, not only to a borrible death, but to leave a name forever blighted in the esteem of those whose good opinion I most prized.

I know not how many hours I had remained a prey to these harrowing reflections, when a voice overhead attracted by attention. A dim light penetrated my prison, enabling me to see a man's face bent over the opening through which I had fallen. The features were those of Jubal Gaff, and the smile of insulting triumph they wore were simply fiendish. Any appeal to that man's mercy I knew hope-

"Villain!" I cried, "what is your purpose?

"At present, to bring you, food and drink," he replied, and then a basket containing a loaf of bread and a jug of water were lowered by a slender cord. I clutched at the latter in the vain hope that it might afford a means of escape, but the end above was let drop, and the opening closed, leaving

I know not how the time passed.

At stated periods my stock of provisions was replenished. Whatever was my jailor's object, it was certainly not my present death. It was equally clear he would never dare to set me free. Was I, then, to remain a solitary prisoner for life? Compared to such a fate, death itself would be a welcome boon.

In the hopelessness of my despair I groped around the walls and floor of my dungeon : pressed here and there against any yielding somes.

At last, in one of the corners, my hand encountered a slight protuberance, against which I pushed with considerable force. My heart bounded as I felt one of stones of the floor give way and drop downward as though sustained by a hinge.

Groping further, I found that the parters which was aperture, which was large enough to admit my body, led to a flight of steps. Without stopping to consider whither they led, I descended them rapidly and at the foot found myself in a nar-row passage, along which I felt my way carefully till an iron grating, through which a feeble light glimmered, barred my progress. I shook it violently, and the rust caten lock yielded.

A narrow, 'winding staircase was before me, up which I hastened, and in the front room helpin lay Pap out.'

"Oh, she's dewn with the neignbore in the front room helpin lay Pap out."

"Your father dead?" at the top reached a dilapidated wood en door, through whose crevices the light penetrated. I pushed it open without difficulty, and found myself in without difficulty, and found myself in without difficulty. the vestry of an old ruined church. I learned, afterwards that the house o cupied by Jubal Gaff had originally belonged to a monastic brotherhood, the cell beneath which had been been used, probably, for self mortification, communicating with the apartment above by steps which had been removed, and with the neighboring church by the subterrancan passage through which I had escaped.

The first use made of my freedom was to fly at the top of my speed to Mr. Mordaunt's house. The door stood open and I entered. At the sound of voices in the library I paused and listened. and listened.

"Of course, you are accountable for the money," said Jubal Gaff. "I am willing to believe it was stolen by your absconding partner, but others may be less charitable. Of course, you know the severity with which the law deals with a defaulting lawyer."

"Will you grant me a little time," said Mr. Mordaunt tremulously.

"On one condition—your daugh-ter's hand—"

I stayed to hear no more.

"You owe the scoundrel nothing! I cried rushing in. Here is the re-ceipt he gave me before putting me, as he thought, securely out of the way."

It was well for Jubal Gaff that when I turned to confront him he was no longer present. Nor was he again seen in St. Augustine.

"But how came he to spare your life when it was in his power?" inquired one of the listeners.
"Oh!" replied Nat, "murders, you know, have an ugly way of coming out, and then the consequences are rather serious; but shutting a man up for however long a time, is only a case of false imprisonment.

"And what of Zillah?" asked another.

"Well, as I said before, she's a remarkable fine looking woman yet, though it mayn't be my place to say it sceing she's been Mrs. Nathan Twyll for more than fifty years."

A Sick Family.

"Good morning Johnny," said the Methodist preacher, riding up to a small boy seated on a fence in front of Kentucky farm house and whistling

"Wait till the clouds roll by."
"Mornin," replied the boy, eyeing the preacher's scrub horse narrowly. Are the folks well this morning?

" Naw. "Who's sick?"

" Jim, he's down with the meazles; Mary, she's down with the mumps; Sal' she's down with the yaller jan-ders; Sam, he's down with the fever; Mordecail, he's down with the chills and the boy stopped to take breath

"Why, my, Johnny, you must be having a hard time at your house."
"Yes, rather tough for good Methodists.

"Is there any one else sick?"
"Yes, mother, she a down too."
"No, you don't say so! What's she down with?" "Oh, she's down with the neighbors man was found sitting on the horse block in front of the Wakefield mansion the other day, looking as if he did not have a friend in the world. He was despair itself, and a benevolent citizen who was passing kindly laid his hand upon his shoulder and said—

"My poor fellow, what ails you?"
"Oh, life to me is a weary burden and my heart is sick and sore and my brain is tired."

"Why, man, what has happened?" "Enough—enough to drive me to the lunatic asylum or my grave. I the lunatic asylum or my grave. I had the responsibility of perpetuating the name of my family thrust upon me by fate, and twenty years ago, full of lusty life and blooming hope, I married and set myself to the task. "Do not despair, my friend."
"But for nineteen long years the solstice has come and the sun has looked down from his heavenly heights upon a new-born girl."

"But you should continue to hope. The solstice is not yet here, and this year may bear rich fruition for your

A Couple of Horns.

Smith purchased a "muley" and drove her home a couple of nights ago. The animal was a curiosity to his children.

"Oh, what a tow!" exclaimed little three-year-old: "it dot no horns.

"Papa has 'em," said five-year-old.

Lumber Yard.

We are pleased to learn that Ira Kelly & Co., have decided to open a lumber yard in this village. The yard will be located near the Model School, and will prove a great boon to the inhabitants of this village and surrounding country. A consignment of five car-loads is expected this week.

About fitty persons assembled in the basement of the Methodist Church, About fifty persons assembled in the basement of the Methodist Church, on Friday evening last, upon invitation of the W. C. T. U., to bid farewell to Miss Fulton, who, for the past six years, has held the position of teacher in the public school of this village. After partaking of a very nice tea, provided free by members of the Union, Mrs Arza Parish, President, was called to the chair. In a few well-chosen remarks, she stated that the object of the meeting was to do honor to the guest of the evening, Miss Fulton, who had decided to remove from amongst us. Mrs. Dr. Wood was then called upon to read an address, presented by the W. C. T. U. The address was beautifully printed on blue satin, and stated, in substance, that during the six years that Miss Fulton had been amongst us, she had been active in every good work. Especial mention was made of that Miss Fulton had been amongst us, she had been active in every good work. Especial mention was made of her zeal and ability in championing the recent Scott Act campaign in this county, her burning words and earnest appeals having fallen with weight upon many hearts, and had in a good measure contributed to the splendor of the victory won. After reading o the address, Mrs. Wiltse presented her with a beautiful writing desk; costing $15, as a token of the estéem and good wishes of the Union. Short and pithy speeches were then made by and good wishes of the Union. Short and pithy speeches were then made by Arza Parish, Esq., Wm. Johnston, Esq., B. A., D. Fisher, Esq., and A. W. Bannister, Esq., M. A., all eulogistic of Miss Fulton's good qualities. The party separated, happy to meet, sorry to part, and hoping to meet again.

High School.

This week, 78 candidates wrote for the entrance examination to the Farmersville High School—a much larger number than usual Posters will be issued from this office to-morrow announcing a grand concert, to be held in the Wellington St. Methodist Church, on New Year's St. Methodist Church, on New Year's Eve (31st), under the auspices of the Farmersville Oddfellows. Besides local talent, the committee have secured the services of a number of eminent vocalists and elocutionists from a distance. The programme, we think, justifies us in promising the public a rich musical and literary treat.

Presentation.

Mr. C. C. Slack, a prominent member of the Farmersville Brass Band, has been presented with a fine volume entitled "The Worthies of the World," by the members of the Band, in recognition of the very efficient and persevering manner in which he has worked and stood by the Band from the time of its first organization, six years ogo. We wish him success and hope nothing may interfere with his blowing qualities.

Teachers

The following teachers in training at the Farmersville Model School having successfully passed their professional examination, and having fessional examination, and having been granted 3rd class certificates by the county board of examiners, are authorized to teach in the public schools:—Charlotte Baker, Sarah R Berry, Mary Bryan, T E Bnrns, I V Chamberlin, Essie Coleman, Thereacy Covey. OUR MORNING STROLL. No. 13-What Things of Interest We Note This Week.

Some three years ago, Mr. Joseph Thomson came to this village from one of the rear townships, and started a small millinery shop in an unpretensious building on Main St., formerly occupied by J. P. Lamb as a drug store. The amount of business done at first was small, but, by degrees the store. The amount of business done at first was small, but by degrees the custom increased until it became necessary to employ an assistant. About one and a half years ago it was decided to open a grocery and provision store, and part of the same shop was utilized for that purpose. This Branch of the business was also very Branch of the business was also very smill at the beginning, but by perseverance, close attention to business, selling at reasonable prices, and strict honesty, the business has become one of the best in the village. During the past two seasons, Mr. Thompson has been on the road most of the time, gathering eggs for the Boston market from the local dealers in the surrounding villages. He seems to have been gathering eggs for the Boston market from the local dealers in the surrounding villages. He seems to have been fortunate in securing a large portion of the local trade in this commodity, for from a glance at his books we learned that he has this season handled over 25,000 dozen eggs, for which he has paid out the sum of $4,055, the average price being 16 11-50c. per dozen. We also learned that during the past year he bought and sold over $4,500 worth of groceries and provisions. The millinery business during the past year has brought in some $1,200, which shows that Mrs. Thompson combines the two very essential elements, viz.: a good saleswoman and the faculty of fitting up an article so as to please the most fastidious. Mr. Thompson also does a large business in outside barter, dealing in hides, pelts, &c. to the extent of some $1,100, making the yearly business foot up to in outside batter, dealing in hides, pelts, &c. to the extent of some $1,100, making the yearly business foot up to something near $10,000. Mr. Thompson says his business has been greatly curtailed for want of transportation facilities, and he is therefore an ardent supporter of the proposed Brockville, Westport & Sault Ste. Marie Railway, believing that when the railway is built he can do a larger business, at far less cost for shipping, thereby the sale and consumption of beer and wines. Any movement in this direction should be promptly check-mated. The temperance people have had a hard fight from the beginning. More eyfor the furtherance of their cause and the conducting of their convenience. and the conducting of their campiigns they have had to supply themselves. And this, too, with no selfish object in view. Arrayed against them they have had an interest of wide-spread influence, fighting for its very existence—a monied interest in detence of which money has been freely us But the steady persevering work the numerous temperance societ the numerous temperance societies scattered though every village and hamlet in the Dominion has educated the public mind to a recognition of the virtue of, and necessity for, a prohibitory law. The sentiment in favor of temperance has for many years been steadily increasing, till now, when that sentiment is test d by a submission of the Scott Act, it is found to be entertained by a very large majority of our societies the Scott Act, it is found to be enter-tained by a very large majority of our people. The carrying of the Scott Act in the fifty-one counties in which it is now in force has cost the temperance party a large amount of time and money, and anything that would tend to interfere with this finished work should be promptly and effectively resisted. It is so reely likely that Parliament would grant such a petition, but the temperance people should see tog it that they have abundant reason for not doing so for not doing so.

Municipal Nominations.

On Monday last, punctually, at 12 o'clock, Jas. H. Blackburn, Clerk of the municipality of Rear of Yonge and Escott, took the chair at the Town Hall, and announced that he was prepared to receive nominations for the positions of reeve, deputy reeve, and councillors for 1885. Mr. Isaac Alguire was also present to receive nominations for police trustees. The following persons were then nominated :-

For Reeve—Isaac C. Alguire, S. A. Taplin, R. B. Alguire, Jas. B. Saunders, Hugh Mulvena.

For Deputy reeve—Jas. B. Saunders, R. B. Alguire, S. A. Taplin, M. Halladay, Thos. Berney.

For Councillors—Ransom Brown, Geo. P. Wight, Thos. Moulton, M. Halladay, A. W. Kelly, John Wiltse, A. James, H. H. Arnold, D. Fisher, Horace Brown, Chas. Johnston.

Police Commissioners.—N. Dowsley, H. C. Phillips, Wm. Parish. By acclamation.

PETITIONS are now in circulation throughout the Dominion, to be presented to the Senate and House of Commons at the next session of par-liament, praying these bodies "to liament, p praying these bodies "to be Scott Act in such a manner and form as may be deemed proper to remove the injustice at present existing, by making it necess-ary that a three-fifths majority of the total vote polled at any election which may be duly ordered hereafter by His Excellency the Governor-in-Council, shall be necessary to the enforcement of the Act."

Now we have every respect for the rights of a majority, and we certainly think that the false principle upon which this petition is based should be recognised by the Government and people, and a fitting reply be made in answer to it. The Scott Act, like other just laws, is framed and intended to confer the greatest possible good on the greatest possible number. And if even a bare majority favor its adoption, then the opinion and rights of that majority should be duly respected. Of course, where the people of a county or city are nearly evenly divided with regard to the merits of the Act, more difficulty is found in enforcing the law, but even in such a case, the friends of the Act should remember that they are fighting for the rights of the majority, however quiescent that majority may be. The member that they are fighting for the rights of the majority, however quiescent that majority may be. The size of the majority does not in any way affect the principls of justice upon which the law is founded. The granting of this petition would place the temperance party at a great disadvantage, and would be a concession to the liquor interest which its assumed merits do not deserve. It would also have the effect of defeating the Act in counties where its beneficial effects are most needed.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Barrington have returned from Grand Forks, Dakota, to spend the winter with friends in this vicinity. Mr. Barrington now owns 480 acres of land, 25 of which are under cultivation. The soil is a are under cultivation. The soil is a black loam, three feet thick, with clay subsoil. The average yield of wheat per acre is from 25 to 30 bushels; oats from 60 to 70: barley from 50 to 55. Roots of all kinds are also grown in abundance. Mr. Barrington thinks that Dakota is just the place for young men commencing life without capital.

The Marriage of John Smith.

Not a sigh was heard nor a funeral note, As the man to his bridal we hurried: Not a woman discharged a larewell groan On the spot where the fellow we married.

We married him just about eight at night, Our faces paler turning, By the struggling moonbeam's misty light And the gas lamps steady burning.

No useless watch-chain covered his vest Nor over-dressed we found him; But he looked like a gentleman wearing his best, With a few of his friends around him.

Few and short were the things we said,
And we spoke not a word of sorrow,
But we steadily gazed on the man that was wed,
And bitterly thought of the morrow.

We thought as we silently stood about,
With spite and anger dying,
How the merest stranger had cut us out, How the merest stranger has With only half our trying.

Lightly we speak of the fellow that's gone And oft for the past upbraid him, But little he'll reck if we let him live on, In the house where his wife conveyed him.

But our heavy task at length was done, When the clock struck the hour of retiring,

And we heard the spiteful squibs and puns
The girls were sullenly firing.

Slowly and sadly we turned to go;
We had struggled and we were human,
We shed not a tear and we spoke not our Odd, But Even.

It is quite a number of years since this old camel story trotted along the sands of time, but the Detroit Free Press starts the ancient animal on its travels again. This is how it happened:—Abou Ben Ali McGuffin, being full of years, died, leaving to his three sons his seventeen camels for the simple reason that he could not take them along with him. This will allow attested, said the eldest was to the simple reason that he could not take them along with him. This will duly attested, said the eldest was to have one half, the second son one-third, and the youngest one-ninth of the seventeen camels. The boys were a little perplexed at this as it seemed to involve the cutting up of a camel, and camels were worth three dollars a day on the Sahara that season. But the boys, if not first-class mathematicians, had level heads, and did not go to law to prove the oid class mathematicians, had level heads, and did not go to law to prove the old man insane, but went instead to the good old Cadi Hassan O'Donohue, who had taken a medal at mathematics at Ann Harbor.

"Boys," said the good old Cadi reproachfully, "you should not bother me with those little matters. Ask me rder one.

But seeing they were troubled the benevolent old man asked the hostler to trot out his own diapidated camel, which had seen its best days travelling with Barnum as the sacred Gnu of Persia.

Placing the aged brute with the seventeen camels the boys had brought along, he said—

"There are eighteen camels. I shall now give you half of the eighteen, which is nine. How does that strike you?"

"It hits me where I live," said the eldest who was alongy but withel were

"The next boy shall have one-third of eighteen, which is six. Are you there, Moriarity?"

"The next shall have one-ninth of eighteen, which is two," and so the third youngster collared his two camels. Thus two and six and nine make seventeen, and still—was the good Cadi's animal left unscathed. The people marvelled, as the Cadihad given each more than the will called for, which is rather unusual in courts of law. And they said one to another, "That's what it is to be good at figures."

Rilled By a Meteor.

From Somerset, Pulaski County Ky., comes the news that a man has been killed by a fiery stone out of a clear sky.

Julus Robble, a farmer living near Somerset, started for that town on Wednesday morning last. His wife ran to the door to call him back for some forgotten object. He turned his some forgotten object. He turned has face toward his wife and had hardly taken a step before the woman was blinded by a vivid flash, more piercing blinded by a vivid flash, more piercing. and spreading than the widest light-ning. She covered her face with her hands and thought she had lost her

A Happy New Year to All.

Another year with its joys and sorrows, its pleasures and its cares, has been numbered with the past, and we, common with others, wish to all our friends a happy new year. As the new year comes upon us, a crowd of old associations gather on the memory, connecting the present with the shadows of the past. It is a strange, weird mystery—ā mystery no less than the truth—that the chief sweets of memory are drawn from the regrets of the past. During the past year many things painful and many things pleasant have fallen to the lot of every one of our readers. To some, the year has been one of pleasant memories, reealling joys feit or spoken, while to others it has been a year of bitter trials and sad, heartbreaking episodes, and others still may look with regret on the past: on neglected opportunities for doing good as well as for getting good. However, we may all getting good. However, we may all look with bright hope to the future which presents a path in which we may all tread, led by proper motives to satisfying pleasures and goodly actions. Let each and every one of u-start upon the journey of this year with a pare and honest endeavour to benefit the world by our presence With regard to ourselves, we would say that we feel grateful to our friends and pairons for the amount of s. m-pathy and support accorded the Ra-PORTER since it first circulated among the homes of this section. While we have made but imperfect efforts to edity and interest our readers, s ill, we feel that our efforts have in a me sure been appreciated, and we shall en-deavor by eve y means in our power to merit and receive a continuance of that appreciation. During the short time the Reportes has been in existence, we have written many things that were, no doubt, not pleasant and palatable to some of our readers, but we can honestly say that throughout our short journalistic career, we have endeavored to deal justly by all men, and that no feeling of ill will or enmity materially from some of our readers the list of prizes the same as former on many leading and important qu s-years. At a meeting of directors, tions, stil, we have always respected held on the 15th Dec'r, the whole one person to think aright, we shall feel amply repaid for all our toil and labor. And now, in closing this short article, we have a few words to say as to our hopes, aspirations, and aims. We hope to receive a fair share of the public patronage, and to this end we ask all our friends and patrons to assist us by speaking a good word for the REPORTEE to all their friends, and induce them to become subscribers. We aspire to the position of the best local paper in the county and can only reach the goal of our aspirations by having the hearty co-operation of all our friends. We aim to make the RE-PORTER a welcome visitor to every family in the district, as well as to many in distant parts of this county, and to this end shall direct all our energies.

The Unionville Fair.

As per notice in another column, the annual meeting of this agricultura society, will be held at Unionville on the 21st inst. It is hoped that, not only members of the society, but all interested in Agricultural pur-suits will make it a point to be pres-ent, as several matters of importance will come up for consideration. For the information of those of our readers who have no intimate knowledge the business of the society, we would say that during the past year a large amount of money has been expended in moving the buildings, putting up extensions, additions, and otherwise improving the accommodate ion, for visitors as well as exhibitors. The cost of the improvements made s somewhere in the neighborhood of $600, and we feel safe in saying that no more spacious, better arranged, or more popular fair is to be found in Eastern Ontario. Thanks to the Eastern Ontario. Thanks to the interest taken by the farmers and mechanics of this section, the society has thus far been able to boast of a large number of members, a long and comprehensive list of entries, and the largest and best show in the East. But owing to the large amount expended in improvements this year, and also to the fact that while the expenditures were so heavy the list was not reduced but in some departments was actually in creased, the society find that they will be unable to meet all their obli gations and beep the prize list up to the same figures as last year, without receiving additional assistance from the members and visitors. They have therefore concluded to ask the members present at the annual meeting to sunction the raising of the ad nission fee at the gates, for next has actuated us in pursuing the course season's fair, so that they can feel still in the

in. It may not be generally known that nearly half of the old main building was built by Mr. John Forth and made ready for use without one cent expense to the society. At the meeting above referred to, Mr. Forth generously donated all right, title, and interest in all buildings erected by him to the society, and the secretary was instructed to prepare a new lease of the grounds and buildings as now constituted, so as to provide for the full control which the society will in future exercise over the property. It is there fore hoped that a large turnout of the members will take place at the annual meeting, so that all may be fully aware of the position and intentions of the society.

Notice.—We wish it distinctly understood that we do not hold ourselves responsible for the opnions expressed by our correspondents.

To Editor of The Reporter.

DEAR SIR, -As the year 1884 is now a thing of the past, I, in justice to ourselves (the police trustees) and the people of this village, wish through your paper to give a short account of our doings, finances, &c., for the said year. As I have already, through the REPORTER, given an account of the number of chimneys, fire-safes, ladders, and other protections against fire which we have caused to be constructed and repaired. I will now explain, in a few words, what we have done with the money entrusted to our care. When the village was placed under police restrictions, we found it necessary to get bills printed and place them before the people, that they might know what the law required of them. It being the first year, the trustees did not know the year, the trustees did not anow the amount of money they would require, and therefore asked for a grant of $65, which was disposed of as follows:—B. Loverin, printing, $6; J. H. Blackburn, for holding nomination and for writing, $3. On comtion and for writing, $3. On complaint, a certain ditch or drain being found in a filthy and unhealthy state, $5 was expended in getting it in a proper shape; but as I collected $2 from a person whom it more particularly and the state of the sta farly benefitted, it thus left but $3 for the village to pay. Then last, but not lest, we spent $2 towards keeping the cattle from the streets—money well spent, say I. This in all amounts to $14. Besides, the board granted me $20, for my services, thus, the um total used is $34. This, from the $65 granted, would leave $34. And while we may differ secure in making arrangements to fix treasurer, to be used, if required, for the present year. I am satisfied that unless something unforesen should occur, the expenses of this year will in the past and will respect in the tuture the opinion of those who honestly differ from us. If by fair criticism and discussion we may induce society in a proper shape concurred viz.: $65, I consider it but right that week's issue.

they should have the use of the $31, free from tax, for the present year. Wishing all a pleasant and prosper-

H. C. PHILLIPS, Police Inspector.

while seated in the car, surrounde by many children who thought the knew more than their grandpa. This I write as an excuse for the disconnected remarks that I sent you. We departed from Yuma about 9p. m., crossing the Colorado River into California, making our way through a desert-looking country, but not without interest to us, the snow-capped mountains being beautiful in the extreme. The next day about noon, we arrived at Calton, a place of much note for its growth of oranges and grapes. Riverside where Mr. Shepherd, of Brockville, has located, is also a fine place. Los Angelos, of world-wide fame for is abundance of fruit, is a very beautiful place. Upon leaving Los Angelos, we travelled for the most part through a wheat growing country. through a wheat-growing country. We passed through some twenty-six tunnels, and some of the finest scenery I ever saw was that of the Coast Range and Sierra Mountains. O Sabbath last, about noon, we arrived at Lodi, where John Lillie resides, and found him and Joshu Wiltse ready to greet us with a brother's hand. We found this country in appearance much the same in regard to growth of vegetation as Farmersville would be on the 15th day of May, with lilacs just ready to burst into full leaf and the thermometer ranging 50 in the shade. Cattle end hogs are roaming over the fields seeking their own living, and moquitoes present their little bills of fare, but I try to send them to a mosquitoe's grave, from which there is no resurrection. The health of my friend Wiltse and myself is O. K. The fruit grown on Mr. Joshua Wiltse's lot consists of almost se's lot consists of almonds, grape figs, nectarines, raisin grapes, peach es, apples, apricots, prunes, plums. The olive is also grown here.

Now, I will close by wishing you the compliments of the season.

Oddfellows' Concert.

New Year's day was not generally observed as a holiday here. The scarcity of snow and ice rendered outcarcity of snow and ice scarcity of snow and the rendered out-door pleasures impossible. But the dullness of the day was forgotten in the enjoyments of the evening by the very large number that attended the Oddfellow's concert in the Methodist Church. The bill of tare, as indicated Oddfellow's concert in the Methodist Church. The bill of fare, as indicated on the posters, was sufficiently attractive to draw a large audience in a much more cosmopolitan place than Farmersville. The hall was decorated with evergieens, and the platform was elegantly and taste ully furnished, carpeted, and adorned with symbols of the Order. Miss Fisher presided at the piano as accompanyist, and the fauttless manner in which she played the many difficult accompaniaments at the piano as accompanyist, and the faultless manner in which she played the many difficult accompaniaments—necessarily with but little practice—is a high tribute to her ability as a pianist. Miss Kincaid's piano solo, "Le Foot du Cavalier," was the first "Le Foot du Cavaller, was the first number on the programme, and her rendition of it was marked by good time and a correct interpretation. The audience were at first impassive and inclined to be conservative of their applause, and it is a compliment to the intelligent appreciation of the audience as well as to the singer to say that the high-class vocal music discoursed by Miss Bolton was the first to stir the audience from their reserve and draw forth an encore. Miss style peculiarly his own. We were,

Bolton possesses a voice of unusual power and flexibility, and her warbling and trilling deserved the hearty encores which followed the close of her songs. Miss Barnes solo of "Sing Sweet Bird," was admirably well adupted to her voice, and her carolling of the chorus was beautifully modulated. In her second solo of "Who will buy my roses red?" the easy measured flow of the harmony charmed her hearers, and, as in her first solo, she was rewarded with well deserved applause. Miss Soper was warmly applause. Miss Soper was warmly applauded at the close of her song, "Water-creeses." Her style of clearly ennunciating each word, enabling audience to enjoy the sen iment well as the melody of the song, enabling a every day becoming more popular, and we regretted that her name did not appear a second time on the pro-gramme. Miss Clough was warmly gramme. Miss Clough was warmly received on her appearance in each part of the programme, and in the second part, her song of "Over the Mountains," was followed by a storm of applause, and in response to the encore, she gave the song "Summer Shower." Miss Clough's singing was excellent, and the compliment of her gratifying reception was well merited. To those who have had the pleasure of of hearing Mts. Dr. Cornell, is sufficient to say that her singing of "The Angel at the Window" was up to her usual standard of excellence. She was rapturously encored, and at the close of her song given in response, the close of her song given in response, the audience, by their applause, seemed disposed to insist on another song her extensive repertoire J. B. Hutchins and H. W Messrs. J. B. Hutchins and H. W. Kincaid were the only male vocalists, and their selections were well received. and their selections were well received.
Mr. Kincaid sang the ever popular song, "Sailing" (Miss Kincaid as accompanyist), and Mr. Hutchins favored the audience with "The White Squall" and "Angels Bright and Fair." Miss Hill gave two readings, and proved herself to be an elecutionist of no mean attainments. "The ist of no mean attainments. "The Face Against the Pane," was touching, and its effect upon the audience testing fied to the extent to which their sympathies were enlisted. "Gone with a Handsomer Man," which she read in the second part, was of a serio-comic nature, and the denouement and close of the reading was loudly applauded.
Mr. A. W. Bannister read "The Fainter of Seville," that touching and thrilling record of a most important event in the life of the great painter.
Mr. Bannister's clear, rich voice commanded the undivided attention of the audience, and after the hearty suaudience, and after the hearty applause which followed the close of the reading had subsided, many remarks complimentary to the reader could be heard in the hall. The first part of the programme closed with an able and eloquent address from Mr. John R. Reid on the constitution, aim and objects of the I. O. O. F. This really first-class entertainment was brought to a fitting close by that grand instru-mental, "Overture to Semiramide," played by Mrs. Bannister and Miss risher. Seldom has it been our pleas-ure to hear so grand a piece of music so artistically rendered. Mr. A. E.

VOL. II.

Farmersville,

Wednesday, January 14, 1885.

THE REPORTER

BETHUEL LOVERIN, Publisher and Proprie

At the meeting of the Farmer's institute, held in Kingston last week, Mr. W. A. Webster, of Leeds, read a paper, in which he objected to the means adopted for disposing of the Ontario experimental farm surplus. At present, Americans and a few-wealthy breeders secured the animals. He suggested that none but Canadian agricultural societies or their representatives be allowed to compute in purchasing, and that all buyers be compelled to give a guarantee that the stock bought should remain in the county sold into. This in a short time would spread pure-bred stock pretty generally throughout the country and benefit the eastern sections, now so much behind in the matter of thoroughbred stock. It would also give farmers more interest in the success of the Ontario experimental At the meeting of the Farmer's in try and benefit the eastern sections, now so much behind in the matter of thoroughbred stock. It would also give farmers more interest in the success of the Ontario experimental farm. He also thought the annual report of the agricultural college should be more fully distributed. Respecting the occasion which brought them together, it was moved by Mr. B. McNamee, seconded by Mr. W. A. Webster, "that the Ontario Government in ordering these farmers' institutes show a desire to work for the best interest of that portion of the community, and while we appreciate their efforts in this direction, we hope these meetings will have the effect of doing away in a great measure with prejudice, and that we will in the future look more to having laws enacted putting us on an equality with other portions of the community, estimated putting us on an equality with prejudice, and that we will in the future look more to having laws enacted putting us on an equality with other portions of the community, especially the professions, than to who or which party is in power."

The wisdom of the remarks made by Mr. Webster will be apparent to all. No Government could do more to advance the interests of the farmers than the present Government have done. They have legislated and acted in the interest of the farmers in a variety of ways, but we shall here speak of only the two referred to by the institute. By the establishment of an agricultural college, the Government have made it possible for farmers' sons to obtain a thorough knowledge of all that which tends to make their business successful. And by the experiments carried on at the model farm the farmers of the province are than the present Government have done. They have legislated and acted in the interest of the farmers in a variety of ways, but we shall here speak of only the two referred to by the institute. By the establishment of an agricultural college, the Government have made it possible for farmers' sons to obtain a thorough knowledge of all that which tends to make their business successful. And by the experiments carried on at the model farm, the farmers of the province are able to procure valuable information, without its costing them a sou. But the Province of Ontario is large, and by having only one agricultural college, the benefits flowing therefrom are necessarily circumseribed within narrow limits. As proving this, note the much larger proportion of students who attend the college from the Western than from the Eastern counties. As all residents of the Province bear alike the expense of maintaining the college, all should share alike in its advantages. Of course, students from the East may attend the Guelph college, but they do course so at great disadvantage, travelling expenses alone being no inconsider-able item. When the agricultural college at Guelph was started, it was regarded as an experiment, and op ponents of the Government prophe-sied that it would be a failure. But farmers were not slow to recognize its worth as a training school for their boys, and its success is now beyond question. These facts, we think, would fully justify the Government in establishing a second college at some point in Eastern Ontario which would be easily accessible to students from these counties, thereby effecting a more equitable diffusion of that knowledge which will expected as which will expected as the students of the stude edge which will exercise so great an influence on the future of this Province. In some respects, the farming of Eastern Ontario differs from that of of Eastern Ontario differs from that of the West, and in an Eastern college this difference could be recognized and treated accordingly. When the Government come to the sensible determination to build a college in the East, we hope they will fully and fairly consider the admirable location and suitability of Farmersville for such an institution. Such a college being institution. institution. Such a college being specially intended for the benefit of the rural populace, should be in the centre of a rural district, and not in a centre of a rural district, and not in a town or city where the tinsel and glamour of urban life and pursuit, would tend to lure our youths from agricultural industry, and thus counteract one of the chief effects which the college training is designed to produce, viz.: a liking for the farm and a pride in the systematic performance of farm work. From a course of study in the admittedly excellent. study in the admittedly excellent schools which Farmersville possesses, the student could pass to the agriculthe student could pass to the agricultural college, and after completing his studies there he would return home prepared to follow intelligently and faithfully the calling of a farmer.

Under the existing state of affairs, are necessarily circumscribed within narrow limits. As proving this note the much larger proportion of students who attend the college from the Western the Western the Franch larger proportion of the college from the Western the Franch larger proportion of the larger pro a fair return for his investment. The stock produced is thus prevented from conferring that benefit on the farmers generally which the Government intended it should. To remedy this various plans have been suggested, and we add one more to the list. Let the Government order that a fair proportion of the surplus stock be shipped East (say, to Brockville), and there sold. If this plan were followed, we venture to say that better prices would be obtained for the stock than are now realized, and with the restrictions on buyers proposed at the restrictions on buyers proposed at the Kingston meeting, better satisfac-tion and better results generally and better results generally would be the outcome.

On Monday last the Supreme Court gave judgment as to the validity of the Dominion License Act, declaring that Act and the Act amending it to be ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament, excepting insofar as they regulate wholesale and vessel licenses. This will be a great blow to Sir John Macdonald. The faint shadow of his once-beasted reputation as a constitutional lawyer was formed by the hope he entertained that his opinion in this matter would be confirmed. In his famous Yorkville speech he declared that the Crooks Act was "not worth the paper it was written on," an I that there was no law in the realm to prevent the unrestrained sale of intoxicating liquors. But the courts have declared against him, and there will be weeping and wailing in the Tory On Monday last the Supreme Court be weeping and wailing in the Tory camp this week.

The Railway Bonus.

The Railway Bonus.

Voting on the By-law to grant $15,000 to aid the construction of the B. W. & S. S. M. Railway, took place in this municipality on T esday last. As we anticipated, the good sense of the ratepayers prompted them to support the By-law, and it was carried by a majority of 163. But little active opposition was offered to the granting of the bonus, and we believe that those who voted against it will cheerfully accept the decision of the majority, and in the end will have no cause to regret their defeat. The polling in the sub-divisions was as follows:—

	1		FOR.	AGN'ST.
P. S. D.	No.	1	81 .	26
		2	101 .	6
66		Q		00

In Brockville, the vote was taken on Wednesday last (bonus $36,000), and the By-law was carried by a majority of 431. We learn this as we go to press, and have not received particulars of the vote. The large majorities given in this municipality and in Brockville ought to, and, no doubt, will have a good effect on the other places. in which voting is yet.

From Our Exchanges

The Conservatives of Elizabethtown had a grand spread at Forth's Hotel, in honor of the election of Mr. Jelly as Reeve.

Mr. J. B. Carris, of Antwerp, N.Y., who has occupied the position of instructor for both the Western and Eastern Dairymen's Associations, will spend the coming year in Scotland with his wife.

What might have been a serious accident occurred at Rockport on New Year's night, at the ball. Mr. John Conners got 1 ather jolly and had to be shut up in a room on the third floor. Later on he found himself a prisoner and jumped out of the window. As he landed on a rock, he was badly shaken up, but is slowly recovering. A little more Scott Act would be a benefit to Rockport.

The Ottawa Free Press says negotiations for the construction of the proposed line from Ottawa to Brockville are being rapidly proceeded with. Places like Merickville and others along the route are greatly delighted with the idea of having railway connection at no distant date. Mr. Cramp, of the firm of Messrs. Torrance & Co., was in Ottawa last week in connection with this matter.

While chopping in the bush at his home near Kilborn's corners, last Tuesday, Mr. Milton Kilborn had the misfortune to sever all the toes from one foot. The cutting was so cleanly done that when he pulled off his boot the toes romained inside. At latest accounts he was getting along nicely. On the previous day a neighbor, Mr. Ezra Ireland, while working in the bush, also met with an accident, one of his legs being broken by a log rolling upon it.

"Shang" Clark, the notorious burglar, who is thought by many to be the man who shot Mr. Richards, of Irish Creek, has been arrested with two companions, for a burglary near Bay City, Mich. The burglary was at the house of an old toll-gate keeper named Mrs. Hoyle, and after tying and gagging her, the brave Shang applied a lighted lamp to the soles of her feet to make her tell where her money, $14 in all, was. He fired five shots when discovered in the act, and the fire was returned by a hired man and Shang was wounded.

A man named William Grant arrived at John Dail's, North Augusta, to dig a well. During the day Dail drove him ten miles to get his tools. Grant went to bed soon after their return. At a little after ten o'clock D I retired and passing Grant's from heard him snoring. At twelve o'clock he (Dail) was aroused from sleep by a shuffling sound on the starway, which proved to be Grant, Lut no suspicion was aroused and both again retired to their respective rooms. In the morning, however, when Mrs. Dail got up, she discovered Grant hanging from the baunister, and further investigation showed that his neck was broken. The unfortunate man it appears had been drinking, and to this is attributed his horrible death. One more victim to be added the long list of whiskey suicides.

The World's Changes.

BY ENG.—A FARMERSVILLE BOY.

The swift-winged Shadow, that bears in his hands The conquering soythe and the glass of sands, Once paused on his way as he passed alone O'er a warlike city's towers of stone.

"How long has this city been here?" he said.
And the man in the watch-tower shook his head.

"This city," said he, "hath been here of old,
And has sent forth many a warrior bold
To subdue the haughty cities around,
And rage their duality and said. And raze their dwellings down to the ground. Such as would fight soon found their graves, And those who were humble we made them slaves. Late and early we cause them to toil, In the artizan's shop or in tilling the soil,
While we live at our ease, and we play or we fight,
And live by the rule that might gives us right."
"Alas!" said the Shadow, "that man to man Should be so inhuman ('tis not God's plan)."
He must be depraved, and entirely so.
Who would bring on his fellow such terrible wee.
I will leave at once this murderous place." I will leave at once this murderous place And he wandered away to the realms of space.

Then after a thousand years were o'er, The Shadow passed over that spot once more. No city, no warrior was there to be seen, No city, no warrior was there to be see;
No walls; no towers, no slaves, I ween;
But a fisherman's barque, on the ocean wide,
Was wafted about by the wind and tide.
"Where now," said the Shadow, "is that city which stood
Where now I see nothing but heaving flood,
With its minarets, towers and walls of stone?
And those armet warriors, where have they gone? And those crue! warriors, where have they gone? Is the city sunk beneath these waves?
And where are those warriors?—where are their slaves? And the fisherman dashed the salt spray from his brow, Saying, "The ocean hath ever been here same as now. No warlike city was ever here—
No cringing slave who trembled with fear— No cruel warrior with sword and shield— For men are still seeking what oceans yield. Though slaveholding still, with its iron hand, Is found on the ocean as well as on land, "Enough," said the Shadow, "of slavery and wars;" Then hied him away 'mong the fixed stars.

But after a thousand years were o'er,
He paused o'er the self same place once more.
No ocean was there—but a prairie wide.
Had taken the place of the surging tide.
Volcanoes and carthquakes had changed the scene,
And nature had formed this prairie green.
Rude dwellings of men were there to be seen. Rude dwellings of men were there to be seen, Although they were few and far between, And the soil was tilled by toiling slaves Who were kept in bondage by a few rich knaves Whose soldiers kept the people in awe, Whole the rich had the making of the law.
"How long," said the Shadow, "hath this prairie been here?"
Thus he said to a countryman standing near. To this enquiry the countryman said, "This prairie's been here since the world was made, And such flocks and herds as may now be seen Have always roamed o'er its pastures green."
"Not so," said the Shadow, "but I must away,
For I am allowed but one moment to stay." And in a moment the Shadow was gone And left the countryman standing alone.

But after a thousand years had gone round The Shadow again in that place was found. What now met his gaze? 'twas a forest of the Whose yielding branches waved in the breeze. Some were short and some were tall, Some were large and others small, And some of very great age were found, While others lay rotting on the ground, And venomous serpents and beasts of prey In this wilderness vast had long held sway, And human beings, though a barbarous race, Were also found who lived by the chase.

Annual Mecting.

The annual meeting of the Brock vil'e E. D. Agricultural Society, as advertised in the REPORTER and Brockville papers, was held at Forth's Hotel, Unionville, on Wednesday last. The attendance was not so large as usual, owing to the bad roads only about seventy being present. The Directors held a meeting before the Directors held a meeting before the general meeting, at which the Secretary read several communications which he had received. Mr. Heather, of Brocaville, appeared at this meeting for the purpose of advocating his claim to a larger sum than that awarded to him for his display of flowers at the last show. The Board had considered this matter before his had considered this matter before his arrival, and had decided that he had received all that he was entitled to, his threatening letter to the contrary notwithstanding, But Mr. Heather pleaded his cause well, and finally, on motion of Mr. Jelly see'd by Mr. motion of Mr. Jelly, see'd by Mr. Chapman, he was awarded an additional $4, making $10 in all.

After partaking of an excellent dinner provided by the genial host, the general meeting was opened, and great interest was manifested in its proceedings. Mr. Stafford presided After calling the roll of members and distributing ballots, the Secretary
(Mr. Loverin) read the annual report of the Directors, the following of which is a brief summary: which is a brief summary :

The report, in congratulatory terms, referred to the sacress of the Society in the past, and entered fully into details of the present standing and probable future of the Society. By a comparison of the past with the present, the great and permanent changes for the better which had marked the successful career of the Society were made apparent will Society were made apparent to all. During last year, great improvements had been made in the buildings and isdom of this out lay was fully demonstrated at the very successful exhibition of last fall But these improvements, of course, cost quite a large sum of money, and as will be seen by the Treasurer's statement, there is this year a defi-ciency of $364.65. List spring. when the Directors took into consideration the improvements made, it was thought best to keep up the priz list to the old figures, as well as to re tain the growing field crop department, some of the directors arguing that it would be better to borrow the money for a year or two than to reduce the prize list. Several ways have been suggested of paying the debt. One is to dispense with the growing crop department for one or two years. Another is to ask the members to sanction the raising of the admission fees at the gates for next fall's show. Rither or both of these schemes, if heartily concurred in by the members, would in one or two seasons discharge the debt, and still admit of the prize list being kept to the present standard. on motion of Mr. R. Arnold, sec'd by Mr. Stowell, report was accepted.

The Treasurer (Mr. Davis) read a report of his receipts and disbursements for the year just closed, which is as follows:-

On motion, the Secretary was instructed to notify the Department of Agriculture that we protest against the way in which this society has been treated with regard to the appointment of a representative for District No. 8.

The meeting then adjourned to meet on March 4th, for the revision of Carson City Carnsval.

Oarson City Garnsval.

On Tuescay evening last, Carson City Rink was the scene of a grand carnival—without exception the most enjoyable yet held. Over one hundred masked for the occasion, and the costumes were rich and elegant, indeed, we have never seen better taste displayed in draming, even on attwinks. deed, we have never seen better tasted displayed in dressing; even on city zinks. Some good skating was displayed by a sumber of the maskers, and Miss Addison gave an exhibition of fancy skating, proving herself skilled and graceful in the variety of figures which she performed. The popular feature of the evening was Mayor Carson's Scared White Elephant, Messrs. Mayhew and Yates acting as the motive power. It was well gotten up and caused much merriment as it wandered over the rink, or performed in the ring. The band enlivened the proceedings with choice selection, but the frost prevented them playing as much as they otherwise would. Mr Carson deserves credit for his manace of the affair, and is to be conglatulated on its unqualified success. Address and Presentation.

On Friday evening last a number of members of the Baptist Church assembled at the residence of their pastor, Rev. Mr. Sherman, to do honor to Miss Sherman, who leaves this week to take up a course of studies at the Normal School, Ottawa. As the visitation was somewhat of the nature of a surprise, the visitors carried with them well-filled baskets, and shortly after arriving their tempting contents were partaken of. The following address was then read by Miss Stafford and the presentation made by Mis-Brennan :

To MISS SHERMAN:

We learn with deep regret that you, in pursuit of your studies, are about to leave Farmersville for a brief period. We have ever been sensible of the value of the services which you have so freely and faithfully devoted to the interest of the Baptist Church in this place, and we desire you to know and feel that the unselfish devotion of your talents to the promo-tion of the Master's cause is properly appreciated by us.....Since coming here two years ago, you have, as organist, been of great help to the Church, and as indicative of our feelings of esteem and graticude, we deyou to accept this bu ter-cooler. In saying adieu, Miss Sherman, we unite in expressing the hope that at the Normal School your most sanguine expectations may be realized, and that, your studies completed, you may return to Farmersi e Signed on behalf of the congrega-

The Model Farm.

In our issue of two weeks ago, we dealt at some length with the project of establishing a model farm in East ern Outario. At the annual meeting of the Brockville E. D. Agr. Society, held at Unionville on the 21st inst., the subject was taken up and dis-cussed at length, and Messrs. Wm. Neils n, J. B. Saunders, B. Lovern, N. H. Bee her and R. J. Jelly wer-appointed a committee to take steps to enlist the interest of other agricultural societies in the movement. The committee will meet shortly, when we hope to be able to report progress.

While all farmers agree in favoring the project, there are some who are not disposed to attach to it all the importance that it deserves. It is un just to judge the advantages that will accrue to the farmers of the East by the effect that the model farm would have on the dairy interest, though the benefits conferred in this respect would be much greater than is generally supposed. The farmer who is content to keep scrubs that will weather all kinds of storms, stand exposure, requiring comparatively little care, and giving in return compara-tively little milk, the model farm is not designed to benefit, so far as nising the value and necessity of improvement in their stock, will hail with delight the prospect of being able to procure thoroughbreds at a reasonable figure. It is nonsense to say that scrubs are as good as thoroughbreds or grades for dairy pur poses. It has been proved beyond question that a good milking strain will full well repay the additional care which it will require. We mention dairying and stockraising together be-cause we believe it is generally con-ceded that they can be very profitably ceded that they can be very profitably conducted simultaneously. Every farmer who carries on dairying extensively has at the close of each season one or more animals that it would be more profitable for him to "beef" than to keep. And this is where the pure breed will particularly manifest its superiority over the scrub, as in half the time and consequently with half the care and feed it can be as in hair the time and consequently with half the care and feed it can be got ready for market, and will bring a higher price than the scrub, as in fattening it "puts on" beef where the buyer likes to see it. But, apart from dairying, if some of our farmers should feel disposed to engage almost ex-clusively in stockraising, then the model farm will be a necessary adjunct to their prosperity.

We hope the farmers of our East ern counties will recognize wherein their interests lie in this matter, and that they will unite in seconding the efforts of the committee to bring it to a satisfactory consummation.

The English people had about re-covered from their excitement consequent upon the unsuccessful attempt on the part of the Dynamiters to de-stroy London Bridge, and were begin-ning to breathe freely, relying on the police to protect public men and buildings, when all London was startled on Saturday last by three terrific explosions. The explosions were caused by dynamite which was placed in London Tower, Westminster Hall and House of Commons. Damage to buildings, very great; 16 persons injured and 1 killed. No arrests.

Maberly.

Thinking a few lines from this hilly Thinking a few lines from this hilly country might be acceptable to you, I now address you. It has been said that the roughest nuggets contain the purest gold: so it is in this rough and rugged country. As I become acquainted with the people, I find many warm hearts filled with kind hospitality and friendly greetings. Although the country is rough and dairying and stockraising, and recogother portions of our Dominion, the are agitated over the Scott Quite a number of meetings people have been held throughout the county (Lanark), at which both sides of the question have been discussed—the opponents of the Act evidently having semi-weekly, and then it is brought a poor foundation on which to base their arguments. On the evening of Wishing you much success, I now the 7th, a meeting held in this village close.

in the interest of the Scott Act. Mr Bowie, cx-mayor of B-ockville, and Mr. Lees, M. P. P., spoke against the Act and J. Jamieson, M. P., in favor. It was somewhat amusing to see how hard it was for the first speakers, Messrs. Bowie and Lees, to uphold the cause they were advocating. The ex-mayor told us he was a brewer because at the time he embarked in the business he had nothing else to the business he had nothing else to do; that he had hitherto been a Reformer and thought so much of the Globe that he could not go to bed without reading it. But of late he had found out that the Globe had been throwing dust in his eyes, and that this Scott Act excitement was raised in opposition to Six Lohn. In extrain opposition to Sir John. In striving thus to upset the Dominion Government, they were ruining his (Roweriment, they were running as (now-ie's) business, and consequently he had turned his back on that paper and its supporters. It is possible Mr. Bowie was trying to throw dust into the eyes of his audience, as he must have been aware that he was specified. have been aware that he was speaking to a Conservative audience. Mr. Lee's remarks were broken, lacking both energy and pith of argument. For about one hour, Mr. Jamieson, in his good-humored and clever style, addressed the median delever style, addressed the meeting, denying most positively the insinuation thrown out by the ex-mayor as to the political character of the Scott Act agiration. He earnestly urged upon all present to come out in support of the Act, and thus cause this county to send another voice to parliament for prohibition. The 12th is looked forward to with much anxiety, and many hearts go up to the Great Ruler that victory may turn on the side of right.

Before closing, I will give you a short sketch of our village. It is situated on the banks of Fall River and at present contains the following business places, besides quite a number of private residences:—2 stores, 1 hotel, 4 blacksmith shops, 2 carriage shops, 1 grist mill, new saw and shingle mill, 1 carding mill, 1 grocery, are two religious denominations, the Episcopalian and Methodist. The Methodist congregation is building a large church, when completed, will be a gradit to the place as well as will be a credit to the place as well as to the contractor, Mr. Knowlton, of Newboro. There appears to be a good opening here for a tiusmith and harness-maker, and no doubt some other branches of business might be successfully carried on. The farmers in the vicinity are quite anxious for a chee-e factory, and no doubt ar getic man would find it a desirable location. There is one draw back at present which it is hoped will be speedily removed, that is mail accommodation. Although the trains of the O. and Q. railway pass within a mile of the village, the mails is only

Scott Act Notes.

The following are dates fixed by the Secretary of State for taking votes on petitions for the adoption of the Scott Act:—Carleton, Ont., Jan. 29; Northumberland and Durham, Feb. 26; Bedford, Que., Feb. 26.

Quebec city is being convassed for signatures to Scott Act petitions with good success. The R. C. Archbishop and Anglican Clergy are said to be endeavoring to have the Act submitted to the people.

Francis Sidey, who was arrested at Lindsay some days after returning from the States, charged with setting fire to the barns of supporters of the Scott Act at Georgetown, pleaded guilty before Judge Miller of Milton, and got five years in the penitentiary.

The majority in favor of the Scott Act in Brome county was 485, in Lanark county 414, in Kent county 2,029, and the City of Guelph 169.
Lennox and Addington gave a majority of 47 in favor of the Act. The liquor men confidently expected a majority of 500 against the Act.

People are being gravely assured by Anti-Scott Act oracles and newspapers that if the Dominion Licenselaw, recently declared by the Supreme Court to be in the greater part ultra vires, cannot stand, then the Scott Act must fail as well, because it stands are precisely the same footit stands on precisely the same footit stands on precisely the same footing. The logic of such of the arguments in this direction as we have had opportunity to examine will not bear close criticism. The arguments proceed from false premises and naturally reach false conclusions; but that is about the case with all the arguments used by the Antis. There are three good reasons why temperance people should not allow their efforts on behalf of the Scott Act to relax because of this new cry that relax because of this new cry that has been gotten up, obviously to frighten them, and they are these: First, the decision given is not conclusive as to the constitutionality of the license law; second, the constitutionality of the Scott Act has been established beyond all possible question by the highest court in the British Empire, and it is law as it stands until repealed or amended by the Parliament of Canada; third, the the Parliament of Canada; third, the constitutionality of the Scott Act is affirmed in the judgment about which the Antis are making so much fuss, the concluding sentence of which disinctly declares so much of the license ffect of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878" to be quite constitutional. the effort to frighten the friends of the Scott Act into inactivity the Antis drop this sentence out of right, but it will not stay out of sight but rises up in judgment against them at every themselves or courage for their followers from the ruling of the court.

COUNTY ITEMS.

A blacksmith named Gedbeau of Araprior, has been left a fortune of $200,000 by relatives in France. He started a few days ago to look after the wind fell. the windfall.

The Order-in-Council giving effect to the Canada Temperance Act in the united counties of Stormont, Dundas, and Glengarry, was passed on the 3rd inst, and will come into force on 1st of May next.

The recount of ballots in Escott was conducted by Judge McDonald, and no change was made in the result declared by the returning officer. Consequently, the council stands three Reformers and two Conservatives.

The license commissioners of South tanark, through Mr. Henry Stafford, the inspector, offer a reward of $5 for every conviction for violation of the license law with regard to Saturday night and Sunday selling. How would this work in Leeds?

A number of high-toned young fellows have been arrested at Ottawa charged with burglary. Their social position placed them above suspicion of sinning in this direction, enabling them, it is said, to commit the numerous offences lately reported. This case is likely to illustrate for the thousandth time that a man's coat and social position are not always a guarantee of his honesty.

A short time ago, a man named Fraser, from Glengarry, met a terrible fate on the C. P. R. construction about 120 miles from Sudbury. He had gone to examine a heavy dynamite blast, which exploded prematurely, blowing him into the air a height of 100 feet. The terrible agent performed its work most effectively, only scraps of flesh and shreds of clothing being districted. of clothing being discovered on the surrounding snow.

There is yet a faster train than that which took Mr. Van Horne from Carleton Place to Sittsville, and which ran "neck and neck with a shooting star." The driver of it, an American, as the story reveals, tells that it "goes slicker than a square yard of lightning," and that one of the mail clerks, the other morning, just as the train started, leaned out of the car to kiss his wife, who was standing on the platform, and bles me if he didn't kiss a cow out at Riverside.

Mr. C. Waterson, of Kemptville, has in his passession a curious novelty which might form an interesting article for a museum. It consists of a piece of wood under the bark of which exists a quantity of feathers. The bark appears perfectly sound, containing neither niche nor opening, and the fact as to how the leathers came there is a mystery which no person who has yet seen the object has been able to explain. A small splinter of bark which was removed while saw-ing the tree discovered the feathers which appear to be foreign to this clime. Mr. Waterson was given the object by a farmer who lives near Kemptville and who found it while chopping in the woods.

All for a Woman. A few weeks ago, one of our country youths who sports a slight moustache and a black fur coat, started out with the avowed intention of taking his "best girl" out for a drive. The young man, who prides himself on his skill in handling the ribbands, had lately procured an "animile" that was not as docile as dad's Brown Bills. However, he had dad's Brown Billy. However, he had no fears but that he could manage the beast all right, and accordingly started out full of fond anticipations of soon being in the presence of his fair inamorata. But "the best laid plans of mice and men aft gang aglee." Our youth of tender years got as far as the cross-roads leading to the home of his adored, when he found that "Black Johnny" was not inclined to go in that direction. The whin was quickly brought into requi whip was quickly brought into requisition, but all to no purpose. The former owner of Johnny recommended the horse as quiet and docile, but our friend learned, when too late, that that horse had a partiality for going in certain directions. The voice, the lines, and the whip were all brought into use, but were of no avail. was fast slipping away. He had promised to be at the gate at seven, and he had fears that if he did not reach the port in time that "other chap" with the big moustache might get in ahead, and the drive along the highways and through the by ways would have to be postponed till a more convenient season. Finding all more convenient season. Finding all efforts to drive the beast vain, he enous to drive the beast van, he finally concluded to try by gentle, persua-ive means to induce the obstinate beast to go as directed. He then got out and taking the horse by the bit he strove to turn him in the right direction. Suddenly, with a mighty plunge, the horse bounded into space, carrying the buggy and the youth into the ditch. When that young man emerged from that mud hole and took a survey of his habili-ments, anger stern and strong took possession of him, and he sprang into the carriage and began belaboring the the poor beast. But it was not to be a one-sided fight, for no sooner had the whip descended than up went the heels of "Black Johnny," and at the second effort the dashboard was car-ried away. Then a change came over the spirit of that horse's dreams, and he concluded to make up for lost time. At a break-neck pace he flew up to and past the gate, where to his chagrin our hero saw that "other felhanding his fair but fickle goddess into a carriage, and speeding away in the opposite direction. Sadly the head of "Johnny" was turned homeward, and next morning when was counting up damages, our he young friend found that he was out about $15, besides having the heartElgin Carnival.

The Railway

Some Coubt having been expressed as to the railway company keeping faith with the municipalities with regard to the commencement, comple-tion, and equipment of the road, the solicitors of the company, Messrs. Frazer and Reynolds, write as fol-

"In order to show the determination of the Brockville, Westport and Sault Ste. Marie Railway Co. to proceed with the construction of the railway after the voting of the bonuses, and the good faith of the promo ters of the railway, it has been decided to incorporate in the By-laws to be submitted to the other municipalities the following clauses:-"That said debentures shall be delivered to the trustees to be appointed in manner directed by the Act incorpora ing said railway company and shall be held by them in trust in man ner directed by said Act, but neither the said debentures nor any of them nor any of the proceeds thereof shall be paid over or transferred by said trustees until the said railway is completed through to the village of Westport, and equipped and put in running order and accepted by the engineer, nor unless work on the said railway be commenced within twelve months after the passing of this By-law, and so completed to the village of Westport within one year after the date of such commencement, and if the said work is not commenced and completed within the said periods, then the said trustees shall hand back the said debentures and all the coupons ther .on to the said municipality.

"A clause to the same effect will be inserted in the bond required by the By law to be given by the railway company to the town of Brockville.

Voting on the Bonus By-law will take place in Bastard and Burgess on Febry the 13th, and the By-law will be submitted in the near future to the municipalities of South Crosby, Rear of Leeds and Lansdowne, Eliza-bethtown, and Newboro. We hope these municipalities will do their duty in this matter, and not place themselves in a position antagonistic to the of the county. The same questions will be asked and the same interests in Brockville and Rear of Yonge and to the formation of an association for Escott. The whole question, in its every aspect, was carefully and intelligently considered by the ratepayers of the latter municipalities, and the verdict given by them was such as leaves no doubt that when thoroughly investigated the arguments in favor of the By law outweigh all other consid-

Scott Act Notes.

A meeting of the Executive Com mitte of the Scott Act Association for Leeds and Grenville was held in the town of Brockville, on Friday last, the 28th ult. The meeting was called for the purpose of settling up the financial part of the recent Scott Act cam paign in these counties. Nearly al the members of the committee wer present, and a large amount of busin ess was transacted. The finances were found to be in a satisfactory condition as after paying all expenses, there will be a balance on hand. After the committee had finished auditing the bills presented, they adjourned to meet at French's Hall. Brockville, on Thursday, 12th of Febr'y, at 11 a.m. The Counties Council being in session in town, quite a few of its nembers met together at the close of the committee meeting and organized a meeting with Jas. Miller, Esq., Reeve of Edwardsburg, as chairman and B. Loverin, as Secretary. After considerable discussion, the following resolution, moved by Geo. Gillies Esq., Gananoque, sec'd by S. Simpson Esq., Dep.-Reeve of Elizabethtown was carried unanimously:

"Whereas it is well understood tha the present license law is not enforced, and that in the opinion of this meet ing it is extremely desirable that it should be strictly enforced preparatory to the coming into force of the Scott Act, and that this can moseffectually be done by the formation of local committees in each munici pality, with a central executive com composed of the chairmen o mittee such local committees, it is herebresolved that steps be at once take by the Executive Scott Act Committee to have such local committee appointed for the purpose of seeing the license laws strictly enforced."

It was also resolved: "That the Secretary communicat with the Vice-Presidents of the different Scott Act Associations through out the united counties, informin them of the action taken, and as for their co-operation for the form tion of a society for the enforcemen of the present license laws.

On motion, John M. Gill, Rev. T. Williams, and Joseph Devcon considered in these municipalities as instructed to send an invitation to al have been answered and decited upon par ies who are considered favorable the above named purpose, and asking for their cordial co-operation and a sistance.

Thursday, Febr'y 12 h at 10 a. m at French's Hall, Brockville, was selected as the time for the meeting to organize the association.

The Carnival

Between three and four hundred persons assembled at Carson City on Tuesday evening, on the invitation of the genial Mayor, to participate in another of those innocent and amusing entertainments that have made Carson City so enjoyable a place of recreation during the past two winters. At 7.30 the crowd began to gather and by 8 o'clock the whole available space was filled; in fact, the number was too large for the convenience of the skaters, as the spectators found it impossible to keep off the ice. The village band was on hand as usual, but owing to the extremely cold weather they were enabled to play but one short piece at a time, as their instruments would freeze up in a very fow minutes. "Masks off!" a very fow minutes. "Masks off!" was called at 8.30, when the manager announced that the Scared Wuite E:ephant would again make his ap-pearance and be put through a variety of performances. The "animite" shortly afterwards appeared in charge of his trainer, who was dressed in a complete suit of buckskin. As "Con-fucius" entered the gate, the "Music-al Tramp" struck up a polka, and for twenty minutes the monster was kept in motion to the immense delight of the "small boy" as well as to the older portion of the assemblage. Scarcely had Confucius left the ice when an entirely new and novel ex-hibition was given. The trainer again appeared with a rare and now almost extinct species of the Rocky Mountain Bear. That the evolutions of this animal were natural and lifelike were acknowledged by all, and to those not posted the "Bar from the would have passed for a Rockies" true and living representative It is hardly necessary to say that the Bear was Mr. W. J. Mayou, our village barber. The order observed was of the best, and nothing objectionable was allowed. Mayor Carson is to be congratulated upon the grand success that attended his efforts to give his patrons an evening of mirth and enjoyment. The following is only a par-tial list of the names of those who masked for the occasion, the crowded state of the ice rendering it almost impossible for our Reporter to get the names of all the participants:

LONGPELLOW.

The following critique of Longfellow, writt-by Rev. Wm. Blair, B. A., was read by Mrs-Blair, at the public entertainment given by the Literary and Musical Association, on the 6th

Blair, at the public entertainment given by the Literary and Musical Association, on the 6th inst.:—

Longfellow, as a poet, delineates and interprete rather than creates—that is, he describes objects and not mental impressions made by objects and not mental impressions of the can poet for this is the New deal and yet he dwells with almost wearlsome fred not get the dwells with a bid of a sociation, quantities, and the grey old manse, &c. On phases and thoughts like these his fancy seems to brood with surpassing fondness. No doubt his travels; in Europea and his study of European literature, especially that of Germany, have given his mind that un-American flavor, besides furnishing him with some of his best themes. Cut Germany out of his volume and you cut out mearly half. He lingers in Nuremburg, Bruges and Prague, and for his emblem of life; s river passes the Hudson, the Mississippi, and St. Lawrench, and cites us to "the Moldan's rushing stream. "His transfations from Spanish German, Swedish, Danish, and Anglo-Saxon, attest his wonderful linguistic power and poetic skill. Two, tendencies of our Western civilization are nobly combatted by Longfellow's poems, viz.: the rush and fever of too fintense pursuit, and the sordid, grubbing, narrow thought, that is any to possess us in the hot and dusty struggle of our daily lives. Another quality of his neetry is its extreme amiability. Other poets are at times harsh, disdainful, repellent, but Longfellow, never. Hosems to unite assa member of universal brothe. Lood, and where he cannot approve, his condemnation is almost infile as a mother's. This mildness of spirit, as a; subtle essence, we have a subtle to the lightning, the roar of thunder, nor the furnishment of the lightning the roar of thunder, nor heart of the price some to and restless as healing

entall mark

Tennyson is the English poet whom Longiellow most resembles, with this difference, among the control of the Lonfellow's earlier foems were weaker and his later stronger, but in Tennyson's case vice versa.

While quotations into Longfellow, in the shape of aphorisms or short sayings, are not common in our every, day speech, there are not many poets more frequently quoted at length than he by public writers and speakers. A poet is a public teacher. The old addig implies that the song maker is more potent than the legislator. What are the lessons which we glean moral or otherwise, from our lator. What are the lessons which we glean, moral or otherwise, from our author's works?" (1) Do the duty that lies nearest you, instead of wasting life in empty, vanishing day-dreams. "Better to love the living well, than to moura for those that have died; the dead, perchance, do not need our love, having crossed o'er a sea so wide." (2) He teaches that the great object for which men live, and not the accidents of birth or station, is the true bond that unites men in universal brotherhood. Not chance of birth or place has made us friends, or station, is the true bond that unites men in universal brotherhood. Not chance of birth or place has made us friends, being oftentimes of different tongues and nations, but the endeaver of the self-same ends, with the same hopes and fears and laspirations." (3) He teaches that even our vices, if resolutely trainpled under onfeet, may be the rounds of the ladder by which we can rise to fields of fair renown and emigent domain. (4) On the subwhich we can rise to fields of fair renown and eminent domain. (4) On the subject of slavery, Longfellow's trumpet peals a clarion blast. With stinging scorn and manly protest, he describes it as the old and chartered lie, the feudal curse whose whips and yoke insult humanity. He warns his fellow-countrymen of the swiii judgment that would surely shake the pillars of the commonwealth, and leave their temple of liberty a sharpeless mass of of wreck and rubbish: (5) Although from time immemorial, poets fave generally chanted the praises of wine in their dithyran bic sallies, it will no doubt behighly gratifying to this audience to learn that Longfellow was sound in the temperance question. In his drinking song, he tells us that "youth perpetuals dwells in fountains, not in flasks and casks and cellars, then with water fill the pitcher wreathed about with classic tables," &c. (6) Recognizing the strangely chequered cellars, then with water fill the pitcher wreathed about with classic tables," &c. (6) Recognizing the strangely chequered character of our career on early, he teaches us faith in God, and patience under life's burdens. "Let us be patient, these severe afflictions not from the ground arise, but oftentimes celestial benedictions assume this dark disquise." What is that but saying "Whom the Lord loveth he chastgneth" &c. (7) In the hour of bereavement he points the teasyment of the sad and lonely: "In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion, by guardian angels led, sate from temptation, safe, from sin's pollution, she lives whom we call dead." (8) As between man and man, he teaches an old and in some thatters almost obtained the hard that obeyeth love's command; it is the heart and not the brain that to the highest doth attain, and he was followeth love's command; it is the heart and not the brain that to the highest doth attain, and he was followeth love's behest far exceedeth all the rest." In other words, "And now abideth faith, hope and chargy, these threes, but the greatest of these is charity "— or love.

In conclusion permit me to close this hastily written sketch with the following favorite stanza from our author:

Lives of great men all remind us Me can make our lives sublime, and departing leave behind us

We question if there is another county in Canada that has sent out so skilled cheese-makers into the world as our own county of Leeds.
Farm reville, we think, can carry off he palm in this direction, a large number leaving here every spring to conduct factories in our sister provinces of Quebec and Manitoba. Alhough not personally interested in cheese-making, aill we have taken considerable interest in that branch of agriculture, and are always pleased to note the success of any person engaged in that pu suit. Among the many who have made cheese making a business, none seem to have had better success than our old friend, Jas. Sheldon, of this township. Communicing the business some fifteen years ago, he has, by degrees, won for himself the reputation of being one of the best cheese-makers in the country. For the past three years, he has had the management of the Heinston's Corners Factory, situated a few miles back of Iroquoi in the country of Dundas. We were favored a few days go with a glance at the books of this factory, and from them gleaned the following facts and figures:—We find that during the six months the factory was in operation: there were 1,059,-418 lbs. of milk delivered, from which were manufactured 109,464 lbs. of thee e. The average lbs. of cheese for the season were 96.78.109 for every 100 lbs, of milk. The average price for 100 lbs, of milk to each patron for the season was 97 cts. From the above figures it will be seen that the result, will, compare favorably with any other factory in the province. skill and thet of the cheese maker, Mr. Sheldon. As a proof of the ex-cellent record of Mr. Sheldon as a cheese-m ker, we are informed that since the factory closed he has been offered a situation as manager of a creamery in Manitoba by a company of cheese dealers dding business in Montreal, with a branch office in Winnipeg. The salary offered is a Winnipeg. The salary offered is a good one, but workmen like Mr. Stieldon need not leave their own Province in search of a good situation and a good salary.

Entertainment! () The first public entertainment of the L. M. A. was held on Friday evelling last. As far as possible, the selections were taken from Longfellow's writings, and had the effect of awakening a general interest in the works of our American poet. The program published in our last issue was carried out, with the exception that Miss Addison was indisposed, and in the absence of Rev. W. Blair, and his aveallent griting. Mrs. Blair read his excellent critique.
The instrumental and vocal music was fine, and was warmly applauded. The songs given by Mrs. Cornell and Mrs. Stovens were heartily encored, in responding to v.hich Mrs. Cornell sang "A Summer Shower," and Mrs. Stevens sang "Turnham Toll." The recitation and readings, for amateurs, were 'well rendered, showing careful preparation.' The attendance was large, and the satisfied smile of the audience as they departed told howeminently successful had been the endeavor of the Association to render an "evening with Longfellow" ther-oughly enjoyable to all. The weekly meetings of the Association are mosenteriaining and instructive, and the effect of this public entertainment will doubtless be seen in a large increase in the membership.

Scared Out of a Wife

The narrative which I am about to write was told me one bleak, cold night in a country parlor. It was one of those nights in mid-winter, when the wind sweeps over the land making everything tingle with its frosty breath, that I was settled befrosty fore a blazing fire, surrounded by a half-dozen jolly boys and an old bachelor—Joseph Green—about forty bachelor—Joseph Green—about forty and eight years old.

It was just the very night without to make those within enjoy a good story, so each of us had told his favorite story, save Mr. Green, and as he was a jolly old fellow, we all looked for a jolly story. We were somewhat surp ised to hear him say, "I have no story that would interest you," so we had to find other entertainments for a while, when one of the boys told me while, when one of the boys told me to ask him how it was he never married. So I did. Well, gentlemen," he began, "it don't seem right for me to tell how it happened, but as it is about myself, I t care much. You see, don't care much. You see, when I was young, we had to walk as high as five miles to church and singing school, which was our chief amusement. But this don't have anything to do with my not getting a wife, but I just wanted to show you that we had some trouble them days in getting

John Smith and I were like brothers, or like "Mary and her little lamb," where one went the other was sure to go. So we went to see two sisters, and as we were not the best boys imaginable, the old man took umbrage, and wouldn't allow us to umbrage, and wouldn't allow us to come near the house, so we would see the girls to the end of the lane, and there we would have to take the final

We soon got tired of that sort of of fun, and I told John, on our way to singing school one night, that I as going into the house, too.
He said that the old man would run me out if I did.

I told him I was going to risk it, and come what would.

He said he would risk it if I would. So, home we went with the girls. When we got to the end of the lane, I told the girls we proposed going all the way.

They looked at each other in a way I didn't like too well, and said they—the old folks—would be in bed, so they didn't care if we did.

They were more surprised yet when we told them we thought of going in the house a little while, but as all was quiet when we got there, we had no trouble in getting into the kitchen. Then and there we made our first Sadie to be my wife the next time I came.

I was now past the turn of the night and as we had four miles to walk, I told John we would have to be going. So we stepped out on the porch, but just as we did so, the sky was lit up by hightning, and one tremendous peal of thunder rolled along the mountain sides. Its echo had not died out in the far off vales until the rain began to pour from the garnered fulness of the clouds. We waited for it to stop until we were all sleepy, when the represented. until we were all sleepy, when the represented.

We did not have far to go, as the bed stood near the head of the stairs. John was soon in bed, but I was always slow, and full of curiosity I was looking around the room.

At last, I thought I would sit down on a chest which was spread over with a nice white cloth, while I drew off my boots; so down I sat, when, stars of the east, I went plump into a big custard pie!

I thought John would die laughing for he said I had smashed the custard all to thunder, and the plate right in two. (Continued in our next.)

On Thursday, Robert, youngest son of Wm. N. Bullock, crossed the Gan-anoque River from the west side on an errand to one of the stores. He performed the errand, started for home, and has not been seen since. Search for the missing boy was at once instituted, but no news concerning him could be learned. Ice has been cut in the river and a search made, and search and enquiry have been made search and enquiry have been made in the country for many miles around. It was reported that a boy answering his description had jumped on a farm-er's sleigh going in the direction of Sweet's corners, that the farmer had taken him home, but this proved in-correct. The boys mother visited Mother Barnes, thinking te obtain some clue to the missing one. The Crofton Niblock, had the misfortune to less a valuable cow, on Sunday evening. An subscription list was started on, Monday, and the sum of $30.70 was subscribed, and another cow was bought and presented to him on Wednesday. Quick work Dangerous.

The attention of the road overseer is disected to the condition of the steps at the Gamble House, also to the uneven surface of the walk between the shoe shops of. Jas. Duggan and J. H. McLaughlin. Two quite serious accidents have happened at the places named. These 'places should be rendered safe at once.'

Rich Find! An Othert from Ottawa has been prospecting for minerals in the township of Kitley and has, it is said, struck a rich mine of silver and lead on the farm of Jas. Murphy, some five miles north of Toledo. Report says that north of Toledo. Report says the mitre is very rich and can es be worked when the frost is out of the grounds. Mr. Murphy has been offered $20,000 for the farm on which the mine is located, which offer he has refused. New developments are anxiously looked for as apring opens. New Buildings.

Building operations promise to be brisk in town next summer. E. Gil-roy has part of the brisk and stone on the ground for a new carriage manufactory. D. Fisher has also commenced making preparations to build a blacksmith shop. Arza Wiltse is busily engaged hauling lumber to be used in the erection of a drelling house. B. Lovern will, as soon as the weather will permit, exect a building to be used a a printing office. Other buildings are in contemplation, and the prospects are that mechanics will be busy during the coming summer.

Regrettable. We learn from a private source that owing to a blunder having been made by the clerk of Bastard and Burgess, in not allowing three weeks to elapse between the time of adverto clapse between the time of advertising and wasing on the By-law granting a bonus of $31,000 to the B. W. and S. S. M. Railway Co., a further delay will be necessary to have the B-law again advertised. This will be the third time of advertising, which is to be regretted, as the townships in the reasil are awaiting the result in the rear are awaiting the result in that township before submitting the By-hw in their respective municipal-

Tennyson is the English poet whom Longlellow most resembles, with this difference, among others, that Lonfellow's earlier poem's were weaker and his later stronger, but in Tennyson's case vice verea.

While quotations from Longfellow, in the shape of aphorisms or short sayings, are not common in our every day speech, there are not many poets more frequently quoted at length than he by public writers and speakers. A poet is a public teacher. The old adage implies that the song-maker is more potentian the legislater. What are the lessons which we glean, meral or otherwise, from our author's works? (1) Do the duty that lies nearest you, instead of wasting life in empty, vanishing day-dreams. "Better to love the living well, than to mourn for those that have died; the dead, perchance, do not need our love, having crussed o'er a sea so wide." (2) He teaches that the great object for which men live, and not the accidents of birth or statuon, is the true bond that unites men in universal brotherhood. "Not chance of birth or place has made us friends, being oftentimes of different tongues and nations, but the endeavor for the self-same ends, with the same hopes and lears and aspirations." (3) He teaches that even our vices, if resolutely trampled under our feet, may be the rounds of the ladder by which we can rise to fields of fair remown and eminent domain. (4) On the subject of slavery, Longfellow's trumpet peals a clarion blast. With stinging scorn and manly protest, he describes it as the old and chartered lie, the feudal curse whose whips and yokes insult humanity. He warns his fellow-countrymen of the swift judgment that would surely shake the pillars of the commonwealth, and leave their temple of liberty a shapeless mass of of wreck and rubbish. (5) Although from time immembrias, post tave estables, scallers, it will no doubt be highly gratifying to this audience to learn that Longfellow was sound on the temperance question. In his drinking soug, he tells us that "youth perpetue! dwells in fountains, net in flas (6) Recognizing the strangely chequered character of our career on earth, he teaches us faith in God and patience under hie's burdens. "Let us be patient, these severe afflictions not from the ground arise, but oftentimes celestial benedictions assume this dark disguise." What is that but saying "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth" &c. (7) In the hour of bereavement he points the teardimmed eye to a life beyond, and whispers these words of cheer to the sad and lonely: "In that great cloister's stillness dimmed eye to a life beyond, and whispers these words of cheer to the sad and lonely: "In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion, by guardian angels led, sate from temptation, safe from sin's pollution, she lives whom we call dead."
(8) As between man and man, he teaches an old and in some quarters almost obsolete doctrine, that love is the tulfilling of the law. "Ah, how skilful grows the hand that obeyeth love's command; it is the heart and not the brain that to the highest doth attain, and he wao followeth highest doth attain, and he wno followeth love's behest far exceedeth all the rest." In other words, "And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity "-or love.

In conclusion permit me to close this hastily written sketch with the following favorite stanza from our author:—

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

We have about completed arrange-ments for the erection of a new build-ing to be used as an office, composing and press room for our printing estab-lishment. We find our present quar-ters far too small to accommodate our increasing business. We are also negotiating for the purchase of a new and larger press, upon which the Exports in an enlarged and improved form will be printed, as soon as we get our new building erected. Meanwhile, we ask our readers to kindly use we ask our readers to kindly use their influence to increase our circu-lation to a good paying basis. We question if there is another county in Canada that has sent out so many skilled cheese-makers into the world as our own county of Leeds. world as our own county of Leeds.
Farmersville, we think, can carry of the palm in this direction, a large number leaving here every spring to conduct factories in our sister provinces of Quebec and Manitoba. Alhough not personally interested in cheese-making, still we have taken considerable interest in that branch of agriculture, and are always pleased to note the success of any person engaged in that pursuit. Among the many who have made cheese making a business, none seem to have had a business, none seem to have had better success than our old friend, Jas. Sheldon, of this township. Commencing the business some fifteen rear and he has by degrees, won for himself the reputation of being one of the best cheese-makers in the country. For the past three years, he has had the management of the Brinston's Core as Factory, situated a few miles has a for Iroquois in the country of back of Iroquoi in the county of Dundas. We were favored a few days go with a glance at the books of this factory, and from them gleaned the following facts and figures:—We find that during the six months the factory was in operation there were 1,059,-418 lbs. of milk delivered, from which were manufactured 109,464 lbs. of cheese. The average lbs. of cheese for the season were 96 78-100 for every 100 lbs. of milk. The average price 100 lbs. of milk. The average price for 100 lbs. of milk to each patron for the season was 97 cts. From the above figures it will be seen that the result will compare favorably with any other factory in the province. Much of this success is due to the skill and tact of the cheese-maker, Mr. Sheldon. As a proof of the ex-cellent record of Mr. Sheldon as a cheese-maker, we are informed that since the factory closed he has been offered a situation as manager of a creamery in Manitoba by a company of cheese dealers doing business in Montreal, with a branch office in Winnipeg. The salary offered is a good one, but workmen like Mr. Sheldon need not leave their own Province in search of a good situation of the salary of th tion and a good salary.

Entertainment.

The first public entertainment of the L. M. A. was held on Friday evening lest. As far as possible, the selections were taken from Longfellow's writings, and had the effect of awakering a general interest in the works of our American poet. The program published in our last issue was carried out, with the exception that Miss Addison was indisposed, and in the absence of Rev. W. Blair, Mrs. Blair read his excellent critique. The instrumental and vocal music was fine, and was warmly applauded. Entertainment. was fine, and was warmly applauded.
The songs given by Mrs. Cornell and Mrs. Stovens were heartily encored, in responding to which Mrs. Cornell sang "A Summer Shower," and Mrs. Stevens sang "Turnham Toll." The Stevens sang "Turnham Toll." The recitation and readings, for amateurs, were well rendered, showing careful preparation. The attendance was large, and the satisfied parts of the audience as they departed the eminently successful had been the endeavor of the Association to render an "evening with Longfellow" thoroughly enjoyable to all. The weekly meetings of the Association are most entertaining and instructive, and the effect of this public entertainment will doubtless be seen in a large increase in the membership.

Scared Out of a Wife-

The narrative which I am about to write was told me one bleak, cold night in a country parlor. It was one of those nights in mid-wister, when the wind sweeps over the land, making everything tingle with its frosty breath, that I was settled before a blazing fire, surrounded by a half-dozen jolly boys and an old bachelor—Joseph Green—about forty and eight years old.

It was just the very night without to make those within enjoy a good story, so each of us had told his favorite s'ory, save Mr. Green, and as he was a jolly old fellow, we all looked for a jolly story. We were somewhat surp ised to hear him say, "I have no story that would interest you," so we had to find other entertainments for a somewhat to find other entertainments for a some story that would interest you." while, when one of the boys told me to ask him how it was he never mar-ried. So I did.

ried. So I did.

"Well, gentlemen," he began, "it don't seem right for me to tell how it happened, but as it is about myself, I don't care much. You see, when I was young, we had to walk as high as five miles to church and singing school, which was our chief amusement. But this don't have anything to do with my not cetting a wife. but to do with my not getting a wife, but I just wanted to show you that we had some trouble them days in getting

He said he would risk it if I would.

They looked at each other in a way I didn't like too well, and said they— the old folks—would be in bed, so they didn't care if we did.

They were more surprised yet when we told them we thought of going in the house a little while, but as all was quiet when we got there, we had no trouble in getting into the kitchen. Then and there we made our first ourt, and I made up my mind to ask Sadie to be my wife the next time I came.

I was now past the turn of the night and as we had four miles to walk, I told John we would have to be going. So we stepped out on the porch, but just as we did so, the sky was lit up by lightning, and one tremendous peal of thunder rolled along the mountain sides. So after bidding the girls a sweet good night and wishing them pleasant dreams, and promising to come the next Saturday right, we started for bed.

We did not have far to go, as the bed stood near the head of the stairs. John was soon in bed, but I was always slow, and full of curiosity I was allooking around the room.

At last, I thought I would sie down on a chest which was spread over with a nice white cloth, while I drew off my boots; so down I sat, when, stars of the east, I went plump into a big custard pie!

The body had been mutilated almost beyond recognition. The remains were coffined and taken back to Railton. The Messrs. Keeley, it is said, intend to take legal proceedings against certain persons—students and outsiders—whose names have been ecured.

On Thursday, Robert, youngest son Wm. N. Bullock, crossed the Gananoque River from the west side on an errand to one of the stores. He per-formed the errand, started for home, and has not been seen since. Search for the missing boy was at once instituted, but no news concerning him could be learned. Ice has been cut in the river and a search made, and search and enquiry have been made in the country for many miles around. It was reported that a boy answering his description had jumped on a farm-er's sleigh going in the direction of Sweet's corners, that the farmer had taken him home, but this proved incorrect. The boys mother visited Mother Barnes, thinking te obtain some clue to the missing one. The aged seer said the boy was safe, and contented at the home of a farmer. and that he would be found as she

THE EGYPTIAN WAR.

We regret to say that recent dispatches from the Soudan confirm the truth of our paragraph last week, which announced that Khartoum had been captured by the Mahdi, and General Gordon killed by a traitorous

Under date of February 12, Wolseley telegraphs from Korti as follows After the British had completely sur rounded the ememy's position, about seventy miles above Merawi, on Tuesday morning, Earle commanded the Rluck Watch Regiment to carry the works at the point of the bayonet. The Regiment responded gallantly. The pipers struck up and with cheers the men moved forward with a steadiness and valor which the enemy were unable to withstand, and which called forth expressions of admiration from Earle. From loopholes in the from Earle. From loopholes in the enemy's works rifle puffs shot out continuously, but the Bla k Watch kept bravely advancing. They scaled the difficult rocks in their path, and drove the rebels from their path, and drove the rebels from their position at the point of the bayonet. Unhappily, Earle fell at this point as he was lead-ing the troops to victory. Meanwhile the cavalry pushed beyond the scene of conflict and cal tured the enemy's camp three miles below this. The camp three miles below this. The manoeuvre was accomplished before the Black Watch carried the main position. The B i ish sprang boldly to work, but the enemy clung desperately to the position, and disputed the ground inch by inch. The Staffordshire men drove the enemy from the hill. This brought the battle of Eli Keliekam to a close. 600 Arabs were killed in a close. 600 Arabs were killed in this battle. The Rebels lay dead in beaps. The number who escaped from the field was very small.

A copy of an official document addressed to "the faithful" by the Mahdi, has been found in a deserted Arab camp near Dulka Is'and. The document states that the Prophet took K'artoum by storm on the 26th of January, that he had killed the traitor Gordon and captured his steamers.

The British war office still believe Gordon to be safe at Khartoum.

Entrance Examinations.

The high school entrance regulations have recently been revised by the education department with a view to secure increased efficiency on the part of both public and high schools. The following is a synopsis of the changes

The subjects of examination remain as before, but the details under some of the heads have been altered. In writing, a special paper will be set of a practical nature, and marks will be assigned on most of the other papers for writing and neatness. In drawing, half the marks assigned to the subject may be awarded as the result the examiners inspection of the candidate's drawing book. Next July the examination on history will Next be confined, as hitherto, to the outlines of English history. In subsequent examinations the outlines of Canadian history are Canadian history are prescribed, in addition to those of English history; and candidates are expected to have general knowledge of how England, Canada and Ontario are governed. The literature selections from the Royal and Canadiany series of readers are those hitherto prescribed; but new selections have been made from the old Ontario series. After December, 1885, the selections will be from the fourth book of the series of readers now being prepared by the educational department; some of which selections will be changed each half year. In reading, a general knowledge will be required of vocal expression, with special reference to emphasis, inflection and pause. The passages for tion and pause. The passages for each examination in this subject will be selected by the department, and the candidate will in addition be expected to satisfy the examiners that he reads intelligently as well as intelligibly. Of the marks assigned for composition, a maximum of about one-third may be awarded on the papers in history and English literature. One feature of the regulations in regard to the subjects of examination is, that full details have been given of the course to be followed by the teacher. The values of the difference of that full details have been ferent subjects are now as follows:-Reading 50 Writing.....

Orthography and orthoepy...... 50 Literature...... 100 Arithmetic...... 100 Grammar..... 100 Composition..... 100 History..... Drawing 50

As before, one-third of the maxi mum of the marks on each paper is also required.

As in the case of the fourth book and spelling paper for December, 1884, the value of the correct answer to the questions set on each paper will exceed the maximum prescribed above, except in writing, reading, and orthography and othoepy; but the papers will be so constructed that a columns of the Reporter.

well prepared candidate may obtain the prescribed maximum within the the prescribed maximum within the given time. The object of the preceding regulation is to allow the departmental examiners to present a greater variety of questions, and thereby to enable the candidate to show more readily than heretofore whether he is in a condition to benefit by a high school course.—News.

You see we had to be awful quiet so that the old man wouldn't hear.

I was now ready to get into bed, so I put the light out and picked up my boots thinking to put them in a more convenient place; when down went one of my feet through a pipe hole, which had been covered with paper, up to my very hip.

Now one part of me was up stairs, while the longest part was in the kitchen.

As my leg was very long it reached a shelf which was occupied by dishes, pans, coffee pots, etc., and turning it over down it went with a tremendors

The girls had not yet retired, and I could hear them laugh fit to split their sides.

I felt awful ashamed, and was scared until my heart was in my throat for I expected the old man every

I extracted my leg from the confounded hole just in time, for the old lady looked into the kitchen from the room door, and asked "what's all this noise about?"

The girls put her off as best they could and went to bed, while John was strangling himself under the cover to keep from laughing aloud.

We soon went off into the land of dreams, with the hope of waking early. I wish I could tell you my dreams, but it would take too long.

One moment I would fancy myself beside Sadie, sipping nectar from her heaven bedewel lips, the n xt I would would be flying from the old man, while he would be flourishing his cane above my head.

This all came to an end by John giving me a kick.

On waking up and looking around I saw John's eyes as big as my fist, while the sun was beaming in at the window

What to do we could not tell, for we heard the old man having family p ayers in the kitchen.

John looked out of the window and said we could get down over the roof.
"Get out and dress as soon as possible," he said.

So in my hurry my feet got fastened in the bed clothes, so out I went, head foremost, turned over and down the steps until I struck the door which was fastened with a wooden button, and it giving way out I rolled right in front of the old man.

He threw up both hands and cried Lord save us!" for he thought I "Lord save us was the devil.

The old woman screamed until you could have heard her a mile.

I was so scared and bewildered that I could not get up at once. It wa-warm weather and I didn't have anything on but a shirt.

When I heard the girls snickering, it made me mad, and I jumped up and rushed out of the door, leaving the greater part of my shirt on the old iron door latch

Off I started for the barn, and when I was half way through the yard the dog set up a howl and made for me.

When I got into the barn yard I had to run through a flock of sheep, and among them was an old ram, ness doubtful.

who backed off a little and made for me. With one bound I escaped his blow and sprang into the barn, and began to climb up the logs into the mow, when and old mother hen pounced upon my legs and picked them until they bled.

I threw myself upon the hay, and after John had slid down the porch into a hogshead of rain water, he came to me with one of my boots, my coat and one of the legs of my pants

He found me completely prostrated. Part of my shirt, my hat, one leg of my pants, vest, stockings, necktie and one boot were left behind.

To Stevenson & Co.:

Dear Sirs.—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolicited recommendation of the Stevenson Plano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Plano for a term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Plano in our Parlor in Albert College delights all musicians who test its fine qualities. After the instrument had been in use a few weeks, I gave a willing testimony to its many excellencies. Now, after nearly time many excellencies. Now, after nearly woyears of constant use, my opinion has not changed, except for the better. The true test of a plano is in using it one or two years. The Stevenson Plano has borne that test. I am more than satisfied.

BETHUEL LOVERIN,

THE EGYPTIAN WAR.

The question of the final ending of the Sudanese campaign becomes each day involved in greater obscurity, as fresh complications arise. war may be said to have commenced on the 11th of July, 1882, when the British iron clads stormed Alexandria and defeated Arabi Pasha. For years prior to the rebellion of Arabi, disaffection had been brewing among the Egyptians. The Sultan of Turkey greedy, avaricious, licentious, cruel, and ever bankrupt, had each succeed upon his representaing year called tive in Egypt, the Khedive, to exact still greater tribute from the fellahin, in order that his lust might be grat-The Khedive called upon the ified. tax-gatherers, and they in turn gave the work to an irresponsible body of men of the bum-bailiff order, who exacted the last farthing that the fellahin were able to pay, and there was dire disress in all the land. The disaffection was great, and Arabi, a soldier of fortune who had risen to a high position in the service of the Khedive, saw in the condition of the Anedive, saw in the condition of the peasantry an opportunity for gaining for himself notoriety—possibly place and power. He accordingly enlisted the sympathies of the rebellious people, and placing himself at their head captured the Khedive and kept him a prisoner in his palace. The Sultan was asked to quell the rebellion and protect foreign interests in lion and protect foreign interests in Egypt, which were seriously menaced by the increasing power and popular-ity of Arabi. But the Sultan was un-able or unwilling to establish order in Egypt. Britain interfered to protect her subjects, and Italian, French and American war vessels, anchored in the Mediterranean and watched the British storm and capture Alexandria. As all the world knows, England put down the rebellion, captured Arabi, and established order within one month from the firing of the first shot, and has ever since made her presence felt in the administration of the affairs of Egypt.

During this engagement, rumors of movements was greatly underrated. His career may be briefly described as follows:—Early in July, 1981, the Mahdi gave the first signs of military revolt, and the authorities of Khartoum having ordered him to come to that city he treated the order with contempt. When a battallion of black troops were sent to enforce the order he raihed his forces and cut the black troops to pieces. The next year, 1882, a force of 6,000 Egyptians were sent against him and he either captured or annihil at them. In January, 1883, the Mindi captured El Obeid, about 200 miles south of Khartoum, and has ever time made it his headquarters. In March, 1888, Col. Hicks, a British officer, arrived at Khartoum and undertook to organize a force for the recapture of El Obeid. In April he defeated a rebel force 5,000 strong and killed 500 of the enemy, including the Mahdi's grand vizier. In Sept. Hicks Pasha marched vizier. In Sept. Hicks Pasha marched out of Khartoum with 7,000 fighting men, encountered the Mahdi's army near El Obeid, engaged in a three days fight, lost his own life, and he days fight, lost his own life, and he and his force has never since teen heard from. Meanwhile, Osman Digna rose into prominence as the Mahdi's chief ally in the region of country about Suakim, on the coast of the Sea, where the English landed small forces and met with various successes and defeats. A little more than a year ago, when the the situation at Khartoum looked hopeless for the garrison and European settlers there, General Gordon was settlers there, General Gordon was selected as a folorn hope and started alone for the fatal city. His mission was one of peace. He believed simply that the Mahdi was disaffected toward the Egyptian Government, and that liberal English proposals would satisfy him. He soon found that the Mahdi him. He soon found that the Mahdi represented a larger rising than was supposed, and then was bent on smashing him. This plan the Glad-stone Government never yielded to, and a plan to relieve Gordon was formed. And in August of last year, General Wolseley left England in charge of what has been known as the Nile relief expedition, consisting of Nile relief expedition, consisting of 9,000 picked soldiers of the British army, and a detachment of Canadians. His instructions were to bring away from Khartoum General Gordon and Col. Stewart.

Nothing of any serious moment happened to this force until the 17th and 19th of this month, when Gen. Stewart with the advance army of the expedition fought two battles and thus turned the whole design of the torce from a relief party to that of an invading army. The result was that invading army. The result was that the Mahdi seized upon the opportunity long delayed, and fell on Khartoum with such overwheming numbers as lead to its overthrow.

Scott Act Notes

Well, the great Anti-Scott pow-wow delegation have been to Ottawa and interviewed Sir John. According to the published reports they met with a very cool reception. It has been enstemary when any important delegation went to the seat of Government to lay their grievances before our august legislators to accord to them the use of one of the many committe rooms at the disposal of the Government. Was any such courtesy extended to the liquor dealers? Decidedly not. Or, as our Nick of the Woods would put it, Naw sah! But the delegation had to rent the opera house, instead Sir John, Langevin, Bowell, Carling and Costigan assembled to receive the delegation and give them the decided answer, yes or no, which answer the delegation boasted they were going to wring from the Government. Did they get that decided answer? Again Nick would say, naw sah! Report says that Wm. Kyle, whose letters to the Globe in opposition to the Scott Act gained for him considerable notoriety, presented the memorial of grievances. They asked for a commission of enquiry and a suspension of the Act while the commission was sitting; that the signing of the petitions for the Act should be before a properly constituted officer; that a clear majority of the electors in the county shembly be necessary to the carrying of the act, that a longer time should be given for all loss to dealers incurred by the passage of the Scott Act.

Regarding compensation, he said "For myself I voted for the Scott Act, though in opposition, and it was carried by the Liberal Government of Mr. Mackenzie. But as to the question of compensation, if total prohibition were introduced, I certainly as one would vote for compensation "Sir John evidently tried to say nothing, and he succeeded admirably.

It is thought desirable to encourage both of these classes of purchase of appendages for facilitating instruction. It is thought desirable to encourage both of these classes of expenditures, and, therefore it is proposed to take them into consideration in apportioning the legislative grant. In England, even in the public schools payment on the basis of results prevails and the adoption of a similar payment on the basis of results prevails, and the adoption of a similar system in connection with our high schools, it is hoped will be found to work beneficially. Canon Lildon and the Bishop of Peterborough stand out as unquestionably the two finest preachers of the Established Church. There is a story of a private soldier having gone to St. Paul's on an afternoon when Dr. Liddon was to preach. The printed paper with the hymn was handed to him, but not understanding that it was offered gratishe refused it with a shake of the head, saying: "You don't supp so I should be here it I had got any money?" Most of the people who go to hear the elequent Canon are different from this sollier, for they would pay—and very liberally—to quent Canon are different from this soldier, for they would pay—and very liberally—to get seats near the pulp t. On the afternoons of the Sundays when Dr. Liddon is in residence, the cathedral presents an extraordinary sight with its huge nave aisles densely thronged. So far as the preacher's voice will reach, people stand, straining eyes and ears, and fortunately Dr. Liddon's voice resonnds well undor the dome, though now and then it becomes indistinct through the preacher's speaking too fast in his excitement. Two other things occasionally mar Dr. Liddon's delivery. Snortness of aight makes him often stoop to consult Bible or notes, and ag in he bowsthe head in a marked manner when he utters the holy name, notes, and again he bowsthe head in a marked manner when he utters the holy name, but when he thus bends he goes on speaking, so that his worls fall on the pulpit cushion and are deadened, which produces upon prople who are at some little distance off the effect of continual stoppages and gaps in the sermon. No other defects besides these, however, can be noted in orations which for beauty of language, elevation of thought, and lucidity in reasoning could not be surpassed. We have heard Dr. Liddon many times at Oxford and in London, and have of served that the impression produced by his cloquence was always the same, no matter who might be listening to him. We remember in particular, a sermon of his on the text, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation." It was absolutely magnificent to hear him prophesy the gradual progress of the world toward a higher state. Every man, from the greatest to the leas, was made to feel his share of the responsibility in advancing or retarding the evolution of manking and while the consequences of ed manner when he utters the holy name was made to feel his share of the responsibility in advancing or retarding the evolution of mankin!, and while the consequences of evil were pointed out as extending to incaculable lengths, there was a sublime hopefulness in the promise that the smallest good offering brought to the Creator would be multiplied by him as the "five loaves were multiplied."

Australian Defences.

Australian Defences.

The area of South Australia is so great, and its population and resources comparatively still so undeveloped, that no attempt to defend the country districts or the numerous small tows on the sea board can at present be contemplated. The heart of the country beats in Adelaide, which is at once the seat of Government and the repository of the national wealth. It is estimated that once in the hands of an enemy the sum of £5,000,000 sterling could be levied from it in a few hours, by placing Governments banks, and private individuals, alike, under rigorous contribution. The whole duty of local defences have been thown upon the colonists themselves. Under no origation to the Imperial Government to protect themselves, bound by no tie of federation to inter c.l. mall uniformity of action, and imbued with a touching belief in the ub quity and omaip tence of the British fleet, the different Australian Governments drifted on vaguely for several years. This state of apathy was rudely dispelled by the Russo-Turkish scare of 1877, when the Autipode ans suidenly awoke to their defenceless condition. Soldiering is very popular in South Australia. There is a steady and ever increasing flow of recruits into the ranks of the Militia, so that, notwithstanding a severe medical examination, the inevitable waste is amply provided for. Bet The area of South Australia is so great drill with great success. Throughout the force the physique is excellent. The infantry in height, build and age, are decidedly superior to the line regiments of the present day, and the Artillery can hold their own with their brethren at home.

Of the remarkable loyaity and affection for the Old Country which prevades not only the South Australians, but all the Australian troops, we will give one instance. Within four hours of the arrival in Adelaide of the news of our defeat at Majaba Hill three hundred men from the small juba Hill three hundred men from the small defence force, we have been describing, had volunteered for active service in the Transvaal, "to help our chaps against the Boers." The offer had already been telegraphed home when the other colonies hearing of it, instan'ly began to follow suit, an' in twenty-four hourse 2,000 sturdy Australians had placed themselves at the service of the Home Government, eager to help to avenge the honor of the British flag. It is greatly to be hoped that the colonies will lose no time in federating for military and naval purposes. naval purposes.

At present each member of the Australasian group works independently, without concert with her neighbors—a state of things which in time of peace is expunsive, and in time of war might become danger ous. Even more pressing is the necessity for establishing a colonial government manufactory of small-arm amunition in some central locality, whence the magazines could be replenished without need of constant application to the British authorities.

Out of the nonulation, which we may

Out of the population, which we may roughly estimate at 2,900,000, there are more than 16,000 men who voluntarily undertake military duties. The capital sums spent, or about to be spent, on permanent fortifications since 1877 (without reckoning forting ations since 18/7 (without reckoning naval defences) amount to a million sterling; while the estimated annual military expenditure is calculated at £272,000. In the face of these figures no one can accuse the Australian colonists of too exclusively relying on Imperial protection in case of war,

The Honolulu Fish Market.

A visit to the fish market of Honolulu on a Saturday afteraoon, Winter or Summer, (for there are no seasons here, remember,) is a sight seldom elsewhere to be met. Situated on the street lving baside the attl. (for there are no seasons here, remember,) is a sight seldom elsewhere to be met. Stuated on the street lying beside the still surface of the bay, it seems as if the fish had only to be angled for with the fingers from the piers in order to be caught, cleaned, sold, cooked, and eaten. Every variety of fin affact is to be seen in this market, pre-eminently the nutrious mullet. Fish-wives, fish-husbands, and fish children barter the soaly merchandise from stalls or counters covered with fish and specie. No where else that I know of could vendors leave in parallel piles upon their tables with impunity gold and silver coins often amounting to socres of dollars. A good deal of cnatting, joking, and bargaining accompany proceedings in this pace of trade, the pictures que natives preponderating both as buyers and sellers, while all around is life, noise, flutter, and business eagerness. The scene reminds one of the Neaplian fish market in the square where Masaniello organized his popular uprising and revolutionary revolt—that bold fisherman, king of but three days' reign. Fish is a favor to food o the Hawaiian at all times, which, with a bowl of poi, makes up his usual meal. The Unexpected Vistor.

The Unexpected Vistor.

The uninvited visitor drops upon us at most inconvenient times and is ascons, quite as a matter of course, lke a poor relation, and proceeds to make herself the oughly at home without more ado. Naturally we do not expect any great amount of diffilence on the part of a person who is bold enough to intrude upon the privacy of another without special request, and we are therefore but little surprised when, we find her investigating the upper storey of the house, or devising means for invading the proone that have been closed to her, or interviewing the servants; when she demands catables not upon the table, and tells us about the luxurious surroundings of her last hose s; when knowing the breakfast hour, he wilfully lies in bod till that meal is spoled, till all the delicacies prepared for her delectation have lost their relish and become indigestible; when she is impatient if so nething is not being done for her enertainment; when she complains of the temperature of the dining room in warm weather, and the terment of the flies, the persistence of the morquities, without seeming to realize that they are ancoyances to which she has voluntarily subjected herself; or when she is curious about our work. At the same time that she aggravates us with her peculiarities, her audacities interest and amuse us; we find subjected herself; or when she is curious about our work. At the same time that she aggravates us with her peculiarities, her audacities interest and amuse us; we find ourselves wondering whatch will do or say next, and if she has exhausted her importances. And her peculiarities afford a constant theme for mirthful thought long after the has left in after she has left us.

The practice is a good one and works beneficially for all parties especialtyfor the producer. It operates as a premium upon the cultivation of the most productive varieties of fruits, vegetables, and farm stock. The farmer, who is painstaking within poultry and gets the largest weight of eggs, has a fair reward for his skill and industry. has a fair reward for his skill and industry. The present custom is a premium to light weights, and good layers. We need a change in the interest of fair dealing in trade, and, if necessary, it should be enforced by legislation. If the legislaure is competent to fix the weight of a bushel of corn or potatoes, it can easily regulate the weight of a dozen eggs, and thus promote justice between buyers and seller. er and seller.

MY FIRST READER.

BY MARGARET EYTINGE.

I see a book. It is a First Reader. First Reader is a book for very young

And being a book for very young children, containing in a condensed form the milk of literature, who would have imagined that it ever could have by any possi-bility become the means of bringing the greatest confusion and vexation to a grown-up? But it did. I, Samuella Golden, am that grown-up. And I am the author, or nearly the author (under the ablest supervision, I frankly confess,) of that First Reader.

The way it came about was this The way it came about was this. I have always been passionately fond of children. When but a decidedly small specimen of humanity myself I adored all the smaller specimens with whom I chanced to meet. At the tender age of six, there being then no baby at my own home, I deliberately entered the home of our washer-woman one day, knowing her our washer-woman one day, knowing her our wasner-woman one day, knowing her to be absent at the time, and stole her five-mouths-old Patsey from the cradle in which he was peacefully sleeping, and in spite of his kicks and yells, when he spite of his kicks and yells, when he awoke to the situation, I managed to carry him safely to our house—fortunately not far distant—and place him in the arms of my very much astonished mother. And when he was reclaimed and carried away again by his rightful owner, I sat me down on the floor with a bang, and opened my mouth to its utmost width, and lifted up my voice to its utmost height, and refused most emphatically to be comforted.

be comforted. This love of little ones did not diminish in the least as I grew in stature and in years. On the contrary, it seemed to increase, and it became as natural for me to talk baby talk to and make baby rhymes for every wee darling that came in my way as it was for me to breathe. And for the older youngsters I had always a story ready—some simple thing about simple things, but, by virtue of creation, my own. And having contrived to be an unobserved listener to several of these stories and having also learned from Sue, his little nicce, that I "made up out of my own head" the jingles with which she often sought to entertain him, Mr. Erickson, our school-master-and a very clever fellow too-said to me one afternoon. "Miss Golden, I have undertaken a task in which I think—nay, I am sure—that you can, if you will, be of great assistance to me. "And pray what may that task be?"

asked I, wonderingly.

"The preparation of a First Reader," he replied. "I do not expect the pecuniary results to be princely, though no doubt you would reclies enough to compensate you for whatever time you might expend; but the practice would be excellent for you, and perhaps open the way for better paying literary work."

"Literary work," repeated I. "Why,

I never even dreamed of such a thing."
"Did you not?" he said, with a smile. "Well, you are not the first person who has remained in ignorance of his or her particular talent until a friend discovered it. But are you willing to give me a helping hand with the book?"

"Most willing,' said I. "Tell me plainly what I am to do, or to try to do, and I will begin this very evening."

And I did begin that very evening, and extremely glad I was to do so. For I had already, although April had scarcely set in, trimmed my usual amount of spring hats and bonnets, which—our community not following strictly, for good and suffi-cient reasons, the decrees of fashion—also included most of the summer ones, there-by cutting off that source of income for four or five months. And it had been highly necessary that another source should be discovered immediately. From which statement you will naturally infer that the Golden family was golden only in name. It was. Otherwise, of course I mean in a money sense, it was nickelly, not that to as great an extent as de sirable.

Father—well, any kind of steady business seemed to disagree with father; conness seemed to disagree with father; consequently he contributed to our support only by fits and starts. Daniel, our eldest boy, worked faithfully as an assistant book-keeper in a publishing house in New York city, and sent nearly half his salary to mother the first of every month. George, our youngest boy, was clerk (with a hope of some day becoming one of the firm) at the Willwood general store; and I. as I have intimated above, was the If my at the winwood general score; and I, as I have intimated above, was the Willwood milliner. But work as hard as we might, Daniel, George, and I, we could do no more, even with the intermittent helps from father, than take care mittent helps from father, than take care of ourselves and the rest of the family in the humblest way. (The rest of the family consisted of mother—a darling—grand-mother—another darling—and three of the sweetest, cunningest little girls, two, five, and six years old, that ever needed to be taken care of.) So, as you may well magine, I was not only delignted, but extremely delighted, to get the chance of assisting Mr. Erickson with the Reader. And I confided as much to Matt Brewster when we were coming home from church And I confided as much to Matt Brewster when we were coming home from church together the next Sunday evening. "Because, you see, Matt," said I, "if I succeed with this, maybe I can go on writing until"—and I caught my breath at the boldness of the idea—"I am found worthy of a place in the juvenile magazines, and, as a reason writer. I could help the as a successful writer, I could help the family much more than I can now, for literary work is for all seasons, and mil-linery only for two or three months out of the whole year."
"You forget," said Matt, "your rich

"Oh dear 4" said I, "so I did. But he on dear's said 1, "so I did. But he has forgotten us for so many years—ever since I was five, and I was nineteen on my last birthday—that now he has condescended to remember our existence, and promise us a visit, it's no wonder that I can't keep him in mind. And we are not sure that his coming will benefit us any. He may be a cranky old man, and any. He may be a cranky old man, and very hard to please. It is more than likely he is, for father (with whom he could never agree, though he is his only brother) tells me he was an unusually cranky young one.

Oh, you must make him pleased with you," declared Matt, decisively. "You have one advantage, and a great one, over the others. You are his goddaughter,

I know it to my sorrow," I assented "Samuella! What a name to give an unfortunate girl baby! If it hadn't been for that saving 'Ella,' what would I have done? Fancy a woman's being called 'Sam' all her life!"

"Sam 'all her life!"
"But you will do your best to get into the old chap's good graces, won't you?"
said Matt, coaxingly.
"Well, yes, 1 will, since your heart seems to be set upon it," I promised, though I wondered at the time why he was so anxious that I should become a favorite of Uncle Sam's. "I'll do everything but give up the Reader."

Matt Brewster was chief proprietor of the store where my brother George was clerk, and he was also my acknowledged lover. The latter fact made me the envy lover. The latter fact made me the envy of half the girls in Wildwood, for Matt was considered the handsomest and most fascinating young bachelor in the place. He was tall and slender, with very fair hair, light blue eyes, a straight nose, and a small mouth.

Mrs. L. rey, the young wife of old Captain Leroy—looked up to with great respect by three-fourths of the population of Wildwood, because she had her bonnets and gloves straight from Paris,—gave it as her opinion that his brow was too narrow, and his chin too retreating. "Give me," she said, calmly and coolly, "the schoolmaster, any day, in preference. He is not quite as tall, but his shoulders are broader, so is his forehead, and he has a certain manly lo and way about him that is utterly lacking in Mr. Matthew

Strange as it may appear, I did not feel as indignant at this adverse criticism of my betrothed (by-the-way, I had stipulated at the time of our engagement, now two months old, that marriage should not be thought of for at least two years) as some of the other girls did. Nettie Haley, some of the other girls did. Nettie Haley, for instance—daughter of Haley the builder, with a snug little fortune in her own right, inherited from her mother—was particularly wroth.

"She only talks that way," she said, referring to Mrs. Leroy, "because she wants to seem different from everybody class just as she souls to Paris from this else, just as she sends to Paris from this out-of-the way village for her bonnets and gloves. Why, there's no comparison between the two men. Matt dances beautifully; Mr. Erickson don't dance a step. Matt sings lovely; Mr. Erickson can only join in a bass. Matt has a complexion like a girls; and Mr. Erickson has one like—like—" ly, as she paused for a comparison.

A man's," I suggested, mischievous

"Oh, pshaw, Ella, what a tease you are! And about your own beau, too!
But I don't really believe you know" and here she heaved a deep sigh—" what and here she heaved a deep sigh—"what a lucky girl you are."

Well, I began the Reader, and soon became so absorbed in my work that everything I cast eyes upon instantly resolved itself into a First Lesson. Did the butcher stop at the door, "I see a man; he is a butcher; a butcher sells meat," immediately flashed through my brain. Did one of my intimate friends call. I greeted her in my mind with, "I brain. Did one of my intimate triends call, I greeted her in my mind with, "I see a girl; her name is May" (or Lib, or Molly, whichever it might be); "she comes to tell some news." My very heaved by like avanales. dreams were haunted by like examples. I saw the queerest things. Their names were gibberish. They played strange and ridiculous pranks. But for all that—perchance in consequence of all that—the book progressed rapidly, and the first hundred lessons were almost completed, when m ther received a letter from a cousin of hers, dated from the same place in Australia from which Uncle Sam's had come. It read as follows:

"DEAR SARAH,-Your brother-in-law starts for Wildwood in a few days. I trust that he will arrive safely, and bring you permanent relief from your pecuniary troubles. You will find him much changed in personal appearance—the result of several hard fights in which he has been engaged—since you last saw him. Never handsome, he is now—peculiar-looking. I write this especially to warn you, and to have you warn the others, not to allude in the slightest way to the physical blemishes it will be impossible for you not to observe, as any such allusion would have the effect of rousing him to furious anger. With love to Samuella, upon whom he seems inclined to look with favor, and kind remembrances to the rest, I am yours faithfully,

And not very long after the reception of this letter Uncle Sam made his appearance. He was "peculiar-looking," to use a favorite remark of one of our oldest citizens, "with a vengeance."

His head was bald in spots, as though the hair had been pulled out by great handsful, and his face was all awry. Add to this the expression of an ogre, and you will not wonder that the children, who had been hastily dressed at news of his approach, were as hastily withdrawn to the kitchen when he arrived. Poor little darlings, we got them away just in time, for their lips had begun to quiver and their eyes to grow big with frightened surprise. "They will get used to him by degrees," whispered my mother, as I gave each of them a re-assuring kiss.
"And now, Ella dear, go back and do your best to entertain him until your father comes in, while I see about the dinner."

I returned to the parlor. I sat down I found a dreadful opposite our visitor. cination in his unsymmetrical face. fascination in his unsymmetrical race. 1 could not remove my eyes from it. I sessayed to speak, but before my mouth was fairly-open Uncle Sam bent his shaggy brows and growled, "And so you're Sam, are you? And what do you see that you stare in that way?"

And then the spirit of that First Reader, in spite of all that I could do to resist it, took complete possession of me. I replied slowly and distinctly: "I see a man; he is a queer-looking man; he has a crooked mouth; he has a crooked chin; he has crooked eyes; he has an awful scowl; he is a rich man. I am a poor girl. I would rather be a pretty poor girl than a rich crooked

And that was the last of our expecta tions from Uncle Sam. He arose, thundered forth some words which I can not repeat, broke all the mantel ornaments at one fell swoop, and left the house never to return again.

I'll just add, to whom it may concern, that soon after the hopes of a fortune from my godfather were thus destroyed, my engagement to Matt Brewster was broken, and that young gentleman married Nettie Haley.

As for me, I was "lucky" enough to become the happy wife of John Erickson. And our First Reader proved a perfect

Tooth Drawing Extraordinary.

The fashionable and eccentric physi-The fashionable and eccentric physician, Dr. Monsey, who lived in Sir Robert Walpole's time, took so keen a delight in drawing teeth by this particular process that, in the absence of a patient with a fee for the service, he would sometimes be his own dentist, and operate on himself from a pure large of art. The prohimself from a pure love of art. The pro-cess was this. Round the tooth to be drawn the doctor fastened securely a strong piece of cargut, to the other end of which a bullet was attached. A pistol having been charged with this bullet and a full measure of powder, the operation was performed effectually and speedily. was performed effectually and speedily. The doctor could rarely prevail on his friends to let him remove their teeth in this singular and startlingly simple manner. Once a gentleman, who had agreed to make trial of the novelty, and had even to make trial of the noverty, and and allowed the apparatus to be adjusted, allowed the last moment. "Stop! stop!" he exclaimed, "I've changed my mind." "But I haven't changed mine, and you're a coward for changing yours," mind. answered the doctor, pulling the trigger. Even at this distance of time it would be pleasant to discover that the patient of this comedy was his grace of Grafton, and that, to avenge himself for the loss Grafton, of a place in the lord chamberlain's gift, the operator attached the catgut to the wrong tooth, -Leisure Hour.

A Story of a Pocket.

A fire broke out in a dwelling house the other night, and after the man and his wife had safely reached the street the latter said that there was $50 in the pocket of her dress, hanging in a second-story back room.

I'll go for it," said the husband, and

"I'll go for it," said the nusuand, and he plunged into the burning building. The flames raged furiously, and the man did not return. At the expiration man did not return. At the expiration of an hour the fire was extinguished and or an nour the tire was exonguished and the back building caved. Firemen groped their way up the rear stairs through water and blinding smoke, and found the man in the closet still fumbling at his wife's dress, looking for the money.

He was nearly suffocated with smoke, but had strength enough to say that he thought he wou'd have found the pocket inside of two hours. It never occurred to him to seize the dress and rush out with that. Some men get so excited and nervous in time of fire.

The fame that comes from hanging is but hemp-tie honor.

By Eng.-A FARMERSVILLE BOY.

"Who owns that nice house and that cluster of neat looking out-build-ings down at the corner, about a mile from here?"

from here?

This question was asked by a young man travelling on foot of a farmer who was working near the road on which the young man was travelling. The place was some ten or eleven miles north-east from what was then the thriving town, but now the flour ishing city, of Providence, Rhode Island, U. S. A. The time of the year was about the first of June when farmers had just finished sowing and planting for the season. In the interim between sowing and hoeing all nature looked gay and cheerful. The grass was growing green by the roadside and in the pastures and meadows. Apple, plum, and other fruit-bearing trees and shrubs were in full blossom, while wild flowers were scattered in profusion over the fields and woods. The bees were busy among the flowers, the birds were singing in the branches or building their nests, and even the cattle and sheep appeared to be enjoying the situation to an extraordidegree after the long confinement of a New-England winter. The newly sown grain was beginning to cover the fields with its beautiful mantle of green, thus reminding men of the beautiful and encouraging promise, that seed time and harves should continue while the earth remained. The whole combined tended to dispose people to acts of generosity henevolence, and hospitality.

"You don't live in these parts, said the farmer, "or you wouldn't be asking that question. That's Squire Gibson's place, or Roddy Gibson, as they used to call when he was little and the name stuck to him till they elected him Justice of the Peace three years ago, since which time we call him Squire Gibson. He has lived down there now for over twenty years he and his wife, who was Susan Ed wards. She was an orphan, and was brought up by her grandfather and grandmother, old Mr. and Mrs. Cromgrandmother, old Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell, and to tell you how he came to get her for a wife would be as good as a novel, in fact, in one sense, it's better, because it's true, and that is smething which can very seldom, if ever, be said of novels, for, as a general thing, they don't even pretend to be true?" be true

"Well, no," replied the traveller,
"I don't live very near here. My home is within a few miles of Hart ford, Conneticut. Father brought me about twenty miles this morning, and he thought I could go the rest of the way on foot. I am going down to Pcovidence. My uncle, Charles Ripley, lives there. He keeps a grocery and liquor store. His boy, Fred, who was three years younger than I, used to help his father tend shop, and he began once in a while to taste the liquor he was selling, till by frequently tasting he soon became having tasted rather too much, he walked out and either walked or staggered off the dock and was drowned. They got his body the next day, and held an inquest over it. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning, but ne glected to say anything about the cause of the accident. Uncle Charles wrote me to come to him and I am going to see what he wants. Father thinks he will want me to stay in the shop with him, but he advised me by all means to return to the farm by or before the harvest time, but I do not know what I shall do till I get there. In the meantime, I wish you had time to tell and I had time to listen to more about Squire Gibson (I think you called him) and his marriage. You say it is as good as a novel, and if it is, I should like to hear all about it—but I suppose I ought to be going as the day is wearing away."

"Do not be in a hurry, young man," said the farmer, "you will have plenty of time to walk ten miles after two o'clock, and I see by the smoke coming out of the chimney that dinner will soon be ready. Stay, and after dinner I will tell you all about Roddy and Susan, and if you don't say it's better than any novel you've read this last winter, I shall be disappointed, that's all."

The traveller consented to wait for dinner, and after partaking of a sub-stantial, old-fashioned New England dinner of baked meat and beans, to-gether with such other accompaniaments as are found on a farmer's table, the young man reminded his host of his promise, who immediately began as follows:—

"Well, you see, Roddie's father was from Scotland, and that's the way he came to call his boy Roderick, but whether in honor of Roderick Dhu or some other Roderick, I don't know. any way, he was a Presbyterian Min-ister and brought up his family in a strictly religious observance of the Sabbath and in the practice of other religious duties, and no doubt that, together with a good education, has been the principal means of bringing Squire Gibson to be where and what he is. For whatever some people may say to contrary, in at least nine cases our of ten, the training of infancy and childhood exert a powerful influence in forming the character of the man or woman, especially if precept and example are slike, and that is the reason why the precept and example of the mother are s nuch more powerful and abiding than that of the father.—But I'm off he story. Well, then, Susan, she was the daughter of James Edwards, boot, shoe and leather dealer, down in Providence, where you are going. He was doing a good business till his wife died of consumption, leaving Susan only eighteen months old. Mr. Edwards, himself, by being so much in the same room with his wife luring her long continued sickness, ulso caught the disease, and only lived year and a half after his wife. He ad accumulated a considerable an mount of money and property, and n his will left a thousand dollars to Susan, to be paid to her on her mariage, or when twenty-one years of uge, if unmarried."—To be Continued. very fond of the stuff, and one night,

THE STEVENSON PIANO.

The following is an unsolicited testimonial as to the merits of this excellent Piano:—
Fo Stevenson & Co.:

Po Stevenson & Co.:

Dear Sirs,—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolicited recommendation of the stevenson Piano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Piano for a term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Piano in our Parlor in Albert college delights all musicians who test its fine qualities. After the instrument had been in use a few weeks, I gave a willing testimony to te many excellencies. Now, after nearly two years of constant use, my opinion has not hanged, except for the better. The true test if a piano is in using it one or two years. The tevenson Piano has borne that test. I am nore than satisfied.

The propeller Michigan of the Grand Trunk service, on the 18th inst., was frozen in the ice 23 miles west of Grand Haven. Seventeen of the orew crossed the intervening ice and reached the shore after a perillous journey. Thirteen remained en board. The ice extends into the lake as far as the eye can reach, and the propeller will have to await a thaw.

An extraordinary story comes from the United States. Agnes Booth, daughter of the Salvation Army Commander, General Booth, is said to be visiting Chicago, St. Louis and other large cities, organizing a regiment of girls who will be trained in "Sacred dramatic matters" for the purpose of turnishing entertainments to offset those of the variety theatres and concert halls. Scenery is being prepared for the presentation in dramatic form of some of the most solemn scenes in Biblical history. Miss Booth is reported to have said that thirty girls are already giving performances in a variety theatre in Whitechapel, London, illustrative of the "Triumph of God in the soul," and that the experiment has proved a success. The story seems incredible, but if it be true, it is to be hoped that steps will be taken to prevent such an outrage on propriety.

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE SEA.

Omens of Good and Evil That Sailors Be lieve in.

There is probably no class of people in the world so full of superstitious belief as the average sailor, unless, indeed, it be the negroes of the south. This belief mens of the sea is not confined alone to forecastlemen, but is to a greater or lesse extent shared by captains and mates. In conversation a few days ago with a grizzly-bearded and bronzed old mariner, who has trod the quarter-decks of ships as mas-ter for upward of a quarter of a century, a San Francisco Chronicle reporter broach ed the subject of the superstition of sail ors. "Do sailors believe in omens?" ors. "Do sailors believe in omens?" said the captain, repeating the reporter's question, "well you can bet your starry toplights they do. They are the crankiest lot of men in the world, and you would be astonished to know what trifling matters sometimes causes them to give up going on a voyage. I have known sailors to predict the direst calamities to a ship because they happened to sneeze while because they happened to sneeze while going on board. Then again, if a vessel is delayed in port and does not sail at the is delayed in port and does not sail at the appointed time, it is a bad omen, according to Jack's ideas. They have good omens too. A fair day when they ship is a good sign, and if the sun is shining brightly on the day they sail, it is a sign that the vessel will have a speedy and prosperous voyage. A baffling head wind leads sailors to believe that there is a Jonah on board, and they do all sorts of things, such as burning a piece of old sail things, such as burning a piece of old sail or rope-yarn, and the throwing overboard of a sea biscuit to exorcise the evil effects of his presence, and when the wind does shift and becomes fair they attribute it to their soreerism, their good spirits return, and all goes merry until something else happens to disturb their fears. remember an old fellow I once ship ped at Liverpool for the voyage home to New York,' continued the captain. "He was a veritable old sea-dog, and the crew at once set him down as a Jonah. He was called Liverpool Jack, and was the queerest chap I ever saw. He wanted the voyage prolonged as much as possible, and one day the men caught him in the foretop whistling for a head wind, and, sure enough, the following morning the wind shifted and came dead from the head. This, of course, necessitated the frequent tacking of the ship, and the curses of the crew were loud and long. That wind stuck to us for three days, and the crew decided to chuck Jack overthe crew decided to chuck board, and I verily believe they would have carried their threat into execution had the wind not changed. Sailors also have an aversion to clergymen's sons, and if they, know that one is on board a vessel they will not ship under any consideration. Why they dislike a vessel with a minister's son on board I have never found out, but it is considered one of the worst 'hoodoos' by sailors. Out at sea if, as is frequently the case, a shark follows in the wake of a vessel, it is a sign, that some wake of a vessel, it is a sign that some one on board will soon die, but it is one of the worst omens to kill it. Of all the seabirds what are known as a 'Mother Cary's chicken,' a dark bird somewhat resembling a gull, but about the size of a chicken, is held most sacred by the forecastle men. Its presence fortells an approaching storm, and this sign hardly ever fails. A seaman would as soon think of fails. A seaman would as soon think of swimming across the Pacific ocean as to molest one of the chickens. Then, again, it is bad luck, so sulors say, to kill the seagulls that follow ships out at sea, as they are considered the harbingers of good luck. If dolphins accompany the vessel, it is also considered a good onen." it is also cousidered a good omen.

A singular incident happened some years ago on board an American ship en route to this city. A few days out from New York a booby, a bird somewhat like a gull, but much smaller, alighted on the foretop, and one of the sailors went up and caught it. The booby was brought lieve Greeley was either then or on deck, where it was attacked by the ship's dog. The animal flew at the bird, thing.

which drove its bill down the dog's throat, and thus the two remained until separat The booby was thrown overboard, and was not seen for some time, when suddenly it reappeared perched in the foretop again. A sailor went aloft and captured it, and it was brought down and taken into the forecastle, where the sailors held a trial, and the bird was sentenced to death. The executioner was the carpenter, and the unfortunate booby was beheaded. The dog disappeared after the encounter, but immediately after the bird had been killed it came on deck and began running around in a cir-cle. This was continued for some time, when suddenly it made a dash for the stern of the ship and jumped overboard. Even the captain, a Boston man, was affected by the incident, and for several days the deepest sort of gloom prevailed among those on board, and some of the crew predicted some disaster before the end of the voyage, and none felt entirely end of the voyage, and none felt entirely easy until port was reached.

In addition to being superstitious sailors have queer names for things on shipboard. His bunk in the forecastle he terms his pew; he says "aft" for "abaft" and "fornst" for "forward." The captain is known as the "old man," the cartantor as "ships" and the light is the penter as "chips," and the cook is the only man abaft and foremast that has the of stinction of having his office mentioned in connection with his name, and he is referred to as Ben or Joe the cook. An old sailor is called "a whale." A drunken man is referred to as being "three sheets ' no doubt because he stagin the wind, gers like a ship in a storm under shorten ed sail. As to the use of profanity, sailors are peculiar. They do most of their cursing in heavy weather, when sails are being furled and when the wind is howling through the rigging with terrific force. Take him in fair weather, however, and he is a mild sort of a person, seldom swears and cheerily braces the yards around to the tune of "Ye heave ho, a ho, for to Hongkong we will go.'

Greeley's Casual Lunch

Speaking of Horace Greely, the anecdotes which have been going the rounds of the press about his wonderful powers of digestion, recall one of Parton's stor-Greely was much interested in the log cabin campaign, and during it could think and talk of nothing else. One night he was invited out to tea. The Greeley did not appear. After waiting a reasenable time, the rest of the party sat down and ate their meal. A half hour after they had finished, in came Mr. Greeley. He said nothing about being Greeley. He said nothing about being late, and apparently had forgotten about taking anything to eat. He sat down, and at once began to talk about the campaign. The lady of the house attempted to ask him if he had had his tea, but he brushed the question aside, and went on talking.

She went out and brought in a large cake basket, holding perhaps a half peck of doughnuts, rich and greasy, but bad to taste; these she handed to Mr. Greeley supposing he would take one or two, and then pass them along. He took the dish mechanically, and placed it in his lap. He then took a doughnut and munched away unconsciously as he talked. This extens he trulked the norther and This eaten he took another, and so went on eating and talking, to surprise of all, until the half peck entirely eaten up. As he finished the last one, the lady took away the dish, and I suppose on the principle that cheese is good for digestion, she put a plate of this in its place, Mr. Greeley talking all the time.

A moment later and his hand instinctively sought the cheese. He took it up, block after block, and before he had finished talking, the plate was empty. It was taken away quietly, and the person who witnessed the scene says he don't be-

HEBREW MANUSCRIPTS.

Ancient Riblical Parchments Undergoins

A St. Petersburg telegram to the Lon don Standard says: Dr. Harkavy has commenced the laborious task of collating his precious Hebrew manuscripts of of the Old Testament with received text, and has already lighted upon variations interesting in themselves and significant of what may be expected when the comparison has extended to as many books as it at present covers verses. It will be seen from the following examples that where the texts differ the new reading is unquestionably superior to the old; and there is good reason to hope that the result of Dr. Harkavy's discovery may be very extensive emendations portions of the Old Testament.

The parchments number fifty-one, and close inspection shows that some are much older than others, for not only are the skins themselves in various states (which migh be accounted for by accidents (which migh be accounted for by accidents or exposure), but the characters employed vary considerably, showing a gradual approach to the square writing of ordinary Hebrew, to which, however, they are evidently anterior. The characters used in the most recent of them originated not later than the second century after Christ. later than the second century after Christ: and this is confirmed by the fact that some letters are almost identical with those known to have been used in Jerusalem in the first century before Christ. Others, again, are unlike any known ferm; while the sha approaches the Alt-Indisch, though the resemblance may be acci-

The date of the manuscripts is another question altogether, and one which can not yet be determined. It seems hardly possible that a colony of Jews, still exists employing a writing which points to their isolation from the rest of their race for some two thousand years; but Dr. Hark avy is convinced that there was such a colony one; and indeed, the phenomena presented by these manuscripts can not be otherwise explained.

As to the variations, they may be due, as the professor remarks, either to later corrections or to the antiquity and purity of the text; but in any case they promise of the text; but in any case they promise to be both interesting and valuable. Thus, in Lamentations ii., 3, ke meaning "fike," is left out before esh, meaning "flaming fire." In the fourth verse of the same chapter the omission of the same word alters the meaning of the first sentence from "He (the Lord) bent His bow like enemy," to "The enemy hath bent bow;" while the next sentence, owing his bow;" while the next sentence, owing to a similar omission, and the word nitted being replaced by hitzib, reads: "The adversary stretched forth his right hand," instead of, as in the authorized version, "He (the Lord) stood with His right hand as an adversary." In the sixth verse, instead of nitynass, "despised," we have vaiynass, "crushed," or, as the same word is translated in Judges, "oppressed." The passage in Lamentations ii., 9, of the his bow: is translated in Judges, Opposition The passage in Lamentations ii., 9. of the Lord authorized version reads: "The Lord * * * hath despised in the indignation of His anger the king and the priest:" for which the newly-discovered manuscript would read: "The Lord hath crushed," etc. The seventh verse reads in the authorized version: "The Lord hath cast off His altar, He hath abhorred His sanctuary." In these MSS., nier, "abhorred" is replaced by miggen, a word translated in Genesis xiv., 20, "delivered." where the passare reads: "The for which the newly-discovered script would read: "The Lea ed," where the passage reads: "The most high God hath delivered thine enemies into thine hand." Finally, in Lamentations iv., 18, instead of ssady, we have ssary; that is, instead of "They hand to be a stary to in our hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets"-"Our steps are restrained,

The work of photographing the manuscripts and publishing Dr. Harkavy's memoir will be undertaken by the Acadamy of Sciences.

The manuscripts were brought to the Black sea in a ship called the Ekaterina Koupa, by a sailor named Oria Bashan.

They were found by his father Alexander an, thirty years ago, in the Island of Rhodes, after a great fire; but whether in a private house or in a synagogue is not known. Oria regarded them as an amulet and parted with them unwillingly,

The Name for a Girl.

If we granted the following request, which comes to us from Kentucky, we should do the baby referred to a poor service :

"Please send us some protty name for a girl baby—something novel and uncom-mon—and you will much oblige a reader of the Sun.

The old and simple and homely names are the best for girls—the names which have been borne by women for thousands of years, and which are both beautiful in themselves and sweet in their associa-tions. There is a dignity about them which befits womanhood, while a great part of the fanciful names which have of late came into fashion, are inappropriate, except in the nursery, as pet appellations of babies.

of babies,

There are a score of common names which are far better than any of those manufactured by romancers. They are which are far better than any of those manufactured by romancers. They are all good, and all suitable, and because thousands and millions of women have been known by them, they are none the less attractive. Those which are most commonly used, are indeed, the most agreeable to the ear—like Mary and Catherine and Harriet, Jane Margaret, Catherine and Harriet, Jane and Lucy, and Elizabeth. They are dignified, and thier homliness makes them all the more charming. Affection will never get tired of them. They will be as common a thousand years from now, as they were a thousand years ago, and as

Alcoholization of Pigs.

Men of low intellectual endowment with a taste for strong drink will derive much comfort from the result of one of the latest experiments which, at the suggestion of the ex-brandy king of Sweden, the French temperance society has been making on the alcoholization of pigs. The experiments which were of pigs. commenced in 1879 on a number of of the so-called Anglo-Chinese breed have been continued ever since. Each pig was kept in a separate sty, but twice a day they were all fed together in an adjoining yard. Alcohol was mixed with their food, and after each meal they all fell into a deep sleep, but showed no signs of excite ment, except now and then a slight muscular trembling. The difference of the effect of alcohol on human beings and pigs is believed to arrive from the smallness of a pig's brains, for the larger the brain the more dangerous the effect of intoxication. Hence, although the companions of St. Anthony may occasionally indulge in their taste for juniper, they are in go danger of being attacked by delirium tremens

A woman found wandering the streets in Jersey City a few nights ago, when taken to a police station said she had been married three weeks, but had forgotten her husband's name. We have has a woman marrying $500,000 and We have heard of ting her husband's other name, but this Jersey City woman's defective memory is more remarkable, inasmuch as her husband was not worth a cent. Some women—and men, too—can forget a great deal in

THE HELPING HAND

Men are generally conspicuous by their ab Men are generally conspicuous by their ab-sence during moving time, and shrewd busi-ness men have actually been known to have sudden talls by boous telegrams to distant parts of the country, not getting home till the new house had been thoroughly warmed for their comfort, or discomfort at they some times find. So it usually happens the man of the house at moving time is woman who drives sharp harging with the man of the house at moving time woman who drives sharp bargains with raymen and tackhammers and initiate her family into boarding off barrel-head tables But the woman is not usually an object pity, because John has given her his mantle of authority to back her and his pocket-book is at her disposal, and she rather glories in a little brief authority. But there is a class of women to be pitted—wo-m n who are widows, who must do battle m n who are widows, who must do battle single-handed against insolence and want and a host of evis; whose little children canuot run and "tell papa," as happier shill-ren can, when anyone abuses them, who are dependent for every comfort on the one, slender, fragile, black-robed figure, who stands between them and distress.

Such a woman moved last week from one p'ain house with a moderate rent into anoth er that was plainer and more moderate. When the first night found the new family in its strange quarters all was confusion and disorder. The stoyes were down, and there was no one but the tired mother to put was no one but the tire! mother to put them up; the beds were not made, there was no supper, and the children, who had exhausted their curiosity over the new place, were hungry and sleepy. Then they all crowded around the poor mother and rareed a dismal cry.

"We want to go home! We want to go

We want to go home! we want to go home !"

And as the mother looked at them she wrung her hands and sobbed.

'Poor children! in all the wide world you have no other home than this."

But that mother heard, as in the whi p ra of a secret intelligence higher than that of earth, these words that thrilled her soul with new life.

"The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the son of man has not where to lay his head."

She told the story of the Babe of Bathle-She told the story of the Babe of Batherhem to her little ones as she undressed them and put them to bed. When they wakened in the morning, hungry but rested, they saw the table set and the room in order. Mother had done it all as they slept but who had helped her? Ah! who? The children only knew that it was mother, and here was

The Land Owners of England.

The following fresh statistics in regard to the ownership of land in Great Britain, will prove interesting reading: Twenty-eight dukes in the United Kingdom possess 158 separate estates, comprising nearly 4 000,000 acres. The other members of the perrage, 475 in number, hold 1436 separate estates, embracing about 10 000 000 acres. Of 33,000 000 acres in Englant and Wales, more than 17,000,000 are owned by a body of men which probably does not exceed £500. According to Hon. Geo. B. odrick, Warden of Morton College, Oxford, nearly half the encies of land of England and Wales, is owned by about 2250 persons.

Ar-und each table were shelves against stene pillars, on which lay children's against stene pillars, on which lay children's shees so ks and clothes. There were stone jars of water here and there for drinking, and the air was stifling, and the buzz of conversation only broken by the wail of the babies. The flooring was dilapidated, and it was possible for an incautious visitor to fail through. Two other side apartments one hundred feet long were both packed with laborers. The factory consumes about ten thousand pounds of tobacco a day, and employs over five thousand persons, who receive fifty cents a day for twelve hours' employs over five thousand persons, who re-ceive fifty cents a day for twelve hours' work. Prince Leopold's Student Life.

During an interview recently, Canon Duckworth, who was for four years and a half—1866-1870—the Duke of Albany's private tutor stated that the extremely delicate health of His Royal Highness interfered, as might be expected, very materially with the progress of his ed-ucation. During the whole period named no regular system of lessons could be practised, In fact Canon Duckworth was chosen for the responsible post he occu-pied in relation to the young prince, largebecause his connection with public school life had enabled him to deal with pupils who could not submit to the routine and discipline which robust health permitted.

It was in spite of these drawbacks that His Royal Highness attained the singular amount of culture which his after life displayed. His progress was greatly assisted by a wonderfully retentive and accurate memory, The Canon has seen few youths who equalled him in this respect. His favorite study was history, in which his reading was extensive and thorough. He was also proficient in Italian, French and German literature.

In the general features of his character, and especially in the strength and con-stancy of his attachments, he bore a strik-ing resemblance, said the Canon, to Her Majesty. He was debarred from the or-dinary manly exercises in which his dinary manly exercises in which his brothers indulged. He could not enter into hunting or shooting, or even fishing. The result was that he was thrown largely upon the companionship of older people than himself, and the naturally contemptlative cast of his character was thereby confirmed. Few princes were ever so popular as he was during his stay at Oxford. He entered thoroughly into the spirit of the scholarly life which there surrounded him, and he frequently, after leaving the university, alluded to his releaving the university, alluded to his residence at Oxford as embracing the happiest days of his life. He had the happiest days of his life. He had the rare power of discerning and attaching to himself the best intellects among his fellow students, and at his rooms the ablest men in residence were found as frequent guests. To his interest in his fellow-students may be traced much of that interest in social and intellectual questions which pre-eminently distin-guished him.

His attachment to Christ Church College may be gauged from the fact that he retained his rooms at college in order that he might at any time renew his eld associations of undergraduate days. London Telegrph.

Good Advice to the Sick-

If the dectors sometimes make us uncomfortable, they can also cheer us up occasionally. If they frequently sadden occasionally. If they frequently saquen us by telling us that there is death and disease in the pot, the tea-kettle, the beer-bottle, and the cigar-case, and that most of the things that we eat, drink, wear, or do are unhealthy, they console us by showing us that the human organism is a great deal tougher than is often supposed. Everyone will be gratified to learn from Dr. Mortimer Granville that there is good medical authority for the proper belief that a man is as well as he believes himself to be. Dr. Granville's advice to the sick man is, in brief, not to believe the doctor or anybody else who tells him that he is very ill and likely to Even the patient who has an incurable disease, says the doctor rather paradoxically, may live just as long as anybody else. Only let him hope. More things are done by hope than this world wots of. Let a sufferer only firmly make up his mind that he is going to get well, and in many cases his confidence will be justified, and he may throw physic to the dogs. We do not quite grasp the scientidogs. We do not quite grasp the scientific reasons for this; but it is at any rate consolatory to hear it. If the medical men would always talk like this how grateful we should be to them!

The Baads.

The road leading to Hard Island is reported as being in a shocking condition, owing to the pitch-holes that have been allowed to remain since last weeks storm. We think all township Councils soould pass a By-law making it obligatory on Pathmasters to keep the roads in their divisions in a passable condition, as well in winter, as in summer. There certainly requires to be something done to render travelling more safe and pleasant.

Considerable indignation is expressed by season ticket holders at the manner in which May r Carson is conducting the rink. The last snow-storm proved too much for the Mayor, or, probably, he resigned in favor of the Saved Army. A mixture of both is perhaps his reason for not cleaning the snow off the rink. But we are assured that the rink will be ressurected in due form, and that it will not pass away till called hence by the gentle zeyphers of the spring.

The Chinese Question.

The question of the admission of the Chinese into Canada was ably discussed at the last meeting of the L. M. A. Mr. Fisher and Mrs. Wood favored their admission, and Mr. Hagerman and Mrs. Fisher appeared in opposition. The debate was lively and interesting from the start, and the speeches were intespersed with choice vocal and instrumental selections. The papers on the subject prepared and read by Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Wood treated the question concisely, and the points made were clearly and logically defined. The question being thrown open, Messrs. Blackburn, Donnelley, Connors and Reid joined in the debate. The question being submitted for decision to the audience, a majority voted in lavor of excluding the Chinese. We believe other debates are being prepared, and will take place at the L. M. A. in due course.

Died in Dakota.

It is with feelings of sorrow that we this morning chronicle the death at Ojata, Dakota, of an old resident of this village, Sterling Alguire, Esq. The only particulars we can learn are that the remains left Dakota on Monday at 4 p. m., and are expected in Brockville at 4 p. m. on Thursday. Should the remains arrive as expected the funeral will start from the Methodist Church here on Friday, 27th at 2 p. m.

BETHUEL LOVERIN, Publisher and Proprietor

A Proposition.

Last week we issued the REPORTER as an eight page sheet. We did so as an experiment. First, to see if we could run a sheet that size through our press; and second, to see if a paper in that form would meet the approbation of our patrons and readers. That in the first we were successful is evi-denced by the neat and tidy appear-ance of the issue, and in regard to the second, all who have expressed an opinion personally to us have ap-peared well satisfied with the form and general make-up of the paper. A few weeks ago we expressed our intention of purchasing a larger press, in order to increase the size of the REPORTER. We find that to carry out our plan would entail an expenditure of nearly $500. Now, we believe that a paper the size and form of last issue is large enough to meet the re-quirements of this locality, and we propose making the following offer:— If, within the next three weeks, our friends and patrons will interest them-selves in our behalf, so as to increase our circulation up to 500 copies, we will (as soon as we can make the necessary arrangements) issue the REPORTER as an eight-page sheet It will only require a little effort on the part of our friends to give us the required number of subscribers. As an inducement to those who are willing to help us, we make the following offer: - We will send the Toronto Weekly News for one year to any person sending us the names of five yearly subscribers to the REPORTER. accompanied by the cash, $3.75. If we get the required number of subscribers, the paper will be continued at the usual price—75c. per year. If, however, our patrons and readers do not respond as solicited, so as to bring the subscription list up to a paying basis, we will not promise to issue the paper after the 52 numbers are completed. This is our final appeal, and it now rests with those interosted in seeing our little sheet susas possible, and send them in. It is not necessary that the money should be sent in. We merely ask a guarantee that so many subscribers will be torthcoming.

Obituary.

Our town has seldom witnessed a more impressive sight than on Friday last, when the remains of the late Sterling Alguire were borne from the residence of his son, on Perth street, to the Methodist church, followed by a large concourse of mourning relaa large concourse of mourning relatives and sympathising and sorrowing friends. The inrerior of the church was heavily draped with the trappings of woe, and presented a mournful appearance as the relatives and friends crowded the sacred edifice. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. W. Blair, assisted by Rev. Mr. Sherman (Baptist). Rev. Mr. Blair preached an able and eloquent sermon from John xiv. 3d. As most of our readers are aware, Mr. Alguire has resided for some years past in the state of Dakota. Some six years ago state of Dakota. Some six years ago he, in company with R. R. Gardner, of Lyn, engaged in purchasing horses for the Manitoba market. On one of his return trips from that province he passed through the state of Dakota and was so well pleased with the looks of the country that he purchased a tract of land, and in the spring of 1881, he removed to Ojata in that state, taking with him his eldest daughter (Mrs. Halladay) and his three youngest children. He resided at Ojata up to the time of his death. During the most of this time he en During the most of this time he enjoyed comparatively good health, but at the last the call was sudden, and the circumstances pathetic. It seems somewhat mournful but heroic to see an old man bereft of his companion leaving the scenes and associations of the was destined never to enjoy. Last fall, with a desire to give his two youngest children the benefit of the excellent educational advantages provided by his native village of Farmwere attending school, while he and the other son remained alone in that far off land. Suddenly, the news was flashed over the wires that our old friend was no more, and on Thursday about 8 p.m., the remains reached here in charge of his children. Mr. Alguire was born in the township of Alguire was born in the township Yonge, and was one of a family of eight children. He leaves a family of Alguire was a liberal of the advanced school, and a member of the old M. E. Church for many years. Of a kind and generous disposition, he was universally respected, and many a poor family bear willing testimony to his diberality and kindness of heart. In sickness and death, he was the friend of the needy, and was always one of the first to volunteer to nurse the sick or bury the dead. To the family, we offer our sincere sympathy with whom it was our privilege to be on very intimate terms, we feelingly say "peace to his ashes.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

The L. M. A.

The Literary and Musical Association held its regular meeting on Friday evening last. An excellent program was presented, which included a discussion on the subject of "What a discussion on the subject of "What can be done to improve the appearance of the village?" The subject was discussed in a thoroughly practical way by Messrs. D. Fisher, W. G. Parish, M. Halladay, H. L. Hagerman and J. Smith. The adoption of strict sanitary precautions; the improvement of our streets, sidewalks, and fences; the removal of unsightly and useless buildings; the decoration and better care of our grave yards; the painting of houses and fences; and the cultivation of flowers and planting of trees, were all considered planting of trees, were all considered as subjects, attention to which would vastly improve the appearance of the village. Messrs. W. G. Parish and J. Smith were appointed a nominating committee in connection with this matter, to report at next meeting of Association. Regarding the planting of trees, we would call the attention of the Association to sec's 5, 6, and 7 of the Ontario Tree Planting Act, which read as follows :-

"The council of any municipality may pass a by-law for paying out of municipal funds a bonus or premium municipal funds a bonus or premium not exceeding twenty-five cents for every ash, basswood, beech, birch, butternut, cedar, cherry, chestnut, elm, hickory, maple, oak, pine, sassafras, spruce, walnut, or whitewood tree, which shall, under the provisions of this Act, be planted within such municipality on any highway, or on any boundary line of farms, or within six feet of such boundary. Such by-law shall further provide for the appointment of an ispector shall make to the council one report for make to the council one report for each year, if required to do so, giving the names of all persons entitled to any bonus or premium under the bylaw, the number of trees of each species planted, and the amount of bonus or premium to which each person is entitled, certifying that the trees are thirty feet apart, that the trees have been planted three years, and that they are alive, healthy, and of good form; and upon the adop-tion of such report the bonuses or premiums shall be paid. The Treasurer of the Province, upon receiving a copy of the inspector's report, certified by the reeve and clerk, shall recoup to the treasurer of the mucicipality one half of the sum paid by the municipa!-

ity under authority of this Act."
We sincerely hope that a good, active committee may be formed, and that the admirable suggestions made for the loss of a kind parent, and in at the meeting of the L. M. A. may closing this feeble tribute to one be carried out in every particular.

SUPERSTITIONS OF THE SEA.

Omens of Good and Evil That Sailors Be

There is probably no class of people in the world so full of superstitious belief as the average sailor, unless, indeed, it be the negroes of the south. This belief in omens of the sea is not confined alone to forecastlemen, but is to a greater or lesser extent shared by captains and mates. In conversation a few days ago with a grizzly-bearded and bronzed old mariner, who has trod the quarter-decks of ships as master for upward of a quarter of a century, a San Francisco Chronicle reporter broached the subject of the superstition of sailors. "Do sailors believe in omens?" said the captain, repeating the reporter's question, "well you can bet your starry topligh's they do. They are the crankiest lot of men in the world, and you would be astonished to know what trifling matters sometimes causes them to give up going on a voyage. I have known sailors to predict the direst calamities to a ship because they happened to sneeze while going on board. Then again, if a vessel is delayed in port and does not sail at the appointed time, it is a bad omen, according to Jack's ideas. They have good omens too. A fair day when they ship is a good sign, and if the sun is shining brightly on the day they sail, it is a sign that the vessel will have a speedy and prosperous voyage. A baffling head wind leads sailors to believe that there is a Jonah on board, and they do all sorts of things, such as burning a piece of old sail or rope-yarn, and the throwing overboard of a sea biscuit to exorcise the evil effects of his presence, and when the wind does shift and becomes fair they attribute it to their sorcerism, their good spirits return, and all goes merry until something else happens to disturb their fears.
"I remember an old fellow I once ship-remember an old fellow I once sinp-ped at Liverpool for the voyage home to New York, 'continued the captain, "He was a veritable old sea-dog, and the crew at once set him down as a Jonah. He was called Liverpool Jack, and was the queerest chap I ever saw. He wanted the voyage prolonged as much as possible, and one day the men caught him in the He wanted foretop whistling for a head wind, and, sure enough, the following morning the wind shifted and came dead from the head. This, of course, necessitated the frequent tacking of the ship, and the curses of the crew were loud and long. That wind stuck to us for three days, and the crew decided to chuck Jack everboard, and I verily believe they would have carried their threat into execution had the wind not changed. Sailors also have an aversion to clergymen's sons, and if they know that one is on board a vessel they will not ship under any consideration. Why they dislike a vessel with a minister's son on board I have never found out, but it is considered one of the worst 'hoodoos' by sailors. Out at sea if, as is 'hodoos' by sallors. Out at sea if, as is frequently the case, a shark follows in the wake of a vessel, it is a sign that some one on board will soon die, but it is one of the worst omens to kill it. Of all the seabirds what are known as a 'Mother Cary's chicken,' a dark bird somewhat resembling a gull, but about the size of a chicken is held worst search by the force. chicken, is held most sacred by the fore-castle men. Its presence fortells an approaching storm, and this sign hardly ever fails. A seaman would as soon think of A seaman would as soon think of swimming across the Pacific ocean as to mo-lest one of the chickens. Then, again, it is bad luck, so sailors say, to kill the scagulls that follow ships out at sea, as they are considered the harbingers of good luck. If dolphins accompany the vessel, it is also considered a good omen."

A singular incident happened some years ago on board an American ship en route to this city. A few days out from New York a booby, a bird somewhat like a gull, but much smaller, alighted on the foretop, and one of the sailors went up and caught it. The booby was brought on deck, where it was attacked by the ship's dog. The animal flew at the bird, which drove its bill down the dog's throat, and thus the two remained until separated. The booby was thrown overboard, and was not seen for some time, when suddenly it reappeared perched in the foretop again. A sailor went aloft and captured it, and it was brought down and taken into the forecastle, where the sailors held a trial, and the bird was sentenced to death. The executioner was the carpenter, and the unfortunate booby was beheaded. The dog disappeared after the encounter, but immediately after the bird had been killed it came on deck and began running around in a circle. This was continued for some time, when suddenly it made a dash for the stern of the ship and jumped overboard. Even the captain, a Boston man, was affected by the incident, and for several days the deepest sort of gloom prevailed among those on board, and some of the crew predicted some disaster before the end of the voyage, and none felt entirely easy until port was reached.

crew predicted some disaster before the end of the voyage, and none felt entirely easy until port was reached.

In addition to being superstitious sailors have queer names for things on shipboard. His bunk in the forecastle he terms his pew; he says "aft" for "abaft' and "fornst" for "forward." The captain is known as the "old man," the carpenter as "chips," and the cook is the only man abaft and foremast that has the d stinction of having his office mentioned in connection with his name, and he is refered to as Ben or Joe the cook. An old sailor is called "a whale." A drunken man is referred to as being "three sheets in the wind," no doubt because he staggers like a ship in a storm under shortened sail. As to the use of profanity, sailors are peculiar. They do most of their cursing in heavy weather, when sails are being furled and when the wind is howling through the rigging with terrific force. Take him in fair weather, however, and he is a mild sort of a person, seldom swears and cheerily braces the yards around to the tune of "Ye heave ho, a ho, for to Hongkong we will go."

Greeley's Casual Lunch.

Speaking of Horace Greely, the anecdotes which have been going the rounds of the press about his wonderful powers of digestion, recall one of Parton's stories. Greely was much interested in the log cabin campaign, and during it could think and talk of nothing else. One night he was invited out to tea. The hour, came. All were present, but Greeley did not appear. After waiting a reasonable time, the rest of the party sat down and ate their meal. A half hour after they had finished, in came Mr. Greeley. He said nothing about being late, and apparently had forgotten about taking anything to eat. He sat down, and at once began to talk about the campaign. The lady of the house attempted to ask him if he had had his tea, but he brushed the question aside, and went on talking.

She went out and brought in a large cake basket, holding perhaps a half peck of doughnuts, rich and greasy, but not bad to taste; these she handed to Mr. Greeley supposing he would take one or two, and then pass them along. He took the dish mechanically, and placed it in his lap. He then took a doughnut and munched away unconsciously as he talked. This eaten he took another, and so went on eating and talking, to the surprise of all, until the half peck was entirely caten up. As he finished the last one, the lady took away the dish, and I suppose on the principle that cheese is good for digestion, she put a plate of this in its place, Mr. Greeley talking all the time.

A moment later and his hand instinctively sought the cheese. He took it up, block after block, and before he had finished talking, the plate was empty. It was taken away quietly, and the person who witnessed the scene says he don't believe Greeley was either then or afterwards aware that he had eaten anything.

HEBREW MANUSCRIPTS.

Ancient Riblical Parchments Undergoing Examination in St. Petersburg.

A St. Petersburg telegram to the London Standard says: Dr. Harkayy has commenced the laborious task of collating his precious Hebrew manuscripts of portions of the Old Testament with the received text, and has already lighted upon variations interesting in themselves and significant of what may be expected when the comparison has extended to as many books as it at present covers verses. It will be seen from the following examples that where the texts diffor the new reading is unquestionably superior to the old; and there is good reason to hope that the result of Dr. Harkayy's discovery may be very extensive emendations of portions of the Old Testament.

The parchments number fifty-one, and a close inspection shows that some are much older than others, for not only are the skins themselves in various states (which migh be accounted for by accidents or exposure), but the characters employed vary considerably, showing a gradual approach to the square writing of ordinary Hebrew, to which, however, they are evidently anterior. The characters used in the most recent of them originated not later than the second century after Christ; and this is confirmed by the fact that some letters are almost identical with those known to have been used in Jerusalem in the first century before Christ. Others, again, are unlike any known form; while the sha approaches the Alt-Indisch, though the resemblance may be accidental.

The date of the manuscripts is another question altogether, and one which can not yet be determined. It seems hardly possible that a colony of Jews still exists employing a writing which points to their isolation from the rest of their race for some two thousand years; but Dr. Harkavy is convinced that there was such a colony one; and indeed, the phenomena presented by these manuscripts can not be otherwise explained.

As to the variations, they may be due, as the professor remarks either to later

As to the variations, they may be due, as the professor remarks, either to later corrections or to the antiquity and purity of the text; but in any case they promise to be both interesting and valuable. Thus, in Lamentations ii., 3, ke meaning "like," is left out before esh, meaning "like," and the chapter the omission of the same word alters the meaning of the first sentence from "He (the Lord) bent His bow like an enemy," to "The enemy hath bent his bow;" while the next sentence, owing to a similar omission, and the word uitcal being replaced by hitsih, reads: "The adversary stretched forth his right hand," instead of, as in the authorized version, "He (the Lord) stood with His right hand as an alversary." In the sixth verse, instead of vaiynass, "despised," we have vaiyrass, "crushed," or, as the same word is translated in Judges, "oppressed." The passage in Lamentations ii., 9. of the authorized version reads: "The Lord hath crushed," etc. The seventh verse reads in the authorized version: "The Lord hath cast off His altar, He hath abhorred His sanctuary." In these MSS., nier, "abhorred" is replaced by miggen, a word translated in Genesis xiv., 20, "delivered," where the passage reads: "The most high God hath delivered thine enemies into thine hand." Finally, in Lamentations iv., 18, instead of "Sady, we have ssaru; that is, instead of "They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets"—"Our steps are restrained,"

the work of photographing the manuscripts and publishing Dr. Harkavy's memoir will be undertaken by the Acadamy of Sciences.

The manuscripts were brought to the Black sea in a ship called the Ekaterina Koupa, by a sailor named Oria Bashan.

They were found by his father Alexander Bashan, thirty years ago, in the Island of Rhodes, after a great fire; but whether in a private house or in a synagogue is not known. Oria regarded them as an amulet and parted with them unwillingly,

The Name for a Girl.

If we granted the following request, which comes to us from Kentucky, we should do the baby referred to a poor service:

"Please send us some pretty name for a girl baby—something novel and uncommon—and you will much oblige a reader of the Sun."

Novel and uncommon, or merely pretty and fanciful names, are the ones of all others for you to avoid. You may make your girl an object of ridicule, and cause her mortification which will do serious injury to her disposition, if you give her some old and romantic name.

The old and simple and homely names are the heat for girls—the names which

There are a score of common names which are far better than any of those manufactured by romancers. They are all good, and all suitable, and because thousands and millions of women have been known by them, they are none the less attractive. Those which are most commonly used, are indeed, the most agreeable to the ear—like Mary and Margaret, Catherine and Harriet, Jane and Lucy, and Elizabeth. They are dignified, and thier homliness makes them all the more charming. Affection will never get tired of them. They will be as common a thousand years from now, as they were a thousand years ago, and as they are to-day.

We therefore advise our friend to give up his plan for distinguishing his girl by burdening her with some "novel and uncommon" name, and if she grows to be a sensible women she will thank us for our refusal to assist him in finding such an appellation.—N. Y. Sun.

Alcoholization of Pigs.

Men of low intellectual endowment with a taste for strong drink will derive much comfort from the result of one of the latest experiments which, at the suggestion of the ex-brandy king of Sweden, the French temperance society has been making on the alcoholization of pigs. The experiments which were commenced in 1879 on a number of pigs of the so-called Anglo-Chinese breed have been continued ever since. Each pig was kept in a separate sty, but twice a day they were all fed together in an adjoining yard. Alcohol was nixed with their food, and after each meal they all fell into a deep sleep, but showed no signs of excitement, except now and then a slight muscular trembling. The difference of the effect of alcohol on human beings and pigs is believed to arrive from the smallness of a pig's brains, for the larger the brain the more dangerous the effect of intoxication. Hence, although the companions of St. Anthony may occasionally indulge in their taste for juniper, they are in no danger of being attacked by delirium tremens

A woman found wandering the streets in Jersey City a few nights ago, when taken to a police station said she had been married three weeks, but had forgotten her husband's name. We have heard of a woman marrying $500,000 and forget ting her husband's other name, but this Jersey City woman's defective memory is more remarkable, inasmuch as her husband was not worth a cent. Some women—and men, too—can forget a great deal in three weeks

MOVING IDYLS.

They were moving, not the ordinary and regular routine of May 1, when distressed families flock from one cramped and inconvenient dwelling into another of the same type, but this was a going

Thus it happened that one little room was

THE HELPING HAND

Men are generally conspicuous by their absence during moving time, and shrewd business men have actually been known to have sudden (alls by bo us telegrams to distant parts of the country, not getting home till the new house had been thorouguly warmed for their comfort, or discomfort as they some times find. So it usually happens the man of the house at moving time is woman who drives sharp bargains with craymen and tackhammers and initiate her family into boarding off barrel head tables Jamily into boarding off barrel-head tables But the woman is not usually an object pity, because John has given her his mantle of authority to back her and his pocket-book is at her disposal, and she rather glories in a little brief authority. But there is a class of women to be pitied—woman who are widows, who must do battle single-handed against insolence and want and a heat of early whose little children. and a host of evis; whose little children cannot run and "tell papa," as happier the litron can, when anyone abuses them, who are dependent for every comfort on the one slender, fragile, black-rabed figure, who stands between them and distress.

Such a woman moved last week from one p'ain house with a moderate rent into another that was plainer and more moderate. When the first night found the new family in its strange quarters all was confusion and disorder. The stoves were down, and there was no one but the tired mother to put was no one out the tirel mother to put them up; the beds were not made, there was no supper, and the children, who had exhausted their curiosity over the new place, were hungry and sleepy. Then they all crowded around the poor mother and raised a dismal cry.

"We want to go home! we want to go

And as the mother looked at them she wrung her hands and sobbed.

"Poor children I in all the wide world you have no other home than this."

But that mother heard, as in the whi-p re of a secret intelligence higher than that of earth, these words that thrilled her soul with new life.

"The foxes have hales and the birds of the air have nests, but the son of man has not where to lay his head."

where to lay his head."
She told the story of the Babe of Bathlehem to her little ones as she undressed them and put them to bed. When they wakened in the morning, hungry but rested, they saw the table set and the room in order. Mother had done it all as they slept but who had helped her? Ah! who? The children only knew that it was mother, and here was

The Land Owners of England.

The Land Owners of England.

The following fresh statistics in regard to the ownership of land in Great Britain, will prove interesting reading: Twenty-eight dukes in the United Kingdom possess 158 separate estates, comprising nearly 4 000,000 acres. The other members of the peerage, 475 in number, hold 1436 separate estates, embracing about 10 000 000 acres. Of 33,000 000 acres in England and Wales, more than 17,000,000 are owned by a body of men which probably does not exceed £500. Accurating to Hon. Geo. B odrick, Warden of Morton College, Oxford, nearly half the enclesed land of England and Wales is owned by about 2250 persons.

Telargest landed proprietor among the peers, is toe Duke of Sutherland, who owns nore than one million acres. His rent roll, howe er is not so large as that of some peer with much less property, his income from land amounting to only $656,772, while that of the Marquis of Bute, who owns only 16, 000 acres, is considerably more than $1,000,

The Duke of Buccleuch comes second to the Duke of Sunderland in number of acres. and second to the Marquis of Bute in size of nome. His land comprises 459,550 acres, and his rout rell is about $1,100,000. The Duke of Northumberland's rent rell ranks next, being $880,000, and next to him comes the Duke of Devonshire, with about $25,000 less. The Earl of Derby and Earl of F.tz less. The Earl of Derby and Earl of F.tz william. receive rents amounting annually to about $700,000. Altogether there are ten peers who each receive over $500,000 a year from land.

A Cigar Factory.

A journalist writes a letter from Seville describing the government eight factory of Spain, seven hundred feet long and almost as wide, very dirty, and in the vestibule two hundred and fifty young girls making eigarettes, all talking as loud as they want to; one hundred girls in the next room doing the same, and on the next floor three thousand was a constant of the same, and on the next floor three thousands are sent as the same. and women as close as sardines in a box.in a single room, making cigars, some having their babies with them not a month old, and their babies with them not a month old, and dogs lying on the tobacco stems. The women were divided up into sevens at each table, three on each side, and the mistress at the top. Around each table were shelves against to ne pillars, on which lay children's shees to ke and clothes. There were stone jars of water here and there for drinking, and the air was stifling, and the buzz of conversation only broken by the wail of the babies. The flooring was dilapidated, and it was possible for an incautious visiter to fall through. Two other side apartments one hundred feet long were both packed with laborers. The factory consumes about to the usual pounds of tobacco a day, and employs over five thousand persons, who receive fifty cents a day for twelve hours' ceive fifty cents a day for twelve hours' work. The matren at each table gets her pa, fron the women she c mmanos. The girls and the superintendents had very little

The Revised Old Testament.

The American and English committees have almost finished their labors in the rethat the revision will be published in the course of a few months. The revision is course of a few months. The revision is said to have been made with the sci purpose of placing the Bible in a position in which the people may understand every word as the scholars understand them, and as the text stands in its original. To do this many of the beauties of expression have been sacrificed in order to give the true meaning of the original. The poetical forms and the archaisms will be retained to a larger extent than they were in the New Testament. The fabulous beast, the "uniforms and the archaisms will be retained to a larger extent than they were in the New Testament. The fabulous beast, the "unicora," will give place to the will ox. Profits of Great Authors.

Disraeli made by his pen £30,000;
Byron, £23 000. Lord Macauley received £20,900 on account of three fourths net profit for his history. Thiers and Lamartive received nearly £20,000 each for their respective historics. Thackeray is said never to have received £5,000 for any of his novels. Sr Walter Sott was paid £110,000 for eleven novels of three volumes each and nine volumes of "Tales of my Landlord." For one novel he received £19,000, and between November. 1825, and June. 1827, he and nine volumes of "Tales of my Landlord."

For one novel he received £19,000, and between November, 1825, and June, 1827, he received £26,000 for literary work. Lord Lytton is said to have made £80,000 by his novels; Dickens, it has been computed, ought to have been making £10,000 a year for the three years priot to the publication of "Nocholas Nickleby;" and Trollope in twenty years made £79,000. The following sums are said to have been paid to the authors for single famous books: "R moda," George Eliot, £10,000; "Waverley," Scott, £7,000; "Lore of N.poleon." Scott, £8,000; "Live of N.poleon." Scott, £8,000; "Anmadale," Wilkie Clive, £5,000; "Lallah Roka," Thomas Moore, £3,000; "History of Rome," Goldsmith, £259; "History of England," Goldsmith, £259; "History of England," Goldsmith, £259; "History of England," Goldsmith, £250; "Doline and Fali," Gibbon, £10,000; "Lives of Poets," Johnson, £300; "R.sselas," Johnson, £100.

Prince Leopold's Student Life.

During an interview recently, Canon Duckworth, who was for four years and a half—1866-1870—the Duke of Albany's private tutor stated that the extremely delicate health of His Royal Highness indelicate health of His Koyal Highness in-terfered, as might be expected, very materially with the progress of his ed-ucation. During the whole period named no regular system of lessons could be practised. In fact Canon Duckworth was chosen for the responsible post he occu-pied in relation to the young prince, large-ly because his connection with public ly because his connection with public school life had enabled him to deal with pupils who could not submit to the rout-ine and discipline which robust health permitted.

It was in spite of these drawbacks that His Royal Highness attained the singular amount of culture which his after life displayed. His progress was greatly assisted by a wonderfully retentive and accurate memory, The Canon has seen few youths who equalled him in this respect. favorite study was history, in which his reading was extensive and thorough. He was also proficient in Italian, French and German literature.

In the general features of his character, and especielly in the strength and constancy of his attachments, he bore a strik-ing resemblance, said the Canon, to Her Majesty. He was debarred from the ordinary manly exercises in which his brothers indulged. He could not enter into hunting or shooting, or even fishing. The result was that he was thrown largely upon the companionship of older people than himself, and the naturally contemptlative cast of his character was thereby confirmed. Few princes were ever so popular as he was during his stay at Oxford. He entered thoroughly into the spirit of the scholarly life which there surrounded him, and he frequently, after leaving the university, alluded to his residence at Oxford as embracing the happiest days of his life. He had the rare power of discerning and attaching to himself the best intellects among his fellow students, and at his rooms the ablest men in residence were found as frequent guests. To his interest in his fellow-students may be traced much of that interest in social and intellectual questions which pre-eminently distinguished him.

His attachment to Christ Church

College may be gauged from the fact that he retained his rooms at college in order that he might at any time renew his eld associations of undergraduate days.—

Good Advice to the Sick.

Good Advice to the Sick.

If the dectors sometimes make us uncomfortable, they can also cheer us up occasionally. If they frequently sadden us by telling us that there is death and disease in the pot, the tea-kettle, the beer-bottle, and the cigar-case, and that most of the things that we eat, drink, wear, or do are unhealthy, they console us by showing us that the human organism is a great deal tougher than is often supposed. Everyone will be gratified to learn from Dr. Mortimer Granville that earn from Dr. Mortimer Granville that there is good medical authority for the proper belief that a man is as well as he pelieves himself to be. Dr. Granville's advice to the sick man is, in brief, not to believe the doctor or anybody else who tells him that he is very ill and likely to die. Even the patient who has an incur-able disease, says the doctor rather para-doxically, may live just as long as any-body else. Only let him hope. More things are done by hope than this world things are done by hope than this world wots of. Let a sufferer only firmly make up his mind that he is going to get well, and in many cases his confidence will be justified, and he may throw physic to the dogs. We do not quite grasp the scientific reasons for this; but it is at any rate consolatory to hear it. If the adjustice of the scientific reasons for this; but it is at any rate consolatory to hear it. If the medical men would always talk like this how grateful we should be to them!

BY ENG.-A FARMERSVILLE BOY. (Continued from last week.)

Mr. Edward's will appointed his ther-in-law, old Mr. Cromwell, his ble executor and guardian of his lite three-year-old daughter. He also ft some property and the interest of e thousand dollars to Old Cromwell, ith the understanding that he was to ring Susan up in a respectable manner and give her a liberal education, l of which Cromwell most miserably failed to do. Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell were not of those who believe in maple-sugar government of children. They were of opinion that a taste of the horse-whip, if not quite so sweet, was more wholesome, and although Susan seldom got such a taste, it was not because of any tenderness on the birt, of the old folks, but because she and soon learned that the only way most prompt obedience to every command. Her's was thus rendered a was thereby deprived of one great with children. She had always crough of good wholesome food, but olixuries; e ough of plain and conto table clothing, but no finery; enough of hard work, but no sympathy; for she was not allowed to v sit any of the neighbors' children, or go to a place of amusement or to any public doings whatever-not even to rel gious meetings, unless Mrs. Cromwell could go with her, and then she must sit beside Grandma and return with her directly as soon as the service was over. Thus matters went on at Mr. Cromwell's in a kind of routine till Susan was in her eighteenth year, except that they were obliged by law send her to school at least six months in the year, while between the ages of seven and twelve years and to furnish a certain number of comentary school books. This, however, was always done grudgingly, ween October and May, when the roads were at the worst, and when there was the least women's work to at home. Furthermore, although he schoolhouse was fully a mile away e was allowed but fifteen minutes go and the same to return. Any ringement of this rule was sure to ring down the aforesaid horsewhip, scuses being of no avail. Notwithanding all these disadvantages, such was the power of her intellect she was enabled to acquire all the learning the country school was capable of impartthe Edwards, you know, were great for learning. One of her uncles was esident of a college. But I forgot tell you about Roddy. He learned joiner's trade, and a good workwanted for a long way round, and this the way he came 'to get acquainted h Susan. Mr. Cromwell's house employed to do the fixin' up, but was not allowed to see Susan, for she was one. Now, I can get one for one not allowed to see Susan, for she was one. Now, I can get one for one odered to stay upstairs and not be dollar and a half.—Continued.

seen while Roddy was there. She obeyed, but one day he heard what he thought a beautifully melodious female voice up-stairs, singing those beautiful lines of Dr. Watt's:

How happy is the man who hears Instruction's warning voice, And who celestial wisdom makes His early, only choice.

He stopped a few moments to listen. Mrs. Cromwell hurriedly went upstairs and came immediately down again, after which Roddy heard no more singing, and he supposing it was because he stopped to hear, concluded that she must be a miserly old thing who could not bear to see him idle one moment. But the next day while he was working away, Susan made her appearance down stairs with her beautiful, bright, shining, auburn hair which, when it was combed as it then was, reached below the middle of This beautiful hair Grandma had always been in the habit of braiding, and Susan, forgetting her orders for the moment, had come down Mrs. Cromwell that purpose. braided her hair as quickly as pos-sible, and then said "now, go back to your room, and don't come down again till you are called or sent for." Roddy's mind being occupied with the work he was doing, his suspicion of foul play was not aroused, even by this stern command, nor till after he had (by way of flattery to the old lady) made the remark, "your daughter has beautiful hair," to which the old lady made reply, with half angry tone and manner, "her hair isn't any-thing to you as I know on." Roddy made no reply to this outburst, but thought within himself, "there's a mystery connected with this family, and I'm bound, if possible, to find it out." And so when he had done his job of work and got his pay, he enquired of the near neighbots and they told him what they knew about Susan and the Cromwells, adding that her life was little better than that of a prisoner sentenced to hard labor. "Ah!" thought he, "how witchingly provoking it would be if the owner of that hair should be something to me yet, eh!" But how to obtain an interview with the girl was to him a greater puzzle than anything else. It was not long, however, till an oppor-tunity presented itself, unsought, for it so happened that Mrs. Cromwell and Susan paid a visit to a neighbor, a Mrs. Vascy, who by way of enter-tainment, showed Mrs. Cromwell a beautiful lace veil, which, if bought at the store, would have cost six dollars, but she had managed to get this for one dollar and a half. Mrs. Cromwell, after expressing her admiration of the article, eagerly enquired, "How on earth did you manage it?" on earth did you manage it?"
"Well," replied Mrs. Vasey, "I sent Mary a month to the sewing school; that cost half a dollar. Then, I bought the stuff for one dollar, and Mary fixed it up just as you see it."
"It is well done," said Mrs. Cromwell, "and I mean to have one just like it right off." And in pursuance of this resolution the next day after dinner, she said to her husband, "you know, Oliver, I've long hankered

Prof. Thompson, in a recent i cture, informed his audience that the magnetic pole is now near Bootbia Felix, or more than 1,000 miles west of the ger graphical pole. In 1657 the magnetic pole was due north, it having been castward before that year. Then it began to move westward until 1816, when the maximum was reached. This is now being steadily diminished, and in 1976 it will again point due north. Prof. Thompson says that the changes which will have been observed not only on the direction, but in the strength not only on the direction, but in the strength of the arth's magnetism, will show that the same causes which originally magnetized the earth are still at work.

English Preachers.

English Preachers.

Canon Li idon and the Bishop of Peterborough stand out as unquestionably the two finest preachers of the Established Church. There is a story of a private soldier having gone to St. Paul's on an afternoon when Dr. Liddon was to preach. The printed paper with the hymn was handed to him, Lut-not understanding that it was offered gratis he refused it with a shake of the head, saying: "You don't suppess I should be here if I had got any money?" Mort of the people who go to hear the eloquent Canon are different from this soldier, for they would pay—and very liberally—to get scats near the pulp t. On the afternoons of the Sundays when Dr. Liddon is in residence, the cathedral presents an ex raordinary sight with its huge nave aisles densely thronged. So far as the preacher's voice will reach people stand, straining eyes and ears, and fortunately Dr. Liddon's voice resonnds well under the dome, though now and then it becomes indistinct through the pracher's speaking too fast in his excitement. Two other things occasionally mar Dr. Liddon's delivery. Shortness of sight makes him often stoop to consult Bible or notes, and again he bowsthe head in a marked manner when he utters the holy name, but when he thus bends he goes on speaking, so that his words fall on the pulpit cushion and are deadened, which produces upon pople who are at some little distance off the and are deadened, which produces upon pople who are at some little distance off the effect of continual stoppages and gaps in the sermon No other defects besides these the sermon No other defects besides these, however, c. in be noted in orations which for beauty of linguage, elevation of thought, and lucidity in reasoning could not be surpassed. We have heard Dr. Liddon many times at Oxford and in London, and have observed that the impressions. passed. We have near Dr. Li don many times at Oxford and in London, and have olserved that the impression produced by his cloquence was always the same, no matter who might be listening to him. We remember in parsicular, a sermon of his on the text, "Tne-kingdom of God cometh not with observation." It was absolutely magnificent to hear him prophesy the gradual progress of the world toward a higher state. Every man, from the greatest to the leas, was made to feel his share of the responsibility in advancing or retarding the evolution of mankin!, and while the consequences of evil were pointed out as extending to incalculable lengths, there was a sublime hopefulness in the promise that the smallest good offering brought to the Creator would be multiplied by him as the "five loaves were multiplied."

Australian Defences.

Australian Defences.

The area of South Australia is so great, and its population and resources comparatively stil so undeveloped, that no attempt to defend the country districts or the numerous small tows on the sea-board can at present be contemplated. The heart of the country beats in Adelaide, which is at once the seat of Government and the repository of the national wealth. It is estimated that once in the hands of an enemy the sum of £5,000,000 sterling could be levied from it in a few hours, by placing Governments banks, and private individuals, alike, under rigorous contribution. The whole duty of local defences have been thown upon the colonists themselves. Under no origation to the Imperial Government to protect themselves, bound by no tie of federation to inter a local number of the British fleet, the different Australian Governments dirited on vaguely for several years. This state of apathy was rudely dispelled by the Russo-Turkish scare of 1877, when the Australia. There is a steady and ever increasing flow of recruits into the ranks of the Militia, so that, notwithstanding a severe needical examination, the inevitable waste is amply provided for. About 30 preent of the time expired men rejoin for a second term of three years, for which they receive £1 bourty. Many more errol in the Reserve, where they annually attend twelve drills and fire through their classes to keep up the knowledge acquired with the colors, between Militia and Vounteers about three thous and men have passed through the ranks, and are now more reless trained to the use of arms; they form a considerable, thousand men have passed through ranks, and are now more r less traine thousing men have passed through the ranks, and are now more or less trained to the use of arms; they form a considerable, though uncertoled, reserve up in whom it would be safe to rely in case of emergeacy. The rising generation are also being steadily drilled at the State (anglice School Board) schools throughtout the Colony. All teachers have to pass in company drill before appointment, and so well do they train their boys that more than once six or seven hundred lads, collected from various schools, have been marched on to the parade ground and have gone through a long battalion drill with great success. Throughout the force the physique is excellent. The infantry in height, build and age, are decidedly superior to the line regiments of the present day, and the Artillery can hold their own with their brathren at home.

Of the remarkable loyalty and affection with their brethren at home.

Of the remarkable loyalty and affection for the Old Country which prevades not only the South Australians, but all the Australasian troop, we will give one instance. Within four hours of the arrival in Adelaide of the news of our defeat at Majuba Hill three hundred men from the small defence force, we have been describing, had volunteered for active service in the Transval, "to help our chaps against the Boers." The offer had already been telegraphed home when the other colonies hearing of it, instanly began to follow suit, and in twenty-four hourse 2,000 sturdy Australians had placed themselves at the service of the Home Government, eager to help to avenge the honor of the British flag. It is greatly to be hoped that the colonies will lose no time in federating for military and naval purposes. naval purposes

At present each member of the Australasian group works independently, without concert with her neighbors—a state of things which in time of peace is expensive, and in time of war might become danger ous. Even more pressing is the necessity for establishing a colonial government manufactory of small-arm amunition in some central locality, whence the magazines could be replenished without need of constant application to the British authorities.

Out of the nonulation, which we may

Out of the population, which we may roughly estimate at 2,900,000, there are more than 16,000 men who voluntarily un-dertaks military duties. The capital sums spent, or about to be spent, on permanent fortifications since 1877 (without reckoning fortheations since 1011 (wholese reason naval defences) amount to a million sterlin while the estimated annual military expenture is calculated at £272,000 In the fa ture is calculated at £272,000 In the face of these figures no one can accuse the Australian colonists of too exclusively relying on Imperial protection in case of war.

The Unexpected Vistor.

The univited visitor drops upol us as most inco evenie at times and seasons, quiteas a matter of course, like a too relation, and proceeds to make herself the outhly at home without moe ado. Naturally we do not expect any great amount of diffilence on the part of a person who is bold enoughto intrude upon the privacy of another without special request, and we are therefore but little surprised when we find her investigating the upper storey of the house, or devising means for invading the rooms that have been closed to her, or interviewing the servants; when she demands calables not upon the table, and tells us about the luxurious surroundings of her last hose so when knowing the breakfast hour, the wilfully lies in bed till that meal is spoled, till all the delicacies perpared for her delectation have lost their relish and become indigestible; when she is impatient if so nething is not being done for her entertainment; when she complains of the temperature of the diming room in warm weather, and the terment of the flies, the persistence of the mo quite es, without seeming to realize that they are annoyances to which she has voluntarily subjected herself; or when she is curious about our work. Selling Eggs by Weight.

Selling Eggs by Weight.

There is from twenty to thirty per eent difference in the weight of eggs, yet the custom is almost universal in the Eustein markets, of selling them by the dozen at a uniform price. Even ducks' eggs, which as much larger, and by some regarded as richer, bring no more than the smallest hen's eggs of not half the weight. In California, eggs, fruits, and many other articles that are here sold by the dozen, the bunch, or by measure, are sold by weight. The practice is a good one and works beneficially for all parties especially for the producer. It operates as a promium upon the cultivation of the most productive varieties of fruits, vegetables, and form mium upon the cultivation of the most poductive varieties of fruits, vegetables, and form stock. The farmer, who is prinstaking withins poultry and gets the largest weight of eggs, has a fair reward for his skill and industry. The present custom is a premium to light weights, and good layers. We need a change in the interest of fair dealing in trade, and, if necessary, it should be enforced by legislation. If the legisla ure is competent to fix the weight of a bushel of corn or pratoes, it can easily regul to the weight of a dozen eggs, and thus promote justice between buyer and seiler. er and seller

MY FIRST READER.

BY MARGARET EYTINGE.

l see a book. It is a First Reader. A First Reader is a book for very young children

And being a book for very young children, containing in a condensed form the milk of literature, who would have imagined that it ever could have by any possibility become the means of bringing the greatest confusion and vexation to a grown-up? But it did. I, Samuella Golden, sm that grown-up. And I am the author, or nearly the author (under the ablest supervision, I frankly confess,) of that First Reader.

The way it came about was this. I have always been passionately fond of children. When but a decidedly small specimen of humanity myself I adored all the smaller specimens with whom I chanced to meet. At the tender age of six, there being then no baby at my own And being a book for very young childchanced to meet. At the tender age of six, there being then no baby at my own home, I deliberately entered the home of our washer-woman one day, knowing her to be absent at the time, and stole her five-months-old Patsey from the cradle in which he was peacefully sleeping, and in spite of his kicks and yells, when he awoke to the situation, I managed to carry him safely to our house—fortunately not far distant—and place him in the arms of my very much astonished mother. And when he was reclaimed and carried And when he was reclaimed and carried and when he was reclaimed and carried away again by his rightful owner, I sat me down on the floor with a bang, and pened my mouth to its utmost width, nd lifted up my voice to its utmost neight, and refused most emphatically to be comforted.

This love of little ones did not diminish This love of little ones did not diminish in the least as I grew in stature and in years. On the contrary, it seemed to increase, and it became as natural for me to talk baby talk to and make baby rhymes for every wee darling that came in my way as it was for me to breathe. And for ready—some simple thing about simple things, but, by virtue of creation, my own. And having contrived to be an unown. And naving contribute to be all an observed listener to several of these stories, and having also learned from Sue, his little niece, that I "made up out of my little niece, that I own head" the ji own head" the jingles with which she often sought to entertain him, Mr. Erick-son, our school-master—and a very clever fellow too—said to me one afternoon, "Miss Golden, I have undertaken a task in which I think—nay, I am sure—that you can, if you will, be of great assistance "And pray what may that task be?"

asked I, wonderingly.
"The preparation of a First Reader," he replied. "I do not expect the pecuniary results to be princely, though no doubt you would realize enough to compensate you for whatever time you might expend; but the practice would be excellent for you, and perhaps open the way for better paying literary work."

"Literary work," repeated I. "Why, I never even dreamed of such a thing."
"Did you not?" he said, with a smile.

"Well, you are not the first person who has remained in ignorance of his or her particular talent until a friend discovered it. But are you willing to give me a helping hand with the book?"

"Most willing," said I. "Tell me plainly what I am to do, or to try to do, and I will begin this very evening."

And I did begin that very evening, and extremely glad I was to do so. For I had already, although April had scarcely set in, trimmed my usual amount of spring hats and bouncts, which our community. hats and bonnets, which—our community not following strictly, for good and suffi-cient reasons, the decrees of fashion—also included most of the summer ones, thereby cutting off that source of income for four or five months. And it had been highly necessary that another source should be discovered immediately. From which statement you will naturally infer that the Golden family was golden only in name. It was. Otherwise, of course

I mean in a money sense, it was nickelly, and not that to as great an extent as de-

Father—well, any kind of steady business seemed to disagree with father; consequently he contributed to our support only by fits and starts. Daniel, our eldest boy, worked faithfully as an assistant book-keeper in a publishing house in New York city, and sent nearly half his salary to mother the first of every month. book keeper in a publishing house in New York city, and sent nearly half his salary to mother the first of every month. George, our youngest boy, was clerk (with a hope of some day becoming one of the firm) at the Willwood general store; and I, as I have intimated above, was the Willwood milliner. But work as hard as we might, Daniel, George, and I, we could do no more, even with the intermittent helps from father, than take care of ourselves and the rest of the family in the humblest way. (The rest of the family consisted of mother—a darling—grand-mother—another darling—and three of the sweetest, cunningest little girls, two, five, and six years old, that ever needed to be taken care of.) So, as you may well magine, I was not only delignted, but extremely delighted, to get the chance of assisting Mr. Erickson with the Reader. And I confided as much to Matt Brewster when we were coming home from church together the next Sunday evening. "Because, you see, Matt," said I, "if I succeed with this, maybe I can go on writing until"—and I caught my breath at the boldness of the idea—"I am found worthy of a place in the juvenile magazines, and, as a successful writer, I could help the of a place in the juvenile magazines, and, as a successful writer, I could help the family much more than I can now, for literary work is for all seasons, and mil-

"You forget," said Matt, "your rich uncle who is coming here from Australia soon, and who will, no doubt, so arrange things that the family will need no help at all from your hands."

"Oh dear!" said I, "so I did. But he has forgotten us for so many years—ever since I was five, and I was nineteen on my last birthday—that now he has condescended to remember our existence. descended to remember our existence, and promise us a visit, it's no wonder that and promise us a visit, it s no wonder that I can't keep him in mind. "But you will do your best to get into the old chap's good graces, won't you?" said Matt, coaxingly.

"Well, yes, I will, since your heart seems to be set upon it," I promised, though I wondered at the time why he was so anxious that I should become a favorite of Uncle Sam's. "I'll do everything but give up the Reader."

Matt Brewster was chief proprietor of the store where my brother George was clerk, and he was also my acknowledged lover. The latter fact made me the envy of half the girls in Wildwood, for Matt was considered the handsomest and most of half the girls in Wildwood, for Matt was considered the handsomest and most fascinating young bachelor in the place. He was tall and slender, with very fair hair, light blue eyes, a straight nose, and broader, so is his forehead, and he has a certain manly look and way about him that is utterly lacking in Mr. Matthew Brewster."

Strange as it may appear, I did not feel as indignant at this adverse criticism of my betrothed (by-the-way, I had stipulated at the time of our engagement, now two months old, that marriage should not be thought of for at least two years) as some of the other girls did. Nettie Haley, for instance—daughter of Haley the

some of the other girls did. Nettie Haley, for instance—daughter of Haley the builder, with a snug little fortune in her own right, inherited from her mother—was particularly wroth.

"She only talks that way," she said, referring to Mrs. Leroy, "because she wants to seem different from everybody else, just as she sends to Paris from this out-of-the way village for her bonnets and gloves. Why, there's no comparison between the two men. Matt dances beautifully; Mr. Erickson don't dance a step. Matt sings lovely; Mr. Erickson can only join in a bass. Matt has a complexion like a girls; and Mr. Erickson has one like—like—"

and here she heaved a deep sigh—"what a lucky girl you are."

Well, I began the Reader, and soon became so absorbed in my work that everything I cast eyes upon instantly resolved itself into a First Lesson. Did the butcher stop at the door, "I see a man; he is a butcher; a butcher sells meat," immediately flashed through my brain. Did one of my intimate friends call, I greeted her in my mind with, "I see a girl; her name is May" (or Lib, or Molly, whichever it might be); "she comes to tell some news." My very dreams were haunted by like examples. I saw the queerest things. Their names dreams were naunted by like examples. I saw the queerest things. Their names were gibberish. They played strange and ridiculous pranks. But for all that—the perchance in consequence of all that—the ook progressed rapidly, and the first undred lessons were almost completed, then mother received a letter from a hundred when mother received a letter from a cousin of hers, dated from the same place in Australia from which Uncle Sam's had come. It read as follows:

"Dear Sarah,—Your brother-m-law starts for Wildwood in a few days. I trust that he will arrive safely, and bring you permanent relief from your pecuniary troubles. You will find him much chang-"DEAR SARAH,-Your brother-in-law troubles. You will find him much changed in personal appearance—the result of several hard fights in which he has been engaged—since you last saw him. Never handsome, he is now—peculiar-looking. I write this especially to warn you, and to have you warn the others, not to allude in the slightest way to the physical blemishes it will be impossible for you not to observe, as any such allusion would have the effect of rousing him to furious anger. With love to Samuella, upon whom he seems inclined to look with favor, and kind remembrances to the rest, I am yours faithfully, Tom."

And not very long after the reception of this letter Uncle Sam made his appearance. He was "peculiar-looking," to use a favorite remark of one of our oldest citizens, "with a vengeance.'

His head was bald in spots, as though the hair had been pulled out by great handsful, and his face was all awry. Add to this the expression of an ogre, and you will not wonder that the children, who had been hastily dressed at news of his approach were as hastily withdrawn to He was tall and slender, with very fair hair, light blue eyes, a straight nose, and a small mouth.

Mrs. Leroy, the young wife of old Captain Leroy—looked up to with great respect by three-fourths of the population of Wildwood, because she had her bonnets and gloves straight from Paris,—gave it as her opinion that his brow was too narrow, and his chin too retreating. "Give me," she said, calmly and coolly, "the schoolmaster, any day, in preference. He is not quite as tall, but his shoulders are are you? And what do you see that you stare in that way?"

And then the spirit of that First Reader, in spite of all that I could do to resist it, took complete possession of me. I replied slowly and distinctly: "I see a man; he is a queer-looking man; he has a crooked nose; he has a crooked mouth; he has a crooked chin; he has crooked eyes; he has an awful scowl; he is a rich man. I am a poor girl. I would rather man. I am a poor girl. I would rather be a pretty poor girl than a rich crooked

And that was the last of our expecta And that was the last of our expectations from Uncle Sam. He arose, thundered forth some words which I can not repeat, broke all the mantel ornaments at one fell swoop, and left the house never to return again.

I'll just add, to whom it may concern, that soon after the hopes of a fortune from my godfather were thus destroyed, my engagement to Matt Brewster was broken, and that young gentleman married Nettie

As for me, I was "lucky" enough to become the happy wife of John Erickson. And our First Reader proved a perfect

Tooth Drawing Extraordinary.

The fashionable and eccentric physician, Dr. Monsey, who lived in Sir Robert Walpole's time, took so keen a delight in drawing teeth by this particular process that, in the absence of a patient with a fee for the service, he would sometimes be his own dentist, and operate on himself from a pure love of art. The process was this. Round the tooth to be drawn the doctor fastened securely a strong piece of catgut, to the other end of which a bullet was attached. A pistol having been charged with this bullet and a full measure of powder, the operation was performed effectually and speedily. The doctor could rarely prevail on his friends to let him remove their teeth in this singular and startlingly simple manner. Once a gentleman, who had agreed to make trial of the novelty, and had even allowed the apparatus to be adjusted, turned craven at the last moment. "Stop! stop!" he exclaimed, "I've changed min, and you are a coward for changing yours," answered the doctor, pulling the trigger. and you are a coward for changing yours," answered the doctor, pulling the trigger. Even at this distance of time it would be pleasant to discover that the patient of this comedy was his grace of Grafton, and that, to avenge himself for the loss of a place in the lord chamberlain's gift, the operator attached the catgut to the wrong tooth.—Leisure Hour.

A Story of a Pocket.

A fire broke out in a dwelling house the A fire proke out in a dwelling house the other night, and after the man and his wife had safely reached the street the latter said that there was $50 in the pocket of her dress, hanging in a second-story back room.

"I'll go for it," said the husband, and he plunged into the burning building.

The flames raged furiously, and the man did not return. At the expiration of an hour the fire was the fire w f an hour the fire was extinguished and the back building caved. Firemen groped their way up the rear stairs through water and blinding smoke, and found the man in the closet still fumbling at his wife's dress looking for the money.

He was nearly suffocated with smoke, but had strength enough to say that he thought he wou'd have found the pocket inside of two hours. It never occurred to him to seize the dress and rush out with that. Some men get so excited and nervous in time of fire.

To Stevenson & Co.:

Dear Sirs,—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolicited recommendation of the Stevenson Piano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Piano for a term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Piano in our Parlor in Albert College delights all musicians who test its fine qualities. After the instrument had been in use a few weeks, I gave a willing testimony to its many excellencies. Now, after nearly two years of constant use, my opinion has not changed, except for the better. The true test of a piano is in using it one or two years. The Stevenson Piano has borne that test. I am more than satisfied.

THE EGYPTIAN WAR.

The main body of the English army in the Soudan are now encamped at Sinkat, where they will remain inactive till next Autumn. The air from the desert is now as hot as from a fornace impossible, but it is thought that a battle with Osman Digma will have to be fought before t! British camp can be made secure. Wolseley will keep portions of his command moving between the different Nile stations during the hot weather as a sanitary precaution. Wolseley's speech to the precaution. Wolseley's speech to the army in the Soudan, outlines the autumn campaign. He said: "The Queen desires me to express her admiration of your courage and self-devotion. To have commanded such men is to me a source of the highest No greater honor can be in store for you than that I look to the act of leading you, please God, into Khartoum before the year is out, the river and in the desert you have borne hardships and privations mur-In action you have been victorious. You have done murless. uniformly victorious. uniformly victorious. You have done all that men can do to save a comrade, but Kharioum fell through treachery two days before it could be A period of comparative reached inaction is now expected. The army is not yet formed with a view to the siege of Khartoum. We must content ourselves during the summer and prepare for an autumn advance. You will I know face the heat and work that yet remains for you with the same courage and endurance you have displayed hitherto."

Gen. Buller's troops suffered intensely from the hot wind and sand during the retreat from Gakdul. A number of men and horses were prostrated. The rebel sharpshooters continually harassed the troops with long range fire.

Six transports arrived at Suakim on the 7th inst., with reinforcements and supplies. Hostile arabs are becoming alarmed at the number of ships arriving.

The water supply at the British camp is abundant. Osman Digma has sent a letter to the British commander, recounting the Arab specesses announcing that the fall of Kassala is imminent, and warning the English they will be defeated and driven into the sea if they venture beyond Suakim. Osman has also sent a letter to the chief of a friendly tribe of Amorars now in Suakim, threatening him with death unless he rejoins the Mahdi's army, and telling him the British are doomed, as 7,000 dervishes have arrived to reinforce his army.

The North Pacific and Australia fleets are to be reinforced. As a result of the conference with the agents general of the colonies at the War Office, the Government will rely upon receiving contingents from Canada Australia, and New Zealand. It is rumored that the Governor-General has received instructions from the Imperial Government to raise five regiments in Canada. It is just possible that there are a sufficient number of men in Canada, with the requisite amount of gushy loyalty, to form five regiments for service in the Soudan, but we doubt if the greater number of Canadians who are loyal to Canada first, will consent to furnish the money necessary to equip and maintain such a force.

The probability of war between England and Russia becomes every day more imminent. The Russians have occupied Afghan territory her authority over which England established with so great a sacrafice of life and money, and have positively decline I to accede to England's demand to withdraw. England has sent an ultimatum to Russia, and thus the matter stands. Turkey, in view of the aggressive attitude of Russia on the Afghan frontier, meditates offering an alliance, offensive and defensive, with England. If the offer is accepted will send an army to India, Turkey to be under the orders of British commanders. The Ameer of Afghanistan is sending troops to protect the fron-tier against the Russians. The lead-ing English journals urge England to occupy and fortify Herat at once and the Russian advance into the interior of Afghanistan at any cost. The Times says if Russia wishes to fight, England is not only ready but willing, and Russia has only to say the word. The News says, "Should the struggle come, it will be the colthe rescue, and their recent onies patriotic fervor has shown that they would not be called in vain." spite of the ugly look of things few seriously expect war with Russia. The language of the British ministers alone ought to be enough to prove They speak in a manner rather indicating that they prefer to go to war rather than allow Russia to advance further into Afghanistan. They must feel sure therefore that Russia will decline the challenge: main reliance is in the confident hope that Russia is hopele sly embarrassed by the want of money.

On Wednesday, 4th inst., the Ontario Government introduced a re-distribution bill in the Assembly. The last distribution of seats bill was passed in 1871, when the unit of population was fixed at 18,114. The increase and changes in population that have taken place since that time rendered the present bill necessary. Government have created only one new seat, that of Algoma, which was too large to be adequately represented by one member. The bill is in every respect a fair one—such a bill as the people of Ontario naturally expected from the Mower Covernment. from the Mowat Government. the slightest attempt at gerrymandering is evident in any of the changes made. The unit of population was fixed at 21,621, and these figures were approximated as near as possible. The following changes were made in these counties :- Brockville to consist of the town of Brockville and the townships of Elizabethtown, Rear of Youge and Escott, Front of Yonge, and Front of Escott. The remainder of the two counties will be divided into two ridings, one to be known as Leeds and the other as Grenville. Voting on the bonus by-law took place in the townships of Bastard and Burgess, and South Crosby yesterday, (10th). As we anticipated the bonus was carried by a good majority in the first-named township, the majority being 239. In South Crosby, there was a majority of 75 in favor of the by-law, but as there was not two-thirds of the total vote polled, the by-law was defeated in that municipality. What effect this adverse vote will have remains to be seen, but we believe the road will be built not withstanding. Voting in Rear of Leeds and Lansdowne takes place on the 13th.

A Slow Train-

The Kingston News tells of a well contested race which took place one day last week between a Kingston Newstell Pembroke Railway train and a cow on the track. The conductor ran ahe id of the train and tried to switch the bovine off the track by twisting her tail, and after several attempts succeeded in doing so, after which he jumped on the rear of the last car and went his way.—[We don't wonder any at the above story. We had occasion to travel over that road once, and we heard the story that the train hands used to walk on ahead and cut the wood for the engine and have it ready when the train came along.—ED.]

THE RUNAWAY MARRIAGE.

Founded on fact, except as to names & places

BY ENG.-A FARMERSVILLE BOY.

"You won't say anything agin the lace wale at that price, will you?"

"That depends on how it's to be done," said Mr. Cromwell. "What done," said Mr. Cromwell. "What is your plan?"

Mrs. Cromwell then related what Mrs. Vasey had done, adding "I'm sure if Mary Vasey could learn the trade in one month, Susan can learn it in less time, for, you know, she's quick to learn anything."
"Well." said Mr. Cromwell. "if you."

"Well," said Mr. Cromwell, "if you

"Well," said Mr. Cromwell, "if you send Susan to that school, you will have to do so without my consent."

"Why," replied Mrs. Cromwell, we can limit her time to go and come, and I'll speak to the mistress to have an eye to her, and I guess it will be all right."

They argued the question at some length, but so intent was the old lady on having the lace veil that Susan was on having the lace veil that Susan was sent to the sewing school and everything seemed to be going on all right till one day, near the end of the month, Susan failed to be at dinner. after twelve, no Susan; one o'clock, no Susan. Mr. Cromwell, ho sewhip in hand, left post haste for the school house. On arriving there, the first word was, "where's Susan?" The mistress had not seen her that day. In great perplexity he then began an enquiry among the neighbors with the same result, till one old matron who wished to pride herself on being the first to break the news, exclaimed with a loud laugh, "La! sir, don't you know that Susan has gone to Providence to be married?"

"To be married!" shouted Mr.
Cromwell. "In the name of common sense, who to?"

" Why, to Roddy Gibson, of course, replied the matron, "we all knew of it this fortnight, but we thought it was none of our business, and so we said nothing about it. I suppose wou will wonder how and when they did their courting. Well, you see, Roddy used to meet her at the turn of the road and walk with her to the school house, and they do say that for the last few days, they didn't appear to be in any great haste to get there, either.

With this information, Mr. Cromwell left for home in great haste, mutdollars will have to be paid now. Edwards knew what he was about when he got that will registered. A fine set of neighbors, surely! Knew all about it this fortnight, and wouldn't tell us. I wonder if they'd give the alarm if they saw our house on fire.
I doubt it." And thus by the time he reached home, he had worked himself into a furious passion. Mrs. Comwell noticed his peturbed state of mind, and at once exclaimed-

"Why, Oliger, what in the world's the matter with you? Are you crazy?
"Enough to make a man crazy," he shouted. "Where's Joe? Tell him to harness Dobb'n as ou ckly as possible. I'm going to Providence with all speed. Here's a pretty spot of work, and all come of your 'tarnal lace wale. Susan's gone to Provi-dence to get married."

To be married!" screamed his ate. "Is it possible, and who is e, and when and where did they he, and when he, and when and make the bargain?"

"Oh, that feller that fixed our house, he waylaid her on the road to the sewing school, and now you see what's come of it. Is the carriage what's come of it. Is the carriage ready?"

"Yes, sir," answered Joe.

"Why, Oliver," said Mrs. Cromwell, "there aint no use goin' to Providence. They'l be married before you can get there."

"Spose maybe they will, but it sha'nt be said I didn't try," was his reply.

"Well, Oliver," said she, "If you will go, I'll go with you." So saying, she drew on a bonnet and a light shawl, and in less than one minute they were on the road to Providence, going as fast as Dobbin could be persuaded (by the free use of the whip) to go. They had proceeded but little more than a mile, when they saw Roddy and Susan coming very leisurely along. They immediately stopped old Dobbin, got out and stood one on each side of their wagon, some twelve or fourteen feet away each a twelve or fourteen feet away, each a whip in hand, waiting the approach of the runaways. Roddy saw the move-ment, and putting whip to his highspirited animal, passed by on Mrs. Cromwell's side of the wagon on the keen run, not forgetting to give Mr. (romwell's horse a smart blow with the whip as he went by, which Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell in their excitement failed to notice, so that when they turned toward their horse, he was nowhere in sight. After standing awhile in a kind of stupor, Mr. Cromwell ventured the remark, what has become of our horse?'

"Gone to Providence to be married," said Mrs. Cromwell, "and now you may go and find him if you can. I don't pity you one bit. I told you not to come. And now I may walk home in these old, thin shoes, and then suffer with rheumatiz in my feet and ancles, dear knows how long.

"Couldn't you wrap your lace wale around 'em?" said Mr. Cromwell. I'm sure it would cure 'em right off.

"I haven't got any lace wale," she shouted, " nor don't suppose I will, should, "nor don't suppose I win, now Susan has gone and got married."

She then threw her whip in the middle of the road and began moving towards home, while Mr. Cromwell towards home, while Mr. Cromwell with a whip in each hand started in some haste toward Providence, in hopes of finding his horse somewhere on the road. In this he was not mistaken, for Dobbin had worked all through spring work and did not feel very ambitious. As soon, therefore, as he found there was no one urging him, he began slacking his speed and in less than a mile he had stooped and in less than a mile he had stopped and was eating grass alongside the road. Finding things all right, Mr. Cromwell managed to get home as soon as his wife, But how they spent that evening we are left to conjecture. We know, however, that Roddie took nis wife home to his mother's till he Tell got his own house finished, and the

THE STEVENSON PIANO.

The following is an unsolicited testi to the merits of this excellent Piano

The following is an unsolicited resultation:—
To Stevenson & Co.:
Dear Sirs,—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolicited recommendation of the stevenson Piano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Piano for a term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Piano in our Parlor in Albert College delights all musicians who test its fine qualities. After the instrument had been in use a few weeks, I gave a willing testimony to its many excellencies. Now, after nearly woyears of constant use, my opinion has not changed, except for the better. The true test of a piano is in using it one or two years. The Stevenson Piano has borne that test. I am more than satisfied.

March.

We are accustomed to think of this month as one of wind and cold—the most disagreeable of the year, with but the nether side of winter's pleasure and none whatever belonging to the milder season. How beautiful are the following lines, written by the poet Bryant, who shows that while we dread this dark month, still it is the beginning of winter's end—the dark hour that just precedes the daybreak—the harbinger of spring's brightest joy:

The stormy March is come at last,
With wind and cloud and changing skies;
I hear the rushing of the blast
That through the snowy valley files.

Ah, passing few are they who speak, Wild, stormy month, in praise of thee! Yet, tho'thy winds are wild and bleak, Thou art a welcome month to me.

For thou to Northern lands again
The glad and glorious sun dost bring,
And thou hast Joined the gentle train,
And wear'st the gentle name of Spring.

The Franchise Bill

The franchise bill introduced in the Local Legislature by the Hon. C. F. Fraser is a measure that will meet with the approbation of all, irrespective of political bias. True, it does tardy justice to the young men of this province, but a justice that will be none the less accentable. province, our a justice that will be none the less acceptable. It approaches as near manhood suffrage as, perhaps, the public sentiment would warrant, and at the same time it prevents any exercise of the franchise by uninterested parties. The following is a brief summary of its provisions:—The property qualification required to entitle owners and tenants to vote is reduced from $400 in cities and $800 in towns to $200, and from $200 in incorporated villages and townships to $100. It is required, however, that every person voting on this qualification must be actually domiciled within the constituency. This will do away with the difficulties, the irritation, and corruption too often develution, and corruption too often develution. oped in connection with the outside vote, and there is little question but that the unanimous consent of the House will be cheerfully accorded to House will be cheerfully accorded to the proposition thus to expunge from the franchise law this fruitful cause of so much wasted effort and questionable political enterprise in too many election contests. The present tax-scription for a year. Go in, Mr. Edable income qualification is reduced ready to push things of interest in the Reporter. I heard one man say he thrown into a state of wild excitence. News was brought in by Slide-in-Hal-the-Jolly-Lounger that a wild beast of prodigious size and ferocious mien had taken up its abode in an adjacent wood. Quickly a party from $400 to $200, and the old provision as to payment of taxes is removed. It is also provided that any $300 in wages shall be entered on the assessment roll as a wage-earner, and shall be entitled to vote as such. Any shall be entitled to vote as such. Any person owning and being domiciled on real property of 20 acres in extent, assessed for $400 in cities and towns, assessed for $400 in cities and towns, and for $200 in townships and incorporated villages, shall be entitled to vote as a land holder. The same provision is also made to apply to tenants. The old farmer's son's franchise is exhautted and water which every ants. The old farmer's son's fran-chise is substituted, under which every land-holder's son who has not been absent from the municipality in which he tenders his vote for more than four months of the year prior to the return of the assessment roll, is en-titled to vote as such. Every house-holder entered on the assessment roll as such, who occupies a separate dwelling, being neither boarder nor joint occupant, is entitled to vote. The franchise as to Indians remains the same. The provisions as to Algoma and the unorganized District of Mus-koka and Parry Sound. Peterborough, koka and Parry Sound. Peterborougn, Victoria, Hastings, and Renfress, requiring land owhership, house occupancy, and six months residence, also remain unchanged. The assessment roll is carefully maintained as the basis of the whole law, and only those whose of the whole law, and only those whose names appear thereon are entitled to exercise the franchise. It will be evident that nearly every male citizen of legal age in the Province under one or other of the clauses of the bill is entitled to exercise the franchise.

DEAR SIR.-We had occasion to DEAR SIR.—We had occasion to visit Farmersville as an agent travelling for the Milling Co. of M. F. Beach, of Iroquois, who has one of the best rolling mills in Ontario, and turning out flour which cannot be excelled in Ontario, and by the way the people patronize the flour you would imagine it was the only rolling mill in Ontario.

Farmersville is about 15 miles north of Brockville, built on the summit of a hill. It contains about 800 of population, and is noted for the best schools in Eastern Ontario—Common, High and Model School. We were informed there were over 100 pupils in the High School. The church property is fine. The people are very cordial and kind to strangers. We visited the very fine printing office of Mr. B. Loverin, who is always thrown into a state of wild excitement. News was brought in by S'ide-in-Hal-the-Jolly-Lounger that a of veteran huntsmen were collected and marshalled under the leadership of Cap. Electricity. The party consisted of Nimble-Ed-the-Drummer, Jolly-Hy-the-Grog-Furnisher, Sling-Paint-Cal-the-Spunge-on, Big-Nuckle-Let-the-Ball-Pusher, Jimmy-Waubuno the Mortar-Masher, Rocky-Bone-the Hang on, and Do-Nothing-Ed-De-Whistler. Slide-in-Hal's wood sled was utilized as a chariot of war, the supplies being placed on Cap. Electricity's phaeton. The amunition consisted of a supply of fox-bait, cat-tails, coal oil, traps, buck-saw, fire arms, fire water, &c., &c. Quickly the chariot was got in motion, and soon arrived at Stinging-Bee-Eleven-Stones' ranche. Here the party dismounted and preceded by Nimble Ed sought the dark and gloomy recesses of the forest, where the animal was supposed to be in hiding. Arriving at the supposed lair (a large tree, high up in which a cavity was visible) a halt was made and Waubuno was selected to do the sapping and mining. After nearly one hour's hard labor, the majestic lord of the forest lay prone upon the ground The lair of the wild beast was quickly sought, when lo! and behold, the tree did not pan out worth a cent. After searching the 7x9 cavity in the tree, they found to their chagrin that there was no bear, no coon, no hedge-hog, no squirrel, in fact, no nothing. Csp. Electricity fact, and the darmonstrate to the assemno coon, no hedge-hog, no squirrel, in fact, no nothing. Csp. Electricity fact, no nothing, Csp. Electricity proposed to demonstrate to the assem-bled hunters that his system of catching wild animals, (viz.: by attaching a small piece of meat to a fish-hook) was far superior to that of Waubuno's system of sapping and mining, but the crest-fallen hunters did no. feel in any humor to listen to any sound home sweet home. Sadly the pa wended their way homeward, resolved that when Slide-in-Hal wanted any saw logs cut they would let the Mortar-masher do the job alone.

The following is an unsolicited testimonial as the merits of this excellent Piano:— To Stevenson & Co.:

To Stevenson & Co.:

Dear Sirs,—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolicited recommendation of the Stevenson Piano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Piano for a, term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Piano in our Parlor in Albert College delights all musicians who test its fit equalities. After the instrument had been in use a few weeks, I gave a willing testimony to the step of a piano is in using it one or two years. The changed, except for the better. The true test of a piano is in using it one or two years. The Stevenson Piano has borne that test. I am more than satisfied.

Ode to Winter

By Eng.-A FARMERSVILLE BOY. l Winter wild, stern Nature's child, A flickle, wayward thing, my poor muse doth not refuse, An ode to thee I'll sing.

Though to the great, in pomp and state,
Thou dost much comfort bring,
The poor would say, Oh | haste away
And leave the year to Spring.

Thou art a king, for every thing Yields to thy sovereign power, Thy chilling blast that whistles pa Soon brings the flakey shower.

With ice and snow where e'er we go, Thou coverest every thing, Therefore, we say, Oh, haste away And leave the world to Spring.

There's many think the skating rink Quite a fine place to stay, And many ride, their love beside, In the merry, jingling sleigh.

Thou givest all the carnival,
Where skaters have full swing,
But the poor would cry, Winter go by,
And leave the world to Spring.

From shore to shore thou bridgest o'er The lakes and rivers too,
And the railway train off tries in vain
The banks to worry through.

The teamster he don't wish to see The drifts you often bring, And when you do, he wishes you Would leave the year to Spring.

Thou comest here once every year
To pile the drifting snow,
But the shivering herd and every bird
All wish to see you go.

Now, if you stay till April day, You'll be no longer king, For the genial sun will make you run, And leave the year to Spring.

Addenda.

My baulky muse doth here refuse
Farther with me to go,
Though I had not indulged the thought she e'er would use me so.

But if I stay till flowery May, As some may hope I will, My muse despite an ode 1'il write To lovely Farmersville.

A Midnight Escapade.

"In the spring a liveller iris changes on the burnished dove; In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

And this will probably explain the strange conduct of a couple of Farm-eraville youths, as recorded below. They had been in the habit of calling on certain young ladies, at a certain house, in a certain square, and prolonging their visits beyond the hour at which the good people of the house were accustomed to retiring. The re accustomed to retiring. The ster of the house determined to vetoe a continuance of this sort of thing, and not wishing to offend the of young ladies by speaking to them, he wrote a note to the young men informing them that he locked his doors at 10 p. m. However, the next night the young men turned up again, fresh as ever, and at 10 o'clock evinced not the slightest intention of taking their departure. Therefore, the master of the house called upon them and asked them if they purposed staying all night. The young men reing all night. The young men regarded this question as a covert intimation that their absence would be they accordingly departed rather crest-fallen. It was apparently a case of "he couldn't and he wouldn't." with the smaller of the young gallants, for the next night 10 o'clock found him in the house which he had left with so little ceremony the previous evening. In apparent ignorance of the presence of the youth in question, at 10 o'clock, the master of the house locked the doors and retired for the night; but about 12 o'clock he was aroused by a noise such as an inex perienced burglar would make, and he was not slow in divining the cause.

After a vain attempt to thaw one of the windows loose by the application of a hot iron, the youth was engaged in a final trial at the front door, when in a final trial at the front door, when his host appeared on the scene. The youth darted into the nearest room and hastily secreted himself. His movement was quick, but not quick enough to escape the observation of his host, who, in pretended ignorance of the youth's hiding place, commenced a vigorous search for the intruder. After terrifying the youth sufficiently in this way, the master of the house unlocked the front door, opened the door of the room in which

Fire Protection.

There seems to be a growing feeling among our citizens that we should have a better system of fire protec While we are prepared to ad mit that good results have been ac-complished by the formation of a system of police surveillance and the partial protection of buildings by having chimneys, flues, &c., occasion having chimneys, have, ally inspected. Still, we feel that something more is required in a village the size of Farmesville. Nearly all of the workshops and a good many all of the workshops and a good many of the dwellings, stores, &c., are constructed of wood, and some of them are old and the chimneys are necessarily defective. If a fire should break out there is now no organized system of water supply and no person having authority to direct matters at a fire. What we want is a thorough system of fire alarm signals, an organized and thoroughly trained fire company, and last, though not least, a fire engine. No doubt, some will murmur at the expense these things would entail upon the inhibitest ganized and thoroughly would entail upon the inhabitants of the village. In reply to these object the vinage. In reply to these objection, we would say that the rates for fire insurance are correspondingly higher in places without fire protection than those that are protected. We believe that the decrease in ratefor insurance would in a few years more than pay for an engine. A bus iness man residing on Main St. informed us a few days ago that the decrease in the rate of insurance on his property if we had proper fire his property it we had proper his protection would be from $4 to $5 per year. We do not believe that there is a resident of this village bu recognizes the need of something being done in the matter of affording better protection against the rayages. better protection against the ravages of fire, and would be willing to contribute towards the purchase of a fire engine, if invited to do so. We be-lieve that when the water-works are fully completed in Brockville, the corporation will sell one of their hand engines, and no doubt at a reasonable price. We cannot too strongly urge npon the people of Farmersville the necessity of moving in this matter at once, as it is possible some morning we may awake to find a large portion of the village in ashes. For, if a fire should occur in any of the blocks of power that we now possess could prevent the whole block being destroyed, and if unfortunately a high wind should be raging at the time, there is no telling where the damage would end. Should we be so unfortunate as to have such a fire, we would then feel that the golden opportunity had been that the golden opportunity had been allowed to pass, by taking advantage of which much valuable property could have been saved.

Riel in Rebellion.

Despatches to the Globe from Winnipeg and St. Paul, on Monday and Tuesday last, brought the startling intelligence that the exiled Riel, of Red River rebellion fame, had again placed himself at the head of a body of rebellious half-breeds, and that the lives and property of white settlers in Prince Albert were threatened. Riel is said to be in command of 1,500 half-breeds and Indians. The rebels have seized the Indian stores at Duck Lake, and cut the telegraph wires. The Mounted Police are concentrating their forces near the scene, and Commander Irvine with a large force armed with cannon, is on the march.

Men are being enlisted as fast as possible. The 90th Battalion has resible. The 90th Battalion has re-ceived orders to hold itself in readiness for immediate action. There is intense excitement in the North-West. The difficulty arises over the nonsettlement of land claims.

The Soudan.

The British have been massing their forces at Suakim and Korti, and have been busily preparing their en campment, where they will await the autumn before commencing to smash the Mahdi. But the Mahdi apparthe Mahdi. But the Mahdi a ently is not disposed to allow to become aclimatized before engaging in battle, and is therefore harassing them at every point. Another power which we think will force the Mahdi's hand is that in order to retain the faith of his followers in his character as a prophet he must make progress in his words to the Rud See despite the his march to the Red Sea, despite the presence of the British. The Mahdi's followers are eating up their own resources and are becoming dissatisfied to the delay. On the 21st the troops in the zareba at Hasheen shot and shelled the rebels on adjacent hills and dispersed them. On Sunday, while detachments of the English and Indian infantry were making a zareba seven miles from Sunkim, they were suddenly surprised by a rush of Araba suddenly surprised by a rush of Arabs who had been massed and concealed in the defiles west of Hashcen. The English formed a square as quickly as possible, but the camels, mules and horses were driven back in confusion on the troops, causing a stampede, and amid clouds of dust the Arabs penetrated the square. Meanwhile, the marines and Berkshire regiment maintained a continuous fire, holding cavalry and fire from the guns at the Hasheen zareba checked the onslaught of the Arabs, which at the onsett threatened a serious disaster to the of the Araba, threatened a serious disaster to the British. An unofficial estimate places the British killed at 52 and the wounded at 85. Nearly all the casualties were due to spear-thrusts received in hand to hand encounters. The Araba got between the transport train and zareba, speared the men of the transport corps and killed the animals. They fought savagely, refusing to give or take quarter. Gen. fusing to give or take quarter. Gen. McNeil is blamed for not taking precautions against a surprise. It is now thought that the Mahdi will force the British into precipitating the issue.

The Death Roll,

FERGUSON. Another old land-mark has been removed in the person of Mrs. Fer-guson, of Junetown, who died on the 7th at her son's residence. This old lady came from Glasgow, Scotland, with her husband in 1821, and was at her death 84 years of age. Her partner died 29 years ago, since which time she has lived with her son. She was the mother of 6 children, 26 grand-children, and 27 great-grand-children. She was for many years a children. She was for many years a member of the Baptist Church, and was highly respected. Many friends as well as two sons mourn her loss.
The funeral took place on Monday, the 16th inst., and her remains were followed to the grave by a large con-course of friends. Rev. D. C. Sander-son conducted the services.

BAILE.

At his residence, Junetown, on Thursday, March 11th, Benjamin Buile, aged 88 years Mr. Baile em-Benjamin igrated to Canada from the County of Wexford, Ireland, 63 years ago, nearly all of which time he has resided in the Township of Yonge. He had a family of two sons and three daughters. He was an earnest and zealous church member for over forty years, and was universally re-

Suddenly, on Monday morning last, the 23rd inst., of congestion of the lungs, George Stafford, in the 40th year of his age. The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon in the Methodist Church, the funeral sermon being preached by the Rev. Mr. Sherman assisted by Rev. Mr. Blair. Mr. Stafford has been a resident of the village for the past 20 years, and has been in the employ of Mr. D. Fisher as carriage painter for 17 years. was a prominent member of the lodge of Oddfellows in the village, who were unremitting in their attendance dur-ing his illness, and when the grim monster, death, removed their brother from among them they showed their appreciation of his worth by taking entire charge of the funeral obsequies. Invitations were at once sent to all the who responded by sending delegate from Brockville, Mallorytown, Delta, etc. Jno. R. Reid, P. G. C. Brown; the others were sisters daughters of G. K. Brennan. Of a daughters of G. K. Brennan. Of a quiet, retiring disposition, his many good qualities and Christian virtues made him universally respected. He leaves a wife and one son, a lad of tender years, to mourn his loss.

At Independence, Missouri, on the 20th inst., Capt. Riley Johnson, in the 67th year of his age. Capt. Johnson was for many years a resident of this vicinity, and was known to a great many of our readers. We have gleaned the following brief items relative to his life: Mr. Johnson was born in the State of New York. Some 28 years ago he owned and kept the Johnston House in Ogdenfourg. At the time of the American burg. At the time of the American Rebellion, he organized a company of Rebellion, he organized a company of volunteers, serving in the capacity of Captain for four years. He was captured by the rebels and confined in Libby prison for 21 months. Howith about twenty of his fellow-prisoners formed a plan of escapulate of digging an underground passage from the prison. The plan successions sage from the prison. The plan succeeded, and 112 persons escaped, but he being sick could not avail himself of the means of escape, and gener-ously offered his chances to a fellowprisoner, who succeeded in escaping Shortly afterwards he was exchanged and honorably discharged from the army. Returning to Ogden burg he again kept hotel for a number of years, but finally sold out and removed the township of Yonge, purchasing the tarm of the late Daniel Phillips.
Here he resided about four years, when he disposed of the farm to his brother Charles, and moved into the village of Farmersville. About four years ago, owing to financial difficul-ties, he suddenly left this suction, and had never been heard from until Saturday last, when the news came over the wires announcing his death. Mr. Johnson was a member of Rising Sun Johnson was a member of rusing our Lodge of A. F. and A. M., and the lodge telegraphed the brotherhood to that effect. A reply was at once received that the Order had forwarded the remains to Ogdensburg, where they will be interred. Capt. Johnson was twice married, his first wife being a native of the Township of Matilda, by whom he had three children, all of whom he had three children, all of whom are living. His second wifewas Mrs. Lamb, mother of Mr. J. P. Lamb, druggist. Of a kind and generous disposition, he was honored and respected by all who knew him, and the writer can hear represent the income. the writer can bear personal testimon to his worth and strict intergrit.

To Stevenson & Co.:
Dear Sirs,—As a matter of justice I wish to give my unsolidited recommendation of the Stevenson Piano. The Stevenson Company warranted the Piano for a term of years. They have thus far more than fulfilled their contract. The Piano in our Parlor in Albert College delights all musicians who test its fine qualities. After the instrument had been in use a lew weeks, I gave a willing testimony to its many excellencies. Now, after pearly two years of constant use, my opinion has not changed, except for the better. The true test of a piano is in using it one or two years. The Stevenson Piano has borne that test. I am more than satisfied.

It was an action for trespass brought by a joint tenant against his partner Two farmers (whom we will term A and B) rented a farm jointly, and acquired equal rights in certain implements. There were two barns on the farm, and when the threshing was done, they agreed upon a division of the grain, and stored their respective shares in different barns. In the granary of B was stored a portion of an implement which was purchased jointly. A desired to obtain possession of this portion and got access to the granary, by removing some loose boards The result was the action of B against A for trespass Mr. Blackburn appeared for the def't. Mr. Loverin held that the act of A did not constitute a trespass, but Messrs. White and Scovill agreed that it was a trespass, and he was fined $1 and costs.

★ Gananoque Reporter: On 30th July last, Mrs. J. W. Day, with a child and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson, were on their way to Sand Bay with a covered buggy. While crossing the old bridge over Wiltse Creek, known as McNamee's bridge, 6th con. Lansdowne, the horse got frightened at a hole in the bridge and began to back up. The women were unable to control the horse, and it backed in such a way as to cramp the buggy and force it over the side of the approach to the bridge down on to the rocks several feet below. Mrs. Day could not get clear of the buggy, and when she fell the horse came down upon her. In this position she remained until help could be obtained from half a mile distant; and all the time the horse in its struggles to get up was bruising her head and body on the rocks. When men arrived and she was extricated, she was found to be seriously bruised and wounded in many places, and one of her ears was almost ground off by being rubbed against a stone. The was attended to and after a time re-covered. Then a claim was made on the Front of Leeds and Landsdowne for damages. The council contended that they were not liable, as they had examined the bridge in question, and pronounced it unsafe, and had posted a notice to that effect. Also that they were building a new bridge at the time and only left the old one in place at the request of those near by, for convenience of drawing milk. A time, we believe, the council At the time, we believe, the council were willing to pay something to Mrs. Day, at least to bear the expenses caused by the accident. Whether any direct offer was ever made or not seems a little uncertain, but a councillor informs us that the council never had an opportunity of compromising the matter. Mr. Day sued the council for $2,500. The case was tried by Mr Justice O'Connor and a jury at Kingston, on Thursday last, and a verdict of $2,000 was given for the plaintiff. Mrs. Day is daughter of Mr. T. Shaw. Leeds, and sister to Mr. W. H. Shaw, ex-councillor.

Almost a Murder.

Late on Friday evening, our usually quiet village was thrown into a state of excitement by the report that a brutal assault had been committed upon the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mulvena, an old couple living about one mile west of the village. It appears that a man named James worked the farm, living in part house. Disagreements and illof the house. Disagreements and ill-feeling had been rife between the two families for some time which finally culminated on the evening in question. It seems that Mark, who had been drinking some during the day, came home about 4 p.m. and going into Mulvena's room they had some words regarding some grain, and Mark struck and knocked Mulena down and kicked him about the head and body. Old Mrs. Mulvena interposed to save her husband and was also struck and beaten. Her hip bone was broken and one of the bone Her hip of her shoulder fractured Mark went into his own part of the house when Mulvena secured the door with a short bar. In a few moments Mark burst in the door and again as burst in the door and again as saulted the old man, battering his head and face to a complete jelly. Mulvena managed to reach the door and shouted to a neighbor who was passing to send for H. H. Arnold (who manages Mulvena's business). Mr. Arnold at once drove to the scene of the disturbance, and was instructed to lay an information against Mark for assault. B. Loverin, J. P., was appealed to, and driving up to Mulvena's, the old man swore out an in-formation against Mark, which was placed in Constable Brown's hands. In the meantime, Mark had left the house and started towards Lyndhurst. Brown and Arnold started in pursuit, and when near Cornell's Hill, they met Mark returning accompanied by young man named Freeman. a young man named Freeman. A lively scuffle ensued for a few moments, Mark resisting arrest, and Freeman pitching into Arnold. They were, however, soon quieted and brought on to Farmersville. Saturday at 1 p. m. was fixed for the trial, and when the hour arrived the town hall was packed by an excited crowd anx the old saying, that we hat ious to learn the result. Dr. Cornell, on being sworn, said that he had examined Mr. Mulvena professionally, and found him badly cut about the face and head; did not examine his body; did head; did not examine his body; did not consider the injuries on Mulvena dangerous. At this stage, Constable Brown served a warrant on Mark, charging him with committing an aggravated and malicious assault and battery upon the person of Mrs. Hugh Mulvena, with intent to do grievous bodily harm. Mark was at once placed on trial for this offence. Mulvena's testimony was again taken and was substantially the same as in his own case. Dr. Cornell being called stated that he had examined Mrs. Mulvena and found a fracture of the shoulder bone, also that the hip bone was broken; did not find any bruises on her person, excepting some on her face; considered her case dangerous, owing to her advanced age, but thought that with the very best of care the might recover. Mark admitted the assault and battery, but claimed that it was under very aggravating circumstances. The magistrates, after hearing all the evidence, decided that there was sufficient to warrant Mark's committal, and he was accordngly sent to jail to await his trial. onstable Brown left with the prisonr for town about 5 p.m. and safely lodged him is the coun y jail.

Fire Protection

To Editor of The Reporter.

DEAR SIR,-I was much pleased to notice by the last issue of the RE-PORTER that you had taken up the question of fire protection, and I crust that you will stick to your text until you succeed in impressing upon the minds of those interested necessity of doing something toward protecting our beautiful and thriving village from the ravages of the fire fiend I would like to see our city fathers take the matter up, and have an estimate prepared of what it would cost to furnish the necessary water supply, and purchase and equip a good hand engine. We do not realize the risk we run for want of some organized system of fire protection. But should the fire bells call us out some night to witness the accumulation of years, to the extent of several thousand dollars, go up in smoke, then would dawn on our minds the truth of the old saying, that we had been

Since reading your article on the above subject, I wrote a representative of several of our leading insur-ance companies, asking what effect the on our tariff of rates. His reply was that Farmersville would be classed E instead of F as at present. It would also be much easier to get insurance placed, and companies would carry heavier lines. By referring to the tariff, I find that to be classed E will reduce the rates. reduce the rates † per cent., or $2.50 on every $1,000 of insurance carried. on every $1,000 of insurance carried. To one of our business men carrying $5,000 insurance, it means a saving of $12.50 yearly, which I am sure would a good deal more than pay his share of the cost of an engine. Since the new tariff came in force, I have found it very difficult to get insurance placed, even at the present high rates. The largest amount any company will carry in the business portion of our village is $2,000, and that only on first-class risks; third and fourth class, not more than $1,000, and some not more than $500;—and all because we have no fire protection.

Hoping this important matter will receive the attention it merits, I will not intrude further on your valuable

Liberty is a fine thing. What would we be here in Canada if we had not civil, political, and religious lib-orty? Folks on the other side of the St. Lawrence make a great spread on the 4th of July and on like occasions, and their orators exhaust the vocabulary of the English language to find eulogistic and melodious epithets with which to decorate the shrine of their imaginary goddess. Well, I used to think it was all very fine, and that true political liberty is there only to be found in its purity; but after a while I found out that it was "not all gold that glitters," and that there was far less liberty under the Stars and Stripes than under the cross of St. Andrew and St. George;—that there was something more powerful han constitutions and Declarations of Independence;—that there was something which ignored the sublime teachings of that immortal document, and sustained a system alike a curse to the governed and the governor. One of its fundamental principles, and one constantly heralded from hustings and pulpit and lecture room was the "Equality of all men and their right to certain inalienable privileges," life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, yet at the same time over four hundred thousand of her children were living under one the most infernal and degrading systems of slavery the world ever saw, and their owners sus-tained in its maintenance and support by a government which pretended to be the embodiment of true political liberty and equality. Then again, "the right of free speech." It is a notorious fact that, when und the influence of the celebrated axion already quoted, good men and women, paompted by its teachings and trusting in the right, dared to raise their voices and wield their pens in condemnation of the infernal system, their houses were destroyed, their printing presses thrown into the Mississim, and the restriction in the mississim, and the condensate the large destroyed in the restriction. miracle escaped a coat of tar and feathers and a ride on a rail (fact) Well, I thought at the time twas rather queer. And then there was another fundamental principle in this so-called exemplification of true liberty, viz.: "that the governing power was the choice and by consent of the governed." Good in theory, but not always in practice and never will be till the millenium. And this was carried into effect from the President to the poundkeeper, and what was the result? The higher officers, generally passable, though there were some the mark! Why, I've seen a sheriff who could write nothing but his name, which he learnt to do after his a sling during the canvass, a judge and a member of congress stumping the county for him; also, one postmaster who could not make out his quarterly returns, and another who could only tell the P.O. stamps by the color and like the sheriff, could not write his name. True, the two latter cases were not elective offices, but offices, but amounting to the same thing, being appointments in response to party petitions, and displacing qualified men knew a school commissioner who, just before an election (at which ho was a candidate for re-election) was examining a candidate for school teacher, and whilst writing the man certificate of qualification, he asked him just three questions, viz: What is reduction? the capital of Pennsy What vania? and what is a fraction? And as he handed the successful and surprised young man authority to teach for two years, he wound up with a hope to receive his vote at the coming election! Now, I don't say all are of this stamp, but there are too man; especially in the West. And then look at the municipal government of the most important city in the Union, composed partly of some of the greatest scoundrels and Hackguards unhung. Look at the gamblers and pugilists she sent to represent her in the U.S. House of representatives, carrying on their infernal gambling A state of things some like-minded parties, aye and editors, too, (I say like-minded, for I can't conceive true Canadian or a loyal British sul ject wants the like here) are trying t indoctrinate us with. God grant the day is far distant when this fair Can God grant tl da of our's shall be cursed with suc a system, say I.

ZEBEHR PASHA.

Visit to the Ex-Governor of the Soudan-His Remarkable Life and Adventures.

The Story of His Career as Told by Himself.

On the outskirts of Carro to the west, between a branch of the Mahmoudieh cenal and the railway line, stands the house alletted by government to the ex-dictator of the Soudan. Everything about it bears marks of poverty. In the garden a small kiosk with a couple of divans and floored with gaudy carpeting, serves as a reception room by day. In one corner of the yard stands a Saidy mere tethered to the wall. At sunset she is brought inside the house, and her night stable is at the foot of the stairs leading up to the siwan where Zebehr Pasha and his visitors dine and smoke their narghilder, with now and then a cup of strong tea highly spiced with Nubisn herbs. When I arrived yesterday, writes a correspondent of the London Standard, the pasha was attending the funeral rites at the Ismailieh palace, and the honors of the house were done by his relative Abdullah and the Sheik Senoussi. of Morocco, who is a ric interchant, now settled in Alexandria. He has travelled many a time in Europe, and visited every capital and town of importance on the continent. Pleased to have someone to corroborate his tales, which would probably have been otherwise only half believed, he launched into descriptions of all the Frank wonders he had seen, his descriptions of our underground railways being especially amusing. He himself was careful never Frank wonders he had seen, his descriptions of our underground railways being especially amusing. He himself was careful never to travel except on a Sunday, because the traffic was diminished and there was then less danger of a collision between the trains which keptrevolving between the stations every moment like wild spirits. On the arrival of Zebehr Pasha the other visitors hushed their talk into attentive silence, only rarely interposing a remark. During a trugsl dinner, a l'Arabe, when it tell to me, as guest, to dip first into the dish and pick out a choice piece from each to hand enly rarely interposing a remark. During a trugel dinner, a l'Arabe, when it tell to me, as guest, to dip first into the dish and pick out a choice piece from each to hand to the host, not much was said. After dinner, however, I put a few leading question s, and the pasha, when fairly laurched, spoke on incessantly for hours. In mere anecdote his manner was excited, and he kept snapping his fingers to accentuate surprise or scora; but on more serious topics he weighed his words carefully, and his manner and voice reminded me curi-usly of Arabi.

Nothing could be more interesting than this conversation, or monologue, in the queer little room lighted by two candles, and obscured by the smoke of cigarettes and narghilehs. Grouped around were sheiks from the far Soudan, a bey or two, and the servants; while the central figure in a chair fitted in well with the surroundings. Tall and spare, almost to attenuation, with sparkling eyes, mobile lips, and the beautiful hands of his race, the pasha was dressed in civil black, with a scarlet and white striped shawl thrown round his shoulders. Every look and gesture bespoke the commander, and as the ready words and proud laugh dropped from him, one could scarcely withhold admiration from the fallen general as he told the story of his past.

"I need not go over my record. It is probably well known to a surround to the surround had not a content of the probably well known to a content of the surrounding spans."

laugh dropped from him, one could scarcely withhold admiration from the fallen general as he told the story of his past.

"I need not go over my record. It is probably well known to you, as it is to the world in general. No man now living in Egypt has rendered such services to his country as I did, and you see the reward. I do not complain, for it is the common fate to fail. I care nothing for the loss of wealth and lands and family in comparison with my honor. Trat was traduced years ago; but, thank God, in words, at least, it habeen restored to me. It was Gordon's accusations which cut my heart out, but now he has confessed that he was wrong, which shows his true nobility. What amends it was in his power to make he has made. He has telegraphed for me to take his place, and to the government that the confication of my property was unjust, and it should be restored to me. He requested that some money should be given me at once, and I have been paid £5 000. That is a mere nothing, but the fault is not his. Do you know what the government owe me? Alone in the conquest of Darfour I spent some £300,000 or £400,000. Last year you must have seen four thousand hundred weight of ivory advertised for sale by the government. ivory advertised for sale by the government.

It was all, or almost all, mine, besides shiples also of feathers, gold, and silver, and cattle and furnture. They did not leave more than the bare divans in my hone, not even a carpet nor a glass. Enough of this, however. About my son this is what happended: Jealous intriguers at Cairo had poisoned the ear of the khedive against me, and I was summoned to the capital. Conscious of no wrong. I came at once, leaving my family and my property in full confidence Here I found Gordon I protested my innocence, and at Kas-en-N:I I offered to go up with him and prove to him the falseness of the accusations made sgainst me. He refused, but told me to write to my son Sileiman a letter, ordering him to submit to Girdon. I wrote to him, telling him that Gordon went up as the representative of the khedive and myself; that he was to treat him as a lord and a father; to serve him as a slave, if he wishel, and to obey his slightest word. I gave Gordon a letter of this sort also. I accompanied him to the station, and my last words to him were to commend my young son of 16 years to his protection, and to beg him to watch over him as he would over his own son. How could I fear any thing after that? When Gordon arrived my son met him, and Gordon treated him with great kindness, and gave him a rank, and made him governor of B hr Gazii, and my son made him presents—180 tons of ivory, and other things. Shortly atterwards a servant of my house, one Edriss, fled away and went to Gordon, and told him that Suleiman was treacherous at heart and working against him. Gordon at one believed this secundrel, and named him governor in the place of my son without asking further. Suleiman, when he heard this, sent to Gordon, how the mall. Two more were sent, and they were also immediately shot. I can not understand this treatment of embassadors. Suleiman then said he would go himself to Girdon, and started with twelve hundred followers for Dara, where he believed Gordon they were also immediately shot. I can not understand this treatment of embassadors. Suleiman then said he would go himself to Gerdon, and started with twelve hundred followers for Dara, where he believed Gordon was. At six hours' distance from Dara he heard Gordon was at Khartoum. Huturned to go thither and met Gessi, with 150 soldiers. Gessi summoned him to surrender He protested against heing treated as soldiers. Gessi summoned him to surrender He protested against being treated as an enemy. Gessi replied that he was Gordon's represeatative, and Suleiman had better show the loyalty he professed by coming with him. Suleiman said that if Gessi would give him his solemn word that the charges against him should be properly sift ed he would at once surrender and abide by the sentence. This was the greater proof of his loyalty, as he and his men so far outnumbered Gessi that had he wished he could on in a toyardy, as he and his men so far outnumbered Gessi that had he wished he could
however, promised. Accordingly, Suleiman ordered his escort to lay down their arms, and then for six or seven days Gessi and he were friends, eating at the same table and living in each other's company. On the tenth day, however, Gessi called Suleiman and others of his family who were with him to come to him. They came to him and found him sitting under a great tree. In five minutes he had shot them all. I do not believe Gordon ever gave him the order to do such an act, for Gordon is a strangely merciful man. He can not speak our language, and so is often apt to get wrong im pressions, but I do not think he would have shot my son without hearing him. However, numbered Gessi that had he wished he guage, and so is often apt to get wrong impressions, but I do not think he would have shot my son without hearing him. However, that is a thing of the past. I have forgiven him, as we all hope to be forgiven. Gesided at Suczafterward, and God will judge between him and me at the last day. I am very much afraid for Gordon now. If he loses his life it will be the fault of your policy in attacking the rebels at Suakim. The news has now passed from mouth to mouth through the length and breadth of Soudan, that the English are coming with fice and sword to destroy the Arabs. Of what use is it that Gordon proclaims peace whilst you carry on war? I think I could have settled the whole question at Suakim without firing a shot. I know all these people, and they know me. I would have persuaded him to cease war, as I shall go to Obeid to the Mahdi as a friend if I am sent now to Khartoum. I can not approve of the price set on Digma's head. If he were a murderer hiding in a mountain cave you might do it; but it is not a worthy way for a great nation like England to treat an enemy who is still at the head of an army. When When who is still at the head of an army. When I made war on Darfour I lost hardly any lives, but they were just as stubborn foes as these. And when, after six days' running fight, when we were being perpetually attacked by the enemy, I reduced Hash Alah, brother of the sultan, and leader of his army, to submission, how did I treat him? I myself went on foot to meet him; I helped Lim off his horse and led him to my tent. I never sat down in his presence, and served him at table, and washed his bands and feet, though he was my prisoner. So I brought him down to Cairo, and delivered him over to Ismail Pasha. That is how I would treat an enemy always. Kundness and soft words go farther than bullets and lances. I do not know how the idea has gone abroad that I am a slave-dealer. My people serve me gladly for the love they bear me. Let anyone go into my country and a k if Zibehr ever unjustly oppressed or killed a man woman, or child. God is my witness, and I swear to you most solemuly that the charge laid against me is a false one. And is Eagland atraid of a broken man like me? Can she not order me to put down slavery, and am I not forced to obey her commands? Am I a fool, if E gland sent me up, to go against her be quests? I am a soldier, and under authority, and the order given me, by Go'a permission, I will carry out to the last letter, as I have always done. And as for the panification of the country, so confident am I ot my pe ple's love, that I will go up alone amn'n't hem, returning joyfully to my dear home and I shall be received everywhere with the k-see of peace."

"I was down the river ivory-hunting, and heard some elephants trumpeting. On going in the direction of their voices, suddenly my boy Mahmoud and I came upon one of the largest crocodiles I have ever seen, basking selep in the sunlight. Motioning my follower to han i me my heavy elephant gun. I was stealthily creeping on him when I saw the underwood moving to the right, and a fine lion appeared, also evidently stalking the crocodile. I was so as onished that I hardly knew what to do, so merely stood still as a statue to watch. Unless I had seen it myself I should never have believed what followed, which you can credit or not as you please. Crawling along on his belly, the lion drew to within about two meters of the crocodile, and then gathering himself up, came with a tremendous spring on to the nape of the crocodile's neck, where his skin is soft for an inch or two in the crease. Fixing teeth and claws, he wrenched and tore at his hold, whilst the crocodile was fairly pinned, and could not open his jaws in spite of the most frantic effects. In less than five at his hold, whilst the crocodile was fairly pinned, and could not open his jaws in spite of the most frantic efforts. In less than five minutes the struggle was over. I then gave a great shout, and the lion when he saw us moved growling back to the edge of the forest. My boy wanted me to shoot him, but I was so pleased at the way he had killed the crocodile that I thought he had earned his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and his feat, so after cutting of ments of the country and the country and co ed the crocodile that I thought he had earned his feast, so after cutting off parts of the crocodile we left him to the lion, and next morning more than half of his underside had been catea."

Many such stories of adventure and traits of life in the wild Sudan passed the time quickly, and it was past midnight before I left. Without being able to vouch for the truth of the conversation above related, I merely repeat it much as it was snoken. Let truth of the conversation above related, I merely repeat it much as it was spoken, los ing, however, all the vigor of the native Arabic, and elequent voice and gesture. No one, however, atter speaking to Zebehr for long could fail to perceive his strength of character, and, in adding my own to the veneral opini in in Cairo, that we shall make a great mistake if we fail to avail ourselves of the kern tool ready to our hand, I only pay a force i tribute to the fascination of my yesterday's host.

In a paper read before Edinburgh Health Society, Dr. Almond referred to the custom of having the head covered out of doors and uncovered within doors as very injurious on account of it making people so sensitive to draughts of air as to cause them to take account or it making people draughts of air as to cause them to take cold. Bys, he said, who went bareheaded out of doors could stand a greater amount of ventilation in schoolrooms and sleeping rooms than those who wear head coverings.

The hard fact, recently so often brought to the notice of English scientific societies, that two millions of bodies have been interred during the last twenty-five years within the limits of the London postal circle, has very greatly changed the popular view of crema ion. Two years ago three of the scientific papers said that cremation was "unnatural" and "against human feeling," but they now think that self preservation is the first and strongest of laws.

ion of the falls of Niagara, an the use made of it to compute the time that has elapsed since it began. He says:

All sorts of estimates have been in circulation as to the rate at which the falls are receding. Desor thought the rate could not be greater than a foot in a century; but there are probably few who would now agree with him in this menifest extravagance. In 1841 Sir Charles Lyell and Professor Hall estimated that the rate was probably one foot a year, which would make the lower part of the gorge about 35,000 years (11. bably (ne foot a year, which would make the lower part of the gorge about 35,000 years (11. From the fact that Liell failed to present any data upon which he based this in renece, it seems probable that he had none which were at all definite, and that his estimate was a more surmise arising from momentary impressions. On the contrary, Lye Is guide was confident that the American Fall had receded at the aver go rate of two feet a year during the twen y five years he had observed it. And Mr. Bakewell, an eminant English geologist, who had given much personal study to the question, estimated that for the forty years previous to 1839 the rate of recession had been about three feet a year. Mr. Bakewell, any carefully studied the phenomena again in 1845 in 1851, and 1856, finds no occasion materially to revise his estimate.

In 1841 Professor James H. Il had an accurate map of the falls made for the New York Geological Survey, and determined with great care a number of points to which future reference might be made with a view of determining the exact rate of recession. In 1875 another and independent survey was made by the United States Govern ment Dr. Jul us Pohlman, of the Society of Natural Science in Baffalo, after laving thoroughly gone over the ground, carefully compared these maps, and reported upon the subject at the recent meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science held at Moneapolis (August, 1883) where the question was discussed by the geologists of the country, including Professor Hall. Dr. Pohlman's conclusion is, that, after "allowing even a wide margin for possible inconcasion from twenty to forty feet are seen, although the northern point of the falls tions of the Horseshoe fall have receded at least one hundred feet in these thirty-four years, while on the American side differences of from twenty to forty feet are seen, although the northern point of the falls on the American side as well as a monument which marked the edge of the Horseshoe fall in 1881 have remained unchanged."

Professor Hall, in expressing doubts as to the correctness of this con lusion, could only do so by supposing that one or other of the surveys was inaccurate; or that, being made by different persons using different methods, they could not well be compared with each other. Mr James T. Gurdiner, director of the New York State Survey, was led to narly the same conclusion with Dr. Pohlman; and, in response to recent inquiries from Professor A. Winchell, says that the assumption that the Horseshoe fall has receded one hundred feet during the last thirty-three years cannot involve any great degree of uncertainty. Thus f om the best light we now have, it seems alt gether probable that the cataract is receding at a rate that would suffice to produce the whole chasm from Queenstown up in less than twelve thousand years: and if, as is not unlikely, any considerable portion of the go ge about the whir pool had been formed by pre-glacial agencies, even that r-latively short period must be considerably abbreviated."

Some of the English medical journals have already begun to point out the great importance of not over-feeding infants with starchy foods, such as bread, farina gruel, etc., as the warm season approaches. According to authorities like Sir James Paget, such over-feeding is a fruitful cause of the large infant mortality in warm weather. The one article most necessary to the life of the child at all times is water.

There is a rumor going the rounds of the town that one of our most solid financial citizens intends starting a private bank for the benefit and accommodation of the village and surrounding country, Such an institu-tion would be a boon to this section of the country, and one that would no doubt be of great practical value to the community. We hope the rumor is correct.

A Runaway.

Last Saturday afternoon a young man named Haley, from near Toledo, drove into the village, leaving a team, (a span of fine looking and spirited young horses) standing unbitched in front of Fisher's blacksmith shop while he stepped inside. The horses got frightened at something and made a lively run up Main St. Everybody ran and everybody hollered "whoa," Whether under the soothing influence of the "whoas," or from some other cause, the team was finally stopped near the hay scales.

To Dairymen.

We understand that Messrs. Anson Coleman and W. T. Singleton, of Delta, have been appointed agents for a firm in New England, with authority to purchase all the calf and deacon skins they can secure. Was it Suicide?

Last week we gave in our obituary column a brief account of a few incidents in the life of the late Capt. Riley Johnson, little thinking that we would be called upon this week to give some painful revelations concerning the closing scenes in his life's drama. From letters received by his friends it appears that he kept a small confectionery and cigar store at Kan-sas City, Mo. A few days before his death he was called upon by a supposed former acquaintance from the East, who invited him to his rooms at the hotel to see some ladies purporting to be relatives of the supposed friend. Here he was drugged, and remained unconscious for 24 hours, and it is supposed that the party re-ferred to wished to obtain possession of some valuable papers, relating to a back pension and soldier's claim to which the Captain was entitled for services during the American civil war. It seems that after his recovery from the effects of the drugging, he went to Independence (a small village about 10 miles from Kansas City). Here his body was found suspended in such a manner as would lead to the supposition that he had committed suicide; but the medical certificate which accompanied the remains stated that death was caused by strichenine. In conversation with parties who viewed the body at Ogdensburg, we learn that the features were very natural; and no abrasion or discolora-tion of the neck was discernable. Their theory, and we believe the correct one, is that after recovering from the effect of the drug administered Kansas City, the Captain went to Independence in search of the party above referred to, or else had been dependence dose was administered that produced death, and the body placed in the position found in order to make it appear that it was a case of suicide. His store was broken into on the night after his death, which is another link in the chain that leads to the belief that a dark and terrible crime was committed. We learn that a brother, Stanley Johnson, intends visiting Kansas City with a view to unravelling the dark mystery that overhangs the last days of his brocher. We have been permitted to copy the tollowing letters which throw additional light on the matter, as well as showing the respect and esteem in which Capt. Johnson was held in Missouri:

at all events, were acquainted. This stranger in our city invited old Mr. J. up to his room to meet his wife. After reaching the room, Mr J. was introduced to two ladies, purporting to be the daughters of Capt. Sims. Shortly after that some beer was ordered up and Mr. J. induced to drink with them. Within 30 minutes he was unconscious, and when he came to all of the gang had left. Mr. J. did not awake for 24 hours. It is the opinion of many here that the object of the came to all of the gang had left. Mr. J. did not awake for 24 hours. It is the opinion of many here that the object of the young man was to secure some valuable papers from Mr. J. relating to something of the past. This worned the old man and no doubt he became temporarily deranged. The remains are being held until something can be heard from his relatives or friends. One, Mr. O'Dell, formerly of Farmersville or Brockville, gave me your name and suggested that I write to you. Mr. J. has been in Kansas City four years next May. Two years of this time he has been with my family. We all, and also many others, became warmly attached to him, and if we do not hear from his relatives or friends, we will not allow his remains to go to the potter's field. The body has, I believe, been embalmed and could be sent to his old home if so ordered. Am obliged to close this hastily to enable me to mail to-night.

W. W. Egnew.

W. W. EGNEW The second letter is addressed to Mr.

Stanley Johnson, Ogdehsburg, and says:—
Will you please inform us in what condition the remains of Capt. Riley Johnson reached Ogdensburg and through what source you learned of his death. There seems to be a mystery hanging over the cause of his death. There is no doubt that his mental faculties were de anged. The cause I am investigating. Should that his mental faculties were de anged. The cause I am investigating. Should you desire, in the near future. I will write you more fully. It would not be well for the scoundrel (from the East) to put in an appearance at this place. Any man who will entice an old and respectable gentleman into a room and then drug him deserves to be shot down on the spot. Mr. Johnson was in my employ for eighteen months, and one year of the time made his home at my bouse. During his four years stay in K. C. he made no enemies, made a host of friends and not one of them made a host of friends and not one of them will admit that Mr. J. has ended his life in his right mind.

It seems that after his recovery from the effects of the drugging, he want to Indocendance (a small village) went to Independence (a small villag about 10 miles from Kansas City Here his body was found suspended in such a manner as would lead to the supposition that he had committed suicide; but the medical certificate which accompanied the remains stated that death was caused by strichenine. In conversation with parties who viewed the body at Ogdensburg, we learn that the features were very natural, and no abrasion or discoloration of the neck was discernable. Their theory, and we believe the correct one, is that after recovering from the effect of the drug administered at Kansas City, the Captain went to In-dependence in search of the party above referred to, or else had been induced to go there, when a further dose was administered that produced death, and the body placed in the position found in order to make it appear that it was a case of suicide. His store was broken into on the night after his death, which is another link in the chain that leads to the belief that a dark and terrible crime was committed. We learn that a brother, Stanley Johnson, intends visiting Kansas City with a view to unravelling the dark mystery that overhangs the last days of his brother. We have been permitted to copy the following letters which throw some tollowing letters which throw additional light on the matter, as well as showing the respect and esteem in which Capt. Johnson was held in Missouri:-

at all events; were acquainted. This stranger in our city invited old Mr. J. up to his room to meet his wife. After reaching the room, Mr J. was introduced to two ladies, purporting to be the daughters of Capt. Sims. Shortly after that some beer was ordered up and Mr. J. induced to drink with them. Within 30 induced to drink with them. induced to drink with them. Within 30 minutes he was unconscious, and when he came to all of the gang had left. Mr. J. did not awake for 24 hours. It is the opinion of many here that the object of the young man was to secure some valuable papers from Mr. J. relating to something of the past. This worried the old man and only the heavant temporarily deranged. young man papers from Mr. J. relating to some of the past. This worried the old man and no doubt he became temporarily deranged. The remains are being held until something can be heard from his relatives or friends. One, Mr. O'Dell, formerly of Farmersville or Brockville, gave me your name and suggested that I write to you. Mr. J. has been in Kansas City four years next May. Two years of this time he has the particular of next May. Two years of this time he has been with my family. We all, and also many others, became warmly attached to him, and if we do not hear from his relatives or friends, we will not allow his remains to go to the potter's field. The body has, I believe, been embalmed and could be sent to his old home if so ordered. Am obliged to close this hastily to enable me to mail to-night.

The second letter is addressed to Mr. Stauley Johnson, Ogdehsburg, and s

Will you please inform us in what condition the remains of Capt, Riley Johnson reached Ogdensburg and through what source you learned of his death. There seems to be a mystery hanging over the cause of his death. There is no doubt that his mental faculties were de anged. The cause I am investigating. Should you desire, in the near future. I will write you more fully. It would not be well for the scoundrel (from the East) to put in an appearance at this place. Any man who will entice an old and respectable gentlewill entice an old and respectable gentle-man into a room and then drug him de-serves to be shot down on the spot. Mr. Johnson was in my employ for eighteen months, and one year of the time made his home at my bouse. During his four years stay in K. C. he made no enemies, made a host of friends and not one of them will admit that Mr. J. has ended his life in his right mind.

Fire Protection.

Want of space in last issue prevented us commenting on the letter of A. James regarding our present inneficient system of fire protection. We are pleased to see a man of Mr. James' experience taking up the question. His figures should rivet the attention of every resident carrying a dollar's worth of insurance. The reliability of the figures is unquestionable and they plainly show that our property owners have been blind to their true interests in neglecting this matter so long. Assuming the total insurance carried by all residents of the village to be only $50,000, a saving of a 1 per cent (which we are assured the non-session of fire extinguishing apparawould effect) would amount to 50,00 per year. Now, if those who $150,00 per year. Now, if those who carry insurance were to contribute merely the amount that would be saved to them, that saving would pay for efficient fire apparatus in a very short time. But there are others who have vested interests (no pro tected by insurance) that are threat ened by the devouring element, and they ought certainly to contribute a fair share toward paying for fire protection. There is but one way to tection There is but one way to bring this matter to a proctical issue, and that is for a public meeting to be called, when the subject could be considered in all its bearings, and definite action be decided upon. Such a meeting could be called by any citiz as, but, perhaps, the police citiz ns, but, perhaps, the police trustees would be the proper parties to take steps in the matter.

Since writing the above, we have conversed with several parties regard ing our defenceless state in case of fire, and all admitted the necessity of something being done to place our town in a better position than at present. One responsible citizen said that ont. One responsible citizen said that at the figures quoted, fire protection would save to him from $5 to $8 per year on his rate of insurance, and said he would cheerfully given a said he would cheerfully given as the said he would cheerfully given a said he would cheerfully given as the said he would cheerfully given as the said he would cheerfully given as the said that the said he would cheerfully given as the said that at the figures are said that are said that at the figures are said to be said to he would cheerfully give $25, in ne.essary towards providing suitable appliances for extinguishing a fire. Our columns are open for the discussion of this subject, and we hope citizens will take advantage of this zens will take advantage of this medium of communication with the public and make their ideas known, and that some plan will be suggested that will attain the desired end.

A Reminiscence.

In the year 1845, I was ship's stew and on board the ship Empress of Nantucket, cruising on the Equator in the Pacific Ocean for sperm whales. The ship had been out something over a year, and had been successful in securing about 1,100 bbls of oil. I had been aboard only about five months, having shipped at Guiana at the commencement of the season. Whales were plentiful, and just about that time we were seldom a week that time we were seldom a week without seeing a spout, though not always successful in making a capas the leviathans were We were cruising in the neighborhood of Gilbert's Archipelago, in the vicinity of that portion called the Kings mills Group, formed of Simpson's, Heuderson, and Woodle's Islands At the latter island we were very well acquainted, having called there several times trading for cocounts, fish, shells, and such little articles of trade possessed by the natives, who readily bartered them for tobacco and other notions—trifles to us, but invaluable to them. The Chief, Tin Carousch, was a fine old fellow, about six feet high, with an intelligent Jooking countenance, high forehead, and altogether a man who looked as if had he been favored with the benefits of civil-ization he might have made his mark in the world—but of him hereafter. in the world—but of him hereafter. One day we sighted two ships and drew rapidly together. (Whalers are always anxious for a "speak"). We found they were the Prussian barque Kaiser, of Humburg, and the French samp Lucelle, of Havre. Our captain went on bould the Frenchman, and the usual courtesies were exchanged the usual courte its ware exchange! between the officers and crews. day the foreigners came on board the Empress to cinner. They were greatrinkers and our captain's stock of drinkers and our captain's stock of drinkers and he himself was considerably clevated when the day's visit captains. clevated when the day's visit came u an end, so much so that he passed the balance of the night on the lockers in the cabin, instead of his bunk—some the caoin, instead of his bunk—some thing I had never known him to do before. At breakfast time, I woke him to partake of that meal, and he got up cross and ugly, but after replenishing the inner man he resumed his usual urbane manner, which was his usual urbane manner, which was intensified about the middle of the forenoon by the arrival of a boat from the Frenchman with an invitation to dine with the captain, a basket of champagne and a dozen each of wine champagne and a dozen each of wine and brandy. The weather was very fine and sea calm, hardly breeze enough to fill the sails, and after our captain left, the three ships drifted easily along, sometimes drawing nearer to each other and then heaving away as the current and zephyrs took them. And they seemed to be highly enjoying themselves, if we might judge by the hilarious snatches of song we by the hilarious snatches of song we could occasionally hear from the deck of the Frenchman. The first mates visited on board the Empres and the second mates visited on board the Prussian, so it was a general visiting time all round. About 4 bells in the first watch (10 p. m.), the mates in the first watch (10 p. m.) the mates in the first watch (10 p. m.) In the first waten (10 p. m.), the mater returned to their respective ves-els, but the captains' visit on board the Frenchman lasted till after midnight, when our captain returned in a high state of intoxication, so much so that he could barely ascend the side. work being done after the mates left our ship, I had gone to my bunk in the steerage and was taking my rest, from which I was awakened by my name being loudly called down the hatchway, in a voice I could not ognize. I jumped and started for deck, and before I was well out of the hatchway, I was greeted with a blow between the eyes and the words, "You of a , why ain't you on deck when I come on board?"

The blow staggered me a little, but recovering in a second, I grabbed him by the throat and at it we went. by the throat and at it we went. I was young and gritty in those days, and the blow and epithet put my English blood on fire. I was at any time his match physicall, and now when he was more than half seas over it was no took for me to throatle him. it was no task for me to throttle him and give him a good shaking. His yells and the confusion soon brought the mates and boatsteerers to his aid who, before I hardly knew it, lashed me to the bulwark, and the drunken tyrant was lathering me with t manutop sail halyards. Being drunk his blows did not amount drunk his much. He then ordered me to the forecastle, and threatened me with a second edition next day. In the morning, the mate came down and inthe formed me that the captain felt pretty sore over the scrape and was going to put me on shore at Woodle's Island, which was then in sight, and advised ne to acquiesce, as himself and second mate had had quite a time in quieting him, for he had hardly got over the effects of the Frenchman's champagne, and if I did not irritate him I would get my pay and discharge. I replied, that he could do as he pleased; he was master, and, of course, it was no use resisting single-handed any deter-mination. mination he might come to with the whole after-guard of three officers and five boat-steerers to back him. While five boat-steerers to back him. While we were talking, the cabin boy called doun the hatchway saying the captain wanted me in the cabin. I accordingly went, followed by the mate and second mate. I found his majesty seated at the table with writing materials and cash box before him. He never looked at me as I came in. He never looked at me as bcame in, but saluted me with "I'm going to put you ashore, — you, and you may return thanks to Mr. Gardner (the 1st mate) I let you off that easy; sign that receipt for your share and incre's some slops (ready-made shirts and pants, 2 each) and tobacco for you."

Temperance Topics.

Condensed beer is now being manufactured, and it is the fond hope of the drinkers that even should the fanatics succeed in bandaling the wet article, the solidified ever will always he with an article the solidified ever will always.

be with us. Petitions bearing the signatures of over 125,000 men and women were presented to the Pennsylvania Legispresented to the Pennsylvania Legislature on one day last week, asking for the passage of the bill requiring scientific temperance instruction in the public school.

The Kansas Legislature at its recent session passed what is described as an iron-clad, copper-plated, double-ribbed prohibition law, which is ex-pected to close all the loop-holes of the pected to close all the loop-holes of the previous law and hive the liquor men so effectually that they must either get out of the business, get out of the state, or starve. They are preparing to confess that prohibition does prohibit.

"Treating" is purely an American practice, and its object is to show the boys that there is nothing mean about you. Its evils are far-reaching in their effects. A close examination will reveal the fact that a large proportion of the confirmed drunkards owe their over-indulgence to the practice of treating. Anti-treating societies have been formed by moderate drinking Englishmen, but though they were a law unto themselves, their example has had little or no effect on others. It is a silly practice and should be discouraged in every way.

No sooner does the excitement regarding the visit of the Licensed Victuallers to Ottawa die away, and the failure of the same become thoroughly apparent, than our opponents set themselves to work to form some other method of attack whereby they can overthrow or thwart the efforts of the temperance community of the country by destroying the effects of the Scott Act. A few days since, a number of persons in Toronto—headed by Goldwin Smith-met and organized a new temperance party, and have issued a petition to the effect that light wines, ale and beer shall be permitted to be sold in countries where the Scott Act shall come in force. Any one with half a grain of common sense will see that this is a move against will see that this is a move against prohibition, and no true temperance man will sign it. If the sale of light wines, ale and beer will hasten prohibition let us have it by all means, but we are of a different way of thinking, and so are our anti friends. One yery discreditable procedure in connection with the canvass for signatures to this petition is, that all those who refuse to sign the petition are to who refuse to sign the petition are to be noted and (in the words of a promment liquor advocate) they may as well plough up their hop grounds. This is the principle they are proceeding on. Whether there is any honesty in this course we leave to others to decide.

NEWS OF THE WORLD.

At the Ottawa police court on Wednesday morning saloon-keeper holding a Dominion license was fined $20 and costs for selling without a license.

A little orphan girl named Sarah Newell, adopted out of the orphan's home at Toronto by Miss McKinlay, of Sırnia, has fallen heir to $75,000 left her by an uncle in Ireland. Private detectives in Toronto searched her out.

The longest bridge in the world crosses Lake Ponchartran at New Orleans, and is twenty-two miles in length. It is trestlework on piles, and made of cyprus wood which was first saturated with creosote oil which renders it impervious to moisture and proof against the attack of barnacles.

A hotel is to be built in Pittsburg seven stories high, with the kitchen on the top floor, and an electric free escape in each room. The escape is to be operated from the office. By touching a button there the guests are simultaneously aroused, every window thrown open, and a flexible ladder loosened that reaches to the ground.

A Wonderful Clock.

Probably the most wonderful piece of mechanism ever heard of is a clock described by a rajah belonging to a princess in Upper India. In front of the clock's disk was a gong, swung upon poles, and near it was a pile of artificial limbs. The pile was made up of the full number of parts for twelve perfect bodies, but all lay beauty together in scaming confusion. eaned together in seeming confusion. Whenever the hands of the clock indicate the hour of one, out from the pile of limbs crawled just the number of parts to form the frame of one man, part joining itself to part with quick, metalic click; and when completed the figure sprang up, seized a small mallet, and walking up to the gong struck one, the first hour. When two o'clock came, two men arose and did I kewise, and so through all the hours of the day, till at noon and mid-night, the entire heap sprang up and marching to the gong struck one after anotheach his blow, making twelve in all and then fell to pieces again.

The Sailor's Bride.

My wife is just as handsome a craft as ever left a milliner's dry dock; is clipper built, and with a figure-head not often seen on a small craft. Her length of keel is five feet six inches, displacement twenty-seven cubic feet; of light draught, which adds to her speed in the ball room; full in waist, spare, trim.

speed in the ball room; full in waist, spare, trim.

At the time we spliced she was newly rigged, fore and aft, with standing rigging of lace and flowers, in insail part silk, fore-stay sail of Valenciennes, and stu'n sails trimmed with crange blossoms.

Her frame was of the best steel, covered with silk, with whalebone stanchions. The rigging is for fair weather cruising. She has a set of storm sails for rough weather. I have been told that in running down street before the wind, she answers the helm beautifully, and can turn round in her own length if a handsome craft passes.

" NO!"

"No" is the title of a temperance song, respectfully dedicated to the Women's Christian Temperance Union. The words are by John Ormis ton, Gonshoque, and the music by J. Roberts, F. C. O., of London, Eng. Several vocalists who have tried the song, pronounce the melody good, with some very pretty strains. The musical composer seems to have caught the temperance sentiment of caught the temperance sentiment of the word, and interpreted them fully in the melody. The song will no doubt have a large sale, not only in this county, where the author is so well and favorably known, but in all parts of Canada where there are tem-perance workers. We understand that Mr. Ormeton has no negative. perance workers. We understand that Mr. Ormiston has no pecuniary in the publication of this music. It was offered to the piece of music. It was offered to the publishers (Strang. & Co., Toronto) and accepted by them as a work of merit. The following are the words:

You ask me for my heart and hand,
That I your bride should be,
That I should at the altar stand,
And give myself to thee.
Could you but read my inmost heart
And all my feelings know,
We would not now in anger part,
Although I've answered No!

Long years ago I made a vow, (Nay, do not chide again,
Nor let dark anger cloud thy brow),
Your pleadings are in vain.
My fate with thine I ne er can link,
Would you the reason know?
The man I wed must never drink,
And so I answer No!

Through drink my father passed away,
When I was but a child,
Can I forget that gloomy day,
Or yet his anguish wild?
Once more by that bedside I stand,
With all its bitter woe,
You drink and yet you ask my hand,
And I must answer No!

But take the pledge and with God's aid Resolve to be a man; Be faitful to a pledge you've made, And do what good you can. You then may other to me sigain, And from my side ne'er go; You then may plead and not in vain, For I'll not answer No!

Our Industries.

In pursuance of our promise made a short time ago, that we would visit our principal business places and report on the state of trade in and around this town, we sallied out on Tuesday afternoon on a tour of inspection. Our first visit was to the Tuesday afternoon on a tour of inspection. Our first visit was to the cabinet shop of Stevens Bros, where we found the proprietors and five men busily engaged in their vocation. The important business he has established in our town. The appearance which Mr. Vanarnum's store presented at the time of our visit was a flat contraditction to the "hard times" cry. Conspicuous among his

They also deal extensively in coffins, and having one of the best hearses in the county, they are prepared to make a very creditare prepared to make a very creditable turn out for all requiring their services. We next dropped into the old reliable harness shop, kept by Samuel Boddy. We found the neat little shop full to overflowing with a complete stock of all kinds of Harness, whips, &c. A specialty lately put in is a full assortment of Trunks, Valises, etc. Next in order came the "palace" store of J. & P. Wiltse, Here we found everything moving along smoothly and quietly. Several improvements have been made in the along smoothly and quietly. Several improvements have been made in the interior arrangement of the store, especially in the millinery department, during the winter. In this dep't, the floor has been lowered and the interior arranged to meet the requirements of the largely increased business. They intend having a grand opening in a few days, notice of which will be given in the REPORTER. We learned that the manager of this department, Miss Lou Stevens, is at present in Ogdensburg, getting a thorough insight into the latest American styles and patterns. Stepping across the street to the store of A. Parish & Son, the oldest establishment of the kind in town, we learned that the junior partner had just returned from his annual spring visit to the wholesale houses of Montreal. He informed us that he had purchased a full line of spring and sumchased a full line of spring and sumthe interior arranged to meet the rechased a full line of spring and sum-mer goods, which would be displayed as the season progressed. To the attractive stock of fancy goods and novelties carried by the former proprietor, (Mr. Ross), he has added groceries, tinware, wooden ware, crockery and tinware, wooden-ware, crockery and glassware, and attending to the wants of his several customers in all these lines occupies his time fully. madical dispensary of J. P. Lamb. His store is a model of order and cleanliness. Brief as was our visit, we were enabled to form some idea of the magnitude of hydrogeneous corrieds. the magnitude of business carried on. In the store-room were piled dozens of bottles of his proprietory medicines, prepared on the premises, and in his laboratory prescriptions were being filled and receipts compounded carefully and rapidly, while a brisk trade in toilet articles, perfumery, jetc., was being carried on over the counter.

Mr. Vanarnum is receiving a fair share of the public patronage. Alf. C. The result may be seen by visiting his store. We next called at the well-known grocery and millinery shop of J. Thompson. Of course, Mr. T. was able to report the grocery dep't as being in a flourishing condition, his sales shewing a gratifying increase on previous seasons. The millinery dep't had not yet put on its spring glory, but we were informed that Mrs. Thomson had just returned from a visit to Ogdensburg, where she had puchased a stock of the latest, most fashionable, and best millinery to be found in the wholesale show rooms. We crossed over to the harness shop of A. E. Wiltse & Co., where we found the proprietors with three hands up to their eyes in business. We learned that orders were coming in faster than they could be filled, and that there was every pros-pect of a continuance of the trade, as pect of a continuance of the trade, as the work they were turning out was giving good satisfaction. At 'the grocery store of R. D. Judson we were informed a steady, satisfactory trade was being carried on. In Mr. Judson's cabinet shop, three hands were engaged. The stock of furniture on hand is leave and wall assortions.

ed. He makes a specialty of picture framing, and judging from the number of pictures which adorn his window, he is kept busy. His excellent hearse has frequent calls, and his burial caskets are models of fine workmanship. And now, in closing, we have only a few words to say regarding ourselves. One short year ago we ourselves. One short year ago we commenced business in this town, and our success has been all that we could desire. We are now a month behind desire on some of our orders, and we expect as soon as our new office is completed (which will be in about ten days) to job type, which will give us as good a job printing office as is to be found in any inland town in Rastern Ontario.

So to the mast-head I went for a couple of hours till the cances had closed with the ship, when I was called on deek the ship, when I was called on deck and with my chest, a bundle of new clothing, and ten silver dollars (to which Mr. Gardner, the 2nd mate, added five more), I was bundled into a canoe and went ashore amongst a lot of savages whose language I was unacquainted with and who were in the same dilemma regarding me. True, I was not the first white man who had lived there, and there were two living on Henderson's Island and one on Simpson's Island, distant respectively about twenty and thirty miles. So I made the best of it and went ashore. A number of natives awaited our arrival at the beach, the fact of a te matung, or white man, coming ashore causing quite a crowd to gather, and I must say I did not feel quite as much at home and quite as much at home as I would have done at a landing on some wharf in a civilized country. Several prominent Mormons have been arrested in Utah for violating the ani-polygamy law, and many church leaders have been frightened out of the country.

Mrs. Garfield, writing to a friend and speeaking of the report of her intention to marry, says:—"This cruel rumor did not reach me till three days ago. Nothing that has ever been said about me has so hurt and offended me as this, and it is humiliating to know that many believe it.

Mrs. Tom Thumb and Count Primo Magri were married on Monday afternoon at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Madison Avenue, New York. The church was crowded. Many old New Yorkers, who were present at Mrs. Stratton's first wedding, and some of the best known society people, were present. Miss Lucy Adams was bridesmaid and Major Newel, who married Minnie Warren, was best man.

The revised edition of the Old Testament will be issued to the public on the first day of may next. Several American publishers have made efforts to forestall the issue in England by attempting to secure advance proofs. American book publishers have offered as high as $5,000 for single advance prints. Investigation shows that recent reports to the effect that the Committee of Revisers have found reason to believe their work will prove a popular failure, have been without foundation. The orders for the revised Old Testament already exceed those secured before publication for the revised edition of the New Testament.

McLughlin, who re-opened the manufacturing branch of his shoe business a short time ago, has sold out the same to J. W. Batstone, who has acted as foreman for him since his re-opening. Mr. McLaughlin has been offered a situation with a Montreal firm and intends shortly leaving here to fulfill the duties of the position. He requests us to state that all accounts due him must be paid at once, or they will be placed in other hands.

Safe at Last.

There are some people in the world who imagine that Farmersville isn't much of a place anyway; but we know one drummer who thinks it's considerable large. It seems our friend had gone out for an evening's chat with an old friend, and on starting chat with an old friend, and on starting chat with an old friend, and on starting for the Armstrong House he lost his way and wandered around the village for some time trying to find his way to his hotel. After sundry plunges in the snow up on Church Street, he finally concluded that he was at the wrong end of the town, and passing down one of the side streets he was soon within the precincts of the Wellington Street Methodist Church. After gazing awhile at cincts of the Wellington Street Methodist Church. After gazing awhile at the tall and symetrical spire, and famenting the many opportunities he had neglected of listening to the Truth within that and other sacred edifices he again sought his hostelying Truth within that and other sacred edifices, he again sought his hostelrie again to be disappointed in finding it. After another hour spent in the vain attempt to reach his destination, he found himself again on Church St., near the east end bee house factory. Here he hailed a small boy and enquired, "What kind of a durned town is this anyway? Here I've quired, "What kind of a durned town is this anyway? Here I've spent four mortal hours trying to reach my hotel, and I've come to the conclusion that this is a town of churches, for I've seen no less than half a dozen to night." Our youthful friend quickly point d out the way to Main St., and now our drummer says that he will not venture out again after night-fall without a compass or a guide. Weary and footsore he retired to his couch—but not to sleep. A burning one he retired to his couch—but not to sleep. A burning and stinging sensation in the region of his ears kept him from enjoying that calm and balmy repose that his tired and exhausted frame required. Travellers who have visited the Pacific Ocean say that at certain seasons of the year. who have visited the Pacific Ocean say that at certain seasons of the year, the action of the moon's rays on any exposed portion of the human frame will turn it to a greenish hue, and from the appearance of our friend's ears, on arising the next morning, people would be lead to believe that his travels on that eventful night must have extended to the Pacific Slope. Slope.

Rebellion.

Since our last issue, no conflict has taken place between the Canadian troops and the rebels. Riel is stored troops and the rebels. Riel is stationed at Batoche's crossing on the Saskatchewan, with about 800 men including Indians. Other Indians are joining him every day. Gen'l Middleton, in command of the volunteers, will concentrate his forces at Humboldt, and at once march upon the rebel position. His force will likely come in contact with the main body of the rebels on Thursday, when a decisive battle will be fought. Latest cisive battle will be fought. * Fire Protection.

As we anticipated, the good sense of our citizens fully endorsed the views which we expressed relative to the above question. The wisdom of having the matter settled at an early date is generally recognized, and we have been requested by several leading citizens to announce that a meeting of those interested will be held in the Town Hall at 8.00 on Monday even-ing next. We hope that every man having a dollar invested in the village will be present. All are interrested, and all should be present. The mater will be fully discussed, and an approximate estimate of the of the probable cost of efficient fire extinguishing appliances will be laid before the meeting. It is desirable that whatever movement is made should be backed by, as near as possible, the unanimous assent of all should be backed by, as near as possible, the unanimous assent of all property owners. Therefore, we hope that citizens will consider the matter carefully, and go to the meeting on Monday evening prepared to listen attentively and to vote and speak intelligently. This is no trifling matter. The sad experience of the village of Midland and the town of Port Perry last summer, should teach our Perry last summer, should teach our citizens the folly of waiting until the steed is stolen before locking the stable door. Prompt action in some direction is desirable, and we trust that no time will be lost.

Private Bank,

Since our announcement that one of our citizens contemplated conducting a private banking business, the matter has taken more definite shape, and the whole subject will be brought up and discussed at the same meeting as the question of fire protection. far as we can learn, a private bank in Farmersville would receive every support and encouragement. Leadbusiness men state that they have felt the need of such a convenience very much, and that a bank here would save them much trouble and many vexatious delays. If only in the way of expediting the cashing of cheques and issuing of draughts, and in carrying current accounts and recciving deposits, a bank here would be an invaluable acquisition to the village. Satisfactory personal security could, we are sure, be given by the proprietor, and as this is the best kind of security, those doing business with the bank would feel perfectly

The Railway.

Voting on the By-law granting $11,000 to the above railway will take place in the Municipality of Elizabethtown on Tuesday, May 5th. We hope all friends of the road will do all they can to come the Ruley in the they can to carry the By-law in that township. We notice by the terms of the By-law that the company must establish and maintain two stations within the municipality, one within a half mile of the village of Lyn, and the other within the same distance of Unionville. The prospects of war in Unionville. The prospects of war in Europe and our own troubles in the North-West will no doubt detract somewhat from the interest in local affairs, but the friends of the road must be up and doing in order to have the By-law carried. Over-confidence was the cause of the defeat of the By-law in South Crosby and Leeds and Lansdowne rear. While the number of votes polled showed a large majority in favor of the bonus, the twojority in favor of the bonus, the two-fifths of the electors not voting caused its defeat. Elizabethtown is a large township and it will require a large number of voters to record their votes in order to have the required number, The following letter explains the position of the Company in regard to the early commencement of the road:

New York, April 15, 1885. G. T. Fulford, Esq., Sec'y B. W. & S. S. M. Ry.

Dear Sir,— The construction company wish to know how soon the railway company will be ready to have k commence under the con-Will you be kind enough to the work tract. Will you be kind enough to write to the president and to the municipal councils who have not as yet passed their by-laws, viz.: North and South Crosby? I notice from the newspapers that Elizabethtown have advertised their by-law. If the municipalities act promptly no delays will arise, but if they keep waiting and lose valuable time, the construction company will put all their energies in their western contracts, and if any delays occur it will be the fault of the municipalities, for we have been and municipalities, for we have been and are now ready but cannot keep capital idle for any great length of time.

Please make the enqury and let me know the result, so I can inform the construction company.

Eugene M. Cole.

From the above letter it will be een that the immediate construction pality, is prepared to vote on the question as soon as satisfactory as-surance is given that the railway company mean business. From this it will be seen that our railway prospects are by no means bad, and that we may rely on the construction being commenced next summer, should these municipalities grant their bonuses.

The Rebellion.

Affairs in the North-West are approaching a crisis. The soldiers are well advanced toward the rebel basis of operations, and news of an important battle between Gen. Middleton's force and those under Riel's personal command, in the neighborhood of Batoche, may be expected before Saturday. Gen. Middleton is sending his forces down both sides of the Sastarday. his forces down both sides of the Sas-katchewan simultaneously, thereby making sure that no way shall be left open for the escape of any of the rebels, as he is evidently of opinion that they would sooner run than fight. He has divided his force about evenly and apparently thinks that either division would be able to overthem. In the event of Riel's advanprobable that he would be able to engage whichever wing of Middleton's force he happened to meet, singly, as the presence of timber along the banks would prevent anything like banks would prevent anything like effective co-operation on the part of the disengaged division on the opposite side of the river. On Tuesday, the apalling news was received that Fort Pitt had fallen, and that two more victims (Mounted Policemen) have been added to the already large list of killed during the present delist of killed during the present de-plorable outbreak. It is to be hoped that this despatch tells the worst, but there are unhappily grave reasons for supposing that the whole party at Fort Pitt, consisting of Inspector Dickens, twenty-five Mounted Police, and a few families of settlers have also been massacred. The messengers who becomes the possible to the second of the second who brought the news to Battleford are doubtless those who were sent out from there some time ago to ascertain the fate of Fort Pitt, and there unfortunately little room to doubt the correctness of their mournful story. No information seems to have been obtained concerning the whereabouts of the survivors it indeed any escaped after the fall of the fort. Inspector Dickens, who commanded the force at Fort Pittt, is the youngest son of the famous novelist.

The Eastern War Cloud.

cabinet and St. Petersburg is still being kept up, but the explanations of the Russian attack and slaughter of the Afghans are anything but satisfactory. It is generally thought that Russia is prevaricating in order to gain time to concentrate all available troops on the Afghan frontier. In the meantime, England has not been idle, and throughout all her possessions liable to be affected by a war nons liable to be affected by a war with Russia, military activity has characterized the past month. Especially has this been the case in India, against which Russia's agressive movement is directed. The Indian army has been largely reinforced. dian army has been largely reinforced and put in a state of thorough efficienov.

SHELDON. Obituary.

One by one our old residents are passing away to that bourne from whence no traveller returns. This week we are called upon to chronicle the death of Stephen Sheldon, who died at his residence in this village, after a short illness, on Wednesday last, 15th inst., in the 77th year of his age. Mr. Sheldon was for many years a resident of Plum Hollow, years a resident of Plum Hollow, where he was known as an exemplary member of the Baptist denomination, and a leader in every good work. Having amassed a competency and wishing to be relieved of the cares and anxieties of a farmer's life, he removed to this village a few years ago, carrying with him the respect and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Sheldon was twice quaintances. Mr. Sheldon was two married, his second wife being the widow of the late Reuben Alguire. widow of the late Reuben Alguire. His wife survives him. The funeral services were conducted in the Medodist Church by Rev. Mr. Shermal assisted by Rev's Barnet and Blair. The remains were taken to the family busing ground at Plum Hollow for interment Lizabeth Nash (nee Carman), born in Matilda, August Srd, 1795, died in Elizabethtown March 17th, 1885, at Elizabethtown March 17th, 1885, at the advanced age of nearly 90 years. Her father, Jacob Carman, grandfather of our townsman, Geo. Nash, Esq., died at the age of 95, and on his ninetieth birthday was able to cut and split 100 fence rails in a day. He used to walk to church regularly a distance of three miles, rather than a distance of three miles, rather than be bothered hitching up a horse-an example for the young men of to-day, who, if they would possess the sturdy vigor and ripe age of their brave fathers must nourish themselves in their fathers, heroic faith. Starting with the subject of this work. with the subject of this memoir as the first generation: she had 10 children, seen that the immediate construction of the railway depends altogether upon the action of the municipalities. We understand that steps are being taken to have the By-law re-submitted in South Crosby and rear of Leeds and Lansdowne, when it will doubtless be carried by large majorities. North Crosby, the only remaining municipalities. We understand that steps are being taken to have the By-law re-submitted in South Crosby and rear of Leeds and Lansdowne, when it will doubtless be carried by large majorities. North Crosby, the only remaining municipalities between the English communication between the English on the banks of eternal deliverance.

Next morning I awoke refreshed and ready for the excitement consequent upon the novelty of my position. The upon the novelty of my position. bhief had already arisen and we n and was sit ting in the doorway taking a morning smoke. One of his wives was in atsmoke. One of his wives was in attendance with some of the sweet sap of the cocoanut ("tuba," as they call it) for our matutinal beverage, a shell full of which she handed me with a smile. This was followed by our morning meal consisting of broiled flying fish, baked tare root and bread fruit accompanied with young cocoa auts, the liquid of which we used in place of the Chinese leaf or Turkish beverage, I made a hearty meal and beverage, I made a hearty meal and then took a stroll around the village and down on the beach. The tide was at its full and the scene which was at its full and the scene which presented itself to my view was amusing in the bighest degree. Scores of the natives, all ages and sizes, were taking their morning bath, some swimming, some lying in the shoal water with just their heads visible; water with just their neads visible; youngsters skylarking and infants not able to walk swimming around their mothers, reminded me of the young mothers, reminded me seals in the Artic ocean. deed a lively scene. Being a good swimmer myself, I soon made one of It was in the number, and seeing some men swimming out to meet the rollers as they came in from the outside of the reef and returning on the crest of the reef and returning on the crest of the wave, I concluded to try the experiment myself, but not being well posted I took the middle instead of the third or heaviest roller (as I afterwards learned) which caught me foul and rolled me over until I was cousingerman to an indiarubber man, when the wave left me on its reflux. I did not try that native accomplishment again for a long time, I assure you. Later in the day, in company with the chief and some natives carrying " chest, we went about two miles to fint near a channel in the reef conent for exit or entrance at low ater (the tide rising and falling not fore than 5 or 6 feet at spring tides)
There was a very comfortable little house built different from the general un, having been, as I afterwards ound, constructed under the direction of a former white resident. It was in the form of a cross, about thirty feet each way, divided inside into five compartments 10x10, set on posts about two feet from the ground, which gave the air free circulation below, and made it way account on fortal the and made it very cool and comfortable. is fancy inclined him to visit me, and the remaining rooms were for my self. My retinue consisted of six natives, and the "homestead" set apart and tabu'd for my use consisted of the house I have spoken of, a native hut, canoe-shed, canoe, sails, etc., and about an acre of sandy territory on which grew nearly one hundred cocoa nut trees, three bread-fruit and a few pandanus trees. Underneath one of the rooms was a well, about six feedeep, which furnished a supply of water for culinary purposes / being a little brackish) at the flow of the tide twice in twenty four bours. twice in twenty-four hours. Our main dependence for drinkables being the tuba and the liquid furnished by the cocoa nut. This latter before the nuts get full grown and when the shells are soft, is a delicious drink, and I think from the way I fattened on it, must be very nourishing. These trees are the main dependence of the natives for food and almost everything else. It furnishes them houses to live in; ropes and sails for their cances and a main portion of the material for the cance itself; oil for light and to cook with; from the sap or tuba, besides the savory beverage already mentioned, it can be boiled down into exquisite molasses, or, being exposed to the air, it ferments and becomes a very palatable vinegar. The ripe nut when scraped fine and subjected to pressure furnishes a milky liquid which, in coffee or tea, can be hardly distinguished from the cow's milk. In fact, the tree is the main-stay even for clothing. The young leaves smoked and split fine and knotted on twine made from the husk of the nut, forms a petticoat for the island belles, or made into a mat about four feet square, is the rustic stit worn by their beaux.

The Country Paper.

The county newspaper is the most useful and least compensated of all the agencies which stamp the impress of progress upon villages and inland cities. Without the aid of local newspapers of progress upon cities. Without the aid of local newspapers local towns are, as a rule, thriftless and dead. It is common for small great men to speak with contempt of the local newspapers, but the village newspaper makes more great men out of less material—more bricks without straw—than any other facto in politics, and it is the one ladder of which men climb to local distinction as the beginning of wider fame. which men climb to local distinction as the beginning of wider fame. That advent of the local newspaper has always dated the increased thrift of the community. Millinery Opening.

Just before going to press, we paid a brief visit to the grand Millinery Opening at J. E. Wiltse's Palace Store. The window to the right on entering, though so tastefully adorned as to at once attract attention, but faintly indicated the rich and gorgous appearance which the milliery show room presented. The show-room was literally crowded with ladies, and Miss Lou Stevens, the lady in charge of this department, and Miss Sadie Soper were busily engaged in attending to the wants of their fair customers. "Oh! how beautiful!" "Isn't it lovely? and similar exclamations were drawn from the laddes on inspecting the different styles of trimmed hats and bennets for spring adsummer wear which the ample hat stand contained. And certainly there was good reason for such tribute baing paid to the skill and decorative ability of Messrs, Wiltse's milliners. For a richer or more artistic grouping of colors and tints in flowers, ribbons, birdsplumes, etc., was surely never displayed here before. In short it is a display that must be been to be appreciated.

Death has claimed another victim from our midst in the person of Mrs. Armstrong, wife of Robert Armstrong, of Whitehurst, who died on Friday, 17th inst., of congestion of the lungs. Rev. Mr. Craig preached the funeral sermon at the house on Sabbath at two o'clock p. m., after which the re-mains were laid in the Hillcrest burying ground. She was universally loved and respected by all who knew her.

The following lines were written by Mary A. Munn, of Amadore Mich. in memory of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Arza Wiltse, and Mrs. Rogers, of this village,

In Memory of Asa and Solon

They have passed from our midst like som beautiful plant, Nipp'd by frost ere a blossom could bloom;
They have left the dear friends they so tender ly loved,
For the calm silent rest of the tomb.

Lonely and sad is the home they have left, And many a heart throbs with pain, Yet, Parents, remember, though you are bereft Your loss is their infinite gain.

Nor would they return to you now if they could, They have tasted the joys of the blest;
No more do they languish in sickness and pain,
Being now forever at rest.

And kind is the Father who watches o'er all, His love is unerring and true, And wise is the wisdom that never can err In hiding the future from view.

Oh! had we known as we held them that night Clasped close in a tender embrace. That never on earth would we list to their voice, Nor gaze on each dear boylsh face.

Methinks that our hearts would have s neath the load,
And our tongues been palsied with woe,
We'd have clung to them closer with pase ate grief.
Which human hearts never should know.

Yet, Sister, I think of the prayer of your boy. His future just swept like a cloud, As he hung on my neck and whispered through sobs. Dear Aunt, I am going to be good.

'I am going to ask the dear Savior above To cleanse me from all that is wrong. And fit me forever in Heaven to live Mid that boautiful, beautiful throng."

His prayer was soon answered and short was his stay,
Yet grand was the lesson he taught—
That we who profess the dear name of the Lord,
We none of us love as we ought.

For if we but honored the Lord as we should, How gladly we'd yield to His Son! And murmur, submission, though tear-drop, might fall, Dear Father, let Thy will be done.

cross,

And pray that His grace may be given,

To fit us for doing his will upon earth,

And meeting our loved ones in Heaven

Then let us who mourn them bow low

With this number we commence to issue the REPORTER as an 8 page sheet. We intend inside of the next sheet. We intend have stereotype two weeks to put in a new stereotype orderwise add to the typographical appearance of the paper, which will then be one of the neatest and best got up papers in the counties. We are also negotiating to obtain the latest telegraphic news up to the hour of going to press, which will make our latest news some four hours earlier than any other paper. We have also concluded to make a change in the date of issue, and will be reafter publish on Saturday morning in time for the noon mails. Owing to the large additional expense incurred, we find it necessary, in order to save ourselves from loss, to place the sub-scription price at $1 per annum. Subscribers who have paid for the paper in advance will receive the Re-PORTER the balance of their year at the old rates. Having now got into our new office, we hope to be able to issue ergularly and on time. Particular attention paid to job-work, and at reasonable rates.

BLOODY BATTLE

General Middleton Ends Three Days

(Special to the Reporter.)

Batoche was taken at 4 p. m. on Monday, after desperate fighting, many of our brave fellows biting the dust. The volunteers dashed on Batoche, capturing horses and freeing all the prisoners. Our loss is five killed and ten wounded. Among the killed is Lieut, Fitch, of the Grena diers, shot through the heart. During the engagement Riel sent a white flug and a note to Middleton, saying that if the soldiers did not at once cease tiring on houses he would kill all the prisonets. Before Riel had time to carry his murderous threats volunteers charged on the place and reflected its capture, releasing the prisoners. The rebels fled northward. The Str. Northcote is safe, arriving at Batoche shortly after the battle.

The lease of the grounds will be submitted for approval, and it is expected that all parties interested will be present.

Practice Makes Perfect.

Our village band failed to give us the usual open-air concert on Saturday evening. Report says that some of the leading musicians had other and more pressing engagements to attend to that rendered their presence at band practice impossible. We understand that one of the mem bers is practicing a la Weston, with the intention of competing for one of the walking-match prizes that are likely to be offered by some of our county fairs next fall. At least, we should judge that this must have been At least, we what impelled the bugler to make such rapid time around one of the squares that evening.

The Railway.

The By-law granting a bonus to the Brockville and Westport Railway was voted on in Edzabethtown on the 5th inst., and, we regret to say, was defeated. What effect this will have on the prospects of the road being built we are unable to say. One rumor that reaches us is to the effect that the construction company have decided, despite the adverse vote, to proceed with the construction of the road, and trust to the township again submitting the By-law. We hope stimiting the by-law. We nope this rumor may prove correct, for we can hardly give up the prospect of seeing the iron horse moving swiftly along through the country between Brockville and Sault Ste. Marie. If Brockville and Sault Ste. Marie. If we fail in getting the road now, we need not expect to again get a company to undertake to build the road, even if we should offer them a bonus

The flood in the vicinity of South Mountain surpasses anything before known. The bridge was swept away, and several bridges along the Nation received injury to a very considerable extent. They had to ferry the river with a small boat which was by no means safe, some of the boys being carried nearly over the dam, Peter especially having a close call.

A recent amendment to the Ontario liquor license Act reads: -Every person, not being the occupant or a member of his family or lodger in his house, who buys or obtains or attempts to buy or obtain intoxicating liquor during the time prohibited by this Act for the sale thereof, shall be liable to a fine of not. less than $2 or not more than $40 and costs.

The Iroquois Mail Carrier on his return trip from Mountain last Saturday week met with quite an adventure. While passing Mr. Montgomery's, where the water was about as high as the fence, his horse got on a cake of ice and jumping upset the buggy-and threw an old lady passenger and the driver into the water. The lady's clothing kept her up until she reached the fence, and Mr. Montgomery came to the rescue with a canoe, the lady was taken to his house, where she obtained dry clothing, then taken to the bridge in a canoe and proceeded on her way rejoicing.

Interesting Facts About Fish.

Interesting Facts About Fish.

Every species of fish has its regular nours for feeding, but bass and pickerel digest their food the soonest, and are, therefore, most always hungry. A pike or pickerel weighing ten pounds will pull a dead weight of twenty pounds off a level bank when hooked. These same fish have been known to jump at least four feet clear of the surface and to throw themselves from one pond into another. Fish can see at night just as well as a cat. Does a fish ever sleep? He does. If you will watch a gold fish for a day or two you will find him taking occasional naps. If man could invent some way to get up a race between fishes the result would astonish you. A pickerel is probably one of the swiftest of our fresh water fishs. He moves for a short distance so fast that you simply see a flash. Almost every species of fish can see on all sides and behind him as well as in front. Their gills are the most delicate filter in the world. Washington's l'ersonal Appearance.

Washington's l'ersonal Appearance.
Washington's boots were enormous. They were No. 13. His ordinary walking shoes were No. 11. His hands were large in proportion, and he could not buy a glove to fit him, and had to have his gloves made to order. His mouth was his strong feature, the lips heing always tightly compressed. That day they were compressed so tightly as to be painful to look at. At that time he weighed 200 pounds, and there was no surplus flesh about him. He was tremendously muscled, and the fame of his great strength was everywhere. His huge tent, when wrapped up with the poles, was so heavy that it required two men to place it in the camp waggon. Washington could lift it with one hand and throw it in the waggon as easily as and throw it in the waggon as easily as if it were a pair of saddle bags. He could hold a musket with one hand and and throw it in the waggon as easily as if it were a pair of saddle-bags. He could hold a musket with one hand and shoot with precision as easily as other men did with a horsz-pistol. His lungs were his weak point, and his voice was never strong. He was at that time in the prime of life. His hair was a chest-nut brown, his cheeks were prominent, and his head was not large in contrast to every other part of his body, which seemed large and bony at all points. His, finger joints and wrists were so large as to be genuine curiosities. As to his habits at that period I found out finish that might be interesting. He was an enormous eater, but was content with bread and meat, if he had plenty of it. But hunger seemed to put him in a rage. It was his custom to take a drink of run or whiskey on awaking in the morning.

Of course all this was charged when he grew old. I saw him at Alexandria a year before he died. His hair was very grey, and his form was slightly bent. His chest was very thin. He had false teeth, which did not fit, and pushed his under lip outward. I believe he drank much more in his old age. He had whiskey in the morning, and at dinner two bottles of Madeira wines. Ho was a great lover of fine wines and fine horses—Chicajo Tribune.

Thad. Slevens' Strong Individuality.

His whole life was shadowed by a deformity in the foot, which caused sight lameness and gave a morbid sensitiveness to his nature. While in York he desired to join the lodge of Free Masons, but this physical defect rendered him incligible. He was much chagrined and became a most violent and pronounced opponent of the order, never losing an opportunity to denounce it in unsparing terms. This hatred took a strong political bias, and from that time he was a most bitter and unrelenting anti-Mason. His strong individuality impressed every one who ever met him, and his sayings and doings are still remembered in many characteristic incidents. Judge Durkee, who, like Stevens, was a Vermonter and was an ardent and devoted admir of that gentleman, told me he was once engaged in trying a case with him and received a letter which was positively unreadable. He gave the letter to a friend promising a fiberal percentage of the prospective fee if she would translate it. She earned her rewird after some hours hard work on the epistle. His writing consisted of two or three letters in the beginning of a word, followed by an irregular scraw!

He was once asked to read a letter of advice which he had, written a client. His whole life was shadowed by a deformity in the foot, which caused

He was once asked to read a letter of advice which he had written a client. He glanced over it, found himself quite unable to read it and handed it back with "Himph, I don't write letters to read myself. I wrote it for you to read." A gentleman one wrote asking an opinion, but neglected to enclose the customary fee. With grim humor Stevens returned a blank sheet of paper by next post.—Philadelphia Times.

ENGLAND'S GREATEST BANK

"The Old Lady in Threadnesslie Street" and Her Method of Doing Business.

The Bank of England originated in the brain of William Paterson, a Scoteinman—better known, perhaps, as the organizer and leader of the ill-fated Darien expedition. It come enced business in 1694, its charter—which was in the first inbusiness in 1694, its charter—which was in the first instance grantel for eleven years only—Learing date of July 27 of that year. This charter has been from time to time renewed, the last renewal performed taking place in 1845. The original capital of the tank was but 1,200,000 pounds sterling, and it carried on its business in a single room in Aiercers hall, with a staff of fifty-four clerks. From so small a beginning has grown the present gigantic establishment, which covers nearly three a rest and employs in town and country nearly 900 o.c.clads.

All Bank of England notes, are printed in the bank itself. Six printing presses are in constant operation, the same machine printing first the particulars of value, signature, etc., and then the numbers of the notes in consecutive order. The printing presses are so constructed as to register each note printed, so that the machine itself indicates automatically how machine itself indicates presses are so constructed as to register each note printed, so that the machine itself indicates automatically how many notes have passed through it. The average production of notes is 50,000 a day, and about the same number are presented in the same time for payment. The duction of notes is 50,000 a day, and about the same number are presented in the same time for payment. The "library" of canceled notes—not to be confounded with the bank library proper—is situated in the bank vaults. The stock of paid notes for five years—the period during which, as before stated, the notes are pre-cryel for reference—is about 77,445,000 in number. They fill 13,400 boxes, about eighteen inches long, ten wide, an! nine deep. As each day adds about 50,000 notes to the number, it is necessary to find some means of destroying those which have passed their ailotted term of preservation.

This is done by fire, about 400,000 notes being burned at one time in a furnace specially constructe! for that purpose. Formerly, from some peculiarity in the ink with which the notes were printed, the cremate! notes burned into a solid blue clinker; but the composition of the ink has been altered, and the paper now burns into a fine gray ash. The fumes of the burning paper are extremely dense and purgent, and to prevent any nuisance arising from

ash. The fumes of the burning paper are extremely dense and pungent, and to prevent any nuisance arising from this cause the process of cremation is carried out at dead of night, when the city is comparatively deserted. Further, in order to mitigate the density of the fumes they are made to ascend through carried out at tack of city is comparatively deserted. Further, in order to mitigate the density of the fumes, they are made to ascend through a shower of falling water, the chimney shaft being fitted with a special shower bath arrangement for this purpose. The stock of gold in bullion vault varies from 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 pounds sterling. The bars are laid side by side on small flat trucks or barrows exprying 100 bars each. In a glass case in this vault is seen a portion of the war indemnity paid by King Coffee, of Ashmatee, consisting of gold ornaments, a little short of standard fineness.

The safeguards against robbery, by

The safeguards against robbery, by force or fraud are many and elaborate. At night the bank is guarded at all accessible points by an ample military force. In the event of attack from without, there are sliding galleries which can be thrust out from the roof, and whigh would 'enable. a body of share. would enable a body of sharp-shooters to rake the streets in all directions. Few people are aware that the Bank of England con-tains within the walls a graveyar, but such is nevertheless the fact. The bank was attacked, during Gordon riot of 1780, during which the bank was attacked by a mob, called at-tention to the necessity for strengthen-ing its defenses. Competent authorities ing its defenses.

advised that an ad olding church, rejoicing in the appropriate name of St. thristopher-le-Stocks, was, in a military sense, a source of danger, and accordingly an act of parliament was passed to enable the directors to purchase the church and its appurtenances. The old churchyard, tastefully laid out, now forms what is known as the bank "garden," the handsome "court-roon" or bank parlor abutting on one of its sides. There is a nagnificent line tree, one of the largest in London, in the center of the garden, and tradition states that under this tree a former clerk of the bank, eight feet high, lies buried.

The Marks on Gloves

"Why are gloves stamped with various alphaletical letters?" inquired a gentleman the other day as he was being fitted to a pair of gloves. "I observe," he continued, "that there appears to be no regular system in this lettering. Sometimes I notice one letter; sometimes two or three on the inside of gloves. It may be C, or A, or M, or all three, or some other letter. It may appear on the thumb, the back of the glove, on the wrist, or up in the fingers. What is the significance of giove, on the wrist, or up in the ers. What is the significance of the giove, on the wrist, or up in the fingers. What is the significance of those cabellistic signs?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the intelligent glove fitter.

"Those letters," sail a young lady, one of the few persons in America, outside of the agents, who understands the glove business, when the question was asked her, "are either the manufacturer's private mark, which is put on all his skins as soon as brought into the factory, or one of the marks which he uses in his establishment to show the grade of the different qualities of skin. Soon etimes the buyer for some one manufacturer secures an over-supply of skins. When they are delivered at his factory they are all) randed with his private mark. But, as he cannot use private mark. But, as he cannot use skins. When they are delivered at his factory they are all randed with his private mark. But, as he cannot use all, part are disposed of to other makers, who, in turn, put on their marks as well as those grading the skin. Consequently a pair of gloves frequently have two or three letters on.

Reminiscences of Life on the Pacific.

(Continued from last week.) Life on board a whaleship 40 years ago was a mixture of easy times and hard work. Sometimes we would go for weeks with only ordinary routine of working ship, mending and making sails, tarring rigging &c. The mastand from of working ship, mending and making sails, tarring rigging &c. The mastheads were constantly manned from daylight till sunset, being relieved every two hours. The crews varied in number. A five-boat ship required thirty hands to man the boats, besides ship beapers, consisting of the thirty hands to man the boats, besides ship-keepers, consisting of the cooper, carpetter, steward, cook, and four or five other hands. The boats' crews consisted of the captain and mates as headsmen with the respective boatsteerers and four men to each boat, the boat steerer pulling the boat till the whale was harpooned, which was done by the boatsteerer at which was done by the boatsteerer at the command of the officer. They then changed places, and the officer lanced and killed the whale, the boat-steerer steering the boat. The killsteerer steering the boat. The kill-ing of the whale was sometimes a lengthy job, especially with Sperm whales, which could stay under water whales, which could stay under water nearly an hour. The right, or trainoil, whale could stay down only twenty minutes without breathing. Each boat carried about 3,000 feet of whale-line, about 3 inch in thickness, but very strong, soft and flexible, coiled with great care in two tubs, passed round a logger-head in the steru, then along the centre of the boat between the oarsmen through a boat between the oarsmen through a leaded notch in the bow and fastened leaded notch in the bow and fastened to the harpoon which rested in a receptacle fitted for it. When the officer judged the boat near enough, he gave the signal to the boatsteerer to ""stand up," who, first peaking his oar, would grasp the harpoon and neave it into the monster's side. "Stern all!" shouts the officer, and quick as thought the motion of the boat is reversed and the whale starts off away from his enemies, though off away from his enemies, though sometimes he seems searcely to notice the attack and lies like a log, or, perhaps, just settles himself in the water; other times the whale will start of a other times the whale will start of at an almost incredible speed, so rapid, indeed, that they have been known to run out the whole line before a drag could be attached or an extra turn taken round the logger-head. I remember once in the N. Pacific attacking one of those lazy ones and getting a ducking. The captain had getting a ducking. The captain had changed places with his boatsteerer and was getting out his lance to kill the monster when he very quickly rose right under the boat, lifting it entirely out of the water and tipping us all over. It was done in a second before any one could imagine what before any one could imagine what was up, and there we were the whale and his enemies, beat and contents, all of a jumble. Luckily his lordship lay perfectly still. As I broke water, I found myself in close preximity to the whale, so clove, in fact, that as I struck out I kicked against him, at the same time I heard our midship. the same time I heard our midship oarsman, a huge Cape Verde Negro, yelling "Oh! golly, oh! golly," and looking over my shoulder I saw the old fellow in the act of jumping off the negrotar's back. Strong as it may seem, it is nevertheless true, that within two hours the old fellow's wool was changed to a snowy hue with the fright, and so remained as long as I knew him. One of the boats picked us up and carried us on board. The other gave chase to the board. The other gave chase to the whale and succeded in killing him without further trouble. He was a fine fat fellow and made nearly 200 bbls. of oil. "Cutting-in" the whale as it is called, is a big, dirty job ohard work. When brought alongside as it is called, is a big, dirty job of hard work. When brought alongside it is secured by the flukes (or, as a landsman would call it, the tail) with a heavy chain passed through a hawse hole in the bow to the windlass. Heavy tackle secured to the main lower mast-head are then lowered over the side and a boat-steered attaches a strap round one of the fins.

The head is the first part attended to; if a sperm whale, this is a peculiar operation. Fancy a skull the shape of a duck's head, 6, 8, or 10 feet long, 4 or 6 feet wide at the junction with the spine, then imagine a huge mass of blubber or fat from four to six feet in diameter on top of that, and then you will have some idea of it. Right in the centre is found a quantity of pure spermacetti in a semi-liquid state, so much so, that it is often pailed out. After the "head-matter" is taken After the "head-matter" is taken care of, the capstan is set to work heaving away and the blubber is peeled off the carcass in "blanket pieces," about two or three feet wide and ten feet long, in thickness varying from 8 to 20 inches. When hoisted high enough a hole is cut through at the lower end and another strap and tackle attached below the first cut off, and so one blanket piece after another is hoisted in till the engages is stripped to the flukes, when it cass is stripped to the flukes, when it is cut loose and the "trying-out" commences. This is done as follows mences. This is done as follows The blanket pieces are lowered down the main hatchway to the blubber room, cut up in "horse-pieces," about 6 inches wide and 20 to 24 inches From the blubber room they long. From the blubber room the are taken to the mincing tubs who they are sliced up about an inch thick and thence to the boilers—two hu kettles holding three or four bleeach. When sufficiently rendered from thence into casks. It doesn't take long after once started to render out the oil, and the scraps or refuse serves as fuel for the furnaces. This diagram will give our readers some idea of the form of a sperm whale, and serve to explain the above of the form of a sperm

Telegraphing With Teeth and Eyelids.

J. T. Norris, of Springfield, Ohio, the detective, does a trick that probably no other man in the country can imitate. He takes a silver coin, usually a dollar, and places it on his tongue between his teeth. With his tongue he strikes it against the teeth with the sound of a telegraphing instrument, the opening and closing of the circuit being exactly imitated. Norris used to be an operator, and by means of the coin can teletor, and by means of the coin can tor, and by means of the coin can telegraph words so distinctly that any telegrapher can easily read the message. In this manner he telegraphed fifty words a minute. A Republican reporter wrote out a message on a Western Union blank and handed it to the detective. The two operators in charge at the Southern took down the words as fast as Norris produced them with the coin. The message was rapidly sounded and written down, and all three copies coincided exactly. Mr. Norris can stand up before a telephone, and in this novel manner telegraph a message which any ner telegraph a message which any telegrapher can read with great facility. But the most wonderful thing is to see him telegraphing with his eyelids. In this manner he can converse with an expert without uttering a sound.—St. Louis Republican.

Durable Timber.
The durability of the framed timber The durability of the framed timber of buildings is very considerable. The trusses of the old part of the roof of the busilic of a St. Paul, at Rome, were framed in 816, and were sound and good in 1816, a space of nearly a thousand years. These trusses are of fir. The timber work of the external domes of the Church of St. Mark, at Venice, is more than 840 years old, and is still in a good state. Alberti observed the gates of cypress to the church of St. Peter, at Rome, to be whole and sound after being up nearly 600 years. The inner roof of the chapel of St. Nicholas. King's Lynn, Norfolk, is of oak, and was constructed upwards of 500 years ago. Daviller states, as an instance of the durability of fir, that the large dormitory of the Jacobins' convent, at laris, was executed in fir and lasted 400 years. U years.

The Heads of Great Men.

The Heads of Great Men.

It is usually supposed that men of great intellectual powers have large, massive heads; but this theory is not borne out by facts. An examination of busts, pictures, medallions, intaglios, '&c., of the world's famous celebrities almost tends the other way. In the early paintings, it is true, men are distinguished by their large heads, but this is attributable to the painters, who agreed with the general opinion and wished to flatter their sitters. A receding forehead is mostly condemned. Nevertheless, this feature is found in Alexander the Great, and, to a lesser degree, in Julius Cæsar. The head of Frederick the Great, as will be seen from one of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding to the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the second of the portraits in Carlulo's work receding the second of the a lesser degree, in Julius Cæsar. The head of Frederick the Great, as will be seen from one of the portraits in Carlyle's work, receded greatly. Other great men have had positively small heads. Lord Byron's was "remarkably small," as were those of Lord Bacon and Cosmo di Medici. Men of great genius of ancient times have only what may be called an ordinary forchead; and Herodotus, Alcibiades, Plato, Aristotle, and Epicurus, among many others, are mentioned as instances. The average forchead of the Greek sculptures in the frieze from the Parthenon is "lower, if anything, than what is seen in modern forcheads." The gods themselves are represented with "ordinary if not low brows." Thus it appears that the popular notion on the matter is erroneous, and that there may be great men without big heads—in other words, a Geneva watch is capable of keeping as good time as an eight-day clock.

The Squirrel's Flea Exterminator.

The Squirrel's Fite Externilanter.

Marion Cobb, a responsible gentleman of the Lusby's Mill precinct, Ky., says he saw a squirrel acting in a very peculiar manner up in the top of a tree, and it caused him to stop and watch its actions. Pretty soon it came down the tree bearing a bunch of something in its mouth, and went directly to the creek. When it got to the edge of the water it turned round and backed into the creek until the water covered it entirely, except the tip of its nose, when it let go the bunch, which floated off down the creek. To gratify his curiosity, Marion creek. To gratify his curiosity, Marion went down and got the bunch, and found, he says, that it had a million fleas on it.

Eve's Side of the Apple Story.

To this day they are denouncing Eve in the Appel-late court with Adam. The tory as told by Adam's friends is believed; but just wait till Eve gives her evidence in the tase. The chances are that Adam got away with the best part of the fruit, and returned to Mrs. Adam a small piece of the core. If Adam possessed the same characteristics that most of the men of the present decade are the possessors of, the chances are seven to eight that he did. Eve was very fortunate in getting a nibble of the core, even if she never had an opportunity to give rebuttal testimony.—

A Queer Marauder in California.

The worthy citizens living in the su-burban districts of San Francisco and Butchertown are greatly excited at present, but their excitement amounts to nothing when compared with their indignation. The peace of their homes has been suddenly shattered by the advent of a crank, and all efforts have thus far been unsuccessful in ferreting him out.

Shortly after midnight a few weeks ago a gentleman long with his family near the slaughter house, was awakened from his sleep by the piercing shrieks of his daughter, a young miss of sixteen summers. He grabbed his revolver and hurriedly ran to her room, in the expectation of meeting a burglar. The girl was almost dead from fright, and in broken accents she narrated to her father the cause of the outery. She had been rudely awakened by a tickling sensation in the soles of her feet. When she opened her eyes she saw by the aid of the pale moonlight, which was struggling through the bedroom window, a masked man standing at the foot of her bed. She shricked, and the intruder sprang through the window out into the yard, and made his escape. Scarcely a night passes now but that some female is awakened by the fiend tickling her feet. There are lots of one-wheeled men in this world. They can sell goods, make boots, run an engine or keep a butcher shop, but outside of that they are all at sea. It is the handy man who is helping this world along—the man who is tull of wheels and springs. Don't be afraid because you have planned to study law to read up on philosophy and science, and to learn how to handle tools, to analyze steam, to post yourself on whatever is worth to post yourself on whatever is worth knowing. Mexican Ind an Servants.

Like the Chinese, the Mexican Indian servants learn by imitation, and seldom need more than one lesson, doing the same thing over and in the same way until they are commanded sto stop. When taught a new method they learn it at once and discard the old way as completely as if they had forgotten it forever.

"No, sir."
"Ah! excu "Ah! excuse me. I was told that it was for sale, although I could not understand why you should want to part with such fine property. This is one of the prettiest streets in Detroit."

"Oh my, no! my husband values the place at about $9,000."

"Ohly $0,000! Beg pardon, but I hope he won't be foolish enough to think of selling at that figure. He might just as well get $10,000. I see that your neighbors try to imitate your curtains. AFGHANISTAN!!!

St. Petersburg, April 30.-Eleven vessels of the Cronstadt fleet have gone to the Baltic. Gen. Komaroff and Major Alikhanoff arrived at Sarakhs on the 20th. It is thought the first conflict between Russia and England will occur in the Pacific.

VARNIA, April 30.—A British ironelad is steaming to and fro through the Straits of the Dardanelles to prevent the Turkish authorities sinking torpedoes. England's vigorous preparations for a naval war cause much anxiety in the Black Sea ports, most of which are poorly fortified.

The News says the idea of localizing the war is chimerical. The Baltic powers have no more right to close the Baltic than England and France have to close the English Channel. Turkey is entitled to close the Dardanelles, but those who believe that Russia will be safe from attack in the Black Sea must be exceedingly credulous, and would be likely also to believe that the Sultan wants to see Russia at Constantinople.

PERMANENT GARRISON.

LONDON: May 1.-Rassia has established permanent garrisons at Erasnorodsk Askabad, and Chikishar.

AGREEMENT WITH TURKEY.

An agreement has been concluded between England and Turkey by which the latter will allow England vessels to pass through the Dardanelles in the event of war with Russig. In return for this favour Turkey is to be allowed to send an expedition to occupy the Soudan by way of Sunking, and England will restore Cypras to Turkey at the end of five years, and guarantees the integrity of the States of the Porte.

VARNA, May 4-The Porte hears that Russia is massing troops at Odessa and Sebastopol, and holding them ready to embark for a place near the Bosphorus; if England attempts to force the Dardannelles. The Porte has decided to fortify the defences of the Bosphorus and Dardannelles in all possible means without delay.

COPENHAGEN, May 04.-An English man-of-war has passed the Skaw for the Cattegat. Two ironelads, of unknown nationality, passed the Great Belt on Friday for the Baltic. Denmark and Sweden will maintain neutrality in the event of war.

SADDEST CHREMONY OF ALL.

Clarke's Crossing, N.W.T., April 27 .-Yesterday was a said experience for our troops, as the remains of several brave boys were borne to their last resting place near the scene of the battle at Fish Creek. That the clerk be authorized to make the necessary changes in the assessment roll in accordance with the above decisions.

The Court of Revision then adjourned, and the council took up township business. The following were granted relief, being in stitute circumstances:—D. Brown, $4; Jas. Livingston, $5.80; Peter Detor, $5.40; Mrs. Denney, $1.50; Sabrina Wiltse, $2.

A petition was presented from Amos Wiltse and 166 others, praying the council to refund the money paid by the Saved Army for rent and heatby the Saved Army for rent and heating town hall. A lengthy and spirited discussion took place, s veral motions and amendments being made. Finally, on motion of Mr. Wight, seconded by Mr. Halladay, it was resolved That this council accept from the Saved Army the sum of $27.00 for rent of town hall as payment in full to date, as that sum will nearly pay the expense of fuel, light, and services of ignitor. services of janitor.

On motion, the use of the town hall was granted free to all denominations until the 1st of September, provided they arrange with the janitor for lighting, taking care of and itor for lighting, taking care of and cleaning hall.

The following bills were ordered to be paid:—Clerk, registering R. R. bonus By-law, $2; Recorder Printing Co., printing By-law, etc., $35.24; Walter Darling, wood, $15; repairs to Baile's Mill Bridge, $73.91; A. W. Sallay, part salary, $25.

Kelley, part salary, $25. N. Dowsley, Geo. Nash, A. Kincaid, and Samuel Boddy were appointed road commissioners for the village.

A petition was presented from taxpayers and residents of Mill St., and, on motion, those living on the east side of said street were allowed to build side-walks in lieu of road-work.

On motion, Geo. Hall was allowed to perform his statute labor on town-line opposite his farm.

On motion, Wm. Parish was appointed poundkeeper in place of Riley Smith, who declined to act.

On motion, the auditors' report was received and adopted, and the sum of $3 each voted for their services.

On motion, Lewis King was appointed to collect road tax and over-see the building of sidewalk on Mill Street

On motion, the time for opening a esrtain road allowance between lots 24 and 25 in the 9th con. was extended until the 10th day of June, and the clerk was instructed to notify all interested parties of the same.

On motion, the reeve was granted $10 and Thos. Berney $2 for services as commissioners on the Baile's Mill Bridge, and the reeve was further structed to examine a bridge on the creek between Kincaid's Corner and the school house, in the 7th con., and to order it repaired, provided such repairs will not cost more than $20.

The council then adjourned to meet on the 2nd day of Sept., unless sooner called by the reeve.

The Rebellion.

General Middleton says the war is about over. Riel has been safely lodged in jail, and is very reticent. He says the Half-breeds despaired of getting justice from the Dominion Government, and consequently re-belled. He says all he wants is a fair trial; that he cannot be tried for treason, as he is an American citizen. On the 26th, Poundmaker and his braves surrendered unconditionally to General Middleton. The General deprived them of their arms, and sent all back to their reserves, excepting Poundmaker and the confessed mur-derers of Payne and Tremont. All prisoners taken by Poundmaker had been well treated. The amorous Big Bear with his band is reported to be only thirty miles from Middleton's c imp, and anxious to surrender. General will offer him no terms, but attack him at once. He will probattack him at once. He will probably follow Poundmaker's example. Riel talks much of a new religion he has got, and at his trial the insanity plea will probably be put in.

A Masher Mashed.

One evening, about a week ago, as the shades of night were deepening o'er the earth, a resident on the prin-cipal street of the village started out on mashing bent. His slightly curling hair was got up in Buckley's best style; his delicate moustache was waxed to the most dudish twist; his close-fitting coat was cut to Pye's latest pattern. In fact, the whole get-up was faultless; at least, so thought our youth of tender years, as he languidly sauntered up Main St., occasional puffs of ambrosial air floating gracefully from a choice 8c. cigar, which he had just purchased at Thomson's. Suddenly his gaze became centered on an object on the opposite side of the street. A hasty glance at his toilet, another twist to the ends at his tollet, another twist to the ends of his incipient moustache, and with hasty strides he was soon in the presence of a young lady, who to his enraptured gaze, was little less than the fabled Venus of ancient mythology. No Oscar Wilder could have removed that Haven from his limitation. that Havana from his lips with greater grace, allowing the smoke to ascend heavenwards. No Chesterfield could have removed his hat with greater politeness or bowed with more elegant grace than did our friend as he approached the spot where his fair goddess was apparently waiting for his approach. "Angelina Melinda, his approach, is a voice husky with eavenwards. No Chesterfield could his approach. "Angelina Melinda, dear," he lisped in a voice husky with emotion! "may I have the extreme and felicitous pleasure of slowly meandering through the shady avenues of our beautiful town, with you leaning for support upon my manly arm, ing for support upon my manly arm, which is strong to protect you from falling through the many gaping pitholes in the boulevards extending up toward the lovers' walk?" Gently as the evening dew falls upon the grass, came the sound of Angelina Melinda's voice, as she bent her gaze upon the face of the ardent pleader, "Young Man." she said "you'r just a little hit. Man," she said, "you'r just a little bit too fresh for this town, and you had better resume your cigar and pass on to more congenial climes." And now our disconsolate youth wanders away down by the mineral springs and bathes his fevered brow in the foun-

FISHING IN CHINA

The Rod and Line Made Superfluors by

[New York Sun.]

"The first time I ever saw a fishing cormorant at work under the direction of its Chinese master, I thought it was one of the most amusing and at the same time interesting sights imaginable," said Engineer George Dean, who has spent a number of years in China. "I was walking along the Min river one day soon after arriving in China, and cane to a bamboo fost or saft moored to the pier of a bridge. I noticed a mative squatting on the raft, and saw what at first I thought were a number of dacks grouped at one end of it. They were all faced toward the Chinaman, and he was gazing steadily at them with his hands on his knees.
"I stopped to see what was going on. Suddenly the man extended his right band, palm upward, toward one of the birds, which I then saw were not ducks, for one that the Chinaman reached his hand to waddled as briskly as it could toward him, and hopped on the open palm. The men stoked its feathers londly, rubbed his check along its neck, which he kissed now and then, and talked to it in Chinese, evidently in enclearing terms. The bird seemed delighted. It is ald its head on the Chinaman's arm, rubbed its peculiar bill against his face, and returned all

This lasted at least a minute, and then the man moved with the bird to the further side of the float, and placed it on the edge. Then for the the bird to the further sace of the leads and placed it on the edge. Then for the first time it came to me that this was a Chinese fisherman, working with cormorants.

When the cormorant was placed on the edge of the raft it dipped its bill in the water, snapped it together loudly, looked up and down the side of the float, turned its head and fixed its glistening black eyes an instant-on its master, and then slid beneath the surface without a sound sound. then slid beneath the surface without a sound, searcely leaving a ripple behind it. The Chinaman seated himself again and awaited the reappearance of his Jird, without any apparent concern or anxiety. The other birds remained standing at the end of the raft, almost motionless, and without removing their eyes from their master. The bird that had dived into the water remained beneath the surface for probably a quarter of a minute, and then reappeared, popping almost out of the water as it came up. The lower half of a fish protracted from its mouth. The bird swam straight to the raft, climbed upon it, and jumping on the master's knee, held its

The Chinaman pulled the fish from the bird's mouth with one hand, while he stroked its neck and plumage with the other, and whispered words of approval. The cormorant shook out its feathers, and slowed its delight in various ways. "Again its master placed it on the edge of the raft, and some more it glided noiselessly in the water. The other birds maintained their stolidity, apparently unmindful of what was going on around them. The cormorant that was fishing appeared in a short time, and again had made a saccessful dive. The same caressing was gone through with, and the bird was started in the water a third time. It now seemed to be thoroughly warmed up to its work, and went at it with an avidity that showed plainly the pleasure it took in it. The third time it was core that showed plainly the pleasure it took in it. The third time it was gone longer than usual, and when it finally came up it had no fish. The change in its actions was striking. It swam frantically about in the water was the conduction of the con cane up it had no fish. The change in its actions was striking. It swam, frantically about in the water, twisting and turning and ovincing the greatest distress, but turn which way it might, it kept its sharp eyes fixed on its master, with an appealing expression. It made no move to approach the raft, and when the Chinaman raised his hand and pointed downward with the fore finger, the bird divide again and so quickly that it was gone like a flash. In a few seconds up it came, bearing in its mouth a large fish. This time it swam boldly for the raft, deposited its prey at its master's leet, and showed plainly by the joyfulness of its actions as he stroked its arched neck that it had redeemed itself.

When the Chinaman placed the third fish in his basket he took the cormorant and placed it in the center of the raft.

Who Need Careful Watching. [Philadelphia Times.]

"That book will cost you $3, sir," said a clerk in a Market street book store, politely, but with an incisive tone that showed he was not to be trifled with, to a young man whom he surprised in a remote corner, where he had been lingering long over a case of handsomely-bound volumes. The young man was we'l dressed and of gentlemanly appearance, and was evidently near-sighted. He glanced up hurriedly, his face colored, and his eyes, in spite of the friendly mask of a pair of gold-rimmed glasses, betrayed confusion and chagrin. Then he drew from the pocket of his satinfaced overcoat a handsome copy of Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy. With a face that would have afforded Burton are excellent study, he thumbed the volume a moment mumbled that the binding didn't exactly, suit him and left the store with more speed than dignity.

He settled the matter with us, and in consideration of his high reputation in the community we did not procesute him. We caught a fellow a month or two ago who was gradually accumulating a whole set of Washington Irving's works by carrying out one at a time, in the hope that it would not be missed. He had secured 'The Sketch Book' and the 'Alhambra,' but we dropped on him just as he was getting away with 'Knickerbocker's History. He was taking them out by the common process known as 'sub-coattailing.' Many people who would not take a penny belonging to another will steal books with apparent impunit. MAKING BEET SUGAR.

"New Process" as It Will Be Conducted at Lavenham, England. [London Letter.]

At the factory there will appear great changes readily observable to persons who were familiar with the operations of a dosen years ago. The loads of carror-shaped roots minus their green crowns cat off by the growers) will be weighed, but not subjected to any truming by hand; unless, indeed, a forked and fangy root be dealt with now and then. For as there will be no rapid rasp grating up be dealt with now and them. For, as there will be no rapid rasp grating up the roots into a line pulp, there is no need for carefully paring of the small rootlets and fieres which used to graway in the drain water—to the clogging and fooling of the brook which flows close beside the factory. And this waterway will not be corrupted and made positions with black char water which used to pour from the charcoal filters, as there will be no such filters. The beets, deansed from adhering soil by the mechanical stirrers and brushes revolving in long vats of washers, will

by the mechanical stirrers and brushes revolving in long vats of washers, will be elevated to the enter—a machine resembling the root-cutter used by a shepherd—which slices the roots into finger-pieces; and these will be sent down a spout or trough which delivers a proper charge in turn into each of a down a spout or trough which delivers a proper charge in turn into each of a series of circular vessels, placed in a ring form of arrangement for being conveniently charged by the splut as it swings round from the center like a command. crane jib.

By what is called the "diffusion" process, water of different temperatures at different stages flows continuously through all the vessels in turn, compared with each supply through all the vessels in turn, commencing as clear water with each spent charge of Jeet, and gradually enriching itself with the juice from partly exhausted charges in succession till ft 1 \ses, as a rich solution of sugar, salts and impurities, from the last vessel in which the maceration of fresh beet is began. Each of the vessels is emptied in turn of the spent beet, which is carried to the pressing operation, where any sweet sirup remaining is made to exude—the pressel beet, however, still holding enough nutritie materials still holding enough nutritie materials to exude—the pressel beet, however, still holding enough nutritile materials to be an ex ellent fattening food for animals. This will be loaded upon carts fetching it away at the price of 6s per ton; that is, half the price formerly paid for the pulp as it came from the bagpresses after the rasp.

The solution from the beet will be boiled with lime, which is termed "defecation," and the lime then precipitated by blowing carbonic-acid gas through the liquid. By the old process there would follow a second defecation, and then the tedious and expensive charcoal thering. But it has been observed that the mineral earth strontia has the property of being able to seize and enter into combination with sugar solution. Hence the liquor is boiled with strontia under pressure: a yellow-ish-white sucrate falls as a deposit to the bottom of the vessel; the water, still holding the salts and impurities though it has parted with the sugar, is run out through the precipitate of sucrate on a screen upon the bottom of the vessel, and this material is then treated with carbonic acid in water, which breaks it up, separates and recovers the strontia, and leaves the pure sugar in solution to be conceutrated by vacuum pan and crystallized in the usual manner.

The greatest gain of the new process, however, is that, whereas by the old crystalli ation process the manufacturer

The greatest gain of the new process, however, is that, whereas by the old erystalli ation process the manufacturer lost some 20 per cent. of the sa-charine matter of the beet juice, which from contamination of salts could not be erystallical and many in the male and contamination of salts could not be ergs-tallized and went away in the molasses—a product of low value—the strontia perfectly clears all the sugar from these impurities in the way of crystallization, and estracts up to 95 or more per cent, of the sugar contained in the beet juice.

An oil inspector offers this explanation of why kerosene oil lamps do not give as good light in cold weather as at other times: "Wissensia" other times: "Wisconsin test prime light oils will thicken with the cold at temperatures varying from zero to 20 degrees above. Freezing separates the particles of paraffine from the remainder of the oil. They are attracted by particles of paraffine from the remainder of the oil. They are attracted by the wick and fill the pores, destroying its capiliary power and increasing its tendency to incrust and char in burning. The best kerosene oils for burning in cold weather are water white, colorless oils of light gravity. These cost from 2 to 3 cents per gallon more."

A Model of the Bastile.

Exchange

One of the most interesting relies possessed by the late Comte A. de Liesville was an accurate model of the Bastile, carved out of one of the stones of that edifice. It had 1 1,000 Looks and papers, and coins, midals, arms, etc., innumerable, connected with that revolution and with those of 1830, 1848 and 1870.

[Ex-Confederate Gen. Maury.]

Kext day I received orders to go to command the department of East Tennessee. Gen. Stephenson asked me to remain a day or two, because Grant was making a move. That night my pickets, soon after midnight, began firing. All of my staff were at a ball given by Col. Watts and Maj. Carrill, commissioners for exchange of prisoners. All the fashion and beauty of the city were there, and all the officers who were so fortunate as to be invited and who enjoyed such an occasion. Since the 'sound of revelry by night' in Belgium's capital, no such startling call was mace as l'orter's flect occasioned that night. All of the young officers (and some of the old) ran off to their commands. The girls fled in panic in their thin robes and slippers along the muddy roads to their several nests. It was long past midnight when the thirteen vessels, including the transports, came swinging around the point. Our bonfires promptly lighted up the whole river front and every line and every rivet of every ship could be plainly seen as they moved bravely down under the fire of all our batteries. We sunk three transports. The others got safely by and joined Farragut with the Hartford and Albatross.

Then the Confederacy was sundered and there was no more sense in continuing to keep Vicksburg fortified than there would be to-day to fortify x to guard the Mississippi river.

Upon arising in the morning you may wish to invade the culinary department, but you would letter follow the Scriptural injunction and "eat such things as are set before you." Not that things are necessarily uncleanly, but there is a general mixture of cookery and smells, which only the well-filled stomach enjoys. Tell them to cook you chicken; yo thear a squawking in the house, and in just five minutes the late lamented bird is before you, all cooked. It is done in this wise: Upon a charcoal fire are placed thin copper pans, which are almost instantly heated to a white heat. Oil is dropped in, the chicken on top, and all is over.

[Clicago Herald.]

"The majority of young lawyers in a large city have to wait for years for their first brief," said a member of the profession whose reputation assures him a large annual income, and whose legal standing is unquestioned. "If they have inducatial connections some collection or some commercial business might be thrown in their way, but if these connections fail them their lot is, indeed, a sorry one. Many a bright young man has lost energy and hope for brighter prospect waiting in his dingy office for some legitimate case to turn up. His little savings are gone up in books, office rent and the necessities of life; he has no means in view, no friends, no briefs. Finally he drops out of the list and clerks for his more successful brethren or does something else than practice law to earn an honest living.

But only too often he gives way to the tempter. He becomes the teacher of sharks in human disguise, showing them how they may squeeze the very lifeblood out of their victims—skin them ali e, as the saying goes—or, worse still, he associates with griminals and becomes himself a priminal. Naturally sharp, his observation becomes sharper by disreputable practice. Always bordering on the brink that would precipitate the unwary, he shrewdly evades the law, trusting to the many technicalities which, unfortunately, encember the practice of the profession and giver rise to the phrase of 'the g'orious uncertainty of the law.' Some are quite successful financially in this direction, but they have lost easte with the honorable majority of the profession."

The desire to be mentioned, to become acquainted, to "have their names in the papers," leads many a promising young lawyer to take up criminal cases of a sort that had better be left severely alone. Criminal cases in general—so all the respectable practitioners with whom the reporter conversed, said—are not the best means to build up a lawyer's practice, and some criminal cases are positively in urious to a fair professional reputation. Here, then, is the dividing line between the reputable laware positively in urious to a fair pro-fessional reputation. Here, then is the dividing line between the reputable law-yer and the police court shyster—a venomous, rascally invividual that yer and the police court shyster—a yenomous, ra-cally invividual that abounds in every large city.

These malignant excresences of an honorable profession hang around the police courts like harpies waiting for professional bummer, the veriest gutter-snipe, the bragging rowdy, the drunken sot are alike their customers, and fees range from 50 cents to whatever amount of lucre this malocorous clientele can serape together. There are cases on record where the shyster has exchanged his seedy coat or form hat for the better articles of his client in cases where no cash could be obtained. As a rule the swaggering r. m-soaked shyster is a power in ward politics, and not seidom he has an ademan or a county commissioner "dead to rights" for political services rendered to enforce his strange expounding of the law of the land before the magistrate.

And that the other maidens of this little town might know it,

She thought she'd go to meeting the next Sunday just to show it.

But though the little bonnet was scarce larger than a dime,
The getting of it settled proved to be a work of time;
So when 'twas fairly tied, and all the bells had stopped their ringing,
And when she came to meeting, sure enough, the folks were singing.

So this foolish little maiden stood and wait-

"Hallelujah, hallelujah !" sang the choir above her head.

"Hardly knew you! hardly knew you!"

were the words she thought they said.

This made the little maiden feel so very,

For she thought the very hymn they sang was all about her bonnet,

With the ribbon and the feather and the bit of lace upon it.

And she would not wait to listen to the Sheep Shearing.

From the News.]

From the News.]

Do you remember how the first settlers used to shear sheep? A great many of the pioneers were old country folk and didn't know a thing about sheep or how to shear them. The great trouble about these chumps was that they wouldn't learn for fear some of the Canucks would think they didn't know it all in the old country. Geriminy, how they used to tortune those sheep! They'd build a sort of platform or table, and the the sheep's legs and lay him down and commence to claw the wool off with the sheep shears, and about every second snip they'd take out a chunk of sheepskin and a bite of muiton. The poor sheep would kick and blat and protest, but they only made it worse, and when the shearing was over it would take the president of an agricultural society to tell whether it was a sheep or a hunk of sausage with its overcoat off. Shearing sheep in that style was slow work, and it used to take all day to mangle two or three of them, and hard work at that, with lots of perspiratior and cuss words, and sore fingers where the shears took our a chunk of old country jackass instead of mutton. And the fleece! It was a sight to see. You could hardly tell whether to send it to the carding mill or or the tannery, so even was the mixture of wool and sheepskin.

Methodist Dristrict Meeting.

The ministers of this district, sembled for the regular May district meeting in the Wall street church on Tuesday morning. Rev. T.G. Williams, presided, and Rev. D. C. Sanderson and A. G. Robertson, acted as secretary and asst.-secretary respectively. Besides these gentleman there were present Revs. S. Card, S. Might, G. Forsey, T. Chisholm, G. A. Gifford, M. A.; C. A. Bland, B. A.; W. Blair, B. A.; W. Craig, W. G. Henderson, W. Smith, W. Service, J. Simpson, W. Raney, S. D. Chown, H. Krupp. W. Barnett, A. Short and J. H. Andrews.

During the afternoon and evening a great deal of business pertaining charch matters was transacted. With regard to probationes the following was done: The Rev. W. G. Henderson was recommended for full ordination. Rev. C. A. Bland received a first-class certificate with honors on second year's course of examination, and was continued on trial. Messrs. D. T. Cummings, of Augusta, and Harper Coates were received as candidates for the ministry. The ministers recommended for superannuation are Revs. S. Might, Henry Shaler, Henry Lane, and N. H. Howard.

On Monday morning the lay represen-tatives from the circuits assembled with the ministers at ten o'clock. Returns of membership, and connexional and circuit finances, were reviewed and found to be very satisfactory.

Wednesday afternoon, the annual spring meeting of the ministers and lay delegates of the Brockville district clos At the meeting of that day and the day before, business of considerable importance as transacted, and the labor performed has been by no means little. In a few days, the Montreal Conference of the Methodist church will assemble at Kingston. Much of the work done at the district meeting will come up before the conference in the shape of reports, compiled statistics, &c. The district meeting is to a great extent, a means of lessening the work to be done at the conference.

A number of changes will doubtless be made at the coming session of conference in the location of the ministers now stationed within the confines of the Brockville district. Methodist ministers are, in a way, nomadic. The rules of the church allow a minister to remain no longer than three years on a circuit, and often, the term is shortened. This year, the esteemed district superintendent and pastor of the Wall street church, Rev. T. G. Williams, will have to remove to another station, much to the regret of his congregation. Wednesday afternoon the assembled ministers and layman after many expressions of admiration and regret, unanimously passed the following resolution;-

Moved by Rev. S. D. Chown and seconded by Rev. H. Service, "That this district meeting expresses its hearty appreciation of the extremely urbane and efficient manner with which the Rev. T. G. Williams, district superintendent of the Brockville district, has filled the chair during the last five

Sing Instead of Smoke. [Free Press.]

Among those who want men to stop poisoning the air around them is Professor Blackie, who re ommends Scotch songs as a substitute for tobar o. This somewhat alarming suggestion was made in the course of a "concert lecture" at Manchester. "How people," he said, "can get through their idle hours somewhat alarming suggestion was made in the course of a "concert lecture" at Manchester. "How people," he said, "can get through their idle hours I don't know. In railway coaches and other places I see a number smoking what they call tobacco. Well, whatever may be said about it, it is not an intellectual or moral stimulant, and the flavor of it is not at all like the rose or any poetic thing I know. It is essentially a vulgar sort of amusement. My aniusement is to sing songs. At home I ain always singing Scotch songs; and abroad when those wretches are smoking I hum to myself 'Scots Wha Ilae,' A Man's a Man for a' That,' an I songs of that kind." Professor Blackie then advised his audience "to do the same." Their souls, he informed them, would by this means become "singing birds, and the devil won't get near them."

STRIDING ON SNOW-SHOES

Useful Invention Borrowed from Indians-Its Art and Mystery.

[Montreal Cor. Philadelphia Record The Indian snow-shoo is a very different thing from the long, thin, wooden skate on which the natives of Scandina-The Indian snow-shoo is a very different thing from the long, thin, wooden skate on which the natives of Scandinavia slide over the drifts and down the hills, and which, I believe, has been introduced into the mountain regions of the far west. Take a fish-shaped frame of tough wood two and a half or three feet long, and ten or twelve inches across at its widest part—ten inches is the regulation racing width—and put in two light cross-pieces near the head and tail. Fill the compartments thus formed with a netting of fine strips of deer-skin, leaving near the upper bar an open space as large as the palm of your hand, curve the wooden frame a little forward, and you have the snow-shoe. It weighs only a few ounces, but its supporting power is immense. The theory is simple enough—that of the expansion of the sole of the foot, so that a broad surface is obtained and the weight so distributed that the shoe scarcely sinks an inch in the snow.

The moccasin is "the only wear" with the belle raquette. A stout "to-strap" of deerskin crosses the snow-shoes, just aft of the upper cross-bar, and under this the snow-shoe to the foot with fine strings of hide. Only the toe is fastened, as the contrivance of wool and aetting is to be dragged or scu lled along, not lifted bodily. Its width, which at first seems formidable, is. In reality no impediment, as the expert slips one foot over the other as he takes his stride. Of course, the shoes worn by woodsmen and lumberers, who carry heavy burdens and have to make their way through unbroken drifts, are much broader and stronger than those employed in racing or tramping, but the way through unbroken drifts, are much broader and stronger than those em-ployed in racing or tramping, but the principle throughout is the same.

The stranger who experiments with the snow-shoe is apt to pronounce it an embodiment of total depravity. Having arrayed himself in blanket coat, sash, tuque, mittens, knickerbockers, leggings and moceasins and fastened on his snow-shoes, his—literally—first step is to move of and set the toe of one shoe irruly on the tail of the others there is to move of and set the toe of one shoe irmly on the tail of the other; then, when he undertakes to lift the latter foot he makes a frantic and undignified affort to stand on his head, and tumbles ingloriously on his face, driving his arms into the snow up to his shoulders—the insinuating capacity of snow un ter such circumstances is incredible—and anchoring his feet by entangling his snow-shoes.

But when once the art and mystery have been mastered he will be convinced that be a mastered he will be convinced that he has acquired the very poetry of ma-tion. A long stride is necessary to clear the shoes: there is no backward slip: the frosty air makes activity indispensable, and the whol' frame glows and tingles gloriously. The exertion is so slight that one ne more feels his snow-shoes than a bird its wings—though there is a mal de raquette resulting from over-work, especially with heavy shoes in wet snow, which makes the sufferer feel work, especially with neavy successive wet snow, which makes the sufferer feel at every step as if the bones of his instep had been broken, and the fractured edges were grinding on each other—and he goes striding over the drifts, leaving behind him a trail as of some gigantic preadamite bird with cane-seat chairbottoms for feet, proudly pitying the pedestrians who struggle through the snowy paths, and the sleighers who shiver under their burfalo robes.

tional priest or one who had taken the oath to support the constitution) was speaking to her, but she did not answer or even seem to hear him. When the Palais Egalite was passed she began to manifest some uneasiness. She looked at the numbers of the house with more than commonplace curiosity.

The queen had foreseen that no priest of her religion would be allowed to accompany her, and a proscribed ecclesiastic, with whom she had communicated, had promised to be in a house of the Rue St. Honore of the day of the execution, and to give her from a window absolution in extremis. The number of the house had been designated to Marie Antoinette, and she was looking for that. She discovered it; and then, at a sign which she alone understood, having recognized the priest, she bent her head and prayed. After this shebreathed more freely and a smile came to her lips."

The Great Factory at Sevres.

The Great Factory at Sevres.
[Chicago Herald.]

The manufacture of china in France is like that of tobacco, and, as is pretty generally known, a government monopoly. The great factory at Sevres, which was formerly at Vincennes, and removed to its present site by a woman, Mme. de Pomadour, has been steadily retrograding in artistic excellence ever since the advent of French political troubles under Napoleon III. It is fortunate, however, in having a superintendent who is said to have discovered, after ten years of patient study, a process by which Sevres china may be greatly improved. It comes of a new way of mixing the clay.

Testing the Purity of Water.

Testing the Purity of Water.

To test the purity of water there has been found no better nor simpler way than to fill a clean pint bottle three-fourths full of the water to be tested, and dissolve in the water half a teaspoonful of the purest sugar—loaf or granulated will answer—cork the bottle, and place for two and place it in a warm place for two days. If in twenty-four to forty-eight hours the water becomes cloudy or milky it is unfit for domestic use.

THE FARMERSVILLE REPORTER.

Manilla in 1849. BY BURT NOTIRE, FARMERSVILLE.

The city of Manilla, capital of the Spanish possessions in the Pacific, is situated on the island of Luzon (or Lewconia), one of the group called the Phillipines, at the head of a large bay Phillipines, at the head of a large bay, or, more properly speaking, an inland sea. The city proper is fortified, being surrounded by a wide wall and bastions, on which are mounted artillery and are paced day and night by sentinels. Admission is gained through four gates, three large enough for vehicles and one on the river side of the city only large search for feet of the city only large enough for foot passengers. In peaceable times in-gress and egress is free for all from 6 a. m. till 9 p. m., but after that hour can only be had by possession of the password for the night. One evening, having inadvertently stayed in the city till the gates were shut, I was unable to return to my boarding hous and not caring to return to my friend's house, I had to take up quarters in the guard-room for the night. Hav-ing a slight acquaintance with one of the officers on duty, I spent quite a pleasant hour or two with them, smoking "Manillas" and giving and receiving alternate lessons in Spanish and English. The Spanish officers, when once acquainted, are the best fellows going and counted. fellows going and cannot do enough for a visitor, especially a foreigner, when once introduced. The climate is warm, but not oppressively so. Fires for warmth are unknown, and the coolest night I passed there during a stay of some seven months, I maker needed more than a sheet to keep off meaguites. The population consists of several classes, each very exclusive as regards the others, but all very hospitable and entertaining to visitors. There are the Spaniards proper nearly all of whom are the Government officials and political offenders from Old Spain and the higher ecclesiastics. These are all offenders from Old Spain and the higher ecclesiastics. These are all very aristocratic. Then there are the natives born of Spanish parents, mostly descendants of the political offenders and refugees, which, from a country like Old Spain, are not a few, and these, with their numbers increased on the arrival of every boat from the old country form a very numerous class and retain all their native peculiarities.

are mostly officers in the native regiments, and some, but very few, are engaged in mercantile pursuits. Another distinct class are the "Mestizos," descendants of Spani-h fathers and native mothers, a very numerous body. The males are a very fine body of men and show more of the Spaniard than their sisters, who combine the beauties of the Spaniard and Malay, with a preponderance of the latter.

After these come the "Tagal," or
though last, not altogether least.

The Chinese, looked down upon by all and spit upon and spurned by Spaniard, Mestizo and Tagal, they are there as elsewhere the men of all work, however mean or low, and there are, at, the same time, among them some of the largest and heaviest merchants in the place-men whose word would pass current in any mercantile establishment for thousands of doub-except the foreign merchants. The Spaniards spurn them as idolaters and the Tagal follows suit. Nearly all the the Tagal follows suit. Nearly all the shops in the suburbs are owned and conducted by them. The suburbs of the city are of very wide extent, the population exceeding 100,000, and that of the city proper, including military, cannot exceed 5,000. In the centre is the plaza, or public square. On one side stands the cathedral, and immense building, not remarkable for immense building, not remarkable for architectural beauty, either inside or outside, but the riches of the interior outside, but the riches of the interior are immense. The high altar is plated beautifully with silver over an inch thick and the tracery is splendid. The railing around is about two feet high and all silver. When illuminating ted on high occasions, with the priests in their places and the acolytes swing-ing their gold and silver censors of incense, accompanied with the chanting of the nuns behind their latticed ang of the nuns behind their latticed galleries, and the eunuchs and musicians and singers of the choir, and the solemn peals of the grand old organ, I think it is one of the grandest sights almost ever seen. The altar itself is a fine thing, but the accompaniaments make it sublime. I saw it at the close of the lenten season and the commencement of the Easter festivtitles, when the services were conducted by the Arch-Bishop, two Bishops and priests not a few, in the presence of the Governor-General and all the official dignitaries, and it was a sight once seen never to be forgotten. another side of the plaza stands the residence of the Governor-General and the public offices, and the other two sides are occupied by a convent of Benedectines and a few private resi-dences. Sunday and Thursday nights the military bands, some six or eight in number, play in front of the palace, and the square is filled with prom-enaders, the senoras and senoritas with their caballeros, all in full evening dress. In front of the city, been the city walls and the waters of the bay, is a wide space of some three or four hundred yards, and here every afternoon, from 4 till 6, may be seen all the beauty and gallantry of the place, in carriages or promenading, and exchanging compliments, forming a very pretty and lively scene. But a deep, solemn peal rings from ') huge bell in the old cathedral tower, and the stranger starts as he is astoun-ded at the sudden change. Every carriage is brought to a halt, every equestrian checks his animal, every pedestrian stands like a monument, and every head is uncovered as the pealing notes remind all that the hour calls for a minute's reverential adora-tion, or the "Avo Maria." The minute is passed, and again the promenade is resumed for a few minutes, and then nothing is heard but the wash of the waves on the deserted beach.
